"The Chinese and British troops under my command," he declared, have inflicted ten-to-one casualties on the Japanese. This is partly due to the fact the Chinese troops, with years of combat experience, are becoming crack fighting units. Our forces have met green Japanese troops in some spots."

Commenting on reports that the Japanese may be planning to quit Burma General Sultan, who recently succeeded Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell in the theatre, declared: "I have seen no indications the Japanese intend to give up Burma."

U. S. TROOPS LAND ON ASIA ISLANDS

MacArthur Also Reports Seizure Of Fanildo, In Mapia Group

Gen. MacArthur puts Japanese losses in Leyte campaign at 45,000 as compared with 5,691 American casualties.....Page 5

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Monday, Nov. 20 (AP)—American forces have landed in the Asia Islands, 130 miles north of Sorong, New Guinea, headquarters reported today.

The Asia landing was made yesterday, while mopping-up operations in the occupation of the Mapia group were completed, a communique announced.

The Asia group lies about 180 miles due west of the Mapias, and presumably also was used as a lookout station for Japanese spotting the departure of bombing flights for northward targets.

Jap Battleship And Cruiser Hit

Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported in yesterday's communique that American heavy bombers smashed a Japanese battleship and a heavy cruiser off Borneo. At the same time he announced landings on Fanildo Island, third islet in the Mapia group to be invaded. Mopping was under way on near-by Bras Island.

Pegun Island, which completes the Mapia triangle, was the first of the group to be taken last Wednesday.

Liberator bombers with fighter escort also hit the Nipponese naval base on Brunei Bay, on the coast of Sarawak, British North Borneo, Thursday. They flew 800 miles for the attack which paid off with five direct hits on an enemy battleship and four on a heavy cruiser. The warships were set afire.

Three Bombers Lost

Three bombers were lost to intense Japanese anti-aircraft fire in the raid on the Brunei naval base. The force dropped 112 tons of bombs on shipping and shore installations.

[It is possible the Japanese warships hit at Brunei were there to repair damage received in the second sea battle of the Philippines.]

A patrol plane left a 3,000-ton freighter-transport in flames from direct hits off the south coast of Luzon, main island of the Philippines.

Bombers cut up runways and destroyed a number of parked Japanese planes at airdromes at Negros and Cebu islands in the Philippines. Japanese planes attempted interception and three were shot down.

Two Freighters Sunk

Three small freighters and a warship were damaged in the Palawan area by American patrol planes.

Two medium-sized freighters were sunk and two other cargo ships and 12 barges damaged off the northwest coast of Borneo. In Macassar Strait, between Borneo and the Celebes, a 1,000-ton freighter was destroyed and two other cargo ships damaged.

Light naval units sank eight enemy supply barges in the Moluccas.

One Japanese plane dropped a bomb harmlessly at American-held Morotai in the Malmaheras, northwest of New Guinea.

Briton Heads Operation

By Percy Finch

A Reuters Special Correspondent

ABOARD LORD ASHBOURNE'S TASK FORCE FLAGSHIP, In the Mapia Islands, Nov. 15 (Delayed) (AP).—An officer of the Royal Navy commanded an American amphibious operation for the first time in the Pacific war when American troops swarmed ashore today and occupied Pegun, largest island of the Mapia group, between Dutch New Guinea and the Philippines.

British sailors from the Midlands and the west country had their first crack at the Japanese and enjoyed it. As gun crews aboard the flagship, they helped blast a way for the American jungle-fighting infantry.

Shirtless, sweating crews slammed shell after shell into the island.

Trees that did not fall were swept by Bofors guns, just in case the Japanese tried to use them for range-finding.

When the American amphibious tanks and tractors rolled up the beach the island was a furnace. The infantry found only thirteen Japanese. They had killed themselves with grenades. The rest of the 400-strong garrison fled to another island.

The British sailors are proud to be fighting beside the Americans where the Japanese once sailed as masters. They wear American sailors' blue denims and "skivvy shirts." But when you hear the accents of Devon, Cornwall, Lancashire, Cheshire and Yorkshire, all resemblance to United States Navy men vanishes.

Capt. Lord Ashbourne, who commanded the operation, is a veteran of the Sicily landing. He is serving under Rear Admiral Daniel E. Barbey, commander of the American Seventh Amphibious Force.

The Japanese were using the Mapia Islands to spot Allied convoys and planes heading for the Philippines. Three days before the occupation of Pegun they had shot down a Mitchell bomber. The landing troops found the crew of three dead beside the wreckage of their plane.

JAP LEYTE LOSS PUT AT 45,000

American Casualties Total 5,691 For Campaign

Spencer

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Monday, Nov. 20 (AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today that Japanese dead and wounded on Leyte Island have exceeded 45,000 since A-day, October 20, compared to American casualties of 5,691 dead, wounded and missing.

The breakdown of American casualties was: 1,123 killed, 126 missing and 4,432 wounded, the general said in a communique.

His latest figures were released as new reports told of fierce fighting around Limon, at the northern end of the Ormoc corridor.

Ormoc Road Block Holds

American ground forces broke a Japanese counterattack and held firmly to their road block across Ormoc highway, as tank-led Nipponese attempted to send reinforcements to remnants of a reinforced regiment surrounded at Limon.

The general said the broad disparity of casualties was because American forces had maneuvered to place the entire Yamashita line under artillery fire without the possibility of retaliation and Yank infantrymen had constantly bypassed and enveloped enemy bastions and strong points.

MacArthur's spokesman said the figures did not include 8,000 Japanese believed on four transports and six destroyers sunk off Ormoc Bay November 10, when a large-scale reinforcement attempt was crushed by Third Fleet carrier planes. Neither do they include Japanese naval personnel lost during the imperial naval defeat off the eastern Philippines October 25.

Still 25,000 Japs On Leyte

Although the figures are estimates, they indicate that Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita still has 25,000 first-class troops in the narrow corridor extending southward from the vicinity of Limon to Ormoc—a distance of some 20 miles.

The Japanese are resisting bitterly around Limon, against elements of the American 24th and 32d Divisions. Tank units and artillery were pressed into the Nipponese drive to break the American road block south of the town, but this arm thrust across Ormoc highway still severed their communications.

Heavy fighting also was reported west of Ormoc road, where an enemy counterattack was repulsed after three hours' fighting.

Enemy reinforcements were attempting to infiltrate into the Limon area.

Seventh Division Gains 3 Miles

Units of the American Seventh Division have gained another three miles in their push northward toward Ormoc, main enemy port on Leyte, the communique disclosed. The Seventh repulsed several night counterattacks near Malitbog, approximately seven miles south of Ormoc.

American light naval units, operating at night off the west coast, intercepted enemy small craft attempting to run troops and supplies to the battle area, sinking two torpedo boats, four barges and a coastal vessel.

Leyte-based American fighters, attacking enemy positions and lines of communications, destroyed five fighters and a coastal freighter. An enemy plane, forced down on Ormoc airfield, was destroyed by strafing.

Japanese aerial activity, said the communique, was "limited to light raids on our ground installations." Fighters and anti-aircraft guns destroyed six enemy planes, with three other probables.

U. S. WARSHIPS BOMBARD IWO JIMA IN BONINS

Admiral Nimitz Also Announces Recapture Of Ngeregong Islet

McMorly

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 19 (AP)—Dashing within 750 miles of Tokyo, American warships bombarded Iwo Island November 10, causing several explosions and large fires visible 35 miles at sea, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

The Japanese apparently were so surprised that they put only one plane in the air and their shore batteries replied lightly and ineffectually.

No American casualties or damage was sustained.

Ngeregong Islet Retaken

Nimitz also announced the recapture of Ngeregong islet in the Palau group, eight miles northeast of American-held Peleliu, which about 200 Japanese occupied November 7. Elements of the 81st Army Division retook the islet without opposition.

Nimitz's communique did not confirm a recent Tokyo radio announcement that United States ships had sunk one Japanese gunboat and another small vessel, apparently in separate engagements, off the Bonin Islands.

The bombardment of Iwo, also part of the extensive Bonins, presumably was brief, since the communique reported the attack was made "before dawn."

Speedy Destroyers Used

The inference is that probably only speedy destroyers participated in the raid, dashing in for an accurate attack in pre-dawn darkness, then retiring at high speed before the startled enemy could counterattack effectively.

The accuracy of ships' gunfire was attested by Nimitz' statement that the first salvos started several explosions.

The bombardment probably was intended primarily to knock out fuel dumps and airdrome installations and to prevent the enemy from launching aerial attacks at Saipan. A few isolated raids were staged on Saipan earlier this month.

Warships might have been used instead of planes, because gunfire is more accurate than high-level bombing in such an operation.

Iwo was shelled first on Aug. 3-4 in an attack coordinated with a carrier assault on several adjacent islands.

Marines Use Dogs In Jap Hunt On Saipan

Saipan, Marianas Islands, Nov. 19 (AP)—American marines completed a three-day "rabbit hunt" the length of Saipan this week, killing 248 Japanese stragglers and capturing 47.

About 900 dogs were used in the cleanup hunt. At times the terrain was even too tough for the dogs.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz said in a communique today that nine marines were killed and 40 wounded as they covered the island in a line so close-knit that wherever possible each man could reach out and touch his neighbor.

Some Japs Buried Selves

Even so, Japanese were found after the line had passed. Some of the enemy buried themselves lightly and dug out when the Americans had passed.

The roundup increased the Japanese dead on Saipan to at least 25,392 and brought the bag of captured to 1,062.

Most of the Japanese were in good condition, some even sporting fresh haircuts. At one enemy position the marines found ... American ice-cream mix. ... other they found two c... of American beer. Some of the ... nese wore American uni... stolen or taken from the ...

Several women were amo... captives.

The captured Japanese exp... ed they failed to surrender because they feared they would be killed, and also felt the imperial navy would rescue them soon.

JAP RADIO REPORTS YANKS ATTACK MANILA

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

American carrier-based planes swept over Manila again today the Japanese-controlled Manila ...dio reported.

Bombs were dropped, but the broadcast, recorded by the Federal Communications commission, asserted no damage was done and said "Japanese defense units" drove off the raiders.

The number of planes involved was not reported.

Tokyo radio reported American air raids on Yap, 300 miles northeast of the Palau islands, and on Legaspi, on the southeastern extremity of Luzon, main island of the Philippines.

JAPS NEED LIFEBELTS

More lifeboats are needed in Japan for use by Nipponese aviators when they are forced down in the water "because of inclement weather or motor trouble," Tokyo radio said today.

New Shoulder Patches Sent MacArthur for Island Forces

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 19 (AP).—New-type shoulder patches numbering 800,000 are en route to General Douglas MacArthur's headquarters in the Philippines, Brigadier General Roland Walsh, Philadelphia depot quartermaster, announced yesterday.

General Walsh said the shipment was made nine days after General MacArthur requisitioned them. Two New Jersey factories turned out the first shipment in less than a week, General Walsh said. The arc-shaped patches bear the words, "Philippine Army" or "Constabulary" embroidered in blue.

New Jap Fighter Planes Aren't There Any More

At a Leyte Air Base, Nov. 18 (AP—Delayed)—First came three shining new Japanese fighter planes to strafe and bomb this base.

They were met by three Lightnings (P-38's).

Then all remaining in the air were three Lightnings.

The raiding Japanese went down in rapid order before the blazing guns of Major George Dewey, Hobart, Ind.; First Lieutenant Wilson Ekdahl, Englishtown, N. J., and Second Lieutenant James Moreing, of San Francisco.

By their quick victories the flyers boosted their squadron's total to 155 enemy planes, among the highest operating in the Southwest Pacific.

The squadron is led by Major Thomas McGuire, of Ridgewood, N. J., second ranking army ace in the southwest, with 28 kills.

Australian Prisoners Drown

CANBERRA, Australia, Nov. 19 (AP)—Acting Prime Minister Francis Forde reported today that 184 Australian prisoners of war were drowned and seventy-two rescued when a Japanese transport was sunk last June. The survivors were taken to a prison camp in Japan. Mr. Forde said he received notification of the incident from the International Red Cross.

BOLIVIAN PLOT IS DISCOVERED

State Of Siege Declared But Revolt Is Termed Quelled

Quayaquil, Ecuador, Nov. 19 (AP)—A Government announcement said tonight that arrests among persons with "apparently subversive aims" have been made in Quayaquil, Quito and Cuenca.

La Paz, Bolivia, Nov. 19 (AP)—The Government announced tonight that a revolutionary plot had been discovered and the leaders arrested.

President Gualberto Villaroel decreed a nation-wide state of siege.

The general staff broadcast through all the radio stations a communique saying "The sedition that broke out in the city of Oruro, organized by disqualified elements of the fallen regime, has come to an end as a result of the drastic measures adopted to squelch the attempt. The garrisons of La Paz and of all the interior of the Republic have expressed firm loyalty to the constitutional regime of President Villaroel.

Punishment Threatened

"The Government, as well as the general staff, has agreed to punish the seditious with drastic exemplarity."

Villaroel, saying reactionary elements were trying to disturb public order, issued the following decree, in agreement with the Council of Ministers:

"A state of siege is declared in all the territory of the Republic."

The decree, which gives the Government ample faculties to cope with any developments, was signed by all the ministers in accordance with constitutional regulations.

Oruro Is Expected

A communique from the Ministry of the Interior, however, stated that "with the exception of Oruro, where the counter-revolutionary focus is localized, tranquillity is absolute in the republic," in dicating the uprising had not been completely suppressed in Oruro.

The revolutionary leaders were reported to be Gen. Ovidio Quiroga, Col. Meliton Brito and Hernan Quroga, a member of the Revolutionary party.

Oruro is the second largest mining center of Bolivia and the third largest city of the country, having a population of 10,000.

'WAR IS NOT OVER,' FDR SAYS, OPENING SIXTH BOND DRIVE

President Sees 'Tough Road Ahead,' Before Victory Over Axis.

CITES HUGE COSTS

U.S. Spending 250 Million a Day in Conflict, He Tells Nation.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19—(AP) The war is costing $250,000,000 a day, President Roosevelt said tonight in urging the nation to buy more war bonds.

In a radio speech on the eve of the Sixth War Loan campaign, the President said:

"The Sixth War Loan drive starting tomorrow is something more than just a money raising affair.

"We cannot all fight the enemy face-to-face. We cannot all produce the weapons and raw materials so vital to our armed forces.

"But there is one front on which all of us—every man, woman and child—can serve, and serve for the duration. We can all practice self-denial. We can all sacrifice some of our comforts to the needs of the men in service; and, yes, even some of our needs to their comforts.

"The war in this present month of November alone will cost us seven and one-half billions of dollars. That is two hundred and fifty millions a day.

"That is why every war bond you buy is so important.

"Costly Battles" Ahead

"The war is not over—no, not by many a costly battle. While we have every reason to be proud of what has been done—even optimistic about the ultimate outcome—we have no reason to be complacent about the tough road which still lies ahead.

"We have just been through a wartime election, demonstrating to the people of the world the deep roots of our democratic faith.

"The Sixth War Loan, I am confident, will be a further example of democracy in action in a world at war.

"There is an old saying about sticking to the plow until you have reached the end of the furrow. Every rule of common sense and patriotic thought makes that maxim applicable to our conduct in this war.

"In the name of our wounded and sick, in the name of our dead, and in the name of future generations of Americans, I ask you to plow out this furrow to a successful and victorious end."

Mr. Roosevelt's talk was part of the government's drive to remind the nation that fighting a far-flung war with modern weapons costs a lot of money.

The goal of the drive is $14,000,000,000.

At least $5,000,000,000 of that amount is expected to come out of the pockets of the average citizen, in this Sixth War Loan drive.

So that everyone will have full opportunity to let idle money help in the war, some 6,000,000 volunteers will ring doorbells throughout the land to remind them that the drive is on.

Army, Navy to Aid

The Army and the Navy are doing their part by showing how the money is being used in the manufacture of improved weapons, and in providing superior training so that the conflict can be shortened.

Chicago's lakeshore will be the target for a series of naval assaults, including gunfire and airplane strafing to show midwesterners how the Navy is doing its part to push the Japanese back in the Pacific.

The Army will employ eight crack infantry teams to give demonstrations of their fighting prowess in 101 cities.

The 16-state army tour will be under the supervision of Lt. Gen. Ben Lear, commanding general of the Army Ground Forces, and Ted R. Gamble, director of the Treasury's War Finance division.

Composed of overseas veterans, many with decorations for gallantry, the teams will demonstrate rifles, automatic devices, mortars, flamethrowers, bazookas, and smoke. Climaxing the exhibitions will be a simulated but highly realistic attack upon a Jap pillbox.

Included in the itinerary are cities and towns in Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, New York, Alabama, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona and Washington.

The financial cost of the war will be described Monday night by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau in a 15-minute broadcast beginning at 9 p. m. (E.W.T.) over the Mutual Network.

Churchill to Roosevelt: 'Don't Go Out in the Rain'

By The Associated Press.

ALBANY, Nov. 10—The Right Rev. G. Ashton Oldham, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Albany, who returned tonight from an official trip to England, said that Prime Minister Churchill gave him this message for the President:

"Tell your President not to go out in the rain. I know what he'd say to me if I did it."

The Prime Minister said he had seen news pictures of the President motoring in a downpour.

The Bishop stated that he carried a letter to Mr. Roosevelt from the Prime Minister and would forward it from here.

Forrestal Says Defeat of Japan Will Not Be Easy

Warns Failure to Shatter Foe's Power May Mean New War Within 20 Years

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 19 (AP).—If Japanese power is not shattered now, the job may have to be done all over again within twenty years, Navy Secretary James Forrestal said today.

He asserted in a talk before war bond salesmen in the Minnesota State Armory:

"There is no doubt about the sure and certain defeat of Germany. There can be no doubt, likewise, about the defeat of Japan if our national will has determined that the power of Japan must be thoroughly shattered.

"That may prove to be a harder task than we now think, but if we fail to shatter that power now, I very much fear that what Woodrow Wilson said in 1923 may prove true again.

"The job will have to be done all over again within twenty years and at many times even the present great cost."

Mr. Forrestal prefaced his comments about Japan with a review of how the Navy is expending its money.

Of $118,000,000,000 which Congress has authorized it to use since July, 1940, Mr. Forrestal said $69,000,000,000 actually has been spent, with most of the balance committed for needed equipment.

The Navy has achieved with its money, since 1940, these things, Mr. Forrestal said:

Inducted, fed, clothed, housed and trained 3,600,000 officers and men.

Built, armed, supplied, fueled and sent to sea 10,300,000 tons of ships.

Built and equipped 300 advance bases, plus domestic installations.

The new equipment, plus the old Navy, adds up to the world's largest fleet, which he added, has:

Convoyed in the Atlantic and Pacific troops and supplies aggregating 61,000 ships.

Landed on enemy beaches assault waves of 1,200,000 troops.

Sunk 1,400 enemy ships totaling approximately 4,750,000 tons.

Shot down or destroyed 10,000 planes.

Cleared the Japanese from a Pacific area of 8,170,000 square miles.

Mr. Forrestal said he would make no prediction as to when the war is likely to end, adding "the only way to win a short war is to plan for a long one."

He declared the damage suffered by the American fleet in the battle of the Philippines is "not sufficient to cause any trouble" and that while the Japanese fleet and air power have been heavily damaged General Douglas MacArthur "is now coming up against a very competent enemy in the form of the Japanese Army."

LIBERATED AREAS OF EUROPE FACE SEVERE WINTER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19 — (AP) Europe is moving into its blackest winter of suffering.

This is the conclusion of American officials who have had opportunity to study reports from the liberated areas and the battle fronts.

The period which recently had been expected to produce peace and reconstruction now appears destined to produce more death, destruction disease, political unrest than any other in this war.

Reich to Be Blasted

For Germany, whose stubborn will to fight on means prolonged and unnecessary slaughter, the destruction may be unparalleled so far as previous Allied campaigns are concerned. The tonnage of bombs on German cities will be greatly increased. And to this will be added the destructive fury of the army whose great western offensive already has begun.

But the tragedy as officials here see it is not the devastation which the Germans are forcing on themselves but the suffering which all Europe must undergo as a result. It is suffering brought on by inadequate supplies.

This is due primarily to the extremely heavy shipping demands of the stepped-up European and Pacific offensives. Pacific distances particularly are so vast that each new island advance requires hundreds of thousands of additional tons of shipping space.

What this means in Europe is, in the words of one authority, "simple and terrible."

The French have come through the Summer with enough food probably to see them through the Winter. Transportation is easing up a little inside France due to deliveries of army locomotives and improvisation of rolling stock, and to the fact that the French are reassembling trucks and cars which they had hidden from the Germans. But the French will be cold for lack of fuel and many less urgent items are short.

French and Belgian ports were badly wrecked by retreating Nazis except for Antwerp. They are being restored but the great armies on the offensive need all the port facilities. The Belgians like the French are understood to have basically adequate food but political unrest in both countries is believed to be traceable in part to shortages of fuel and other supplies.

Holland has perhaps the bleakest prospects of all. Hundreds of thousands of acres of Dutch land have been flooded and the country has been thoroughly looted. The people in occupied Holland are said to be confronted with starvation.

One of the complexities, according to one informant, is that the liberated peoples cannot understand why, when the war moves beyond them, supplies should not flow in and factories start humming again.

In southern Europe conditions are no better than in the north and west. The best efforts of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill to improve the lot of the people of Italy are said thus far to have made little dent in the suffering. Here again political instability and general economic disorganization may be expected throughout the Winter.

Other hunger areas are likely to be Greece and Yugoslavia.

Little is known of conditions in central Europe.

Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Austria appear to be in for weeks if not months of warfare. The same applies to western Poland.

Certainly those areas which remain under German control will be compelled to yield what they have to the battered Reich. Even if Germany does not last through the Winter there is little prospect of great relief before spring because the continent has been so thoroughly disorganized.

CHANCE SLIM FOR OIL PACT

Death In Committee Likely For Anglo-U. S. Agreement

Washington, Nov. 19 (AP)—Slow death in a Senate Foreign Relations Committee pigeonhole today appeared likely for the proposed Anglo-American oil agreement.

Influential Senators said opposition from the United States petroleum industry apparently had dimmed even plans for committee hearings.

Although Chairman Connally (D., Texas) declined comment on the report, he has indicated n. hearings are contemplated this session. He steered clear of speculation on when hearings might be called.

The proposal, regarded by some as setting a pattern for subsequent international compacts on tin, rubber, sugar and basic alloys, was submitted to the Senate for ratification August 24.

Commission Planned

Drafted by representatives of the United States, Great Britain and Northern Ireland, it contemplates the establishment of an international petroleum commission.

Its purpose, among other things, would be to seek the equitable distribution of production among oil-producing countries, and to provide equal opportunity for the acquisition of exploration and development rights in world reserves, coupled with a system of fair prices.

The Western Petroleum Refiners Association, Tulsa, Okla., protested that the agreement was drafted "without free discussion and consideration by representatives of the petroleum industry," and called its provisions "indefinite, ambiguous and vague."

Foresees Added Control

Ratification, it argued, would make "reasonably probable an extension of Federal control over the petroleum industry."

J. Howard Pew, president of the Sun Oil Company in Pennsylvania, saw in the agreement the first step toward "a super state cartel."

It might give some international body authority, he said, to shut down oil wells in this country in order to balance world production.

Some members of the Foreign Relations and Senate Petroleum Policy committees said that rather than bring the pact to the floor for possible Senate rejection, they likely would let it "gather dust" in the Foreign Relations Committee.

Misinterpretation Feared

Outright rejection, members said, might be misconstrued as an unwillingness to work out other international trade agreements.

President Roosevelt agreed to consideration of the pact as a treaty, requiring a two-thirds Senate vote, rather than an executive agreement, as it was construed by some State Department sources.

Some committee members expressed belief that Harold L. Ickes, Interior Secretary, as Petroleum Administrator, may bring pressure for early Senate action.

Congressional opposition previously had "put on ice" his proposal for construction of a trans-Arabian pipeline.

New Transport Plane Announced

Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP)—Details of a new 14-passenger transport plane designed for short and medium length "feeder line" flights, was announced today by Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, which said it was the first step toward post-war "universal air transportation."

The plane has been designated the Saturn, Model 75, and conforms in general to specifications for an interurban or feeder line transport outlined by airline engineers through the Air Transport Association.

Can Be Converted Quickly

It is little more than half the size of the present standard airline equipment, the 21-passenger Douglas DC-3. The Saturn is designed to carry 14 passengers, two crewmen, baggage and cargo, the interior arrangement being subject to quick conversion to greater cargo space by removal of seats and movement of a bulkhead.

It is an all-metal, high-wing monoplane powered by two Continental-built Wright air-cooled radial engines rated at 525 horsepower each. Cruising speed was estimated at more than 200 miles an hour, with a top speed of 240 miles an hour, and a maximum range carrying eight passengers of 1,600 miles. Takeoff distance is figured at 1,055 feet and landing speed at 73 miles an hour, both characteristics which would be valuable in operating from small airports. Gross weight is figured at 13,500 pounds, compared with around 25,000 for the DC-3.

Third New Plane Announced

The Saturn is the third new plane to be announced in detail during the International Civil Aviation Conference, which attracted representatives of 54 nations. One was the Glenn L. Martin Company Model 202 Mercury, designed for standard airline operations with a capacity of about 36 passengers.

'CATFISH' LAUNCHED BY ELECTRIC BOAT CO.

GROTON, Nov. 19—(AP) The Catfish, 22nd submarine to be launched here this year, slid down the Electric Boat company's ways today in a ceremonial setting which was highlighted by the award to the company of the Army-Navy "E" flag with four stars.

The presentation was made by Lt. Comdr. Louis H. Brendel, U.S.N.R., of the Navy's incentive division, to O. Pomeroy Robinson, vice-president of the company and general manager of the Groton plant.

29,384,7[illegible] Garments Made For [illegible]eign Relief

Washington, Nov. 19 (AP)—American Red Cross chapters in the last five years have produced 29,384,780 garments for foreign relief.

The Red Cross, in making that known today, said 21,776,280 of the garments already have been received in, or are en route to, Allied or liberated countries. In addition, millions of commercially produced garments have been provided.

5,000 U. S. Assault Boats To Be Sold

Washington, Nov. 19 (AP)—Those assault boats which have been declared obsolete for military purposes will sell for $75 retail.

The Maritime Commission, asking bids for nearly 5,000 boats, announced the retail price today. Dealers may purchase them in lots of 25 or more for $52.50. Used assault boats will be cheaper.

The assault boats are described as suitable for sportsmen. Assault troops use paddles to bring the boats into beaches, the commission said. The boats, nearly 14 feet long, weigh 165 pounds.

MRS. LUCE TO VISIT SOLDIERS AT FRONT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19—Representative Clare Boothe Luce of Connecticut, a member of the House Military Affairs committee, will visit European battlefronts and army camps soon, it was learned here.

It is understood that the Army made a special point of asking Mrs. Luce to make the trip because of her oft-expressed interest in the welfare of G. I. Joe, the common soldier.

The invitation came suddenly and the whole affair involved a hurried revision of all of Mrs. Luce's plans for the immediate future. The exact time and place of departure of the Congressional party is a military secret but Mrs. Luce expects to be back in time for the beginning of the new session of Congress in January.

Far East War Veteran Killed In Bomber Crash

Long Beach, Cal., Nov. 19 (AP)—Capt. Grover Huffle, Jr., 27, bemedalled veteran of the China-Burma-India war theater, was disclosed today as the pilot who lost his life yesterday while attempting to swerve his medium bomber from crashing into houses.

Ferrying command officials said the Orlando (Fla.) flyer must have battled before the crash to miss hitting dwellings in the near-by Willmington area. The plane's twin engines were buried a foot in the pavement 50 feet from a sleeping 2-year-old child.

The son of Grover Huffle, Leesburg, Fla., the captain completed 72 missions over the "hump" and won the Air Medal with cluster, Distinguished Flying Cross and Presidential Citation Ribbon. He returned from the Far East two weeks ago.

BATTLE EXPECTED IN MOVE TO MAKE FEPC PERMANENT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19—(AP) Months before any action is due, legislation to make permanent the Fair Employment Practices committee is starting along a rocky road strewn with wreckage of anti-lynching and poll tax measures.

Bills to ban poll taxes and combat lynching always have encountered fights and filibusters in Congress. And, despite Republican and Democratic campaign indorsements, a lasting FEPC apparently is also in for some rough going.

A measure to set up a permanent agency charged with trying to minimize racial and religious job discrimination hasn't even emerged from a Senate or House committee. But Southerners are against it. And the spearhead of the opposition may be Senator Russell (D-Ga.).

"It will only be passed," he asserted today, "after the most terrific fight waged in Congress in a long, long time. In fact, I don't think it can be passed.

"There is a lot of strong opposition, and I don't think after the issue is understood the opposition will by any means be confined to the South."

Russell bucked vigorously when Congress was asked a few months ago to provide funds for the temporary FEPC existing under a Presidential Executive order. And he let it be known that he would combat creation of a permanent agency even more strenuously.

"Why, it would go farther toward nationalizing industry than any other thing," he fumed. "If it were enacted, it would give a government agency absolute control over all relations heretofore left to private industry.

"Private industry would really be dead. It would mean a sweeping change in the American system."

A permanent FEPC wouldn't necessarily work entirely to the advantage and betterment of the American Negro, Russell contended. He said, for instance, that it could compel a Negro druggist in Harlem to hire a Japanese-American pharmacist whether he wanted to or not.

And that, he said, is one reason why the opposition will spread once the issue is better understood.

Ohio Telephone Strike Spreads To Youngstown

Maintenance Men Walk Out With Operators; Military Calls Suffer No Delays

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 19 (AP).—A strike of telephone operators which already had affected twenty-four Ohio cities spread to the steel-making center of Youngstown today, with maintenance men joining the walkout. There were no prospects of an early settlement.

Harold Barber, vice-president in charge of public relations for the Ohio Bell Telephone Company, said Ohio Bell could do nothing now that the matter had been referred to the War Labor Board.

The regional War Labor Board in Cleveland, which submitted the case to the national board for "appropriate action," said any developments would have to come from the parent body in Washington.

The strike began Friday, when operators in Dayton quit work in protest against a company policy of importing out-of-town operators on a salary-plus-expenses basis, according to Miss Jeanette Reedy, president of the southwestern division of the Ohio Federation of Telephone Workers. Operators in other exchanges followed them in a sympathy strike.

The company has contended that "it is only fair" to compensate operators from out of the city for added expenses.

Earl Culp, editor of the federation's bulletin, said in Cleveland that he expected maintenance men, equipment installers and construction workers affiliated with the union in northeastern Ohio to leave their jobs tomorrow or Tuesday. Today was their regular day off.

A total of 850 maintenance men in Cleveland quit Saturday night. The number of other such employees in the northeastern area, which includes also Akron, Canton and Youngstown, was not available.

The Youngstown operators and plant workers walked out at 3:30 p. m. and with them fellow employees in Salem. A total of 325 operators and 100 plant workers in the two cities participated. Picket lines were formed about the main building in Youngstown.

Ohio Bell said that all government, military and emergency calls were going through today without delay, although the company broadcast an appeal by radio to subscribers to use their phones only in emergencies.

Mr. Culp, speaking for the federation, asserted that local service "is what you might call normal."

AFL BECKONS ANEW TO CIO

Report Urges Solid Labor Front For Post-War World

New Orleans, Nov. 19 (AP)—The AFL, deploring the widening split with the CIO, beckoned anew today to its one-time committee to come back and present a solid labor front for the post-war world.

The American Federation of Labor's leadership represented by the executive council, made its annual report for the 64th annual convention and emphasized it with a bitter denunciation of CIO "raiding policy" and an expression of hope that the gap between the two unions might be erased.

The Congress of Industrial Organizations, formed as the committee for Industrial Organization of the AFL in 1935, by John L. Lewis, is starting its convention simultaneously in Chicago tomorrow but President Philip Murray made no reference in his annual report to any possible reaffiliation. He did urge labor unity, however.

Tactics Called Reprehensible

The AFL council condemned as "reprehensible" some of the tactics it said were used by CIO unions to acquire strength at the expense of AFL unions, and charged "deception and fraud" had sometimes been employed.

"Division, discord, and disunity prevail within the ranks of labor," the council report said. "The situation has grown worse; confusion, distrust, and bitterness have increased" during the last year, when the AFL's peace negotiating committee was unable to arrange a meeting with CIO representatives.

"The cause of labor will not be well served if we face the post-war period divided, disunited and fighting each other.

"It is reasonable to conclude that we will be forced to meet a severe test when the war is over. No doubt the enemies of labor will unite against us. That means we will be compelled to face united opposition on the part of our enemies and changed economic conditions which will seriously affect our efforts to maintain American wage standards and conditions of employment.

Wants Facts Faced

"It is the opinion of the executive council that the leaders of the CIO who are responsible for the division within the ranks of labor should face the facts, abandon the destructive policy which they have followed for years, and unite with the representatives of the American Federation of Labor in a sincere and constructive effort to establish unity, cooperation and solidarity within the ranks of labor."

George Meany, secretary-treasurer, reported total membership of AFL unions was 6,818,400, a gain of nearly 50,000 during the year. The International Association of Machinists jumped into the lead with 665,900 paying members. The machinists, out of the AFL during 1943, have doubled their membership since 1942.

The council devoted considerable attention to post-war problems, domestic and international. Its principal proposal was for Congressional creation of an office of War Mobilization and adjustment, with an economic commission made up of workers, employers and farmers. The commission would make policies to guide war demobilization, reconversion and reconstruction and reemployment.

Suggestions Made

The office would:

1. Coordinate plans for production and reemployment and time demobilization of armies with work opportunities.

2. In order to facilitate employment after the war, prepare to promote early resumption of private business by (a) contract cancellation negotiation; (b) prompt settlement of claims; (c) removal of Government property from plants; (d) disposition of Government surplus property.

The plan allowed for continuation of price control and rationing "until scarcities disappear."

CAPITAL LEADERS EXPECT INCREASE IN WAGE FORMULA

Upward Revision of 'Little Steel' Ceiling Likely Through WLB.

EARLY ACTION SEEN

Vinson Pledges 'Special Vigilance' to Curb Future Rise in Living Costs.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—(AP) A number of senators, including some who dislike the idea, expressed the opinion today that President Roosevelt will revise the "Little Steel" wage formula upward.

At the same time, Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson pledged "special vigilance" by himself and the Price Administrator to stop further increases in the cost of living. In a statement, he called for a wage policy to provide earnings, after V-E day "high enough to buy the products of our expanded and reconverted industries."

Congressmen saw in War Labor Board Chairman Davis' Saturday report of a wartime living cost increase of 29 to 30 per cent a vehicle for early White House action.

While the legislators were divided as to the desirability of basic wage increases, a majority agreed that the Administration would move in that direction.

30 Per Cent Rise Asked

Some observers thought that the President might tell the War Labor Board to permit wage increases above the 15 per cent in excess of January, 1941 levels allowed by the "Little Steel" formula, but not as high as the 30 per cent increase proposed by George Meany, A.F.L. member of the committee.

Senator Russell (D-Ga) said he thought some types of labor are entitled to some increases, but added that "those who are holding the line against inflation have got to be supported, and I'd hate to see the 'Little Steel' formula entirely discarded."

On the other hand, Senator Aiken (R-Vt) asserted that it looked to him "as if the 'Little Steel' formula is on the way out, if the report is accepted."

"I never did think the formula was very fair," Aiken told reporters. "It took no account of depreciation in quality in such items as shoes and clothing, which meant higher living costs even though the prices were unchanged."

One southern senator who declined to be quoted by name said there is "already some recession in some businesses." He added that if general wage increases are granted, "they would be reflected in the cost of war supplies and might upset budget calculations."

Vinson Praises Report

Vinson praised the Davis report as a "careful, thorough and disinterested survey."

"Naturally, I am gratified at this confirmation of the general belief that a good job has been done in stabilizing wartime prices and living costs," he said.

"I am frankly disturbed to note that, after a year of complete stability, the cost of living has risen slightly but perceptibly during the past six months. This must stop. The Price Administrator and I will use special vigilance to this end.

"Meanwhile we must plan to meet the changes with which "V-E" day will put us face to face. We must put consumer goods from our reconverted industries on the market at prices low enough to provide mass markets and full employment. We must have a wage policy to provide workers with earnings high enough to buy the products of our expanded and reconverted industries."

PEPPER TO SEEK ACTION ON WAGES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19—(AP) Encouraged by the testimony of war Labor Board Chairman William H. Davis, Senator Pepper (D-Fla) announced yesterday he will seek action this session on his substandard wage resolution.

It would advise the WLB that Congress considers any wage less than 65 cents an hour to be substandard.

Davis endorsed the resolution "in principle" near the close of an all-day hearing by a Senate Labor subcommittee, but told the Senators that if the resolution were adopted, the board would regard it as a guide rather than a mandate.

"You've got to handle increases so industry can handle them and continue to make a profit," Davis said. "We might feel that 65 cents was too high even for a voluntary increase."

Although he agreed there would be strong pressure to raise all wages to the 65 cent minimum if the resolution were adopted, Davis said the board would feel no compulsion to go up to that limit.

The concurrent resolution would merely express the sense of Congress on the controversial subject and would not have the force of law. Pepper said, however, that as far as he was concerned he would be willing to make the 65 cent minimum arbitrary—"shifting to the feet of industry and the general public some of the burden which has been borne by underpaid groups."

The present minimum hourly wage under the wage-hour act is 40 cents but the war labor board now is permitting employers who voluntarily offer to raise wages up to the 50-cent level to do so without consulting the board.

Davis said there was no doubt that increases in living costs bear more heavily on the lowest bracket wage earners who have to cut down on food, clothing and medical attention. He said anything that could be done to lift substandard wages would be "helpful."

AT ALTKIRCH, THE FRENCH WOULD BE EIGHT MILES SOUTH OF MULHOUSE AT THE EASTERN END OF THE GAP AND 13 MILES FROM THE GERMAN BORDER AT THE RHINE. WHILE THERE WAS NO ALLIED CONFIRMATION, THE PARIS RADIO BROADCAST A FRENCH WAR BULLETIN SAYING ITS ARMY HAD ENTERED ALSACE.

THE U.S. FIRST ARMY'S FOUR-MILE ADVANCE EAST OF AACHEN WAS THE GREATEST GAIN SINCE THE MASSIVE OFFENSIVE OPENED FOUR DAYS AGO -- A BLOW IN WHICH THE U.S. FIRST AND NINTH AND BRITISH SECOND ARMIES HAVE BEEN ALIGNED SHOULDER TO SHOULDER, SUPPORTED BY MASSIVE GUNS AND PLANES IN ASSAULTS AGAINST FANATICAL NAZIS, DUG-IN TANKS, BARBED WIRE, AND MINEFIELDS.

"THERE WERE STRONG INDICATIONS THE ENEMY WAS REACHING THE BREAKING POINT IN ONE AREA UNDER THE TERRIBLE WEIGHT OF THE FIRST ARMY'S ATTACK," AP CORRESPONDENT DON WHITEHEAD REPORTED SUNDAY NIGHT FROM THE FRONT. THERE ARE SIGNS, HE SAID, THAT "THE TOUGH CRUST OF NAZI RESISTANCE PROTECTING THE OUTER FRINGES OF THE RHINELAND HAS BEEN SMASHED IN SPOTS," BUT "THERE IS NO BREAKTHROUGH BY THE FIRST ARMY" AS YET.

FIRST ARMY MEN WON THE TOWN OF HAMICH SOUTHEAST OF INDUSTRIAL ESCHWEILER AFTER A SEE-SAW BATTLE, THEN PUSHED ON AND CAPTURED HAMICH RIDGE, THE HIGH GROUND USED BY GERMANS TO SPOT AMERICAN MOVEMENTS.

SOME 15 OR MORE TOWNS WERE SEIZED IN ADVANCES FROM SOUTHEAST OF ESCHWEILER TO THE GEILENKIRCHEN AREA.

U.S. INFANTRY WORKING WITH BRITISH TANKS CAPTURED GEILENKIRCHEN, AND MEN OF THE U.S. NINTH ARMY TOOK SETTERICH, FIVE MILES SOUTHEAST OF GEILENKIRCHEN. NINTH ARMY TROOPS ALSO BATTLED NORTHWEST OF ESCHWEILER.

FOR THE FIRST TIME IN THE AACHEN OFFENSIVE, GERMAN PLANES OPPOSED THE ALLIED AIR ATTACK, BUT U.S. PILOTS CLAIMED 15 ENEMY SHIPS DOWNED, WHILE LOSING ONE.

AT METZ, ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT LEWIS HAWKINS SUNDAY NIGHT SAID "EARLY COMPLETION OF THE FIRST SUCCESSFUL STORMING OF THE FORTRESS CITY APPEARED CERTAIN AS THE AMERICAN SPEED DISRUPTED DEFENSIVE PLANS."

UNITS OF THE 95TH DIVISION BROKE INTO METZ FROM THE NORTHEAST, NORTH, AND NORTHWEST, AND MEN OF THE FIFTH DIVISION INVADED FROM THE SOUTHEAST. THE FIFTH DIVISION BY-PASSED FORT QUEULEU, AND MANY SURPRISED GERMAN TROOPS SURRENDERED WITHOUT RESISTANCE, HAWKINS SAID. THE CITY WAS CUT OFF.

EARLIER, THE THIRD ARMY HAD TAKEN THE TOWNS OF BESCH AND WOCHERN IN GERMANY NEAR LUXEMBOURG, AND SEVERAL VILLAGES FARTHER SOUTH IN FRANCE.

FROM NOV. 8 THROUGH SATURDAY, THE THIRD ARMY TOOK 11,304 PRISONERS.

THE SEVENTH ARMY WAS BEATING STEADILY TOWARD THE ENTRANCES TO GAPS IN THE VOSGES MOUNTAINS. BLAMONT, AN IMPORTANT HIGHWAY CENTER, FELL SOON AFTER CAPTURE OF RAON-L'ETAPE, 13 MILES FARTHER SOUTH. OTHER TROOPS STOOD BEFORE ST.DIE, ANOTHER 10 MILES SOUTHEAST.

FAVORABLE FOR THE ALLIES:

2. A GREATLY LENGTHENED FRONT OVER WHICH THE GERMANS MUST SPREAD THEIR MANPOWER MORE THINLY.

3. ABILITY TO PICK AND SHIFT THEIR HEAVIEST POINTS OF ATTACK.

4. INABILITY OF THE GERMANS NOW TO TRADE SPACE FOR TIME--IF THEY GIVE UP GROUND NOW IT IS IN GERMANY, AND IT HURTS.

ON THE GERMAN SIDE ARE THESE FACTORS:

1. THEY ARE WORKING FROM INTERNAL LINES OF COMMUNICATION UNDER COVER OF WINTER WEATHER, AND THEY ARE ABLE TO BRING UP ADEQUATE SUPPLIES TO THE FIGHTING FRONT--AN IMPOSSIBILITY IN FRANCE DUE TO ALLIED AIR POWER.

2. THEY ARE OPERATING IN FRIENDLY COUNTRY WHERE THEY DO NOT HAVE TO WATCH LINES OF COMMUNICATION.

3. THEY ARE BETTER ABLE THAN THEY WERE TO SHIFT TROOPS FROM FRONT TO FRONT TO MEET THREATS.

4. THE GERMAN PEOPLE HAVE BEEN SOLD ON THE IDEA THEY MUST FIGHT OR GERMANY WILL DIE.

BY LEWIS HAWKINS

METZ, NOV 19-(AP)-METZ, THE FORTRESS CITY WHICH NEVER BEFORE HAS BEEN SUCCESSFULLY ATTACKED IN 1,500 YEARS, WAS ENCIRCLED AND FALLING TO AMERICANS TODAY AS LT.GEN.GEORGE S.PATTON'S ARMOR BROKE INTO GERMANY TO THE NORTH AND THE ENEMY FELL BACK TOWARD THE SIEGFRIED LINE IN THE SAAR.

A SURPRISE AMERICAN INFANTRY ATTACK BEFUDDLED THE GERMAN DEFENDERS, OVERRUNNING ABOUT A THIRD OF THE CITY BY LATE THIS AFTERNOON IN A FOUR-WAY SQUEEZE AND BLEW SKY HIGH ENEMY PLANS FOR A HOUSE-TO-HOUSE FIGHT.

THE FIFTH INFANTRY DIVISION OF THE THIRD ARMY IN AN OVERNIGHT THRUST BYPASSING FORT QUEULEU SWARMED OVER THE SOUTHEASTERN QUARTER OF METZ WITH LIGHT LOSSES.

WHEN I CAUGHT UP WITH THE VANGUARD IN MIDAFTERNOON IT WAS ON THE EAST BANK OF THE SEILLE RIVER, EXCHANGING FIRE WITH THE ENEMY ON THE WEST SIDE.

I ALSO RAN INTO ADVANCE ELEMENTS OF THE 95TH DIVISION, WHICH CAME IN FROM THE NORTHEAST, JOINED THE FIFTH AND CLOSED THE ESCAPE GAP EAST OUT OF METZ.

I CAME INTO THE CITY IN THE WAKE OF THE TENTH REGIMENT AFTER WATCHING THE ELEVENTH BATTLING FIERCELY ON THE SOUTHWEST APPROACHES.

(WHILE HAWKINS WAS IN EASTERN METZ, ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT KENNETH L.DIXON WAS WATCHING UNITS OF THE 95TH DIVISION CROSSING THE MOSELLE INTO THE NORTHEND END OF THE TOWN.)

WHILE INFANTRY SLAMMED A DOUBLE DOOR ACROSS THE ESCAPE ROUTE EAST OUT OF METZ, TANKS OF THE THIRD ARMY CROSSED THE BORDER INTO GERMANY NEAR LAUNSTROFF, 13 MILES NORTHWEST OF SAARLOUIS, AND A CAVALRY GROUP MADE A SECOND NEW PENETRATION INTO THE REICH NEAR LUXEMBOURG.

MAJOR GEN.WILLIAM H.MORRIS' TANKS PUSHED INTO THE REICH FOR A DEPTH OF ABOUT A QUARTER OF A MILE AFTER PASSING THROUGH LAUNSSTROFF.

ARMOR ALSO CLOSED IN TO WALDWISSE, IN FRANCE ONLY A HALF MILE FROM THE GERMAN BORDER AND 11 MILES FROM SAARLOUIS, BUT THE CLOSEST APPROACH TO THIS SAAR CITY WAS MADE BY OTHER FORCES WHICH PASSED THROUGH SCHWERDORFF, A HALF-MILE INSIDE FRANCE BUT ONLY SEVEN MILES TO THE NORTHWEST.

STILL MORE TANKS WERE ONLY NINE MILES WEST OF SAARLOUIS AT FILSTROFF AFTER A DAY OF GAINS RANGING UP TO TWO MILES.

THE THIRD CAVALRY LANCED TWO MILES NORTHWESTWARD AND ENTERED BUSCHDORFF, A HALF MILE INSIDE GERMANY NEAR THE LUXEMBOURG BORDER. THE CAVALRY'S DEEPEST PENETRATION IN THIS SECTOR REMAINED IN THE BESCH AREA, THREE MILES INSIDE GERMANY AND JUST EAST OF THE LUXEMBOURG BORDER.

WAR PLANTS TORE AT THE GERMAN COLUMNS MOVING TOWARD THE SAAR IN A WITHDRAWAL WHICH PILOTS COMPARED WITH THE ENEMY RETREAT FROM NORMANDY. THEY CLAIMED DESTRUCTION OF MORE THAN 250 MOTOR TRANSPORTS

THE TENTH ARMORED DIVISION ALSO WAS PRESSING CLOSE AGAINST GERMANY AT TWO OTHER PLACES.

THE EARLY COMPLETION OF THE FIRST SUCCESSFUL STORMING OF METZ APPEARED CERTAIN AS THE SPEED OF THE AMERICAN CHARGE DISRUPTED ENEMY PLANS FOR DEFENSE.

HERE IS THE SITUATION IN AND AROUND METZ TONIGHT ON THE BASIS OF OFFICIAL ARMY REPORTS AND EYE-WITNESS ACCOUNTS:

MEN OF THE FIFTH DIVISION'S TENTH INFANTRY REGIMENT, COMMANDED BY COL. ROBERT P.BELL, MONTCLAIR, N.J., WERE UP TO A MILE AND A QUARTER DEEP INTO THE CITY FROM THE SOUTHEAST AND CONTROLLED THE SOUTHEASTERN QUARTER OF THE CITY FORMED BY THE SEILLE RIVER AND THE MAIN RAIL LINE RUNNING DUE EAST FROM THE CENTER OF THE TOWN.

THE DOUGHBOYS REACHED THE RIVER BUT FOUND THE BRIDGES BLOWN AND THE ENEMY FIRING FROM THE OTHER SIDE.

JUST TO THE NORTH ACROSS THE RAILROAD, PARTS OF THE 95TH DIVISION'S 377TH AND 378TH REGIMENTS ALSO PUSHED TO THE SEILLE RIVER, TAKING FORT BELLAGROIC EN ROUTE.

ON THE EXTREME NORTHERN PART OF THE CITY, CORRESPONDENTS WATCHED OTHER TROOPS OF THE 377TH REGIMENT, UNDER COL. FRED E.GAILLARD, SEWANEE, TENN., CROSS THE MOSELLE RIVER IN RUBBER BOATS AND GAIN A NEW FOOTHOLD NORTHEAST OF THE ISLAND TAKEN YESTERDAY BY THE SAME OUTFIT.

FROM THE WEST AND SOUTHWEST THE 377TH MADE ANOTHER CROSSING OF THE MOSELLE, REACHING SYMPHORIEN ISLAND. THEY ADVANCED ABOUT HALF-WAY ACROSS THIS 2.000-YARD WIDE, LOW-LYING, LARGELY OPEN SPACE WITHOUT MEETING OPPOSITION.

FROM THE SOUTHWEST, THE 11TH REGIMENT OF THE FIFTH DIVISION WAS SLUGGING FORWARD HOUSE-BY-HOUSE ALONG THE ROAD AT THE NORTH EDGE OF THE AIRPORT AND STREETS ON EITHER SIDE.

FIRE FROM THE FORT PRIVAT AREA STILL WAS HEAVY. SS (ELITE GUARD) TROOPS WERE BELIEVED TO HAVE PULLED IN FROM ACROSS THE MOSELLE WEST OF METZ AND BOLSTERED THE QUALITY OF THE VOLKSTURM'S RESISTANCE.

ONLY AGAINST THIS ATTACK, FOLLOWING THE MOST LOGICAL LINE OF APPROACH TO METZ, WERE THE GERMANS ABLE TO PUT INTO EFFECT THEIR PLANS FOR FIGHTING HOUSE BY HOUSE. FIVE OR SIX MEN WERE IN EACH HOUSE WITH MACHINEGUNS AND RIFLES, SO THAT TANKS, ARTILLERY AND INFANTRY HAD TO REDUCE EACH ONE.

STARTING ON THE SOUTHWESTERN APPROACHES TO THE CITY, THE PARTY I WAS WITH MADE THREE PASSES BEFORE GETTING INTO THIS FAMOUS BASTION OF THE LORRAINE AND THE TRADITIONAL EASTERN DEFENSE ANCHOR OF FRANCE.

W FOUND THE 11TH REGIMENT MEETING THE TOUGHEST RESISTANCE THERE.

WE TRIED TO GET IN AGAIN FROM THE SOUTH IN THE MAGNY AREA, ONLY O FIND THAT WHILE THE 10TH HAD SENT MEN IN, THERE WAS NO WAY OF NOWING JUST WHERE ITS LINES WERE AND WHAT ROADS WERE CLEAR.

SO WE CIRCLED EAST AND CAME IN FROM THE DIRECTION OF BORNY.

WE ROLLED ALONG THE COBBLESTONE STREETS UNTIL WE CAUGHT UP WITH AN AMERICAN SPEARHEAD JUST EAST OF THE SEILLE.

LT.ISAAC H.STOREY OF ROME, GA., WHO LED SOME MEN FROM COMPANY C OF THE FIRST BATTALION LAST NIGHT INTO THE CITY, SAID THIS OF THE FIRST DEEP PENETRATION INTO METZ:

"E MOVED VERY SLOWLY AND CAREFULLY OVER THE EASTERN END OF FORT QUEULEU AND, AFTER CIRCLING TO THE RIGHT, TRIED TO COME INTO THE TOWN ALONG THE MAIN STREET FROM THE EAST. BUT WE HEARD THERE WERE SOME STRONG POINTS AHEAD, SO WE STARTED THROUGH THE BACK WAYS.

"WE RAN INTO VERY LITTLE OPPOSITION AND AS IT GOT LIGHT WE RAN INTO GERMANS PATROLLING THE STREETS. THEY APPARENTLY WERE COMPLETELY SURPRISED AND GENERALLY WOULD TAKE ONE LOOK AT US AND DROP THEIR GUNS AND SURRENDER. THEY HAD NO IDEA WE WERE ANYWHERE NEAR."

HUNDREDS OF CIVILIANS SWARMED OVER THE STREETS WHERE THE AMERICANS HAD PASSED AND THERE WERE INDICATIONS THAT PERHAPS A LARGE PER CENT OF THE CITY'S NORMAL POPULATION OF 70,000 STILL WAS HERE.

THE OVERALL DAMAGE TO THE CITY IS NOT GREAT SO FAR.

BY DON WHITEHEAD

WITH THE U.S.FIRST ARMY IN GERMANY, NOV 19-(AP)-THE U.S. FIRST ARMY SURGED FORWARD FOUR MILES TODAY IN THE GREATEST GAINS SINCE THE ATTACK OPENED FOUR DAYS AGO AND TONIGHT THEY WERE ASTRIDE THE BROAD ADOLF HITLER HIGHWAY ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF ESCHWEILER, ROAD CENTER SEVEN MILES NORTHEAST OF AACHEN.

INDICATIONS ARE GROWING THAT THE TERRIBLE PRESSURE OF THE GROUND AND AIR ATTACK WHICH THE FIRST ARMY LAUNCHED LAST THURSDAY IS SOFTENING THE STUBBORN GRMAN DEFENSES AND FORCING THE NAZIS BACK ALONG THE FRONT EAST OF AACHEN.

UNDER THE SECOND DAY OF CLEAR SKIES THE AIR FORCE SWARMED OUT, SMASHING AT ENEMY POSITIONS, WHILE LT.GEN.COURTNEY H.HODGES' HEAVY ARTILLERY BLAZED STEADILY THROUGHOUT THE DAY IN SUPPORT OF INFANTRY AND ARMOR DRIVING STEADILY AHEAD.

A STAFF OFFICER SAID THAT THIS WAS THE BEST DAY SINCE THE OFFENSIVE BEGAN AND DECLARED THAT PROGRESS HAD BEEN "VERY SATISFACTORY."

THE DOUGHBOYS BATTLED THEIR WAY THROUGH THE TOWN OF HAMICH, DUE EAST OF AACHEN AND SEIZED THE IMPORTANT HAMICH RIDGE BEYOND, FROM WHICH THE GERMANS HAD BEEN ABLE TO OBSERVE THE MOVEMENT OF AMERICAN TROOPS AND ARMOR APPROACHING THE IMPORTANT ROAD CENTER.

PATROLS REACHED THE OUTSKIRTS OF ESCHWEILER, ONE OF THE IMPORTANT INDUSTRIAL CENTERS OF THIS SECTION OF THE RHINELAND.
ESCHWEILER HAS A POPULATION OF APPROXIMATELY 50,000 INHABITANTS AND IS ONE OF THE MAIN CITIES ON THE ROAD LEADING TO THE RHINE.
ADOLF HITLER HIGHWAY RUNS THROUGH THE CITY. IT IS A BROAD, SIX-LANED COMMUNICATIONS ROUTE WHICH WOULD BE INVALUABLE IN THE ARMY'S ADVANCE.
WHETHER THE GERMANS INTEND TO MAKE ANOTHER AACHEN OF ESCHWEILER CANNOT BE SAID YET. IF THEY SHOULD ENTRENCH THEMSELVES IN THE CITY AND MAKE OF FORTRESS OF THE TOWN, THEN UNDOUBTEDLY IT WILL RECEIVE THE SAME RUTHLESS TREATMENT WHICH LEFT AACHEN IN RUINS.
THERE IS NO BREAKTHROUGH BY THE FIRST ARMY, ALTHOUGH RESISTANCE HAS BEEN SOFTENED UNDER THE WEIGHT OF THE ARMY'S BIG GUNS, SMASHING AIR ATTACKS AND THE CONTINUAL DRIVE OF THE INFANTRY.
BUT THE ENTIRE PICTURE WAS BRIGHTER, WITH INDICATIONS THAT THE TOUGH CRUST OF GERMAN RESISTANCE PROTECTING THE OUTER FRINGES OF THE RHINELAND HAD BEEN SMASHED IN SPOTS.
HOW ANYTHING COULD STAND UNDER THE WEIGHT OF ARTILLERY BEING LAID DOWN ON THE ENEMY'S POSITION IS A MYSTERY.
ON THE OPENING DAY OF THE ASSAULT, LT.GEN.COURTNEY HODGES LOOSED AN ARTILLERY BARRAGE EVEN GREATER HAN THAT HISTORIC BARRAGE WHICH
V
AN ARTILLERY BARRAGE EVEN GREATER THAN THAT HISTORIC BARRAGE WHICH FIELD MARSHAL SIR BERNARD L.MONTGOMERY TURNED ON THE LATE GERMAN FIELD MARSHAL ERWIN ROMMEL AT EL ALAMEIN IN NORTH AFRICA.
THOUSANDS OF TONS OF EXPLOSIVES WERE DROPPED ON THE ENEMY POSITIONS --AND THE ARTILLERY HAS KEPT UP ITS POUNDING STEADILY SINCE.
THE LITTLE VALLEYS AT THE FRONT ECHO TO THE THUNDER AND FURY OF BATTLE. DEFILADED GUNS ROAR AND THEIR CRASH ECHOES AND RE-ECHOES BETWEEN THE RIDGES, MULTIPLYING THE SOUND INTO AN ALMOST STEADY DRUMMING.
FIGHTING FROM BEHIND WELL-PREPARED POSITIONS, DEFENDED HEAVILY BY WIRE AND MINES, THE GERMANS PROBABLY WILL BE ABLE TO MAKE AN ORDERLY WITHDRAWAL TO THE NEXT LINE OF DEFENSE, WHICH THE MAP INDICATES WOULD BE THE ROER RIVER LINE.
THERE WAS NO UNDUE OPTIMISM AMONG OFFICERS OR MEN OVER A POSSIBLE SUDDEN SWEEP WHICH WOULD TRAP SEVERAL GERMAN DIVISIONS.

HOWEVER THE FIGHTING WHICH HAD BEEN BITTER AND BLOODY FOR THREE DAYS BECAME SUDDENLY MORE FLUID TODAY AND THERE WERE STRONG INDICATIONS THE ENEMY WAS REACHING THE BREAKING POINT IN THE ONE AREA UNDER THE

TERR
EIGHT OF THE FIRST ARMY'S ATTACK.
THE RST ARMY IS LT.GEN.OMAR BRADLEY'S ACE, SINCE IT IS THE MOST EXPERI ED AFTER HAVING BEEN TEMPERED IN THE BATTLES OF NORMANDY, FRANC ELGIUM AND HOLLAND.
TH ANCES GAVE THE FIRST ARMY MORE ELBOW ROOM IN WHICH TO MANEUVE AND BROKE UP SOME OF THE BOTTLENECK POSITIONS WHICH HAD HAMPERED THEM.
THE BATTLE FOR HAMICH WAS A SEESAW AFFAIR WITH THE GERMANS PUTTING IN SEVERAL COUNTERATTACKS TO TRY TO HOLD THE POSITION. BUT THE DOUGHBOYS GRIMLY FOUGHT THROUGH THE TOWN AND FINALLY BEAT BACK THE ENEMY. THEN THEY ADVANCED SWIFTLY AND COVERED 800 YARDS IN TWO HOURS.
CONTROL OF HAMICH RIDGE WAS AN IMPORTANT GAIN FOR THE YANKS BECAUSE IT DENIED THE GERMANS OBSERVATION COVERING ALL THE HAMICH AND HASTENRATH AREA IN WHICH THEY WERE ABLE TO FIRE DIRECTLY ON TROOPS OR ARMOR MOVING UP.
FOR THE SECOND STRAIGHT DAY THE AIR FORCE WAS ABLE TO GIVE THE INFANTRY CLOSE SUPPORT AND IT FLEW THE GREATEST NUMBER OF SORTIES OF ANY TIME IN WEEKS.
FIGHTERBOMBERS WERE OUT BEFORE DAYBREAK AND KEPT UP A STEADY SHUTTLE TO THE FRONT BOMBING GUN POSITIONS, TROOP CONCENTRATIONS AND COMMUNICATIONS.
THE GERMAN AIR FORCE MADE AN APPEARANCE FOR THE FIRST TIME SINCE THE ATTACK OPENED AND OF 50 FOCKE-WULF 190'S ENCOUNTERED YANK FLYERS CLAIMED 15 WERE DESTROYED WITH THE LOSS OF ONE AMERICAN PLANE. IN THREE AIR BATTLES ENEMY PLANES WERE INTERCEPTED IN THE DUREN AREA AND TURNED BACK FROM THEIR TARGETS.

DA331PEW

WITH U.S.INFANTRY, NOV 19-(AP)-AMERICAN FORCES HAVE ADVANCED TO THE LAST RIDGE SHORT OF ESCHWEILER, SEVEN MILES NORTHEAST OF AACHEN, AFTER A BLOODLESS AND GHOSTLY NIGHT ATTACK THAT CARRIED THEM 1,000 YARDS THROUGH THE DARK FORESTS AND FIXED ENEMY DEFENSES AT THE REAR OF THE OLD SIEGFRIED LINE.
THE TOWN, WHOSE OUTSKIRTS WERE REACHED AFTER AN OVERALL ADVANCE OF FOUR MILES, IS UNDER THE RUNNING ATTACK OF DIVEBOMBERS.
JUST 1,000 YARDS BELOW OUR FORWARD POSITIONS IS THE CENTER OF ESCHWEILER.
GERMAN RESISTANCE WAS SOFTENING.
"THIS HAS BEEN THE BEST DAY WE'VE HAD," SAID A STAFF OFFICER IN DISCUSSING THE DAY'S OPERATIONS. "PROGRESS HAS BEEN VERY SATISFACTORY."
AMERICAN DOUGHBOYS REACHED HERE AT MIDNIGHT AFTER CREEPING FOR SIX HOURS THROUGH TOTAL BLACKNESS. NOT A MAN WAS KILLED OR EVEN WOUNDED, ALTHOUGH OTHER OUTFITS ALL ABOUT US IN DAYLIGHT ATTACKS HAVE BEEN SUFFERING CASUALTIES. THE GERMANS HAVE A COMPLETE AND UGLY COLLECTION OF WEAPONS IN THIS AREA, RUNNING ALL THE WAY FROM TANK AND ANTI-TANK GUNS DOWN TO MACHINEGUNS AND RIFLE NESTS.
THE GERMAN ALSO ARE USING ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS AS GROUND WEAPONS BY LOWERING THEM.
THE MAN WHO LED THIS NIGHT ATTACK, THE FIRST EVER MADE BY AMERICAN TROOPS INSIDE GERMANY AND ONE OF THE MOST INCREDIBLE SUCCESSES THAT SAVED COUNTLESS LIVES, IS 30-YEAR-OLD LT.COL. ROBERT R. CLARK OF ST.JOSEPH, MO., WHO WAS SECONDED AND SUPPORTED BY NO LESS THAN HIS "OLD MAN." THE "OLD MAN" IS THE COMMANDING GENERAL AND HE CAME RIGHT UP TO OUR FOREMOST LINE LATE YESTERDAY TO SET THIS THING UP.

THE GERMANS WERE CAUGHT COM... BY SURPRISE AND MANY A NEST OF THEM IS CUT OFF BEHIND US NOW.
CLARK, THIN AND BROWN-EYED, BROUGHT HIS MEN THROUGH WHAT WOULD UNQUESTIONABLY HAVE BEEN OTHERWISE A HELLISH STRETCH. IT WAS ONE OF THE MOST STRONGLY FORTIFIED AREAS WE HAVE EVER ENCOUNTERED ANYWHERE. THE GERMANS HAD EVERYTHING IN THERE--PILLBOXES, FORTIFIED HOUSES, STRONGPOINTS COMPLETE WITH TUNNELS IN WHICH THEY TOOK SHELTER FROM OUR ARTILLERY FIRE, AND EVERY OTHER SORT OF OBSTACLE.
BUT THE GERMANS DID NOT KNOW THE AMERICANS WERE HERE UNTIL THEY WOEK UP THIS MORNING. PROBABLY AS ROUTINE PRECAUTION THE GERMANS HAD THROWN UP FLARES IN THE FOREST OFF AND ON DURING THE NIGHT BUT THE AMERICANS SNUFFED THESE OUT WITH SMOKE SHELLS FIRED FROM 105-MILLIMETER GUNS.
TO SAY THE PRESENT SITUATION IS CLOSE-QUARTER FIGHTING WOULD BE AN UNDERSTATEMENT: FOR EXAMPLE CLARK JUST SENT SOME MEN FORWARD TO A PILLBOX 200 YARDS OUT IN FRONT OF WHERE WE ARE STANDING NOW. HE HAD FIGURED ON MOVING HIS COMMAND POST THERE. BUT WHEN THE DETAIL WALKED UP, INTENDING TO SET UP TELEPHONE WIRES, OUT POPPED 13 GERMAN SOLDIERS THEIR HANDS IN THE AIR.
CLARK SMILED AND SAID:
"I GUESS I WAS A LITTLE PREMATURE, AND I'LL KEEP THE COMMAND POST HERE FOR A WHILE AFTER ALL."

BY ROBERT WILSON

WITH THE U.S. SIXTH ARMY GROUP, NOV 19-(AP)-RAPIDLY EXPLOITING A BREAKTHROUGH, MAJ.GEN. JEAN DE LATTRE DE TASSIGNY'S FIRST FRENCH ARMY TROOPS DROVE WITHIN THREE MILES OF HISTORIC BELFORT TONIGHT AND, IN A LIGHTNING FLANKING SWEEP, DROVE TO WITHIN TEN MILES OF MULHOUSE, ONE OF THE PRINCIPAL INDUSTRIAL CITIES IN ALSACE.

THE FRENCH FORCES FURTHER NORTH IN THE VOSGES ALSO OVERRAN THE GERMAN MEURTHE RIVER DEFENSE TOWN OF GERARDMER, LEAVING TO THE ENEMY ONLY ST.DIE ON HIS ORIGINALLY STRONG LINE IN THE VOSGES FOOT-HILLS.

AN EASTWARD DRIVE THROUGH THE BURGUNDY GAP PUT THE FRENCH TROOPS IN DANNEMAIRE, SURACE, AND SAPPOIS. AT DANNEMAIRE, THE FRENCH HAD SCORED A TEN MILE ADVANCE SINCE ENTERING DELLE AT THE SWISS BORDER YESTERDAY. THE FRENCH NOW ARE ONLY 20 MILES FROM THE RHINE IN THIS SECTOR.

IN THE DRIVE ON BELFORT, THEY OVERRAN FORT DU MONT VAUDOIS, BANVILLARS, BERMONT AND VOURVENNES.

WITH THE SIXTH ARMY GROUP FIRST ADD FIRST LEAD SIXTH ARMY GROUP (BY WILSON) XXX AND VOURVENNES.

WITH FRENCH TROOPS HAVING PLUNGED THROUGH THE BELFORT GAP AND THE AMERICAN SEVENTH ARMY DRIVE GOING WELL TO THE NORTH, MAJ.GEN. JACOB L.DEVERS' SIXTH ARMY GROUP PERMITTED CORRESPONDENTS TO WRITE FOR THE FIRST TIME THAT AN OFFENSIVE WAS IN PROGRESS AND SPOKE OF A "BREAKTHROUGH" IN REFERRING TO DE TASSIGNY'S CAMPAIGN.

LT.GEN. ALEXANDER M.PATCH'S SEVENTH ARMY SCORED GAINS OF A MILE TO A MILE AND ONE-HALF NORTH AND SOUTHEAST OF CAPTURED BLAMONT AND FREED 11 MORE TOWNS IN THIS AREA, INCLUDING REICHICOURT, GOGNEY, REPAIX, HARBOUEY, NONHIGNY, PARUX, MONTREUX, BREMENIL, BADONVILLER, AND NEUFMAISONS.

NEAR BREMENIL, THE YANKS CAUGHT AN ENEMY HORSE-DRAWN ARTILLERY COLUMN AND CAPTURED SIX 150 MM. GUNS AND MANY SUPPLY WAGONS. AT BADONVILLER THEY TOOK 200 PRISONERS. RESISTANCE WAS DESCRIBED AS MODERATE AND "BROKEN."

SOUTH OF BLAMONT, 40 MILES FROM STRASBOURG, THE AMERICANS SEIZED CORCIEUX, ONE OF THE VILLAGES BURNED IN THE GERMANS' SCORCHED EARTH CAMPAIGN.

THE AMERICANS MADE SMALL ADVANCES IN THE VICINITY OF BACCARAT AND MET STIFF OPPOSITION SOUTHEAST OF CAPTURED RAON-L'ETAPE. IN THE SOUTHERN SECTOR THE YANKS ADVANCED TO WITHIN A HALF-MILE OF ST.LEONARD AND SEIZED ARRENTES, SOUTH OF GERARDMER.

GERARDMER ITSELF, A WINTER SPORTS AND SUMMER RESORT TOWN OF 4,500 POPULATION, WAS TAKEN AFTER A THREE-MILE ADVANCE IN TWO DAYS. THREE-FOURTHS OF THE TOWN WAS DESTROYED IN THE FIGHTING.

THE INFANTRY WAS SUPPORTED ALL ALONG THE FRONT BY TWELFTH TACTICAL AIR FORCE FIGHTER-BOMBERS OPERATING FROM DAWN UNTIL DUSK. THUNDERBOLTS AND FIRST FRENCH AIR FORCE SPITFIRES JOINED IN STRAFING THE GERMANS SUNDAY, THE SECOND CONSECUTIVE DAY OF GOOD WEATHER, FROM LUNEVILLE TO BELFORT GAP.

THE PLANES POURED FIRE AND BOMBS DOWN ON ENEMY TRANSPORT MOVEMENTS, KEY BRIDGES INCLUDING AN IMPORTANT RAIL SPAN AT NEUENBERG, AND A LARGE NAZI RADIO STATION BETWEEN KARLSRUHE AND RASTATT. SIXTEEN LOCOMOTIVES AND 150 RAILCARS WERE DESTROYED OR DAMAGED.

IN A DRIVE TO THE SOUTHEAST OF BELFORT, THE FRENCH PUSHBD FOUR MILES BEYOND CAPTURED DELLE ON THE SWISS FRONTIER, CAPTURED COURTELEVANT AND FOUGHT ON EAST.

ON THE LEFT FLANK, THE FRENCH DROVE EIGHT MILES THROUGH BOIS DE LA THURE AND SEIZED CHENEBIER, CHACEY AND LUZE ON A FOUR-MILE FRONT ABOUT SIX MILES WEST OF BELFORT.

FORT DU MONT VAUDOIS, JUST BEYOND HERICOURT, CAUGHT IT TODAY FROM THE AIR, ARTILLERY AND INFANTRY.

IT WAS POSSIBLE TO WATCH THE ASSAULT FROM AN OBSERVATION POINT FOR AN AMERICAN ARTILLERY UNIT ON WHICH WAS PERCHED LT. ROBERT BILLINGSLEY, PURCELL, OKLA., CPL. ROY BERNZOTT, 1624 KELLYWOOD, CINCINNATI, OHIO, AND CPL. DONALD KOPP, AUBURN, ILL.

THROUGH FIELD GLASSES, THE BARRELS OF GERMAN GUNS COULD BE SEEN POKING OUT FROM THE HUGE STONE AND CONCRETE FORT ATOP A 1,200-FOOT HILL, BUT THERE WAS NO SHOW OF LIFE.

AT DAWN, THE BIG GUNS BACK IN THE HILLS ERUPTED AND SHELLS WHISTLED OVERHEAD, CRASHING INSIDE THE FORT.

A FEW HOURS LATER THE PLANES CAME OVER, CASCADING BOMBS INTO THE BASTION. THEN FROM THE WOODS ON THE SLOPES THE INFANTRY MOVED OUT AND THE ARTILLERY LIFTED, SENDING ITS SHELLS FARTHER UP THE GAP WHERE BELFORT LIES HIDDEN IN THE HAZE.

METZ, NOV 19-(AP)-A FEW MILES BEHIND METZ THIS MORNING, SCRUBBED FRENCH FAMILIES DRESSED IN THEIR SUNDAY BEST THRONGED THE STREETS ON THE WAY TO CHURCH WHILE BELLS CHIMED CHEERFULLY AND EVEN AN OCCASIONAL YANK DOUGHBOY JOINED THE WORSHIP-BOUND CROWDS.

BUT INSIDE METZ WHERE THE 9TH DIVISION'S DOUBOYS DROVE ACROSS THE HAFEN CANAL AND THEN ROWED ACROSS THE MOSELLE RIVER UNDER EVERY KIND OF FIRE THE GERMAN DEFENDERS COULD THROW AT THE ASSAULT BOATS, THERE WAS NO SUNDAY PEACE OR CALM.

BRAVE BOYS WITH DIRTY FACES -- THEY WORKED THEIR WAY RECKLESSLY DOWN TO THE RIVER'S EDGE. WITH BAYONETS FIXED AND THEIR BODIES BENT FORWARD AS IF THEY WERE BUCKING A WINDSTORM, THEY WENT INTO THE CHOKING SHELL-SMOKE AND THE BLACK CLOUDS CAUSED BY MORTAR FIRE AND DASHED THROUGH MACHINE GUN AND SNIPER FIRE.

INSTEAD OF THE SOUND OF CHURCH BELLS, THE AIR WAS RENT ON ALL SIDES WITH CONSTANT EXPLOSIONS OF EVERY IMAGINABLE TYPE. THE CLEAR SUNDAY AIR WAS CLOUDED WITH COLUMNS OF SMOKE, MIST AND DEBRIS BLOSSOMING SKYWARD AND ROLLING DOWNWIND.

MEN PRAYED BEFORE THEY CROSSED THE MOSELLE -- SOME WITH CHAPLAINS' LEADERSHIP AND OTHERS BY THEMSELVES--BUT THE ONLY FORMS I SAW KNEELING IN THE TRADITIONAL POSTURE OF PRAYER WERE TWO DEAD DOUGHBOYS AND THEY HAD FALLEN WHILE THEY CROUCHED TO GET A BETTER AIM.

THE LITTLE VILLAGES BEHIND THE LINES HAD BEEN FILLED WITH THE SMELL OF FLOWERS BEING CARRIED TO CHURCH BUT THE NORTHWESTERN SECTOR OF METZ WAS FILLED ONLY WITH THE SMELLS OF EXPLODING POWDER AND DEAD BODIES.

NOV 20 1944

NEWSCMERS TO THE ATTACK UNTIL A FEW SHORT DAYS AGO, THE 95TH'S SOLDIERS SAW AND HEARD AND SMELLED ALL THIS BUT NOW THEY NO LONGER ARE ROOKIES. DURING THE PAST FOUR DAYS, THEY CAPTURED MORE THAN A DOZEN FAMED METZ FORTRESSES, SOME 32 TOWNS AND NOW THEY ARE WELL WITHIN THE CITY.

THEY HAD CROSSED A CANAL AND CLEARED THE LITTLE METROPOLITAN ISLAN WHERE THE GERMANS WERE BILLETED.

NOW THEY HAD ONE MORE RIVER TO CROSS--THE SPEEDY, MUDDY MOSELLE, WHICH CUTS THROUGH THE HISTORIC CITY--AND THEY DID NOT HESITATE.

IN THE BATTERED COMMAND POST OF THE 377TH REGIMENT'S SECOND BATTALION, CAPT. JOHN E. SHAFER, OF MILWAUKEE, NODDED TO PFC CHESTER NAJDA, OF THE BRONX, NEW YORK CITY, AN ARTILLERY LIAISON SOLDIER, AS THE BIG GUNS UNLEASHED A TEN-MINUTE BLASTING PREPARATION.

MAJ. ALBERT L. SEBESTA, MARLIN, TEX., BATTALION COMMANDER, WAS DOWN AT THE RIVER'S EDGE. IT WAS 12 O'CLOCK NOON. THE GUNS HAD QUIETED BUT SMOKE BLOSSOMED ON THE OPPOSITE SHORE MORE THAN A QUARTER-MILE AWAY WHEN LT. THOMAS N. BOWMAN, OF HARRISONBURG, VA., LED COMPANY E IN THE FIRST WAVE. THERE WERE 12 BOATS IN THAT WAVE, EACH WITH THREE ENGINEERS WORKING THE OARS AND EACH CARRYING A DOZEN DOUGHBOYS READY TO SPRING ASHORE AND START SHOOTING.

BEYOND MIDSTREAM, THE MURKY, BOILING RIVER BEGAN TO BE POLKA-DOTTED WITH SPLASHES AND EDDIES AROUND THE BOATS AS THE GUNNERS OPENED UP ON THE OPPOSITE SHORE.

PFC. JOSEPH L. CISCON, A CHICAGO BOY, GOT A BULLET-HOLE THROUGH HIS SHIRT AND COMBAT JACKET. IT SPLINTERED THE HAND-GRIP ON THE RIFLE SLUNG OVER HIS SHOULDER BUT CISCON WAS UNINJURED. HIS JOB WAS TO GET THE DOUGHBOYS TO THE OTHER SIDE. HE KEPT ROWING.

CORP. VICTOR LEGER, OF LEOMINSTER, MASS., HEARD THE BULLETS THUD AND HEARD HIS ENGINEER BUDDIES GROAN. FOUR WERE HIT IN HIS BOAT BUT HE KEPT ROWING. SO DID PVT. JOSEPH C. PATERNO, OF CLEVELAND, OHIO. IN ANOTHER BOAT, PFC. NICK SKARICH, OF CHISHOLM, MINN., AND PVT. MERVIN EBERT, OF SUTTON, NEB., HAD ONE MAN KILLED AND TWO WOUNDED AND THEY ALSO HAD TO LEAVE THEIR RIFLES SLUNG USELESSLY OVER THEIR SHOULDERS AND KEEP ROWING. THEY WERE COMBAT ENGINEERS.

B63

HERE ARE SOME OTHERS WHO NEVER FALTERED EVEN AS HEAVY MACHINE GUN FIRE INCREASED AT THE LANDING POINT:

PFC. FLORIAN POLEWSKI, OF MILWAUKEE; PFC. ROBERT HEINTZ, OF MT. PLEASANT, MICH., SGT. JAMES S. NORMAN, OF KANSAS CITY, MO., PFC. HENRY D. MCCARTHY, OF HYDE PARK, MASS., PFC. LAURIANO ROMERO, SANTA FE, NEW MEX., SGT. GUNNAR D. HOLMES, RACINE, WIS., PVT. ROBERT ETNYRE, OREGON, ILL., PFC. RUSSELL LEFEVRE, OF MILWAUKEE, PVT. JOHN JONES, WELLINGTON, KANS., AND PVT. FRANK DEMING, OF MOBILE, ALA.

THEY KEPT ROWING.

THEY ARE MEN OF COMPANY A, 320TH ENGINEERS, COMMANDED BY CAPT. WALTER KOPPELMAN, OF BALTIMORE, AND THEY NOT ONLY TOOK THE FIRST WAVE ACROSS, THEY TOOK THE SECOND AND THIRD AND SO ON.

3o.24 — 20519

AFTER LT. BOWMAN AND INFANTRY COMPANY E WENT ACROSS, NEXT WENT COMPANY F COMMANDED BY LT. BOYLE FARMER, OF FLORENCE, S.C., THEN COMPANY G COMMANDED BY LT. HUGHIT J. BOULET, CROWLEY,LA.

THE FIRST WAVE WAS UNDER HEAVY FIRE FROM MACHINEGUNS, PLUS ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS WHICH THE DEFENDERS BENT EARTHWARD UNTIL THEY COULD SWEEP THE WATER AND RIVERBANK. PINNED DOWN, THEY SENT WORD BACK ACROSS TO CALL IN THE ARTILLERY AND MORTAR MEN. SOON THE 105S BEGAN TO BOOM AT GERMAN POSITIONS.

AT THE SAME TIME, COMPANY H GOT WORD WHERE THE MACHINE GUN POSITIONS WERE LOCATED. THE COMMANDER, CAPT. MAURICE J. REYNOLDS, OF LINCOLN, NEB., ASSIGNED IT TO COVER THE CROSSINGS WITH MORTARS AND THEY BEGAN TO SEND SHELLS WHIRRING AND WHINING ACROSS THE RIVER. NEW EXPLOSIONS BLOOMED OUT OF THE MELEE ON THE OPPOSITE SHORE. NOT TOO LONG AFTERWARD, WORD CAME BACK TO "CALL OFF THE ARTILLERY. WE GOT THOSE POSITIONS NOW."

SOON THE ASSAULT BOATS WERE RETURNING AND BRINGING BACK SCORES OF GERMAN RISONERS. BUT THEY DID N

GERMAN PRISONERS. BUT THEY DID NOT SURRENDER UNTIL THEY WERE EITHER OUT OF AMMUNITION OR THEIR CASE WAS OTHERWISE HOPELESS. AS A WELL-HIDDEN SNIPER CUT A BRANCH OFF A NEARBY TREE WITH A BULLET, LT. ROBERT C. SMITH, OF DES MOINES, IOWA., A PLATOON LEADER, SAID "WHY DON'T THEY GIVE UP? WHAT CAN HE HOPE TO GAIN? SOONER OR LATER WE ARE GOING TO GET HIM."

BUT EVEN AS WE DUCKED ACROSS A STREET, TRYING TO GET A BETTER VIEW OF THE SMOKY, EXPLODING INFERNO ACROSS THE RIVER, ANOTHER BURST FROM THE SNIPER'S MACHINE GUN SCATTERED DOWN THE STREET IN FRONT OF US. IT DID NOT SEEM LIKE SUNDAY AFTERNOON IN METZ.

WURSELEN, GERMANY, NOV. 18-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THIS GERMAN COAL MINING TOWN--SHARED BY THE AMERICANS AND GERMANS FOR THE PAST MONTH WHILE THE U.S.NINTH ARMY BUILT UP FOR ITS ATTACK TOWARD THE RHINE--WAS 100 PER-CENT AMERICAN TODAY.

TO SMUDGY-FACED DOUGHBOYS PRESSING EVER EASTWARD IT QUICKLY BECAME JUST ANOTHER MILESTONE ON THE ROAD TO VICTORY.

TAKING A BRIEF LOOK AT THE WRECKAGE LEFT BY WEEKS OF SHELLING AS THE DOUGHBOYS IN ONE HALF OF THE TOWN AND THE GERMANS IN THE OTHER MADE LIFE MISERABLE FOR EACH OTHER, THE GI'S SLUNG THEIR RIFLES TO THEIR SHOULDERS AND PLODDED ON ALONG MUDDY ROADS UNDER THE PROTECTIVE COVER OF HUNDREDS OF FIGHTER BOMBERS AND BOMBERS KNOCKING OUT THE ENEMY DEFENSES AHEAD.

THERE IS NOT A WINDOW LEFT IN THE WHOLE TOWN OF WURSELEN, MOST HOUSES WERE REDUCED TO HEAPS OF BRICK. DEAD HORSES, SMASHED GERMAN GUNS AND TWO BURNED-OUT TANKS LITTERED THE STREETS.

LT.E.J.KERRIGAN, MANAGING EDITOR OF THE ABERDEEN, S.D., AMERICAN NEWS, SAID THE GERMANS LEFT THEIR HALF OF THE TOWN FULL OF MINES AND BOOBY TRAPS.

"IT'S BEST NOT TO SPEAK TO ANYBODY," SAID LT.ROBERT KLINE, MOUNT PLEASANT, MICH. "YOU CAN HARDLY OPEN YOUR MOUTH WITHOUT SOMETHING GOING OFF."

CAPT.GERALD FORD, ENGLEWOOD, N.J., MILITARY GOVERNMENT OFFICER TAKING CHARGE OF 1,000 OF THE NORMAL POPULATION OF 15,000 REMAINING IN TOWN, REMARKED THAT "I NEED A MAYOR."

THERE BEING NO OTHER CANDIDATES IN THE IMMEDIATE VICINITY, HE PROMPTLY APPOINTED WAR CORRESPONDENT ALTON SMALLEY OF ST.PAUL, MINN., "MAYOR FOR THE FIRST HOUR."

"M-M-M, I THINK WE NEED A LITTLE REHABILITATION HERE," SAID SMALLEY AFTER LOOKING OVER THE DEBRIS.

NEAR WURSELEN, WHICH IS JUST NORTHEAST OF AACHEN, CROUCHING DOUGHBOYS INCHED CAUTIOUSLY FORWARD TO THE CRACK OF GERMAN RIFLES AND THE BANG OF MORTARS.

AMONG THEM WERE PVT.WILLIAM L.BAKER, ROLLINS, MONT., PFC GENE CAHOON, 719 MORGAN ST., CAMDEN, N.J., AND PFC BROCKWAY (NO INITIALS GIVEN), FRANKFORT, N.Y.

"I CAN THINK OF BETTER JOBS THAN THIS," SAID BROCKWAY.

PARIS, NOV 19-(AP)-A SERIES OF ARRESTS BY FRENCH POLICE, PUNCTUATED BY A GUN BATTLE OUTSIDE A SUBURBAN PARIS TAVERN, DISCLOSED TODAY THAT A GERMAN FAKE "UNDERGROUND" RADIO STATION OPERATED FOR THE GERMANS IN FRANCE DURING THE OCCUPATION, FOR MONTHS RECEIVED SIGNALS FROM LONDON AND USED THEM TO COMBAT ALLIED PARACHUTISTS.

THE POLICE, PURSUING THE TRAIL OF THE NOTORIOUS QUISLING FRENCH GESTAPO HEADED BY HENRI LAFONT AND PIERRE BONY, SWOOPED DOWN ON A COIGNIERES ROADHOUSE AND ADDED ANOTHER HALF-DOZEN PRISONERS TO THE 50-ODD ALREADY ROUNDED UP IN THE CASE.

AMONG THOSE ARRESTED WERE TWO OF THE GANG'S SUPPOSED TRIGGERMEN -- ONE OF WHOM SPECIALIZED IN RAZORING OFF THE VICTIMS' HEADS AND FINGERTIPS TO PREVENT IDENTIFICATION. THEIR MISTRESSES, ALSO CAUGHT, WERE CLUTCHING THE UNSPENT HALF OF A $20,000 BANKROLL IN CRISP NEW FRANC NOTES.

ANOTHER OF THE PRISONERS WAS IDENTIFIED AS GEORGES LE DANSEURS, ACCUSED OF BEING ONE OF THE LEADING QUISLINGS OF FRANCE'S UNDERGROUND RADIO.

OFFICERS SAID LE DANSEURS STARTED OUT AS A LOYAL RESISTANCE WORKER IN CLANDESTINE STATIONS AT CLERMONT-FERRAND AND RENNES, BUT, AFTER BEING ARRESTED BY THE GESTAPO, IN RETURN FOR HIS FREEDOM HE SET UP A BOGUS "RESISTANCE" STATION WHICH, LIKE THE GENUINE ONES, KEPT IN CONSTANT CONTACT WITH ALLIED TRANSMITTERS IN LONDON.

IN THIS WAY, IT IS CHARGED, THE GESTAPO INTERCEPTED SIGNALS OF PARACHUTE LANDINGS OF ALLIED SOLDIERS FOR LIASON

WITH THE F.F.I. AND SENT OUT FORCES TO COMBAT THEM.

LE DANSEURS, THE POLICE STATED, DISGUISED HIMSELF AS A BRITISH OFFICER FOR THIS WORK AND ON ONE OCCASION WHEN HE ENCOUNTERED REAL BRITISH OFFICERS HE WAS SHOT IN THE STOMACH.

THE 32ND DIVISION COMMANDER, MAJ.GEN.WILLIAM H.GILL, SAID THE JAPANESE WERE FARLY WELL POCKETED AROUND LIMON VILLAGE, "BUT THE ONLY WAY NOW TO REDUCE THE STRONGPOINT IS FOR THE INFANTRY TO GET IN AT CLOSE QUARTERS WITH GRENADES, BAYONETS AND AUTOMATIC WEAPONS AND TO ROOT THEM OUT. THAT'S WHAT WE MEAN TO DO."

GENERAL GILL EXPLAINED THE OVERWHELMING SUPERIORITY OF THE AMERICAN ARTILLERY CANNOT BE BROUGHT INTO FULL PLAY AT LIMON BECAUSE THE OPPOSING FORCES ARE SO CLOSE TOGETHER.

WHILE THE 32ND WAS CRAWLING ALONG SLIPPERY HILLSIDES TOWARD LIMON THIS AFTERNOON, DOUGLAS TRANSPORTS CIRCLED THROUGH RAIN CLOUDS ABOVE, SEEKING OPENINGS THROUGH WHICH TO DROP SUPPLIES TO 24TH DIVISION UNITS WHICH FORM THE SOUTHERN CLAMPS OF A TRAP WHICH THE JAPANESE ARE DESPERATELY ATTEMPTING TO BREAK.

FIFTH AIRFORCE THUNDERBOLTS DRONED HIGH ABOVE ON THE PROWL FOR POSSIBLE ENEMY AIR ATTACKS, BUT IT WAS THE INFANTRY WHO CARRIED THE BALL ON THIS ROUGH AND MUDDY BATTLEFIELD.

LIMON MAY BE THE TOUGHEST BUT PROBABLY NOT THE LAST ENEMY RIDGE POSITION WHICH MUST BE CLEARED BEFORE THE 32ND DIVISION CAN GET INTO FULL STRIDE FOR A DRIVE DOWN THE ORMOC VALEY, GENERAL GILL SAID. THERE ARE MORE HILL SPURS, HE ADDED, AND IF THE JAPANESE DEFEND THEM AS STUBBORNLY AS THEY HAVE LIMON, IT MAY TAKE SEVERAL WEEKS OF TOUGH FIGHTING AND THAT WILL MEAN LOSSES.

MAJ. GEN. VERNE D.MUDGE, DIVISION COMMANDER, SAID HOWEVER, THERE STILL WAS NO INDICATION OF ANY MASS ATTEMPT BY THE JAPANESE TO BREAK OUT OF THE ORMOC COASTAL POCKET.

THE FIRST JAPANESE COUNTERATTACK AGAINST THE CAVALRYMEN CAME FROM A SMALL UNIT ATOP A HILL FLANKING THE VALLEY ROAD. THE NIPPONESE WERE STOPPED COLD BUT LATER MADE ANOTHER DASH TOWARD THE AMERICAN LINES WHERE MORE WERE KILLED.

BRIG.GEN.WILLIAM C.CHASE SAID THE JAPANESE APPARENTLY WERE FLUSHED TOWARD THE AMERICAN LINES BY YANK ARTILLERY AND MORTAR FIRE.

AMERICAN ARTILLERY CONTINUED TO PLAY A VITAL ROLE AGAINST STUBBORNLY DEFENDED ENEMY POSITIONS WHICH ARE HONEYCOMBED WITH PILLBOXES. ABOUT 100 DEAD JAPANESE WERE COUNTED IN AN AREA PULVERIZED BY AN OVERNIGHT ARTILLERY SHELLING. THE PILLBOXES WERE BLASTED TO BITS.

ALLIES RACE INTO RHINELAND, SAAR BASIN; ALL ORGANIZED RESISTANCE ENDS IN METZ

NOV 21 1944

FRENCH FORCES RIP INTO BELFORT, POUR THROUGH GAP

BEAUMEAR

Patton's Third Army Strikes Two Miles Into Reich at Merzig.

NAZIS REEL BACK

U. S. First Overruns Three Towns in Powerful Drive Toward Duren.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Nov. 20.—(AP) Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's Allied armies pushed into both the Rhineland and the Saar basin today in sweeping advances which turned the German southern flank and cracked the enemy line from Luxembourg to Switzerland.

NIGHT

Virtually all organized resistance in the once-powerful citadel of Metz came to a halt.

Armored units of the First French army continued to pour through Belfort gap, striking into the city of Belfort itself and driving deeper into the flatlands along the River Rhine, where they had reached the German border last night at the end of a two-day 30-mile thrust near the Swiss frontier.

Patton Drives Into Reich

Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's U. S. Third army, which already was stabbing into Germany at several points, sent a new armored column smashing across the border east of Thionville, and at last reports it was two miles inside Germany and the same distance from the Saar river at Merzig.

The Third army surged ahead three to six miles at numerous places along its whole front, which now is seven miles beyond Metz as a result of the link-up of the two forces that swung around the city from either side.

The only resistance left inside Metz—and that was spotty—was in the extreme northern and southern tips of the city. Patton's Doughboys were wiping out the last defenders in both sections.

Germans Fall Back

With their southern flank unhinged from the Swiss frontier, and their Vosges mountain line threatened from the rear, the Germans were falling back everywhere before the French First army and the American Seventh and Third armies.

To the north the enemy was fighting desperately to hold the Roer river line ahead of the Allies' Aachen wedge.

The closely coordinated drive of the American First and Ninth armies and the British Second continued, with all three hammering their way deper into the Reich, but against the toughest of the enemy's favorite defenses — highly mobile troops backed by strong fixed positions.

The First army, fighting on the right side of Aachen wedge, slugged its way forward as much as two miles in the rain, clearing Hastenrath, northwest of Stolberg, and capturing Heistern and Wenau in a drive through the northern edge of Hurtgen forest to within six miles of Duren.

German tanks which supported a counter-attack near Hastenrath were repulsed.

Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' troops were fighting in the southern sector at Eschweiler and in the Propspierwald forest to the southwest, where they made small gains.

To the north the American Ninth and British Second armies pushed on east of captured Geilenkirchen despite vicious counter-attacks.

In advances ranging from a few hundred yards to a mile the Ninth army reached Gereonsweiler, five miles east of Geilenkirchen; Friealdhoven, two miles northeast; Setterich and Schlieden, a mile and a half east of Siersdorf; and were two and a half miles from the Roer at their closest approach.

The Ninth army knocked out 17 more German tanks yesterday, bringing the Germans' total tank losses to 45 in four days to only a part of the Ninth army.

Drive Past Geilenkirchen

The British, meanwhile, reached a point 3,000 yards north of Geilenkirchen and, together with American units which joined them in capturing that city, turned back several counterattacks to the east.

The Germans gained some ground in the Puffendorf area, three and a half miles west of the Roer, but quickly were driven back.

Farther north Lt. Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey's troops on the Netherlands front continued their advance along the Meijel-Helden road against only rear-guard opposition and were within approximately a mile of Venlo. North of Venlo they drew up to the Helena canal and advanced approximately half a mile along the Eindhoven-Venlo railroad to the outskirts of Amerika.

Town after town fell to the infantry and armor of the Third army, as the Americans expanded their holdings inside the Reich on their left flank and drove nearer to the frontier on the right, where the Germans continued to pull back to the double defenses of the Siegfried Line and Saar river. Weather conditions hampered air operations and permitted the German withdrawal to proceed with more safety.

In the 12th corps area southeast of Metz the 80th division reached Guessling, 20 miles from Saarbrucken, and was within two miles of Faulquemont, three miles northwest of Guessling.

The 35th division approached Hellimer, ten miles from the German border at Sarreguembrucken, after a thrust of six miles had captured Lelling, 18 miles from Saarbrucken. This force also pushed four miles north of the Benestroff railway junction and entered Francaltroff.

The 26th division swept through Dieuze and entered Guinzeling, seven miles to the northeast.

French Reach Rhine

While Gen. Jean De Lattre De Tassigny's French spread out along the banks of the Rhine, the American Seventh army on their left flank probed deeper into the Vosges passes and into the flatter country to the north.

Pushing into Bonhomme pass from captured Blamont, Lt. Gen. Alexander Patch's troops overran Foulcrey, Fremonville and Petitmont in a five-mile advance. They also gained several miles east of La Housene. It was disclosed that the 44th Division is now fighting as part of the Seventh army.

(A front dispatch late tonight said the Seventh army had taken more than 20 towns and villages as well as more than 3,000 prisoners today.)

From prisoners it was learned that Maj. Gen. Oschmann, who commanded the German 338th infantry division, had been killed by artillery fire on Nov. 14, the opening day of the Belfort offensive.

Most of the day's air support came from fighters of the Eighth air force, 700 of which escorted heavy bombers to Gelsenkirchen and Munster and then swooped down to strafe targets in the Bonn, Coblenz and Wiesbaden areas.

The Ninth air force flew only 80 fighter-bomber sorties because of the unfavorable weather, but destroyed or damaged six buildings at Aldenhoven and shot up transport in the Merzig, Saarlauten and Sarreguemines areas.

U.S. THIRD ARMY PLUNGES 2 MILES INTO SAAR BASIN AFTER OVERRUNNING METZ

Breakthrough In South Called Greatest Since Normandy—Germans Also Weaken In North

As British And Americans Gain

London, Nov. 20 (AP)—The United States Third Army plunged two miles into Germany's rich Saar industrial basin in a new invasion of the Reich today, while the French, in the greatest breakthrough since Normandy, stormed in force to the Rhine at three places near the Swiss frontier.

The great fortress of Metz had been overrun, and far to the south, outflanked Belfort—like Metz a French fortress immune to capture for centuries—rocked under the attack of French colonial zouaves fighting inside the city.

Once more the French and Germans were trading shots across the Rhine for the first time since early in the war.

The German lines bent inside the Reich and broke in France under the shock of six assaulting Allied armies.

Mulhouse Assault Reported

The Paris radio said a French armored division, which smashed 20 miles in 24 hours to the Rhine, was assaulting the French city of Mulhouse in a rampage up the Rhineland valley against the exposed southern flank of the German armies.

Reports from Switzerland said the French were throwing a bridge across the Rhine for the imminent new invasion of Germany, and another unconfirmed story from the frontier said American troops had occupied Mulhouse.

Violent artillery fire could be heard in Basel, Switzerland, and German troops and long lines of civilians could be seen fleeing toward the Rhine.

Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's Tenth Armored Division tanks rumbled two miles into the Saar Basin—vital source of steel and coal for the German war machine—and were within two miles of the German town of Merzig, on the Saar river.

Gaining Along Moselle

Northwest of these forces, mechanized cavalry prowled five miles into Germany up the Moselle river valley, ancient gateway to the Rhineland, moving at least a mile beyond Nenning.

On the right other units reached Kesselingen, four miles deep into Germany and three miles west of a bend of the Saar river.

East of Metz, armor and infantry were forging an assault ring along a 25-mile front from 9 to 12 miles west and south of the Saar frontier.

Striking northeast of Metz, the 90th Infantry Division in a mile advance approached Roupeldange, ten miles from the border and nearly 20 miles southwest of where Patton's tanks broke into the basin.

Moves To Lelling

To the southeast, the 35th Division moved two miles to Lelling, nine miles from the border, without meeting resistance, but six miles farther southeast the same division struck strong rear guards protecting the withdrawal to the Siegfried Line near Hellimer, 11 miles from the basin's edge and 18 miles from the city of Saarbrucken.

Thirty-two miles southeast of Metz the 26th Infantry Division captured the enemy base of Dieuze, other elements drove into the railway junction of Benestroff, six miles north, and into Guinzeling, seven miles northeast.

The resistance in Metz collapsed so swiftly that Maj. Gen. Anton Dunckern, SS (Elite Guard) commander, was captured in his headquarters without a shot by eight Americans.

Flank At Switzerland

The United States Seventh and the French First armies were on the march northward all along an 80-mile front that had its right flank on the Swiss frontier. At least two towns at the entrance to two Vosges mountain passes were in their hands, and the Germans were pulling back toward the Rhine with their lines of retreat and their bridges across the stream under aerial attack.

The German stand also appeared to be approaching the breaking point in the north, where the British Second and the United States First and Ninth armies pushed ahead one to two miles deeper into Germany. The First Army at one point was 28 miles from Cologne.

[A Stockholm dispatch quoting a report from Berlin said the Americans east of Aachen were attacking with 200,000 troops and 1,000 tanks and had beaten halfway through the Siegfried Line.]

Ninth Nears Julich

Battering against strong German positions in a driving rain, the United States Ninth Army fought to within four and a half miles of Julich, a stronghold on the Roer river—last major natural barrier before Cologne and the Rhine, 25 miles farther east.

Ten miles south, the Roer city of Duren was but six miles east of First Army vanguards, and encirclement threatened near-by embattled Eschweiler, the most important city before Cologne, 30 miles to the east.

The British Second Army on the northern flank, in gains of up to two miles beyond captured Geilenkirchen, fought in the major fortifications of the Siegfried Line and captured Tripsrath.

The Germans appeared to be pulling out of positions west of the Maas, in eastern Holland, for British troops driving to within three and a half miles of Venlo found the path deserted. Venlo is the principal Maas-river town blocking the way into Germany.

The French, fighting on the soil where they made their final stand in 1940, had swung around Belfort on the southeast, following the Swiss border.

Bursting into the gap behind Belfort, they struck to the Rhine at the German border between the Swiss frontier and Mulhouse.

The first vanguards arrived at the Rhine last night. They could see across the river the southern sector of the Siegfried Line, and were right back where they were in the first autumn of the war.

Just beyond the river lies the Black Forest, and thus they face three obstacles in any penetration of Germany.

Their immediate threat was to the German 19th Army below the Rhine in the Vosges mountains.

Defenses Cracked

Meanwhile, French Zouaves from Africa fought into Belfort after overcoming German resistance at Fort Le Sultert and the fortified village of Essert, on the city's western approaches.

The full-force onslaught to the north by the United States Seventh Army and other French forces was cracking German defenses, and only smoldering St. Die, 45 miles north of Belfort, remained to the Germans of what once was the strong Meurthe River Line in the Vosges.

[The British radio said St. Die had fallen.]

YANKS ENTER SAAR IN ANOTHER INVASION

FRYE

All Resistance in Metz Is Believed Ended—Allies Sweep Away Germans' South Anchor in France.

London, Nov. 20 (A. P.).—The Swiss radio declared tonight that French troops were seen throwing a bridge across the Rhine and preparing to carry the war across Germany's Black Forest frontier.

The entire southern anchor of the German line in France was swept away as the French announced that their armor and infantry had broken through the historic war path of the Burgundy Gap, entered the guardian fortress of Belfort, and stabbed straight on to the Rhine.

The Paris radio declared that the French forces, sweeping on in the greatest breakthrough since Normandy, had battered their way as far as Mulhouse, a city of 96,000, twenty-two miles northeast of Belfort and eight miles from the Rhine. The attempted crossing of the Rhine was southeast of Mulhouse, the Swiss radio said, where the river is comparatively narrow but guarded by steep hills studded with formidable forts and some of the strongest works of the Siegfried Line.

The Rhine was reached by the First French Armored Division and FFI Infantry.

Yanks Smash Into Saar.

Meanwhile tonight a front-line dispatch announced that armored elements of the Third United States Army rumbled two miles into the Saar in the Merzig area, in a new invasion of Germany today, and that the infantry battling in Metz overran three-fourths of the city. A few minutes later a Reuters dispatch from the front said that all organized resistance in Metz had ended.

30. 24— 20527

Resistance in the old Roman fortress city collapsed rapidly as the Americans captured the SS commander, Major-Gen. Anton Duckern in his city headquarters.

On the other hand, the Germans were trying desperately to plug the holes being punched in their defenses by six Allied armies striking along every one of the famous invasion paths into Germany—along the entire 400-mile western front, from Switzerland to Holland.

This thrust, along the western fringe of the Saar Valley and just east of the Moselle, assumed the proportions of a drive up the famous Moselle gate toward Trier and Coblenz on the Rhine, eighty miles to the northeast.

On the Cologne Plain three Allied armies fighting on Gen. Eisenhower's most concentrated front had bulged approximately five miles northeast of Aachen since the start of their offensive through the Germans' most formidable and determined defense.

Losing village after village, the German stand at last was showing signs of a crackup in spots as the British Second and American Ninth and First armies threw the armored, artillery, infantry and aerial assaults which might break through to Cologne on the Rhine, twenty-six miles away, Dusseldorf and the Ruhr Valley to the northeast.

Further Nazi Retreat Seen.

Here the American Ninth Army of Lieut.-Gen. William Simpson forged ahead for gains of a mile or more and field dispatches said aerial reconnaissance disclosed signs of a German withdrawal toward Cologne and the Ruhr.

There was a "decided movement of motor transport eastward" from the Duren and Julich areas, and many anti-aircraft positions had been abandoned, it was said.

In Holland the British, driving to the Maas at Kessel, six and a half miles below Venlo, were feeling out Nazi defenses two and a half miles from the German border and twenty-nine miles from Dusseldorf.

In the southern sectors of the front, the French, fighting back across the Alsace territory they surrendered in the 1940 armistice, and the Third Army in its whirlwind offensive had thrown the Germans into reverses. Frontline dispatches indicated that a definite German retreat was on to the Rhine and the Saar, the boundaries of the Reich.

The First French Army reached the Rhine after racing through the Belfort Gap in an outflanking maneuver which seized all or most of the high ground on its south side.

There was no immediate report as to where the French were now standing watch on the Rhine, but apparently it was near Mulhouse. A previous Supreme Headquarters announcement said they had reached Seppois, sixteen miles southeast of Belfort and eighteen and a half miles from the Rhine. Front line reports told of a thrust seven miles farther north and the capture of Dannemarie, twelve miles east of Belfort and ten miles from the Alsatian city of Mulhouse. Belfort was almost as badly ringed as Metz.

Gen. De Tassigny's announcement said enemy resistance was overcome at Fort Le Sultert and at the village of Essert, two miles west of Belfort. Fort Du Mont Vaudois, four miles southwest, also had fallen. Medium bombers went for the Neuenberg Bridge, nine miles northeast of Mulhouse on the line of enemy flight.

The French rush had carried at least thirty-five miles in a week in the swiftest drive since the St. Lo breakthrough last July.

North of Belfort the Allies had taken Gerardmer, Raon-l'Etape, Badonviller and Blamont, leaving only scorched St. Die and Fraize blocking the way to six main passes through the Vosges. The Germans said the Americans had fought into St. Die. The Seventh Army had captured at least thirty-five towns in the drive into these gaps.

American troops, capturing Rechicouret, Harbouey, Badonviller and eight other towns southeast of Nancy, moved to within eleven miles of Sarrebourg and into the upper Saar valley.

Third Army Advances.

The Third Army, closing around Metz at Vallieres and Vaudreville, also entered the northern outskirts of Dieuze, and reached Grostenquin, eleven miles farther north and twenty-one miles from Saarbrucken, chief industrial city of the Saar. Virming, five miles east of Morhange, was taken in this advance. The Third Army also was within twenty miles of Saarbrucken on the northwest in the vicinity of Bouzonville.

Across the German border northeast of the Saar, Lieut. George S. Patton's men reached Kesslingen and a point a mile beyond Nennig in a drive up the east side of the Moselle frontier of Luxembourg which gave them a grip on the five-mile square of Germany

In the battle area east and northeast of Aachen, American and British troops, exerting terrific pressure on a constructed fifteen-mile-wide front, scored advances in the Cologne Plain. Behind a barrage of bombs and shells, troops of the American Ninth and British Second armies pushed a mile northeast and two miles north of fallen Geilenkirchen.

Patrols in Eschweiler.

Just to the south the American First Army had sent patrols into the southern outskirts of Eschweiler, seven miles northeast of Aachen, and captured the German towns of Hamich and Hastenrath. They also advanced beyond Hamich, twenty-six miles from the ruins of Cologne, and took a ridge which the Germans had used to observe American movements.

The drive of the three Allied armies was aimed at the great Rhineland industrial cities of Dusseldorf and Cologne.

The Scandinavian Telegraph Bureau, a Nazi-controlled agency, said that 200,000 American soldiers supported by 1,000 tanks have beaten half way through the Siegfried Line east of Aachen.

With capture of Geilenkirchen, the British-American forces pierced the first formidable defenses of the Siegfried Line in that northern sector, then seized Tipsrath to the north. This advanced the Allies to within twenty-nine miles of Dusseldorf and only about eighteen miles from Gladbach, industrial center in the Rhineland.

Immediately below this sector units of the American Ninth Army plowed farther into Germany, sending armored formations as far forward as the villages of Durboslar, Schleiden, Kinzweiler, St. Joris and Freialdenhoven.

These gains placed the Americans only four and a half miles from Julich, a key communications center twenty-three miles west of Cologne and within three and a half miles of the Roer River.

New York, Nov. 20 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters announced officially tonight that "the fortress of Belfort has fallen," the British radio reported in a broadcast.

Allied Ships Soon Will Use Antwerp

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Paris, Nov. 20 (AP)—The great Belgian port of Antwerp will be open soon with ample facilities to supply the Allied offensive, Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay said today.

Although in Allied hands for two months, its use has been denied by German pockets along the Schelde estuary, now eliminated, and by mines in the river and around its mouth.

General Eisenhower's naval commander said the naval forces were using all their resources in clearing the Schelde and that the result soon would be seen.

"The following figures give some indication of the magnitude of the task," Sir Bertram said. "The channel which has to be swept is 73 miles long. At Flushing (Vlissingen), it is approximately a mile wide, and thereafter it varies in width from about 300 to 1,400 yards. In addition to this, in the port itself there are approximately 3,600,000 square yards of dock basins, all of which have to receive attention. The enemy employed every type of mine and every type of delivery to prevent them from being swept."

Real Story of Fighting in Reich Differs from Cold Communiques

IN THE OUTSKIRTS OF ESCHWEILER, Germany, Nov. 20. — (AP) No battle is ever what it reads like in the communiques, because the human side of the war is lost in the cold terse phrases which filter through headquarters.

That's the way it was in the outskirts of Eschweiler today as Doughboys fought their way into the city.

This is a record of what was happening during four hours of the day while the Yanks battled their way into his important communications center. It has no great military significance and may seem a little confused, but that is the way war seems to frontline troops, where confusion is accepted as a normal condition.

At headquarters the lieutenant pointed to a map and blue marks designating the position of advance troops and said, "they are moving right ahead. You'll have no trouble getting into the edge of the town."

Capt. Robert Neilsen of Los Angeles, said, "I'm looking for my outfit, so I'll be the guide." And the little convoy of jeeps went forward toward Eschweiler.

We were looking for the command post of Maj. Fred E. Neehan of Auburn, Calif., who was commanding the troops assaulting Eschweiler.

Jeeps rolled through the battered streets of Stolberg, littered with debris from bombing and shelling.

Near the edge of Stolberg Neilsen stopped his jeep. We went into a building where a group of G-I's and a few officers lounged about waiting for the next move.

"Stay here until we find out what's going on up ahead," Neilsen said, and went out.

It was raining. Water dripped from the eaves and splashed in the mud outside. The soldiers sat about and waited for someone to tell them what to do next.

There was a woman war correspondent in the room and Lt. Benjamin Leonard, Donald, S.C., sniffed and said: "I don't know whether you come from Paris or not but you sure smell nice. We don't see American girls up this way."

One Doughboy said, "they got mines all over the place."

"That's right," said Lt. Allan

Lamond, Haverhill, Mass. "I went up to remove mines on the road and walked through them. Once I looked down and there was a mine about an inch from my foot."

Captain Neilsen came in and announced he hadn't been able to find the command post but that he had decided to make a run for Eschweiler.

Once again the little jeep convoy dashed down the road, which was under enemy observation. Suddenly Neilsen stopped his jeep and ran for a building, motioning for the others to follow. We entered the building on the outskirts of the town and as the door closed heavy mortar shells began to fall outside.

"Better come down in the basement," Neilsen said, and the group went into the dark corridors while the building shook from the crash of the shells. One hit the building and the walls shuddered, but nobody got hurt.

"I wish somebody would give Winchell our regards," said a voice in the darkness. "Because we didn't come over on D-Day he said we would be army of occupation troops. Look at us now."

"Yeah," someone else said. "We have been occupying cellars from France to Germany."

Neilsen turned on his flashlight. "This is where the C.P. is supposed to be but there's nobody here yet. As a matter of fact, we don't know exactly where the troops are. Some are in front of us a little way and some behind. But don't think we operate this way all the time. We just moved so fast that our Axis of signal communications is shot," he said.

Neilsen sent out security patrols and posted guards at the windows, alerted for any counterattack.

We went upstairs to a room where a few Doughboys crouched by the walls for protection. Two German women with a boy of about 10 and a girl of about 12 huddled with their arms about one another and their eyes big with fright.

The explosions came so close there was a rush to get back in the basement and then a shell hit the side of the building and blew in the wall over the stairway.

"Our troops are about 300 yards ahead and pinned down by machine-gun and mortar fire," Neilsen said. "But we are getting organized now and as soon as we get our planes up those mortars will stop firing fast."

Nobody knew exactly where the front was or how far ahead the troops were. There was that pall of uncertainty about everything that would remain until communications were established.

A young lieutenant came into the room and tossed a map on the table.

"We've been ordered to relieve pressure on X unit," he said. "Hell, I looked on the map and we already are 300 yards ahead of them."

"Well, we'll have the lines in pretty soon and get straightened out."

In one corner a soldier built a fire in a little stove to take the chill from the basement. He whistled "Lili Marlene."

7TH NEARING SARREBOURG

Drives 12 Miles Toward Rhine In Less Than Day

An American Command Post Near Sarrebourg, France, Nov. 20 (AP) — The United States Seventh Army, driving 12 miles in less than 24 hours, reached the approaches of Saarebourg today, 32 miles from the Rhine.

Driving along the main Paris-to-Strasbourg highway, a two-lane pavement, they were within 14 miles of the Saverne Gap, one of the main corridors through the Vosges Mountains to the Rhine Plains.

Spotty resistance of the past two days indicates a general German withdrawal throughout the Seventh's northern sector. Heavy rainfall restricted air support today.

Like Tunisia, Normandy

The Seventh's drive toward the Rhine in the northern sector now is assuming the complexion of the Tunisia and Normandy breakthroughs.

The Germans are falling back so fast they do not have time to cut telephone wires, lay mines or set roadblocks.

One company of impatient American infantrymen jumped into trucks and rode into a German-held village near Sarrebourg. The Germans were so surprised they fled.

German artillery is conspicuously absent. The Jerries' heavy equipment is mostly horse-drawn. Their air power is nil. Even reconnaissance planes are rare.

Roads leading to the forward positions are choked with American and French material. The Seventh probably would have been at the Rhine by now in the offensive starting November 13 if the weather had been suitable for air support.

One Way To London

An ironical touch was added to the German retreat by one of their road signs near Sarrebourg. It pointed the way to London.

More than a score of villages was captured in the Seventh's lunge to Sarrebourg. Since the offensive started the Seventh has captured more than 3,000 prisoners.

It now can be disclosed that the 44th Division is operating with the Seventh Army.

Among the towns liberated between Blamont and Sarrebourg are St. George's, Aspach, Ibigny, Richeval, Hattigny, Heming, Landange, Lorquin, La Neuveville, Fraquelfing and Neiderhoff.

East of Blamont towns taken were Taconville, Cirey, Bertrambois, La Frimbolt and Val et Chatillon.

Three Impressive Gains

The Seventh scored other impressive gains along its 50-mile front. The village of Le Trouche, a mile and a half east of Raon L'Etape, was occupied, and just south of St. Die the village of Foucharupt was liberated. In the southern sector the Seventh pushed three and a half miles eastward through mines and rugged terrain, occupying Anould, Develin and Gerbepal.

How Yank Division Saved Allies' Drive Is Told

With the Northern Group of Armies, Nov. 20 (AP) — A valorous stand by the American Seventh Armored Division late in October in southeastern Holland saved the British-Canadian Antwerp campaign from possible disaster, it was announced officially today.

The Seventh delayed and finally helped stop a strong German counterattack against the eastern side of the British Second Army salient into Holland. The Americans were outnumbered three to one.

"The Yanks slugged it out toe to toe with the superior enemy forces," a spokesman said. "Each company fought like a battalion. Each squad fought like a company and each man fought like a lion. Unbelievable heroism was the order of the day."

Scarce On Armor

When the Seventh was moved into southeastern Holland to protect Lieut. Gen. Miles C. Dempsey's right flank during the month-long campaign to clear the northern and western approaches to Antwerp its armor was stretched precariously thin over a 22-mile sector around Meijel.

Knowledge of the situation evidently leaked through to the Germans, for on October 27—when Dempsey's drive was rolling the Germans back toward the Maas in western Holland, and Canadians were liquidating the Nazis along the Schelde—Field Marshall Gerd von Rundstedt aimed a mighty counterattack squarely at the Americans.

Shelled More Than An Hour

For an hour and ten minutes before dawn, German artillery rained shells on the American positions. The town of Meijel was assaulted first.

Forty-three Americans of a cavalry reconnaissance squadron—the headquarters platoon of C Company and a platoon of assault guns—were pitted against 200 German infantrymen backed by Panther and Tiger tank formations.

"They advanced in three waves, wildly, without the caution usually displayed by Germans troops," an official account related. "In a matter of moments the first two waves had been annihilated.

Counterattack Succeeds

The Americans were forced to fall back, but joined forces with B troops of their outfit, counterattacked and kept the Germans busy the rest of the day.

The Ninth German Panzer Division and the 15th Panzer Grenadier Division smashed at the Yanks at Heitak, slightly to the north.

Dempsey ordered reinforcements into the critical battle and told the Americans to hold on.

For two days and a night the Nazi tanks fired at the men, dug in deep in the marshy ground. But when the tanks tried to break through a few Americans popped out of their foxholes and let go with bazookas.

Briton's Congratulations

After four days the Germans knew they were licked. A letter from Dempsey, commander of the British Second Army, told the Americans:

"I congratulate you all on the splendid way in which you held off the strong enemy attack which came against you at Meijel. You were heavily outnumbered, but by holding firm as you did you gave me time to bring up the necessary reserves. I appreciate very greatly the high fighting qualifications which your division showed."

But perhaps the greatest compliment to the American Seventh came from the German radio—a grim joke at the time to the men in the line.

"Numerically Superior"

German forces, Berlin said, were engaged in "very heavy fighting with numerically superior forces."

For four days a battle raged in the cramped area.

Sergt. Joseph Deetchemerdy, of St. Louis, and his platoon wiped out a German infantry company.

Sergt. Raymond Moliozewski, of Detroit, hugged the ground with his rifle directing artillery fire on positions 50 yards away. He picked off eight Germans while singing out firing instructions before a German 88 shell broke one of his legs in three places.

Sergt. Harold Brown, of Dallas, Texas, dug in with 40 men of his platoon, only to find eight Tiger tanks ringed around them between 50 and 100 yards away. On one occasion his men popped out of their holes with bazookas and stopped the advancing enemy tanks.

conditions for them are better than they would be in the combat zone.

In Germany their homes were shelled by the Allies and now are being blasted again by German artillery. Here they live in barracks, but the barracks are warm and they are safe.

Goerdeler Still Lives, Nephew Says

With the United States Ninth Army, Germany, Nov. 20 (AP)—The Ninth Army has captured the nephew of Dr. Karl Goerdeler, former mayor of Leipzig, who the Germans declared they executed in the recent Hitler bomb plot.

The nephew said he believed Goerdeler still was at large and that the Nazis executed someone else "to save face."

ANOTHER NAZI GENERAL KILLED NEAR BELFORT

SIXTH ARMY GROUP IN FRANCE, Nov. 20—(AP) The Germans have lost another general, Major Gen. Oschmann, commander of the 338th infantry division, who was killed by artillery fire Nov. 14 at the start of the French offensive in the Belfort sector, it was learned today.

Ex-Terror Camp In Holland Now Houses German Evacuees

Vught Concentration Camp, Holland, Nov. 20 (AP)—German civilian evacuees are living in comparative comfort in this huge concentration camp which once was a Nazi slaughterhouse.

There still are grim reminders of the horror under Nazi rule, when 30,000 Dutch civilians were believed to have been put to death here. Near by is the crematory where more than 13,000 persons perished. Part of the gallows where the Germans hanged civilians still stands.

Barbed wire around the camp no longer is charged with electricity and civilians no longer are shot for stepping within 12 feet of the fence. That is not the style of Allied management of internees.

These German men, women and children have been removed from the battle in Germany, and living (Another high-ranking German, Major Gen. Anton Dunckern, SS (elite guard) commander at Metz, was captured in his headquarters in the fall of that fortress city).

Retreating Foe Trapped

ON THE 3D ARMY FRONT, Nov. 20 (AP).—A 19th Division group of about 100 men pulled one of the neatest tricks of the war today by capturing 600 Germans and killing many others in a specially devised trap to catch Nazis fleeing Metz.

Under command of Lieutenant William C. Gassman, of New York, they took up positions between Avancy, six and a half miles northeast of Metz, and Vry, eight miles northeast, along the main road leading from the city.

They trained their machine guns two ways into a depression through which the road passes and, as the Germans trickled through in small groups, the Americans fired. Usually, after a few minutes, the Germans who had not been hit were glad to surrender.

YANK REPORTER A MAYOR IN REICH

Wurselen, Germany, Nov. 20 (A. P.).—"I need a Mayor, said Capt. Gerald Ford of Englewood, N. J., Allied Military Government officer taking charge of this town. So he appointed a war correspondent, Alton Smalley of St. Paul, to be Mayor for the first hour because there was no other candidate in sight.

BELGIAN PATRIOTS AGREE TO GIVE UP ARMS

BRUSSELS, Nov. 20—(AP) The chiefs of Belgium's various resistance organizations agreed today to deliver all the arms of the resistance forces to the Allied armies by Saturday and concurred in the procedure by which the weapons will be surrendered.

Meeting with Maj. Gen. George W. E. J. Erskine and other officials of the Supreme Allied headquarters mission to Belgium, the resistance leaders agreed their organizations would deliver the arms at a designated depot. In view of the transportation difficulties the armies will send trucks to pick up the weapons when necessary.

Surrender of the arms by members of the resistance forces is in response to an order by the Belgian government which has led to organized protests throughout the country.

Crisis In Belgium Alarms Allies

London, Nov. 20 (AP)—Allied officials, who for months have considered the possibility of internal armed clashes in liberated countries, viewed the Belgian crisis today with some alarm.

If the Belgian situation should get out of hand and result in an uprising by members of the resistance against the Pierlot Government, these officials said it might spread to other liberated countries which also are going through critical periods.

Educated In Law-Breaking

A British brigadier in Brussels recently said:

"We have got to expect a certain amount of dissatisfaction.

"For four long years, through our propaganda, we have told the peoples of Europe to break all German laws. If they were not satisfied with conditions, we told them to kill. We dropped the arms for them.

"For four years we have educated Europe's people in patriotic lawlessness. It is only logical now they are liberated that if they don't like the new laws of the new governments they will try to take the law in their own hands.

Hiding Arms

Reports from Brussels said many resistance members were hiding their arms, just as they did when the Germans came in.

Some Belgian resistance leaders claimed that thousands of Rexists and collaborators still are loose and attempting to sabotage the Allied war effort.

Two weeks after the capture of Brussels one of the key figures in the capital's resistance movement said:

"If the Government doesn't round up the collaborators we will go out and shoot them."

May Ask Eisenhower.

Brussels, Nov. 20 (A. P.).—Unofficial reports that Premier Pierlot might request Gen. Eisenhower to set up a temporary protective government for Belgium were heard today after a tumultuous demonstration by an estimated 15,000 marchers, shouting for the resignation of the Pierlot government.

Steel-helmeted Belgian police with rifles slung over their shoulders patrolled the streets of the capital yesterday in the wake of the parade of resistance sympathizers embittered by the Government's demand for surrender of all firearms. About half the marchers were women.

Allied troops and armored cars were held in readiness with equipment for street barricades.

One of the major complaints seemed to be Government reluctance to seize and try political and business bigwigs who allegedly have been sympathizers or supporters of the Germans. Adding to the explosive situation were protests over acute food shortages.

Paris Black Market Has Them

Paris, Nov. 20 (AP)—The Supreme Allied Command tonight promised to try to report to the American public on the cigarette situation in Paris and many other rear areas where soldiers were told today they could get no cigarettes, although the black market has them for sale at $4 a pack.

Officers in the Paris and rear areas were put on reduced cigarette rations last week and enlisted men received none. The scarcity here is linked to supply and transport problems connected with the Allied offensive, officials said earlier today. They expected troops in the rear areas to get some smokes next week.

Meanwhile, a large amount of army cigarettes has somehow been diverted into the black market. Vendors peddled American cigarettes at $1.50 per pack two weeks ago to war-wealthy Parisians. Now, at $4, they still are getting more offers than they can fill.

NO SMOKES FOR G. I.'S

Paris, Nov. 20 (A. P.).—Soldiers and officers in Paris and many other rear areas were told today they could get no cigarettes, although the black market has them at $4 a pack. Combat troops at the front recently were on short supply, but now they have plenty.

A large amount of Army cigarettes has been diverted, by one means or another, into the black market. Vendors peddled American cigarettes at $1.50 a pack two weeks ago to war-wealthy Parisians. Now since they have boosted the price to $4, they still are getting more offers than they can fill.

Officers in the Paris and rear areas were put on reduced cigarette rations last week and enlisted men got none. The scarcity here is linked to supply and transport problems connected with the offensive. They expected troops in the rear area to get cigarettes next week.

4,000 Nazis Killed in Blast

PARIS, Nov. 19 (AP)—The Agence Francaise de la Presse, in a dispatch date-lined at the Italian frontier, reported tonight that 4,000 Germans had been killed in an explosion in a tunnel near Genoa.

To Develop Big [illegible], Navy, De Gaulle Says

Paris, Nov. 20 (AP)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle, in his second radio "fireside chat" to the French people, promised last night that France within eight months would develop a great new army and navy.

Urging public support of the new "liberation" bond issue to strengthen France's position before the world, he reported coal production had risen from 244,000 tons weekly in September to 422,000 tons last week; that the Paris electric output increased tenfold since August 31 and was now nearly equal to the pre-war average and that 1,238 bridges and other vital structures on communications lines had been repaired.

RUSSIAN FORCES FIGHT WAY INTO

Slaying of 63 Nazis, Traitors Admitted by Bearded Frenchman

PARIS, Nov. 20 — (AP) Bearded Dr. Marcel Petiot admitted on the witness stand today the slaying of 63 persons—thirty of whom he said were Gestapo officers and the rest "traitorous" Frenchmen—as court hearings opened in one of Paris' most mysterious cases.

Petiot, in a dramatic four and one-half hour talk, wove a story of intrigue, plots and counterplots that extended into three continents and many nations, including the United States. Included in his testimony was mention of a "secret weapon" which he said he once had offered to the American consul, but which he said had been turned down.

The defendant—charged with the 63 deaths—freely admitted the slayings before Judge Collety and said all met their deaths through "a secret method."

Petiot—who says he holds captaincy in the FFI—said he might disclose later in the week details of [illegible] secret weapon which would have permitted America and Britain to fire on Oerman-occupied Europe at a time when the channel was still a big obstacle.

The undismayed Petiot — so his lady in court ran—organized "the Soup Flytox" which specialized in stamping out denunciators and also planned to smuggle patriots over the French border into Spain.

Far from being the coldblooded Bluebeard described on police station posters, Petiot said he really became a patriotic scourge to traitors and Gestapo agents. He and an aide tried out the "secret arm," which he expected would be most effective in rubbing out the Gestapo, on two German motorcyclists in Paris, and it worked, he said.

Thereafter, it worked 63 times but, contrary to Police allegations, Petiot said, his victims were whisked off to the Bois de Vincennes or the Bois de Marly de Roi. And were not buried under his house. Those bodies were planted on his premises by Germans to arouse suspicion, the doctor asserted.

MISKOLC SUBURBS

Red Army Launches Winter Drive in Latvia, Berlin Reports.

CLAIM BIG BATTLE RAGES

Six-Column Soviet Assault Nears Old Border of Czechoslovakia.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 21. — (AP) Russian troops yesterday fought their way into the outskirts of Miskolc, Hungary's fifth largest city, as Berlin announced that the Red army had opened its grand Winter offensive in the frozen north with attacks on 300,000 Germans pocketed in Western Latvia.

Moscow, telling of a six-column Russian drive through Hungary's mountains to within 20 miles of the old Czechoslovakian frontier, did not confirm the German announcement of a Latvian offensive.

Big Battle Begun

But Berlin said the Russians — estimated to have a reservoir of 500,000 to 1,000,000 troops in Latvia, had hurled huge infantry, tank, plane and artillery forces against the Germans on a 30-mile front near Liepaja, one of the two Baltic escape ports left to the enemy.

In the violent fighting which Berlin said was now entering its third day, the Russians were admitted to have ripped holes in the Avis linee, but the Germans claimed these were sealed off in counter-attacks.

A Soviet midnight communique told of a "reconnaissance in force" southwest of Jelgava, which is 97 miles east of Liepaja, and said that Russian troops dislodged the Germans from some positions after a hand-to-hand fight.

The air arm of the Baltic fleet also was reported to have sunk a German supply ship of 6,000 tons, two escort vessels and two landing barges, presumably off the Latvian coast, but this was the extent of the Russian references to the Latvian front.

In Hungary the upper wing of Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukraine army cut the eastern and western Gern escape roads out of Miskolc, 85 miles northeast of besieged Budapest, and plunged into the southern outskirts with the seizure of Csaba and Szirma, less than one and two miles, respectively, south and southeast of the strategic city.

The highway to imperilled Eger, 22 miles southwest of Miskolc, was cut with the capture of Diosgyor, three miles west of Miskolc, putting one Red army column within 20 miles of the former Slovakian frontier. Between Diosgyor and Miskolc the Russians killed 600 Germans and captured 460 enemy troops, a midnight supplement said.

Fight Near Priekule

Berlin said the battle on the Latvian front was particularly fierce near Priekule, 20 miles east-southeast of Liepaja.

German radio accounts of the battle said it began Sunday—celebrated throughout Russia as Red army artillery day—with a crashing artillery barrage along a front 20 to 30 miles wide. They all agreed it was a major assault.

This new onslaught, coming a few days after the general Allied push on the Western front, was considered the first of the "new devastating blows" which Marshal Stalin recently promised would be struck in the east.

The Russians last were reported to have at least 500,000 troops on the Latvian front, and possibly 1,000,000—the men of Gen. Andrei Yeremenko's second Baltic army and those of Gen. Ivan Maslennikov's Third Baltic army, co-captors of Riga Oct. 13.

The drive was not yet confirmed by Moscow.

Col. Ernst Von Hammer, German military commentator, said of the attack against the 5,000-square-mile pocket: "Strong Russian forces yesterday morning started another all-out offensive against the southern flank of the Courland (peninsula) front.

"The first waves were mown down by German cross fire. In subsequent fighting, the Russians scored minor breaches which were eliminated in counterattacks."

Later DNB news agency broadcast that a "murderous" drumfire barrage and waves of assault aircraft supported the attack. 'The Russians made full use of the frozen ground and sent in masses of tanks," DNB said. "A ferocious battle has ensued."

Germany's High command bulletin also told of the "violent" attack in which Russians already had begun throwing in reinforcements, and said other Soviet forces had broken into German lines on the Sworbe peninsula at the southwestern end of the Estonian island of Saare (Osel), commanding the mouth of the gulf of Riga.

Transocean fixed the extent of the front and quoted a German military spokesman who gave this picture of the fighting:

"Wave after wave of Russian men and tanks, supported by artillery and aircraft, are continually hurled against the German lines. Not a single minute passed since yesterday morning when the air did not quiver and the ground did not shake.

Reds Use Fighter Planes

"Fighting is still increasing in violence. Unsurpassed battles must be expected in the next couple of days. The Russians have thrown in an immense number of fighters, bombers fighter-bombers, and dive-bombers."

The new battle overshadowed momentarily the stubborn battles around Budapest and northeast of the Hungarian capital, and both German and Polish reports indicated large-scale Russian assaults were impending in East Prussia and Poland.

The Germans said the Russians still were massing men and material behind their lines in East Prussia and in southern Poland on the road to Krakow and German Silesia, and the Polish telegraphic agency said the Germans expected a renewed drive against Warsaw shortly.

The Polish report, quoting the underground Warsaw radio which is again operating near the capital, said the Germans were mining factories, hospitals, filter plants and houses in the capital opposite Russian-held Praga suburbs on the east bank of the Vistula river.

The Germans are removing all their sick and wounded from Warsaw hospitals and shipping them westward, it said. Poles are forbidden to enter the city.

Latvia was a logical place for the Red Army to begin its winter offensive. There the Germans are tying up large Soviet forces which otherwise could be deployed along the front to the south.

The Germans hold a lone running from a point on the Baltic coast near Pape, twenty miles south of Liepaja, northeast to the Priekule area, thence forty-seven miles eastward to a point near Russian-held Auce. From Auce the front runs northeast to Ragaciems, on the Gulf of Riga, twenty-two miles west of Riga.

REDS [illegible] NEAR BUDAPEST

Tanks Drive Along Highway Northeast of City.

London, Nov. 20 (A. P.).—Russian and American-made tanks, deepening the Soviet sweep around besieged Budapest along invasion routes into Austria and Czecho-slovakia, were reported advancing today toward Lucenec, key Nazi communications hub on the Slovak-Hungarian frontier.

The tanks drove along a modern, hard-surfaced highway from captured Gyongyos, a seven-way road junction twenty-three miles from the border and forty miles northeast of Budapest. Gyongyos was seized by Russian shock troops yesterday in a thrust across the vital Budapest-Miskolc railway.

Simultaneously, other Soviet tank and artillery forces brought the twenty-five-mile sector of the trunk line between Budapest and Hatvan under heavy fire after capturing the village of Galgaheviz, nineteen miles northeast of Budapest, a midnight Moscow bulletin announced.

Hatvan is Outflanked.

Hatvan, also a terminal of a main line running north to central Slovakia, was outflanked by tanks fanning out from Gyongyos following the hard-won Soviet advance. Gyongyos fell after a violent street fight in which the Russians wiped out two enemy battalions of 1,600 men, Moscow said.

On the upper end of the eighty-five-mile front moving on southern Slovakia, Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's second Ukraine Army drove to within two miles of Miskolc, Hungary's fifth city. Seizure of Hernadkak, six miles east of Miskolc, put another Russian group into the broad Hernad River Valley leading into Slovakia.

In the Baltic, the Russians were reported by Berlin to have thrown three divisions of 30,000 men and strong tank forces against the Sworbe peninsula, southwestern tip of Saare Island, dominating the entrance to the Gulf of Riga.

The battle for Budapest, according to Berlin, entered a new phase with the Russians bringing up thirty-five infantry divisions, possibly 400,000 men on a siege arc east of the capital. Berlin reported heavy fighting at Gyorme, ten miles southeast of the city.

Other Russian units were fighting along the approaches to Eger, and the drive on that strategic Matra Mountain enemy base appeared nearing a successful conclusion.

The German communique said the Russians had started a strong offensive against the thirty divisions trapped in Latvia after heavy artillery and air bombardments. The first wave of the drive was reported to have collapsed, but the German s said heavy fighting continued with Soviet reinforcements.

German positions were broken into on the Sworbe Peninsula, the communique added.

London, Nov. 20 (AP) — Ivan Subasic, Prime Minister of Yugoslavia, arrived in Moscow today and conferred with Vyasheslan M. Molotov, Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs, the Moscow radio announced tonight. The Berlin radio also said Marshal Tito was in Moscow.

2,000 PLANES RAID NAZI OIL

Americans Also Wreck Railway Yard, Strafe Troops

London, Nov. 20 (AP) — About 2,000 American planes raided Germany again today, bombing two synthetic oil plants, wrecking a strategic railway yard and strafing retreating Nazi troops with cannon fire.

RAF heavy Lancasters followed the United States blows with an afternoon strike into the industrial Ruhr, attacking unannounced objectives under an umbrella of Spitfires and Mustangs.

Strike From Two Sides

More than 600 Liberators and Flying Fortresses from Italian-based United States 15th Air Force pushed out into upper Silesia and left smoke and flames pouring from the Blechhammer oil works.

Another 160 American heavies slipped out from Eighth Air Force bases in England and pin-pointed their bomb loads in a tight concentration on the Schelven-Buer synthetic oil plant at Gelsenkirchen.

After these two blows, the 1,000 fighter planes descended from their escort chores to work over communications inside the Siegfried Line and Brenner Pass.

Nowhere did the Luftwaffe make any sizable appearance, and heavy cloud formations made instrument bombing necessary.

Assist Ground Forces

Air forces operating from the continent had another active day, cleaning the skies ahead of ground forces.

On the Third Army front, fighter bombers slashed at heavy tanks the Germans were leaving behind in depressions to screen withdrawal beyond Saarbrucken.

Eighth Air Force fighter pilots ruined eight locomotives, 24 railroad cars, three oil cars, 58 motor-trucks and dive-bombed a 60-truck road convoy.

At least ten of the 18 fighter planes missing are believed to have landed in France. All the American bombers from England returned.

850 British-based American planes bombed and strafed the Ruhr Valley.

It was the third successive day that Italian-based American bombers and fighters have hit the Reich.

An odd combination of 160 heavy bombers and more than 700 Mustang and Thunderbolt fighters and fighter-bombers worked over an oil plant at Gelsenkirchen and the sprawling railroad yards at Munster, both fairly close to the erupting front. The preponderance of fighters suggested that considerable German air opposition was expected.

Break In Weather

Swarms of fighters buzzed back and forth on the Channel coast, where blue skies, marked only by slight haze, provided the first break in a week end of adverse flying weather.

The Italy-based United States 15th Air Force raided southern Germany 600 strong both Saturday and Sunday, but the Britain-based 8th was grounded.

On the Continent tactical combat units, despite hazardous flying weather, joined in the seething battle up and down the Western Front.

American and British fighter and medium bombers made 3,000 trips across the front lines, poured loads of bombs on German communications lines and belted them with machine-gun fire.

1,900 Sorties

United States Ninth Air Force pilots flew 1,900 sorties. Thunderbolts and Mustangs shot down 15 Nazi fighters, blew up 46 locomotives, 300 railcars and 270 motor trucks.

Five hundred medium and light bombers worked ahead of the American Ninth, Third and First armies all day long.

For the first time, A-26 invader bombers flew with Marauders and Havocs on tactical missions.

15 Planes Lost

Thirteen fighters and two bomb[illegible] were lost.

Reich Oil Targets, Ruhr Valley Bombed

London, Nov. 20 (AP)—Heavy bombers of the United States 15th Air Force flying from bases in Italy bombed oil refineries at Blechhammer, in Upper Silesia, and eight other large synthetic fuel plants in Germany today, and upward of RAF units flew 1,200 sorties against German communications in Holland and northwestern Germany and destroyed two Nazi radio stations, the Air Ministry said.

RAF medium bombers scored direct hits on the Maas river bridge at Venlo, near the Dutch-German border in southeastern Holland.

Troop Plane Crash Kills 26 Yanks

London, Nov. 20 (AP)—Twenty-six American soldiers were killed and four injured in the crash last night of a C-47 skytrain troop carrier en route from England to France, air force headquarters announced today.

The plane was not a hospital ambulance, and it was stated that, contrary to earlier reports, there were no wounded men or flight nurses aboard.

Six Taken To Hospital

The Skytrain, a transport type that has carried thousands of men to battle, crashed near an 800-foot peak north of Brighton, in southern England. Six victims were taken to a near-by hospital, where two died and the others remained in serious condition.

"No cause has been fixed for the plane going out of control," air force headquarters stated.

Investigators were hampered by mud which made the spot virtually inaccessible to automobile traffic.

Finnmark Called Ruined

London, Nov. 20 (AP)—Crown Prince Olav of Norway said today the Norwegian province of Finnmark, burned and laid waste by Germans in full retreat from the Russians, may be uninhabitable for "years to come."

Thousands of men, women and children have been sent wandering over snowbound roads in zero temperatures, Olav said, and invalids and young children are dying by the wayside.

Olav said the Germans, in evacuating the far north of Norway, were forcing the Norwegian population to accompany their troops in order to assure the troops protection from Allied air attacks and bombardment from the sea.

To Hold North Of Narvik

"The Germans," he said, "appear to be preparing defense lines north of Narvik, where it is only 30 miles from the sea to the Swedish frontier."

All the towns in Finnmark, which is larger than Holland, have been evacuated, Olav said. Populations totaling more than 61,000 face starvation and death from freezing.

Olav, commander in chief of the Norwegian armed forces, said supplies "to a certain degree" are being sent into northern Norway through Kirkenes and that every effort is being made to organize resistance and underground movement.

"Cooperation between Russia and Norway is extremely cordial," Olav declared.

[illegible] He expressed anxiety for thousands of Lapps remaining in the interior, where they have their reindeer flocks, declaring: "The Germans have practically destroyed the reindeer flocks as food for their troops. The Lapps may have got some of their flocks away. If they haven't, their situation for years to come will be extremely difficult, for they have no other means of livelihood."

HITLER'S WILL IN HANDS OF NAZIS, BRITISH CLAIM

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 21. — (AP) The Daily Sketch said today that "according to information received by two diplomatic sources here the Nazi party is now in possession of Hitler's will—and this indicates Hitler is dead."

The will, the Sketch added, leaves all Hitler's property and business assets to the Nazi party and disinherits his relatives.

"Hitler's main estate is his interest in the Eher Verlag, the publishing firm which made a vast fortune out of 'Mein Kampf.' His only property in land, which is Berchtesgaden, also goes to the party," said the paper.

Himmler Gets A Helper

London, Nov. 20 (AP)—Indications filtered out of Germany today that Heinrich Himmler is so busy taking Hitler's place he has found it necessary to bring up a new No. 2 Nazi.

He is Dr. Ernst Kaltenbrunner, who succeeded "Hangman" Reinhard Heydrich as chief of the super-Gestapo. For the first time, according to a generally reliable source here, Kaltenbrunner has just been accorded a selected battalion of super-Gestapo bodyguards —an honor previously enjoyed only by Hitler and Himmler.

NEW 'VOW OF LOYALTY' SOUGHT FROM NAZIS

LONDON, Nov. 20. — (AP) The German people were told tonight by their chief commentators that they must strive with all their might to prevent an Allied victory on the Western front by Christmas, and a new "fight to the death" oath was prescribed for all German soldiers.

The new "vow of loyalty," as broadcast by the German radio, exacts from German soldiers this pledge:

"I am determined to give all my strength, my blood and my life in the present decisive battle for the life of my nation.—I will never abandon the arms which the homeland is forging for me with the utmost sacrifice. I will see that nothing falls into the enemy's hands undestroyed — I believe in Germany. As National-Socialist soldier I believe in my Fuehrer Adolf Hitler."

The Allies are going all-out to win by Christmas and this must be prevented at all costs, said Dr. Rudolf Scharping, political commentator on the Berlin radio.

U. S. Intervention In Poles' Behalf Asked

London, Nov. 20 (AP) — Polish Prime Minister Stanislaw Mikolajczyk has appealed directly to the United States for intervention in his country's long dispute with Russia, seeking clear-cut guarantees of post-war independence, as well as a new Baltic border, it was learned today.

Sources close to the Polish Cabinet reported that the United States intervention was sought as an alternative to a Russian request that Poland sign away its territory east of the Curzon Line in return for later territorial adjustments at Germany's expense.

(In Washington there has been some discussion in diplomatic circles over the possibility that President Roosevelt might issue a formal statement on the Russo-Polish situation shortly. It was expected, however, that such a statement, if made, will simply reaffirm the United States' desire for a free and independent Poland and refrain from any specific commitments.)

British Women To Man Batteries On Continent

London, Nov. 20 (AP)—Gen. Sir Frederick A. Pile, home defense commander, last night announced that women who man anti-aircraft batteries in Britain soon would go into action on the Continent.

Mary Churchill, daughter of the Prime Minister, has charge of one of the batteries.

Field Marshal Brooke Hinted As Dill Successor

London, Nov. 20 (AP)—The British press speculated today that Field Marshal Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the Imperial general staff, likely would succeed the late Field Marshal Sir John Dill as British representative on the chief of staff committee in Washington.

Others mentioned for the post were Lieutenant General Sir George Giffard, commander of the Eleventh Army group in the Far East, and Lieutenant General Sir Ronald Weeks, deputy chief of the British general staff.

Winant Sees Churchill, Eden

London, Nov. 20 (AP)—Fresh from consultations with President Roosevelt in Washington, Ambassador John G. Winant talked with Prime Minister Churchill over the week end and today saw Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden.

Yanks In England Out Of Cigarettes

London, Nov. 20 (AP)—Sale of cigarettes is to be discontinued immediately at all United States Army post exchanges in England with the exception of those at air force combat stations.

A critical shortage for use of combat forces on the Continent caused the shutdown on sales, the army said. English brands cost about 50 cents for a package of 20.

Hospital patients, replacements and combat personnel in rest areas still will be able to smoke their favorite brands from the States.

British soldiers will not be affected by the change. Tommies are rationed 45 English cigarettes a week. A Board of Trade spokesman said the effect on British civilian supply would be slight.

Query Put To Washington

The United States Army ban on cigarette sales provoked a front-page editorial in the official United States Army newspaper Stars and Stripes, which demanded an answer "from Washington to the question which is in the minds of every GI smoker: 'Where are the cigarettes?'"

"This question, which in view of the earlier cut in the ration and the announcement today that the entire sale of cigarettes was being banned to non-combatants, we believe to a reasonable one and necessary," said the editorial.

"Certainly nobody begrudges the fighting men in the air or on the ground what smokes are available. They deserve them."

G. I. Gifts Reach England

LONDON, Nov. 20 (AP).—Twenty thousand sacks of Christmas mail, the first big shipment of Yuletide packages for American troops overseas, have arrived at a British port. An Army spokesman estimated today it would be nearly Christmas before all the mail is cleared.

GERMANS OUST POLISH TROOPS

Two Charges Repulsed Before Italian Peak Is Lost

Rome, Nov. 20 (AP) — A German counterattack has knocked Polish troops of the Eighth Army from [illegible] Fortino, a small peak overlooking two secondary roads to Faenza about five miles to the northwest, Allied headquarters said today.

The Poles repulsed two Nazi charges before being forced to withdraw.

Monte Fortino, although less than 1,000 feet high, commands a wide stretch of flat ground leading to Faenza, a junction point on the lateral Bologna-Rimini highway.

Germans Build New Defense

Patrols reported the Germans have dug in and set up crude fortifications in this area which apparently is the pivotal point for both the enemy line swinging northwestward to the Adriatic and the thinly defended line running into the Apennines.

Except at Monte Fortino, operations elsewhere on the Italian front generally were limited to patrols.

On the American Fifth Army front south of Bologna, patrols were active and in one sector several small-scale German counterattacks were beaten off.

Nazis Retake Italian Town

Rome, Nov. 20 (AP)—German troops recaptured Monte Fortino, five miles southeast of the Bologna-Rimini highway town of Faenza, after bitter fighting with Polish units of the Eight Army, Allied headquarters announced today.

The Poles repulsed two German counterattacks on Converselle and improved their positions adjacent to Monte Fortino.

Eighth Army patrols pro[illegible] enemy positions south of Raven[illegible] on the Adriatic coastal sector an[illegible] along the Montone river. In the mountains south of Bologna American units of the Fifth Army threw back several small scale German counterattacks.

Yugoslav Troops Oust Old Delegate To Council

Rome, Nov. 20 (AP)—Yugoslav troops of Marshal Tito, wearing red stars and toting tommy guns, took possession of the Yugoslav legation today for Tito's Commissioner of Foreign Affairs, Josip Smodlaka, who assumed a new role as Yugoslav delegate on the Allied Council for Italy.

The former delegate, Miloje Smiljanic, said he had no knowlgede of reports current in Rome that some of his staff had been forcibly thrown out of the legation premises. Smiljanic wore a tiny court-plaster bandage under one eye. He denied there had been any violence but conceded that Smodlaka's methods were "quite unusual for a diplomat."

Smodkala sent word he was too busy to be interviewed. His councillor, one of his sons, referred reporters to the press attache, who is another of Smodkala's sons.

130 Allied Planes Hit Burma Estuary: Japs

New York, Nov. 20 (AP)—An attack by 130 Allied bombers and fighter planes on the Sittang estuary, east of Rangoon, in Burma, was reported today by the Japanese Domei agency.

The dispatch, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, said that "shortly after 2 P. M. on November 19 enemy formations of fighters and bombers, numbering about 60 B-25s, 40 P-38s and 30 P-47s, attacked the Sittang estuary."

CHINESE TROOPS DRIVE INTO BHAMO, RETAKE MANGSHIH

CHUNGKING, Nov. 20. — (AP) Chinese troops are fighting inside Bhamo, strongest remaining Japanese base in north Burma, and have recaptured the Burma road town of Mangshih, 62 miles inside China from the Burma border, the Chinese high command announced today.

Against these Allied victories, the High command acknowledged indirectly that two great Japanese forces aggregating probably 250,000 troops who are invading Kwangsi province from the east and north had completed a junction west of Liuchow, severing China and completing an unbroken link all the way from Manchuria to Hong Kong.

(The Tokyo radio in a broadcast recorded by the FCC declared that the U. S. air force in China had destroyed and abandoned its air field at Nanning (Yungning), about 100 miles south-southwest of the point where the Japanese junction appeared to have been effected. The unconfirmed Japanese report said the Nanning field was "the sole enemy air base in South China.")

Arrivals in Chungking reported that all routes leading from the danger zone [illegible] were choked with refugees—a sorry spectacle of human misery. It was conservatively [illegible] a total of 70,000,000 Chinese now had fled their homes since the war with Japan began in 1937.

A communique said that Bhamo, south of Myitkyina and 175 miles northeast of Mandalay, was penetrated by Chinese troops Saturday after a heavy American dive-bombing attack and that bitter fighting was going on in the streets. The town was encircled by the Chinese.

Mangshih, third important Burma road town to fall to the Chinese in their offensive in western Yunnan province, was captured last night in a frontal attack coupled with a double envelopment, the High Command said. The retreating Japanese burned all stores and surrounding fields. Lungling and Tengchung previously had fallen to this Chinese force, which is operating with strong American air support.

(A communique issued at Southeast Asia command headquarters at Kandy, Ceylon, said more than 1,900 Japanese troops had been killed since the drive on Bhamo and down the Mandalay railway began Oct. 15.)

Indication that the two Japanese forces invading southern China had formed a junction near Liuchow came in the High Command's report that the column which originally drove west from the Canton area had thrust 15 1-2 miles northwest from Hsincheng to a point about [illegible] miles west-southwest of Liuchow. The enemy column which drove down from the north and captured Liuchow and Ishan on the Kwangsi-Kweichow was said to have stabbed southward from Ishan to close the gap.

Any Chinese troops remaining in a pocket southwest of Liuchow appeared to have been trapped.

Chinese Retake Key Town On Burma Road

San Francisco, Nov. 20 (AP)—The Tokyo radio declared today that the United States Air Force in China had destroyed and abandoned its landing strips at Nanning (Yungning) in southwestern Kwangsi province. The unconfirmed report said the field was "the sole enemy air base in south China."

Chungking, Nov. 20 (AP)—A Central News dispatch today said Chinese troops yesterday recaptured the Burma road town of Mangshih, 62 miles from the Burma border and third important objective of the Salween offensive.

The other two main objectives—Tengchung and Lungling—already are in Chinese hands.

The high command yesterday said Chinese troops which took Lungling November 3 were being reorganized for further action in the Mangshih Valley area.

Fighting In Bhamo

The high command also said that Chinese troops are fighting inside the North Burma stronghold of Bhamo. It was surrounded several days ago.

The town was penetrated Saturday after an American dive-bombing attack, the Chinese said.

In bitter fighting the Chinese have wrested one city block from the Japanese defenders of the town which the Allies seek as a station on the projected Ledo-Burma road route to China.

Counter-Blows Repelled

Troops of the Chinese 38th Division repelled two heavy Japanese counterattacks yesterday in an effort to break the Chinese encirclement of the city.

Bhamo is the strongest remaining Japanese base in North Burma. It lies 60 miles from the Burma road and 175 northeast of Mandalay.

Recapture of Mangshih further secured the prospective India-China supply route and pipeline now under construction from Calcutta and expected ultimately to extended into Yunan province.

The next important Burma Road objective in that province is Chefang, 34 miles southwest of Mangshih.

[illegible] and trapping any Chinese troops caught in a pocket southwest of Liuchow.

The development was indicated in the high command's report that Japanese troops had thrust 15½ miles northwest from Hsincheng, recently captured by an enemy column driving from the Canton area.

Jap Forces Merge

Meanwhile, the Chinese high command intimated that two Japanese columns boring into Kwangsi province from the north and east had formed a junction west of Liuchow, completing a direct link across China from Hongkong to Manchuria and trapping any Chinese troops caught in a pocket southwest of Liuchow. The development was indicated in the High Command's report that the Japs had thrust fifteen and a half miles northwest from Hsincheng.

Japanese forces who invaded originally from the north stabbed southward from Ishan on the Kwangsi-Kweichow railway forty-three miles west-northwest of Liuchow, presumably making contact with the lower enemy force at a point about forty-seven miles west-southwest of Liuchow.

The Tokyo radio declared today in a broadcast recorded by the FCC that the Fourteenth United States Air Force in China had destroyed and abandoned its landing strips at Nanning (Yungning) in southwestern Kwangsi province. It described the field as the sole Allied air base in South China.

This report was unconfirmed.

JAPANESE JUNCTION IN CHINA INDICATED

Chungking, Nov. 20 (A. The development was indicated in the High Command's report that the Japs had thrust fifteen and a half miles northwest from Hsincheng.

CHINA SHAKES UP CABINET

General Ho Replaced As War Head By Salween Victor

Chungking, Nov. 20 (AP) — With China's military position becoming increasingly more critical, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek reshuffled eight Cabinet posts today, naming General Chen Cheng Minister of War, succeeding Gen. Ho Ying-chin.

Popular clamor had urged a shakeup of the central Government for some time in the face of continuing Japanese military gains in southeastern China.

Follows Stilwell Recall

[The changes followed the recent recall of Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell as American commander in China-India-Burma and the disclosure that Washington had been insisting on a reorganization of the Chiang Government and a settlement of the Communist question.]

General Cheng, 44, formerly was commander of the Chinese expeditionary force which now is fighting successfully in the Salween river area to open up a land route from India through Burma to China. General Ho had been Minister of War since 1930.

O. K. Yui, former Mayor of Shanghai, was boosted from Vice-Minister to Minister of Finance, succeeding Dr. H. H. Kung, who now is in the United States.

Others In Shakeup

Others involved in the shakeup were:

Chow Chung-yao, from Minister of the Interior to vice-president of the Examination Yuan, one branch of the Government.

Chang Li-sheng, from secretary-general of the executive Yuan to Minister of the Interior.

Chu Chia-hua, from vice-president of the Examination Yuan to Minister of Education.

Chien Li-fu, from Minister of Education to Minister of the Kuomingtang organization; Wang Shih-chieh, from the presidium of the People's Political Council to Minister of Information, and Liang Han-chao, from Minister of Information to Minister of Overseas Affairs.

[The retirement of General Ho as Minister of War, although he apparently retains his position as chief of the general staff, conceivably may remove one of the chief stumbling blocks to a political settlement of the stalemate between the central Government and the Communists.

Used Troops Against Communists

[General Ho had maintained a blockade against the Communists with some of China's best troops, which would have been used against the Japanese. In addition, he has been accused of attacking the Communists while they were engaged in guerrilla warfare against the Japanese.]

Foreign observers here speculated as to whether the changes would exert any influence toward a compromise settlement of the differences between the Communists and the central Government. Representatives of both groups have been conferring here for better than six months in what so far has been a futile effort to reach some agreement so that both sides could exert their full efforts against the Japanese.

Some observers pointed out that while Kung, who is a brother-in-law of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, was removed as Finance Minister he still retained the highly important post of vice-president of the Executive Yuan (vice-premier) and that he remained as head of four Government banks. Yui, his successor, is regarded as a "Kung man." Yui has a good reputation as a sound, honest official.

Faces Inflation Problem

The new Finance Minister faces a tremendous problem in attempting to straighten out China's inflationary currency and skyrocketing prices.

Wang Shin-chieh, the new Minister of Information, assumes the directorship of censorship. He is a close, trusted adviser to Chiang and may be able to work some improvements in censorship conditions here. He has been the chief negotiator with the Chinese Communists.

The appointment of Chu Chia-hua, who was educated in Berlin, as Minister of Education caused some surprise, but the naming of Chen Li-fu as Minister of the Kuomintang organization board—key party job—caused no particular comment. In his new position Chen will have considerable patronage powers.

Chang Li-sheng, the new Minister of the Interior, supervises various administrative units in the country and has general direction of the Chinese police force.

8 Get New Posts In Chinese Cabinet

Cabinet shakeup called result of Allied pressure. Dispatch on Page 4.

Chungking, Nov. 20 (AP)—Gen. Ho Ying-chin, Minister of War in the Chinese Government since 1930, was replaced today by Gen. Chen Cheng in a shakeup involving eight Cabinet posts.

O. K. Yui was elevated from Vice-Minister to Minister of Finance in succession to Dr. H. H. Kung, now in the United States.

General Chen formerly was commander of Chinese expeditionary forces on the Salween front. He is regarded as one of China's ablest field commanders.

Other Appointees

The other new appointees were:

Chow Chung-yao, from Minister of the Interior to Vice-President of the Examination Yuan, one branch of the Government; Chang Li-sheng, from Secretary General of the Executive Yuan to Minister of the Interior; Chu Chia-hua, from Vice-President of the Examination Yuan to Minister of Education; Chien Li-fu, from Minister of Education to Minister of the Kuomingtang organization; Wang Shih-chieh, from the Presidium of the Peoples Political Council to Minister of Information, and Liang Han-chao, from Minister of Information to Minister of Overseas Affairs.

All circles in Chungking welcomed the Government reshuffle, although to many it did not appear far reaching enough. Some observers pointed out that while Kung was removed from Ministry of Finance he still retained the highly important post of Vice-President of the Executive Yuan (Vice-Premier) and still was the head of four Government banks.

Chief Of Staff Retained

Gen. Ho Ying-chin apparently still retained his post as chief of the general staff.

Some quarters noted that both Kung and Ho Ying-chin were subjected to criticism at a recent session of the Peoples Political Council where their resignation was advocated openly.

The important question to many in the foreign quarter was whether the changes are forerunners of new ones and whether the changes would exert any influence toward a compromise between the Government and the Chinese Communists.

Ch'en Li-fu, as new Minister of the Kuomintang board, controls all party branches in China. The patronage is considerable.

Direction Of Police

Chang Li-sheng, as Minister of the Interior, supervises various administrative units and has general direction of the Chinese police.

Gen. Chen Cheng is considered one of China's ablest commanders. He is popular both with the army and the people. He has won a high reputation as an administrator since he assumed the Governorship of Hupeh in 1937. He is 44.

O. K. Yui was formerly Mayor of Greater Shanghai and acted as Chinese spokesman there during the Battle of Shanghai. He became Vice-Minister of Finance in 1941. He has a good reputation as a sound, honest official.

The new Minister of Information, Wang Shih-chieh, assumes the direction of censorship. He is a close trusted adviser of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and may be able to bring about improvement in censorship conditions. He led the Chinese mission to Britain and during the last six months has been chief negotiator in discussions with the Chinese Communists.

The new Minister of Education, Chu Chia-hua, was educated in Berlin.

Chiang Control of China Strengthened by Shake-Up

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20 — (AP) Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has considerably strengthened his control of the Chinese government by his cabinet shake-up.

Whether he will use his stronger position to reorganize the army, seek improvement in China's economic and political affairs and try for cooperation with the Communists of North China is still a wide open question.

Americans Skeptical

American officials are looking for the answer but they are not looking through rose colored glasses. There is a distinct air of skepticism about the whole affair insofar as its effect on China's war effort is concerned. Some hope is felt in official quarters that the effect will be good, but fingers are crossed.

The impression here is that Chiang reorganized because of the internal crisis, which was intensified by the Stilwell affair. American General Joseph W. Stillwell, who came home at President Roosevelt's orders in response to a personal request from Chiang, was well liked by his men and by many of the officers who had worked with him.

They credited him with having accomplished a great deal for China. The break resulted basically from a long series of differences between Stilwell and Chiang over strategy and troop assignments—conflicts in which the Chinese war minister, General Ho Ying-Chinon is understood to have been a powerful influence against the vigorous conduct of the war which Stilwell sought.

The changes in Chiang's cabinet drew particular comment here:

1—Possibly the most important was the replacement of General Ho by General Chen Cheng. Chen is well liked by Americans who have fought in China, and is understood to have had the respect and friendship of General Stilwell himself.

On the other hand his position as minister of war is balanced somewhat by the fact that Ho remains as chief of staff to the Generalissimo. Since He is expected to follow one set by policies and Chen a somewhat different set, the man who will really settle the issues of China's military policy now more than ever will be Chiang Kai-shek. But the effect will be to curtail somewhat the influence of General Ho.

2—The removal of H. H. Kung as minister of finance and his replacement by O. K. Yui. Kung, like Ho, does not vanish from the administration but merely from the post in which he has gotten the blame for much of China's terrible inflation and economic crisis. He retains the vice-presidency of the executive Yuan, topmost administrative council, of which Chiang is president. Kung also remanis as president of the bank of China and the central bank of China, but the board of directors controls the presidency of the bank of China and is in turn controlled by the finance minister. The latter may enlarge its membership if he so desires to get in a new president.

Yui Good Administrator

Yui is not a financial expert but is recognized as a good administrator and a long time government official who has had close personal association with Chiang. The result of this change, therefore, probably will be further to centralize power in Chiang.

3—The transfer of Wang Shih-Chieh from the Presidium of the people's political council to the ministry of information has raised pointed speculation about its meaning in relation to the Communist problem. Wang has negotiated with the Communists for a long period to see under what circumstances collaboration between that powerfully armed northern group and the central government might be arranged in order to reinforce the fight against Japan. The fact that Wang now moves into the government seems to imply a friendlier attitude toward the Communists on the part of Chiang Kai-shek. But it is recalled here that Wang had the ministry of information about two years ago and there might not be too much significance in his return there. It could be simply that during his previous tenure he earned a reputation for enlightened censorship policies not followed up in the two year interval.

There may be some significance, too, in the fact that Wang headed the people's political council. It was the meeting of this body two months ago which finally brought into the open the mass of discontent with economic and military affairs that large sections of the Chinese people shared in. The P.P.C. was very bitter in some of its criticism and its influence apparently was mainly responsible for the present shake-up.

Chinese Shakeup Held Due To Allied Pressure

Washington, Nov. 20 (AP)—China's Cabinet shakeup, involving the removal of Gen. Ho Ying-chin as Minister of War and H. H. Kung as Minister of Finance, indicates that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek finally has yielded to Allied pressure for a housecleaning aimed at retrieving the tottering military and financial fortunes of free China.

In naming Gen. Chen Cheng to succeed Ho, the generalissimo has placed the reorganization of China's military forces in the hands of an able, forceful commander eager to adopt modern methods and willing to work closely with Americans assigned to train and equip an effective fighting army.

Settlement With Communists

Retirement of General Ho, Minister of War since 1930 and chief of staff since 1937, conceivably also may remove one of the chief stumbling blocks to a political settlement between the Central Government and the Chinese Communists.

General Ho had maintained a military blockade against Communist armies in the north. He is known as an implacable foe of the Communists and has been blamed for attacking them with some of his best divisions while they waged guerrilla warfare on the Japanese.

Ho also has been accused of delaying tactics in accepting and employing American strategy, training methods and equipment, limited as such aid is because of the necessity of flying everything into China over the Himalayan hump.

The Chungking house cleaning follows the recall of Gen. Joseph W Stilwell as American commander in the China-Burma-India area, which brought to light abroad the fact that Washington had been insisting on a reorganization of the Central Government and attempting to obtain a settlement of the Communist problem.

Organized Chinese

The new Minister of War organized the Chinese expeditionary force, which trained in southwest China under American instructors and now is fighting across the Salween river to join Allied forces pushing across Burma to reopen the Burma road.

Slight of figure, but sharp-eyed, quick and decisive, General Chen is 44 years old. He was graduated from the Paoting Military Academy in 1929 and was Vice-Minister of War in 1937. Besides extensive experience as a field commander he has been head of the political training board of the National Military Council. Since 1937 he has been Governor of invaded Hupeh province.

In the late spring of 1943 when Japanese forces raided the Tungting Lakes rice bowl and pushed into western Hupeh, General Cheng took command and turned back what might have been an enemy attack on Chungking. He had been less successful in an earlier campaign when the Japanese captured the important Yangtze river city of Ichang.

Problem Of Inflation

O. K. Yui, former Mayor of Shanghai, takes over China's runaway inflationary problems from H. H. Kung, who is now in this country.

The new Finance Minister inherits a full-blown economic and financial crisis with an attendant train of vicious speculation, black marketing and graft. Rising prices and inflated currency have been running ahead of the tons of paper money printed abroad and flown over the hump in competition with actual war materiel.

With Kung out of the Cabinet as Finance Minister the influence of the Soong family may be waning in Chungking. Kung, a descendant of Confucius, is a brother-in-law of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, who also is in the United States Madam Sun Yat-sen (Soong Ching-ling), widow of the founder of the Chinese Republic and also a sister of Madam Chiang, remains in the Chinese capital, where her good offices might help in obtaining an arrangement with the Communists. T. V. Soong, who carries the title of Foreign Minister and is regarded by many as the outstanding financial genius of China, is reported out of favor in Chungking.

Kung's retirement might mean a rise in Soong's fortunes.

It has been said often by observers that "China isn't big enough for both T. V. and H. H."

YANKS REDUCING LEYTE POSITIONS

SCHEDLER

Progress Made By Infantry In Spite Of Typhoon

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Tuesday, Nov. 21 (AP)—Lashed by the third typhoon of the Leyte Island campaign, American infantrymen fought off a new Japanese counterattack to close their grip around trapped enemy remnants in northern Ormoc corridor, headquarters reported today.

Fierce winds and walls of rain hammered the fighting fronts, disrupted communications and challenged Leyte-based American airmen who, nevertheless, took to the air for offensive and defensive action.

American infantrymen of the 32d Division are making "steady progress" in reducing strongly fortified Japanese positions near Limon, at the northern end of Leyte Island's Ormoc corridor, the headquarters report said.

The American road-block across Ormoc highway south of Limon still holds, despite heavy Japanese attack. The imperial First Division, aided by artillery and armor, is attempting to break through the trap around Limon.

Jap Raid Ineffective

Leyte-based American fighters attacked enemy communication lines and installations throughout the Ormoc corridor.

Thirty-five enemy fighters and dive bombers ineffectively raided American positions. Seven were shot down by fighters and anti-aircraft fire.

Bridges have been washed out, streams flooded and roads transformed into waterways in the new typhoon. All traffic by ground and sea is "fraught with great difficulty and hazard and battle conditions are becoming static."

Infiltration Reported

The Japanese were reported in a front-line dispatch yesterday to be infiltrating American positions on northern Leyte, around Limon and near Carigara Bay, more than two miles northward.

Small enemy forces attacked near Pinamopoan, more than two miles north and in the rear of Limon, where a considerable Nipponese force is trapped, and also east of Pinamopoan. Both attacks were repulsed.

Near Pinamopoan, northern terminus of the Ormoc road, a battalion of the 32nd Division beat off the enemy assault, reported Fred Hampson, Associated Press war correspondent at a division command post.

Strike Along Bay Coast

The other clash occurred near Capoocan, along the Carigara Bay coast about four miles east of Pinamopoan. There Nipponese units had set up machine guns which opened fire on an American column trudging through the mud toward the front. Capoocan is about midway between Pinamopoan and Carigara, Yank supply base at the northern end of Leyte valley.

45,000 Japs Slain or Wounded.

Gen. MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 20.—A storm-drenched American troops threw back vicious Japanese counter-attacks in the slow and bitter Leyte campaign as these rapid-fire developments were announced on Pacific fronts today:

1. More than 45,000 Japanese have been killed or wounded on Leyte since the October 20 invasion—a ratio of nearly eight to one against American casualties of 5,691.

2. American troops invaded another small island group, the Asia Islands off New Guinea, and completed the occupation of the three Mapia Islands 180 miles to the east.

3. Heavy American bombers scored direct hits on a battleship and a heavy cruiser at Borneo, leaving both exploding and aflame.

4. American warships, striking within 750 miles of Tokyo, have again bombarded Iwo Island.

5. A concerted three-day clean-up of Saipan netted 248 Japanese killed and forty-seven captured.

Infiltrating Japanese attacking American detachments miles behind the front lines indicated today that the enemy may attempt to encircle the American positions on northern Leyte and cut the Yanks' coastal supply road, a front-line dispatch declared this afternoon.

A small Japanese force attacked a battalion of the Thirty-second Division near Pinamopoan, on the coast of Carigara Bay, more than two miles back of Limon where a strong Japanese force is encircled. Four miles further back along the coastal road, units of the Twenty-fourth Division were attacked in the vicinity of Capoocan.

The infiltrating Japanese set up machine guns and fired at a column of Americans slogging through the mud late yesterday. Officers said that these enemy movements through torrential tropical downpours may indicate an attempt to mount an offensive. Some suggested that the Japs may attempt to encircle American held Breakneck Ridge, dominating Limon, or cut the coastal road over which supplies are laboriously hauled to the front through knee-deep mud.

A series of scattered, vicious small battles were being fought for the control of the Limon area on the northern end of the Ormoc corridor. Units of the Thirty-second Division continued frontal attacks on both sides of the road below Breakneck Ridge.

Forces on the left flank were stiffly opposed and were unable to advance. On the right American units advancing through the downpour reached the edge of Limon village, where the well-dug-in enemy continued to hold.

Smash Jap Attacks.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur gave a breakdown of American casualties in the first month of the central Philippines campaign showing 1,133 killed, 126 missing and 4,432 wounded. His figure of more than 45,000 Japanese killed or wounded did not include 8,000 believed aboard four transports and six destroyers sunk off Ormoc Bay on November 10 as American carrier planes broke up a large scale enemy reinforcement try. Nor did they include Japanese naval personnel lost during the crushing defeat of the Imperial Fleet in Philippine waters on October 25.

Nine barges, two coastal vessels and two torpedo boats were sunk by American PT boats and aircraft, and six Japanese aircraft of a force lightly raiding American ground positions were shot down by anti-aircraft fire.

Torrential rains still slowed all Leyte operations.

Landings in the Asia Islands, 130 miles north of Sorong, New Guinea, presumably will knock out Japanese lookout stations used to spot American bombing flights for northward targets. The Mapia Islands evidently were taken for this reason.

Headquarters disclosed that a British warship was the flagship for the first time in an amphibious operation in the Southwest Pacific. It led the force making the first Mapia invasion on November 15, and participated in the naval bombardment which preceded the landing.

In a new blow Gen. Tokoyuki Yamashita employed tanks and artillery in an effort to break the American block placed across the Ormoc road south of Limon by the United States 32nd and 24th Divisions, but was repulsed with heavy losses.

Japanese Slap a Boomerang

They Learn Too Late That Filipinos Resent Open-Handed Blows

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Nov. 15 (Delayed) (AP).—The Japanese can blame much of the failure of their "greater Asia" propaganda in the Philippines upon their use of the military slap.

There's no greater insult to the proud, sensitive freedom-loving Filipino people. To see one of their menfolk flush red under a stinging open-handed blow from a soldier of the emperor aroused their implacable hatred and buttressed the will of the masses to resist.

It was too late when the Japanese finally realized their mistake and ordered the soldiers to refrain from slapping civilians who were too slow in kow-towing.

Japs Hit Behind Leyte Lines

Division Command Post, Leyte, P. I., Nov. 20 (AP)—Infiltrating Japanese attacking an American detachment miles behind the front lines indicated today the Nipponese might attempt to encircle United States positions on northern Leyte and cut the Yanks' coastal supply road.

A small Japanese force attacked a battalion of the 32d Division near Pinamopoan, on the coast of Carigara Bay, more than two miles back of Limon where a strong Nipponese force is encircled.

Four miles farther back along the coastal road units of the 24th Division were attacked in the vicinity of Capoocan.

Guns Are Set Up

The infiltrating Japanese set up machine guns and fired at a column of Americans slogging through the mud late yesterday.

Officers said these enemy movements through torrential downpours may indicate an attempt to mount an offensive. Some suggested the Nipponese might attempt to encircle American-held Breakneck Ridge, dominating Limon, or cut the coastal road over which United States supplies are hauled to the front.

Battling For Limon

A series of scattered, vicious small battles were being fought for the control of the Limon area on the northern end of the Ormoc corridor. Units of the 32d Division continued frontal attacks on both sides of the road below Breakneck Ridge.

Forces on the left flank were stiffly opposed and were unable to advance. On the right American units reached the edge of Limon village, where the well-dug-in enemy continued to hold.

155 [illegible] BAGGED

At a [illegible] Air Base, Nov. 20 (A. P.).—[illegible] three American P-38 Lightnings, one of them piloted by Lieut. Wilson Ekdahl of Englishtow[illegible], N. J., quickly shot down three Japanese fighter planes which came to strafe and bomb this base a few days ago.

The quick victories of the three flyers, Lieut. T. Ekdahl, Major George Dewey of Hobart, Ind., and Second Lieut. James Moreing of San Francisco, boosted their squadron's total to 155 enemy planes, among the highest in the Southwest Pacific.

Major Thomas McGuire of Ridgewood, N. J., second ranking Army ace in the Southwest Pacific with twenty-eight kills, is leader of the squadron.

Enemy Reports Heavy Raids On Luzon

San Francisco, Nov. 20 (AP)—Three hundred American planes bombed the Japanese-held island of Luzon in the Philippines Sunday, a Tokyo broadcast recorded here declared.

"Approximately 300 carrier-based planes raided various sectors of the Philippines, including Manila, Clark Field, Lipa, Batangas and Aparri," the broadcast said.

A Tokyo broadcast reported from London said "several dozen" bombers—including B-24 Liberators—took part in the raid.

Nine Are Claimed

The Japanese claimed their interceptors shot down nine of the raiders and "damaged" one.

Domei reported that 25 Liberators had raided Legaspi, near the southern tip of Luzon, Friday. The Japanese-controlled Manila radio said American planes dropped bombs Sunday on Manila.

In another broadcast, the Japanese Domei agency said five United States B-24 bombers Sunday (Tokyo time) raided a Japanese base on Paramushiro Island, in the Kurile group.

The Japanese agency also reported American air raids on the Bonin Islands Saturday and in the northern Kuriles November 16.

Other Raids Reported

Other American air raids on Mindanao and Cebu Islands in the Philippines and Tarakan Islands, off Borneo's northeast coast, also were reported by Tokyo radio.

More than ten Liberators hit Davao, Mindanao Island, yesterday and 37 Liberators and fighters attacked Cebu Island, west of Leyte, said the broadcast.

The same broadcast reported Liberators and Lightning fighters attacked Tarakan Saturday.

Domei admitted the Tarakan raiders did "some damage in the "one-hour attack on oil fields, harbor facilities and the airfield."

Two Cruisers Claimed

Earlier Tokyo radio claimed Japanese planes sank two Allied cruisers, four submarines and three transports and left a carrier and a battleship ablaze.

The propaganda broadcast, beamed to the United States, claimed an "enemy task force" was trapped east of the Philippines Sunday (Japanese time) and the four capital ships hit in a two-day aerial attack.

Tokyo claimed the transports were sunk by suicide planes in Leyte Gulf Saturday morning. The submarines were assertedly sunk in the western Pacific the same morning.

All of these claims were unconfirmed.

Yanks Destroy 118 Jap Planes

Carrier Planes Set Fire to Two Large Cargo Ships in Manila Raid.

AIRFIELDS POUNDED

Typhoon Fails to Slow Advance of U. S. Forces on Leyte.

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 20—(AP) In their fourth strike in force this month at the Manila area, U. S. carrier planes Saturday destroyed a total of 118 Japanese planes and set fire to two large cargo ships and one large oil tanker, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

Only light Japanese fighter opposition was met as the carrier planes raked shipping and airfield targets. Ten planes were shot down in the air, eight others destroyed by fighters near the American carriers and about 100 destroyed on the ground.

731 Planes Destroyed

This increased to 731 the total enemy warplanes destroyed by Navy forces in the air or aground in the Philippines this month.

(The month's unofficial grand total for the Philippines is 921 Japanese planes destroyed, including those smashed by Army and Naval fliers under command of Gen. Douglas MacArthur).

Nimitz disclosed that Vice Adm. J. S. McCain, formerly air commander in the South Pacific and recently naval air chief in Washington, commanded the carrier task force which hit Saturday.

Despite the heavy toll exacted on enemy shipping in repeated strikes on the Manila bay area, the apparent absence of vessels there Saturday is surprising, because of Jap[illegible]s great need to keep Luzon [illegible] forced and well-supplied again[illegible] invasion threat.

Of the Third fleet toll of Japanese aircraft for this month, 716 were destroyed in the Manila area and at other bases on Luzon, the island where Manila is situated.

The total was accumulated in these strikes—Nov. 4, 191; Nov. 5 249; Nov. 12, 1[illegible]8.

In addition, 15 were destroyed and five more probably over Leyte island when carrier planes joined the attack on an enemy reinforcement attempt Nov. 10.

These figures represent the minima from communiques which, in listing the Nov. 12 strikes, added that 10 more planes might have been destroyed aground and two more in the air.

21 Jap Ships Sunk

Carrier planes have sunk 21 Japanese ships, probably sunk three and damaged six in Manila bay during this month. They added seven more sunk, two probably and one damaged around Leyte, for a total of 40 sunk or damaged and thereby lost, at least temporarily, to the vital imperial merchant fleet in the Philippines.

Nimitz also announced new raids by land-based aircraft ranging from the Kurile islands to equatorial Nauru on Nov. 17 and 18.

Marine fighters hit a fuel dump and other storage areas on Babelthuap, largest of the Palau islands, and sank two barges there.

Other targets included Koror town, in the Palaus; the airfield on Yap; Kita, on Iwo island in the Volcano group of the Bonins; Suribachi in the Kuriles, the phosphate plant on Rota in the Marianas, and the power station on Nauru in the Carolines, where an explosion was observed.

10 SHIPS LOST IN PACIFIC

Destroyer, 2 Escort Destroyers, 7 Smaller Craft In List

Washington, Nov. 20 (AP)—Loss of one destroyer, two destroyer escorts and seven lesser craft in the Pacific was announced by the navy tonight.

Of the total of 10 vessels, the communique said, seven were lost through enemy action or the perils of the sea in the Philippines area.

Not In Big Battles

But it was specified that they were not casualties of the big battles of October 24-25. The others went down in the New Guinea area.

Losses in Philippines waters were the destroyer Abner Read, the destroyer escort Eversole, the mine sweeper YMS 70, PT's 320 and 321, the fleet tug Sonoma, and the landing craft (infantry) 1065.

The other vessels were the destroyer escort Shelton and the PT's 368 and 371.

Six Previously Listed

[The Department previously had reported the loss of six ships in the Philippines battle of Oct. 24-25, including a light carrier, two escort carriers and a destroyer escort].

Today's announcement brings the total loss of navy ships of all types since the beginning of the war to 228.

The 2,100-ton destroyer Abner Read, built at San Francisco and commissioned last year, was skippered by Commander Arthur M. Purdy, of Port Chester, N. Y. No casualty status was given for him.

Commissioned Last Spring

The destroyer escort Eversole, built at Houston, Texas, was commissioned last spring. The commander, Lieut. George E. Marix, of Los Angeles, was reported wounded.

The destroyer escort Shelton, also built at Houston and commissioned last spring, was commanded by Lieut. Com. Lewis G. Salon, whose wife lives at Linfield, Pa. He now is in this country on leave.

The mine sweeper was commanded by Lieut. (j.g.) Orson L. Blackett, of Salt Lake City. No casualty status was reported for him.

Washington Officer Skipper

Lieut. Walter R. Wurzler, of Johnson City, N. Y., was commander of the tug Sonoma. No casualty status was reported.

The landing craft was commanded by Lieut. Rudolph F. Liste, of Riggs road, Washington, N. E., who was reported wounded.

Lieut. George W. M. Hogan, of Chicago, commander of P-T 320, is reported missing in action. No casualty status was reported for the three other P-T commanders, Lieut. Robert C. Snow, of 5719 Chevy Chase Parkway, Washington; Ensign Louis Thomas, of New Orleans, and Lieut (j. g.) Robert J. Lyon, of Jefferson, Iowa.

How Pursuers Were Pursued, In Sea Battle Is Told

By Charles McMurtry

One Marylander is mentioned in the following dispatch.

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Nov. 20 (AP)—The story of one of the world's strangest naval battles—in which the victors fled from the vanquished and battleships turned tail to run from destroyers—has been told by a naval observer who watched it all in San Bernardino straits of the Philippines.

The observer, whose name the navy would not release for publication, watched the strange fight from the bridge of the escort carrier Natoma Bay—a ship which itself once seemed doomed but lived to see the dooming force running away.

The fight was one of the three facets of the widespread action in the second battle of the Philippines Sea. Involved with the Natoma Bay were 15 other American escort carriers—none of which could make more than about 20 knots and none of which ever was intended to be involved in a surface action. Their only protection was a number of destroyers and the planes which the carriers could launch.

Heavy Jap Power

Against this, said the observer yesterday, the Japanese sent through the straits on October 24 a fleet of four battleships, eight heavy cruisers and at least ten destroyers. They had also land-based aircraft.

The Japanese fleet had a speed of at least 30 knots and almost immediately damaged the American Gambier Bay, which took a big shell, knocking out one engine, and then was overtaken by the whole enemy task force while she tried to limp away. The Japanese vessels pulled to point-blank range and at their leisure pumped shells into the dying American vessel until she sank. Nevertheless, the observer said, many of the crew were saved.

St. Lo Hit

The American carriers were trying desperately to flee; but one of them—the St. Lo—failed to make its getaway. Only a few miles from the scene of the Gambier Bay tragedy, the St. Lo was hit and fires started aboard. The crew went over the side and an American destroyer dared the deadly Japanese fire to pick up the survivors as they swam. The St. Lo sank almost immediately.

By this time—the battle had started in the early morning—it was 9 A. M., and the carriers were still trying to get away. The observer, a naval officer, said the line of ships under full steam spread many miles across the sea, while their planes launched savage attacks against the Japanese vessels.

The carriers, the observer said, were being "heavily shelled by Jap cruisers and battleships. The situation looked almost hopeless."

Gunning For Natoma Bay

Shells from the leading Japanese warship began falling inside the American destroyer screen protecting the retirement. Some were just aft of the Natoma Bay, and the observer noted that various enemy vessels used vari-colored tracers—red, green, yellow and purple—better to get the range on individual American ships. Green shells fell around the Natoma Bay, and the officer said the hits spouted "plumes of water, a beautiful irridiscent green in the clean sunlight against the dark blue sea."

Suddenly, the situation changed. The Japanese force split and turned away after torpedo planes hit and sank at least one enemy cruiser and hit other ships.

For hours the planes battled the enemy ships. Against the heaviest flak, Lieut. (j.g.) Leon S. Convr, of Eufala, Ala., made three separate runs on a battleship and two cruisers. On his first run his torpedo failed to release, so he turned from the battleship to a near-by cruiser and torpedoed her. Then, as he cleared the anti-aircraft, another Avenger pilot asked him over the interplane radio to strafe a vessel ahead of him. Conner did, raking a cruiser with his machine guns. As he came out of his run he looked back, saw the second pilot (not identified) send his torpedo into the ship's vitals, then fall flaming into the water.

Observer Kept Diary

All day it went on. Pilots returned to their ships, refueled and took off again. The observer, who kept a written account made during the action, had this final entry:

"The Japanese force has been whipped by our planes. Japanese ships lie crippled in pools of oil. The surviving ships are running for their lives, leaving wounded vessels behind. The battle has turned and we are no longer the pursued, but the pursuers. A Japanese battleship, a cruiser and a destroyer are ignored by our pursuing airplanes as they lie crippled in the sea. We are harrying them in their retreat."

The Japanese made one more attempt to finish off the carrier force. More than 40 land-based enemy aircraft came out, but turned back after the fleet fighters and anti-aircraft gunners shot down 16.

Meanwhile, carriers from Admiral Halsey's third fleet, maneuvering far north of the San Bernardino action, had been detached. Their planes aided the escort carrier planes in hunting down and destroying or damaging every one of the enemy vessels which had come through the straits.

Marylander In Command

In connection with the interview, the navy disclosed the names of the captains of the escort carriers. Among them was Capt. Fitzhugh Lee, USN, commander of the Manila Bay, the son of Mrs. George Mason Lee, formerly of Chattolanee, in the Green Spring Valley. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1926.

Prior to the United States entry into the war and at the time of his marriage to the former Miss Elizabeth Hill, of Annapolis, Captain Lee was serving in Venezuela as a naval attache.

Men of War Study To Be Men of God

SOMEWHERE IN THE PACIFIC,—(AP) From the general awareness of God and religion that comes to men in combat has sprung a small but flourishing seminary whose students are Fourth Marine Division veterans of Saipan and Tinian.

The class meets for two hours twice a week and the interest of the men is accented by the fact that because of other duties it is often very difficult to make the classes.

Not all the men attending are sure that they want to enter the ministry or missionary work after the war, but this a possibility and in the meantime they are advancing their knowledge of religious matters.

One student actually tranferred from a behind-the-lines outfit to an assault infantry company because he believes that manifestations of the Divine Will are more frequent in the front lines.

Another decided to become a missionary to Japan after witnessing Jap brutality at Saipan. "Somebody has to give these people the Word," he says, "and I figure it might as well be me.

4 EXECUTED IN BOLIVIA AFTER PLOT IS QUELLED

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Nov. 20—(AP) Four men were executed today in the city of Oruro for an unsuccessful attempt to overthrow the government of President Gualberto Villaroel, it was announced by the government radio.

They were identified as Colonels Eduardo Blanco and Fernando Carron and two civilians, Miguel Brito and Fernando Loyaza Beltran.

A government communique said loyal troops had entered Oruro and "received a hearty ovation from the people."

The newspaper El Diario said former president Gen. Carlos Quintanilla was under arrest along with a former defense minister, Gen. Miguel Candia, and two other former cabinet members in previous administrations.

Superfortress Raid on Japan Hits Industries

B-29s From China Attack Kyushu; Carrier Planes Strike Manila in Force

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1 (Tuesday).—"A large task force" of B-29 Superfortress bombers hit the island of Kyushu in Japan's homeland today.

Flying from China, the big planes dropped their explosives against industrial targets, said an announcement by General H. H. Arnold.

Kyushu is the southernmost of the Japanese home islands. On it is Omura, a big aircraft center. Omura was among the spots hit Nov. 11 when the Superfortresses completed their seventh mission in twenty-seven days.

Announcement of today's attack was made in these words: "A large task force of B-29 aircraft from the 20th Air Force today attacked industrial targets on the Island of Kyushu, in the Japanese home land, General H. H. Arnold, in his capacity as commanding general of the 20th Air Force, announced at the War Department.

The mission was carried out from China bases by Major General Curtis E. Lemay's 20th Bomber Command. A communique will be issued when further details are available."

NO CELEBRATION ASKED AFTER DEFEAT OF NAZIS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—(AP) Congress will be asked to go on record against any celebration of "victory" when Germany surrenders.

Rep. Brehm (R-Ohio) said today he will introduce a resolution calling on the country to "remember that V-E day will not mean the end of war."

"We still will have the Japanese to subdue," Brehm added in an interview. "And it would be in bad taste at home and unfair to our fighting men in the Pacific to engage in happy celebrations."

PEARL HARBOR PROBE SOUGHT

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) Would Hear Kimmel, Short

Washington, Nov. 20 (AP)—Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) suggested tonight that those in command at the time be called as the first witnesses if the Senate orders an independent inquiry into the Pearl Harbor attack.

Ferguson proposed such an inquiry by a five-member special Senate committee in a resolution drafted for introduction tomorrow.

It calls for "a full and complete" investigation into the sneak Japanese attack.

Limitation Statute Waived

Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short have waived the two-year statute of limitations as a bar to possible courtsmartial on dereliction of duty charges.

Ferguson said he would offer his resolution tomorrow along with a report from the Judiciary Committee approving another six months' extension—from December 7, of the deadline for institution of court-martial proceedings.

"The lips of Admiral Kimmel and General Short have been sealed for three years because of the war," Ferguson said. "They should be allowed to tell their story and to offer supporting witnesses.

"It may be advisable to have the committee hold closed hearings until after the war is over. But these two should be given the opportunity to make the record before witnesses die or memories become dim."

Even if army and navy inquiries should be completed before December 7, Ferguson said, "the way should be kept open for proceedings against others not reached by these investigations."

"It also has been pointed out that the State and other departments could not be compelled to furnish evidence to the army and navy. A Senate committee could get the facts through its subpœna powers."

Kimmel Wants Open Trial

In a letter to Ferguson last May, Admiral Kimmel asked for "a free, open and public trial," and declared the report of the Roberts commission "does not tell the while story of Pearl Harbor."

The commission, headed by Justice Owen J. Roberts of the Supreme Court, made an inquiry under orders from President Roosevelt and reported "dereliction of duty" on the part of Kimmel and Short.

40 Million War-Cargo Tons Shipped By ASF In Year

Washington, Nov. 20 (AP)—The Army service forces, the "iron link between industrial America and her fighting man, "shipped forty million tons of cargo to war in the last fiscal year.

At the same time 2,600,000 passengers, largely troops, were sent overseas, Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, commander of the ASF, said today in his report for the year ended last June.

In the previous fiscal year 19,000,000 tons were shipped and 1,200,000 passengers transported.

One Of Several Agencies

Moreover, Somervell said, the ASF is only one of several agencies through which the total of American war production is transmitted to American and Allied fighting forces.

The European theaters received about 60 per cent. of all army cargo in the last year and the Pacific 40 per cent. About 70 per cent of all soldiers went across the Atlantic.

Gasoline and oil made up about half of all the cargo. In July 1943 about 160 ships were required and 300 a year later.

Of $98,000,000,000 spent for the war in the fiscal year, army expenditures amounted to $52,000,000,000, with ASF spending $39,000,000,000 and army air forces $13,000,000,000.

While meeting American needs, ASF also furnished $5,400,000,000 worth to the United Kingdom and "completely equipped and continued to supply a large French army," Somervell said.

Russia alone was sent 115,000 trucks and 8,000 combat vehicles, including 2,000 tanks—a total of $1,500,000,000 worth of materiel.

62 P. C. To United Kingdom

The United Kingdom received 62 per cent. of all lend-lease military supplies and Russia 25 per cent.

Somervell said that, while notable progress has been made in production and distribution of supplies, the swiftly changing needs of war and expanding operations have caused shortages in the field, including heavy artillery and its ammunition, trucks, tires and tractors.

Washington, Nav. 20 (AP)—The submarine Guardfish has been awarded a second Presidential unit citation for attacks on heavily escorted convoys of Japanese shipping.

A previous citation had been conferred for earlier action by the submarine. The Guardfish, at the time ofher eighth patrol, was skippered by Lieut. Com. Norvell G. Ward, of Indianhead, Md. His wife is living in Roanoke, Va.

World Council Seat Suggested For Roosevelt

Capital Hears President May Serve as Delegate While in Present Office

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20 (AP)—The possible selection of President Roosevelt as the American delegate to the proposed International Security Council is being suggested in Administration circles.

According to this idea the President would continue in office while taking on the new post, thus setting a precedent which his successors might wish to follow.

Proponents said today the advantages of picking the Chief Executive as United States member of the planned eleven-man peace council would be:

1. It would dramatize the peace organization for the American people.

2. The President of the United States would lend prestige to the council, and this would give his voice added weight in its deliberations.

3. He could make quick decisions without referring them home, and might be better able to get Congressional and popular support for actions of the international agency than another representative.

Officials suggested that a deputy delegate would be named also, so that the council could be in continuous session without requiring prolonged absences of the Chief Executive from his domestic duties.

Since the question is receiving attention in Washington, it is considered probable that Mr. Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin will discuss at their forthcoming meeting the level on which the peace council should be organized.

Presumably, if President Roosevelt represented the United States, the other chiefs of state would represent their governments.

The still-unsettled problem of how to choose the representative undoubtedly will be taken up with Congress and a formula may be included when supporting legislation for the Dumbarton Oaks plan is introduced.

One possibility is an executive-legislative committee to advise the United States representatives on the council, although the Dumbarton Oaks plan contemplates that he will be free to take specific decisions without submitting them for Congressional approval.

SECURITY PLAN DRIVE STARTED

State Department Carries On Educational Campaign.

Washington, Nov. 20 (A. P.).—Acting Secretary of State Stettinius reported today that the State Department has launched an educational campaign in behalf of the Dumbarton Oaks plan for world security organization.

At his press conference he gave a list of questions together with the answers given them by the State Department for distribution to educational and other groups over the country interested in the subject.

The State Department's answers to the questions appeared to be drawn entirely from the text of the Dumbarton Oaks plan which was made available upon its completion several weeks ago. There was one point, however, involving the relationship among great and small states which had not been covered in the plan itself.

The question was "why should the United States, Great Britain, the Soviet Union, China and France have permanent seats on the security council?"

The Department's Answer.

"It is necessary," the State Department said, "and inevitable, that primary responsibility for maintaining international peace and security should rest upon those States which, by reason of their capacity and resources, are in the best position to exercise that responsibility most effectively."

It was explained, also, that the smaller States would have six non-permanent seats on the security council to give a total membership of eleven nations.

Mr. Stettinius said that Secretary Hull, who is still at Navy Medical Center, is getting along very well.

Mr. Stettinius also issued a statement reporting on the recent trip of Ambassador Joseph C. Grew, director of the Office of Far Eastern Affairs, to the Pacific. The statement said that Mr. Grew had a free exchange of views with Admiral Chester W. Nimitz and the officers of his command and expected as a result to have closer co-ordination between the Pacific forces and the State Department.

HEARINGS BEGUN ON EXTENSION OF WAR POWERS ACT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20 — (AP) A one-year's extension of the Second War Powers act—keystone of the war production and rationing program — started on its way through Congress today.

A sub-committee reported the extension to the House Judiciary committee without recommendation after a one-day hearing. That means any changes in the act must be worked out by the full committee which meets Wednesday.

No Trouble Seen

Although the sub-committee's action did not give the measure formal approval, there was every indication that it will have no trouble getting through the short session of Congress. There may be minor changes.

Without a renewal the War Powers act would expire at the close of this year. Administration spokesmen say the renewal is needed to keep the war production program intact until the end of hostilities.

John Lord O'Brien, chief counsel for the War Production board, told the committee today the act made possible "the entire structure of war controls which made possible America's unmatched achievement in war production."

He asked that the bill be renewed without change because industry and the public have become accustomed to the economic controls as they stand.

O'Brien estimated that the War Production board phase of the act alone has a daily application on a quarter of a million industrial concerns in the United States. It affects in the United States. It affects "hundreds of thousands of transactions weekly," he said.

Authority for OPA

In addition to WPB, the act is authority for the Office of Price Administration's rationing program and for the war powers of the War Food administration and other government agencies.

The House Military committee today approved a bill which would extend for the war's duration the Office of Undersecretary of War. That office will go out of existence Dec. 31 unless renewed.

Hearings on the War Powers act were the principal development in the short session of Congress today, the Senate having adjourned out of respect to the late Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith, veteran Democratic senator from South Carolina who died Friday.

Tomorrow the House takes up a Crop Insurance bill, ticketed for passage on the so-called "non-controversial" agenda of the Seventy Eighth Congress' closing session. The program was killed in 1943 by a Congress which decided it was too costly after its provisions had been applied to cotton and wheat.

A House committee on executive agencies recommended a streamlined Congressional procedure today designed to straighten out many of the tortuous channels through which legislation now must pass.

The committee suggested:

A joint legislative staff of both branches of Congress to cut down the time needed for committee hearings; a joint appropriations committee to cut in half the separate investigations now made by both branches; a joint committee to keep tab on the conduct of administrative and executive agencies; a joint committee to recommend improvements in congressional procedure.

WAR LOAN DRIVE OFF TO GOOD START

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20 — (AP) The Sixth War Loan drive was launched today in bad weather over large sections of the country but good spirit throughout the land.

Treasury officials said that as yet they've seen no signs of the war complacency that had been feared in connection with the $14,000,000,000 borrowing campaign.

There were no figures available on today's bond sales. No one could say whether rain and snow had caused large numbers of volunteer doorbell-ringing salesmen to postpone their best efforts until tomorrow.

But Ted Gamble, national director of the drive, told reporters, "we have had no more auspicious launching." Judging by the unprecedented enthusiasm and determination of the volunteers and of the cooperating agencies—such as banks—Gamble said:

"We believe we're off to a good start."

From one end of the country to the other, great parades, pageants, realistic war demonstrations, rallies, and variety shows were held today and tonight. Ten counties, led by Prairie county, Montana, (population 2,051) surpassed their quotas even before today's opening. Five of the ten are in Montana.

Edward N. Scheiberling, national commander of the American Legion, issued a statement saying "our privations and sacrifices are as nothing" compared with those of the men at the front, and "no American ought to let them down."

He said that perhaps a year or two years will pass before victory, but "even if victory were to come tomorrow, we would have to pay, feed, clothe and hospitalize our men for some time to come, because demobilization cannot be instantaneous."

War finance headquarters announced that five national heroes are devoting themselves to the sale of Sixth War Loan bonds: Maj. Samuel Gracio, Maj. Don S Gentile, Capt. Raymond Wild, Lt. Col. Roswell Rosengren, and Maj. Allen V. Martini.

DENIES ALIEN RUMOR

Washington, Nov. 20 (A. P.).—Edward J. Shaughnessy, special assistant to the Immigration Commissioner, told the House Immigration Committee today that rumors that thousands of European refugees are entering this country illegally are false. He appeared to submit a report asked in a resolution by Representative Hoffman (R.-Mich.).

The report said that no figures on refugees were available because there was no legal definition of the term. It said that 7,497 aliens arrived at LaGuardia Field and 32,167 at Miami between July 1, 1943, and May 30, 1944.

The committee approved legislation by Representative Mason (D-Ill.), to waive naturalization language requirements for aliens who have sons or daughters in the United States Armed Forces, or who are over fifty and had lived in this country continuously since 1924.

Roosevelt, Three Ambassadors Confer

Washington, Nov. 20 (AP) — Ambassadors to three countries still under Nazi domination had appointments with President Roosevelt today to say farewell before leaving for their diplomatic posts.

They were Arthur Bliss Lane, Ambassador to Poland; Stanley Hornbeck, envoy to the Netherlands, and Lithgow Osborne, Ambassador to Norway.

ARMY CASUALTIES

Washington, Nov. 20 (A. P.).—The War Department announced today the names of 2,320 casualties in the European area. Included in the list are the following with their next of kin:

American Immunity

Washington, Nov. 20 (AP)—A navy medical officer reports that on his hospital ship there were 284 Japanese and 384 Americans, all wounded in the same engagement. The Japanese developed 14 cases of tetanus, ten of them fatal. The Americans, who had been vaccinated, had none.

Would Continue Post

Washington, Nov. 20 (AP)—Legislation continuing the position of Under Secretary of War until six months after hostilities end was approved today by the House Military Committee. The office will expire December 31 unless Congress acts.

1944

TREASURY WILL STOP BURNING OLD CURRENCY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20 — (AP) The Treasury announced today it is going to stop burning up worn and mutilated currency, bonds and stamps.

Instead, the stuff will be mashed up by new machinery which is being installed. This will produce daily about five tons of high-grade pulp.

Treasury officials said elimination of the fiery furnace in which billions of dollars have gone up in smoke is designed to add to the short supply of raw materials.

Jap-Americans Now in 47 States

Washington, Nov. 20 (A. P.).—Japanese - Americans evacuated from the West Coast have been relocated in all States except South Carolina, the War Relocation Authority reported today.

A summary of the distribution of 29,740 civilian evacuees, as of November 15, shows that each of eleven States has absorbed more than 5,000 persons. Two-thirds of those relocated are American citizens. Illinois, with 8,085 evacuees, tops the list. Chicago alone has 6,593.

Cigarette-War Bond 'Tie-In Sale' Illegal

Washington, Nov. 20 (AP)—It isn't legal for a merchant to make the sale of cigarettes contingent upon the customer buying a war bond.

This is the answer of the Office of Price Administration to a question prompted by a proposal of some merchants to sell a carton of scarce cigarettes to a customer buying a war bond.

That is what OPA calls a "tie-in sale." And such sales—requiring a customer to buy one thing in order to buy another—aren't legal.

LEAD OF ROOSEVELT STAYS OVER 3,000,000

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20 — (AP) Latest totals of the popular vote in the Nov. 7 election stood today: Roosevelt 24,396,261, Dewey 21,267,416. The total of the two major parties was 45,663,477.

The official canvass of the vote in the states is proceeding according to their laws and it is expected they will not be completed before mid-December. A final table of the official vote then will be compiled by the Associated Press.

President Plans Public Health Gain From War

Dr. Bush, Research Head, to Map Application of Science's Work to Peace

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20 (AP).—President Roosevelt proposed today continuation of war-time scientific research into the post-war world to improve national health, stimulate employment, and to better national living standards.

Mr. Roosevelt's views were expressed in a letter to Dr. Vannevar Bush, director of the Office of Scientific Research and Development, which has co-ordinated scientific knowledge and applied it to important war-time technical problems.

Mr. Roosevelt asked Dr. Bush to submit recommendations on these four points:

What can be done to give the world as soon as possible the scientific contributions made to the war effort?

With particular respect to combating disease, what can be done now to organize for the future the work which has been done in medicine and related sciences?

What can the government do to aid public and private research activities?

What can be done to establish an effective program for discovering and developing scientific talent in American youth to assure progress on a level comparable to that during the war?

Text of Roosevelt's Letter

The President's letter to Dr. Bush follows:

The Office of Scientific Research and Development, of which you are the director, represents a unique experiment of teamwork and cooperation in co-ordinating scientific research and in applying existing scientific knowledge to the solution of the technical problems paramount in war. Its work has been conducted in the utmost secrecy and carried on without public recognition of any kind; but its tangible results can be found in the communiques coming in from the battlefronts all over the world. Some day the full story of its achievements can be told.

There is, however, no reason why the lessons to be found in this experiment cannot be profitably employed in time of peace. The information, the techniques and the research experience developed by the Office of Scientific Research and Development and by the thousands of scientists in the universities and in private industry should be used in the days of peace ahead for the improvement of the national health, the creation of new enterprises bringing new jobs, and the betterment of the national standard of living.

It is with that objective in mind that I would like to have your recommendations on the following four major points:

First: What can be done, consistent with military security, and with the prior approval of the military authorities, to make known to the world as soon as possible the contributions which have been made during our war effort to scientific knowledge?

Would Provide Jobs, Too

The diffusion of such knowledge should help us stimulate new enterprises, provide jobs for our returning service men and other workers and make possible great strides for the improvement of the national well-being.

Second: With particular reference to the war of science against disease, what can be done now to organize a program for continuing in the future the work which has been done in medicine and related sciences?

The fact that the annual deaths in this country from one or two diseases alone are far in excess of the total number of lives lost by us in battle during this war should make us conscious of the duty we owe future generations.

Third: What can the government do now and in the future to aid research activities by public organizations? The proper roles of public and of private research, and their interrelation, should be carefully considered.

Fourth: Can an effective program be proposed for discovering and developing scientific talent in American youth so that the continuing future of scientific research in this country may be assured on a level comparable to what has been done during the war?

New frontiers of the mind are before us, and if they are pioneered with the same vision, boldness and drive with which we have waged this war we can create a fuller and more fruitful employment and a fuller and more fruitful life.

I hope that, after such consultation as you may deem advisable with your associates and others, you can let me have your considered jjuidgment on these matters as soon as convenient—reporting on each when you are ready, rather than waiting for completion of your studies in all.

Very sincerely yours,
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Court Rules Campaign Expenses Not Deductible from Income Tax

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—(AP) Here's bad news for political office seekers: You can't deduct campaign expenses in computing your federal income tax.

The Supreme court by 5-4 vote laid down that rule today in turning down an appeal by Michael F. McDonald of Ashley, Pa., who sought to deduct $13,207 for expenses of his campaign for election to a county judgeship in 1939. McDonald ran for the office after completing a brief appointive term.

The opinion, by Justice Frankfurter, said that McDonald's campaign costs "were not expenses incurred in being a judge but in trying to be a judge for the next 10 years."

Frankfurter said McDonald's argument that since he was defeated, his expenses should be deductible as loss incurred in "transaction entered into for profit" deserved "no more than short shrift."

"It's nicest to say that petitioner's (McDonald's) money was not spent to buy the election, but to buy the opportunity to persuade the electors," Frankfurter said.

Justice Black, dissenting, argued that as long as campaign expenses are legitimate, ordinary and necessary, Congress intended that they could be deducted for income tax purposes. He said the majority opinion "permits a discriminatory penalty to be imposed on taxpayers who work for the state, counties, municipalities or the federal government."

Justices Reed, Douglas and Murphy concurred in Black's dissent.

In another tax case, the court held 7-2 that a man and wife may not split their total income 50-50 for federal income tax purposes under Oklahoma's optional community property law.

Under the Oklahoma law, adopted in 1939, the husband and wife may elect to come under its provisions.

The majority opinion by Justice Roberts drew a distinction between the Oklahoma law and those in eight other states where long-standing community property divisions apply automatically to married persons.

Justice Roberts said Oklahoma actually had not created a policy different from the state's pre-1939 system. He declared that "the most that can be said is that the present policy of Oklahoma is permit spouses, by contract, to alter a status which they would otherwise have under the prevailing property system in the state."

Justice Douglas, in a dissent, joined by Justice Black, argued that the court was discriminating against Oklahoma.

He said that if the legislature and judiciary of a state "declare that the husband has lost and the wife acquired a 'property' interest by a certain act (whether by marriage or by the filing of a paper) it is the 'law' though it is a recent pronouncement and not an 'inveterate' and long standing rule of that particular state."

In other actions today, the court:

Agreed to review the constitutionality of an Alabama law prohibiting labor unions from collecting money "as a work permit or as a condition for the privilege to work." Union dues and initiation fees are exempt from the prohibition.

Refused to grant the appeal of Robert E. Lee Foulkes, negro, train cook, convicted and sentenced to death in the "lower 13" murder of Mrs. Martha Virginia James, wife of a Navy ensign. She was fatally stabbed as she lay in a pullman berth—number 13 lower—as her train passed through Oregon in 1943.

QUICK DECISION ON WAGE BOOSTS IS SEEN BY DAVIS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—(AP) Chairman William H. Davis of the War Labor board said tonight that he hoped for a decision this week on some of the pay demands of the C.I.O. steelworkers.

He emphasized that if any raise should be given they would have to be on the basis of "inequities," and would have nothing to do with breaking the Little Steel Formula. He said any talk now of what an award might contain would be "pure speculation."

One source close to the board—not Davis—said that in his opinion the board might decide on something that would average out to five or ten cents an hour.

Discussing action as probable, before the end of the present C.I.O. convention in Chicago, this source said more pay might be ordered for night shift differentials and increased vacation benefits.

The main demand of the steelworkers is 17 cents an hour, with auxiliary demand on numerous other issues. The board has ruled that issue out of consideration, since more base wages for the steelworkers would go beyond the Little Steel Formula. That base of the Administration's pay policy limits general raises, in compensation for increased living costs, to 15 per cent of the rates in effect January 1, 1941.

The whole question of a break in the Little Steel Formula has been checked to the White House.

Since the greater part of a Steel plant's force usually rotates on night shifts, shift differential pay would reach nearly everybody, as would a vacation benefit boost.

The discussion of quick action on the steelworkers demands arose as American Federation of Labor representatives decided to resume their participation in the case.

George Meany, A.F.L. secretary-treasurer, and Matthew Woll, A.F.L. vice president, the Federation's members of the board, walked out on the case late in October, contending that nothing should be done of the individual demands of the C.I.O. steelworkers union until a decision has been made on an over-all wage increase policy.

Robert J. Watt, international representative of the A.F.L., however, sat in on the steel case today bearing proxies from both Meany and Woll, who are at the A.F.L. convention in New Orleans.

The steelworkers, in addition to their demand for 17 cents an hour made 13 auxiliary demands, including a guaranteed annual wage, paid vacations and holidays, greater pay for night work, and group insurance for their members numbering about 485,000.

The source which predicted a partial grant of the day demands also foresaw more liberal vacation allowances as a possibility.

Meanwhile, it was learned that public members of the WLB have completed their studies for a factual report to President Roosevelt on general pay increases since the war began. It has been announced that the report will make no recommendations but merely present the situation as the WLB members see it.

Quick action in getting the report before the President was expected.

HOUSE APPROVES OF HIGHWAY BILL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—(AP) A $1,500,000,000 postwar highway building measure got a go ahead signal in the House today.

Despite objections of Reps. Wolcott (R-Mich.) and Mott (R-Ore.), the Rules committee voted to have the House consider the bill immediately after disposal of crop insurance legislation.

Acting Chairman Cox (D-Ga.) said he expected the roads measure would come up Wednesday and be finished Friday. The Senate already had passed its version, calling for expenditure of $1,350,000,000, so differences will have to be adjusted later.

Wolcott termed the bill "the most atrocious ever reported out by a committee" and said "our knowledge of postwar needs is not yet adequate enough to require passage of such a measure."

Mott said a $3,000,000,000 allocation should be voted and opposed the bill on the grounds that "it is a puny thing."

Roads committee Chairman Robinson) (D-Utah) declared "it is essential that we decide now on what funds are to be used and how they are to be allocated, because state legislatures meet in January and they must start making their plans based on what we are going to do." He estimated the bill would provide employment for at least 1,000,000 men.

Both the Senate version and the Proposed House draft would spread the Federal allocation over a three year period.

The Senate bill would require states to match funds on a 50-50 basis, while the House measure would make the Federal share 60 per cent the first year and 50 per cent thereafter.

Churchill Warns President on Rain

Albany, Nov. 20 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Winston Churchill wants President Roosevelt to keep out of the rain.

The Rt. Rev. G. Ashton Oldham, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Albany, who returned yesterday from an overseas mission, says Mr. Churchill gave him this message for the President:

"Tell your President not to go out in the rain. I know what he'd say if I did it."

War Blamed For Foot Ailment Increase

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 20 (AP)—Dr. Hanley L. Collins, of Columbus, Ohio, says "wartime conditions have increased America's foot ailments 75 per cent." because of "interior types of nonrationed shoes, increased activities and long hours standing at work in war plants."

Speaking yesterday at a conference of the New York State Podiatry Society's upstate division, he described a treatment for sprained ankles which was developed by the British army. The foot is injected with a local anesthetic, he said, enabling the injured person to walk immediately with no ill effects.

Food Shortage Seen in Boston Trucking Strike

Officials Report Holiday Supplies Are Re-Routed; ServicesMay Be Called In

BOSTON, Nov. 20 (AP).—Massachusetts officials of the Division of Necessaries of Life indicated tonight that a critical food situation for Thanksgiving might result from continuance of an eight-day strike involving thousands of truck drivers.

Massachusetts officials declared themselves stymied after another day of attempts to bring together two factions of Local 25 of the Brotherhood of Teamsters to settle an intra-union conflict over an election of officers.

A Boston Chamber of Commerce official declared that "entire carloads of turkeys, meat and other food, originally marked for this city, are being re-routed elsewhere as shippers feared delivery failure."

James T. Moriarty, State Commissioner of Labor, said that there "were indications that state, Army and Navy may take over hauling of badly needed foodstuffs," while Saul Wallen, chairman of the War Labor Board, announced that W. L. B. action could be expected, but declined to comment further.

'Battle Of Statler' Principal Marries Baltimore WAVE

Annapolis, Nov. 20 (AP)—The wedding of Lieut. (j. g.) Frances M. Steen, of the WAVES, and Lieut. Com. James H. Suddeth, one of the two naval officers involved in the "battle of the Statler," took place tonight in St. Andrew's Chapel at the Naval Academy.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Steen, of Baltimore. She was attended by Miss Elinor Sieck, of Baltimore, as maid of honer; Miss Mary Reed, of Boston, and Miss Mary Hope Sieck and Miss Mary Randall, of Baltimore, as bridesmaids.

Commander Suddeth's best man was Hubert Lesley, of Miami, Fla., and Capt. W. N. Thomas, academy chaplain, performed the ceremony. The couple will make their home in Washington.

Commander Suddeth, of Greer, N. C., and a fellow officer reported they were assaulted by unionists in the lobby of the Statler Hotel, Washington, following President Roosevelt's campaign address at the teamsters' dinner when they refused to state their choice in the Presidential race.

INCREASED WAGES SOUGHT BY AFL AT CONVENTION

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 20—(AP) William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, sounded a keynote of higher wage scales in opening the annual convention of the AFL here today in Municipal auditorium.

He declared that higher wages were justified for labor to maintain prosperity in the postwar world because of technological developments which enable the individual worker to produce more goods.

The workers of America must produce the income to pay the public debt and obligations of the war, Green said, "and they cannot do it if they do not have the wages."

"The goods which must be sold to keep the nation's economy going can be sold only by putting into the hands of those who buy the money to buy them," Green said.

The head of AFL, without calling the CIO by name, appealed in his address for "those who left the home of labor to come back and unite with us."

"If there ever was a time when labor should be united it is now," Green said, adding that "labor will pay the penalty after the war for this division in its ranks."

"I hope the erring ones will return," he said. "If we stand as one we can meet the common enemy on equal terms."

Under reconversion to jobs, Green said that the AFL now had more than 1,500,000 members in the armed forces, and that on their return "practically all" unions would admit them as new members without the payment of initiation fees.

And, he said, "there will be no lines drawn between the civilian workers and the service man. They will be our comrades and we will be theirs."

On the home front, Green declared that there were "7,000,000 members of the army of production who also had been sharing the sacrifices of war." Because, he said, "more men have been injured and killed in workshops, mills, mines and factories than on the battlefields."

He declared in conclusion that the AFL "still favors the capitalistic system" and that it "will adhere strictly to the economic policy which it espoused from the beginning, and which was so ably championed by Samuel Gompers."

Green's address was one of several major talks on opening day of the two-week convention which is expected to lay labor's groundwork for the postwar conversion period.

Others included secretary of labor Frances Perkins who urged labor and industry to cooperate in a mutual program of cooperation and good will; Lt.-Gen. Brehon Somervell, commanding general of the army service forces, who declared production for war "a miracle," but told of a lagging 40 per cent in arms and equipment which he said "stands like a wall between us and quick, sure victory."

Resolutions covering a wide range of subjects were introduced today for committees to work over and report on later. The convention announced that Thursday would be an "off-session" day for observance of Thanksgiving.

Stewart-Warner Faces U. S. Charge Of Fraud

New Orleans, Nov. 20 (AP)—The Government charged fraud in connection with war contracts against the Stewart-Warner Corporation, of Chicago, and six individuals in indictments returned secretly by two Federal grand juries here Saturday and made public in Federal court today.

The indictments alleged fraud in connection with charges for crane service, riggers and other labor, tractor service and the like, alleging "conspiracy" in making certain rates.

SOMERVELL SEES PRODUCTION LAG

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 20—(AP) Lt. Gen. Brehon Somervell said today that production of arms and equipment is lagging on 40 per cent of the program.

Accounting for two-thirds of this lag "are the critical items desperately wanted on the fighting fronts," and there is an especially urgent need for heavy artillery ammunition, the Army Service forces commander said.

Troops on the Western front alone are firing more ammunition than is being produced and the demand from the forces of General Douglas MacArthur in the Philippines "is equally insistent," he asserted in an address prepared for the American Federation of Labor convention.

The production shortages, Somervell said, are because "we are ahead of our military time tables," with the rapid pace of advance in both Europe and the Pacific creating sharply increased demands.

So critical is the need for heavy caliber shells at the front, he reported, that ammunition for the eight-inch guns, weighing 400 pounds a shell, is being sent by air transport.

"We are short 100,000 workers in plants producing essential war material. We must have these workers at once," the General told the convention.

PLAN GOVERNING WORLD AIR LINES MADE AT PARLEY

CHICAGO, Nov. 20—(AP) The United States, Canada and Great Britain published tonight, without committing themselves, a partial draft for an international air transport agreement which covered such items as orgaization, sabotage, freedom of transit and other problems, but left untouched the question of traffic division on which the British have been adamant.

It appeared that the United States had yielded, as had been expected, on its original proposal for a general grant of the right to fly across or stop in countries signing the agreement. However, this country brought the compromise close to the outlines of its proposal in most other points.

The 21-page document was prepared for submission to delegates to the International Civil Aviation conference after nine days of private consultations.

In general, the document provided:

Acceptance of the principle that the convention or agreement aimed "to avoid friction and to forward cooperation between nations and peoples upon which the peace of the world depends."

Establishment of "the International Air administration", comprising an assembly, on which each nation would have equal representation; a board of 15 directors, of whom seven would be named by the countries of "chief importance in air transport", and a manager.

Prohibition against discrimination among states and acceptance of the principle that civil air transport will not be used as an instrument of national policy in international relations.

Retain to each state the right to carry air traffic between points within its territory, which is defined as "all territory under the sovereignty, suzerainty, protection or mandate of that state."

Grant each country the right to designate the route to be followed in its territory by airline aircraft of another state. (The United States proposal for free transit of private and commercial planes was omitted, indicating that it had yielded to pressure from other countries).

Forbid the granting of exclusive privileges to any other country or airline. (This would abrogate exclusive agreements made between the Pan American Airways and some other countries, notably Portugal, and between the British and some countries).

Provide that meteorological services be made available to all signatory states.

Leave air matters "directly affecting world security" to a "general organization setup by the nations of the world to preserve peace."

(This represents acceptance of the United States view, as opposed to the British, that security was not a matter for the air conference).

Permit two or more member countries to operate joint air transport services and to pool their air services on any route or in any region.

Authorize the board of the world agency to recommend to member states that they form joint organizations to operate air services. (This latter is in line with a United States view, since this country recently suggested that the Scandinavian countries pool their resources for an airline to New York rather than attempt to operate separate lines).

Provide for technical agreements which would supersede the international convention signed at Paris in 1919.

Refer to an international permanent court, an arbitral tribunal, appeals from the decision of the agency board.

Call upon the member countries to forbid operation through its airspaces by countries not conforming to the agreement or to decisions reached under it.

SEEKS REVISION OF WAGE FORMULA

CHICAGO, Nov. 20 — (AP) C.I.O. President Philip Murray brought delegates to the Seventh convention to their feet cheering today when he extended a verbal olive branch to employers, and called for revision of the Little Steel formula limiting wages.

"We have no desire to quarrel with business," he told the 600 representatives of constituent members of the Congress, "we don't want to indulge in constant fights with business or industry.

Will Cooperate with Business

"It is our desire to get along with business, to get along with industry to work with them in the manner indicated by Bishop Sheil this morning. We believe in labor-management cooperation. We do not subscribe to the foolheardy, antiquated notions of strike and strife."

Addressing the morning session, Bishop Bernard J. Sheil, of the Catholic Archdiocese of Chicago, termed the American ideal a "brotherhood of free men," and came out strongly for revision of the Little Steel Wage formula.

"I cannot refrain from saying," the Cleric asserted, "that labors demand for revision of the Little Steel formula is both just and imperative.

"Surely all America knows the extraordinary record of war production made by the organized labor movement. The time is here — now — when labor cannot be asked to continue carrying an unfair part of the effort. The Little Steel formula must be revised."

Murray continued, "we believe in the use of intelligence. We believe that intelligence should be constructively applied around the collective bargaining table with the employers of the United States."

Murray's address preceded a plea by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, for increased participation by women in the affairs of the world, and an increased education that all might become better citizens.

Dressed simply in black with a spray of orchids at her shoulder, Mrs. Roosevelt said, "men have had the running of the world for a long time now, and the time has come for women to become active citizens in order "that society might be improved.

"The price of peace," he concluded, "is so much less hard than the price of war but we must be willing to pay it just as we have paid the price of war."

Murray in his keynote address to the opening session, cheered the work of the C.I.O. Political Action committee, but added "we are not assembled in session for the purpose of beating our chests about PAC. We played our part in winning the election."

Labor Has Made Sacrifices

On wage stablization, Murray said labor had "been compelled due to the rigidity of the Little Steel formula to temporarily make sacrifices in the interests of our nation whilst engaged in a great war.

"It is our high purpose whilst struggling to relieve ourselves from the shackles of bondage through the operation of the so-called Little Steel formula, to continue in the maintenance of our no-strike pledge."

The convention opened quietly with little discord in evidence. Delegates are to consider problems of union organization, postwar reemployment, as well as a plan to obtain 60,000,000 jobs.

President Roosevelt extended greetings to the convention, saying that because of the press of his office he could not be present in person.

In his message, read by Murray to the accompaniment of vociferous cheers, Mr. Roosevelt said, "American men and women on assembly lines, at machines, in mines, at counters, in office work, on farms and those directing production have, almost without exception, done everything humanly possible to help our brave fighters to carry on against ruthless enemies.

"That job not yet done, however, we must, and I know we will, keep turning out the weapons and materials needed by our fighters so that the war may be shortened, lives saved, and our boys returned at their earliest possible moment to their homes and loved ones."

THE GERMANS CONTINUED WITHDRAWING OUT OF NORTHEASTERN FRANCE

[illegible] SAAR.

AS THIRD ARMY TANKS AND INFANTRY MOPPED UP INSIDE THE ENCIRCLED FRENCH FORTRESS CITY OF METZ, OTHER UNITS SMASHED TWO MILES FARTHER INTO GERMANY NEAR THE LUXEMBOURG BORDER, DROVE FORWARD TO GROSTENQUIN, FIVE MILES NORTHEAST OF DIEUZE, 30 MILES SOUTHEAST OF METZ.

AMERICAN SEVENTH ARMY TROOPS FIGHTING IN THE FOOTHILLS OF THE VOSGES HAVE GAINED UP TO 15 MILES IN THE LAST WEEK AND HAVE CAPTURED BLAMONT, 40 MILES WEST OF STRASBOURG ON THE RHINE; CORCIEUX, 21 MILES NORTHWEST OF COLMAR, AND GERARDMER, 22 MILES WEST OF COLMAR. GERMAN RESISTANCE SEEMED TO BE FALLING APART IN THE SECTOR EAST OF LUNEVILLE.

THE PARIS RADIO QUOTED AN OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT FROM HEADQUARTERS OF THE FRENCH FIRST ARMY THAT TWO FRENCH DIVISIONS ENTERED BELFORT THIS MORNING.

"THE DRIVE FOR MULHOUSE CONTINUES," SAID THE BROADCAST. "TONIGHT FRENCH GUARDS WILL BE MOUNTED AT THE RHINE FOR THE FIRST TIME IN THIS WAR."

IN SOUTHEASTERN HOLLAND RECONNAISSANCE ELEMENTS OF THE BRITISH SECOND ARMY REACHED THE MAAS RIVER AT KESSEL, THREE MILES FROM THE GERMAN BORDER, SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCED.

THE BRITISH ALSO HAD MOVED 4,000 YARDS EAST OF THE HELDEN-(CORRECT)-MEIJEL ROAD AND WERE ONLY ABOUT FOUR MILES FROM THE DUTCH BORDER CITY OF VENLO.

THE AMERICAN FIRST ARMY, THIRD PARTNER IN THE MASSIVE DRIVE TO BLAST OPEN THE AACHEN CORRIDOR TO COLOGNE AND THE RUHR, THREW ITSELF AGAINST THE STRONGLY HELD TOWN OF ESCHWEILER AFTER SLIPPING FORWARD THROUGH THE DARKNESS AND SEIZING A DOMINATING RIDGE AT ITS OUTSKIRTS EARLY YESTERDAY.

A BERLIN REPORT VIA STOCKHOLM SAID ESCHWEILER WAS THE TARGET OF THE MAIN ATTACK IN THE AACHEN SECTOR, AND THAT A SAVAGE BATTLE WAS RAGING AROUND THE TOWN'S FORTIFIED DEFENSES.

1--AMERICAN THIRD ARMY TROOPS ENCIRCLED METZ, DROVE THE GERMANS FROM ONE-THIRD OF THIS FORMIDABLE FRENCH FORTRESS CITY AND ADVANCED TO ITS CENTER. OTHER UNITS OF THIS ARMY MADE NEW PENETRATIONS INTO GERMANY AS SUPPORTING AIRCRAFT HARRIED THE GERMAN RETREAT INTO THE SAAR BASIN.

2--THE U.S. SEVENTH ARMY, DRIVING HARD ALONG A 50-MILE FRONT, SEIZED AND PASSED BEYOND THE TOWN OF BLAMONT, 40 MILES DUE WEST OF STRASBOURG, THE FRENCH FRONTIER CITY ON THE RHINE.

3-EXPLOITING WHAT A FRONT DISPATCH DESCRIBED AS A BREAKTHROUGH IN THE GERMAN POSITIONS NEAR THE SWISS FRONTIER, THE FRENCH FIRST ARMY BATTLED INTO ALSACE AND WAS WHTIN 10 MILES OF MULHOUSE. THE SWISS RADIO SAID THE FRENCH HAD FOUGHT INTO THE KEY CITY OF BELFORT ON THE SOUTHERN ROUTE OF INVASION INTO GERMANY AND THE ALGIERS RADIO SAID STREET FIGHTING RAGING THERE. FORT DU MONT VAUDOIS, FOUR MILES SOUTHWEST OF BELFORT WAS OVERRUN. IN AN ADVANCE OF 10 MILES EASTWARD IN THE BELFORT GAP THE FRENCH TOOK DANNEMARIE AND WERE IN SUARCE AND SEPPOIS-LE-HAUT LAST NIGHT. IN THAT SECTOR THEY WERE ONLY 19 MILES FROM THE RHINE.

IN ADDITION TO PARTICIPATING WITH THE TWO AMERICAN ARMIES IN THE DRIVE ON COLOGNE AND DUSSELDORF THE BRITISH SECOND ARMY HAD UNITS BEATING OUT NEW GAINS IN SOUTHEASTERN HOLLAND. THERE THE TOMMIES ESTABLISHED ANOTHER BRIDGEHEAD OVER THE DURNE CANAL, SENT PATROLS OUT FROM THE MEIJEL-HALDEN ROAD AND NEARED HALDEN, 7 1/2 MILES FROM VENLO, A DUTCH ENTRANCE TO GERMANY.

ALONG MOST OF THE WESTERN FRONT THE GERMANS WERE FIGHTING THE WAY THEY DID IN NORMANDY--TRYING TO HOLD EVERY BIT OF GROUND WHETHER IT WAS OF STRATEGIC IMPORTANCE OR NOT. EISENHOWER'S ANSWER TO THESE TACTICS HAS BEEN TO PUT ON THE PRESSURE ALONG THE LINE FROM SWITZERLAND TO HOLLAND, THUS SPREADING ENEMY MANPOWER.

IN THE BATTLE FOR GERMANY'S RHINELAND U.S.NINTH ARMY INFANTRY AND BRITISH TANKS, TEAMING TOGETHER IN WHAT ONE FRONT DISPATCH DESCRIBED AS "A PERFECT MILITARY OPERATION," CAPTURED GEILENKIRCHEN AND PUSHED ON A MILE NORTHEAST, TAKING SUGGERATH, 30 MILES SOUTHWEST OF DUSSELDORF.

GEILENKIRCHEN, A ROAD JUNCTION TOWN OF 30,000, IS 12 MILES NORTH OF AACHEN. IT HAD SERVED AS A NORTHERN BASTION OF THE LINE ON WHICH THE GERMANS SOUGHT TO BAR ENTRANCE TO THE COLOGNE PLAIN. WITH ITS CAPTURE THE HEAVY INDUSTRIAL AREA OF THE WURM VALLEY ALSO FELL. THE AMERICANS HAD TO PUSH THROUGH SIX SHELL-WRECKED GERMAN TOWNS TO REACH GEILENKIRCHEN.

JUST BELOW THIS AREA VETERAN U.S.FIRST ARMY TROOPS SURGED FORWARD FOUR MILES YESTERDAY, GOT ASTRIDE THE SIX-LANE ADOLF HITLER HIGHWAY--A COMMUNICATIONS ROUTE WHICH WOULD BE INVALUABLE TO THE ARMY'S FARTHER ADVANCE INTO THE REICH--AND REACHED THE OUTSKIRTS OF ESCHWEILER, SEVEN MILES NORTHEAST OF AACHEN. THIS WAS THE FIRST ARMY'S BEST GAIN SINCE IT LAUNCHED ITS ASSAULT LAST THURSDAY. ONE ADVANCE TO ESCHWEILER, A TOWN OF 50,000, CAME IN A BLOODLESS, GHOSTLY NIGHT ATTACK.

FIRST ARMY TROOPS ALSO BATTLED THEIR WAY THROUGH HAMICH, 8 1/2 MILES EAST OF AACHEN AND 26 MILES FROM COLOGNE, AND SEIZED THE HAMICH RIDGE, WHICH THE GERMANS HAD USED TO OBSERVE AMERICAN MOVEMENTS.

SO QUICKLY DID AMERICAN THIRD ARMY TROOPS PUT A FOUR-WAY SQUEEZE ON METZ THAT GERMAN PLANS FOR A HOUSE-TO-HOUSE FIGHT THERE WERE DISRUPTED, EARLY FALL OF THE CITY APPEARED CERTAIN.

BESIDES THRUSTING INTO METZ, THE THIRD ARMY MADE SEVERAL NEW PENETRATIONS OF GERMANY. ITS MECHANIZED CAVALRY ENTERED BUSCHDORF, 1,000 YARDS ACROSS THE GERMAN FRONTIER AND FOUR MILES DUE EAST OF THE GERMAN-FRENCH-LUXEMBOURG BORDER JUNCTION.

ELEMENTS ON THE 10TH ARMORED DIVISION CROSSED THE BORDER ABOVE THE FRENCH TOWN OF LAUNSTROFF, THREE MILES SOUTHEAST OF BUSCHDORF. TANKS OF THIS SAME DIVISION SLUGGED INTO SCHEUERWALD, NORTH OF LAUNSTROFF, AND PENETRATED WALDWISSE ON THE FRONTIER TWO MILES SOUTHEAST. OTHERS PUSHED THROUGH SCHWERDORFF AND FARTHER SOUTH WERE ADVANCING ON FRIESDORFF.

PILOTS RETURNING FROM ATTACKS ON GERMAN COLUMNS MOVING TOWARD THE SAAR COMPARED THIS WITHDRAWAL TO THE ENEMY RETREAT FROM NORMANDY. THE CLAIMED THE DESTRUCTION OF MORE THAN 250 MOTOR TRANSPORTS.

IN ITS DRIVE TOWARD THE ENTRANCES TO GAPS IN THE VOSGES MOUNTAINS THE U.S.SEVENTH ARMY ALREADY HAS CAPTURED APPROXIMATELY 35 FRENCH TOWNS. A FRONT DISPATCH SAID GERMAN RESISTANCE APPARENTLY WAS CRUMBLING IN THE NORTHERN SECTOR EAST OF LUNEVILLE WHERE AMERICAN GAINS UP TO 15 MILES HAVE BEEN SCORED SINCE THE OFFENSIVE BEGAN SEVEN DAYS AGO. THE ADVANCES TAPERED OFF TO SEVERAL HUNDRED YARDS IN THE CENTRAL AND SOUTHERN AREAS WHERE THE TERRAIN IS HILLY AND MORE HEAVILY FORESTED.

AMONG THE 13 TOWNS OCCUPIED BY THE AMERICANS YESTERDAY WERE REPAIX AND GOGNEY, NORTHEAST OF BLAMONT ON THE TWO-LANE PARIS-STRASBOURG HIGHWAY.

A PROPAGANDA BROADCAST FROM BERLIN DECLARED THE GERMANS HAD COMPLETED A NEW FORTIFIED LINE BEHIND THE WESTERN FRONT. ASSERTING THAT "TIME IS WORKING FOR THE GERMANS," BERLIN SAID "EVERY WEEK NEW CAMOUFLAGED LINES ARE GROWING INTO THE DEPTH OF THE REICH."

EISENHOWER, IN AN APPEAL TO MUNITIONS WORKERS IN AMERICA TO TURN OUT AMMUNITION, ESPECIALLY ARTILLERY SHELLS, AT TOP SPEED, SAID THAT THE CAPTURE OF AACHEN "WAS DELAYED BECAUSE OF A SHORTAGE OF AMMUNITION." IN TAKING THE CITY THE U.S.FIRST ARMY USED 300,000 ROUNDS OF 105-MILLIMETER AMMUNITION IN A TWO-WEEKS' PERIOD.

WITH THE U.S. FIRST ARMY IN GERMANY, NOV.20-(AP)-AMERICAN INFANTRY THRUST INTO THE WESTERN OUTSKIRTS OF ESCHWEILER TODAY AS OTHER DOUGHBOYS PRESSED FROM THE NORTHWEST AND SOUTHWEST INTO THE FRINGES OF THIS CITY 30 MILES WEST OF COLOGNE ON THE RHINE.

IN BITTER FIGHTING IN A COLD RAIN, THE DOUGHBOYS FOUGHT FORWARD IN A GENERAL ADVANCE OF TWO TO THREE KILOMETERS (A MAXIMUM OF 1.8 MILES).

HEAVY MOVEMENT ON THE AACHEN-COLOGNE HIGHWAY INDICATED THAT THE GERMANS WERE PULLING BACK SLOWLY IN THE ESCHWEILER SECTOR.

WHILE THE DOUGHBOYS WERE PENETRATING ESCHWEILER FROM THE SOUTH, WEST AND NORTH, OTHER FORCES BEAT FORWARD TWO MILES TO THE SOUTHEAST AND SEIZED THE TOWNS OF WENAU AND HEISTER, SIX MILES FROM DUREN ON THE ROER RIVER.

THE FIFTH INFANTRY DIVISION BYPASSED FORT QUEULEU AND SWARMED OVER THE SOUTHEASTERN QUARTER OF METZ WITH LIGHT LOSSES. ADVANCED ELEMENTS REACHED THE EAST BANK OF THE SEILLE RIVER AND EXCHANGED FIRE WITH THE ENEMY ON THE WEST SIDE. THE DOUGHBOYS FOUND THE BRIDGES HAD BEEN BLOWN.

CROSSING THE MOSELLE RIVER IN THE NORTHERN END OF THE TOWN, THE 95TH DIVISION ALSO ENTERED METZ. ITS ADVANCED ELEMENTS JOINED THE FIFTH AND CLOSED THE GERMAN ESCAPE GAP TO THE EAST OUT OF THE CITY.

THE FIFTH DIVISION'S 10TH INFANTRY REGIMENT, COMMANDED BY COL. ROBERT P.BELL, MONTCLAIR, N.J., MOVED UP TO A MILE AND A QUARTER DEEP INTO THE CITY FROM THE SOUTHEAST AND CONTROLLED THE SOUTHEAST QUARTER WHICH IS FORMED BY THE SEILLE RIVER AND THE MAIN RAIL LINE RUNNING EAST FROM THE CENTER OF METZ.

JUST TO THE NORTH ACROSS THE RAILROAD, PARTS OF THE 95TH DIVISION'S 377TH AND 378TH REGIMENTS ALSO PUSHED TO THE SEILLE RIVER TAKING FORT BELLECROIX (CORRECT) EN ROUTE.

NEW DELHI, INDIA, NOV. 20--(AP)-- ALLIED AIR FORCES IN THE NORTH BURMA-ASSAM COMBAT AREAS ARE RECEIVING THEIR FUEL OVER THE LONGEST MILITARY OPERATIONAL PIPELINE IN THE WORLD WHOSE CONSTRUCTION WAS CONSIDERED ONE OF THE WAR'S MOST REMARKABLE ENGINEERING FEATS.

WHEN COMPLETED IT WILL AT LEAST HAVE DOUBLE THE FUEL TRANSPORT CAPACITY OF THE LEDO ROAD, WHICH IT WAS BUILT TO SUPPLEMENT, THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID.

THE EFFECT OF THE PIPELINE, CONSTRUCTED ~~XXXXXX~~ DESPITE ~~XXXXXX~~ THE MOST FORMIDABLE ENGINEERING HAZARDS, WILL BE TO FREE MUCH OF THE AIR TRANSPORT AND LEDO ROAD TONNAGE FOR CARRYING GUNS AND OTHER WAR ESSENTIALS TO THE CHINESE AND TO THE 14TH AIR FORCE. THE EXACT COURSE THE PIPELINE TAKES AFTER LEAVING THE BEGINNING OF THE LEDO ROAD IN ASSAM CANNOT BE DISCLOSED FOR MILITARY REASONS.

(A DISPTACH FROM CHUNGKING SAID THE LINE IS CONSTRUCTED OF FOUR AND SIX INCH PIPES AND RUNS THROUGH THE BRAHMAPUTRA VALLEY TO ASSAM AND THEN ACROSS THE PATKAI RANGE.)

SOME OFFICERS. REPORTED HAMPSON, SAID THESE ENEMY MOVEMENTS MAY INDICATE AN ATTEMPT TO MOUNT AN OFFENSIVE. OTHERS SUGGESTED A POSSIBLE JAPANESE ATTEMPT TO ENCIRCLE THE YANKS ON BREAKNECK RIDGE OR TO CUT THEIR COASTAL SUPPLY ROAD. THE RIDGE DOMINATES LIMON.

VICIOUS FIGHTING CONTINUED SOUTH OF LIMON, WHERE THE ENEMY MOUNTED ONE FUTILE ATTEMPT AFTER ANOTHER TO BREAK THE STOUT BLOCK CLAMPED ON THE ORMOC ROAD BY ELEMENTS OF THE 32ND AND 24TH DIVISIONS.

GEN.DOUGLAS MACARTHUR'S MONDAY COMMUNIQUE REPORTED ENEMY CASUALTIES IN THE GROUND FIGHTING ON LEYTE IN THE FIRST MONTH OF BATTLE HAD PASSED 45,000. AMERICAN CASUALTIES WERE PLACED AT 1,133 KILLED, 126 MISSING AND 4,432 WOUNDED, A TOTAL OF 5,691.

THE HIGH RATIO OF ENEMY CASUALTIES WAS ASCRIBED TO THE DEPLOYMENT OF YANK ARTILLERY AND THE BYPASSING AND ENVELOPMENT TACTICS USED SO SUCCESSFULLY BY THE LIBERATION FORCES.

LANDING OF ALLIED FORCES IN THE ASIA ISLAND GROUP, 130 MILES OFF THE NORTHWEST TIP OF NEW GUINEA, AND COMPLETION OF THE OCCUPATION OF THE MAPIA ISLANDS IN THE SAME AREA WERE ANNOUNCED BY MACARTHUR. OCCUPATION OF THE SMALL ASIA ISLANDS APPARENTLY WAS FOR THE SAME PURPOSE AS THAT OF THE MAPIA GROUP--TO REMOVE ENEMY OBSERVATION OUTPOSTS.

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS,PHILIPPINES,NOV 20 (AP)-A QUESTION AND ANSWER WHICH TOGETHER TRAVELED OVER 18,000 MILES BY TELEPHONE, RADIO, JEEP AND ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRES BROUGHT RELIEF FROM WORRY TODAY TO AN ARMY MEDICAL OFFICER CARING FOR WOUNDED NEAR THE FRONT ON LEYTE ISLAND.

A V-MAIL LETTER TO MAJ.PETER GABERMAN, (2922 PALMER ST.) CHICAGO, DATED OCT.27, TOLD HIM HIS WIFE WAS SERIOUSLY ILL. DAY AFTER DAY HE WAITED FOR FURTHER WORD, BUT STORMS HELD BACK ALL MAIL. ALL SOURCES OF INFORMATION WERE CLOSED TO HIM SINCE THERE WERE NO COMMERCIAL WIRELESS STATIONS SET UP.

GABERMAN FINALLY GOT A JEEP AND DROVE OVER MUDDY ROADS TO HEADQUARTERS AND APPEALED TO LT.COL.ROGER EGEBERG, CLEVELAND, OHIO, AIDE TO GEN.DOUGLAS MACARTHUR. EGEBERG IN TURN CONTACTED THE ASSOCIATED PRESS AND ASKED "CAN YOU HELP?"

THE AP THROUGH PRESS WIRELESS RADIOED ITS SAN FRANCISCO OFFICE, AND SAN FRANCISCO MESSAGED CHICAGO OVER THE ASSOCIATED PRESS LEASED WIRES. A CHICAGO STAFFMAN CALLED DR.ELLIS FRELICH AND ASKED ABOUT MRS.GABERMAN'S CONDITION.

WITHIN EIGHT HOURS OF THE TIME THE MESSAGE WAS SENT FROM MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS AN ANSWER WAS RECEIVED SAYING, "FREILICH SAYS MRS.GABERMAN'S CONDITION DEFINITELY BETTER. SHE IS RECOVERING AND MAKING SATISFACTORY PROGRESS."

WITH 18,000 MILES OF COMMUNICATION LINES COVERED, THE REAL PROBLEM BEGAN. GABERMAN'S HOSPITAL WAS CLOSE TO THE FRONT AND THE COMMUNICATION LCES WERE JAMMED. REPEATED EFFORTS TO DELIVER THE MESSAGE LAST NIGHT AND THIS MORNING WERE REWARDED WITH THE DISCOURAGING WORDS, "THE LINES ARE DOWN."

BUT FINALLY AT 6 P.M. TODAY THE CALL WAS COMPLETED AND GABERMAN'S VOICE WAS HEARD FAINTLY OVER THE FIELD TELEPHONE. TIME AFTER TIME THE MESSAGE WAS REPEATED AS GABERMAN STROVE TO HEAR IT.

FINALLY THE DOCTOR BROKE IN WITH "I GOT IT! I GOT IT! OH BOY, AM I RELIEVED!. THANKS A MILLION. I'M VERY GRATEFUL TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS."

UNDATED CHINESE INTERPRETATIVE (650)
BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHINA'S CABINET SHAKEUP, INVOLVING THE REMOVAL OF GENERAL HO YING-CHIN AS MINISTER OF WAR AND [redacted] AND H.H.KUNG AS MINISTER OF FINANCE, INDICATES THAT GENERALISSIMO CHIANG KAI-SHEK FINALLY HAS YIELDED TO ALLIED PRESSURE FOR A HOUSECLEANING AIMED AT RETRIEVING THE TOTTERING MILITARY AND FINANCIAL FORTUNES OF FREE CHINA.

IN NAMING GENERAL CHEN CHENG TO SUCCEED HO THE GENERALISSIMO HAS PLACED THE REORGANIZATION OF CHINA'S MILITARY FORCES IN THE HANDS OF AN ABLE, FORCEFUL COMMANDER EAGER TO ADOPT MODERN METHODS AND WILLING TO WORK CLOSELY WITH AMERICANS ASSIGNED TO TRAIN AND EQUIP AN EFFECTIVE FIGHTING ARMY.

RETIREMENT OF GENERAL HO, MINISTER OF WAR SINCE 1930 AND CHIEF OF STAFF SINCE 1937, CONCEIVABLY ALSO MAY REMOVE ONE OF THE CHIEF STUMBLING BLOCKS TO A POLITICAL SETTLEMENT BETWEEN THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT AND THE CHINESE COMMUNISTS.

GENERAL HO HAD MAINTAINED A MILITARY BLOCKADE AGAINST COMMUNIST ARMIES IN THE NORTH, IS KNOWN AS AN IMPLACABLE FOE OF THE COMMUNISTS, AND HAS BEEN BLAMED FOR ATTACKING THEM WITH SOME OF HIS BEST DIVISIONS WHILE THEY WAGED GUERRILLA WARFARE ON THE JAPANESE.

HO ALSO HAS BEEN ACCUSED OF DELAYING TACTICS IN ACCEPTING AND EMPLOYING AMERICAN STRATEGY, TRAINING METHODS AND EQUIPMENT, LIMITED AS SUCH AID IS BECAUSE OF THE NECESSITY OF FLYING EVERYTHING INTO CHINA OVER THE HIMALAYAN HUMP.

THE CHUNGKING HOUSECLEANING FOLLOWS THE RECALL OF GEN.JOSEPH W. STILWELL AS AMERICAN COMMANDER IN CHINA-BURMA-INDIA WHICH BROUGHT TO LIGHT ABROAD THE FACT THAT WASHINGTON HAD BEEN INSISTING ON A

REORGANIZATION OF THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT AND ATTEMPTING TO OBTAIN A SETTLEMENT OF THE COMMUNIST PROBLEM.

THE NEW MINISTER OF WAR ORGANIZED THE CHINESE EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, WHICH TRAINED IN SOUTHWEST CHINA UNDER AMERICAN INSTRUCTORS AND NOW IS FIGHTING ACROSS THE SALWEEN RIVER TO JOIN UP WITH ALLIED FORCES PUSHING ACROSS BURMA TO REOPEN THE BURMA ROAD.

SLIGHT OF FIGURE, BUT SHARP-EYED, QUICK AND DECISIVE GENERAL CHEN IS 44 YEARS OLD. HE GRADUATED FROM THE PAOTING MILITARY ACADEMY IN 1929 AND WAS VICE MINISTER OF WAR IN 1937. BESIDES EXTENSIVE EXPERIENCE AS A FIELD COMMANDER HE HAS BEEN HEAD OF THE POLITICAL TRAINING BOARD OF THE NATIONAL MILITARY COUNCIL. SINCE 1937 HE HAS BEEN GOVERNOR OF INVADED HUPEH PROVINCE AND COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE 6TH WAR AREA.

HE IS KNOWN AS BEING METICULOUS IN FINANCIAL MATTERS AND THOROUGHLY DEPENDABLE ONCE HIS WORD IS GIVEN. LAST YEAR HE BECAME ILL WITH A STOMACH AILMENT. AN AMERICAN ARMY TRANSPORT PLANE BROUGHT IN SOME CANNED MILK FROM INDIA WHICH HAD BEEN PRESCRIBED FOR HIM. DESPITE HIS WEAKENED CONDITION HE REFUSED THE MILK UNTIL HE HAD PAID FOR IT.

IN THE LATE SPRING OF 1943 WHEN JAPANESE FORCES RAIDED THE TUNGTING LAKES RICE BOWL AND PUSHED INTO WESTERN HUPEH, GENERAL CHENG TOOK COMMAND AND TURNED BACK WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN AN ENEMY ATTACK ON CHUNGKING. HE HAD BEEN LESS SUCCESSFUL IN AN EARLIER CAMPAIGN WHEN THE JAPANESE CAPTURED THE IMPORTANT YANGTZE RIVER CITY OF ICHANG.

O.K.YUI, FORMER MAYOR OF SHANGHAI, TAKES OVER CHINA'S RUNAWAY INFLATIONARY PROBLEMS FROM H.H.KUNG, WHO IS NOW IN THIS COUNTRY.

THE NEW FINANCE MINISTER INHERITS A FULLBLOWN ECONOMIC AND FINANCIAL CRISIS WITH AN ATTENDANT TRAIN OF VICIOUS SPECULATION, BLACKMARKETING AND GRAFT. RISING PRICES AND INFLATED CURRENCY HAVE BEEN RUNNING AHEAD OF THE TONS OF PAPER MONEY PRINTED ABROAD AND FLOWN OVER THE HUMP IN COMPETITION WITH ACTUAL WAR MATERIEL.

WITH KUNG OUT OF THE CABINET THE INFLUENCE OF THE SOONG FAMILY MAY BE WANING IN CHUNGKING. KUNG, A DESCENDANT OF CONFUCIUS, IS A BROTHER-IN-LAW OF MRS.CHIANG KAI-SHEK, WHO ALSO IS IN THE UNITED STATES. MADAM SUN YAT-SEN (SOONG CHING-LING), WIDOW OF THE FOUNDER OF THE CHINESE REPUBLIC AND ALSO A SISTER OF MADAM CHIANG, REMAINS IN THE CHINESE CAPITAL WHERE HER GOOD OFFICES MIGHT HELP IN OBTAINING AN ARRANGEMENT WITH THE COMMUNISTS. T.V.SOONG, WHO CARRIES THE TITLE OF FOREIGN MINISTER AND REGARDED BY MANY AS THE OUTSTANDING FINANCIAL GENIUS OF CHINA, IS REPORTED OUT OF FAVOR IN CHUNGKING.

KUNG'S RETIREMENT MIGHT MEAN A RISE IN SOONG'S FORTUNES.

IT HAS BEEN SAID OFTEN BY OBSERVERS THAT "CHINA ISN'T BIG ENOUGH FOR BOTH T.V. AND H.H."

UNDATED PACIFIC WAR INTERPRETIVE (FOR PMS OF NOV. 20)
BY RALPH H.HEPPE,
ASSOCIATED PRESS WAR EDITOR

A YEAR AGO TODAY THE UNITED STATES STARTED THE LONG ROAE BACK ACROSS THE PAIIFIC.

THE SHADOW OF JAPAN STILL DARKENED MTST OF THE VAST PACIFIC OCEAN AREA, REACHED DANGEROUSLY CLOSE TO PEARL HARBOR.

MYTHICAL TRUK, VAUNTED ENEMY NAVAL BASTION IN THE CAROLINE ISLANDS, WAS UNKNOWN. SO WERE THE ISLAND CHAINS FORMING THE OUTER DEFENSES OF JAPAN'S STOLEN EMPIRE--THE GILBERTS, MARSHALLS, CAROLINES, MARIANAS, BONINS AND VOLCANOS.

THEN AMERICA'S MIGHT STRUCK. UNITED STATES MARINES AND INFANTRY INVADED TARAWA AND MAKIN IN THE GILBERTS TO HIT THE COMEBACK TRAIL THAT WITHIN A YEAR CARRIED AMERICAN FORCES NEARLY 5,000 MILES WEST-WARD OF PEARL HARBOR AND WITHIN 1,400 MILES OF TOKYO.

TARAWA--BLOODIEST BATTLE IN MARINE CORPS HISTORY--AND MAKIN STARTED THE AMERICAN OFFENSIVE ROLLING. IN SPEEDY SUCCESSION CAME THE INVASION OF KWAJALEIN IN THE MARSHALLS, THE AMERICAN AIR INVASION OF TRUK AND THE CAROLINES, THE LAND THRUST INTO SAIPAN, GUAM AND TINIAN IN THE MARIANAS, AND LANDINGS IN THE PALAUS OF THE WESTERN CAROLINES, ON THE EASTERN FLANK OF THE PHILIPPINES.

AMERICAN AND ALLIED FORCES IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, UNDER GEN. DOUGLAS MACARTHUR, ALSO WERE ASTIR. WHEN THE CENTRAL PACIFIC OFFENSIVE DIRECTED BY ADM.CHESTER W.NIMITZ HIT TARAWA AND MAKIN, MACARTHUR'S MEN WERE BATTLING THE JAPANESE FOR THE PLATEAU COMMANDING THE HUON GULF AND THE STRATEGIC VITIAZ STRAIT SEPARATING NEW GUINEA AND NEW BRITAIN.

FORCES WERE THROWN ACROSS THE STRAIT AT ARAWE AND CAPE GLOUCESTER ON NEW BRITAIN TO CONTROL BOTH SIDES OF THE VITAL WATER GATEWAY TO THE OCEAN LANES LEADING TO THE PHILIPPINES.

NOV 21 1944

THEN BEGAN THE BRILLIANT CAMPAIGN OF LEAPFROG LANDINGS UP THE NEW GUINEA COAST TOWARD MACARTHUR'S GOAL--HE PHILIPPINES. AITAPE, HOLLANDIA, WAKDE, THE SCHOUTEN ISLES, NOEMFOOR, MOROTAI IN THE MOLUCCAS--EACH A TACTICAL SURPRISE TO THE ENEMY, EACH A STEP NEARER THE GOAL.

TO CLIMAX THE YEAR OF FAST BREAKING ACTION, THE CENTRAL AND SOUTHWEST PACIFIC COMMANDS COMBINED STRENGTH AND LANDED LIBERATION FORCES IN THE PHILIPPINES IN OCTOBER--ELEVEN MONTHS TO THE DAY AFTER TARAWA AND MAKIN. THERE, ON LEYTE ISLAND, IS BEING FOUGHT NIPPON'S FIRST SUPREME EFFORT TO CRUSH THE LIBERATION FORCESWM

WHERE TO A YEAR FROM TODAY? WELL, IN THE MARIANAS AMERICAN FORCES ARE WITHIN 1,400 MILES OF TOKYO. ON LEYTE THEY ARE LESS THAN 400 AIRLINE MILES FROM MANILA AND ABOUT 1,000 FROM FORMOSA AND THE CHINA COAST.

SIXTH ARMY TROOPS BATTLE INTO MULHOUSE; THREATEN TO TRAP ENTIRE NAZI 19TH ARMY

NOV 22 1944

SAVAGE FIGHTING IN NORTH, ALLIES PUSHING FORWARD

Germans Making Desperate Resistance Fighting on Home Soil.

BATTLE IN MUD

Patton's Tanks Advance, Troops Clean Out Metz Pockets.

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Nov. 21 — (AP) French and American troops of the Sixth Army group battled into the citadel city of Mulhouse and drove well beyond Sarrebourg to within 27 miles of the Rhine today in great encircling movements that threatened to pocket the entire German 19th army with its back to the river.

French First army armored forces speared into Mulhouse in a race northward from their footholds on the French side of the [illegible] near the German-Swiss-French border to cut off the Germans between the Vosges mountains and the river. Unconfirmed reports said the French already continued on to Colmar, 22 miles north of Mulhouse.

U. S. Seventh Army troops some 75 miles northward drove due east through the Vosges, captured Sarrebourg and thrust six miles farther and took Mittelbrown, near the entrance to the Saverne Gap that leads through the forested mountains to the Rhine plain. The 44th Division, whose presence was disclosed only yesterday, led that push in action so fluid that front dispatches said a definite front could not be defined from moment to moment.

Savage Slugging Match

On the northern end of the green western front the Allies still were advancing, but it was a savage slugging match in comparison with the fluidity in the south.

From north to south, the lineup of the six Allied armies was:

The British Second army on the northern flank ground slowly ahead in the Geilenkirchen area and chopped deeper into the German-held sector west of the Maas river in Holland.

The American Ninth army surged within sight of the Roer river in an advance of two and one-half miles that enveloped nine towns in 24 hours, including Laurenzsbert, Engelsdorf, Ederen and Merzenhausen. They were a little over a mile from the Roer.

There were some signs of enemy withdrawal on the Ninth's southern front, but on its north flank resistance was ferocious. German counterattacks were repulsed in the Lindern area, and there was hard fighting near Langendorf as the Ninth knocked out seven German tanks during the day. Some showed less than 65 miles on their speedometers.

The American Third army merged its holdings inside Germany to a continuous 11-mile front running southeast from near Besch, solidifying its hold on some 25 square miles of enemy soil despite heavy artillery fire and masses of road blocks, mines and anti-tank ditches.

At Metz, Fort Queleu on the southwest surrendered with its garrison of 200 Nazis, but two island pockets and six other forts around that pierced fortress city of France continued to hold

NOV 22 1944

Southeast of Metz the Third army registered gains up to three miles and was within 10 miles of the German border west of Saarbrucken despite stiffening enemy resistance. The 26th, 35th and 80th infantry divisions were active in those advances.

On the American Seventh army front, field dispatches said the Germans were abandoning much equipment as they fled towards Strasbourg and the Rhine, 27 airline miles away.

Through the mountains from the Saverne gap down to Mulhouse the Germans were reported putting up only a disorganized rearguard resistance.

Disclose New Division

Another new Seventh army division, the 100th infantry, crossed the Muerthe river and advanced more than two miles in the Raon L'Etape area, while the Third infantry also crossed that stream and captured La Voivre and Hubache, north of St. Die. The 36th division, operating south of St. Die, advanced two and one-half miles, taking Clefcy at the mouth of Bonhomme Pass and sending patrols eastward several miles through the pass.

Sandwiched among the Americans, the French Second armored division drove through German defenses southeast of Saarebourg to Abreschwiller, 30 miles from Strasbourg.

The French First army, besides its great drive up to Mulhouse and possibly beyond, which was announced proudly by General de-Gaulle, cleared a large area northeast of Belfort and pushed on north four miles to Giromagny and Vescemont.

Field dispatches said the great fortress of Belfort, historic guardian of the Belfort gap, was completely occupied by the French except for the southern section.

Despite bad weather all along the fronts, the Allied Tactical Air Forces were out in moderate numbers supporting the ground attack. They encountered German fighters in somewhat unusual strength. Sixteen American Thunderbolts tangled with 60 Messerschmitt 109's in the Dusseldorf area and downed ten for a loss of one American.

American mediums bombed the fortified villages of Echtz, Derichsweiler and Gergstein just west of Duren as well as the Rhine rail bridges of Sinzig and Neuweid. American air losses for the day were seven fighterbombers and one medium bomber.

(An Associated Press dispatch from Switzerland declared French artillery already had laid a six-mile stretch of Germany's Rhineland north from the Swiss frontier, smashing villages and railway installations on the German side of the stream from Weil to Istein.)

As De Gaulle presented the latest spectacular developments to the French cabinet, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in another part of Paris told war correspondents that the formidable Belfort gap was officially in Allied hands and praised the French for their daring breakthrough. He declared his armies were "keeping up the pressure at maximum strength all along the front."

On most of the American Seventh and Third army fronts in France the Germans fell back toward Strasbourg and Saarbucken, with even their rearguard disorganized by the intense pressure to which they were being subjected.

Bitter Battle in North

But farther north, where the Nazis were fighting on their own soil with their backs to the Roer and the Saar rivers, the enemy was hurling in armor and artillery in a desperate effort to stem the advances of the American First and Ninth Armies and the British Second.

Floundering forward through a steady rain and deep mud, Lt. Gen. Courtney Hodges' First Army completed the clearing of Stolberg, five miles east of Aachen; fought its way deeper into the heavily-mined city of Eschweiler, seven miles northeast of Aachen; cleared the village of Rohe, just west of Eschweiler, and pushed into Hehlrath, a village a mile northwest of Eschweiler.

Fighting was raging from house to house in Hehlrath and Hodges' doughboys beat off a determined

30. 24 — 70551

Nazi counterattack near Heistern, southeast of Eschweiler.

Lt. Gen. William Simpson's Ninth army troops, who repulsed a counter-attack by from 20 to 30 German tanks yesterday near Schleiden, four miles north of Eschweiler, slugged their way 1,500 yards nearer the Roer southeast of Geilenkirchen today, clearing the towns of Gereonsweiler, Freialdhoven, Aldenhoven, Niedermertz and Ungershaugen.

Near Roer River

(The Ninth army advanced one to two miles along the entire front to within 2,000 yards of the river Roer, taking several towns, Associated Press Correspondent Wes Gallagher said in a late dispatch. The towns included Langweiler, Laurensburg, Englesdorf and Merzenhausen.)

(Hodges' troops drove more than a half-mile beyond the village of Heistern, three miles southeast of Eschweiler, while the Nazis fought bitterly to keep their defenses from crumbling before the powerful assault of the First army, a front dispatch said, adding that the fighting was hardest in woods southeast of Eschweiler.

(Capt. Ludwig Sertorious, German military commentator, said the Nazis probably would withdraw from the Eschweiler area and implied that they had not yet committed the bulk of their forces on that sector.)

Northeast of Geilenkirchen, 10 miles north of Aachen, British troops drove through strongly defended Siegfried line positions almost to the outskirts of Wurm, three and a half miles from Geilenkirchen, after beating off two German counter-attacks.

Other British outfits, picking their way through a maze of mines, slush in southeastern Holland, bastion of Venlo and moved steadily forward within five and a half miles of the German Maas river forward on a seven-mile front.

thirty-two miles from the Rhine, in an eastward drive collapsing the whole German stand in the Vosges Mountains.

The French perhaps had already entered Mulhouse, an industrial city of 97,000, in exploitation of their Belfort breakthrough. This push was undermining German positions for 100 miles to the north.

Both the American Seventh and Third armies were beating eastward toward Strasbourg and Saarbrucken, meeting weakening rear-guard resistance from Germans apparently retreating to the Rhine.

Sarrebourg Is Taken.

The Forty-fourth Division of the Seventh Army captured Sarrebourg (population 6,500)—seventy miles northwest of Mulhouse—mechanized patrols were advancing toward Strasbourg thirty miles beyond.

ALLIED TANKS ROLL ALONG UPPER RHINE

FRYE

Two American Armies Smash In From West —Heavy Fighting in Aachen Bulge— Yanks and British Gaining Slowly.

London, Nov. 21 (A. P.).—French armor thrusting northward down the Rhine stormed Mulhouse today, and American troops captured Sarrebourg, Third Army forces fought within eighteen miles of Saarbrucken in the industrially-rich Saar Basin, Still farther north, tanks of the Third Army had driven three miles into Germany.

French troops charged into the fortress city of Belfort — bypassed in the plunge to the Rhine —and were fighting to clean it up, a front dispatch declared tonight. Heavy reinforcements were moving into it, and into the power-drive along the Rhine.

The sweep into Belfort was surprising, even to the assaulting French, for it and Metz—taken by Third Army infantry—had been considered the two strongest fortresses in eastern France. Belfort is ringed by more than a score of satellite forts.

Nazis Seen Quitting France.

It appeared the Germans were giving up their last positions on French soil. But resistance continued strong in the north, especially against the Americans and British making slow gains in the Aachen sectors of Germany in rain and mud.

General Eisenhower called for ever-increasing pressure until victory is won.

Six Allied armies were heaping on this pressure at quickening pace. The United States Seventh and Third armies, swarming eastward in the other blade of a French-American scissors, hit into broken Nazi resistance described as sporadic and disorganized.

An unconfirmed Swiss report said the French were attempting to bridge the Rhine southeast of Mulhouse.

Three Miles From Roer

At the north end of the front, beyond Aachen, American and British armies had cut through fierce German opposition to within some three miles of the Roer river, the last natural defense barrier short of the Rhine near Cologne.

British troops in southeastern Holland were eliminating the Nazis from the west banks of the Maas before Venlo, a gate to the Ruhr.

In the battle area near Aachen, the American First and Ninth armies and the British Second Army pushed their lines slowly toward Cologne, approximately 26 miles beyond the American vanguards, and the Rhine against increasingly furous German resistance marked by tank-led counter-attacks which slowed but failed to stop the Allied drive.

Counterattack Repulsed

The Germans threw 20 to 30 tanks against American Ninth Army units at Schleiden, seven miles southeast of captured Geilenkirchen, but Lieut. Gen. Wiliam H. Simpson's men repulsed this blow and advanced a mile and a half northeast, capturing Aldenhoven on the road to Julich, three miles away. Julich is a bastion on the Roer river. Earlier the Ninth Army had breached a formidable 10-mile-long German anti-tank ditch.

Five fortress groups at Metz continued firing.

A two-mile advance on the American Third Army wing east of Metz carried Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr.'s men to points 8 to 12 miles below the Saar frontier. Third Army troops entered the old Maginet Line defenses north of Faulquemont, 20 miles southwest of Saarbrucken, and took Lelling, nine and a half miles from the Saar border.

Dieuze Taken

Dieuze, 30 miles southeast of Metz, was captured. The Third Army had patrols at Insviller, ten miles northeast of Dieuze.

Patton's Tenth Armored Division, which drove into the Saar, a major German iron and coal region, has deepened its peneration of the Reich to three miles in the Merzig area. This division encountered heavy enemy fire from east of the Saar river.

Twelve miles to the northwest, mechanized cavalry units of the Third Army have advanced five miles into Germany up the Moselle river valley, ancient gateway to the Rhineland.

The Germans fell back toward the border in the entire sector east of Metz.

Towns Captured

In addition to taking Aldenhoven, the American Ninth Army also captured Freialdenhoven, Gereonsweiler, Nedermerz and Ungershaugen.

On the Ninth Army's right, American First Army troops hacked new gains out of stubbornly defended enemy positions and captured the village of Wenau, approximately ten miles east of Aachen and six miles west of Duren on the Roer.

At Outskirts Of Wurm

Above the Ninth Army, British troops beat off two counterattacks and punched deeper into the Siegfried defenses, reaching the outskirts of Wurm, three miles northeast of captured Geilenkirchen.

Farther north, other units of the British Second Army were rapidly completing the job of clearing the enemy out of the Maas bulge in southeastern Holland, meeting almost no opposition as they neared Venlo. A field dispatch said they were less than six miles from Venlo.

British vanguards reached the edge of Helenaveen, a strongly defended German bastion ten miles west of Venlo, a front dispatch disclosed.

Dempsey's Advance

Lieutenant General Sir Miles C. Dempsey's columns battled their way into the outskirts of Amerika, seven miles east of Deurne on the Helmond-Venlo road. They scored local advances across the black, heavy terrain west of the Maas.

South of Helenaveen the British crossed the canal De Helena and closed up to the Maas between Buggenum and Kessel. The Germans were putting up a stiffer fight in this sector.

Advancing under a thunderous barrage from their big guns, the Tommies gained 2,000 yards in a thrust north from the Meijel-Kessel road in the Helden area.

No Mine Fields

The Seventh Army pushed eastward in the Blamont region in pursuit of German troops falling back so rapidly they did not take time to plant the usual mine fields.

Farther south, a three-mile advance against stiffer resistance brought Seventh Army troops into the approaches of the Schirmeck Pass as they captured the village of La Trouche, east of Badonviller. Still farther south, other units captured Anould, within two miles of Fraize and the entrance to the Bonhomme Pass, leading to Colmar.

St. Die Liberated

[A British broadcast recorded by NBC said the United States Seventh Army had liberated St. Die, 45 miles north of Belfort. This town was all that remained to the Germans of what once was the strong Meurthe river line in the Vosges].

Among the towns taken by Seventh Army troops in the drive northeast of Blamont to the approaches to Sarrebourg were St. Georges, Aspach, Ibigny, Richeval, Hattigny, Heming, Landange, Lorquin, La Neuveville, Fraquefing and Neiderhoff.

East of Blamont the Seventh took Taconville, Cirey, Bertrambois, Valet-Chatillon and Lafrimbole. Lafrimbole, the most advanced position, is 32 miles due west of Strasbourg.

Eight miles below St. Die the Americans took Corcieux, at the entrance to Bonhomme Pass, and advanced three miles to the northeast. Seven miles south of Corcieux the French took Gerardmer, at the entrance to the Schlucht Pass.

French Pour Into Valley.

The French First Army, which achieved the most spectacular advance of the whole front when it breached the Belfort Gap and reached the Rhine, was pouring heavy forces into its expanding positions in the river valley. Altkirch and several other towns were captured as these units closed in on Mulhouse.

There was no Allied confirmation of Swiss reports that the French were attempting to bridge the Rhine itself for an attack on the Siegfried Line near Kembs, three miles north of the enemy fortress of Istein.

Bad weather hampered air operations in support of the ground offensive yesterday, but the Allied communique reported fighter bomber attacks on enemy transportation and troops bet Merzig and St. Die.

WAR PLAN GIVEN BY EISENHOWER

To Hammer Reich Until It Surrenders Or Is Destroyed

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Paris, Nov. 21 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme commander of the Allied forces in western Europe, declared today that there had been some reason to believe Germany might have cried quits after the battle of France, but that Adolf Hitler and his Gestapo had managed to maintain their pistol-in-the-back control of the Reich and that the war had become a fight to the death for the German people.

"To get peace we've got to fight like hell for it," Eisenhower told a press conference. "Now let's do it."

Eisenhower implied strongly that he expected the German command to try to fight out the present battle west of the Rhine rather than retreat voluntarily to the east bank.

Withdrawal Will Be Costly

Any soldier probably would be forced to that decision once he had so much of his force west of the river, Eisenhower said, pointing out that Allied air power was so great that any full-scale withdrawal across the river was bound to prove costly even in bad weather.

The Germans have not much more choice than they had in Normandy, he indicated. There they might have been able to delay the Allies longer by falling back from one defensive line to another but could not do so because the bomb-shattered roads and bridges made it virtually impossible to extricate any great percentage of the forces already committed to the battle.

Returning from a tour that took him to all sectors of the front, Eisenhower said with quiet determination that the great power of Allied armies had been thrown into the present campaign to force Germany to surrender or be destroyed. His plan, he said, was to hammer the Germans with increasing force until the highest pressure was reached on the day they finally surrendered.

More Men, Supplies Needed

"Unless everyone all the way through the nation—those at the front and those at home—keeps on the job everlastingly and with mounting intensity, we are only postponing the day of victory," he asserted.

For this last great effort, he said, he wanted and was confident that he would get more men and—most of all—more supplies.

"I want more supplies than we are getting and I think the soldier wants more than he is getting, both now and in the future," the general stated.

Job For Every Man

He made plain that he intended no criticism of previous or present home-front efforts but was simply making a forthright appraisal of the needs of the intensifying Allied effort.

"There is a job here for every man fit for battle that we can bring in, and it's up to every man back home to give him everything he needs—that is my prescription for victory," Eisenhower said.

While he declined even to make a guess as to how soon victory would come, he said that even the Nazis were human enough to break under sufficient pressure and in the face of enough defeats and that it was the intention to run the pressure up to that point without a single lull from now on.

"Optimistic," He Says

"I am optimistic myself," he said, but added with a chuckle, "I do hope to prevent myself from becoming complacent."

In response to an inquiry whether the situation was brighter at present than had been anticipated for this distance from D-day, he said it was decidedly brighter in one respect, as no one on D-day would have believed that the Allies by November would have been massed before the Siegfried Line in such strength as they are.

He conceded, however, that on D-day most persons would have doubted the German ability to keep fighting after such defeats as they have suffered.

Sees Germany Stripped Bare

By last August, he said, it became apparent that the German leaders, who have nothing to lose by continuing the war, possessed in the Gestapo a weapon powerful enough to compel the German people to fight on.

Germany is being stripped bare to continue the fight, he said, and the People's Army is capable for every effective combat when put behind fortifications or in trenches, despite poor equipment and lack of training.

Such troops, when put into trenches with the knowledge that they will be shot in the back if they try to leave, can be formidable opponents, Eisenhower warned.

Praises Allies' Armies

Speaking of recent operations, he said "Walcheren Island was one of the most gallant actions of this war; the navy really deserved great kudos. The Canadian and British armies did a splendid and aggressive piece of work in clearing up the areas at that end of the line."

At the other end of the line he highly praised the French breakthrough to the Rhine, saying, "no single instance has pleased me so much in a long while as the capture of Belfort by the gallant French army and its reaching the Rhine."

'Ike' Plans To Hit Nazis Steadily Until Collapse

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, Paris, Nov. 21 (AP)—General Eisenhower declared today his plan for future operations is to increase pressure steadily all along the Western Front until the Germans are crushed.

To do this, greater supplies are necessary, the supreme commander of the Western Front said.

"I want more supplies than we are getting and I think the soldier wants more than he is getting, both now and in the future," he said.

Appeared Fit After Tour

"To get peace we have got to fight like hell for it," the commander said. "Now let's do it."

Eisenhower appeared fit as ever after a tour of all parts of the fighting zone and said he was especially happy over the French breakthrough to the Rhine.

"No single instance has pleased me so much in a long while as the capture of Belfort by the gallant French army and its reaching the Rhine," Eisenhower said.

Maximum Effort Needed

The General told correspondents that his plans were to hit and hammer the Germans with increasing pressure, reaching its peak on the day the Nazis finally surrender.

"Unless everyone all the way through the nations—those at the front and those at home—keep on the job everlastingly and with mounting intensity, we are only postponing the day of victory," Eisenhower declared.

"The very maximum effort must be made on the day of surrender."

Victory Prescription

Eisenhower declined to make any prediction as to when the war would end and said his call for an all-out effort both at the front and at home was his "prescription for victory."

He said the weather had prevented a full effort in the air in the current offensive, but added:

"One thing that continues to grow to my intense satisfaction is the teamwork between the ground forces, navies and air forces."

He said that while he saw no sign yet of a German crackup, the Germans were human beings, like other people, and if confronted by failure after failure of their armed forces, they would inevitably crack. It is the Allied job, he said, to confront the Germans with more and more of these failures.

Reason For Optimism

In asking for more supplies, the general made it clear that he was not criticizing the efforts of the home fronts in Allied countries up to now, but simply stating that still more materiel would be needed as still greater numbers of soldiers are committed to battle.

He said he was convinced that Allied peoples at home are one with the armies in determination that the enemy shall be given no minutes to rest. He reiterated that the enemy must be hit and hammered until he collapses.

To believe this breaking point Eisenhower said, everyone must understand that enemy morale has not broken and that pressure must continuously increase until his will to fight collapses.

He said the people had every reason to be optimistic, as he himself is, but should guard against becoming complacent.

Formidable Opponents

Eisenhower reported German leaders were faced by a critical shortage of manpower and supplies and were stripping Germany bare to continue the war.

He said the Volkssturm, now being mobilized, was a force far below the standard of the German Army—poorly trained, poorly equipped but capable of very effective fighting when put in trenches or behind fortifications. Such soldiers put in fixed positions and knowing they will be shot in the back if they leave are formidable opponents, the general said.

Speaking of operations on the northern end of the front which preceded the present offensive, Eisenhower commented:

"Walcheren Island was one of the most gallant actions of this war. The navy really deserves great praise. The Canadian and British armies did a splendid and aggressive piece of work in clearing up the areas at that end of the line."

Favors Big Role For French

French successes at the southern end of the front were what Eisenhower expected of the French First Army. He said he knew its mettle, since it had fought under his command in Tunisia when it had only such equipment as the French were able to hide from the Germans. The French army also fought under Eisenhower in Italy. Eisenhower said he favored strongly the French taking as big a part in the war as possible. He felt sure there were plenty of Frenchmen who wanted to fight and that the de Gaulle Government would do all possible to let them.

Asked whether the situation was brighter than had been expected on this date at the time of invasion, the general responded that it was decidedly better in one respect—in that no one could have believed that the Allied armies in November would be massed before the Siegfried Line.

Powerful Weapon

He conceded, however, that on D-day, June 6, most people would have doubted that the Germans could have kept fighting after suffering such defeats as they have taken.

By August it became apparent, he said, that the German leaders, with nothing to lose by continuing the war, had in the Gestapo a weapon powerful enough to compel the German people to fight on.

Allies Aim To Force Decision: Nazis

London, Nov. 21 (AP)—German military commentators described the Allied offensive in the west today as aimed at "annihilating the entire German front" and asserted General Eisenhower "intends to force a final decision regardless of losses."

"There can be no doubt that the German defenders are facing a tough time in holding their own against the mighty onrush," said Martin Hallensleben, in a DNB broadcast dispatch recorded by the Associated Press.

A general German retreat along the whole front was admitted, but Hallensleben said "only the dash of the French First Army along the Swiss border deep into Alsace bears the mark of an action which might become precarious for the Germans."

"North of Basle the French broke through," he said. "If the German command does not act immediately one of those critical moments might arise as we have seen before during this war. But the terrain is suitable for tank warfare and the Germans have a sufficient number of Panzers available to act before General Eisenhower exploits the situation."

GERMANS TOLD ARMIES YIELD

Danger To Reich In Allied Drive Emphasized By Radio

London, Nov. 21 (AP)—The German people got from their military reporters today a somber account of German armies yielding ground before an Allied offensive "which has not yet reached its peak."

Abandonment of their Eschweiler salient in the Aachen sector, trapping of a German garrison in Metz, the American Seventh Army's drive to Sayrebourg, the spectacular French breakthrough to the Rhine—all were broadcast by Berlin, sometimes in pessimistic terms.

Most of the German accounts emphasized the danger to the Reich represented by the Belfort breakthrough. The situation along the Rhine was usually described cautiously as still "too fluid" for conclusions on its ultimate importance, but Martin Hallensleben, German News Agency correspondent, said flatly it "might well place the Germans in a precarious situation."

Hard To Meet "Packed Power"

Hallensleben said the Aachen and Metz fronts had developed into "mammoth battles of materiel," and added "there can be no doubt that the German defense will find it difficult to make a stand against this onrush of packed power."

More cautious, Transocean's correspondent Ludwig Sertorius said the Belfort breakthrough could not yet "actually be termed critical," but admitted that it offered an opportunity to the Allies to destroy the entire Vosges line of the Germans by rolling up its rear with an advance northward along the Rhine.

The Berlin radio, quoting a spokesman of the high command, said "the position of the breakthrough area on the upper Rhine is such that it calls for the most energetic countermeasures."

Alex Schmalfuss, a German war correspondent, broadcast:

"For sheer weight of material and relentless ferocity the battle east of Aachen is the greatest of the whole war. In this phase of the war, where really great regions are at stake and longe-range weapons play an important role, breaches in our positions do not mean much."

American Gains Admitted

Sertorius said the Ninth American Army northeast of Aachen "has made some tactical gain of ground and has occupied several villages," and he reported also that the Seventh Army, having thrown in the bulk of its strength between the Rhine-Marne Canal and the central Vosges, was "pressing strongly toward Sarrebourg with concentrated forces."

Another Berlin broadcast said the offensive toward the Saar by the Seventh Army and the right flank of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army involved 10 to 12 divisions in the area from Saarebourg to Sarreguemines, and the German news agency reported bitter fighting in Sarrebourg itself after American troops had crossed the Saar river and the Rhine-Marne Canal.

New British Attack Forecast

Counteraction by German artillery was said to have halted the advance inside Germany by Patton's tanks near Merzig, and the Germans also claimed that French forces which reached the outskirts of Mulhouse had been repulsed by a strong counterattack.

A withdrawal from the Eschweiler salient on the Aachen front was announced by Berlin, but Sertorious implied that the bulk of German strength on this front had not been thrown into action. He said the British were massing for still another major attack in the vicinity of Venlo, and that until this attack began, the German high command would hold its operational reserves, to gauge the sector of greatest danger.

Summing up the situation on the West front, Hallensleben asserted "the German opportunity now lies chiefly in an element of attrition, by forcing the enemy into a series of costly engagements which will exhaust his supplies and make room for German counterattacks."

(A late dispatch from Associated Press correspondent Ned Nordness said British and American troops and armor "found it sticky going in the Geilenkirchen area." Greatly increased resistance was met in a painfully slow advance as the enemy, fighting with untold fury on his own soil, crashed down on the Allies with artillery and mortar fire and increased strength in infantry.

(The captured town of Hamich, nine miles east of Aachen and but six miles from the important road center of Duren, was described in another dispatch as a monument of ruins to the most savage action First army troops yet had known.

("In two broken counterattacks that they had put in here, the Germans suffered enormous casualties, only about one Nazi in every 10 getting back out of town again," Associated Press correspondent William S. White wrote. "Bodies of German dead had been carried out by the truckload. So big has been the job of clearance that some still lie here in the mud and under pulverized stone heaps that had once been buildings, gray and shapeless bundles under the rain.")

The fiercest enemy resistance on Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third army front was in the area of Merzig, four miles inside the German Saar, where the 10th Armored division repulsed a strong Nazi counterattack and then pushed on another mile against heavy enemy fire. At last report Patton's tanks were about three miles inside Germany at this point and within a mile of Merzig, which is on the east bank of the Saar river.

Inside the fortress city of Metz two diehard Nazi pockets continued to hold out on two islands in the Moselle river in the northwest part of the city and garrisons of five bypassed fortress groups continued to fire sporadically. However, U. S. troops had wiped out all large-scale organized resistance inside the famous stronghold.

Tanks Drive Over Mine Fields To Lead Soldiers

Kinzweiler, Germany, Nov. 20 (AP—Delayed)—Ninth Army tank crews drove through uncleared minefields yesterday in spearheading the capture of Kinzweiler, nine miles northeast of Aachen, in a 40-minute maneuver praised as "superb."

Starting from near-by Warden, nine tanks commanded by Lieut. Floyd M. Jenkins, of Jamaica, Iowa, rumbled through open fields, and came unexpectedly upon a group of signs reading "minen." The Germans had not had time to remove the warnings.

Wouldn't Let The Boys Down

"There was no other way to go and the tankers said they'd go through anyway," said Capt. Richard Wood, Minneapolis. "They were determined not to let the doughboys down," the infantry operations officer said.

"These tankers are the finest bunch of boys you could get. When four tanks were immobilized by mines their crews grabbed tommyguns, jumped out and fought their way into the town with the infantry. As a result we took Kinzweiler with very few casualties."

"I looked each way and there were mines, mines, mines everywhere, but everyone of our boys just kept on going," Jenkins said.

"I was expecting to be blown out of the turret any minute, but I guess I was lucky. The tank driver right in back of me said our tank kicked up mines and left them standing on end, but they didn't go off.

"One tank which got stuck just sat there and fired 86 rounds at the German anti-tank guns to protect us. Finally the Germans made it so hot for them they had to get out."

Blown From Tanks

This crew included Sergt. Harold Gibbs, Brooks, Maine; Private Raymond W. Locke, Hyattsville T/5 Russel E. Schober, Indianapolis, Ind., and Private Jack Paton, Geuda Springs, Kan.

"Doughboys who were riding on tanks were blown off by mines, but they kept charging into the town," Wood said.

"One was a sergeant who had argued his way out of a hospital to hurry back to his company. Even though his wounds had not completely healed, he volunteered to ride a tank. He got into the town, too, but he was killed there."

Capt. Victor Salem, of Kew Gardens, N. Y., company commander, said "some of my boys were dazed by mine blasts and one of them was killed, but they never stopped for a second."

BULLDOZERS CLEAR RUINS IN HAMICH

HAMICH, Germany, Nov. 21. — (AP) Utterly smashed Hamich huddles tonight as a monument of ruins—a monument to the most savage action the veteran American infantrymen here have ever known.

In two broken counterattacks that they had put in here, the Germans suffered enormous casualties. Only about one Nazi in every ten got out of town. Bodies of German dead have been carried out by the truckload. Some bodies still lie in the mud and under pulverized stone heaps that once were buildings.

Some of our own troops went for three days without food or water, pinned in their foxholes by German artillery fire which American Commander Lt. Col. Charles T.

30. 24— 20553

Horner of Doylestown, Pa., said was the worst he ever had seen.

This morning it was possible to bring up hot food — the first the Americans had seen in seven days.

Bulldozers have been working to clear away enough of the rubble to permit the movement of trucks. They came to a German tank knocked out in a huge crater and simply buried it there.

Nazi People's Army' Fails First Test

With the United States Third Army, Nov. 21 (AP)—Heinrich Himmler's People's Army completely flunked its first test against the United States Third Army in a futile attempt to defend Metz, but may give a better account of itself later in Germany.

That is the reaction of officers who led troops against Metz's defenses, which were tough on the outside—where they were manned by SS or Wehrmacht units—but were hopelessly feeble inside the city save for one pocket in the north held by a handful of regulars.

Little Training

Called up only November 5 as a part-time home guard, the soldiers of this motley crew of males from 16 to 60 had had only a few hours' training by the time they faced the Fifth and 95th Infantry Division veterans. They were badly armed, too, and wholly incapable of coping with the Americans.

One typical unit organized in the Metz area was a company encountered by the Fifth Division. A prisoner said it had had only ten hours' training over a period of two weeks and included some men who did not know even how to load and fire their obsolete French carbines. When it was called up, only 26 of its complement reported for duty.

May Have Nuisance Value

Colonel Konstantin Mayer, administrative head of Metz troops, who was captured yesterday by the Fifth, blamed the Volkssturm's dismal showing on lack of time for training and organization. American officers were inclined to agree in part, saying that although material may be bad, if men can be trained to fire guns they can at least make a nuisance of themselves.

It is expected the Volkssturm will be employed elsewhere in the role of screening troops charged with holding up Allied advances while better men and materiel are withdrawn. But even with added training and liberal application of Gestapo and SS pressure, it is regarded as doubtful that the People's Army can be made into really effective units. But these Germans may fight better in their own cities than they did in French M

FRENCH LAUNCHED BELFORT PUSH IN BLINDING STORM

By THOBURN WIANT

BELFORT, France, Nov. 21—(AP) Gen. Jean de Lattre de Tassigny said today that the French offensive against Belfort caught the Germans by surprise, but sheer guts on the part of the French and the unwillingness on the part of the Germans to fight to the death also played parts in the sensational capture of this old fortress city.

The general read this excerpt from the diary of a German general who was killed while directing an action against the French:

"French divisions are spread over an enormous front. There is no sign of action. It is impossible for them to take the offensive. There is no likelihood of our being attacked."

Gen. de Tassigny said bad weather aided his troops.

"Our offensive was launched in such a snowstorm the Germans could not possibly imagine we would have the audacity to spring upon them," he said, paying tribute to the French Forces of the Interior for accomplishing wonders with their maneuvering skill, and "magnificent courage."

Fall of the city surprised everyone, including the French themselves. Belfort and Metz are considered two of the strongest fortresses on the eastern border of France. Belfort is ringed by more than a score of formidable satellite forts which never have been taken by storm since they were constructed by Louis XIV.

The French at Belfort beat off the Germans in 1870 and in World War I. The modern embellishments include an elaborate system of anti-tank ditches and wide minefields.

The French smashed their way into the subterranean chambers of Fort Vaudois, built in 1846 and equipped to stand off attackers for weeks or even for months, after artillery and mortar fire had dazed its occupants.

Capt. Roger James, a French officer of English parentage, who led the attack, said he did not expect to take the fort so quickly, but most of the Germans retreated through the woods.

Using a flashlight I inspected the long dark corridors of the fort, accompanied by Capt. James, peering into huge chambers where the Germans lived like rats. From a few miles ahead in the northern fringe of the city I could hear the thunderous din of the Germans and French exchanging machine-gun, rifle and mortar fire. A French officer said the Germans were withdrawing from house to house and only under the strongest pressure.

Nurse Writes Tribute To GI's, Is Then Killed By Nazi Shell

A United States Army Hospital in Belgium, Nov. 21 (AP)—It was nearly 2 o'clock in the morning but Lieut. Frances Slanger, a graduate of the Boston (Mass.) City Hospital, could not sleep.

Carefully, she eased out of her cot so as not to disturb her tentmates, and by flashlight she began writing down some of the things about American doughboys they had been discussing earlier in the night.

Their conversation had been prompted by a story in which the GI's praised the nurses for "roughing it."

"We have learned a great deal about our American soldier and the stuff he is made of," she wrote. "The wounded do not cry. Their buddies come first. The patience and determination they show, the courage and fortitude they have is something always to behold."

To Stars And Stripes

The next morning she read it to her tentmates—Lieut. Elizabeth Powers, of Lowell, Mass., chief nurse of the hospital platoon; Lieut. Christine Cox, Prides Crossing, Mass., and Lieut. Margaret Bowler, Westfield, Mass.—and said she was thinking of sending it to Stars and Stripes.

They encouraged her and signed it with her. That morning—October 21—she mailed it.

The Paris edition of the Stars and Stripes published the letter November 7 under the title "Nurse Writes Editorial."

Star Of David

But the soldier editor did not know at that time that Nurse Slanger was killed by a German shell the night she mailed the letter and had been buried in the mud in a military cemetery—the first American army nurse in the European war theater to die from enemy action.

And at the head of her grave they put the Star of David.

When the shell burst in their area—the third during a 45-minute barrage—Lieutenant Bowler had been writing a letter, Lieutenant Powers was tying up Christmas presents and Lieutenant Slanger was sitting on the cot beside her.

Lieutenant Slanger was struck in the abdomen by a fragment. The other two nurses were slightly wounded.

Fragments of the same shell so seriously wounded Major Herman Lord, of Detroit, Mich., commanding officer of this platoon of the 45th Field Hospital, that he died two days later. Private Vincent Rivas, Socorro, N. M., attached to the unit, was killed outright.

"I Am Dying"

Dental Officer Lieutenant Gladys Davis Snyder, of Frackville, Pa., a member of a surgical team on duty with the platoon, who had been popping corn in another tent, also was wounded by the same shell.

When Capt. Isadore Schwartz, of Quincy, Mass., reached Lieutenant Slanger, the nurse was conscious and said:

"I am dying."

She was taken to the field hospital, where she died a half an hour later.

Lieutenant Slanger and her tentmates had waded ashore on a Normandy beachhead on D-day plus four. Two hours later, despite their wet clothes, they were on duty in a field hospital set up at St. Mere Eglise, where the fighting was heavy.

It was four days before the nurses got their barracks bags. They slept on the ground when they had a chance. They were with the platoon five weeks and helped handle 3,000 casualties.

104th U. S. Infantry Moves Into The Line

With American Troops Near the Dutch-Belgian Border, Oct. 26 (AP — Delayed) — The American 104th Infantry Division, under the command of Maj. Gen. Terry Allen, of First Division fame in North Africa and Sicily, moved into the line on this front the night of October 24 under Canadian army command.

Today it is pushing forward toward its first objective after taking its first prisoners.

Already Allen's troops—the first division to be shipped from the United States directly to Cher-bourg—are across the Dutch border in some force and fast settling into the routine of combat.

Five Nazis Killed In Yank Billets

With the United States First Army in Germany, Nov. 21 (AP)—Five German soldiers were killed last night in houses occupied by American officers—two of them were shot by Lieut. Col. Elisha Peckham, of Narragansett, R. I., when they emerged from underneath his bed.

Three were shot by Capt. George Folk, of Ohio, when he found them looking out the window of his billet in the attitude of snipers.

A woman who shot and wounded an American officer was shot and killed by him.

Dutch Demand Food

Eindhoven, Holland, Nov. 21 (AP). Demonstrations demanding food for Holland were held in the city square today, with representatives of more than 300,000 workers carrying signs in an orderly parade and employers joining the movement by sending a petition for food to Queen Wilhelmina in London. All work in the city was halted.

691,989 Nazi Prisoners

London, Nov. 21 (AP)—Allied armies on the Western front have captured at least 691,989 prisoners since D-day, the equivalent of 69 German divisions as presently consituted. About two thirds, or 424,124, were taken by the four American armies.

Latest announced totals showed today:

United States First Army, 200,138.
United States Third Army, 117,400.
United States Seventh Army, 50,916.
United States Ninth Army, 55,670.
French First Army, 57,939.
British Second Army, 94,794.
Canadian First Army, 95,132.
French Forces of Interior, with British and Canadian armies, 20,000.
Total—691,989.

ROOSEVELT VISIT AWAITED BY PARIS

Paris, Nov. 21 (A. P.).—Foreign Minister Georges Bidault said today that France, exceedingly grateful for the American contribution to the Allied war effort, awaits a visit from President Roosevelt.

"We await the President among us and I hope he will come soon," the minister told the Assembly in a resume of foreign relations which opened a three-day discussion of the international situation. "All France hailed with enthusiasm his re-election for a fourth term."

M. Bidault described his forthcoming trip to Moscow with Gen. Charles de Gaulle as essential for the future of France, and for peace and world tranquillity, adding: "Russia must occupy a position of the highest importance in post-war Europe."

The minister said that France was opposed to an exclusive western bloc that would "reject those countries which do not touch the shores of the Atlantic." He said he favored, on the contrary, an alliance in the west and an alliance in the east.

CHEVALIER CLEARED BY FRENCH PROBERS

NEW YORK, Nov. 21—The British radio said today that Maurice Chevalier, French actor, had been cleared of charges of collaboration by a committee which had been investigating his activities during German occupation.

The broadcast, which was recorded by CBS said:

"A statement issued in Paris today says Chevalier gave one entertainment only at a German prison camp, was not paid and in exchange for his performance 10 prisoners were released."

44th Division, From New York and Jersey, Wins Praise as Part of the Seventh Army

WITH THE SEVENTH ARMY, Nov. 21 (AP)—The Forty-fourth Infantry Division now fighting under the command of Alabama-born Maj. Gen. Robert L. Spragins, has been responsible for many gains in the stab of the United States Seventh Army toward the Rhine.

The division completed its training at Camp Phillips, Kan., in August of this year, embarked for France and went into the line several days ago. Maj. Gen. Wade H. Haislip, Fifteenth Corps commander, said yesterday the Forty-fourth "have been performing like vterans."

RUSSIANS SMASH GERMAN LINES IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Clean Up Drive Launched Against Nazis Trapped in Latvia.

CAPTURE FIVE TOWNS

Soviets Silent on German Reports of Powerful New Offensive.

By W. W. HERCHER

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 22—(AP) The Russians ripped "several" holes in German defenses in a new offensive in Czechoslovakia and northeast Hungary and made some progress in the third day of a cleanup drive against the Nazis pocketed in southwest Latvia, Berlin reported last night.

Ignoring the word of a new Soviet drive, Moscow's communique recorded a small gain of about three and one-half miles in a line-straightening operation west of Eger, Hungary, announced the virtual clearance of the Baltic island of Saare, and said that the trapped Germans in Latvia had made 40 futile counter-attacks in one day southwest of Jelgava, losing 13 tanks.

Five towns were captured in Hungary, the principal one being the railway station of Verpelet, 8 miles southwest of Eger, the Soviet communique said. It stressed the difficulty of operations due to constant rain that had ruined the roads, but said the Russian advance pressed on and that at Verpelet about 600 Germans and Hungarians were killed.

The Bulgarian army announced it had captured Pristina, 50 miles northwest of Soplje in Yugoslavia, Vucitrn, another 15 miles northwest, and Mitrovica, five miles still farther northwest along the railway that was the German escape route from Greece.

Marshal Tito later announced the captures were in joint action by Bulgarian and Yugoslav partisans.

A supplement to the Soviet communique said Russian troops at unspecified places in Yugoslavia had routed units of the German S.S. Prinz Eugen and 117th infantry divisions, capturing many of them.

Altogether, from Nov. 14 through Nov. 20 in Hungary, 4,220 German and Hungarian troops have been captured, making a total of 11,920 since Nov. 8, Moscow added.

It said nothing of the continuing siege of Budapest from points south and southeast of the Hungarian capital, and said there were no changes on any other fronts except in the narrow southern peninsula of Saare (Osel) island, covering the entrance to the gulf of Riga.

Trapped on Island

There the sudden Russian attack took 18 populated places and compressed the isolated enemy into a "vest" pocket 1-2 miles deep which is being shelled from all points, Moscow announced. With their backs to the sea, the Germans were in a hopeless plight. The Germans admitted withdrawing to the southwest tip of the island.

On the mainland in southwest Latvia the much larger German forces—estimated by Premier Stalin at 30 divisions—which have been trapped for weeks, were in somewhat similar plight.

On the mainland in southwest Latvia German broadcasters said the Russians had ripped through the Nazi defenses above Vainode, 35 miles southeast of Liepaja and that "medium-strength" Soviet forces were being used in the drive on Liepaja and Ventspils, 70 miles north of Liepaja.

Moscow dispatches emphasized that the importance of the fighting in northeast Hungary in bitter snowy weather was not to be minimized as it was unhinging the defenses the Nazis have erected at a distance from Vienna and Bratislava as well as Budapest.

Romanians Note Battles

While Moscow said nothing of the drive southwest of Ungvar, the Romanian communique gave some confirmation to the German reports by announcing that fighting in northeast Hungary west of Tokaj was going on "with undiminished violence," with Soviet and Romanian troops on the offensive.

The Germans said the strength of the attacking forces was seven to eight divisions and that infantry supported by armor had succeeded in making several holes in German defenses between the Ung and Latorica rivers.

In the continuing cleanup drive in the Balkans there was a series of attacks by American 15th Air Force Liberators and fighter-bombers on German motor convoys trying to escape from the Russians and Marshal Tito's Partisans in Yugoslavia. Convoys were stalled between Novi Pazar and Sarajevo by the raids, and then troops and cars were sprayed with fragmention bombs along 150 miles of road.

Bulgarians Take 3 Towns

The Bulgarian army announced it had captured Pristina, 50 miles northwest of Skoplje in Yugoslavia; Vucitrn, another 15 miles northwest, and Mitrovica, five miles still farther northwest along the railway that was the German escape route from Greece.

Marshal Tito later announced the captures were in joint action by Bulgarian and Yugoslav Partisans.

A supplement to the Soviet communique said Russian troops at unspecified places in Yugoslavia had routed units of the German SS. Prinz Eugen and 117th Infantry divisions, capturing many of them.

REDS MENACE NAZI ESCAPE

Cut Roads From Miskolc—Open Latvian Drive.

London, Nov. 21 (A. P.).—Red Army troops closed in today on northern escape routes for enemy troops rolled back to the outskirts of Miskolc, Hungary's fifth city, as the Germans declared the Russians had opened their winter offensive far to the north against 300,000 Nazis pocketed in western Latvia.

Late front reports said a German withdrawal from Miskolc appeared imminent. Nazi escape routes to the east and west of Miskolc, eighty-five miles northeast of besieged Budapest, already were cut. One Red Army column had battled to the outskirts of Eger, twenty-two miles southwest of Miskolc, Russian front dispatches said.

Another Soviet armored unit which had rolled through Diosgyor, three miles west of Miskolc and within twenty miles of the old Czecho-Slovakian frontier, veered north toward road and rail communications between Miskolc and the rail hub of Losonc (Lucenec) on the Slovak border.

Reds Gain in Baltics.

Units of Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukraine Army drove into the southern outskirts of Miskolc with the capture of Csaba and Szirma, less than one and two miles south and southeast of the city.

Berlin reports on the Latvian offensive said the Russians had thrown huge infantry, tank, plane and artillery forces against the Germans on a 30-mile front near Liepaja, one of the two Baltic escape ports left to the Nazis.

The German accounts said the Russians had ripped holes in the Axis lines in violent fighting entering its third day, but claimed counter-attacks had nullified the Red Army gains.

The Russian midnight war bulletin said that southwest of Jelgava, ninety-seven miles east of Liepaja, the Germans were dislodged from some positions in hand-to-hand fighting. Berlin asserted fighting was particularly fierce near Priekule, twenty miles southeast of Liepaja.

2,350 PLANES HIT OIL WORKS

Record Fighter Escort Bags 74 German Interceptors

London, Nov. 21 (AP)—Seventy-four German planes were destroyed in the air and six more wrecked on the grounds today as the largest aerial escort in history, more than 1,100 American fighters, fought a series of savage sky battles to protect a fleet of 1,250 Fortresses and Liberators which hit three German oil refineries with 4,000 tons of bombs.

Forty United States heavy bombers and 17 fighters were missing from the attack, although some of them may have landed in friendly territory.

The American armada flew through temperatures as low as 43 degrees below zero in order to pound the refineries at Hamburg and Harburg and the large Leuna synthetic oil plant at Merseburg.

Luftwaffe Comes Up

The Eighth and Ninth Air Forces marshalled Thunderbolts, Mustangs and Lightnings from bases in both Britain and France to cover the assault on the trio of targets and the Luftwaffe came up in strength to resist the attack.

The United States communique said the Germans sent up more than 250 interceptors, but the escort engaged the Germans so thoroughly that only one bomber formation was actually attacked. In this conflict a bomber gunner shot down one enemy plane.

Presumably a considerable part of the American bomber losses were in this one formation, although anti-aircraft was officially described as "very intense" over the target areas and undoubtedly took its toll.

Series Of Dogfights

Seventy three interceptors were accounted for by the American fighter pilots in a series of dogfights.

After the bombers were well on the way home, some of the escorting planes dropped down to strafe enemy objectives and besides destroying half a dozen grounded enemy aircraft, shot up three locomotives.

The Leuna synthetic plant was assigned to the Fortresses while the Liberators attacked the Deutsche refinery at Hamburg and the Rhenania refinery at Harburg. Bombing generally was done under adverse conditions, although some groups were able to see through to their targets momentarily through breaks in the clouds.

In all nearly 3,500 Allied war planes ranged over Nazi territory today.

RAF Also Out

About 200 RAF Lancasters also blasted a synthetic oil refinery at Homberg in the Ruhr, while a small force of Italian-based heavies of the 15th Air Force pounded on objectives in Yugoslavia.

The Hamburg, Harburg and Merseburg plants produced a total of 126,000 tons of fuel monthly for German war machines—enough to keep five armored divisions in the field for five months or provide propellent power for tens of thousands of V-2 rockets.

It was over Merseburg, home of the great Leuna synthetic oil plant, that American fighters November 2 shot down 130 planes in record-breaking aerial combat.

Nine fighters previously reported missing from yesterday's operations have returned to base, leaving nine fighters unaccounted for, Eighth Air Force headquarters said.

52 Nazi Planes Destroyed

London, Nov. 21 (AP)—A record fleet of 1,100 American fighter bombers destroyed at least 52 German planes today, while the 1,250 heavy bombers they were escorting plunged 4,000 tons of explosives onto three zealously guarded synthetic oil plants.

Heavy Lancaster bombers of the RAF during the afternoon smashed a synthetic-oil plant at Homberg in the Ruhr 20 miles southwest of Kassel. Spitfires and Mustangs flew escort.

NOV 22 1944

First reports of the American attacks showed 21 Nazis felled by a single Eighth Air Force unit, and this prompted a spokesman to comment:

"Something big happened over there."

Flak "Very Intense"

Major George E. Preddy, Greensboro (N. C.) Mustang commander, shot down one of the Nazis running his score to thirty and a half, of which five were destroyed on the ground.

Clouds were scattered over the targets and at Hamburg and nearby Harburg the flak was "very intense." Ground fire was reported moderate at Merseburg.

An Eighth Air Force spokesman said the score of the swirling battles over Hamburg, Harburg and Merseburg might approach the 208 destroyed on November 2. Then, as today, the Germans came up to defend the huge Leuna synthetic refinery at Merseburg, 100 miles southwest of Berlin.

The mighty fleet was well guarded today and it struck as General Eisenhower promised Germany a winter of remorseless bombardment from the air.

Most Powerful Escort

The 1,100 fighter craft made up the most powerful escort ever dispatched with the bombers and most flew from British bases, the Eighth Air Force announcement said.

The Leuna plant, at almost the exact geographic center of Germany, was bombed for the 12th time on November 2. It once was capable of supplying 50,000 tons a month. The Deutsche synthetic oil refineries, at Hamburg, are among the largest in the Reich. The great Rhenamia refineries are located six miles south at Harburg. All were objectives today.

It was the first time all three divisions of the United States Eighth Air Force had gone to the continent since last Thursday when they carpet-bombed German positions minutes before the American Ninth and First Armies.

More than 100 RAF Mosquitos—many carrying two-ton blockbusters—hit Hannover twice last night.

Coblenz Bombed

RAF Lancasters also bombed Coblenz during the night.

In addition to yesterday's Eighth Air Force attack on a Gelsenkirchen oil plant and the Munster railroad yards, Ninth Air Force Thunderbolts and Mustangs flew 80 sorties in support of frontline troops, mostly between Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's American Third Army and the Saar industrial area.

Forty locomotives, 157 freight cars and 24 trucks were destroyed or damaged. Four planes were lost.

The synthetic oil plant at Bottrop, west of Gelsenkirchen, has been knocked out, an American headquarters' communique stated, according to a Reuter dispatch.

Reconnaissance photographs taken since the Eighth Air Force attacks of November 4, 6 and 11 and the RAF bomber command's attack of October 21 revealed that almost every major building in the large factory area has been destroyed or seriously damaged, the report stated.

PILOT OF MUSTANG DOWNS SIX NAZIS

LONDON, Nov. 21—(AP) Captain William R. Whisner, Jr., 21-year-old Mustang flight leader from Shreveport, La., today picked off six FW190s in aerial combat over Germany to equal the record for a single day's fighter bag in the European theater.

Other pilots with six kills in the air on one mission are Whisner's squadron commander, Major George E. Preddy of Greensboro, N. C., and Major Fred J. Christensen, Jr., Watertown, Mass.

Preddy added an FW190 in combat today to boost his total to 30 1/2 planes destroyed, five of them through ground strafing.

V-2 Launching Site In Holland Is Bombed

London, Nov. 21 (AP)—A V-2 launching site in enemy-occupied Holland was dive bombed today by a squadron of Australian pilots in Spitfires that dived into the target from 8,000 feet.

Thousands of tons of bombs have been dropped on V-1 platforms, but this was the first announcement of an attack on the V-2 rocket-launching sites since it was disclosed they had hit England.

FREED NATIONS HELD STARVING

Germans Drained Occupied Lands To Feed Own People

London, Nov. 21 (AP)—Germany has drained occupied and recently liberated Europe to the starvation point in order to feed her troops and workers on the home front, an Allied economic survey disclosed today.

Meanwhile, German officials admitted that reserve food stocks built up from the occupied countries were practically depleted and that Germany will have to face this winter on her own resources.

A spokesman for the British Ministry of Economic Warfare warned, however, against any wishful believing that Germany's food situation is serious and that the home front might crack because of it.

Rest Of Europe Foodless

While the German home front apparently can live through another winter of war without the fear of starvation, occupied—and even the recently liberated—countries will try to pull through on the smallest rations they have known.

Spokesmen for Norway, Holland, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Greece, Yugoslavia, and Albania asserted their countries were practically depleted of food.

Dr. Stoyan Gavrilovic, Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in the Yugoslav Government, said thousands of his countrymen would die this winter unless they get food.

Norway Faces Starvation

A Norwegian Government spokesman asserted Norway faces a critical winter with the prospect of starvation throughout most of the country.

The food situation is so bad in Holland that the Dutch have appealed to the Allies to send supplies immediately. The situation is somewhat better in Belgium and France, but the two countries are depending on Allied aid to see them through the winter.

As long as the Reich was not directly threatened with invasion, the Germans on the home front concentrated on turning out armanents and let the occupied countries provide the food.

Food Supplies Requistioned

During 1943 and until the liberation Germany took from France 800,000 tons of wheat, 500,000 tons of other grain, 400,000 tons of potatoes and 35,000 tons of fats.

During the period 1943-44 Holland was forced to give up 350,000 tons of potatoes, 500,000 tons of vegetables, 20,000 tons of meat and 9,000 tons of fats.

Denmark last year sent Germany 40,000 tons of butter and 80,000 tons of meat.

Hungary contributed 500,000 tons of bread grain, Romania 500,000 tons.

a chance to become great." nor, she added, "is Russia a free nation—that's all tommyrot."

The former Nancy Langhorne of Virginia, first woman to sit in parliament, readily acknowledged there was a Cliveden set which met her at Plymouth estate, Cliveden, now a Canadian hospital. She said it might be revived after the war.

"The Cliveden set was a round-table, where women met members of parliament, to discuss problems," she said. "It was a political circle that Lord Beaverbrook couldn't get in."

The Cliveden meetings once were widely described as favoring appeasement, but she declared them "really constructive; they caused thinking."

After asserting that her entire foreign policy was to draw Britain and America closer together, Lady Astor declared she did not favor an easy peace for Germany but hoped that all Germans would not be considered Nazis.

"We have been casting our pearls of democracy and equality before swine," she said. "Europe needs a reformation, it needs a salvation army more than any other kind of army."

She declared the Nazis must be punished, and the other Germans re-educated.

Army Paper Comments

But a rush to buy any cigarettes in stock—even at 50 cents a pack—was feared, and one dealer said a bit grimly that he would try to take care of the troops "but civilians must come first."

The army newspaper, Stars And Stripes, gave considerable space to the cigarette shortage. A typical comment came from Sergt. Lewis Sandler, of Dorchester, Mass., who said, "Something is rotten and it's not in Denmark."

Sergt. Marion Lemman, Memphis, Tenn., said, however, "If they are going up front I am perfectly willing to do without, but the truth is—I'd like to know why."

One happy sailor was Rod McLeod, of Boston, Mass. "I've been trying to give up smoking and couldn't stop," he said. "Now I have to."

CIGARETTE DEARTH IRKS ARMY EDITORS

London, Nov. 21 (A. P.).—The halting of cigarette sales at all United States Army post exchanges in England except at Air Force combat stations led the Army newspaper Stars and Stripes today to demand an answer from Washington "to the question which is in the mind of every GI smoker: where are the cigarettes?"

The Army said that a critical shortage and priorities for combat forces on the continent caused the ban on sales. Hospital patients and combat personnel will still be able to smoke their favorite brands from the States.

British cigarettes cost 50 cents for a package of 20. British Tommies are rationed 45 English cigarettes a week.

In Paris Supreme Headquarters promised a report on the cigarette situation in the French capital and many other rear areas where United States soldiers were also told they could get no cigarettes.

American cigarettes were selling on the Paris black market at $4 a package.

[The Tokyo radio, in a broadcast recorded by CBS, said that it was virtually impossible to find a package of popular-brand cigarettes anywhere in the United States, and cited this as an indication that collapse on the United States home front was near.]

Allied Army Olympics Planned for After V-Day

LONDON, Nov. 21 (AP).—An extensive athletic program, highlighted by an Allied army in Paris, is being organized for troops awaiting transportation home after V-Day and for the Army of Occupation in Germany.

Some 100 college sports officials, high school coaches, college athletes and professional football and basketball players stationed in the European theater already have pledged their support of the Army-sponsored plan, said Colonel Frank McCormick, E. T. O., athletic officer who formerly was head of the Junior American Legion sports program.

All allied men and women in uniform who have sports backgrounds would be eligible to compete in the Army Olympics, which would be held as soon as possible after V-Day.

The huge amount of athletic equipment needed for the program now is being built up.

Yugoslav Premier Visits Moscow

London, Nov. 21 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Ivan Subasic of Yugoslavia has arrived in Moscow and conferred with Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs Molotov, the Moscow radio announced last night in a broadcast recorded here.

The German radio said today that Marshal Tito also was in Moscow.

Sweden Seeks Safe Conduct

Stockholm, Nov. 21 (AP)—The Swedish Government is negotiating with the German and British governments to obtain safe-conduct rights for Swedish Red Cross ships to deliver relief to the population of northern Norway, it was announced officially today.

Anti-Hitler Posters Seen

Stockholm, Nov. 21 (AP)—The newspaper Aftonbladet published an undated, unattributed story today saying numerous posters reading, "Down with Hitler," appeared on the streets of Berlin yesterday and were immediately torn down by police and SS men. The posters were reported to have said:

"On November 20, 1942, the destruction of the German Seventh (sic) Army began at Stalingrad under Hitler's orders. On November 20, 1944, begins the destruction of Hitler and his hangmen who sacrificed the German people that they might live. Germany must not go under as did the Seventh (sic) Army. Therefore—Down with Hitler."

(The German Sixth Army was destroyed at Stalingrad, with 330,000 casualties.)

London Gets Modified Lighting

London, Nov. 21 (AP)—For the first time in more than five years of blackout, London rejoices in the next best thing to full pre-war street lighting—a moonglow that enables pedestrians to make their way about most of the capital without flashlights.

This modified kind of lighting came on for the first time last night. Crowds used to feeling their way gingerly through the darkness were noisily appreciative.

An attempt was made in late September to change over from the blackout to a dimout, but the result was so cautious and confused that Londoners benefited only slightly. In numerous other cities and towns, however, uniform bright lighting was restored almost to pre-war brilliance.

The chief official explanation of the September dimout flop in London was that much of the electrical equipment was worn out and that many shopkeepers and householders lacked the proper material. The new rules also permitted window lights to show.

Some of the newspapers blamed official ineptitude.

Citrine Silent On A. F. L. Rejection

London, Nov. 21 (A. P.).—Sir Walter Citrine, head of the British Trade Union Congress, declined to comment today on the rejection by the American Federation of Labor of an invitation to the forthcoming world labor meeting here. The rejection drew no immediate comment from the British press.

British Warships Attack Nazi Convoy Off Sweden

Stockholm, Wednesday, Nov. 22 (AP)—British warships attacked a German convoy last night near the Island of Kering off Marstand on Sweden's west coast and it was believed at least one German ship was sunk, dispatches from Goteborg to the newspaper Dagensnyheter said.

Eyewitnesses on the shore could see the flashes of gunfire.

ITALIAN CAMPAIGN BOGGED BY STORM

HEINZERLING

Only Minor Engagements Reported—Planes Blast Po Crossing.

ROME, Nov. 21—(AP) The Italian land campaign was bogged in the mud, snow and fog of the Appenines and the lower Po valley today. Only a few minor engagements were reported.

American Havoc attack bombers carried the campaign to the Germans with a 12-hour assault on one of the few crossings of the Po river left to the Germans—a pontoon bridge near Ostiglia on the main road between Modena and Verona. About 50 miles north of the front lines below Bologna.

Planes cruised over the crossing all night, bombing occasionally and strafing enemy traffic moving over the bridge. Results were believed to have been good, although a ground haze prevented close observation.

On both the Fifth and Eighth army fronts activity was confined mainly to patrolling, although the Germans made a few small raids against the Fifth.

Eighth Army troops moved in after a strong artillery attack and took stoutly-defended buildings at Zuccherificio, about two miles south of Ravenna, used as a German ob-

U. S. Army Cigarette Shortage Now Begins To Worry British

London, Nov. 21 (AP)—The British began to worry tonight about the American Army's cigarette "where-are-they?" mystery.

Although the Board of Trade reassured everybody that there were now enough British cigarettes in the United Kingdom, the little tobacconists began to fret.

They complained that, contrary to the Board of Trade's optimism, there was already a shortage of the popular English brands, and that they were receiving only a fraction of their quota for the last six months.

Troop Demand Feared

One wholesaler-retailer, who had to close one of his seven shops, said "I used to get 10,000 of one brand of cigarettes every four weeks. Today I am lucky if I get 2,000."

Dealers feared that American forces in Britain, cut off from their own post exchange supplies which are being sent to combat troops at the front, would turn to the English shops.

It's no secret that popular British brands have no special popularity with American troops. Nor is it

British White Paper On Dumbarton Oaks

London, Nov. 21 (AP)—The Foreign Office, in a commentary on the Dumbarton Oaks proposals issued tonight as a White Paper, said the proposals would serve as the basis of future talks between the four great powers — Britain, the United States, Soviet Russia and China.

The Foreign Office did not list France as one of the big powers.

The paper said that the proposals did not commit the governments concerned.

"But it is hoped," the commentary said, "that they will assist the governments to come to agreement on the questions they cover and on other points which have been left open for further study, and that the four governments will then be able to circulate definite proposals for consideration at a conference on the states concerned."

LADY ASTOR HAS PRAISE FOR REDS OF RUSSIA ONLY

LONDON, Nov. 21—(AP) Lady Astor spoke her first public words of praise for Russia today but added: "I wouldn't be caught dead with a British Communist."

"Communism in Russia has taught the people to read," she told a press conference commemorating her 25 years in the House of Commons.

"A people can't think or reach God until they learn to read. I don't dislike Russian communism. It has changed the European policy of keeping the people poor and ignorant—look at Spain and Italy."

She declared France is not a great country—"not even the French believe that, but we will give them

Sandys Given Works Post

London, Nov. 21 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill tonight placed responsibility for rehousing Britain's bombed-out population on the shoulders of his son-in-law, Duncan Sandys.

The Prime Minister announced the King had approved the appointment of Sandys as Minister of Works to succeed Lord Portal, whose resignation Churchill requested and received.

"I have come to the conclusion that the office of Minister of Works must at this juncture be held by a Minister in the House of Commons," Churchill said in a letter to Lord Portal.

"The housing situation in regard to prefabricated dwellings and bomb damage repairs is so important that the House will require to have necessary statements and explanations made to them by a Minister in their midst who is actually responsible for having the work done."

Churchill also announced that the Ministry of Economic Warfare would be dissolved by December 31 and its functions in the prosecution of the war against Japan would be transferred to other departments.

Sir Edward Grigg was appointed Minister Resident in the Middle East to succeed Lord Moyne, killed by assassins in Cairo November 6.

servation post. A number of prisoners were taken.

More prisoners were taken by a patrol north of the Ravenna airport, south of the coastal city.

Other patrols moved along the Montone river inland, and also in the mountain sector south of the Rimini-Gologna highway southwest of Forli, where the eighth army has come up against strong German positions.

The Germans made an unsuccessful counterattack on the American Fifth army front along the Florence-Bologna highway south of Bologna near Pedre la Fabrio. The attack was described officially as small. There were other small raids in this difficult country.

8th Army Captures German Post

New York, Nov. 21 (AP)—Albanian Partisans who earlier liberated Tirana, the capital, have taken the seaport of Durazzo, 20 miles to the west, the Free Yugoslav Telegraph Service said in a dispatch today recorded by the FCC.

Rome, Nov. 21 (AP) — Behind strong artillery, British Eighth Army troops have captured strongly defended sugar-factory buildings at Zuccherificio, two miles south of Ravenna on the Adriatic, Allied headquarters announced today.

The buildings had been used as a German observation post. A number of prisoners were taken.

West of Forli on the highway to Bologna, other British troops captured several localities in local gains.

Nazis Beaten Off

German raids on the Fifth Army sector have been beaten off. There was no major action.

The Mediterranean Allied Air Forces flew approximately 1,800 sorties yesterday, from which 27 aircraft are missing. These included attacks by strong forces of United States 15th Army Air Force heavy bombers on an oil refinery at Blechhammer in upper Silesia.

Other heavy and fighter bombers of the Strategic Air Force hit railroad targets in Yugoslavia.

Macmillan Leaves Rome

Going to London and Washington For Control Conferences

ROME, Nov. 21 (AP).—Harold Macmillan, British Ambassador, left today for conferences in London and Washington to determine, in effect, to what extent the Allied nations meant business when they recently converted the Allied Control Commission in Italy to the Allied Commission. He is acting president of the Allied Commission.

Ostensibly, dropping the word "control" meant that the Allies were relaxing their stringent regulation of affairs of the Italian government. Actually, however, the directives under which the commisison operates have remained the same.

D. S. M. FOR GENERAL

Mediterranean Air Force Headquarters, Italy, Nov. 21 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Gen. Ira Eaker presented the Distinguished Service Medal today to Major-Gen. John F. Curry of Denver, for his work as commander of the Western Technical Training Command. The citation emphasized Gen. Curry's development of schools on wheels for training line maintenance crews, aerial engineers and pilots.

Col. Joseph W. Baylor, Lake Junaluska, N. C., received the Legion of Merit for his job of air force organization in Great Britain and in the Mediterranean, and Col. William S. Eaton, 115 E. 82d street, New York city, received the Legion of Merit for work in moving two air forces from North Africa to Italy.

Major Joseph W. Timberlake Jr., Gastonia, N. C., received the Soldier's Medal for rescuing British Brigadier Norman W. Smith of London from drowning on August 3. The Major swam through a heavy surf from an Italian west coast beach to bring the general to safety.

Gen. Eaker, commander of Mediterranean Air Forces, presented the Air Medal to Major E. H. Garry, Topeka, Kan.

ITALIAN PATRIOTS AID ASSAULT ON GERMANY

ON THE FRENCH-ITALIAN FRONTIER, Nov. 17 (AP) (Delayed)—Thousands of Italian patriots are harassing the Germans who face the American and French troops on the right flank of the American Seventh and French First Armies here in the jagged Alps.

In the high valleys that fringe the frontier, valiant roving bands of Italian Partisans swoop out of the dark woods on skis, pour fierce hail of fire into surprised groups of Germans and quickly retire. One American unit reported that one of the main roads running to the front through Larche was denied to the enemy "because demolition work was being constantly carried out by Italian Partisans."

Divisions of ill clad and poorly armed and fed patriots are active in the general area of Susa in the valley of Torino; Pigma, the valley of Alste and the valley of Chisone and around Cuneo and Alba. Many thousands are operating in this area.

"These men have not been as well supplied as the French and get discouraged waiting for parachute drops that never come," an American officer said. "They are a serious nuisance in these valleys to the Germans, who are forced to do continuous mopping-up operations."

The Italians get most of their weapons by attacking the Germans. In one recent instance, an American bomber crashed in the mountains and an American flier safely forced down in that area [illegible] three Browning machine guns are now being used by Germans.

Drachma Stabilized

Athens, Nov. 21 (AP)—The Bank of Greece today fixed the price of British gold sovereigns at 2,750 of the new stabilized drachmas, compared with the trillions it brought earlier this month in inflated drachmas.

The order was intended to stop illicit traffic in gold between Greece, Egypt and Italy. Varying prices had led to speculation.

The sovereign, which is a shade lighter than the American $5 gold piece, equaled the British pound when England was on the gold standard. The pound of the British military administration, however, is valued at 600 drachmas, or less than one quarter the price of the gold pound.

NEW IRAN PREMIER

Tehran, Iran, Nov. 21 (A. P.).—Morteza Quilikhan Bayatt was instructed by the Shah today to form a new government after receiving narrow approval in Parliament yesterday.

The former Premier, Mohammed Saed, resigned two weeks ago after attacks by Russian newspapers over his refusal to grant oil concessions in northern Iran (Persia) to Russia. Bayatt was minister without portfolio in Saed's cabinet and formerly was a finance minister.

Of 100 Deputies attending the Parliament session yesterday, fifty voted for Bayatt, forty-five for another candidate and five abstained.

BRITISH HELD UP IN BURMA

Slight Withdrawal Forced In Drive Along Railway

Southeast Asia Headquarters, Ceylon, Nov. 21 (AP)—British troops driving southward along the Myitkyina-Mandalay railway corridor on the right flank of the Allied north Burma offensive to clear a land route to China have been forced to withdraw slightly, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's command announced today.

The withdrawal was made by the British 36th Division after a day of heavy fighting north of Pinwe, which is seven miles above Naba junction, next important goal in this sector.

On the left wing of the Allied drive, Chinese troops in heavy fighting repulsed a counterattack mounted in the southern sector of Bhamo.

The north Burma operations were supported by the Eastern Air Command, which bombed Japanese positions and fired their stores.

In northwestern Burma East African and Indian troops progressed satisfactorily, headquarters said, in their drive southeastward in the Kalemyo area.

Chinese In Bhamo Repulse Jap Blow

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 21 (AP)—Chinese troops fighting inside the north Burma Japanese base of Bhamo repulsed an enemy counterattack in the southern sector of the town after heavy fighting, an Allied communique said today.

Operations around Kalemyo west of the Chindwin river progressed satisfactorily, the communique added, and east of the river an attack on an Allied position was repulsed without loss.

First WACs Reach China

Chungking, Nov. 21 (AP)—The first WACs have arrived in China.

They are Capt. Elizabeth M. Lutze, of Sheboygan, Wis., and Lieut. Florence Bullitt, of San Jose, Cal., both assigned to secretarial work in Maj. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer's headquarters here. They reached Chungking yesterday by plane.

McClure Gets China Post

Chungking, Nov. 21 (AP)—Maj. Gen Robert B. McClure, of Palo Alto, Cal., has been appointed deputy chief of staff for the United States forces in the China theater.

The 48-year-old Californian, former commander of an American division in the Southwest Pacific which relieved the marines on Bougainville, arrived in Chungking by plane yesterday.

Foe Apparently Set To Sacrifice Division There

Nimitz sets Japanese death toll in Marianas and Palau islands at 63,388.....Page 5

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Wednesday, Nov. 22 (AP)—American troops loosened the Japanese hold on northern approaches to the Ormoc Valley today despite the weather and an apparent Japanese decision to sacrifice an entire division if necessary to hold present positions near the village of Limon.

Weary units of the 24th Infantry Division—which has borne the brunt of the entire Leyte battle—yesterday repulsed the third determined enemy attack on the roadblock which the Americans now hold across the Ormoc highway south of the enemy strong point at Limon.

Reports Division Committed

Meanwhile, the Japanese in Limon clung stubbornly to their positions, which General MacArthur noted included elaborate trench systems and heavy fortifications; and the daily communique asserted that General Yamashita had apparently decided to commit the famous First Japanese Division to hold the town.

When Limon was first cut off from the main Japanese forces to the south, Americans estimated that a regiment of the Japanese First Division held the town. However, infiltration and at least one tank-aided attack during the first hours of the roadblock may have permitted the reinforcement of this group.

The communique said fresh troops of the 32d Division were maintaining steady frontal pressure against Limon, reducing the enemy works piecemeal when necessary. This was the only aid in sight for the hollow-eyed 24th Infantry units which—sometimes receiving their supplies by airplane and parachute—were still holding the slopes which they occupied ten days ago.

Infiltration Cut Supplies

Some Japanese units have filtered through weak or unoccupied points in the American line. Some succeeded in cutting across American rear communication lines and in staging hit-and-run raids against command posts.

Elmont Waite, Associated Press correspondent, reported that one of several small Japanese parties succeeded Monday in throwing a machine-gun-commanded bloc across the American arterial supply road between Carigara and Pinamopoan. American light tanks and infantry, however, pushed the enemy off the road and surrounded them on a beach Monday night. Today they were being methodically destroyed.

None of the Japanese sorties has stopped American supply lines for long; but they have added to the difficulties, which have mounted as country roads virtually disintegrated under torrential rains.

Crush Strong Point

Today's communique added that the American 96th Division crushed an isolated enemy strong point west of Dagami in another facet of the many-phased envelopment movement against the Ormoc Japanese forces.

The Seventh Division, on the south end of the American line, which draws a huge semi-circle around the town, repulsed another enemy counterattack, the fourth within about ten days.

In the air, American heavy bombers were brought into service for the first time from local bases on Leyte. The big bombers—presumably Liberators—were staging through the Leyte bases; that is, landing there to refuel before going over the enemy sector of the island and possibly landing on the local fields again on their way back to their main bases to the southeast.

Japanese aircraft made another attempt to raid American positions and lost six planes in the effort. American air patrols were credited with the victories.

Typhoon Slows Fighting On Leyte Isle

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 21 (AP)—The battle of Leyte ground nearly to a stop today while Manila recovered from its fourth major American air raid of the month.

On Leyte, a typhoon took precedence over efforts of both sides on the swaying Limon battle line. General MacArthur's communique noted that the 32d Division was making some progress near Limon, reported that the enemy was continuing desperate efforts to break a road-block south of the town—and added, significantly, "all traffic is fraught with great difficulties and hazards; and battle conditions are becoming static."

Seven Planes Bagged

In the air war 35 enemy fighters and dive bombers raided American positions, losing seven aircraft to air patrols and ground fire. American aircraft countered with attacks on Japanese communications lines, supply areas and water-front targets near Ormoc.

Vice-Admiral John S. McCain's carrier planes hit Manila again Saturday, damaged airfields, fired three merchant ships and destroyed 118 Japanese planes.

Morrie Landsberg, Associated Press war correspondent, reported from McCain's flagship that American pilots found "a ghost fleet of 100 war-crippled Japanese ships" in Manila Harbor.

Last-Ditch Battle

At Limon, the Japanese continued their last-ditch efforts to hold a confused and disconnected line on the crests of ridges overlooking the Ormoc corridor. Elements of the First Japanese Division, cut off by the American road-block south of the town, were still calling for help; and Gen. Yamashita sent tanks and automatic weapons to try to blast a way through. Gen. MacArthur's communique stated, however, that the road-block "is holding firmly under heavy attack." It noted further that a counter-attack on the American positions west of the Ormoc road had been repulsed.

A front-line dispatch yesterday from Associated Press Correspondent Fred Hampson said also that some Japanese had infiltrated or had consolidated cut-off units to attack in two places near Pinamapoan, well back of the current front poan.

Hampson said some officers interpreted these attacks—both repulsed—as indications that the Japanese were trying to encircle the American units now engaged in the Limon fight.

Seventh Division Gains

Alva N. Dopking, Associated Press war correspondent with the Seventh Division ten miles south of Ormoc, reported rain-chilled infantrymen fought their way through hub-deep mud of the coastal road and through dripping undergrowth along the dominating foothills.

The Japanese were holed up in elaborate trench systems and supported by snipers. Flame throwers, machine guns and grenades were used to rout the Nipponese.

Monkey Emulates Jap, Storms Foxhole

Leyte, Nov. 21 (AP)—Rifle in one hand, telephone in the other, Corporal Mills H. Stephens, from Raleigh, N. C., called his command post from a water-filled foxhole south of Ormoc:

"There's something outside my hole. . . ."

The sound of a scuffle came over the phone.

"Something hit me on the shoulder. I grappled with it, then it jumped off," Stephens resumed.

"I knew it was too fast for a Jap, and I took another look. It was a monkey."

5 Yanks Get Flying Lesson From Jap

At a Leyte Airbase, Nov. 21 (AP)—At least five Yank flyers here will testify that there are still some good Japanese fighter pilots left.

"Two of us were patrolling over Ormoc Bay when we were jumped by this Jap diving from 14,000 feet," one of the five related.

"He sure made monkeys out of us. Almost immediately three other Lightnings joined the fight, so it was five against one.

Snaprolls "Good-By"

"For at least half an hour we whipped around the sky. One of us would finally line up a shot, then find he was overshooting. There would be that Zeke sitting on his tail pouring lead at him.

"I'd say we made at least 30 passes at this Nip and we still couldn't knock him down. When we finally broke off the little fellow was scooting west over Cebu right on the deck.

"We had chipped pieces out of his aileron vertical stabilizer and knocked off his canopy, but he still was able to snaproll a good-by to us."

Yank Flyers Hit Jap Warship At Borneo

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 21 (AP)—American Liberators blasted a Japanese destroyer in their second strike at the enemy's Brunei naval base on North Borneo, Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported today.

No mention was made of sighting a battleship and cruiser, previously bombed and left in flames in the harbor. (This would indicate they sank).

Docks at the naval base were left burning by the new night raid.

Mitchell medium bombers and fighters lashing at Tarakan Island, off the east coast of Borneo, set fire to a gunboat, five small freighters, ten barges and oil pumping and storage facilities. Smoke billowed up for three miles above the oil installations.

63,388 JAP DEAD IN 2 ISLAND AREAS

Nimitz Lists Totals In Palau And Marianas Groups

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 21 (AP)—American troops cleaning up the Marianas and Palau islands have increased Japanese deaths in those areas to a grand total of 63,388.

A communique by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz today, covering Japanese casualties through November 13, reported that a total of 3,257 prisoners had been captured in the operations which began at Saipan June 14.

The new Nipponese casualty figures disclosed that a total of 6,962 Japanese have been killed in the mop-up operations since the last officially reported totals, which were released October 11.

Take 1,857 More Prisoners

In the same period American troops have captured an additional 1,857 prisoners.

These are the grand totals:

Saipan—Japanese killed, 26,277; captured, 2,068.

Guam—Killed, 17,238; captured, 463.

Tinian—Killed, 6,893; captured, 316.

Angaur and Peleliu (in the Palau group)—Killed, 12,980; captured, 420.

On Guam, 3,171 Nipponese have been killed since the last totals reported August 18, when the battle officially ended.

Add 1,133 On Saipan

Cleanups on Saipan killed 1,133, more Japanese after the battle and captured 1,053. On Angaur and Peleliu the patrols killed 1,510, captured 125, and on Tinian they killed 1,148, but did not increase the prisoner total.

American carrier-based planes destroyed 126 Japanese aircraft Saturday in attacks on Manila, said a communique from Admiral Nimitz's headquarters. The revised figures were issued on the basis of new reports from Vice-Admiral J. S. McCain's task force. Earlier figures had set the Japanese losses at 118 planes.

The total of enemy planes downed in the air was increased from 18 to 26, in addition to at least 100 destroyed on the ground. The communique also reported attacks by land-based American planes on the Bonins, Palaus, Yap and Marshall islands.

U. S. Blockade Of Japs Begun, Says McCain

Aboard United States Carrier Flagship, Nov. 21 (AP)—The blockade of Japan by ever-growing air and naval forces of the United States has begun, Vice-Admiral John S. McCain said today.

The fiery Mississippi-born commander of this carrier task force, powerful aerial striking arm of the United States Third Fleet, said in an interview:

"We are constructing in the waters around Japan a partial blockade."

McCain declined, of course, to say whether future strategy called for a complete blockade of Nippon's home islands. He said, however, that the carriers of his task force can "go anywhere in the world."

Capture 2 Japs; Still Feel Silly

A Seventh AAF Base in the Marianas (AP—Delayed)—Two unarmed airplane mechanics of the Seventh Army Air Force in search of souvenirs captured two Japanese marines but "felt silly as hell" about it.

It happened this way, explained Sergt. William G. Pate, of Louisville, and Sergt. Roy F. Williams, of Houston, Texas:

While deep in the brush they heard a voice at their rear saying, "Thank you, thank you." They whirled and saw one Japanese walking toward them; then another popped out of the brush.

"Since we were unarmed there was only one thing to do—we ran," said Williams. "We thought we were trapped."

After a few steps Williams stumbled and fell. He was prone on the ground, the Nipponese standing over him, when Pate, who had outdistanced him, walked back.

"I got to my feet," said Williams, "and saw their hands raised in surrender. One was saluting and saying, 'Thank you, thank you.'

"I felt silly as hell."

Ex-King Carol Arrives at Rio

Rio De Janeiro, Nov. 21 (A. P.).—Former King Carol of Romania, who has arrived here, said when asked if he intended to return to Europe that he had no plans for the future.

He asserted that since the start of the war he had been "a real democratic partisan" and said, "the happiest day in my life was when my son (King Michael) succeeded in overthrowing the Fascists in my country and brought Romania to the Allied side."

He was accompanied here from Mexico by Madame Elena Lupescu and his secretary.

Nassau, Bahamas, Nov. 21 (A. P.).—The Duke of Windsor last ight prorogued the Bahamas egislature until December 4 ter expressing regret that the 5-year-old body had rejected a to provide for the secret ballin the islands.

After a riot in Nassau in June, 1941, a commission appointed to investigate recommended the reform. A vote in the islands now is cast in the open. In June, 1943, the Imperial Government invited the House of Assembly to pass a secret ballot bill, but the House rejected it.

SUPERFORTS IN AIR BATTLE

Down At Least 20 Jap Planes In Third Raid On Omura

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—American Superfortresses engaged in their first big air battle over Japan today as they bombed the Omura aircraft center for the third time in less than a month.

At least 20 enemy planes were certainly shot down, 16 others probably destroyed and an additional 19 damaged in the fighting. A communique from 20th Air Force headquarters said it was too early to report on American losses since there had not been time for all planes to complete the long flight back to Chinese bases.

Tokyo Claims 14

[The Tokyo radio, which customarily broadcasts extravagent claims, said 70 Superforts took part and that 14 were definitely shot down and 11 more probably. It said four Japanese planes were lost, one by crashing into a Superfort.]

While one Superfort task force carried out this strike, others hit warehouse and transportation facilities at the enemy-held Chinese cities of Shanghai and Nanking.

The blow at Omura was the eighth B-29 raid on the Japanese homeland and brought the first encounter, a communique of the 20th Air Force said, with "strong fighter opposition."

Located on Kyushu, southernmost of the Japanese islands, the Omura plant has about 75 buildings, including assembly, repair and training facilities. It was hit previously on October 25 and November 11 and the 20th Air Force communique spoke of the third raid as a continuation of the "strategic reduction" of that major source of enemy air power.

Able To Care For Selves

The Superforts, heavily armed and armored, were designed with the view that they should be able to take care of themselves against fighter-interceptors.

Consequently, military men here have looked forward exceptantly to the first occasion when the Japanese would throw heavy fighter opposition against them.

As was the case on November 11, the Superforts found Omura hidden by clouds which prevented observation of the results from the bombs loosed at targets located by secret precision instruments.

It was because of this weather that part of the force was diverted to Nanking and Shanghai. Over the Chinese cities the weather was better and two direct hits on warehouses and near misses off a cargo vessel were observed at Nanking. The communique said results were "fair to good" in the attack on military storage and transhipment facilities at the big port of Shanghai.

SUPERFORTRESSES AGAIN BLAST PLANE CENTER IN JAPAN

Nanking and Shanghai Also Hit and Twenty Enemy Fighters Shot Down.

Washington, Nov. 21 (A. P.).—The huge aircraft factory at Omura, on the Japanese Home Island of Kyushu, was blasted for the third time by Superfortresses of the Twentieth United States Air Force. The docks of Nanking, capital of the Japanese puppet-government of China, and military storage and trans-shipment facilities at Shanghai were also battered.

A Twentieth Air Force communique said that twenty attacking Japanese planes were destroyed, that sixteen were probably destroyed and that nineteen were damaged. It was the first time that a B-29 mission had encountered fighter-plane opposition in strength. There was little anti-aircraft opposition, however.

Operating in large force, the mission was aimed at Japan, but adverse weather caused the diversion of planes to the other targets, it was said. It is too early to determine whether our task force suffered any losses, the communique added.

[The Tokyo radio said today that seventy or more Superfortresses struck in two waves at the Nagasaki and Omura areas of Kyushu, the most southerly of the home land islands of Japan, and that fierce air duels resulted. Japanese Imperial headquarters later on declared that fourteen B-29's were definitely shot down and that eleven others were probably destroyed. These figures were wholly unconfirmed.]

Japan Is Hit Through Clouds.

The smash at Omura was accomplished through a heavy cloud undercast by means of percision instruments, and the results there were not observed. At Shanghai the observed results were described as fair to good. The Nanking attack resulted in two direct hits on warehouses and near misses off a cargo vessel.

"The daylight mission continued the strategic reduction of the large Omura works, which was begun on October 25 and resumed on November 11," the communique said.

The drone of the gigantic Superfortresses is a sound that has now been heard eight times since June 15 by workers on Kyushu Island. Other strikes have been made on industrial targets of Yawata and Nagasaki on the island.

The Omura plant is a modern installation including about seventy-five buildings adjacent to the Omura Naval Station and constructed during the present war. It has assembly, repair and training facilities and is on the east coast of Omura Bay, twelve miles northeast of Nagasaki.

63 U. S. Fortresses Downed, Japs Claim

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 21—Imperial Japanese headquarters claimed today (Wednesday, Tokyo time) that 63 American Superfortresses were shot down or damaged over Kyushu and China, while returning from a raid on western Kyushu on Tuesday.

The Imperial communique, intercepted by National Broadcasting Co., said that 26 of the Superfortresses were shot down over the island of Kyushu itself and 32 others were damaged.

An additional four were claimed to have been shot down over China as a group of 30 returned to their bases.

French Opposing Blocs In Europe

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—The chances that Europe will be carved up into western and eastern blocs dominated respectively by Britain and Russia are growing dimmer.

French policy appears to be the reason for this trend but there are some indications that the British are less enthusiastic about the idea than they once were. The Russians have said all along that they did not like it.

The trend is being watched with deep interest here because American policy with respect to Europe calls for no blocs, in the sense of tightly knit and potentially antagonistic groups.

Seek World Cooperation

It calls rather for the submergence of old balance of power political systems in the interest of continent-wide and world-wide cooperation.

One of the clearest statements of French policy on the subject of European political organization came today from Georges Bidault, Foreign Minister, at Paris. Eventually referring to published reports that Prime Minister Churchill and General de Gaulle had more or less agreed on a western European bloc during their recent conference at Paris, Bidault said France actually is opposed to an exclusive western bloc.

France favors, he said, an alliance in the west and an alliance in the east and will never allow itself to be limited to western Europe alone.

Implications Seen

His speech was interpreted here as having these implications:

1. The de Gaulle Government is seeking to make France the fulcrum of European politics, probably assuming that Russia will ride one end of the seesaw and Britain the other.

2. The French want the British to know that they do not favor an exclusive western bloc.

3. At the same time they want the Russians to understand that they do not accept any political domination of Soviet interests in eastern Europe, although the French make no claim of competition with Russia there.

Both Russia and Britain have been wooing France with great ardor. That was the purpose of Churchill's visit to Paris.

No Official Evidence

However, there is no official evidence that Churchill broached the subject of a western European bloc to de Gaulle. In fact, information here is that he actually did not do so. British officials recently have been at some pains to make clear that they do not seek such a division of the Continent.

Nevertheless, reports got out, apparently inspired either by British or French officials, and Russia became somewhat alarmed. Thereupon Stalin promptly invited de Gaulle to Moscow and de Gaulle promptly accepted. The trip is to be made very soon.

Bidault's speech today emphasizes France's intention to seek unification rather than division of the Continent and to court, in turn, the friendship of both Russia and Britain.

One major result of France's position may be to clear the atmosphere for the projected but delayed meeting of Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin and, possibly, de Gaulle. Many questions, including those of the Balkans and Poland, are ripe for consideration by the Big Three.

Plans For Early Big 3 Meeting Appear Off

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—Plans for an early meeting of Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin appear to have hit a snag. Despite hopes freely expressed here and in London, the best prospect now is for a parley early in 1945.

The whole schedule of post-war conferences and world peace organization evidently is having to be revised in consequence. It may have to be moved two or three months into the future, which probably would mean a United Nations gathering on the Dumbarton Oaks security plan next spring rather than in the winter.

State Of Uncertainty

However, the whole schedule is in a state of uncertainty at the moment. Should it be found that the problems left over from Dumbarton Oaks—such as the "veto" voting issue—can be settled without a Big Three meeting, the full-dress conference could be held earlier.

Exactly what has happened to the projected Big Three meeting before the end of this year is not certain.

But presumably the way in which the European war is having to be fought full-scale into the winter and the probability now that it will last into next spring has had a lot to do with it.

All three leaders, as Roosevelt told reporters a few days ago, wanted to have the conference. And Roosevelt emphasized his desire for it by saying he thought it took priority over his invitation to visit Paris. Churchill told Parliament it was "high time" the three should get together again.

From what they said it was clear that Stalin had expressed similar views, although he confined his latest public statements to the necessity for Anglo-Soviet collaboration to make a lasting peace.

But Stalin is tied to the eastern front in a way that Churchill and Roosevelt are not tied down in the west.

Literally Does Command

In the broadest sense of the word he literally does command the Red army. With Germany bent upon suicidal resistance, the Red army has finally come up to the time for another winter offensive.

Officials here say that at such a time it is highly unlikely that Stalin would leave Russia. It seems equally unlikely, despite recent speculation there, that Roosevelt would agree to make the long and arduous journey to Moscow, especially when the niceties of diplomacy and politics might be better served by selecting a more central gathering place.

5-Yr. Health Plan For Liberia

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—Eleven American Negroes, including physicians, engineers, entomologists and nurses, soon will launch a five-year health and sanitation in Liberia.

The mission was created by the Public Health Service at the direction of President Roosevelt. The President, it was explained, acted at the request of the Liberian government.

Dr. John Baldwin West, senior Surgeon in the Public Health Service, and two of his associates, Granville Writt Woodson, sanitary engineer, and John Paul Davies Jr., maintenance superintendent, are on their way to Monrovia, Liberian capital.

St. Lawrence Seaway Bill An Agreement, Not Treaty

State Department Explains to Senate Subcommittee

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 (AP).—Green H. Hackworth, State Department legal adviser, testified today the St. Lawrence seaway bill was not intended to be a treaty but an agreement subject to Congressional approval.

Mr. Hackworth appeared at the opening of hearings by a Senate commerce subcommittee to determine procedure for the bill.

Saying the agreement would become an international compact with Canada, the witness added that by its terms, it "must have legislative sanction." Had it been intended as a treaty, he continued, approval of both houses would not have been necessary.

Senator Joseph W. Bailey, Democrat, of North Carolina, objected to Mr. Hackworth's statement, asserting that under his definition the characterization of a document would be determined by the method of ratification rather than by its context.

John H. Overton, Democrat, of Louisiana, chairman of the subcommittee, observed that Congress has the right to regulate its own citizens but not those of any other nation. He added that the moment Congress decided to do anything in Canada, it could not do so under an agreement.

House Probe Of Sa... Command Switch As... et.

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—The House was asked today to investigate a Pacific battle after which one American general relieved another of his command.

Representative Fay (D., N. Y.) introduced a resolution calling for the Military Affairs Committee to make the investigation, particularly regarding activities of the 27th (New York National Guard) Army division in the fight. He said reports had been circulated giving the false impression that the 27th lacked courage.

Fay said the incident he wants investigated occurred during the battle of Saipan in June and July, when Marine Lieut. Gen. Holland M. Smith replaced army Maj. Gen. Ralph Smith with another officer. The former was over-all commander of operations, with the latter in charge of army action.

Naval Ship Losses Reach 228 For War

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—Announced United States naval losses since the beginning of the war stood at 228 today, the navy reported in disclosing the loss of ten vessels in the Pacific.

The latest casualties were a destroyer, two destroyer escorts and seven smaller craft. Enemy action or the perils of the sea sent seven to the bottom in the Philippines. The others were lost in the New Guinea area.

A communique said the vessels were not lost in the big battles of October 24-25.

Lost in Philippine waters were the destroyer Abner Read, the destroyer escort Eversole, the mine sweeper YMS 70, PT's 320 and 321, the fleet tug Sonoma and the landing craft (infantry) 1065. The other vessels were the destroyer escort Shelton and the PT's 368 and 371.

Marshall Continuance Proposed In Senate

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—Legislation to permit Gen. George C. Marshall to serve beyond the present retirement age was offered in the Senate today.

Marshall, army chief of staff, will be 64 years old and subject to retirement on December 31.

F. D. R. Says Japs In U. S. Can Be Absorbed Readily

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—Although seeing no prospect of relaxing West-Coast restrictions, President Roosevelt today said he though Japanese-American citizens could be absorbed readily through all the rest of the country.

Many Japanese already have scattered through the nation, he told a news conference. Furthermore, he said, many lawyers believe citizens of Japanese extraction cannot be kept locked in concentration camps. There are about 100,000 of them, Mr. Roosevelt said, and 20 or 25 per cent. already have placed themselves in other parts of the country.

Gen. Saunders Re... In Serious Con...

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—Brig. Gen. Laverne G. Saunders, who led the first Superfortress raid on Japan June 15 and later was injured in a plane crash in India, remains in a serious condition in Walter Reed Hospital here.

The army disclosed today that he suffered fractures of both legs and the right arm in the crash, which occurred September 17.

General Saunders, 41, former West Point athlete, was flown to Walter Reed Hospital from India in 57 hours after the accident. The air force transport plane in which he made the trip, attended by a medical officer and two flight nurses, made only five stops en route.

JOHN P. DOYLE, Baltimore.
JOHN H. WILSON, Flintstone, Md.
ROBERT R. NEYLAND, Jr., Norfolk, Virginia.
FENTON S. JACOBS, Gordonsville, Virginia.
HERBERT B. LOPER, Fort Humphries, Va.

In all, the promotion list included 23 new major generals and 73 brigadier generals.

Mr. Roosevelt also nominated Brig. Gen. William J. Donovan, of the Cavalry Reserve, head of the Office of Strategic Services, to be a major general; Maj. Gen. Wilhelm D. Styer, of the engineers, to be a lieutenant general, and David Sarnoff, colonel in the Signal Corps Reserve and chairman of the board of the Radio Corporation of America, to be a brigadier general.

Officers Of Merchant Marine Must Take Test

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—The 20,000 deck officers of the merchant marine must obtain a navy certificate of proficiency by January 1, 1945, or face the prospect of being beached.

The navy made this announcement today, stating that the certificate will be issued to every deck officer who passes a test demonstrating a working knowledge of the publication "Wartime Instructions For Merchant Ships."

Mine Sweepers Will Blackball Craft

Washington, Nov. 21 (A. P.).—The Navy has borrowed a trick from the lodges and fraternal organizations. Henceforth its mine sweepers will blackball approaching craft.

While towing sweeps dragging mine fields, the sweepers will post a big black ball at the fore masthead and another at each fore yardarm.

That means all ships are to get no closer than 500 yards on either beam nor cross astern closer than 1,000 yards. The penalty for violation may be a loud crash.

NELSON ASSUMES HIGHER STATUS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 — (AP) President Roosevelt has given cabinet rank to the far-traveling Donald M. Nelson.

The former WPB chairman moved his desk into the White House offices and assumed his duties as "personal representative" to the President before leaving on a second economic mission to China.

A Presidential letter informing Nelson of his new status, effective last September 20, was released by the White House today after its import had been disclosed by the Associated Press.

30. 24 — 20559

"You will attend cabinet meetings," the letter said, "and are empowered to obtain such assistance as you may require from existing government agencies.

"We have a vast and difficult job to do in achieving complete and final victory and in working out the basis of an enduring peace. Your knowledge, experience and abilities can be of great value to me in my work. At the present time, I would like you to advise and assist me in dealing with some of the most important problems now facing the American people, and to undertake specific missions for me. One of these missions, of prime importance, will require your early presence again in the Pacific theatre of war."

Nelson arrived in Chungking last week with a group of steel and alcohol experts to assist in revitalizing China's lagging war production.

In accepting Nelson's resignation from WPB after a blow-up among its high officials last summer, President Roosevelt asked the Missouri-born former mail-order house executive to remain in the government for a "high post of major importance" in international economic matters.

ROOSEVELT JOINS EISENHOWER, ASKS MORE PRODUCTION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—(AP) President Roosevelt said today that American soldiers' lives had been lost because of the necessity of rationing shells in Europe. He joined in General Dwight D. Eisenhower's urgent plea for greater production on the home front.

Soon after Eisenhower declared at Supreme Headquarters that he and his soldiers want "more supplies than we are getting," the President discussed the situation at a news conference.

It is perfectly clear, he said, that not enough shells are being sent to the other side, that rationing resulted and this has been costly in life. He wanted, he said, to add his little plea to that of Eisenhower for the materials essential to the Allied strategy.

Part of the trouble, the President said, is that people are quitting their jobs in war plants, because they want to get into civilian production as a hedge against post war unemployment. They must be replaced, he said, by inexperienced workers who cannot produce as fast and sometimes break machines, resulting in still greater slow down in production.

Asking that workers stay on the job, Mr. Roosevelt gave it as his opinion that reconversion from war production to civilian production will be much quicker than most people expect. He also expressed belief that industry in general, including the reconverted plants, will maintain "take home" pay after the war at about the same level as wartime pay even though hours are shortened.

With his news conference remarks, the President joined in a concerted effort by high officials to give publicity to the situation and thus strive to increase production.

Chairman J. A. Krug of the War Production Board earlier revealed that Eisenhower—while still charting his drive on Germany—had sent word to production officials: "You tell us what you can deliver and we'll tell you when the war will end."

"We have tried to tell him," Krug said. "He has used the information to plan his attack. Now it is up to us to make good." Krug declared 40 per cent of the armament program was behind schedule.

Twenty-eight per cent, he said, is "critical"—meaning that "if we had more we would use it; if we had more it would improve our chances for early success and save American lives."

Of the overall lag, he said, "only 22 per cent" is attributable directly to labor. In this category he evidently included such problems as manpower shortages in various plants, strikes, employee turnover, etc.

Soldiers in Foundries

For example, a shortage of hands to make forgings and castings essential to motor transport has led the army to release 1,000 soldiers to man foundries and forges.

Two thousand heavy trucks were lost last month, Krug said, through a series of strikes in Detroit, slowing output of truck parts.

Twenty-six per cent of the total lag Krug attributed to changes in design and introduction of new models to assembly lines; 12 per cent to bottlenecks in plans facilities; and the biggest share, 40 per cent, to suddenly increased demand by the military which could not be met immediately.

He named big guns and shells, heavy trucks and tires, airborne radar, cotton duck for tents, and assault transports and freighters as the outstanding needs. To remedy production ills in the first four items, Krug and manpower officials spent last week consulting with plane managements in Cleveland, Detroit and Chicago.

"Terrific" demand for heavy tires to replace those mangled on the supply routes to the front were reported. A certain group of 240 trucks, Krug said, is "chewing up one tire per truck per day."

Emphasizing last week's warning by War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes that the reconversion of industry must take a back seat for the time being, Krug said WPB's detailed reconversion plan now is virtually complete but can not be announced until the end of European hostilities is more definitely sighted.

28 P. C. of Munitions Program Held Critical by WPB Head

Washington, Nov. 21 (A. P.).—Terming 28 per cent of the munitions program "critical," J. A. Krug today said Gen. Eisenhower has notified Washington that his progress against Germany will be paced by delivery of arms.

"The big push now on against the West Wall is entirely dependent upon the flow of materials to those six armies," Mr. Krug chairman of the War Production Board, told the National Press Club in an address.

"Not long ago Gen. Eisenhower laid it flat on the table," Mr. Krug said. "He cabled us saying: 'You tell us what you can deliver and we'll tell you when the war will end.'

"We have tried to tell him. He has used the information to plan his attack. It is up to us to make good."

This is the "most critical phase" of the war, Mr. Krug observed, with the European drive coinciding with progress in the Pacific running several months ahead of schedule. It finds 60 per cent of the munitions program on schedule or ahead, he said, the other 40 per cent lagging.

28 Per Cent Critical..

Mr. Krug said 28 per cent of the total may be described as critical, meaning that in those programs "if we had more we would use it, and if we had more we would improve our chances of early success and saving American lives."

Of the behind-schedule programs 26 per cent are lagging because of changes and improvements in design, the WPB chief said. Forty per cent because of suddenly increased military demands, as in the case of heavy shells; 12 per cent because of bottlenecks in plant facilities, and about 22 per cent traceable directly to labor.

Heavy artillery, big shells, heavy trucks and heavy-duty tires are the major worries at the moment, he asserted.

Tires are in terrific demand, Mr. Krug added, with requests for replacements "almost pyramiding month by month." One group of 240 trucks in France, he said, is chewing up almost one tire a truck a day.

Cost of One Strike.

Mr. Krug said a series of strikes in Detroit last month lost 2,000 heavy trucks through the delay in delivery of vital parts.

In a question period after his address, Mr. Krug was asked whether civilian production would be expanded:

"We are not going to expand a lot as long as we have this load of war production on our back," he replied.

Although plans for the reconversion of industry after Germany's collapse are practically completed, he added, WPB will be unable to tell industry what controls will be dropped "until we know better when the war is going to end."

Scarcity Blamed On Arms Priority

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—Priority of ammunition movement was advanced by army authorities today as one explanation of the cigarette shortage in France.

With the present big push developing, shells were unloaded instead of smokes, resulting in a "certain piling up" of shipping, it was explained.

Fag-frantic GIs have been wondering why post exchanges in England and in French areas back of the front have to hold off on sales for awhile to all but air forces. Officials here gave assurances that it was only temporary.

"Sufficient cigarettes have been going over. There is no question about that," they said.

Advisory Board Nominations

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 (AP).—The President sent to the Senate today the following nominations for members of the War Mobilization Advisory Board:

Public members—O. Max Gardner, of North Carolina; William H. Davis, of New York; Anna M. Rosenberg, of New York.

Labor members—William Green, of Ohio; Philip Murray, of Pennsylvania; T. C. Cashen, of New York.

Agriculture members — Edward A. O'Neal, of Alabama; James G. Patton, of Colorado; Albert S. Goss, of Washington.

Industry members—Eric A. Johnston, of Washington; George H. Mead, of Ohio; Nathaniel Dyke jr., of Arkansas.

VANDENBERG HITS PLAN TO DOUBLE SECURITY TAXES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21—(AP) Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) said tonight his proposal to freeze present social security taxes "has absolutely nothing to do with the expansion of social security coverage or of old age benefits."

Vandenberg is heading a fight to prevent by Congressional action, the automatic doubling of Social Security taxes on January 1, 1945. He took his arguments to the public in a speech prepared for radio delivery.

Discussing what he called "some of the amazing misconceptions regarding this problem," he said:

"This pay-roll tax question has absolutely nothing to do with the expansion of Social Security coverage or of old age benefits. I favor broad expansion of coverage and an equitable increase in benefits, particularly in the lower brackets. If and when this occurs pay-roll taxes must increase in proportion. That's something else. This problem today is solely what pay-roll taxes shall be paid for today's benefits. If the tax doubles in January, no worker will get a penny's additional benefit. Yet I have been pilloried, in this fight, as opposing better and broader Social Security. Instead, I am simply opposing doubled taxes on 48,000,000 workers, and their employers, to pay for existing benefits.

"These pay-roll taxes deal only with old age insurance. They have absolutely nothing to do with other parts of the Social Security system."

Vandenberg said the old age reserve of $5,450,000,000 as of last June 12 was from eight to twelve times the highest estimated prospective expenditure for benefits in any of the next five years. He said Treasury Secretary Morgenthau told the House Ways and Means committee in 1939 that the reserve need not be more than three times the prospective annual benefits.

OPPOSES PROBE OF PEARL HARBOR

Barkley Puts War Before Inquiry By Congress

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—A move by Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) for a Congressional investigation of the Pearl Harbor assault ran into prompt Administration opposition today in the Senate.

Senator Barkley (Ky.), majority leader, declared that while he was as interested as anyone else in obtaining the full story of the Japanese attack, "it is more important to win this war than it is to find out what happened at Pearl Harbor."

"It would be unfortunate," Barkley said, "for public attention to be diverted from the great task of winning the war."

Proposed 10-Man Committee

The Democratic leader took the floor after Ferguson filed a resolution to create a 10-member committee to conduct a full inquiry into the Pearl Harbor episode and events preceding the Japanese surprise attack of December 7, 1941.

The resolution was referred to the Military Affairs Committee headed by retiring Senator Reynolds (D., N. C.). The committee might consider the investigation proposal at its next meeting, Friday.

Barkley's idea was that any such inquiry should wait consideration by the new Congress convening in January, and that it should be postponed until after the crucial phase of the European war.

Hatch Position Uncertain

Senator Hatch (D., N. M.) said that, while he thought an investigation is justified to bring out the facts, he didn't know that he would support Ferguson's resolution at this time.

Ferguson has proposed that Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, who were relieved of their Pearl Harbor commands, be among the first witnesses called.

The Senate Judiciary Committee has recommended another six-month extension, from December 7, of the time in which court-martial proceedings could be started.

TIGHTENING UP OF LIVING COST SOUGHT BY OPA

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 — (AP) The OPA tonight rushed a brake adjustment on the nation's price control machinery—a tightening up intended to halt a slight upturn in living costs.

The projected new control, aimed at holding down textile and clothing prices, was regarded by some observers as a fresh indication that the government probably will delay any basic change in the "Little Steel" wage formula until Germany is defeated. Stricter price control in the meantime is a "must" program to keep costs of essential commodities tied to wage levels.

OPA speeded work on the new regulation following stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson's statement Sunday that wherever price and production controls are too lax—as is the case of textiles and clothing—we must tighten them."

This measure, it was understood, is designed to increase output of low-cost clothing by plugging loopholes that have caused manufacturers and convertors to turn to production of higher-priced garments. Overfinishing fabrics to command a better price is one practice that may be eliminated, OPA officials said.

WLB ORDERS STRIKERS BACK

Phone Operators Told To Go Back Or Face Seizure

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—The War Labor Board directed tonight that Ohio telephone operators return to work immediately or face Government seizure of the facilities.

WLB Hearing Chairman N. P. Feisinger gave union officials until 10 A. M. tomorrow to decide whether they would recommend that members of the State Federation of Telephone Workers return to work.

Must Resume Work

The WLB official said that the work musts be resumed before the Labor Board could undertake a disposition of grievances. He stressed that this had been the procedure in all strikes.

"It may be," Feisinger told the unionists, "that this case may require special procedure. When the operators are back at work they will have the right to ask adoption of such special procedures and they will be granted the board's power."

Seizure Only Alternative

"The only alternative," Feisinger asserted, "is possible Government seizure. In this case, work would be resumed under the same terms as prevailed at the time the strike started."

NOV 22 1944

The board's directive for immediate termination of the strike came after an executive session. Union officials declined to say immediately what they would do, telling the board they would give their answer tomorrow.

Michigan Phone Workers To Support Ohio Strike

Detroit, Nov. 21 (AP)—The Michigan Telephone Employes' Federation voted its "willingness to strike" in support of a walkout of affiliated Ohio telephone operators in a mass meeting here tonight, but withheld further action pending clarification of the War Labor Board's attitude in the Ohio case.

Miss Florence Karp, vice-president of the Michigan group, said employes who left their posts to participate in the meeting would return to their posts immediately upon its adjournment. Earlier a Michigan Bell Telephone Company spokesman had said absence of 70 of 525 night operators had resulted in some curtailment of Detroit service. The regional War Labor Board stepped into the picture earlier today with a telegraphed appeal to the Michigan Telephone Employes' Federation to refrain from voting strike action.

SEES NO CUT IN PEACE WAGE

Roosevelt Discusses Tendency On Shortened Hours

THE WASHINGTON SCENE:

Roosevelt nominates Surplus Property and own Advisory Board members.....P 11

Two Chaplains Corps Generals are nominated.....Page 11

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—President Roosevelt expressed belief today that the tendency would be to keep weekly wages—"take-home pay"—at wartime levels when working hours shorten with return to civilian production.

The President, at a news conference, described as awfully good a recent statement by Charles E. Wilson, president of General Electric, that his company intended to maintain employes' earnings as far as possible when a 40-hour work week was resumed.

A lot of others are thinking the same way, Mr. Roosevelt declared.

Rounds Out Wage Policy

The President's remarks rounded out a pattern of a two-point Administration wage policy apparently taking shape from recent developments:

To "hold the line" with the Little Steel formula and keep general wage increases down to 15 per cent. above the January, 1941, level at least until Germany is defeated.

To allow "straight time" increases high enough to maintain approximate existing weekly wages once war production is scaled back and a 40-hour week restored for workers now putting in longer hours and getting overtime "bonus pay."

This would mean a 30 per cent. increase in "straight time" pay for the worker who, for instance, is working now 48 hours a week and getting time-and-one-half pay for the last eight hours.

Why They Quit War Jobs

One reason workers are quitting war jobs, Mr. Roosevelt remarked, was because of fear they won't have jobs after the war. But not only the Government but industry as well is working awfully hard to see that they do have jobs, he added.

The President was told that some war workers apparently were seeking jobs in civilian industry because they feared there would be "quite a lag" between the time when war plants halt arms production and the time when they begin civilian production.

Mr. Roosevelt said he would reply by telling a story. When the big rush was on to convert from civilian to war production, he said, the automobile companies estimated it would take them from three to six months to convert, but they did it in half that time.

He said he felt it might be the same with reconversion.

Two GI Congressmen-Elect Prefer House To Reveille

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—Two GIs on leave today tested out the House seats they will occupy in January, shook hands with Speaker Sam Rayburn and opined:

"This beats reveille at dawn."

The words were those of Private William J. Green, 34, father of four, elected to the House from Philadelphia. The sentiments were echoed by Sergt. Melvin Price, 39-year-old bachelor, elected from East St. Louis, Ill.

Reveille—That Was Tough

"That reveille . . . that was the toughest," said Price.

Neither of them is quite through with the bugle despite their election.

Green's furlough expires this week end and he has to be back at Camp Lee, Virginia. Price is on a three-day pass from the same cantonment.

As soon as the vote is certified—there is no doubt of their election but the absentee ballots delayed it—each will doff his uniform. They will enter Congress when the 79th session convenes in January.

Rayburn Welcomes Them

"Glad to see you," said Rayburn as he welcomed the two Democrats in his private office.

Neither soldier is new to politics. Price was secretary to an Illinois Representative and had ten years experience on Capitol Hill. Green was in politics in Philadelphia and was an employe in the Governor's personnel office in Harrisburg, Pa., during the Earle administration from 1935 to 1939.

COX OFFERS OLIVE BRANCH

House Member Seeks White House, Congress Harmony

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—Capitol Hill witnessed today the first sign of lessening antagonism between Congress and the White House. Representative Cox (D., Ga.) took the House floor and delivered a dramatic appeal for restoration of harmony.

Cox, one of the Southerners frequently at odds with the Administration, declared:

"I look upon the election as a magnificent personal tribute to the President. The people have said that they want him and certainly the world salutes him as its first citizen.

Harmonious Relations Needed

"We need to establish harmonious relations with the executive branch of the Government and maintain those harmonious relations."

The speech was described by Representative Priest (D., Tenn.) as "the most significant speech the House has heard in many a month," and it caused immediate speculation on this big question growing out of the November 7 election:

Will the Administration regain firm control in the House, where for two years major legislation has been dominated by a coalition of Republicans and anti-Administration Democrats?

The Democrats gained in the election a House plurality of 53 members over the Republicans for the new Congress convening January 3. In the old Congress their margin dropped to 214 Democrats to 212 Republicans.

Anti-Administration Defeats

The number of anti-Administration Democrats in the old House has been estimated from 25 to 60—most of them Southerners. Several, however, were defeated in Democratic primaries.

In the last year the President rebuffed repeatedly in Congress has fought back with his veto power. The antagonism between the White House and Capitol Hill came to a sensational climax when Mr. Roosevelt vetoed the 1944 tax bill as "inadequate," and Congress promptly overrode the veto.

Priest described the Cox speech as "pointing toward the recapture by the House of the same unity for dealing with the big peacetime problems that characterized the war effort."

Has Seen No Boasting

"I have been tremendously impressed," Cox told the House, "by the fact that there has not been in this House up to the present time any boasting or any complaining over the recent election. A winner should always be humble and a loser silent. Humility is a velvet garment that cloaks all other virtues and without it they are poorly clad.

"We need to continue united on the war and on the peace that will follow. . . . That can be done by the exercise of [illegible] on both sides, by trust [illegible] confidence. We all love [illegible] flag, our problems are [illegible] and our obligations the [illegible]

White House Identifies Myers As Senator

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—It isn't official, according to the election clerks, but the White House decided today that Representative Francis Myers, of Pennsylvania, has been elected to the Senate.

He was identified as Senator Myers on the President's engagement list. Myers, a Democrat, ran against incumbent Senator James Davis, Republican. Final outcome of the race will not be known until Pennsylvania completes its count of soldier ballots, scheduled to start tomorrow.

Myers, along with Senator Guffey (D., Pa.), Democratic State Chairman David Lawrence and Philadelphia's Democratic Chairman James A. Clark, led off the President's engagements today.

TEAMSTERS UNION FIGHTS LIBEL SUIT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—(AP) The AFL Teamsters union and its president, Daniel J. Tobin, today asked dismissal of libel suits seeking a total of $400,000 as an aftermath of the "Battle of the Statler."

The suits, filed by Naval Lt. Randolph Dickins Jr., and Lt. Comdr. James H. Suddeth, grew out of an article published in a union magazine, the International Teamster. It was an account of a fight at the Statler the night of President Roosevelt's opening campaign address last September 23.

In answers filed today in Federal court, the union and Tobin said the magazine is published only for members, is not a commercial publication and carries no advertising. They also contended the article was not published with any malicious intent, that it was truthful and that union members were deeply interested in receiving information concerning the hotel incident.

Tobin said further that as editor of the publication he acts only on behalf of the union and not in a personal capacity.

Dickins and Suddeth said after the fight that they were accosted by union members after Mr. Roosevelt's speech with demands for their political views.

In their suits, they claimed the article contained untruthful statements which if true could subject them to courts martial.

Did Not Use Deity's Name; Just 'Damn,' Says President

Washington, Nov. 21 (AP)—President Roosevelt said today that he did not take the name of the Deity in vain when a voting-booth handle failed to work for him on election day.

Mr. Roosevelt was asked at a news conference whether anything "sinister" had come from the polling booth where he cast his ballot at the old Town Hall in Hyde Park, N. Y.

The facts, the President said, were that an old friend, Tom Leonard, was standing outside the green-curtained booth when he entered, pulled the lever, failed to get a click, had another try, and locked the booth.

What He Really Said

So, Mr. Roosevelt said, he called out to Tom that the damn thing won't work.

Some person—the President said he didn't know who, but he must be awfully deaf—added another short word before the damn, which he said he didn't use.

The President said that he thought, for the record, he should tell the story so he would get no more letters from ministerial associations.

The Glendale Ministerial Association, of Glendale, Cal., announced November 16 it was writing the President asking him to apologize for "shocking profanity" when using the voting machine.

Text Or Article

The latter was based upon a report in the magazine Time, which said:

"From the green-curtained voting booth came a clank of gears as the main control lever jerked irritably back and forth. Then a voice, familiar to all of the United States and to most of the world, spoke distinctly from behind the curtains: 'the good-damned thing won't work.'"

In a light vein, Mr. Roosevelt declared he wasn't suggesting that the White House Correspondents' Association take up the credentials of the reporter involved, but he said the association might pay expenses for a good ear doctor.

Is Firm in Denial

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 21 (AP).—James C. Petrillo said here today that he knew "nothing about" a report that he had protested against members of the Marine Corps band giving lessons in off-duty hours.

"You've got me there," Mr. Petrillo said. He is here to attend the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor.

"It's news to me," Mr. Petrillo added. "We don't stop anybody from giving lessons."

Asked specifically about a letter which Marine Corps headquarters said in Washington it had received from Mr. Petrillo, the musicians' leader said, "I know nothing about it."

Cooper In Radio Appeal For Free World Press

New York, Nov. 21 (AP)—Kent Cooper, executive director of the Associated Press, said tonight that "it is my deep conviction that unless we guarantee the freedom of the press throughout the world, the next generation will be fighting World War III."

Speaking on a radio program in connection with an adaptation of his book "Barriers Down," broadcast over NBC, Cooper said representatives of the AP, the United Press, International News Service, and other news-gathering organizations would demand that the peace treaty following the end of the war "include a provision guaranteeing world-wide freedom of the press."

He said he regarded "the barriers that were placed in the way of those who wanted a completely unhampered world news service as barriers to world peace," adding "but I am happy to point out tonight that the ideal of untrammeled news gathering and news dissemination appealed to people outside the United States."

Comprehensive WLB Wage Report Predicted

New York, Nov. 21 (AP)—A "comprehensive" report on wages will be submitted by the War Labor Board to Economic Stabilizer Fred Vinson within three or four weeks, for transmittal to President Roosevelt, Theodore W. Kheel, the WLB's executive director said today.

He told the Commerce and Industry Association of New York the study, "far broader than the recent cost of living analysis," probably would provide the basis for future wage policies.

Declining to predict what might be decided on the Little Steel wage formula, now in dispute, Kheel pointed out:

30. 24 — 20561

"I think that if the Little Steel formula is changed, the general expectation would be that the whole structure of wages would be changed. . . . Everybody would expect a wage increase, but that will not be the case."

The law covering wage stabilization, he pointed out, directs the President to stabilize at the level of September 15, 1942, so far as is practicable.

SAYS SON OF FDR AIDED BATTLERS

Dance Hall Manager Says Col. Roosevelt Outmaneuvered MPs.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21—(AP) Max Huddle, 31-year-old floor manager of a dance hall, said tonight he had complained to the army district provost marshal that a man he identified as Col. Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President, interceded in an early morning fight on Broadway between Huddle and four soldiers. As a result, Huddle said, the soldiers were able to leave before Military Police arrived.

Lieut. Col. John McNulty, District Provost Marshal, said a complaint by Huddle was being investigated. He added that any further comment would come from the public relations office of the Second Service command. A spokesman at that office said there would be no statement tonight.

Huddle declared he recognized the army officer as Colonel Roosevelt from photographs he had seen. He added that he overheard a companion of the man he identified as Colonel Roosevelt tell military police that "a son of the President is involved."

Huddle said he fought the soldiers for 20 minutes after they dragged him from a taxicab, which he said they wanted to use.

"I was still holding my own when a taxi drove up and two officers got out," Huddle said. "One was Colonel Elliott Roosevelt and the other was a major whose name I haven't learned.

Told Soldiers to "Scram"

"This major took hold of me," Huddle related, "while Colonel Roosevelt pushed the soldiers aside and told them to scram. I moved toward the colonel to protest, but the major put his hand on my shoulder and said I was under arrest. Just then someone in the crowd yelled, 'here come the MPs.'"

Huddle continued: "The Colonel got into his cab after a quick word with the major, leaving the major with me. When the MPs arrived I heard the major say, 'keep this quiet. A son of the President is involved.' Then the major got away —fast."

The Waldorf Astoria hotel, where Colonel Roosevelt had been staying since his arrival here a week ago from overseas, said he had checked out.

In Washington the White House said Colonel Roosevelt was not there and the War Department said it had no knowledge of his whereabouts.

BOSTON'S NINE DAY TRUCK STRIKE ENDS

Men Vote to Return to Work After Warned by War Labor Board.

BOSTON, Nov. 21—(AP) Boston's nine-day truck strike ended tonight when 2,000 union members voted to return to work a few hours after the War Labor Board had ordered the men to go back to their jobs or face government penalties.

Representatives of the strikers, members of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (AFL), said that hundreds of trucks would start to roll out of freight-jammed terminals tonight and that the tie-up would be "completely cleared tomorrow."

The action ending the strike, caused by an intra-union conflict, was in the form of a standing vote.

A few dissenters made a brief stand for continuing the strike at least until tomorrow.

Fourteen suspended members of the Brotherhood told the meeting that the War Labor Board had assured them that all drivers, except the fourteen, could return to their jobs without penalty.

The suspended drivers said that they had agreed to remain suspended and to stand trial before union officials next Tuesday and Wednesday.

A new sub committee of non-suspended drivers announced that State Labor Commissioner James T. Moriarty had arranged for them to meet tomorrow with union officials and state and federal conciliators to settle the issues involved in the tie-up.

The thousand of strikers gave a rising vote of "appreciation" for Labor Commissioner Moriarty and speakers declared that "the commissioner was the outstanding and most understanding man in negotiations to settle the work stoppage."

The strike-ending vote came with Boston terminals glutted with perishable foods for Thanksgiving and many industries, including the shoe and leather trade, on the point of laying off help or closing shops because of transportation difficulties, according to Chamber of Commerce officials.

Several hours before the strikers voted to start trucks rolling, the War Labor Board had issued a directive ordering the men to return to face government penalties.

CAPT. C. W. STYER COMMANDER OF ATLANTIC SUBS

GROTON, Nov. 21. — (AP) The public relations office at the Navy submarine base announced today that Rear Admiral Freeland A. Daubin, commander of submarines, Atlantic Fleet, had been transferred to command of the Brooklyn Navy yard.

At the Brooklyn Navy yard Admiral Daubin will relieve Rear Admiral Munroe Kelly who, on November 6, was appointed commander of the Third Naval District, succeeding Rear Admiral William R. Monroe.

Admiral Daubin, who is 58, was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1909, was in the submarine service from 1912 to 1924 and, after a 15-year period of duty with surface craft, returned to submarines and was commander of the submarine base at Pearl Harbor at the time of the Japanese attack.

It was at his insistence that the British turned the German submarine U-111 over to the United States after the first World War, and he brought the craft to America with a crew that had only a few days in which to learn how to operate her.

The Admiral has two sons who are Navy officers, another who is an Army lieutenant and a daughter married to a Navy commander.

He is one of the Navy's most violent objectors to the use of the term "pigboat" for a submarine.

"They are as clean," he once told [illegible] any ship afloat [illegible] possible for a [illegible] our subs."

YD Men Receive Greetings From Heroic French General

WATERBURY, Nov. 21 — (AP) Gen. Jean de Lattre de Tassigny, commander of the First French Army spearheading the historic smash into the Belfort gap is a friend and former comrade of several Connecticut men of the 26th division of World War I. He likewise is an acquaintance of many others who served with the Yankee Division when its units, marching beside the French, pushed the Germans back over the same ground which their G.I. sons are now covering in the unfolding Eisenhower drive to Berlin.

The identity of the French general and his association with New England ex-servicemen has been established by Charles E. Hart, president of the Chase Brass & Copper company, and a veteran of the Yankee Division.

Mr. Hart the other day received a letter from the western front confirming his hunch that France's new military genius is the man with whom he and other Waterburians served in France 26 years ago.

The letter bore the signature of Jean de Lattre de Tassigny, commander of the reborn First French army that is now redeeming the honor of a nation sent down to ignominous defeat by the Nazis in 1940.

Mr. Hart disclosed that the general commanding the south side of the Allied line in the powerful Belfort gap offensive and the Capt. de Lattre, who was on the staff of the 21st Infantry Division in 1918, are one and the same person. This unit flanked the 26th's 51st Infantry Brigade in World War I.

The general expressed to Mr. Hart a wish to be remembered to all his former New England comrades. In behalf of his American-equipped French fighting men and the people of his beloved country, he wrote in graceful terms of the appreciation which France holds for the "great generosity of your country and her old and faithful friends of the last war who have crossed the Atlantic again."

"Thanks to all of you we are able to breathe freedom anew," the letter said.

De Lattre asked the industrialist and one-time 51st brigade staff officer to convey his regards to Brig. [illegible] Peter Traub, World War I [illegible]st and to his [illegible]ends of 1918. [illegible]oy and pride [illegible] of the First French army and by the side of your heroic (American) soldier," the leter stated.

The 102d infantry of Connecticut, a National Guard unit, was part of the 51st that fought in the Chemin Des Dames sector.

Germany Described As Psychiatry Problem

Philadelphia, Nov. 21 (AP)—Friedelind Wagner, granddaughter of Richard Wagner, immortal German composer, believes that the problem of Germany is not so much one for the militarist or the economist as for phychiatrist.

"Germany must be either at your throat or at your feet," she declared in a talk before the Contemporary Club last night.

The Allies must establish a powerful leader to supplant Hitler and "bully" the Germans into thinking and acting like civilized people, she said. She warned that the Nazis themselves must sign the peace, "not civilian stooges, as in 1919."

McNutt Warns Against Fumble Near War's End

Tells A. F. L. Session Unity on Home Front Is Vital; Roosevelt Sends Message

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 21 (AP).—Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Man-Power Commission, warned labor, industry and government today against fumbling the ball on the ten-yard line with the war's end in prospect.

Mr. McNutt, addressing the American Federation of Labor, told of unwillingness of workers to labor in certain essential industries, difficulties over unemployment security provisions in some states and hitches due to arguments over race or color.

The McNutt address and a message from President Roosevelt, read by A. F. L. President William Green and asking for increasing production "to shorten the war" highlighted today's convention session which took up consideration of reports.

Mr. McNutt urged an all-out war effort to defeat Germany and Japan and "meet the challenges of reconversion and peace or face World War III, a rocket war of total death." He said that "home-front indifference" should not take precedence over the needs of American boys on the war fronts.

"Management in some foundries is still producing non-essential products or is still clinging to peace-time employment restrictions of race and color," Mr. McNutt said. "Unions, too, have a responsibility to see that democracy works within the ranks of labor."

Labor Migration

Mr. McNutt said that higher wage industries have induced labor to migrate from low wage industries, causing shortages of war goods. "For example, shipbuilding and aviation industries helped drain low wage labor from textile, forge and foundry industries, putting some of the latter in the critical class," he explained.

"The answer of attracting workers back into low wage war industries lies in a revitalized sense of responsibility to the American people, including America's fighting men. The team of management, labor and government must assume this responsibility, and cut across sectional, regional, industrial, class and race lines."

President Roosevelt, in his message, conveyed his greetings to the convention and lauded American working men and women for doing "a fine production job the like of which the world has never seen before."

Text of Roosevelt Message

The text follows:

"Thank you very much for your sincere and cordial invitation to attend and address the sixty-fourth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor. I regret exceedingly that I cannot be with you in New Orleans, but the job of going ahead with the war makes it impossible for me to do so at this time.

"This war job is of first importance and concern to all of us, to American soldiers, sailors and marines, who are winning it on land and sea and in the skies all over the world; to American workers, to American employers and to American farmers.

"It is the task of us at home to leave nothing undone so that our fighting men may continue gaining their glorious victories on every front.

"We have been discharging that high duty in a very full measure. American working men and women have done a production job the like of which the world has never seen before. They have supplied our fighters with the finest weapons in record quantities, weapons with which they are beating the enemy and with which they will keep on beating him everywhere they meet.

"American employers with their ingenuity and drive and American farmers with their industry and patience have shared with American working men and women in getting so well done the job of producing the weapons, materials and supplies needed by American fighting men. We have all worked to that end and it has paid off in victories and the saving of lives. We can and we must stay unceasingly at the production job so as to shorten the war.

"I know that there will be no letdown in this task by any group of patriotic Americans and I know that such co-operation will continue after the war is won so that we can win a peace for the world which will be just and lasting and in the interest of safety, protection and well being of generations yet unborn.

"Please extend my greetings and best wishes for a successful meeting to those attending the annual convention.

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

GLOBAL AERIAL ACCORD LIKELY

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—(AP) Work on a global air transport agreement continued today in an atmosphere of declining optimism that it could be completed in Chicago.

While delegates to the International Civil Aviation conference studied for the first time the results of protracted private conferences between the Americans, Canadians and British, the "Big Three" themselves renewed attempts to answer the questions left open in the 3,000-word proposal to establish "the international air administration."

These questions—what are to be the "freedoms of the air" and "how shall airline capacity be adjusted to traffic needs"—were described as so closely related that one answer will settle both. But that answer is the one which has eluded diplomatic and aviation experts of the United States and the British Commonwealth through months of private consultations in London, Ottawa, Washington, and Chicago.

Failure to find the solution here, an official explained, will not mean and end to the search, since such a contingency was anticipated in the agenda prepared for this conference. Nonetheless, it would be a disappointment to delegation leaders who thought they saw a path to agreement after reaching Chicago and became determined to follow it through before leaving.

U. S. WINS POINTS IN AIR PARLEYS

Proposed Rules Follow Plan of American Delegates.

Chicago, Nov. 21 (A. P.).—A proposal for global air regulation written by the United States, Canada and Great Britain left but two important items for settlement today.

The plan—lacking decision on the broad principle of free air everywhere and a method for adjusting carrying capacity to traffic volume—has been laid before delegates to the International Civil Aviation Conference for study and consideration in preparation for a general meeting tomorrow morning.

The language of the plan is largely that of the Canadian proposal presented when the conference opened on November 1, but its content cuts close to the course charted by the United States. A major and expected victory for the American delegation headed by Adolf A. Berle Jr., Assistant Secretary of State, was abandonment of Canada's proposal for assignment of international routes by a world authority.

Canada's Suggestion Accepted.

The United States accepted, apparently with little urging, Canada's suggestion for establishment of rates and fares through an operators' conference. Such a plan is in effect in this country in other fields.

While the broad issue of freedom of transit sought by the American delegation was passed over, some concession to pressure from many countries was made by the United States in agreeing to authorize each nation to fix the route and stopping places for foreign aircraft entering its air space.

In general outline the partial draft provides for a central authority which in addition to administering a technical convention would have wide advisory powers and the duty of collecting and disseminating air transport data. Its final form seems certain to include at least a measure of economic control.

Chief Stumbling Block.

Chief stumbling block is the tussle over limitation of traffic carrying capacity, the British plan for dividing business. As an example of the problem, the British proposal would prevent an American plane flying a route from New York to Warsaw from picking up passengers at intermediate stops on the outbound trip or from carrying passengers part of the way on its return.

If that issue can be settled, an official said, it will be possible to work out a system of carrying capacity controls.

Here, briefly, is what the plan issued thus far would do:

Equal Representation.

Establish the International Air Administration with an assembly having equal representation for all; a fifteen-member board of directors chosen by the assembly, which would award seven seats to nations of chief importance in air transport; vest the authority with power to review tariffs, to recommend pooling of services, receive statistical data and other information, conduct research, provide air-line ground facilities when requested and consult on postal rates.

Provide for negotiation between countries or between a country and a company for commercial rights—a major United States achievement.

Permit joint air-line operations by two or more countries.

Replace the 1919 Paris and 1928 Havana agreements on technical standards and procedures with a modern convention.

Forbid discrimination between countries or between a national air line and its foreign competitors in the same field.

And, finally, provide for adjustment of disputes.

Left for negotiation were the questions of freedom of the air, adjustment of capacity to traffic, treatment of United Nations not now ready to begin flying international air lines, and the manner in which signatories may withdraw from the convention.

CIO Reaffirms No Strike Pledge for the Duration

CHICAGO, Nov. 21—(AP) Following close upon the heels of a fervent plea by CIO-president Philip Murray, the 600 delegates to the annual convention today unanimously reaffirmed their no-strike pledge for the duration of the war, and thus headed off any possible revolt against its terms.

The resolution, which had not been expected to reach the floor until tomorrow, was read at the afternoon session, and when the reading was completed, Murray came to his feet with his plea that delegates maintain "the integrity of labor."

"Our people can't regard lightly a pledge of this description," he said slowly and solemnly, "it is a sacred pledge made to the people of the United States that it shall be our purpose to help our boys win this war. It is the purpose of the CIO to maintain this pledge until the enemy is completely whipped."

The text of the resolution said "there could be no question" of the CIO's basic responsibility "to continue the pledge."

"Each member and leader," the resolution asserted, "must make it his responsibility to discharge with scrupulous care this sacred obligation."

"It is argued by some," Murray asserted, "that we are undermining labor, that we are defeating the purpose of labor unions. There are those who say labor is losing ground. To them it will be of interest that the dues-paying members of the CIO increased 669,000 during the last 12 months.

Must Make It Work

"I hope that you'll make the resolution work when you get back home to your organizations. We can't just read a resolution and then have someone violate it. It's not just an expression of good will."

In the morning session, the crowd came cheering to its feet, chanting "Wallace in '48" when Vice-president Henry A. Wallace told the delegates that "postwar, daring overall concepts" must be put to work promptly and carried out "vigorously" for the benefit of the laborer and small business man.

"Without such concepts vigorously carried out, some form of government socialism is a certainty," Wallace declared.

His appearance touched off cheering and table pounding among the 600 delegates in the large Stevens Hotel ballroom. The vice-president was the C.I.O.'s choice for renomination at the Democratic national convention last summer. Repeated shouts of "forty-eight, forty-eight" indicated delegates at this two-day-old meeting were looking forward four years.

Discussing the "high take home or annual wage" question, Wallace said certain problems for the smaller business man stand out clearly.

"A small or young concern without reserves and having no prospect of accumulating reserves under present tax laws will have to discharge many of its workers at the first breath of depression no matter how great its prosperity during the war," he said.

"A new business even though it has a big volume and makes big profits two-thirds of the time has to pay so much of its profits to government that it cannot stand even a small shock of depression without firing its workers.

"Some type of government payroll insurance must be found to tide sound, young businesses over temporary depressions. Possibly a modification in tax laws will serve the purpose.

"Large, old concerns must be prevented from increasing already overlarge pools of dead capital. Vital, young concerns must be given an incentive to employ more people. Little men with big ideas must be given a chance to employ labor.

"To meet this problem means that post-war, daring overall concepts must be put promptly to work."

Army Gets 45 Million Pounds Of Turkey

Chicago, Nov. 21 (AP)—Thirty million pounds of turkey have been shipped overseas to American servicemen and women for Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's dinners, and another 15,000,000 pounds will be served to servicemen in the United States, the Chicago Quartermaster Depot announced today.

While most of the birds were shipped frozen, some were packed in 12-ounce cans for German-held prisoners of war, to be routed by way of Switzerland and distributed by the American Red Cross. A similar provision for Americans held prisoner by Japan will be made through Vladivostok, the announcement said. Other turkey supplies were dropped by air to American forces in Burma.

The master Thanksgiving menu to be served to the armed forces in this country and to be equaled as closely as possible throughout the world consists of grapefruit juice, roast turkey with giblet sauce, sage dressing, mashed potatoes, stringbeans, corn, cranberry sauce, celery, olives, pickles, butter, hot rolls, pumpkin pie, apples, tangerines, candy, nuts and coffee.

"IT WAS A SIGHT TO SEE," SAID MAJ. JOHN LAWTON OF 808 HIGHLAND AVE., GLENDALE, CALIF. "THERE WERE GERMAN DEAD ALL OVER THAT HILLSIDE. ONE LIEUTENANT HAD FIVE BULLET HOLES THROUGH HIS COAT. HE TOOK OUT HIS HANDKERCHIEF TO BLOW HIS NOSE, AND GOT TWO BULLETS THROUGH THE HANDKERCHIEF, SO HE DECIDED TO SURRENDER."

IN SOME PLACES THE GERMANS OVERRAN FORWARD POSITIONS. AS SOON AS ONE YANK MACHINEGUNNER WAS KILLED OR WOUNDED, ANOTHER JUMPED TO TAKE HIS PLACE AND KEEP THE GUNS FIRING. ONE GUN ALONE HAD SIX DIFFERENT MEN MANNING IT DURING THE 3 1/2 HOUR FIGHT.

BUT THE ENEMY COUNTERATTACK WAS STOPPED COLD. HILL 232 WAS SAVED.

NOV 221944

THE SECOND BATTLE CAME TODAY JUST WEST OF MERODE IN THE ANCIENT CASTLE OF LAUFENBERG WHICH THE DOUGHBOYS CATURED YESTERDAY.

THE GERMAN COMMAND ISSUED ORDERS FOR THE CASTLE TO BE RETAKEN AT ALL COSTS BECAUSE IT DOMINATED IMPORTANT TERRAIN. THIS MORNING THE ENEMY ATTACKED.

THEY FOUGHT UP TO THE WALL OF THE CASTLE WHERE TROOPS UNDER LT.-COL. JOHN CORLEY OF 308 CLINTON ST., BROOKLYN, WERE FIRING FROM WINDOWS AND BATTLEMENTS WITH BAZOOKAS, MACHINEGUNS, AND CARBINES.

WHEN THE CASTLE'S APPROACHES WERE THREATENED, CORLEY'S MEN KNOCKED HOLES IN THE CASTLE WALLS ON THE OPPOSITE SIDE OF THE FIGHTING AND CARRIED AMMUNITION THROUGH THE HOLES ACROSS THE COURTYARD TO THE MEN MANNING THE WALLS. ONCE AGAIN THE ENEMY WAS BEATEN BACK WITH HEAVY LOSSES.

THE FIGHTING IS HARD AND COSTLY ALL THROUGH THIS HEAVILY-WOODED AREA, AND THE GERMANS ARE TAKING HEAVY CASUALTIES IN DESPERATE EFFORTS TO CLING TO THIS LINE.

"PROGRESS IS SLOW BUT STEADY, AND WE'VE KILLED A LOT OF GERMANS," SAID MAJ. KENNETH LORD OF GOVERNOR'S ISLAND, N.Y.

SOUTHEAST OF ESCHWEILER THE YANKS STILL HAVE ABOUT A KILOMETER TO GO BEFORE THEY BREAK OUT OF THE WOODS INTO OPEN TANK COUNTRY.

SETTERICH, GERMANY, NOV 20-(DELAYED)-(AP)-NINTH ARMY ENGINEERS WORKING ALL NIGHT UNDER FIRE CLEARED A PATH THROUGH A MINEFIELD AND PAVED THE WAY FOR A COMPLETE BREACHING OF THE ENEMY'S MOST FORMIDABLE MAN-MADE OBSTACLE YET ENCOUNTERED ON THIS FRONT--AN ANTI-TANK DITCH 15 FEET DEEP, 15 WIDE AND 10 MILES LONG.

THE ENTIRE DITCH WAS PROTECTED BY MINE FIELDS AND COVERED BY ARTILLERY FIRE.

NOV 221944

ARMORED INFANTRY ESTABLISHED A BRIDGEHEAD ACROSS THE DITCH YESTERDAY AFTERNOON. TO ENABLE TANKS TO FOLLOW, COMBAT ENGINEERS SET TO WORK CLEARING THE MINES.

"WE DID NOT HAVE HALF THE TROUBLE WE THOUGHT WE WERE GOING TO HAVE," SAID MAJ.RICHARD MCCABE, NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J.

"THIS TOWN (SETTERICH) WAS LOUSY WITH MINES--IN FACT, IT STILL IS BUT THE ENGINEERS ARE CLEANING THEM OUT," HE CONTINUED.

"IN ADDITION TO THE MINES THE GERMANS SPREAD FARM MACHINERY ALL OVER THE STREETS AS ROAD BLOCKS," EXPLAINED LT.GRADY SMITH, 336 WEST MAGNOLIA AVE., AUBURN, ALA., A COMBAT ENGINEER. "WE BROUGHT UP A BULLDOZER YESTERDAY TO CLEAN THEM OUT BUT IT RAN OVER A MINE

SGT.AUSTIN LISK, RENFROW, OKLA., WHO LED A SQUAD IN LAST NIGHT'S WORK, SET OFF AT DAWN WITH HIS CREW ON A NEW MISSION.

CORP.JAMES BABCOCK, OF BLACK RIVER FALLS, WIS., SAID THE OPERATION HAD BEEN "PRETTY QUIET" ALTHOUGH "THEY TOSSED THREE OR FOUR SHELLS IN YESTERDAY EVENING, KILLING ONE DOUGHBOY AND WOUNDING ANOTHER."

SGT.ROBERT K.GALE, OF GRESSIT, VA., WHO HAD JUST COME IN FROM EXPLODING A STACK OF MINES AFTER INSPECTING THEM TO MAKE SURE THERE WERE NO NEW TYPES, SAID HE LIKED THE JOB OF COMBAT ENGINEER "AS LONG AS THEY KEEP US DOING OUR OWN JOB. BUT TO HELL WITH THIS BEING USED AS INFANTRY."

LT.DONALD K.MITCHELL, GILLEM ROAD, KANSAS CITY, MO., SAID THE GERMANS SET MANY BOOBY TRAPS BUT THE ENGINEERS WERE NOT FOOLED AND NO ONE HAS BEEN HURT.

NOV 221944

"THEY ARE NOT TOO SMART," OBSERVED SGT.DALTON GRIFFITH, RFD, PETERSBURG, IND.

OTHER COMBAT ENGINEERS ENGAGED IN THE PRESENT OPERATION WERE PRIVATES LEONARD BAUMGARTEN, 1521 WEST SEVENTH ST., BROOKLYN; CLARENCE BOAZ, ANDERSON, IND.; S.DAVIS, FOSSIL, ORE.; FLOYD NEWKIRD, 1715 FLETCHER AVE., INDIANAPOLIS.

SETTERICH, GERMANY, NOV. 21-(AP)-THE U.S. NINTH ARMY'S MIGHTY ARTILLERY PLAYED "SERENADES" ON ELEMENTS OF A GERMAN PANZER DIVISION AS LT.GEN.WILLIAM H.SIMPSON'S ELUSIVE FIGHTING FORCES ROLLED STEADILY FORWARD IN THE MUD TO WITHIN 25 MILES OF THE RHINE TODAY.

AMERICAN TANKS IN THE ACTION ABSORBED SOME LOSSES IN SAVAGE NIGHT AND DAY FIGHTING WHILE BRINGING THE GERMAN FIVE-DAY TANK TOLL TO MORE THAN 64 AND THE BAG OF PRISONERS TO NEARLY 5,000, BUT THE ARTILLERY CAPTURED THE SPOTLIGHT IN BREAKING GERMAN RESISTANCE WEST OF THE ROER RIVER.

FOR THE FIRST TIME IN WEEKS, THE GERMANS THREW THEIR PRECIOUS AIRFORCE INTO AN ATTEMPT TO HALT THE GRINDING PROCESS OF THE NINTH ARMY, THEIR PLANES OPERATING OVER THE LINES AT NIGHT GIVING THE APPEARANCE OF FLAMING COMETS. THIS MORNING A FEW ME-109'S STRAFED ROADS IN THIS AREA.

BAD WEATHER GROUNDED MOST OF THE AMERICAN AIR EFFORT. IT RAINED CONTINUOUSLY THROUGHOUT THE DAY.

THE RESULT WAS THE ARTILLERY TOOK UP THE BURDEN AND SENT "SERENDADE AFTER SERENADE" INTO THE GERMAN POSITIONS. A SERENADE CONSISTS OF 100 GUNS FIRING SIMULTANEOUSLY AT ONE TARGET, USUALLY A TOWN, SO THAT ALL THE SHELLS, RANGING FROM GIANT 230 MM.'S TO 105 MM.'S, ARRIVE AT ONCE.

"USUALLY WELL OVER A THOUSAND SHELLS HIT A TOWN IN LESS THAN A MINUTE DURING A SERENADE4'$ ',2?)346 :-05. WILLIAM BREEZE OF 19 COMPETON STRET, NEW HAVEN, CONN., WHO AT THAT MOMENT WAS ORDERING A SERENDADE ON THE TOWN OF WELZ WHERE 18 GERMAN TANKS WERE STATIONED.

METZ, NOV 21-(AP)-REMNANTS OF THE METZ GARRISON STILL FOUGHT ON TODAY IN THE NORTHERN PORTION AND ON TWO ISLANDS WITHIN THE FORTRESS CITY, BUT AMERICAN TROOPS HAD WIPED OUT ALL LARGE-SCALE ORGANIZED RESISTANCE IN THE FIRST SUCCESSFUL FRONTAL ASSAULT ON METZ SINCE THE DAY OF ATTILA THE HUN.

NOV 22 1944

THE GERMAN COMMANDER IN THE NORTHERN PART OF METZ SPURNED AN ULTIMATUM TO SURRENDER. FIVE FORTRESS GROUPS CONTINUED FIRING.

(THESE FORTRESS GROUPS APPARENTLY WERE REMAINING STRONGHOLDS IN THE METZ RING WHICH HAD BEEN BYPASSED OR SURROUNDED.)

THE THIRD ARMY MEN CAPTURED MAJ.GEN.ANTON DUNCKERN, COMMANDER OF THE SS (ELITE GUARD) TROOPS IN METZ, MONDAY.

THE 95TH [illegible] WAS GIVEN THE JOB OF ROOTING THE GERMANS OUT OF THE [illegible]DS FORMED BY THE MOSELLE RIVER AND A CANAL. THE ISLANDS CONTAIN SEVERAL STRONGLY BUILT BARRACKS.

THE FIVE FORTRESS GROUPS STILL FIRING FROM TIME TO TIME WERE THE VERDUN GROUP, FOUR MILES SOUTHWEST OF METZ; JEANNE D'ARC, THREE MILES WEST; ST.QUENTIN, JUST ACROSS THE MOSELLE TO THE WEST, GAMBETTA-DE R[illegible]OULED TWO MILES NORTH, AND ST. PRIVAT [illegible]ESTERI EDGE OF THE CITY. QUEULEU ON THE SOUTHEAST STILL IS HE[illegible] GERMANS, BUT ITS GUNS ARE INACTIVE.

IT WAS NOT KNOWN DEFINITELY TO WHAT EXTENT THE SURROUNDED FORTRESSES CAN BRING THEIR GUNS TO BEAR ON METZ ITSELF, BUT THEY CAN HARASS COMMUNICATIONS.

SOME 3,100 PRISONERS HAVE BEEN TAKEN IN THE METZ AREA.

THE REAL BATTLE WAS OVER BY NIGHTFALL LAST NIGHT ALTHO[illegible] SOME SHOOTING STILL COULD BE HEARD AROUND THE BARRACKS AT THE EXTREME NORTH END OF THE CITY WHERE ELEMENTS OF THE 95TH DIVISION CROSSED THE MOSELLE RIVER TWO DAYS AGO. GUNFIRE ALSO CAME OCCASIONALLY FROM THE VICINITY OF FORT DE PRIVAT ON THE CITY'S SOUTH SIDE.

THE VOLKSSTURME DEFENSE INSIDE METZ TURNED OUT TO BE A FARCE DESPITE THE PRESENCE OF SEVERAL HUNDRED GERMAN OFFICERS AND MEN WHO, WITH THE ASSISTANCE OF THE GESTAPO, WERE SUPPOSED TO GOAD THE HOMEGUAR INTO BITTER HOUSE TO HOUSE FIGHTING.

THE FIFTH DIVISION ALONE REPORTED 600 PRISONERS TAKEN YESTERDAY AND THE 95TH'S BAG WAS SAID TO BE AS LARGE OR LARGER.

AN EXPLOSION SHORTLY AFTER THE GERMANS HAD EVACUATED FORT BELLECROIX, DUG INTO A HILLSIDE OVERLOOKING THE SEILLE RIVER, CAUSED CASUALTIES AMONG AMERICAN TROOPS PASSING BY. WRECKAGE FROM THE OLD FORT WAS BLOWN ACROSS THE STREET.

--DASH MATTER--

SELDOM HAS METZ SUCCUMBED TO SIEGE, AND THERE HAVE BEEN EVEN FEWER OCCASIONS WHEN ATTACKING ARMIES SUCCEEDED IN TAKING IT BY ASSAULT AS LT.GEN.GEORGE S.PATTON'S MEN HAVE DONE.

CAESAR DESCRIBED THE CITY AS ONE OF THE OLDEST AND MOST IMPORTANT IN GAUL. DOWN THROUGH THE YEARS VARIOUS FRENCH AND GERMAN MILITARY LEADERS HAVE REVISED AND EXPANDED ITS FORTIFICATIONS.

IN THE MIDDLE OF THE FIFTH CENTURY METZ WAS PLUNDERED BY THE HUNS UNDER ATTILA.

FOR SEVEN MONTHS IN 1444 METZ WAS BESIEGED BY CHARLES VII OF FRANCE BEFORE A RANSOM WAS PAID. HENRY II CAPTURED THE CITY IN APRIL, 1552 AND THE DUKE OF GUISE SUCCESSFULLY DEFENDED IT AGAINST EMPEROR CHARLES V FROM OCTOBER, 1552, TO JANUARY, 1553. METZ WAS CEDED TO FRANCE BY THE PEACE OF WESTPHALIA IN 1648.

IN THE FRANCO-PRUSSIAN WAR MARSHAL ACHILLE FRANCOIS BAZAINE SURRENDERED THE CITY AFTER A THREE MONTH SIEGE. IT WAS CEDED TO THE GERMANS IN 1871 AND WAS NOT REGAINED BY THE FRENCH UNTIL AFTER THE FIRST WORLD WAR, BY WHICH TIME HALF OF THE INHABITANTS WERE GERMAN-SPEAKING.

IN THE FIRST WORLD WAR AMERICAN TROOPS CAME WITHIN REACH OF THE FORTRESS GUNS OF METZ SHORTLY BEFORE THE ARMISTICE.

IN THE PRESENT WAR METZ FELL TO THE GERMANS ON JUNE 17, 1940 WHILE FRANCE LAY CRUSHED UNDER ADOLF HITLER'S MILITARY MACHINE.

SLASHING FORWARD IN WHAT A FRENCH COLONEL SAID WAS PRIMARILY AN EFFORT TO ESCAPE INTO SWITZERLAND, A FORCE OF NAZIS THIS MORNING RECAPTURED A TOWN THROUGH WHICH LT. GEN. JEAN DE LATTRE DE TASSIGNY'S ARMORED COLUMNS HAD SPED TWO DAYS AGO.
AS A RESULT, MY JEEP WHICH WAS TO HAVE HAD ITS MUD WASHED OFF IN THE RHINE'S WATERS, HAD TO DO AN ABOUT FACE, BUT NOT BEFORE ITS OCCUPANTS, INCLUDING MAJ.FREDERICK BETZ OF SPRINGFIELD, N.J., ND CAPT.ELZEAR LEMIEUX OF INDIAN ORCHARD, MASS., WERE FORCED TO DIVE FOR A COLD AND MUDDY DITCH WHEN A COUPLE OF STRAFING MESSERSCHMITTS APPEARED OVERHEAD.

WITH THE U.S.THIRD ARMY, NOV. 21-(AP)-TANKS OF LT.GEN.GEORGE S.PATTON'S THIRD ARMY CONSOLIDATED THE ARMY'S HOLD ON APPROXIMATELY 25 SQUARE MILES OF GERMAN SOIL TODAY WHILE THE REMAINS OF THE BY-PASSED AND SURROUNDED NAZI GARRISON AT METZ FOUGHT ON IN THE NORTHERN TIP OF THE CITY AGAINST A SQUEEZE BY AMERICAN INFANTRY.
NORTHEAST OF NANCY THE THIRD ARMY'S ARMOR EDGED FROM ONE HALF TO THREE MILES CLOSER TO THE GERMAN BORDER AGAINST SMALL BUT STRONGLY PLACED REAR GUARDS.
THE TENTH ARMORED DIVISION NORTH OF METZ MERGED TWO SALIENTS CARVED OUT BY MECHANIZED CAVALRY INTO A WEDGE-SHAPED AREA ABOUT FOUR AND A HALF MILES DEEP AT THE WESTERN END OF THE ARMY'S FRONT AT THE LUXEMBOURG BORDER, WITH THE FRONT LINE TAPERING EIGHT MILES SOUTHEASTWARD TO THE FRANCO-GERMAN BORDER.
JUST SOUTHEAST OF THIS WEDGE WAS ANOTHER TANK-HELD BULGE REACHING ABOUT TWO MILES INTO GERMANY. THE TWO AREAS INCLUDED THE VILLAGES OF BESCH, TETTING, BORG, HELLENDORF, BUSCHDORF, EFT, WILLINGEN AND BUDINGEN.
ALL THROUGH THIS AREA, PARTICULARLY IN THE SOUTHERN SALIENT WHICH EXTENDS TO A POINT A LITTLE MORE THAN TWO MILES WEST OF MERZIG ON THE SAAR RIVER, THE TANKS WERE NOT ONLY MEETING STRONG CONCENTRATIONS OF ARTILLERY BUT THICKLY-SOWED MINE FIELDS, EXTENSIVE BRIDGE DEMOLITIONS, ROADBLOCKS AND TANK DITCHES AND TRAPS.
HERE, AS HE IS ALL ALONG THE THIRD ARMY FRONT, THE ENEMY IS DOING A REAL JOB WITH A MINIMUM OF MEN AND A MAXIMUM OF FIREPOWER AND OBSTACLES TO DELAY THE AMERICAN ADVANCE AND SCREEN HIS GENERAL WITHDRAWAL TOWARD THE SIEGFRIED DEFENSES.
FORT QUEULEU ON THE SOUTHEASTERN EDGE OF METZ WAS CAPTURED TODAY BY THE FIFTH INFANTRY, BUT FIVE OTHER FORTRESS GROUPS AROUND THE CITY REMAINED ACTIVE.
INSIDE THE TOWN, RESISTANCE CONTINUED ON SAULCY AND CHAMBIERE ISLANDS.
CHECKING OF PRISONERS TAKEN IN THE FIRST SUCCESSFUL STORMING OF THE CITY IN MODERN TIMES DISCLOSED THAT THE VOLKSSTURM (PEOPLE'S ARMY) HAD A SMALLER PART IN THE FINAL DEFENSE OF METZ THAN HAD BEEN INDICATED PREVIOUSLY. A VERY SMALL PERCENTAGE OF THE CAPTIVES WERE MEMBERS OF THE HOME GUARD, ALTHOUGH THIS MIGHT BE EXPLAINED BY THE POSSIBILITY THAT SOME OF THE CIVILIAN ARMY MEMBERS MERELY REMOVED THEIR ARMBANDS AND FADED INTO THE CIVILIAN POPULATION WHEN THE AMERICANS CAME.

U.S. 15TH AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS, ITALY, NOV 21-(AP)-LT. HARVEY S.CLAPP OF ALEXANDRIA, VA., BROUGHT IN HIS LIBERATOR BOMBER YESTERDAY AKTER ALL MOTORS HAD GIVEN OUT.

IN A RAID OVER BLECHHAMMER, ONE OF THE MOTORS GAVE OUT. CLAPP

STARTED BACK ON THREE ENGINES AND WHEN HE NEARED THE LANDING FIELD, ALL THREE OTHER MOTORS WENT DEAD.

IT WAS TOO LOW FOR THE CREW TO BAIL OUT, SO CLAPP STEEPENED HIS BANK INTO A DIVE IN ORDER TO MAINTAIN SPEED AND FINALLY LEVELLED OFF, PUTTING THE SHIP NEATLY ON THE RUNWAY.

HIS DIVE COMING IN WAS SO STEEP THAT RADIO OPERATOR SGT. ROBERT GUTHRIE OF MC COMB, MISS., SAID HE LOOKED OUT THE WINDOW AND "SAW THE GROUND ABOVE MY HEAD."

ABOUT THE TIME THIS WAS HAPPENING, SGT. HARVEY SCHWARTZ, 1316 SOUTH TROY ST., CHICAGO, STANDING IN FRONT OF HIS TENT AFTER DARK AT ANOTHER FIELD NEARBY, SAW A PARACHUTE DRIFTING DOWN. IT TURNED OUT TO BE LT. GEORGE CROMMELIN, LIBERATOR NAVIGATOR, OF 455 25TH ST., SANTA MONICA, CALIF.

THE PLANE HAD CIRCLED THE FIELD FOR TWO HOURS TRYING TO GET ITS LANDING GEAR DOWN. THE LIBERATOR ALREADY HAD ONE MOTOR SHOT OUT IN THE BLECHHAMMER RAID. WHEN THE GEARS FINALLY WERE DOWN, THE CREW COULDN'T GET THEM TO LOCK IN PLACE.

FINALLY STRESKI POINTED THE SHIP SEWARD AND ORDERED THE REST OF THE CREW TO BAIL OUT. HE AND CROMMELIN WERE THE LAST TWO TO LEAVE, AND THEY BELIEVED THE REST OF THE CREW CAME DOWN SAFELY.

AC HQTRS--THIRD ADD SECOND NITE LEAD PIPS XXX VICTORIES.

IN ADDITION TO THE ACTION IN AND AROUND LIMON AND DAGAMI AND THE SEVENTH DIVISION'S REPULSE OF THE ONE COUNTER-ATTACK, THE COMMUNIQUE SAID TROOPS OF THE 24TH DIVISION, RELIEVED ONLY RECENTLY IN THE VITAL LIMON SECTOR AFTER CARRYING THE BRUNT OF MOST OF THE LEYTE BATTLE, WERE BEING USED TO COUNTER A JAPANESE THREAT TO THE AMERICAN REAR NEAR THE NORTHERN COAST OF THE ISLAND.

IN THE CAPROCAN AREA, THEY COMBED THROUGH JUNGLES AND RUINS OF VILLAGES FOR ENEMY INFILTRATORS. AN ATTACK ON AN AMERICAN SUPPLY COLUMN BY THESE ISOLATED JAPANESE UNITS WAS REPORTED IN YESTERDAY'S COMMUNIQUE.

NOV 22 1944

THE COMMUNIQUE, DISCUSSING THE LIMON ACTION, SAID THE JAPANESE FIRST DIVISION HAD BEEN "COMMITTED" IN A DESPERATE ATTEMPT TO RETAIN THE CRITICAL POSITIONS THERE. SINCE THE JAPANESE FIRST DIVISION HAS BEEN IN ACTION THERE FOR SEVERAL DAYS, THIS COULD BE INTERPRETED AS AN AMERICAN OPINION THAT THE DIVISION NOW HAD BEEN ORDERED TO FIGHT TO THE DEATH FOR LIMON RATHER THAN TO SAVE ITSELF BY A RETREAT.

THE COMMUNIQUE AGAIN POINTED OUT EXTREME DIFFICULTIES OF THE LIMON ACTION--RUGGED TERRAIN, HEAVILY FORTIFIED ENEMY POSITIONS, PILLBOXES AND POCKETS OF ENEMY RESISTANCE IN THE DIFFICULT SIDE COUNTRY. THIS ENTIRE BATTLE WAS BEING FOUGHT IN A SEA OF MUD, RESULT OF A TYPHOON WHICH LASHED THE BATTLEFRONT YESTERDAY.

FRONTLINE REPORTS SAID SEVENTH INFANTRY DIVISION UNITS WERE CLOSING WITH THE STRONGLY ENTRENCHED, STUBBORN ENEMY ON BOTH SIDES OF THE MAIN MOUNTAIN RANGE WHICH RUNS NORTH AND SOUTH. THIS DIVISION IS DRIVING FROM THE SOUTH AND EAST ON ORMOC, JAPANESE WEST COAST BASE.

NORTH OF ORMOC, THE 32ND DIVISION MADE SOME GAINS IN THE LIMON VILLAGE AREA, WHERE SOME NIPPONESE ARE TRAPPED ON MOUNTAIN RIDGES HEDGING THE ORMOC CORRIDOR.

A HEADQUARTERS COMMUNIQUE SAID THE JAPANESE WERE CONSTANTLY STRIVING TO CRACK THE AMERICAN ROADBLOCK ON THE ONLY COMMUNICATION LINE RUNNING FROM LIMON TO ORMOC. THE ATTACKS WERE REPULSED.

THE HEAVY DOWNPOUR HAD TURNED TRAILS AND ROADS INTO HUB-DEEP MUD CHANNELS, FORCING THE AMERICANS TO BRING SUPPLIES FORWARD AFOOT.

AMERICAN AIRCRAFT, ARMY AND NAVY, CONTINUED TO DESTROY JAPANESE AIRCRAFT AND BATTER ENEMY AIRDROMES IN THE PHILIPPINE ARCHIPELAGO AND IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC.

WHILE ADM.CHESTER W.NIMITZ ANNOUNCED THAT THIRD FLEET CARRIER PLANES HAD BLASTED MANILA SATURDAY, DESTROYING 118 NIPPONESE AIRCRAFT, 100 OF THEM ON THE GROUND, AND FIRING THREE MERCHANT VESSELS IN THE HARBOR, GEN.DOUGLAS MACARTHUR TOLD OF AIR THRUSTS AT MINDANAO AND THE DUTCH EAST INDIES.

NIPPONESE WITH LIGHT MACHINE GUNS HAD TRICKLED THROUGH THE AMERICAN FRONT TO THE AREA EAST OF PINAMOPOAN. PERIODICALLY THEY WOULD VANISH, THEN REAPPEAR MUCH FARTHER EASTWARD TOWARD AMERICAN REAR ELEMENTS.

THEN THE AMERICANS LEARNED WHY. THEY WERE FLEEING, NOT ADVANCING. TROOPS COMMANDED BY MONK MEYER (LT.COL.CHARLES R.MEYER), WEST POINT ALL-AMERICAN FOOTBALL BACK A FEW YEARS AGO, HAD MOVED AGAINST THEM FROM THE WEST. THE JAPS SIMPLY CHOSE THE LESSER OF TWO EVILS. NEW YORK, NOV.21-(AP)-FIRST LT.ALEX SABO, 24, OF (189 GRACE STREET) BUFFALO, N.Y., WHO SAID HE IS UNMARRIED AND "THE SINGLEST MAN YOU EVER SAW," TODAY DESCRIBED AN ENCOUNTER IN ITALY WITH TWO GERMAN TIGER TANKS THAT WON HIM THE DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSS.

IN AN INTERVIEW AT ARMY PUBLIC RELATIONS HEADQUARTERS HE WAS ASKED HOW HE FELT.

"OH, I FEEL PRETTY GOOD," HE ANSWERED, "I THINK I'VE GOT ABOUT 63 STITCHES IN ME AND ABOUT 12 HOLES ALL TOGETHER."

THE ENCOUNTER WITH THE TANKS OCCURRED AT VELLETRI, ITALY, IN MAY WHEN HE WAS ON GROUND RECONNAISSANCE FOR GUN POSITIONS AND SPOTTED ONE OF THE TANKS, HE SAID.

"I WENT BACK," HE SAID, "CROSSED INTO A FIELD AND WORKED MY WAY UP ALONGSIDE THE TANK. I STOOD UP NEXT TO IT AND AT THE SAME TIME THE TANK COMMANDER SAW ME. I CHALLENGED AND SHOT HIM WITH MY CARBINE. HE SCREAMED AND I CLIMBED ABOARD THE TANK AND LEANED INTO THE TURRET AND KILLED TWO MORE WITH MY CARBINE."

THEN, THE YOUNG LIEUTENANT SAID, HE HEARD SOMEONE SHOOTING AT HIM FROM ANOTHER TANK NEARBY AND HE RAN TOWARD THE MARKSMAN.

"AS I RAN, THE CARBINE WAS SHOT OUT OF MY HANDS AND I MADE BELIEVE I WAS HIT AND DROPPED TO THE GROUND," HE CONTINUED. "I CRAWLED AWAY OUT OF SIGHT AND GOT BACK TO MY PLATOON."

NOV 22 1944

LT. SABO, REARMED WITH A SERGEANT AND A BAZOOKA ACCOMPANYING HIM, WORKED HIS WAY BACK TO THE SECOND TANK.

"WITHIN 20 YARDS OF THAT TANK," HE SAID, "WE RAN ACROSS ITS CREW--DISMOUNTED--COMING TOWARD US WITH MACHINE PISTOLS. I SHOT THE FIRST TWO AND WOUNDED A THIRD AND THEN SOMETHING EXPLODED IN MY FACE AND CHEST."

THE SERGEANT WITH THE BAZOOKA FINISHED THE JOB, HE SAID.

LT.SABO RECOVERED FROM HIS WOUNDS AND WENT BACK ON DUTY, BUT IN JULY RECEIVED STOMACH INJURIES WHEN A LANDMINE EXPLODED NEAR HIM. HE HAS BEEN HOSPITALIZED SINCE AND NOW IS CONVALESCING AT HALLORAN GENERAL HOSPITAL.

WASHINGTON,NOV.21-(AP)-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT SET IN MOTION TODAY MACHINERY FOR THE DISPOSAL OF $100,000,000,000 OF SURPLUS WAR PROPERTIES UNDER A THREE-MEMBER BOARD HEADED BY ROBERT A.HURLEY, FORMER CONNECTICUT GOVERNOR.

HE SENT THE NOMINATION OF HURLEY AND LIEUT.COL.EDWARD HELLER OF SAN FRANCISCO TO THE SENATE SHORTLY AFTER IT RECESSED FOR THE DAY BUT HELD UP THE EXPECTED NOMINATION OF SENATOR GUY M.GILLETTE (D-IOWA) UNTIL THE END OF THE YEAR.

WHILE SENATORS HAD RECEIVED WORD EARLIER IN THE DAY THEY ALSO WOULD RECEIVE GILLETTE'S NOMINATION, A LEGAL BARRIER PREVENTED.

SENATE ATTACHES SAID NO MEMBER COULD BE APPOINTED DURING THE LIFE OF HIS TERM TO AN OFFICE CREATED BY LEGISLATION PASSED DURING HIS MEMBERSHIP. GILLETTE WAS DEFEATED FOR RE-ELECTION BY GOV. BOURKE HICKENLOOPER, REPUBLICAN. HIS PRESENT TERM EXPIRES JAN.3, 1945.

THE SURPLUS WAR PROPERTY DISPOSAL BILL, PASSED BY CONGRESS PRIOR TO THE ELECTION RECESS, FIXED THE BOARD MEMBERS' SALARIES AT $12,000 A YEAR.

IT WILL BE THE BOARD'S DUTY TO DIRECT THE DISPOSITION OF PROPERTY AND GOODS DECLARED SURPLUS BY THE WAR AND NAVY DEPARTMENTS AND OTHER GOVERNMENT AGENCIES UNDER PROCEDURES WRITTEN INTO THE LAW AND REQUIRING REPORTS AND CONSULTATIONS WITH CONGRESS.

THE PROSPECTIVE SELECTION OF GILLETTE, OFTEN A CRITIC OF THE ADMINISTRATION AND ONCE, IN 1938, RE-ELECTED TO THE SENATE AFTER BEING PLACED ON THE WHITE HOUSE "PURGE" LIST, DREW THE APPROVAL OF DEMOCRATIC AND REPUBLICAN SENATORS ALIKE.

HE RAN NOV.7 WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S BLESSINGS. HE RECEIVED A WHITE HOUSE LETTER IN JUNE URGING HIM TO MAKE THE RACE.

HURLEY, A FORMER DEMOCRATIC GOVERNOR, ALSO WAS DEFEATED NOV.7 IN A RACE AGAINST REPUBLICAN GOV.RAYMOND BALDWIN.

GILLETTE TOLD REPORTERS THAT HE HAD NOT SOUGHT THE APPOINTMENT, NOR CONFERRED WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

HE DID SAY, HOWEVER, THAT HE DID NOT FEEL HE COULD REFUSE TO SERVE IN ANY CAPACITY THAT WOULD AID IN THE WAR EFFORT.

HERE TO DISCUSS POLICY ON "SECOND PHASE" LEND-LEASE BETWEEN AUSTRALIA AND THE UNITED STATES, KEANE TOLD A NEWS CONFERENCE HIS COUNTRY HAD MADE "A GREAT AND GROWING CONTRIBUTION TO THE MAINTENANCE OF UNITED STATES FORCES IN THE SOUTH-WEST PACIFIC."

APPROXIMATELY 20 PER CENT OF THE TOTAL CURRENT WAR EXPENDITURE, TOTALING MORE THAN $325,000,000, HAS GONE INTO RECIPROCAL AID FROM AUSTRALIA, IT WAS REVEALED. THIS INCLUDES AIR AND SEA TRANSPORTATION, HOSPITAL, AIRFIELD AND BARRACKS CONSTRUCTION, AND SUPPLY OF CLOTHING AND TECHNICAL EQUIPMENT.

"BUT THE MOST IMPRESSIVE CONTRIBUTION HAS BEEN IN THE FORM OF FOOD," KEANE SAID.

NOV 22 1944

"DESPITE THE LOSS OF MILLIONS OF SHEEP AND OTHER LIVESTOCK IN THE MOST SERIOUS DROUGHT IN 40 YEARS, AUSTRALIA HAS DELIVERED TO AMERICAN FORCES 71,700 TONS OF MEAT, 99,300 TONS OF BREAD AND FLOUR, 95,100 TONS OF VEGETABLES AND 11,000 TONS OF BUTTER," KEANE ADDED.

HE LIKEWISE PRAISED ASSISTANCE GIVEN AUSTRALIA BY THE UNITED STATES.

THE AUSTRALIAN OFFICIAL SAID THAT ALTHOUGH "A WORLD CONFERENCE WILL HAVE TO SETTLE THE QUESTION OF MIGRATION," BRITISH, AMERICAN, SWEDISH AND OTHER PEOPLES "WOULD BE WELCOME" TO SETTLE IN AUSTRALIA.

AUSTRALIA IS AN OUTPOST WHICH "MUST BE BUILT UP FOR THE PROTECTION OF PACIFIC INTERESTS," KEANE SAID, ADDING THAT "7,000,000 AUSTRALIANS ARE TOO FEW FOR THE TASK."

"WE WILL WELCOME FOREIGN CAPITAL AND LABOR," KEANE SAID.

GERMANS USING ROCKETS IN WEST; DESPERATE EFFORT TO HALT ALLIES

Metz, Mulhouse and Eschweiler Are Seized by Advancing Troops

NOV 23 1944

V-1, V-2 Bombs Fired At Rear of U. S. Ninth

Saverne, 19 M. of Strasbourg, Engulfed—Bastion of Eschweiler Overrun By U. S. First—French Sweep to Gates of Colmar—19th Nazi Army General Staff Captured.

By Austin Bealmear

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Nov. 22 (AP) — Allied armies firmly occupied three major cities with a population totaling more than 200,000 today as the great winter offensive crunched forward all along the western front. The advance threatened the entire German position on the southern half of the battle line and forced the enemy to the desperate measure of firing V-1 and V-2 bombs against the Americans in the north.

All resistance in Metz, the mighty fortress city of 100,000 population, was crushed by the U. S. Third Army, units of which made two smashing advances of 10 miles and reached the German border at two new, still undisclosed points in the Saar Basin.

NOV 23 1944

Eschweiler Overrun

To the north Eschweiler finally was overrun by the U. S. First Army after days of savage house to house fighting and to the south the French First Army seized Mulhouse, another important city of nearly 100,000 population.

The French Second Armored Division operating with the American Seventh Army also captured the strategic town of Saverne, at the eastern mouth of Saverne Gap, and plunged on toward Strasbourg on the Rhine river 19 miles southeast. This success culminated a seven-mile thrust through Saverne Gap, the first of the Vosges passes to be entirely forced since the breakthrough at Belfort Gap on the extreme south.

Pushed Back in North

Gains in the north were less spectacular, but despite their fierce resistance the Germans were being pushed back yard by yard and mile by mile. The First Army advanced up to two miles, the Ninth pressed closer to the approaches of Julich, eight miles northeast of schweiler and the British Second Army in Holland fought two miles closer to the River Maas, reaching within three miles of Venlo.

Wildly Firing Rocket Bombs

Associated Press Correspondent Wes Gallagher said the Germans were wildly firing their V-1 and V2 bombs into the rear areas of the American armies and also sending out an increased number of aircraft. This dispatch said the diversion of Germany's vengeance weapons from firing on England and Antwerp was interpreted as meaning the enemy was using every conceivable effort to halt the assault of the First and Ninth armies.

As the last German pocket in Metz surrendered, other doughboys of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army who swept past the doomed fortress city days ago smashed to the German Saar frontier at two new points west of Saarbrucken in lightning 10-mile thrusts.

More than 100 miles to the south, French armored forces plunging down the Rhine valley behind the Nazis' crumbling Vosges mountain positions seized Mulhouse, an important city of nearly 100,000 population.

French 22 M. Beyond Mulhouse

(Gen. Charles De Gaulle, in a broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, reported French troops had sped 22 miles beyond Mulhouse to the gates of Colmar, a big road junction 40 miles south of Strasbourg.)

As the French and Americans swept down the Rhine valley and poured like acid through the passes of the Vosges, they hourly increased the threat of entrapment to an estimated 70,000 German troops remaining on the west bank of the Rhine above Strasbourg. A front dispatch said only three bridges still were standing on the Rhine in the 40-mile stretch.

So swift was the French armored envelopment of Mulhouse that members of the German 19th army general staff were captured, along with more than 1,000 other prisoners.

Stumbling Block Removed

One of the biggest stumbling blocks in the path of the Allied power drive toward Cologne and the great industrial Rhineland was removed with the crushing of last-ditch Nazi resistance in Eschweiler, an important communications center throughout which house-to-house fighting had raged for several days.

General Hodges' troops opened a final irresistible smash right through the center of the Siegfried line town at 3 a.m. today, and by tonight the last enemy opposition had flickered out. Eschweiler was almost a total ruin, another monument to what will happen to Germay's towns and cities when they are converted into forts.

Eschweiler's collapse threatened Weisweiler, two miles to the east, and unhinged the strong enemy line at that point, 28 miles from Cologne. The Germans still were fighting bitterly, however, on a "shoulder" southeast of Eschweiler, trying to keep their entire line from crumbling before the First Army's terrible blows.

Durwiss Cleaned Out

To the north of Eschweiler, doughboys cleaned out Durwiss and the town of Lohn, while to the southeast they slowly plodded forward against furious enemy resistance in Hurtgen Forest—one of the bloodiest battlegrounds of the invasion of western Europe.

"Although the fighting is hard and costly the situation looked much brighter tonight," said a front dispatch.

On the left of Hodges' advance, Lt. Gen. Simpson's U. S. Ninth Army gained up to more than two miles in a slow, arduous advance east and southeast of Geilenkirchen. It battled its way into Frohoven, three miles northeast of Eschweiler, and won high ground overlooking both Linnich and Julich, fortified towns overlooking the Roer river.

NOV 23 1944

(A Berlin broadcast said Ninth army tanks had reached Bourheim, less than two miles southwest of Julich.)

British Second army forces in southeastern Holland smashed a German bridgehead at Roermond, a key river city on the Maas (Meuse), and advanced within three miles of the German stronghold of Venlo. The Nazis still held Roermond itself, which lies on the east bank of the Maas.

Other British forces made contact between the towns of Amerika and Sevenum and now have a solid front against the fast-shrinking German defense perimeter before Venlo.

(A German broadcast said that "tank battles now raging between Aachen and Basle (Switzerland) exceed in violence anything that has hitherto been known since the invasion of Europe began," adding that "at no spot has a crisis occurred along the entire front.")

London, Nov. 22 (A.P.).—Mulhouse and Metz fell today to Allied armies driving swiftly upon the Rhine through the shattered German front in Alsace-Lorraine, and the Paris radio said the French were within nineteen miles of Strasbourg.

30. 24 — 20581

In operations less spectacular but of major importance, Allied troops on the northern flank of the front captured the smashed German city of Eschweiler, twenty-eight miles from the limits of Cologne. The town of 36,000, once a manufacturing center for Teller mines and airplane parts, was one of the key defense points on the Cologne plain. It is on the wide Adolf Hitler highway from Aachen to Berlin.

The Paris report said French troops had captured Saverne, in the gap leading from fallen Sarrebourg to Strasbourg, capital of Alsace-Lorraine and largest French city still in enemy hands. Headquarters advices placed the American Seventh Army twenty-three miles away. Gen. Eisenhower's communique said Allied infantry and armor were driving east "against crumbling resistance on a wide front."

70,000 Nazis Are in Peril.

The whole German Nineteenth Army of 70,000 survivors was in imminent peril. Part of its staff was captured at Mulhouse by the French First Army.

[French troops are at the gates of Colmar after advancing twenty-two miles from Mulhouse, Gen. Charles de Gaulle said in a broadcast report recorded by the FCC. Colmar, a city of 46,000, is capital of Upper Alsace, the center of six roads and forty miles south of Strasbourg.]

The American Ninth Army made important but less spectacular gains within sight of the Roer River on the Aachen front. In bitter weather and against savage resistance, Lieut.-Gen. William H. Simpson's men captured high ground overlooking Linnich and Julich on the Roer, first major terrain barrier on the Cologne Plain. They fought around Fronthoven. Berlin said a tank spearhead has reached Bourheim, twenty-five miles from the western limits of Cologne.

The British Second Army smashed the German bridgehead opposite Roermond, key river city on the Maas (Meuse), and advanced within three miles of Venlo further north along the river. The Germans clung to Roermond itself which is east of the Maas, but Britons with bayonets cleaned out the last nests of resistance on the west bank.

The breakthrough of the American Seventh and the French First armies on the southern end of the western front erased a definite German front along the northern slope of the diff[illegible]w-incrusted Vosges M[illegible]ma.

The last Germa[illegible]esistance dissolved in Metz, a[illegible]e official fall of that fortress[illegible] was announced while tre[illegible] of four American divisions [illegible]he Third Army were cleaning [illegible]eir guns. Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton Jr. became the first commander since Attila the Hun to capture the city frontally. Attila did the trick 1,500 years ago. Metz, a city of 83,119, is eighty miles northwest of threatened Strasbourg and was ringed by forty or more forts which made it one of the strongest positions in the world.

More than 1,000 prisoners surrendered with the staff officers at Mulhouse, normally a humming industrial city of 96,697, sixty-one miles southwest of Strasbourg. Once a free city of Alsace, it lies nine miles from the German frontier on a tributary of the Rhine.

The drive on Strasbourg (population 193,000) went through German defenses in front of the Saverne Gap and ten miles beyond the French communications center of Sarrebourg, where three railroads and eleven highways converge.

Progress Slow in Aachen Sector.

Slow progress was reported in the Aachen sector in the north where Americans drove the Germans back against the Roer River, first major terrain obstacle on the Cologne Plain.

German broadcasts said great tank battles were being fought all the way from Aachen to the Swiss border and "exceed in violence anything hitherto known since the invasion of Europe."

Violent street fighting continued in the southern part of Belfort, and a French communique said "the fall of the citadel is imminent."

70,000 Pressed Against Rhine.

The 70,000 Germans in the Vosges sector were sealed back against their homeland border south of Strasbourg in positions of rising peril. With the Nazi line collapsed in Lorraine, only three bridges were reported intact along a 40-mile stretch of the broad and swift Rhine south of Strasbourg.

The Germans were reported hastily massing barges and boats in an attempt to organize an escape to the Siegfried fortifications on the east bank.

French forces moved on north through Mulhouse toward Colmar despite the violence of German counterattacks upon the Dannemarie elbow of their corridor to the Rhine. French reinforcements were reported pouring toward the front through the overrun Belfort Gap.

Heavy Artillery Duels

The Germans threw a few Tiger tanks and some infantry across a 12-mile sector of the French corridor between Courtelevant and Bisel, but the French kept supplies moving toward the Rhine over secondary roads. The French fought to clear the German dent and to prevent Germans from driving to the Swiss border for internment. Heavy artillery duels were fought.

The enemy thrust apparently was aimed in the general direction of Suarce and Delle—the thinnest spot in the reinforcement line, where every road is jammed with more men and supplies moving up to the Rhine.

From north to south, the front looked like this:

The British Second Army captured Maasbree and moved to a point four miles west of Venlo. It reached the outskirts of Baarlo, four miles southeast of the Dutch border town of 27,000, and reached the edge of Sevenum, six miles northwest of Venlo.

The American Ninth Army gained up to more than two miles, overrunning nine towns yesterday, and then kept right on overnight, adding two more miles. The Ninth battled its way into Fronhoven, three miles northeast of Eschweiler. High ground overlooking both Linnich and Julich, fortified towns on the Roer River, was captured and the Americans moved within sight of the river itself.

The American Third Army was running into a harder crust of German defenses inside Germany—minefields, road blocks, antitank barriers and a curtain of artillery in the forefield of the Siegfried Line. The Third has an eleven-mile line inside Germany. Some points held are three miles inside the Reich from Luxembourg.

Biggest Gains Are in South.

Driving on east of Metz, the 12th Corps of the Third Army pushed the Germans back to within ten miles of the Reich frontier, just west of Saarbrucken and still was slugging ahead.

But it was on the south flank where the mounting pressure of which Gen. Eisenhower spoke yesterday was beginning to collapse German resistance. A front dispatch reported that the Seventh Army's breakthrough had smashed the German line so utterly that no definite front remained along the northern slopes of the Vosges.

The American Forty-fourth Division, teamed with French armor of Gen. Jacques Leclerc, bolted forward fifteen miles in twenty-four hours driving along the approaches to Strasbourg. The advance went unchecked past the historic old Fort Phalsbourg on the Paris-Strasbourg military highway and reached Schalbach and Siewiller, ten miles north of Sarrebourg. The division moved into Mittelbronn, eight miles due east of Sarrebourg and only five miles northwest of Saverne, where a pass north of the Vosges leads to Strasbourg.

As the offensive pressed upon Gen. Johannes Blaskowitz's Nineteenth Army, other American forces—the 100th, 103d and Thirty-sixth divisions—fought their way against lessening resistance into the Vosges Passes. The German forces were scrambling for safety in the Siegfried Line beyond the Reich frontier. The communique noted that 100 square miles had been taken and that the enemy was abandoning much equipment.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 23 (AP)—The Paris radio said early today that the British Second Army had occupied Julich.

Nazi Says 1,000 Guns Pound Line

London, Nov. 22 (AP)—The German radio said tonight that 1,000 Allied guns had opened a barrage on the main German defense lines on the Aachen front and that "fighter-bombers and tanks in numbers beggaring description attack us ceaselessly."

This report by Toni Schelkopf, front-line correspondent, came at the close of a day in which the Germans had reported Allied gains along most of the Western front, except in Alsace.

Schelkopf's report said the Allies were pumping out shells from more than 300 batteries on the Aachen front, "where the greatest battle of materials in this war has developed."

Calls Troops Superhuman

"It is a mass onslaught on our bodies, nerves and minds," he said. "The weather is everything but helpful for our soldiers, who are superhuman in their power of endurance. When it breaks, the fighter-bombers swoop down on us like birds of prey, rapacious and insatiable. When there is a lull in their attack, we are whipped and tormented by the downpour of ice-cold rain. It is difficult to say whether the physical or the mental anguish is greater."

Simultaneously, the German Transocean agency's headquarters correspondent, Guenther Weber, reported that an offensive by the British Second Army on the left wing of the West front "is imminent."

Tells Of British Barrage

He said that British artillery had been laying down "a terrific barrage between Venlo and Geilenkirchen in the last ten hours."

Other German reports said that American tanks had penetrated to about two miles from Julich, a road center 26 r[illegible]es from Cologne, and that other [illegible]nored spearheads in the Sarreb[illegible]g area had advanced northe[illegible] up to the region of Schalbach."

Thanksgiving Day Message Of Gen. Hodges

In Germany, Nov. 22 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' Thanksgiving Day message to his troops of the United States First Army:

"Let us join together this Thanksgiving Day in giving thanks to God that our efforts in this struggle with evil and the oppressor have been blessed with success.

"I know of no words that could express to you the gratitude I feel so deeply in my heart. It is enough for us to know that, because of you, people of all the world today are giving thanks to God Almighty who has made possible your vast achievement.

"Let us call upon Him to strengthen our hearts against the ordeals that lie ahead that we may assure final success of our arms. Let us, in remembrance of our comrades who have passed on, give thanks to Him that we live to assure that lasting peace for which they died."

Devers Congratulates Commander Of French

With the U. S. Sixth Army Group, Nov. 22 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, commander of this army group, issued his first order of the day today, lauding the French army's breach of the Belfort Gap and drive to the Rhine and the United States Seventh Army's assault through the Saverne Gap.

General Eisenhower sent a message of congratulation through Devers to the French army commander, Gen. Jean de Lattre de Tassigny. Devers himself sent a personal message to the French general, saying, "as a result of your inspiring leadership, your troops have struck a momentous blow to the enemy."

Soldiers Raise Medical Pay

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY, in Germany, Nov. 21 (Delayed) (AP)—Angered because medical enlisted men who go into battle side by side with them do not receive combat pay, infantrymen of one unit on this front subscribed to a fund to pay the medicos $10 extra a month out of their own pockets. An anti-tank crew started the idea. Sgt. Chandler Wilson of Sevierville Pike, Knoxville, Tenn., [illegible] had the fund oversubscribed.

First WAC-GI Wedding In France Set Nov. 30

Headquarters 12th Army Group, France, Nov. 22 (AP)—The first WAC-GI wedding in France is set for November 30. Sergt. Winifred Anderson, of New York city, will be married to Sergt. Gove Saulsbury, of Georgetown, Del.

The bride-to-be wistfully confided to her commanding officer, Capt. Alice Moroney, San Francisco, Cal., that she wished she had a white wedding dress. She met Saulsbury in Britain and he has never seen her in civilian clothes.

Amid messages about moving troops and ammunition was tucked an urgent request to WAC headquarters in Paris: Could someone find a wedding gown, Size 12, in that city of fashion, and borrow it for the occasion?

Yank On Raid Gives Sleeping Nazi Hotfoot

By Robert Wilson

With American Troops in the Maritime Alps, Nov. 16 (AP—Delayed)—In the midst of these snowy Alpine peaks that tumble from the Swiss border to the Mediterranean, American troops are fighting a war so intimate that one GI was able to give a German a hotfoot with a hand grenade.

This happened during one of the "routine" raids with which Maj. Gen. Robert T. Frederick's airborne infantry has been keeping the Germans off balance on their Alpine perches for two months while protecting the flank of the Sixth Army Group.

Tough Terrain

Not content to sit and look at the Germans on the mountaintop across the valley, or trade artillery shells, Major Edmund Tomasik, of New Bedford, Mass., dreamed up a "Geronimo" for his battalion against a German barracks in the ancient French fort.

It was only a mile and a half from the jump-off point to the German quarters, but it took the Yanks seven hours to get there. That's how tough the terrain is in this area where this force has fought since dropping on southern France on D-day, and taking Cannes and Nice. Three officers and 41 men went on the mission.

The men were assembled at 6 P. M. on the slope of a mountain about 6,000 feet up just east of the town of Turini, which consisted of one blood-stained building. Across the deep valley, the Germans were billeted in forts Mille Fourches and Le Force, built by Napoleon over a century ago, and Fort Case de Plan Cabal, built by the French nine years ago. All of these control Roya Valley at this southern end of the Maritime Alps.

The party was led in single file by Lieuts. Harry H. Pritchett, Jr., 3700 North Charles street, Baltimore, Md.; Theodore Wallace, Springfield, Ohio, and Richard Walters, Akron, Ohio. The group descended 2,400 feet to the valley floor. Then, crawling on hands and knees most of the way, they climbed 6,500 feet to the barracks, arriving at 1 A. M.

Sentry Opens Fire

Just as the men got into positions surrounding the barracks, where there were about 70 Germans—some of whom were sleeping, some in drunken revelry — a sentry opened fire. For the next 20 minutes all hell broke loose.

The Germans started pouring out of the buildings. One stopped 15 feet from Private Vernon Pearson, of Vienna, Va., whose rifle spat death.

Private Walter Spess, of Canouska, Pa., raced into the darkened barracks, lifted the sheet from a sleeping German and tossed in a phosphorous grenade for a unique hotfoot. Corporal Stanley Clark, of Scanlon, Minn., and Private Vernon Bonham, of Charleston, W. Va., tossed grenades in a door just as a group of Nazis burst out.

Walter brought down three. Pritchett heard a German machine-gunner cursing when his gun jammed. He tossed a grenade at the sound of swearing and screams rent the night.

"Fires Fizzled Out"

The Germans had been surprised, but one bad break was the failure of the barracks to burn.

"We poured gasoline on them but the fires fizzled out and we found that striking a light exposed us to too much fire," Prichett said. "The wood was too wet to burn, I guess."

Soon, from farther up the hill, the Germans began pouring in mortar fire and the Yanks withdrew. But the operation was not yet completed. A heavy artillery barrage was timed to pour into the area when the raiders withdrew. It went off on schedule, catching the German company just as it was moving in a counterattack against what it thought was a large-scale assault. This resulted in heavy carnage. All that the raiders claimed personally were nine Germans killed and eight wounded. The Americans suffered two casualties.

With the heels of their boots worn off and their gloves worn through, the party retraced its steps along the tortuous route and arrived back at the camp in the cold, dark, silent mountains at 5 A. M.

West Point Graduate

First Lieutenant Harry H. Pritchett, Jr., is the son of Colonel and Mrs. H. H. Pritchett, of the Northway Apartments, 3700 North Charles street. His father retired a year ago as inspector general of the Third Service Command.

The lieutenant attended high school in San Francisco and preparatory schools in Washington before entering West Point. While there he was a cadet sergeant and a member of the wrestling team and chess club.

He was graduated in 1943 and commissioned a second lieutenant in the infantry. Later he transferred and took specialized training as a paratrooper and went overseas with an airborne infantry unit.

As an infantry officer, he followed in his father's footsteps. Colonel Pritchett commanded a battalion of the Fifty-third Infantry, Sixth Division, in active sectors in France during the World War. The colonel entered the army in 1904, was commissioned in 1907, serving in the Panama Canal Zone and the Philippines before coming to the Third Service Command. He served in the inspector general's department 18 years.

SIEGFRIED LINE CHAPEL OPENED

Flushing Clergyman Holds Services as Guns Roar.

With American Troops in Germany, Nov. 12 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Doughboys of the Second Infantry Division say that it took the Germans four years to build the Siegfried Line, and it took the Americans four days to crack it and four hours to build a chapel inside it. The rude log church is among a number of wooden buildings and winter-resistant structures erected by one ttalion whose bivouac area oks like an American western ntier settlement in pioneer s.

he simple, spruge-log chapel ds out with a certain dignity his ramshackle community. estant and Catholic services eld on alternate days, and ain percentages of men from ch forward company are permitted to leave their cold, muddy positions in the heavy evergreen woods to attend church.

"That quota is always filled," smiled Chaplain Ernest Sinfield of Flushing, L. I., whose pews for months have been foxholes and whose church has been roofed only by the sky. His present building is the first real church built by his khaki-clad congregation. It has a plain wooden cross mounted on the peaked roof. At sunset the cross throws shadows on former Nazi concrete pillboxes only a few yards away.

Inside, the worshippers sit on or kneel before roughly hewn log benches. At the head of the room is a long table covered with a shining white altar cloth on which stand a silver crucifix and vases of fresh flowers.

As bombers roared overhead and gunfire rumbled in the distance, the chaplain told the congregation: "One of your first acts on entering this country of destruction was to construct this church; let it stand as a monument to American ideals."

Former 'Armchair' GIs Prove Mettle At Front

MARYLANDERS IN GERMANY — Two Maryland men are mentioned in this dispatch.

Durboslar, Germany, Nov. 21 (AP—Delayed)—The boys everybody thought were just plain crazy—GIs who voluntarily gave up soft and safe jobs in the rear to get some perilous front-line action—are taking it and liking it.

A non-combat buck private started it a couple of weeks ago by writing a letter to the Paris Stars and Stripes bureau saying he was tired of being "1-A in a 4-F outfit" and wanted combat.

A major general read the letter. He said that was just the kind of man he wanted and invited the private to join his division. The idea spread so quickly that the army newspaper soon had more than 1,000 letters from "armchair" soldiers asking transfers to the front.

Praised By Marylander

Veteran doughboys said, "Let's wait and see." But after watching some of the volunteers perform in the Ninth Army capture of Durboslar and Setterich, infantry officers had nothing but praise for them.

"If we had more men like this we'd win the war a whole lot sooner," said Major Victor Gillespie, of Centreville, Md., a unit executive officer. "These men came through 100 per cent. in their baptism of fire."

Mount Savage Man Is One

Gillespie pointed to three rain-soaked, mud-caked GIs who engineered transfers from an anti-aircraft outfit 50 miles from the front. They had swapped comfortable hotel beds for muddy, freezing foxholes.

"It was too quiet back there for me," grinned T/5 Lawrence A. Donohue, Jr., of Philadelphia. "I was a radio operator, and all I did was sit by my radio. But here we get plenty of excitement. We picked two Jerries out of that building right across the street this morning."

T/5 Robert L. Cassidy, of Mount Savage, Md., said: "I know this is rough and you can't take it forever, but you feel like you're doing something here. Back there we were just sitting around."

"Cassidy's gotta learn not to stick his head out of his foxhole so often; a sniper almost got him yesterday," said Private Dale Hashwell, of Ellwood City, Pa. "What I like is the swell bunch of guys you find around here. Back there they were too fussy."

"They're All Crazy"

"They're all crazy," said Lieut. William Cook, Jr., of Irvington, N. Y., thinking over his own three months at the front.

"Well, I give them credit—they're damned good men to volunteer," said T/5 Stanley Quropatwa, of Philadelphia, driver, who has had two trucks blown up by German 88s. Chuckling, he added: "I tell you—I'll trade 'em. I'll go back to service of supply any day."

"I saw those three boys work," said Lieut. Carl Piehl, of Chicago, an artillery forward observer. "They did a wonderful job. And they say they like it!"

French General Killed In Jeep Accident

Paris, Nov. 22 (AP)—Gen. Joseph Brosset, long the leader of the Free French First Colonial Infantry Division which bears his name, died Monday in a jeep accident on an inspection trip near the Belfort front, the official French News Agency said today.

General Brosset, who was driving the jeep, swerved to avoid a mine. The vehicle skidded and overturned, throwing him into a rain-flooded river. His body was carried away by the swift current, the agency's account said. His aide, J. P. Aumont, also was thrown into the stream, but reached shore.

BELGIANS IN PARIS

Paris, Nov. 22 (A. P.).—Belgian Foreign Minister Paul Henri Spaak and Finance Minister Camille Gutt arrived in Paris today for talks with French officials, but there was no welcoming delegation. The telegram announcing their coming had been lost in transmission.

The Belgian Foreign Minister is believed interested in forming regional agreements in western Europe, but the French Foreign Office said that talks will concern only Franco-Belgian exchange rates. This cautious attitude was reported to be due to Russian opposition to regional pacts, which are scheduled to be discussed at Moscow by Premier Stalin and Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

De Gaulle Celebrates Birthday

Paris, Nov. 22 (AP)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle celebrated his 54th birthday today and received a present from his daughter, Elizabeth, that should give him something in common with Premier Marshal Joseph Stalin when he journeys to Moscow soon. Elizabeth de Gaulle gave her father a pipe.

France Ready To Join World Peace Group

Paris, Nov. 22 (AP)—The French Consultative Assembly voted confidence in the Government's foreign policy today after hearing a discourse by Gen. Charles de Gaulle, in which the provisional chief asserted France was ready to participate in an international organization for world peace.

In his speech de Gaulle referred to the Pacific war, declaring that France was determined to recover the colony of Indo-China.

French People Spend in Fear Of Devaluation

Also, Those With Taint of Collaboration Get Rid of Francs as Inquiry Nears

PARIS, Nov. 20 (Delayed) (AP).—Occupation, liberation and purge have combined to turn the French people, noted for their frugality, into a nation of spendthrifts.

Perhaps the peasant population still tuck franc-notes into mattress covers, but their city relatives, particularly those with shady collaboration records, are getting rid of francs as fast as possible. Even among the "pure" there is a rush to put life savings into something solid.

All over the nation Frenchmen are buying things—anything and everything—as the government establishes departmental committees to investigate recent fortunes and confiscate illicit profits, while the wise men nod their heads and predict the eventual devaluation of the franc.

Newly installed Finance Minister Rene Pleven set up committees of civil servants and resistance stalwarts on Nov. 18 to track down illicit wealth in the Paris region. There are similar committees in other departments.

Much money is being poured into high and fancy living. No end of Frenchmen are eager and willing to pay 500 francs and up for each of countless bottles of champagne, or 1,000 francs for a generous meal served in the old-time splendor of soft lights and soothing music. They are willing and eager to pay any price for coal, wood or transportation fuel. One paid 20,000 francs to have a load of wood brought into the capital from the country.

Stamp collections, winning lottery tickets and old Treasury bonds are being bought. The rarer and more expensive the stamps, the better their sale. Lottery tickets are free from taxes and taint. Tickets winning 1,000,000 francs can be sold for 1,200,000. A similar premium is attached to bonds issued in 1942 or earlier, since the holder can show a quiz committee how "patriotic" he was during the occupation.

Many are taking large endowment policies, post dated, of course. Furniture markets are enjoying a rush as the wealthy splurge on Directory period living 000 francs. Persian rugs at 80,000, 150,000 for a Louis Quinze secretary. Paintings by old masters and pieces of gold and silver also are going on the block despite the government's efforts to control the spending of amounts greater than 5,000 francs.

However, black marketeers alone are not responsible for the rush. The nation's shaky financial condition likewise is prompting Frenchmen to turn cash into other things, since the real value of the franc in no way approaches its legal value of two American cents. In real purchasing power the franc actually is worth only half a cent, and any American in Paris knows that a dollar will fetch from 250 to 300 francs.

The Germans printed so much paper money that the sensible Frenchman knows the country cannot maintain its artificial rate indefinitely. The Finance Ministry now is attempting to soak up surplus currency through a bond issue, but many believe devaluation, perhaps gradual and over a period of time, will eventually be necessary.

WODEHOUSE STILL IS HELD

British Author Accused As Collaborator By French

Paris, Nov. 22 (AP)—P. G. Wodehouse, prominent British author held by the French police in connection with accusations that he aided the Germans by his broadcasts in 1941, spent his third night in a police station tonight, although the British Embassy reported that arrangements had been completed to release him conditionally.

Mrs. Wodehouse, who was taken into custody with him at his hotel Monday night but was freed this morning, said that apparently his release was delayed only because the necessary papers had not been completed when the police office closed for the night.

Must Leave Paris When Freed

It had been announced that Wodehouse, who is 63 years old, would be permitted to stay in France but must live under surveillance more than 100 kilometers (62 miles) from Paris.

Mrs. Wodehouse said she and her husband were arrested at 1 A. M. and kept waiting for questioning until 6 P. M. Tuesday evening.

Tuesday night their first food was sent to them by the British consulate, she said. Then they were questioned by a minor clerk and given cots in the police station.

Collusion Charge Laid

The charge on which Wodehouse was taken into custody was violation of the law against "collusion with the enemy," under which non-military cases are being prosecuted.

Under French law, no formal indictment has to be returned for anyone's arrest, and persons can be held indefinitely. There does not have to be any formal disposition of the allegations when a person is released.

The British Embassy denied intervening to have him freed, but friends of Wodehouse said it had done so. It was known at least to have kept in touch with the situation. He was the first British subject detained in France's wholesale roundup of alleged collaborationists.

Wodehouse, world famous for his novels and stories of British life and for his creation of Jeeves, the perfect butler, was caught by the Germans in 1940 when the invasion swept over his villa at Le Toquet, France.

During 1941 he made five broadcasts from Berlin, for which he was violently criticized in Britain.

Admits Mistake In Broadcast

After a year's internment he and his wife were permitted to come to Paris, where they lived under Gestapo supervision.

Wodehouse subsequently said he had made "a terrible mistake" by broadcasting from Berlin and was shocked at the unfavorable reaction. He said he had not intended to aid German propaganda but had simply taken the opportunity to let his friends abroad know how he was in talks which he had hoped were of a humorous nature.

It was understood that the British Government thoroughly investigated his talks and gave him "a clean bill of health" only three weeks ago.

The arrest by French poli on the nature of an interna incident. Friends said Wodehouse and his wife were arrested late

Monday night and kept sitting in a cold corridor for sixteen hours, then removed to the police bureau.

The Allied military censorship at Supreme Headquarters stopped the news of the arrest for more than twenty-four hours, though the censors admitted they were supposed to act only on behalf of military security, and could not say how such security was involved in the Wodehouse case. They did not lift the "stop" on the story until after the author's release was arranged.

French Release Wodehouse

Paris, Nov. 22 (AP)—The English author P. G. Wodehouse, arrested on French charges that he aided the Germans by his 1941 broadcasts from Berlin, was released by the police tonight on the condition that he leave Paris and remain more than three miles away.

The creator of Jeeves, the impeccable butler, had been confined two days. His wife, arrested with him, was released earlier today.

News Stopped By Censors

Dispatch of this news abroad was stopped for a number of hours by censors at Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force. The censors are supposed to act only on the basis of military security. Officers in Paris were not able to specify in what way security was involved in the Wodehouse matter. Paris is in the demilitarized zone of the interior, under French administration and police judiciary and civil agencies.

It is understood that the matter of Wodehouse's radio speeches was investigated thoroughly by the British Government and that he was given a "clean bill of health" three weeks ago.

Friends said the elderly Wodehouses were taken into custody by three agents of the Police Judiciare in their hotel room at 10 A. M. and that they were kept sitting in a cold corridor for 16 hours.

Held In Police Bureau

Wodehouse is confined in the police bureau at Quai des Orfevres, on the right bank of the Seine in the heart of Paris.

The British Embassy said it had been duly informed of the arrest through the British Consulate, according to regular procedure, and that the consulate was prepared to give Wodehouse the usual assistance in legal representation. An Embassy spokesman said he had no immediate knowledge of any official Embassy negotiations on Wodehouse's behalf.

The French Ministry of Iinformation said it had no information on the affair.

Criticized For Talks

Wodehouse was caught by the Germans late in May, 1940, in his villa at Le Toquet, France, and spent nearly a year in prison and internment camps. In the period between his release and his return to France, he was permitted to move around in Berlin freely.

He was severely criticized both in Britain and the United States for talks he made on the German radio in 1941, but in September of this year in Paris he denied reports that he lived in luxury.

"The world completely misunderstood my purpose in connection with the broadcasts from Germany," he said at the time.

"Released In Usual Manner"

He added that he had been released by the Gestapo in the usual manner after a year's internment, as were numerous other British civilians.

He said his talks were merely his manner of letting his friends know he was well and acknowledging their packages and letters and their help in seeking his release. He said the Germans did not dictate what he was to say and his script was passed through regular German censorship channels.

He had been quoted early last September by a Paris dispatch to the London Daily Sketch as saying that his talks were "a terrible mistake."

German Communications Near Budapest Imperiled

By W. W. Hercher

NOV 23 1944

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 23 (AP)—The Russians disclosed early today that they had placed the Hatvan Budapest road and railway under fire 20 miles northeast of Budapest, at least minimizing the German use of those vital communications links to the whole enemy front stretching northeast to Czechoslovakia.

Heviz-Gyor Taken

This development followed announcement in the regular communique last night of the capture of Heviz-Gyor, just south of the road and railway, as well as a half-dozen other communities 40 and 60 miles northeast of Budapest.

The vital nature of the Soviet blow was indicated by the vigor of the enemy defense, Moscow reporting that 12 counterattacks were repulsed at Heviz-Gyor alone and that 23 German tanks, seven armored troop carriers and two self-propelled guns were captured by the Russians at that spot.

Around Gyongyos, 40 miles from Budapest, the Russians announced gains and said 13 German guns and an entire military supply train were captured; while at the other point of Soviet advance, around Eger, nine German tanks were knocked out and 400 men slain.

East Prussia Mentioned

For the first time in some days the Soviets also mentioned East Prussia and the area above Warsaw reporting the bloody repulse of a German reconnoitering outfit in East Prussia and combat by heavy patrols on both sides around the Polish town of Pultusk.

The same early-morning supplement to the regular communique said a fighting reconnaissance by Russian troops southwest of Jelgava, in Latvia, where a large German army is trapped, resulted in a break into enemy positions and capture of a German tank, 10 guns and two ammunition dumps.

The regular Soviet communique had mentioned none of these sectors, but the Germans have said a Russian annihilation drive has been in progress for four days in southwest Latvia, and broadcast at length for the second successive day accounts of a new Soviet offensive in northeast Hungary and southern Czechoslovakia.

Furious Action

The Germans, confirming furious action in one of the areas listed by the Russians, that of Gyongyos, 40 miles from Budapest, said also that there were violent Soviet assaults on Miskolc, 45 miles farther northeast, and that Russian attacks had forced them to abandon Tokaj (Tokay), famous wine center 30 miles east of Miskolc.

The German high command claimed that Gyongyos had changed hands several times and left its present possession in doubt. The Russians, who announced its capture Sunday, listed newly fallen communities in a semi-circle around it on the north, northwest and west, indicating that the city itself remained firmly in Soviet hands.

Other points listed as taken by the Russians were Egerszolat, in the Eger area 60 miles northeast of the Hungarian capital, and Heviz-Gyor, 20 miles northeast of Budapest.

Soviet Squeeze

Capture of Heviz-Gyor and the advances around Gyongyos tightened the Soviet squeeze on the strategic railway junction city of Hatvan, which lies midway between the two sectors.

Despite their silence concerning other parts of the front, the Russians hinted at the stern nature of actions in progress by announcing that 43 enemy tanks had been destroyed or knocked out Tuesday.

The Germans, who have been broadcasting for two days accounts of Soviet offensive action around Tokaj and in old Czechoslovakia, claimed all day that they had held the Russians and had even narrowed the enemy bridgehead on the Tisza river. During the night, however, a German broadcast announced that Tokaj had been abandoned.

Violent Onslaughts

As the Germans foresaw new violent onslaughts on all of their remaining positions in Hungary, Moscow news dispatches during the day said the Nazis had begun to blow up buildings in Budapest and were placing machine gun nests and mortars for the street fighting to come.

On the Baltic front the Russians kept silent, but the German radio said four Soviet Armies were engaged in southwest Latvia, where an estimated 30 German divisions are encircled, and admitted that Nazi lines were pierced in several places southeast of Liepaja.

The Germans also admitted their garrison on Saare Island, guarding the entry to Riga gulf, was greatly out numbered. The Russians announced Tuesday that the Germans there had been compressed into the narrow southern tip of the island and were being wiped out.

REDS ADVANCE ON RAIL LINES

Drive Closer to Road Hubs in Eastern Hungary.

London, Nov. 22 (A. P.).—The Red Army drive for control of northeastern Hungary's rail network has captured Verpelet, eight miles southwest of Eger and is edging closer to the strategic rail junctions of Miskolc and Hatvan, Moscow advices said today.

Still another threat to the Germans in that general sector was seen in a Berlin announcement that the Russians had opened a fresh push in Czcho-Slovakia southwest of Ungvar, seventy-five miles northeast of Miskolc. The Nazis said seven to eight Soviet division had ripped several holes in German defenses between the Ung and Latorica rivers.

A Moscow communique said German forces pocketed in southwest Latvia had made forty vain counter-attacks in a single day below Jelgava, losing thirteen tanks, but the announcement still did not confirm Berlin assertions that the Russians had begun a major offensive Sunday.

The Russians, however, did announce the virtual clearance of the Baltic island of Saare (Osel) guarding the entrance to the Gulf of Riga.

In addition to Verpelet the Red Army seized four strongly defended villages in Hungary. Russian troops have been reported in the outskirts of both Eger and Miskolc. Rains have hindered the Russian advance, Moscow said.

Six hundred Germans and Hungarians were reported killed at Verpelet. From November 14 through November 20 the Russians captured 4,220 German and Hungarian soldiers, bringing the total since November 8 to 11,920, the Russians announced.

There was no new word on the continuing siege of Budapest from points south and southeast of the capital.

Small Newspaper Notice Announces Placement Of Gen. Bulganin.

MOSCOW, Nov. 22 (AP)—A five-line item in the Russian press announced today that Marshal Klementi Y. Voroshilov "has been released from his duties as a member of the state committee of defense."

Known as a military intimate of Premier Stalin in the Russian revolution, Marshal Voroshilov was one of the "big three" in the Red army when Germany invaded Russia in 1941, along with Marshals Semeon Budyenny and Semeon Timoshenko.

He is a former defense commissar and has held many of the highest positions in the Soviet Union.

Small Item

A small item at the bottom of the last page of the government newspaper Izvestia gave nothing of the move except the bare fact of Voroshilov's release and announcement that Gen. Nikolai Bulganin had been appointed as a member of the defense board. (The defense board is an eight-man committee headed by Stalin which deals with all matters relating to the conduct of the war.)

Gen. Bulganin, recently Soviet representative to the Polish committee of national liberation, has risen to high influence during the war.

Bulganin's elevation to the rank of general was announced Sunday and his appointment as people's vice commissar of defense was announced yesterday.

Bulganin figured with Stalin in the revolution in the battle at Tsaritsin, a town on the Volga later to become world-famed as Stalingrad.

Soviet Hotels

Soviet hotels, schools and government shops are adorned with pictures of Voroshilov, one of the oldest of the old guard Bolshevists.

From the mid-twenties until the late thirties he filled a strategic role as the people's defense commissar while the Soviet Union was preparing to meet the threat of a second World War.

How much Marshal Voroshilov figured in the supreme command in recent months was not known. Another old guard leader, Marshal Timoshenko, was given official credit for coordinating Russian forces in annihilating the German army group in Bessarabia in August.

K.Y.Voroshilov Released From Defense Post

It was possible that Voroshilov, like Timoshenko, might be given a field task.

Gen. Bulganin is especially well grounded in political problems, which are intertwined with the Red army's advance in western territory. He has specialized in public affairs rather than strictly military operations.

Voroshilov Removed From Soviet Office

Moscow, Nov. 22 (AP)—Marshal Kiementi Y. Voroshilov, once the brightest star among Russian commanders, "has been released from his duties as member of the State Committee of Defense," a five-line item on the back page of Izvestia announced today.

Gen. Nikolai Bulganin, recently Soviet representative to the Polish Committee of National Liberation, succeeded Voroshilov. He was elevated to the rank of general of the army Sunday and appointed Peoples' Vice-Commissar of Defense yesterday.

Voroshilov was last mentioned as a front commander on January 18, 1943, when his forces captured Schluesselburg and partly lifted the long siege of Leningrad. (At the start of the war he was one of three marshals commanding army groups which the Germans smashed back to the approaches of Moscow and into Stalingrad. The others, Budenny and Timoshenko, also are in eclipse.)

Stalin Said To Favor 'Equal Slav States'

London, Nov. 22 (AP)—Marshal Stalin was quoted by the Moscow radio today as visualizing a post-war alliance of "equal Slav states," in which Russia and Poland must work toward "respect and understanding of one another so that the threat of war between them shall be effaced forever."

The broadcast was based on a report by Mariana Spyhalski of a recent two-hour interview with the Russian Premier. Spyhalski was described as "President of War saw."

Stalin impressed upon the Warsaw delegation, Spyhalski said, that "the new Poland must look for Allies in the west, too, in the shape of Britain, France and the U. S. A."

SOUTH GERMAN RAIL LINES HIT

600 Planes Strike From Italy; British Craft Grounded

London, Nov. 22 (AP)—More than 600 bombers from the United States 15th Air Force in Italy struck at rail lines in the Munich and Salzburg areas of southern Germany today, keeping the Allied air attack going while thick weather grounded British-based bombers.

Rail yards at Villach in southern Austria and the Ferrara rail bridge in northern Italy also were attacked by the American bombers and their escort of 300 Lightnings and Mustangs.

These blows, designed to disrupt traffic flowing to the battle zone in Italy, were made through heavy clouds and results were not announced. Allied headquarters in Rome said considerable flak and some fighter opposition was encountered.

Seven Refineries Hit

Although held at their bases today, in approximately 12 hours yesterday and last night forces totaling more than 2,500 American and RAF heavy bombers from Britain struck seven German oil refineries with more than 11,000 tons of explosives.

The first of these raids was made in daylight by 1,250 Fortresses and Liberators with the largest fighter escort in history—more than 1,100 Thunderbolts, Mustangs and Lightnings.

A communique issued today by the Eighth Air Force said photographic reconnaissance showed "severe damage" to the Ebane and Rhenania-Ossag refineries at Harburg, near Hamburg. Distillation, cracking and storage units were hit and fires started in both places.

35 Bombers Lost

It also was announced that five bombers and four fighters reported missing in Tuesday's communique had landed safely in friendly territory, leaving 35 United States bombers and 13 fighters unaccounted for. Seventy-four enemy planes were shot down and six destroyed on the ground.

More than 1,300 RAF Lancasters and Halifaxes joined in the smashes last night at targets in the Ruhr and Rhineland, dropping 7,000 tons of bombs.

A refinery at Sterkade, which has been systematically hit since D-day, and another refinery at Castrop-Rauzel, were the objectives along with the Rhine rail center of Aschaftenburg, 25 miles southeast of Frankfurt.

Shipping Attacked

During the night 15 British bombers and four German fighters were shot down.

RAF rocket and cannon-firing Beaufighters attacked enemy shipping off Holland today and fighter-bombers supported Allied ground troops in Geilenkirchen and Duren areas.

Over Dusseldorf a formation of 60 German fighters was challenged by 16 Allied fighters, ten being shot down for a loss of one Allied plane.

U. S. Bombers Raid Munich And Salzburg

London, Nov. 22 (AP)—United States 15th Air Force heavy bombers based in Italy struck today with Lightning and Mustang escort at targets in Munich and at rail yards in Salzburg, about 75 miles to the southeast.

The raid followed a night attack by upward of 1,000 RAF bombers from Britain which smashed at rail and oil targets in the German Ruhr.

Rocket-firing RAF Typhoons, diving out of low-hanging clouds, surprised enemy defenses and destroyed a German army headquarters today about 50 miles beyond Allied forward lines.

All Return To Base

Returning airmen said the headquarters building was "just a cloud of debris and dust." All Typhoons returned to base.

An estimated 7,000 tons of explosives were dropped in last night's assault, the second large-scaled Allied blow against Germany's war vital oil reserves within 12 hours.

Rail Junction Hit

The night assault followed a daylight attack by 1,250 American heavy bombers escorted by a record fleet of more than 1,100 fighters. Forty bombers and 17 fighters failed to return from the American operation, but some were believed to have landed away from their home bases.

In addition to the Ruhr oil plants, the RAF bombers hit Aschaffenburg, railway junction 25 miles southeast of Frankfurt.

British Plywood Mosquitos Armed With Six-Pound Cannon

London, Nov. 22 (AP)—Britain's speedy, twin-engined, plywood Mosquitos have been secretly armed with 6-pound cannon for attacks on German U-boats and enemy shipping, the Air Ministry disclosed tonight.

The formidable weapon, adapted similarly to 75-mm. guns used on American Mitchells in the Mediterranean and the Pacific, is slung beneath the Mosquito fuselage.

Startling Results Claimed

RAF Coastal Command said startling results had been achieved since the cannon was first used in November, 1943.

"Following the first two attacks with this weapon the German Admiralty were forced to provide an escort of surface ships and fighters to protect their U-boats leaving and on going into harbor," the command announced.

Last March a British pilot—from a range of one mile—opened fire on a Junkers-88 off the Spanish coast. The 6-pound shell blew off the port engine and the plane crashed in the sea.

Direct Hits On Vessels

Direct hits have been scored on two tankers, a destroyer, 16 trawlers, five mine sweepers and an undisclosed number of German submarines, it was announced.

One of Britain's most versatile aircraft, the Mosquito has been used to carry two-ton blockbusters to Berlin, as an escort for British heavy bombers at night and as a long-range weather reconnaissance craft for the American air force.

Says Norwegians Face 'Terrible Catastrophe'

London, Nov. 22 (AP)—The Norwegian Government tonight reported that 250,000 Norwegians, herded by the Germans into a district between Oromso and Narvik which already had a population of 180,000, faced "a terrible catastrophe" because their means of existance have been destroyed deliberately by the retreating Nazis.

Tens of thousands of retreating Germans, together with thousands of Russian prisoners of war they have dragged with them, also are penned into the area and unable to move because of a transport shortage, the Government said.

NORSE MINISTERS TO GO HOME SOON

London, Nov. 22 (A. P.).—King Haakon is considering partial transfer of the exiled Norwegian Government back to Norway soon, possibly within the next four weeks, it was learned today.

A well-informed source close to Norwegian affairs said several ministers probably would return as soon as the northern province of Finnmark had been cleared of Germans by Russian and Norwegian troops.

King Haakon and the majority of the cabinet, however, will remain in London until most if not all the country has been liberated, a Government spokesman explained.

RAF's Rocket Planes Busy

LONDON, Nov. 22 (AP)—Rocket-firing RAF Typhoons, diving out of low-hanging clouds, surprised enemy defenses today and destroyed a German Army headquarters about fifty miles beyond Allied forward lines, the British Air Ministry reported. All Typhoons returned to base.

RAF rocket and cannon-firing Beaufighters shot up German shipping off the Netherlands and fighter-bombers supported Allied ground troops in the Geilenkirchen and Duren areas.

State Dept. Considers Foreign News Service

LONDON, Nov. 22. (AP)—A Plan for establishing United States information services abroad under the State Department aegis after the war in order t ofamiliarize the world with American history and life was reported under consideration today.

Reliable sources said the plan was only in tentative form and was being discussed by officials in Washington

If established, the State Department information services would not compete with regular news agencies, but would confine their activities to distributing background material on America, it was reported.

Informants said the proposed plan was born on the theory that some sort of information organization should be established under the supervision of the State Department in order to do a better job than was carried out by the U. S. embassies before the war.

OWI officials, realizing that their organization will cease to exist when the war ends, were understood to have given considerable thought to establishing such a establishment of reference libraries peace-time service.

The proposed plan envisages the wherever there is an American embassy, visitors bureaus and a special service to provide speakers on various subjects relating to America.

London Paper Has 'Proof' Nazis Use Hitler Double

LONDON, Nov. 23 (Thursday) (AP).—"The Daily Express" said today it had "incontestable proof" that the Nazi leaders have been using a double to impersonate Adolf Hitler since the attempt to kill him on July 20.

A difference was noted in measurements of Hitler's ears in pre-war photographs and one issued by Berlin a week ago, purportedly showing Der Fuehrer at his headquarters on Sept. 25.

When these photographs were given a photo-microscope test of the type used by the American F. B. I., "The Express" said, Hitler's right ear in the latest picture measured nearly half an inch larger each way. This proved, the paper said, that the new photo was faked "because the ear stops developing at the age of twenty-one. After that there is practically no change, and a man's identity can be established as accurately by measuring his ears as by taking his fingerprints."

Winant to Read Proclamation

LONDON, Nov. 22 (AP)—Turkeys galore, with cranberry sauce and sweet potatoes, will be a link with home tomorrow for virtually every GI Joe and Jane in the European theatre of operations.

Traditional Thanksgiving Day dinners will be served in every mess in the United Kingdom and on the Continent, with generous helpings passed forward to men in the front lines.

Religious services are planned for every post. Ambassador John G. Winant is to read the Thanksgiving proclamation here in Westminster Abbey, where the Rt. Rev. Henry B. Hobson, Episcopal Bishop of Southern Ohio, will preach.

To Ship 500,000 Gifts To Prisoners In Reich

Stockholm, Nov. 22 (AP)—The Red Cross announced today that three ships would start shuttle traffic between Goteborg and Ubeck next week carrying 500,000 Christmas packages for Allied prisoners of war in Germany.

The first contingent of gifts was expected to arrive from the United States within three or four days aboard the Travancore. Later the Mangalore, bound from Philadelphia, was expected with more packages.

MACHINE-GUNNING BY NAZIS REPORTED

Berne, Nov. 22 (A. P.).—A dispatch in the Basler Arbeiter attributed to a reliable source said today that Gestapo agents and SS men had machined-gunned Cologne workers during October uprisings and killed 220 of them. Some SS men also were reported to have been killed. The dispatch said that the disturbance started when the people shouted: "We have had enough of this dog's life. Peace at any price!"

The Berlin radio issued yesterday a blanket denial of various reports of the fate of Hitler and explained away the Fuehrer's failure to speak on November 9 at the Munich anniversary celebration of the Nazi party by saying he was with his soldiers.

Allies Take Castiglione, Few Ridges

British Advance to Cosina

30. 24 — 20585

River; Poles Recapture Monte Fortino.

ROME, Nov. 22. (AP)—The sluggish battle for the Appenine foothills just southeast of Faenza lumbered forward another mile today. British and Polish troops seized the fortified village of Castiglione and a few more ridges against stubborn opposition.

The British took Castiglione and advanced beyond to the Cosina river. The Poles recaptured Monte Fortino, five miles southeast of Faenza, which they had first taken several days ago and then lost.

The tactical air force joined the battle for Faenza with one of its concentrated attacks. B-25 Mitchells splattered thousands of fragmentation bombs over the area after Mustangs, Spitfires and Kittyhawks had hammered at enemy gun positions throughout the day.

Rockets And Bombs

Thunderbolts also joined in, using both rockets and bombs. The bombing by the Mitchells was directed along highway nine close to Faenza, which is about 300 miles from Bologna.

The British captured a number of prisoners and knocked out two self-propelled guns in their push through Castiglione. The Germans, were fighting fiercely with close tank support.

There was also heavy fighting in the area of Fugna, on a secondary road leading to Faenza.

On the American Fifth Army front the Germans were considerably more aggressive as the weather improved, but one counter-attack misfired. They attacked Indian troops north of Modigliana, but the Indians returned and knocked the Germans back 1,000 yards beyond their original positions.

POLES SEIZE HILLS ON ITALIAN FRONT

HEINZEMAN

Rome, Nov. 22 (A. P.).—Polish troops have recaptured Monte Fortino, hill position five miles southeast of Faenza, from which they were driven by the Germans several days ago, and have advanced a mile beyond and seized Monte Piano, Allied Headquarters announced today.

Monte Fortino overlooks a wide stretch of flat ground leading to Faenza, a junction point on the Rimini-Bologna highway. British troops on the right took Castiglione, about two and a half-miles from the highway, and pushed ahead for a mile to the Cosino River.

The Germans made strong raids on Fifth Army positions, the Allied communique said, but all were beaten off.

More than 1,600 sorties were flown by the Mediterranean Allied Air Forces. Fourteen planes were missing.

TOLL DISPUTE DELAYS RADIO LINK WITH ITALY

HOEGAARD

ROME, Nov. 22 (AP)—A dispute over the division of tolls has held up for a week the institution of a radio-message service for civilians between Italy and the United States and Britain, and there was no indication today that a settlement was in sight.

The service was to have begun on Nov. 15. Two radio companies set up in Italy under the Allies' military authority—RCA Communications, operating between Rome and New York, and Cable and Wireless, Ltd., operating between Rome and Britain—declined to accept messages until an agreement was reached on the proportion of tolls that would go to cables and Italcable, which operated essentially as a monopoly under an Italian Government concession made before the war.

The argument over the Italian share arose after the Italian authorities had reluctantly accepted, on a temporary basis, the rates that RCA might charge under its license from the Federal Communications Commission. These rates are much lower than the pre-war rates of Italradio. The Government also agreed to the Cable and Wireless operations at rates identical with those prevailing between Rome and London before the war.

The charges for full-rate messages by RCA, which the Italians accepted on a temporary basis, are 15 cents a word from New York to any point in Italy and also from Rome to New York, and 19 cents a word from other points in Italy to New York.

NOV 23 1944

Reds Demand Pamphlet Ban

ROME, Nov. 22, (AP)—An official Russian demand for suppression of a serialized "Life of Lenin" pamphlet circulated in Rome recently was rejected by Allied headquarters in Italy, it was learned today.

Soviet authorities declared the publication was insulting to the U.S.S.R. and that the author was an enemy of Russia and a "Fascist."

Allied officials refused to interfere with circulation of the challenged publication and informed the Russians that censorship and control of the press were regarded as undesirable unless related to military security.

Allied authorities are guided by the principle that freedom of expression is one of the benefits which it is their task to assure to the Italian people," the Russians were told.

REJECT RED PROTEST

Rome, Nov. 22 (A. P.).—Allied officials rejected a Russian demand for the suppression in Italy of a pamphlet on "The Life of Lenin," it was learned today. The Russian authorities protested to Allied headquarters that the pamphlet was insulting to the U. S. S. R., that the author was an enemy of Russia and a "Fascist."

In refusing to interfere with the pamphlet's circulation Allied officials informed the Russians that censorship and control of the press were regarded as undesirable unless related to military security. They also said that freedom of expression was one benefit which it was their task to assure to the Italian people.

New Yorker Gets Legion of Merit

Rome, Nov. 22 (A. P.).—Eleven United States Naval officers and eight enlisted men were decorated or commended today for services during amphibious operations against the enemy in the Mediterranean.

Commander Ronald D. Higgins of 111 East 88th street, New York city, received the Legion of Merit for his command of a beach assault group in the invasion of southern France.

Allies in North Burma Repulse Jap Attack

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, KANDY, CEYLON, Nov. 22 (AP)—Allied troops on the Chindwin front in northwestern Burma repulsed an attack on their positions four miles northeast of Kalemyo yesterday, the Allied command announced today.

Patrolling continued north of Kalemyo, and there was a clash east of the Chindwin river in which some Japanese were killed.

The North Burma front, where the allies are driving southward to clear a land route to China, was quiet. Operations in the Bhamo area, scene of the heaviest fighting recently, were confined to patrol activity.

CHINESE SCAN JAPS' SWITCH

Surprised At Removal Of Hata As Commander

MCCA

Chungking, Nov. 22 (AP)—Removal of Field Marshal Shunroku Hata as commander in chief of the Japanese armies in China caused surprise here today as the Chinese have regarded him as a wily and dangerous opponent.

The Japanese officer's removal, which was considered significant, possibly was caused by Tokyo's desire for even quicker results than he has obtained in the China campaign, Chinese here theorized.

Succeeded By Okamura

[Hata is to be replaced by Gen. Yasuji Okamura, formerly Japanese commander in north China, the Japanese War Ministry announced today, while Hata is to become inspector general of military education.]

The Chinese high command reported again tonight that there was no change in positions along the Kwansi-Kweichow railroad, the main avenue for a Japanese invasion of Kweichow.

Fighting continued east of Hwaiyuanchen, a railroad town 50 miles west of Liuchow. North and west of the town only minor actions occurred.

Approaching Chefang

Again there was no mention of fighting in any other sector in Kwangsi province, but on the Salween front the Chinese continued to make progress and were only six miles from the Burma-road town of Chefang, 28 road miles from the Sino-Burma border and the last important objective before the town of Wanting, on the border itself.

The high command said the Chinese had completed mopping-up operations around the recaptured Burma-road town of Mangshih.

Meanwhile, a Chinese column crossed a range of mountains and occupied Japanese positions 12 miles north of Chefang, while mobile units reached points only six miles northwest of that objective.

Report Air Force Attacks

Chinese air force attacks were reported against the Japanese, and the United States 14th Air Force announced that on November 19 and 20 its Liberators bombed Hainan Island, Ford Bayard on the Liuchow peninsula, and the Kowloon docks opposite Hongkong.

The Chinese-American Wing's Warhawks attacked river traffic, roads and railways in the Yangtze bulge area and announced that a river steamer was sunk, and trucks, railway cars and sampans were hit.

Japanese planes meanwhile raided the suburbs of Chengtu Tuesday night and Chungking was under alert for three and one half hours without sighting any raiders.

Switch Viewed As Move To Unify Operations

Washington, Nov. 22 (AP)—Puzzling command shifts which the Japanese army has just carried out in China are believed here to be for the purpose of unifying operations in that country and consolidating and improving long supply lines.

The most important of these changes—announced by Tokyo—was to remove Field Marshal Shunroku Hata from his supreme command in central China just as his troops have successfully cut China in two and now threaten a drive on the free Chinese capital at Chungking.

New Job Saves Face

Hata's face was saved by his new job. He has been made Inspector General of Military Education, a high office, but one which normally has no tactical influence on the army.

In his place as central China commander, Tokyo has moved Gen. Jasuji Okamura, commander in chief of the North China garrison at Peiping since before Pearl Harbor.

Okamura is replaced, in turn, by Lieut. Gen. Sadashi Shimomura, commander of the western defense district on the Japanese mainland.

Perhaps significantly, none of the announced changes affects the power or the independence of the Japanese Kwantung army which garrisons Manchuria. This apparently still is held in reserve as a self-sufficient fighting force which can move against Russia without reference to what other Japanese forces are doing.

Tokyo Replaces China Theater Commander

San Francisco, Nov. 22 (AP)—A Japanese War Ministry announcement recorded here today by the Federal Communications Commission said Field Marshal General Shunroku Hata has been removed as commander in chief of all Japanese forces in China and has been replaced by Gen. Yasuji Okamura.

Okamura has been in command of the Japanese army in North China.

The announcement, broadcast by the Tokyo radio to Japanese areas, said General Hata would become inspector general of military education.

NOV 23 1944

Successor Named

Less than a week ago a Japanese domestic broadcast said Hata had taken over personal command of the Japanese operations in Kwangsi province as of Sunday, November 12.

The War Ministry announcement said General Okamura would be replaced as North China commander by Lieut. Gen. Sadashi Shimomura, commander of the western defense district on the Japanese mainland since last March.

A list of other army appointments announced by the War Ministry was headed by Lieut. Gen. Isamu Yokayama, named to succeed General Shimomura as commander of the western army.

On Hirohito's Strategy Board.

Hata was given the rank of field marshal last June when he was appointed to Emperor Hirohito's highest advisory body on military and naval affairs.

Japanese Balked.

Chungking, Nov. 22 (Delayed) (A. P.).—The Chinese High Command said tonight that some progress had been made in defense against the Japanese thrusting along the Kwangsi-Kweichow Railway toward Kweichow province. The enemy failed in attempts to cross the Lung River, barring the way to Hwaiyuanchen, fifty miles west of Liuchow, the Chinese said.

Field reports here said that four waves of enemy planes bombed the suburbs of Chengtu last night, but no details were given. Chungking itself had an alarm for more than three hours, but no raiders appeared.

Chengtu, central Szechwan province city, is about 160 miles northwest of Chungking.

Japs Said To Have Killed Chinese Church Head

Chungking, Nov. 22 (AP)—Word was received today that the Japanese had killed the Rev. Lin Yshu, regional director of the Church of Christ in China, after the fall of Foochow in October.

He was a member of the executive committee of the National Christian Council.

His wife also was killed and their home burned.

2 China Forces Combined

CHUNGKING, Nov. 21 (Delayed) (AP).—The operations staffs of the Y-force and the Z-force have been consolidated into the China Training and Combat Command of the China Theater, Major General Albert C. Wedemeyer's headquarters announced today. The Y-force trained the Chinese for their Salween River offensive. The two forces make up the United States Army, medical, signal and training organizations with Chinese divisions in the field. Brigadier General Frank Dorn, of San Francisco, former chief of the Y-force operations staff, heads the new command.

Japanese May Plan Finish Fight in China

Conclusion Drawn From Puzzling Command Shifts—Purposes Seem Unification of Operations, Improvement Of Supply Lines.

By James D. White
(Former Associated Press Correspondent in North China)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (AP)—The Japanese army may be really making up its mind to dig in and fight it out in China.

This is the net impression gained by observers here from the puzzling command shifts which the Imperial Army has just carried out in China.

Most Important Change

Most important of these changes—announced by Tokyo— was to jerk Field Marshal Shunroku Hata from his supreme command in central China just as his troops have successfully cut China in two and now threaten a drive on the free Chinese capital at Chungking.

Hata's face was saved by his new job. He has been made inspector general of military education, a high office, but one which normally has no tactical influence on the army.

In his place as central China commander, Tokyo has moved General Jasuji Okamura, commander-in-chief of the north China garrison at Peiping since before Pearl Harbor.

Okamura is replaced, in turn, by Lt. Gen. Sadashi Shimomura, commander of the western defense district on the Japanese mainland.

To Unify Operations

The apparent purpose of all this moving about, it is believed here, is to unify Japanese operations in China and consolidate and improve long supply lines.

As far as is known here, Okamura has not distinguished himself in the field except for routine north China campaigns against the Chinese Communists every spring and fall.

His replacing Okamura is seen here as an effort to overcome the traditional rivalry between the north and central China commands in order to strengthen the army for the coming battle of China.

Hata and Okamura both are known as "conservative" generals, but Japanese commanders in China long have been so preoccupied in building up their own zones of authority and exploitation that there has been surprisingly little coordination between them.

Perhaps significantly, none of the announced changes affects the power or the independence of the Japanese Kwantung army which garrisons Manchuria. This apparently still is held in reserve as a self-sufficient fighting force which can move against Russia without reference to what other Japanese forces are doing.

Two B-29s Lost, Third Missing In Kyushu Raid

Japanese Planes Put Up Heavy Opposition, Then Raided Superfort Base

By The Associated Press

A B-29 BASE IN WEST CHINA, Nov. 21 (Delayed).—Superfortresses in strong force today made their third attack on Omura, key aircraft center on Kyushu, southernmost of the Japanese home islands. Returning crews said the fighter opposition was the heaviest yet encountered over Japan. Numerous enemy planes pressed in closely against the big bombers, and several of the American planes returned with holes.

[Japanese airmen got close enough to bag their first two Superfortresses in the raid, the 20th Bomber Command announced at Washington. A third plane failed to return from the mission and is presumed to be lost.]

The Japanese retaliated with small raids against two forward bases of the Superfortresses and kept the weary flyers huddled in slit trenches for three hours after their 3,000-mile trip.

However, Brigadier General Russell E. Randall, commander of the 14th Air Force fighter wing, said damage to both fields was negligible. American interceptors shot down two of the dozen Japanese medium bombers taking part in the raid.

Japanese Navy planes were reported in force for the first time among the enemy fighters seeking to intercept the B-29's over Kyushu. From all indications, the foe's Army fighters have failed utterly to halt the devastation by the "Superforts" in previous raids, and his Navy fighters—always reported in other theatres as the more dangerous—have been called upon.

Field Day for B-29 Gunners

Gunners aboard the Superfortresses had a field day when suicidal Japanese fighters drove into the close-knit American formations.

Tech. Sgt. Ralph Tucker of Benton, Ark., said the "fighters were thicker than fleas in August." Sgt. Tucker is credited with shooting down one enemy plane for certain. It blew up close to a B-29 piloted by Lieut. Col. Oscar R. Schaf of Portland, Ore.

Intelligence officers said all crews noted more Japanese fighter opposition than ever before and that the Japanese Army planes kept a respectful distance while the Navy planes gave our gunners their best workout since the B-29's began operations.

Tech. Sgt. Pollaski of New Britain, Conn., a veteran of the Pearl Harbor-Hickam Field attack of Dec. 7, 1941, and also of the South Pacific, said today's Japanese fighter opposition was the toughest he had seen.

The weather over the target was bad and results were not assessed.

Two Superforts Shot Down By Jap Fighters During Raid

Washington, Nov. 22 (AP)—Gambling heavily in trying to protect a vital aircraft works, Japanese airmen got close enough to bag their first two Superfortresses in yesterday's large-scale mission to Japan.

Previously stung hard in unsuccessful attacks on the big planes, enemy fighters came up in numbers strong enough to put up what early reports indicate was the largest air battle the Superfortresses have had.

Third Presumed Lost

A 20th Bomber Command communique said a third American aircraft was missing and presumed lost.

The Japs paid with at least 20 of their number, 19 more probably destroyed and 22 others damaged in their vain attempt to beat off the attack headed for stragetic Omura on Kyushu, southernmost Japanese island.

Diverted Planes All Safe

It was the third B-29 strike within a month at the Japanese homeland, all of them at the home of huge modern aircraft assembly and service installations.

The mission, operating from China bases, was split three ways by adverse weather. Some of the planes struck at ports of Nanking, and others at military facilities at Shanghai. None of the diverted planes was lost to the enemy, the communiques said.

A check of previous communiques showed 13 Superfortresses lost or unaccounted for since June 15, but today's communique said losses on the latse raid were the first to enemy fighter interception.

The largest loss of the aerial giants through enemy action, as reported by official communiques, was four on August 20 when "relatively strong" fighter opposition was encountered in a smash at Yawata industrial targets on Kyushu. However, today's communique shows that the Japanese airmen shot down no Superfortresses before yesterday. Presumably the Yawata losses, when Americans accounted for 15 to 28 enemy fighters, were due to anti-aircraft fire.

U. S. Fighters Hit 4 Jap Troop Ships

Leyte-based Planes Hammer at Enemy Reinforcement Shipping—32d Division Maintains Pressure at Limon—No Gains Of Consequence Made.

By Murlin Spencer

GENERAL MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Thursday, Nov. 23 (AP) — American fighter planes, hammering at shipping to prevent Japanese reinforcements from reaching Leyte island, destroyed or damaged four troop-laden freighters off Ormoc, headquarters announced today.

14 Barges Sunk

Four luggers and 14 barges also were sunk or heavily damaged during the aerial assaults Tuesday, a communique today reported. The air forays are designed to forestall Japanese attempts to reinforce their bitterly resisting forces, even on a small scale.

The hard-fighting American 32d Division meanwhile maintained its pressure against the Japanese first division battling around Limon, at the northern end of the corridor leading to Ormoc, the last Japanese port on the island.

No gains of consequence were made by the mud-caked, weather-beaten Americans in the period ending Tuesday. But the artillery-supported doughboys continued to close their vise around encircled Nipponese forces.

Shell-battered Limon

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, in his communique, said shell-battered Limon was the "north anchor of the Yamashita line, where the enemy has elected to make his principal stand in defense of Ormoc corridor."

The enemy he added, "has drawn heavily on his immediate reserves to bolster this line" at Limon.

Bitter fighting has raged around Limon, a mountain village some four miles by road from Carigara Bay, since American forces headed south toward Ormoc more than two weeks ago.

As Yank infantrymen battled entrenched Japanese in the town, long-range American artillery maintained steady bombardment of Nipponese positions throughout the entire corridor.

Signs of Shipping

Signs of small shipping moving in and out of Ormoc Bay may indicate the Japanese are attempting to smuggle in reinforcements by small units under cover of darkness, instead of the costly method of risking large convoys.

In addition to the new toll of craft in the bay, American fighters strafed and destroyed more than 40 empty barges beached south of Ormoc.

Light naval craft, joining the patrol, struck against shipping along the coast south of Ormoc and near Pacijan island, which is midway between Cebu and Ormoc and within easy barge distance from both points.

Behind the Limon front, the Yanks were mopping up scattered enemy parties in the Pinamopoan and Capoocan sectors, on Carigara Bay.

Slowly but painfully, their advance all but bogged down by torrential rains, the Yanks pried loose the Nipponese hold on Limon, toughest obstacle so far encountered on the northern approaches to Ormoc valley.

24th Reinforced

The 24th infantry division, worn down by many days of fighting under the most trying conditions, was reinforced by the fresh 32nd division in the battle to clear the enemy from Limon and nearby ridges.

The Nipponese first division, said Wednesday's communique, had been committed to the "desperate effort" to retain the highly advantageous position at Limon. The rugged terrain forced the Yanks to probe out singly every enemy pillbox and resistance pocket.

Japanese efforts to swing out around the Yanks and cut their supply line running along the coast of Carigara Bay had been frustrated. French attacks on the American road block south of Limon, which prevents reinforcement of the Limon garrison, had been contained.

The supply problem, caused by almost impassable roads, was as difficult to combat as the enemy's bitter resistance. Some infantry units in forward positions among the craggy ridges had to be supplied by air.

Battle For Limon

While the battle for Limon dragged on other American forces to the south and east of Ormoc cleaned out Japanese standings in their path to that enemy-held port on Leyte's western coast.

Elements of the 96th division destroyed an isolated enemy resistance point west of Dagami, in the Leyte valley across the mountains from Ormoc.

South of Ormoc, the Seventh Division easily repulsed a minor counterattack. The location of this action was not given in Wednesday's communique. The division was last reported to have reached Tabgas, 11 miles from Ormoc.

Fresh Yank Unit In Limon Fight

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 22 (AP)—American infantrymen hacked away at Limon's defenses today in the face of an evident Japanese intention to hold its positions at almost any cost.

Fresh units of the 32d Division had relieved to some extent the pressure on the battle-weary 24th Infantry, which has carried the weight of the entire Leyte battle, and which yesterday smashed back another strong enemy attack on a road block across the Ormoc highway.

The 32d Division was subjecting Limon to steady pressure and Nipponese installations were being destroyed one by one.

Eight To Death Seen

It was the only help available as yet for the 24th.

MacArthur's communique said "the enemy has committed his First Division in a desperate effort" to hold Limon, and the belief was the Japs were prepared to sacrifice the whole division if necessary.

The Americans have occupied all strategic positions in the north except Limon itself. What appeared as an intended Japanese counter-attack to retake positions on the north coast of Leyte was frustrated by an American movement south along the highway to Limon.

Supplied By Chutes

There has been some infiltration of the American lines, but in most instances these small enemy parties have been destroyed.

These filtering tactics, together with typhoon-wrecked roads, have added to the American supply problem. On some occasions the 24th is being suppli d by parachute.

The position of the Japs defending Limon is precarious. The enemy's last hope in all Leyte against the Americans is another effort to relieve the beleaguered Japs in Limon, but was sent reeling back.

Strongpoint Smashed

In another action the 96th Division smashed an isolated Japanese strongpoint west of Dagami and on the south end of the American line the 7th Division repelled the fourth Jap counter-attack in approximately ten days.

American heavy bombers are now operating from Leyte bases, the communique disclosed. They are landing in United States held areas refueling, then roaring over Japanese positions and returning to their main bases to the southeast.

2 More Jap Warships Bombed At Borneo

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 22 (AP)—A Japanese light cruiser was blown up at the Brunei naval base and another sizable warship badly damaged in the third strike by American Liberators within four days at the big Borneo harbor.

The second ship, returning airmen said, was possibly a light cruiser.

Others Hit Earlier

In previous strikes reported by Gen. Douglas MacArthur another cruiser, a battleship and a destroyer were hit.

Other planes sweeping over Mindanao and the Visayan Islands off the Philippines probably sank a 3,000-ton merchant ship, wiped out five Nipponese planes and cratered runways of air fields.

JAP FORCE FOILED BY MONK MEYER

With the Thirty-second Division, Leyte, Philippines, Nov. 22 (A. P.).—The little bunch of Japs every one thought so brave was retreating today—not advancing.

Nipponese with light machine guns had trickled through the American front to the area east of Pinamopoan. Periodically they would vanish, then reappear much farther eastward toward American rear elements.

Then the Americans learned why. They were fleeing, not advancing. Troops commanded by Lieut.-Col. Charles R. (Monk) Meyer, star West Point football back a few years ago, had moved against them from the west. The Japs simply chose the lesser of two evils. They scampered on toward occupied American territory eastward.

Monk Meyer played left halfback on the Army football teams of 1935 and 1936. A shifty runner and an excellent passer, he was extremely popular with the members of the Corps, who would rise to their feet as one man to cheer him whenever he entered or left a game.

field buildings and installations being destroyed.

The naval aircraft ranged over most of Luzon from Laoag, in the northwest, to Lucena, 70 miles southeast of Manila.

Today's report of damage to Nipponese shipping:

One medium freighter and one small coastal freighter set afire at Subic Bay, near Olongapo, former U. S. naval base.

2 Cargo Ships

Two medium cargo ships burning and one small coastal freighter sunk near San Fernando port in Lingaven gulf.

One freighter burned and another burning in Manila bay. One oiler was in flames and one cargo ship and two other oilers hit in Manila bay.

Five luggers burning of Batangas, south of Manila, and another sunk at Laoag, about 200 miles northwest of the capital.

An enemy heavy cruiser "which appeared to be beached or in shallow water near Santa Cruz" was strafed. Santa Cruz is on a port on small Shoal Bay, 100 miles northwest of Manila. It is unlikely the cruiser would be lying there unless badly damaged in a previous attack.

The Navy fliers also destroyed a locomotive at Lucena. This is the first official report of damage inflicted on Philippine rail transport or equipment. Lucena is on the railroad running southeast from Manila to Legaspi, in southeastern Luzon.

Use Rail Line

Presumably the Japanese are using the rail line to haul supplies to Legaspi. From there they apparently are trying to ferry t... materials by barges or small vessels to besieged Leyte Island.

The ten fires were started at San Fernando air base and at Del Carmen and Clark fields. Buildings and other installations were demolished at West Lipa, Nichols, Malvar and Del Carmen airfields.

The communique also announced a new Army Liberator and Lightning fighter raid on Truk, one-time bastion of the Japanese atoll defenses. The Army planes shot down four out of five intercepting enemy fighters. This raid was the first announced against Truk since Oct. 16, the first time enemy planes had been encountered since October 13. No enemy planes had been shot down there since September 10.

Last Luzon Raid Nets 18 Jap Ships

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 22 (AP)—Carrier planes of the Third Fleet sank, burned or damaged 17 Japanese freighters, oilers and luggers and strafed and crippled a cruiser in sweeps over Luzon island in the Philippines Nov. 18, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

Previous Report

Destruction of at least 126 enemy planes and three Japanese ships in the attacks last Saturday had been previously reported. The carrier aircraft were from the flattops of Vice Adm. John S. McCain's fast carrier force.

Today's announcement was a full summary of the damage inflicted in the Saturday blow to the supply hub for the enemy's defense of the Philippines. It told of 10 fires being started among fuel dumps and air-

Lizards Are Used For Insect Control

A Seventh AAF Base in the Palaus (AP — Delayed) — Seventh Army Air Force men based on recently captured islands in the Palaus follow the example of a Baltimore sergeant in controlling insects.

He discovered a voraciously bug-hungry variety of lizard which, when not eating, makes an excellent pet. Now just about every Seventh AAF man has at least one of the 30-inch lizards in his tent or shack.

First Sergeant Edward Kerns, of Baltimore, made the discovery. "I figure that my lizard eats up at least a million bugs a day," he said. "It makes my tent a lot more liveable."

Both men, with winners and losers of seven other three rounders in last night's finals, will go to Anchorage to meet winners of a tourney there, and have a seven-day furlough.

7 EXECUTED BY BOLIVIANS

Put To Death For Part In

Abortive Oruro Revolt

La Paz, Bolivia, Nov. 22 (AP)—The Bolivian national police announced today that seven high army officers and politicians had been executed "thus far" for participation in Sunday's abortive revolt at Oruro, Bolivian tin-mining center.

Those listed as having been executed were:

Lieut. Gen. Demetrio Ramos, former chief of the army general staff.

Col. Fernando Garron.

Col. Eduaro Pace Ieri.

Ruben Terrazas, former Minister of Finance.

Carlos Salinas Aramayo, former Minister of Foreign Relations.

Humberto Loayza Beltran.

Miguel Brito.

The announcement stated that Col. Meliton Brito, described as a leader of the Oruro revolt, had committed suicide at the town of Kakena on the Chilean frontier.

One Leader Escaped

Col. Ovidio Quiroga, another leader in the rebellion, escaped, the announcement said. It added that Lieut. Col. Luis Olmos, Major Armando Pinto and Hector Diez de Medina, a politician, were under arrest at Charana, on the Chilean border.

Government announcements Sunday and Monday attributed the Oruro plot to right-wing and extreme left-wing opponents of President Gualberto Villarroel. The announcements asserted that banking and mining figures had financed the movement.

Ex-Chief of Cuban Police Back From Exile in U. S.

Benitez Is Seized, Then Permitted to Visit Ill Father

HAVANA, Nov. 22 (AP).—Manuel Benitez, former chief of the Cuban National Police, returned to Havana today from voluntary exile in New York and Miami. He was placed under military arrest but was released temporarily so that he could visit his father, Senator Benitez Gonzalez, gravely ill in Pinar Del Rio.

The temporary release was announced by Defense Minister Salvatore Menendez Villoch, who said Benitez was charged with misappropriation of $200,000 in police funds. The Defense Minister said army charges of insubordination were pending but would not be tried in view of Benitez's resignation. These charges would be pressed should Benitez win the reinstatement which he is seeking in the courts, the official said.

Benetez's return recalled his break with Fulgencio Batista, then President of Cuba, shortly after the June election, in which Ramon Grau San Martin was named Batista's successor. At that time it was reported unofficially that Benitez was opposed to Batista's insistence of a hands-off policy of the administration toward the election.

Canada And Overseas Conscription

Ottawa, Nov. 22 (AP)—Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King told a troubled Canada today that conscription for overseas duty would involve the risk of widespread national dissension and possibly weaken Canadian unity and strength "for generations to come."

Addressing a tense House of Commons at the opening of a special session called to debate the conscription issue, which has split the country and already resulted in one resignation from the Cabinet, King declared that any attempt to conscript men for overseas duty would almost inevitably result in a general election which would harm the war effort.

Speaks Over Two Hours

The Prime Minister spoke for nearly two hours and a half in defense of his compromise conscription policy, under which men are drafted for service in the Western Hemisphere only and cannot be sent overseas unless they volunteer to go. This policy was formed with an eye on the French-speaking province of Quebec, comprising nearly one third of Canada's population and traditionally opposed to conscription.

Out of approximately 1,000,000 men taken into the service since the start of the war, all but 60,000 have made themselves available for general service. This group of 60,000 home-defense men has been a subject of bitter debate almost since the start of the war.

In general, the clash has been between French-speaking and English-speaking Canada, with the Government's compromise formula leaning to Quebec's anti-conscription tradition in the interest of a maximum war effort.

King-Ralston Correspondence

In recent weeks the argument rose to a Government-shaking pitch with urgent calls for reinforcements abroad. Defense Minister J. L. Ralston resigned November 1 when the Cabinet voted against his demand that conscription for overseas service be effected and reinforcements made from the home army group.

King today read into the record seven letters exchanged between himself and Colonel Ralston, including one on November 3, in which the Prime Minister declared:

"There has not been a time since the war began that it has not been recognized that to resort to conscription for service overseas would occasion the most serious controversy that could arise in Canada.

As Danger To War Effort

"I can think of no course of action fraught with greater danger to our war effort — to say nothing of the unity and strength of Canada today and for generations to come — than a general election at this late stage of the war on the conscription issue.

"Until it is apparent that conscription for overseas service is necessary to the full support of Canada's forces overseas, and that its application would prove effective, the Government would not be justified in taking the risk of widespread national dissension."

King said in a letter November 10 that conscription for overseas service would produce the "almost inevitable consequence" of a general election.

Colonel Ralston wrote on November 6 that it seemed obvious that "some measure of difference or disunity could not be avoided," whatever reinforcements should be made from the home army.

Asked To Hear McNaughton

The Prime Minister asked the House to hear tomorrow afternoon Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Colonel Ralston's successor as Defense Minister. Not a member of the Parliament, General McNaughton heard the session from the public galleries today. After making a statement, the general, who built the Canadian army and who believes reinforcements can be met under the Government's present policy, will answer questions.

Opposition Leader Gordon Graydon, of the Progressive Conservative party, attempted to have the House pass on a motion which would have made the home army men available for overseas immediately, but the Speaker said the rules required advance notice of such a motion.

M. J. Coldwell, head of the Socialist Cooperative Commonwealth Federation, said members desired time to examine the King-Ralston correspondence, and Social Credit Leader John Blackmore took a similar view.

King Government Jeopardized

It appeared that the House would be in session several days debating the issue, with the life of the King Government possibly at stake.

Although the Government has an overwhelming majority of seats, it was not known how well King could hold his own Liberal members together.

King declared that of the effective strength of 60,000 of the home army, only 8,000 men were sufficiently trained to be usable immediately as reinforcements. The Prime Minister also took note of a frequently made charge that most of the men who had not volunteered to fight abroad were from Quebec.

He declared "to correct one widespread false impression about the draftees," that of the 60,000 "only 23,000 are from the Province of Quebec, and only 25,000 from all Canada are French-speaking." Approximately 15,000 are from Ontario and about 20,000 from the rest of Canada.

Salute With Thoughts Of Adolf Hitler

New York, Nov. 22 (AP)—The Office of War Information distributed the following today:

"A German press dispatch describing a recent oath-taking ceremony by 25,000 Volkssturm draftees in the cathedral square of Magdeburg included this statement:

"'Flags and standards were hoisted, national anthems resounded and arms were presented for a salute and in memory of Adolf Hitler (Im gedenken an Adolf Hitler.)' then it added:

"'This most important hour of our town's history was over.'"

Customary Phrase

(This translation, as given by the OWI, carries with it a suggestion that Adolf Hitler was officially pronounced dead. The phrase, however, "Im Gedenken an Adolf Hitler," is a customary one which German speakers use when der Fuehrer does not personally attend a function. A more helpful translation is "with thoughts of" or "with thoughts centered upon Adolf Hitler.")

The Berlin radio issued yesterday a blanket denial of various reports of the fate of Adolf Hitler, and explained away the Fuehrer's failure to speak November 9 at the Munich anniversary celebration of the Nazi party.

A commentator in a broadcast directed to France and recorded by the FCC, said that Germany was "confident and strong," because it "knows that victory belongs to it, for its leader lives and acts."

"But if on November 9 the Fuehrer was not at Munich it is because he was with his soldiers," the broadcast said. "In the midst of battle the leader does not desert his command post. Before the alternative of speaking and acting the Fuehrer chose action."

New York, Nov. 22 (AP)—Admiral William D. Leahy, President Roosevelt's chief of staff, was quoted today by Newsweek magazine as giving an "unqualified no" reply to the question "Has President Roosevelt ever overruled his admirals and generals on matters of strategy?"

Terming the interview Leahy's first since he became chief of staff after Pearl Harbor, the magazine said the admiral stated that the President "frequently expresses opinions but has always accepted the plans presented to him by his chiefs of staff."

Leahy, Newsweek added, has this to say on how Anglo-American forces interlock for strategy purposes:

"When problems come up to the joint chiefs, they are referred by them to working committees, drawn from the war plans division of the army and navy. Results of studies by these committees are handed back to the joint chiefs, who discuss them at length. There, differences are ironed out."

Leahy declared, Newsweek said, that "the differences have been marked at times, but in every case complete agreement has been reached."

Malay Parrots' English Won't Get By Censor

San Francisco, Nov. 22 (AP)—The red-feathered talking parrots of Morotai are taking the war in stride despite the many language changes, says an Aneta (Dutch news agency) dispatch from that Dutch New Guinea island.

From their "native" Malay tongue the birds had to switch to Japanese when the enemy invaded the island in 1942. No sooner had they become fairly fluent in the Nipponese tongue than the Americans and Dutch arrived and drove out the enemy.

Now the feathered talkies are rattling off whole phrases and sentences—says Aneta—in Dutch or English. Censorship prevented quotations, however.

CAPITAL'S LONG-DISTANCE CALLS BEING ACCEPTED ON EMERGENCY BASIS ONLY

WLB Planning To Seek White House Action—Warns U. S. Won't Tolerate Break In Vital Communications System

NOV 23 1944

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 22 (AP)—Gov. John W. Bricker tonight declared "every patriotic citizen of Ohio is stunned at the defiance by the leaders of the Ohio Federation of Telephone Workers of their Government in the midst of war.

Washington, Nov. 22 (AP)—Telephone operators here onight voted to strike and Mrs. Mary Gannon, president of he union, predicted that 2,700 operators in Washington and its vicinity would be idle. The strike vote also included a determination to throw picket lines around exchanges and tonight the operators' walkout was already under way, curtailing service. Only emergency calls were being handled.

"An emergency force to handle priority calls of top emergency" would be on hand, Mrs. Gannon said. Explaining the strike vote she added that her union, in addition to sympathizing with striking Ohio operators, had grievances of its own.

The strike here was another step in a national telephone communications crisis which began in Dayton, Ohio, and which has been given impetus by a threat of similar action by Detroit operators. In the Michigan city, a group of employes congregated outside the main building of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company, and a company spokesman asserted that "picketing has just begun."

Called "Protest Gathering"

Mrs. Frances Smith, president of the Michigan Telephone Employes' Federation, described the group of union operators as a "protest gathering," however, and said picket lines would not be established unless a threatened strike begins as now scheduled at 6 A. M. tomorrow.

Mrs. Smith said the group consisted of 20 members of the union who were asking night-shift operators, as they reported for duty, to leave their posts on schedule and "not to scab."

The War Labor Board warned that interference with vital communications "at this critical period of the war cannot be tolerated."

Support Is Sought

Rejecting a WLB demand that they order 5,000 idle Ohio workers back to work, officials of the Ohio Telephone Workers' Union appealed for "active support" from 41 affiliated unions throughout the country.

The WLB addressed its warning to the Washington Telephone Traffic Union after hearing of the Ohio union's efforts to make the tieup nation-wide.

In this nerve center of the United Nations' war effort, the telephone is one of the chief communications links with military establishments and production centers throughout the country.

Long-distance calls were accepted here tonight only on an emergency basis. Local service on automatic telephones was not affected.

Number May Be Out

A spokesman for the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company serving the Washington area said:

"A number of operators are already out, how many we don't know yet. But enough supposed to be on duty are not there to affect things some and cause a partial slowdown of services.

"We are going to maintain essential services. War calls will come first on long distance but naturally there will be some slowup of other Government calls."

The Pentagon, huge War Department building, and Navy Department offices are served by dial systems which can handle only local calls.

The trouble started in Dayton, Ohio, when workers walked out in protest against a company allowance of $18.25 weekly in living-cost bonuses to temporary operators brought in to augment the regular Dayton staff.

'All Workers Aggrieved'

President J. A. Beirne of the National Federation of Telephone Workers, in a statement issued through the union's headquarters in Baltimore tonight, said the Ohio strike was "really a grievance of all telephone workers in the Bell System," and "national in scope."

He said the federation "fully sympathizes" with the members in Ohio, although it could not order anyone to strike or refrain from doing so.

In Chicago, Edwin R. Hackett, attorney for the Illinois Telephone Traffic Union, said Mrs. Anne Benscoter, president of the organization, had notified heads of 22 locals in Illinois to take immediate action on the Ohio telephone workers' request for support of their strike.

Some Unions Hold Off

However, despite the efforts of the Ohio workers to cause widespread walkouts, it became apparent that the unions in some areas at least were averse to joining in the strike.

The Indiana Bell Traffic Employes' Union, in a statement at Indianapolis, declared itself not in sympathy with the Ohio strike.

"Neither the union nor its members," the statement declared, "are in sympathy with the action taken by the Ohio union. They consider that from the standpoint of giving public and patriotic service it behooves all workers, whether they be men and women in war plants or girls at the switchboard, to stay on their jobs and to continue, without interruption, their efforts toward winning the war."

Iowa 'Moral Support'

At Des Moines, Miss Arle Van Dyke, president of Local 1541, the traffic division of the Northwestern Union of Telephone Workers, said officers of the union had decided to give "moral support" to the striking Ohio workers, but added that she was "positive that we will not walk out."

She said she understood that would be the attitude of all union locals in the five-State area of Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, Sonth Dakota and Nebraska, served by the Northwestern Bell Telephone Company.

Meantime the War Labor Board was preparing to send the Ohio case along to the White House in an effort to settle the trouble at its root. The Ohio union leaders had flatly spurned a WLB order to halt the strike.

Presentation of the case to the White House might be a prelude to Government seizure of the Ohio companies, after which it would be illegal for anyone to foster a strike. However, there was a chance the President might resort to another appeal to the workers first.

Sees Seizure Necessary

Miss Jeannette Reedy, a vice-president of the Ohio group, told reporters that she was confident the strikers would return to work if the Government took possession of the Ohio Bell company's plants.

Miss Reedy said she understood telephone workers in Washington were preparing to walk out tonight to back up the Ohio union and said reports had been received that several other groups were meeting to consider action. She said one such group was the Long Lines Federation of Telephone Workers, whose executive board was reported meeting in New York.

In New York a spokesman for the Long Lines Department of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company announced that company officials are meeting with representatives of the Federation of Long Lines Telephone Workers to discuss "the situation arising out of the strike of employes of the Ohio Bell Telephone Company."

The conference between company and union officials followed a closed meeting of the union membership tonight.

400,000 Workers Included

Miss Reedy said action by all groups would affect the entire nation as several affiliated unions include workers in more than one State. She said employes of the Western Electric Company, which has manufacturing plants at several points, also are affiliated with the telephone workers. Altogether, she estimated the national federation has jurisdiction through affiliates over about 400,000 workers. These include not only traffic, or telephone operators, but maintenance and office workers.

J. A. Krug, War Production Board chairman, said the WPB had not been asked to intervene in the controversy, but that it was keeping "a close watch" on service conditions.

"If essential and military communications are held up we will certainly do what we can to keep them open. There is no evidence that they have been interrupted."

Case Headed For Vinson

WLB, after hearing the union refusal to call for an end to the strike, announced a unanimous decision "to direct the preparation of the necessary documents for referral of the case to the economic stabilization director," Fred M. Vinson. This procedure normally precedes actual referral to President Roosevelt.

Approximately 4,000 operators and 1,000 maintenance men in Ohio are out, union leaders estimated.

Union "Moral Victory"

Cleveland, Nov. 22 (AP)—As swift developments in Washington indicated possible seizure of Ohio Bell Telephone Company facilities by the Government, members of the Ohio Federation of Telephone Workers remained on strike today.

"If the Government takes over," said Earl Culp, editor of the Federation Bulletin, "it would mean at least a moral victory for the Federation."

Culp predicted striking unionists, whose number he estimated at 5,000, would return to work immediately in the 29 cities affected if the War Department seized the Ohio Bell system on a State-wide basis.

High Priority Calls

"If only Dayton facilities were seized, I believe Dayton members would return at once, but other Ohio locals probably would take a vote of their membership on going back to work," Culp added.

Ohio Bell reported approximately 68 per cent. of operator positions were manned by non-striking operators or supervisory employes in its southwestern area and 60 per cent. in the northeastern district.

"All high-priority long distance calls are going through promptly," said H. J. Barber, company vice-president. "These include army, navy and war-industry calls. Other toll service is delayed or rejected."

Other Developments

Other developments in the strike were:

The Michigan Telephone Employes Federation, affiliated with the independent Ohio Federation, adopted a resolution declaring willingness to walk out in sympathy but officers said action was delayed "at least 24 hours" pending developments in the Ohio tieup.

The Pittsburgh local of the American Federation of Long Lines Telephone Workers scheduled a discussion of the Ohio strike at a meeting tonight; and,

By The Associated Press

Bids from Ohio's striking telephone workers for "active support" from other telephone unions met with this initial response last night:

District of Columbia telephone operators began walking out.

Michigan Telephone Employes Federation's president said workers would leave their jobs at 6 A. M., unless "government takes over Ohio strike situation."

Indiana Bell Traffic Employes Union declared itself not in sympathy with the Ohio strike.

Head of Des Moines Union said Ohio strike would receive "moral support" but no walkout. Expressed belief this would be attitude of all union employes of Northwestern Bell serving Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Nebraska.

Strike Despite Warning

By Norman Walker

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—A national communications crisis developed tonight as Washington telephone operators walked out in sympathy with Ohio "Hello Girls" and Detroit workers prepared to follow suit.

Despite a War Labor Board warning that interference with a vital communications "at this critical period of the war cannot be tolerated," operators in the capital voted to strike and throw picket lines around exchanges. The walkout was already under way, curtailing service.

2,700 Washington Operators Out

Mrs. Mary E. Gannon, union president, said 2,700 operators in Washington and vicinity would be idle, except for an "emergency force to handle only priority calls of top emergency." She said that, in addition to sympathizing with Ohio operators, her union had grievances of its own.

The War Labor Board prepared to take the Ohio case to the White House, for possible Army intervention or a presidential appeal to the workers.

Rejecting a WLB demand that they order 5,000 idle Ohio workers back to work, officials of the Ohio Telephone Workers Union appealed for "active support" from 41 affiliated unions throughout the country.

Threat From Detroit

The Ohio walkout threatened to extend tomorrow to neighboring Michigan. Mrs. Frances Smith, president of the Michigan Telephone Employes Federation, said 2,000 operators in war-vital Detroit would leave their jobs at 6 a. m. unless "the government takes over the Ohio strike situation" meanwhile.

The WLB addressed its warning to the Washington Telephone Traffic Union after hearing of the Ohio union's efforts to make the tieup nation-wide.

Nerve Center of War Effort

In this nerve center of the United States' war effort, the telephone is one of the chief communication links with military esstablishments and production centers throughout the country.

Long distance calls were accepted here tonight only on an emergency basis. Local service on automatic telephones was not affected.

Operators leaving a union meeting here tonight said the strike would continue and picket lines would be thrown around telephone buildings tomorrow. Union leaders could not be reached immediately.

A spokesman for the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone company serving the Washington area said:

"A number of operators are already out, how many we don't know yet. But enough supposed to be on duty are not there to affect things some and cause a partial slow-down of services. Maybe they've le't to go to the union meeting, tonight, I don't know."

The WLB's message to the Washington telephone traffic union said that "any interference with telephone service in the nation's capital at this critical period of the war cannot be tolerated."

Trouble Started in Dayton

The trouble started in Dayton when workers walked out in protest against a company allowance of $18.25 weekly in living cost bonuses to temporary operators brought in to augment the regular Dayton staff.

President J. A. Beirne of the National Federation of Telephone Workers, in a statement issued through the union's headquarters in Baltimore tonight, said the Ohio strike was "really a grievance of all telephone workers in the Bell System" and "national in scope." He said the federation "full sympathizes" with the members in Ohio, although it could not order anyone to strike or refrain from doing so.

In Chicago, Edwin R. Hackett, attorney for the Illinois Telephone Traffic Union, said Mrs. Anne Benscoter, president of the organization, had notified heads of 22 locals in Illinois to take immediate action on the Ohio telephone workers request for support of their strike.

However, despite the efforts of the Ohio workers to cause widespread walkouts, it became apparent that the unions in some areas at least were averse to joining in the strilke.

The Indiana Bell traffic employes' union, in a statement at Indianapolis, declared itself not in sympathy with the Ohio strike.

"Neither the union nor its members," the statement declared, "are in sympathy with the action taken by the Ohio union. They consider that from the standpoint of giving public and patriotic service it behooves all workers, whether they be men and women in war plants or girls at the switchboard, to stay on their jobs and to continue, without interruption, their efforts toward wining the war."

At Des Moines, Miss Arle Van Dyke, president of Local 1541, the traffic division of the Northwestern Union of Telephone Workers, said officers of the union had decided to give "moral support" to the striking Ohio workers, but added that she was "positive that we will not walk out."

She said she understood that would be the attitude of all union locals in the five-state area of Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Nebraska, served by the Northwestern Bell Telephone Company.

Will Go To White House

Meantime the War Labor Board was preparing to send the Ohio case along to the White House in an effort to settle the trouble at its root. The Ohio union leaders had flatly spurned a WLB order to halt the strike.

Presentation of the case to the White House might be a prelude to government seizure of the Ohio companies, after which it would be illegal for anyone to foster a strike. However, there was a chance the President might resort to another appeal to the workers rfist.

The War Production Board and the War Department have interested themselves in the case but officials declined to say whether either was taking any active hand in behind-the-scenes negotiations.

Will Maintain Essential Services

"We are going to maintain essential services," a company spokesman said. "War calls will come first on long distance but naturally there will be some slow-up of other government calls."

The Pentagon, huge War Department building and Navy Department offices are served by dial systems which the telephone system said can handle only local calls.

The War Labor Board, in its message to Washington operators, warned that a walkout could do them no good.

Philip L. Garman, board official who signed the telegram called attention to a pending case before WLB involving a dispute between the local union and the Chesapeake and Potomac company.

"Should an interruption to service occur," he said, "the National War Labor Board under its established policy will not act on the merits of your case and the work stoppage will only succeed in delaying final decision in that case."

Leaders of the striking Ohio workers had appealed to affiliated unions throughout the country for "active support."

The Ohio officials flatly spurned a War Labor Board demand that they order 5,000 idle Ohio workers back to their jobs, and the board turned toward the White House in an effort to halt the spreading strike.

Appeal For Nation-wide Walkout

A virtual appeal for a nation-wide walkout was made by Ohio union officials in telegrams dispatched to 41 affiliated unions by Robert G. Pollock, president of the Ohio Federation of Telephone employes.

The War Labor Board prepared to dispatch the case to the White House, which might be a preliminary to government seizure of the Ohio telephone facilities.

Miss Jeannette Reedy, a vice president of the Ohio group, told reporters that she was confident the strikers would return to work if the government took possession of the Ohio Bell Company's plants.

Miss Reedy said action by all groups would affect the entire nation, as several affiliated unions include workers in more than one state. She said employes of the Western Electric Company, which has manufacturing plants at several points, also are affiliated with the telephone workers. Altogether, she estimated the national federation has jurisdiction through affiliates over about 400,000 workers. These include not only traffic, or telephone operators, but maintenance and office workers.

Not Asked To Intervene

J. A. Krug, War Production Board chairman, said the WLB had not been asked to intervene in the controversy but that it was keeping "a close watch" on service conditions.

"If essential and military communications are held up we will certainly do what we can to keep them open. There is no evidence that they have been interrupted."

WLB, after hearing the union refusal to call for an end to the strike, announced a unanimous decision "to direct the preparation of the necessary documents for referral of the case to the economic stabilization director," Fred M. Vinson. This procedure normally precedes actual referral to President Roosevelt.

The strike spread through Ohio after a group of Dayton operators walked out six days ago in protest against the company's allowance of $18.25 weekly in living-cost bonuses to temporary operators brought in to augment the regular Dayton staff. Regular operators get $21 weekly.

Approximately 4,000 operators and 1,000 maintenance men in Ohio are out, union leaders estimated, and a sympathy walkout loomed in Michigan.

State Federations Autonomous

J. J. Moran, New York, vice president of the National Federation of Telephone Workers independent union, told WLB his organization's component state federations are "autonomous" and the national group's executive board would withhold action until requested by the Ohio federation to take a stand.

Nathan P. Feinsinger, WLB hearing chairman, told the union leaders the case was the only one he could recall where "union officers have refused to make an affirmative recommendation to their workers to end a war time strike."

Pollock's position was that he was unable to see how a union leader could "conscientiously ask a girl making $21 a week to work alongside a girl making $39.25 a week, both doing the same work."

Charges Liquor Given Girls

WLB said it would investigate allegations made by Pollock that company men had given liquor to striking girl operators and "attempted to influence them to return to their jobs in an intoxicated condition."

In Cleveland, H. J. Barber, Ohio Bell vice president, commented that "no Ohio Bell man anywhere ever gave any girl liquor to get her back to the job. That would violate every creed and custom of Bell system employes. There's not an atom of truth in Pollock's assertion."

The WLB had set 10 a. m. this morning as a deadline for ending the strike but continued hearings after the union decided to go on with the walkout.

Pollock's assertion concerning liquor was made at a mornnig hearing. He also said the company had moved beds into Ohio telephone offices and supplies of all kinds, "everything from cold cream to toothbrushes," and apparently had "settled down to a fight to the finish with the union."

After ignoring the WLB deadline, union officials suggested that the company should submit a conciliatory proposal of some nature. The WLB said it could entertain no such proposal while the strike was in progress.

Feinsinger and other WLB hearing members repeatedly stressed the point that under WLB policy nothing could be done to settle the dispute so long as the strike continued.

"This is no longer a private fight between yourselves and the company or yourselves and the WLB," Feinsinger said.

"You have taken on the government of the United States. No union has done this yet and succeeded. This is the effect of your decision."

Communication Crisis Now Threatens Nation

Yanks To Get Turkey With Today's Meal

Services Spend Months To Plan Menus For Holiday.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—(AP)—America's fighting man at home and abroad will have his turkey this Thanksgiving Day.

It's a project on which the services have spent months and today they pointed proudly to holiday menus that to a civilian are only in the postwar planning stage.

For the man in the trenches, fresh killed turkey is a must, proclaimed the war department. Maybe he will eat it tomorrow; if not he will get it when he comes out for a rest.

Cooked Dinners

"They are carrying cooked dinners very close to the fighting line," the army assured.

The turkey supply for all troops is ample and "nobody gets canned turkey," the army added.

For American prisoners in Germany, where it would be canned turkey or none a supply was processed in 12 ounce tins some time ago. Word also was received indirectly that a shipload of canned turkey intended for American prisoners of the Japanese made port.

Aship and ashore the navy is serving holiday dinners from the 12,000,000 pounds of "young roast tom turkey" set aside to supply its Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's feasts. For each man in the continental United States a pound of turkey has been allotted, with an extra half pound each provided for the boys at sea and abroad.

Navy's Menu

The navy's model menu, subject to local variations:

Chilled tomato juice, sweet mixed pickles, stuffed celery, ripe olives, roast young tom turkey, giblet gravy, cranberry sauce, sage dressing, mashed potatoes, asparagus with hollandaise sauce, fruit salad, Parker House rolls, butter, hot mince pie, ice cream, assorted candy and nuts and coffee.

The army's bill of fare:

Grapefruit juice, roast turkey with giblet sauce, dressing, mashed potatoes, string beans, corn, cranberry sauce, celery, olives, pickles, hot rolls, butter, pumpkin pie, apples, tangerines, candy, nuts and coffee.

Americans at Home, Abroad Give Thanks

Home Front, Battle Areas to Have Traditional Festivities—Religious Services Planned—Most States Celebrate Today.

By the Associated Press

The nation, with the exception of seven states, solemnly observed its third wartime Thanksgiving today with thoughts of absent family members in the armed forces who, in turn, held their own celebrations at the fighting fronts and dreamed of home.

Turkey Lacking

Cheered by encouraging reports from the battlefields, the home-front prepared for traditional dinners, but in many cases the usual turkey was lacking.

The gobblers had gone to war. Turkeys galore, with cranberry sauce and sweet potatoes, were a link with loved ones for every GI Joe and Jane in the European theatre of operations.

Thanksgiving Day dinners were ready for every mess in the United Kingdom and on the continent, with generous helpings passed forward to men in the lines.

Religious services were scheduled for every post. In London Ambassador John G. Winant read the Thanksgiving proclamation in Westminster Abbey.

Services Held

Catholic religious services were held in famed Notre Dame Cathedral, Paris, and in Reims Cathedral, while chaplains with combat units in the front or in small towns held non-sectarian services.

Protestant and Jewish services in Paris were held at the American Episcopal church and the Rotschild Synagogue, respectively.

American soldiers and civilians of all faiths joined in St. Paul's American church in Rome to celebrate the holiday. Ambassador Alexander C. Kirk read President Roosevelt's Thanksgiving proclamatoin.

For the folks back home, the weather bureau forecast fair weather for a major portion of the nation.

In Plymouth, Mass., scene of the Pilgrims' first Thanksgiving, a festive spirit prevailed although the names of 1,620 men and women of the historic community are listed on the honor roll, a number coinciding strangely with the year of the Pilgrims' arrival.

Wounded Invited

Patients at the Army's large Cushing Hospital at Framingham, Mass., cheerfully invited members of their immediate families to the hospital for a turkey dinner. Most of the patients were wounded overseas.

Military Police guarding German prisoners at Dunkirk, N. Y., were set for a Thanksgiving dinner prepared by a prisoner-chef but declined a German version of pumpkin pie.

"Whoever heard of a European baking a pumpkin pie?" they asked.

Members of the American Legion Auxiliary came to the rescue and baked pies for the MP's.

In San Diego, Calif., even zoo animals licked their chops. Special meals were on the zoo's holiday menu, rice pudding with raisins and prunes for apes and garden-fresh carrots saved for other animals and birds.

Forty States and the District of Columbia fixed Nov. 23 for the holiday in line with federal statute. But Florida, Idaho, Nebraska, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia planned to observe Nov. 30.

By proclamation of its governor today was Tranksgiving in Georgia, but the state also planned to observe Nov. 30 in accordance with a General Assembly proclamation. Arkansas set next Thursday as Thanksgiving, but two cities, Fort Smith and Fayetteville, decided their holiday would be today.

U. S. Assistance In Pole-Russ Rift Sought

Washington, Nov. 22 (AP)—Time is running against the Polish Government now in its argument with Russia over who should rule Poland. Prospects for an all-around friendly settlement are dim.

Some officials expect that, in hope of brightening them up a bit, President Roosevelt soon may make a new statement on American policy toward the dispute.

Both the Poles and British recently have sought to get this Government actively involved in helping reach settlement.

There is no prospect that the President would take any such step. If he does make a statement, it almost certainly will be to reaffirm established policy that at this stage of the war the Poles and Russians will have to work out their own settlement.

Mr. Roosevelt was asked at his news conference yesterday whether he had received any demand from Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk of the Polish Government at London for intervention in the dispute. He said demands have been coming in for three years and there was nothing new.

What Poland actually has asked is a clarification of this country's position on several specific points. Indications are that these are the main questions:

1. Will the United States guarantee along with Russia and Britain that, if the Polish Government agrees to Russian acquisition of eastern territories, Poland will be compensated with western territories to be carved out of Germany?

2. Would the United States Government consider that an agreement made now between the exiled Government and the Russian Government was freely arrived at?

Casualties Among Nisei Reported 263 By WRA

Washington, Nov. 22 (AP)—A total of 263 casualties among Japanese-American servicemen has been reported to next of kin in relocation camps, the War Relocation Authority announced today.

Of these, 69 were killed, 187 wounded and 6 missing.

In recent heavy fighting on the Western front, 20 Nisei were killed in action and 68 were wounded.

The WRA director said the actual total of battle losses among Japanese-Americans were larger than the casualties notices would indicate, since about one third of the original evacuees have left the relocation camps, and several thousand Japanese-descended citizens never have been in a center.

NAVY CASUALTIES

Washington, Nov. 22 (A. P.).—The Navy Department announced today the names of 224 casualties in the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard which makes a total of 74,411 casualties reported by the Navy since Pearl Harbor. Of this total 29,186 are reported dead, 31,414 wounded, 9,323 missing and 4,486 prisoners of war. Included in today's list are the following with their next of kin:

occurred Sept. 17.

General Saunders, forty-one, former West Point athlete, was flown to Walter Reed Hospital from India in fifty-seven hours after the accident. The Air Force transport plane in which he made the trip, attended by a medical officer and two flight nurses, made only five stops en route.

The general, a native of Stratford, S. D., and the famous "Blondie" Saunders, of West Point football days in the '20's, crashed in a twin-engine bomber after midnight two miles out from an Indian base. He was traveling alone on an administrative mission at the time. He lay undiscovered until 8:30 a. m. with compound fractures of the legs and arm and severe head cuts. The War Department said infections set in while he lay unattended and his condition became critical. The flight here was a medical necessity and it was made as soon as his health permitted.

General Saunders was acting commander of the 20th Bomber Command at the time of the accident.

First Whole Blood Sent By Ship Is a Success

Survives Ocean Trip Motion, Saves Lives on Guam

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (AP).—The first whole blood bank to be transported by ship to a fighting front was instrumental in saving lives at Guam, the Navy reported today. The blood was donated by 100 marines selected from 300 volunteers at an advance base in the Marshall Islands.

Success of the experiment, the report said, depended on the ability of living blood to survive disturbances created by engine vibration and the ship's motions. All hands co-operated to see that the ship was handled with care.

"The success of their efforts can now be seen," the report said. "American fighting men who came aboard seriously wounded took the road to recovery. At Guam there was ample whole blood for required transfusions. No wounded fighting man went without whole blood if it was required."

The experiment was decided upon by Captain John T. Bennett, Hattiesburg, Miss., the ship's medical officer.

Gen. Saunders Remains In Serious Condition

Leader of First B-29 Raid on Japan Hurt in India Crash

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (AP).—Brigadier General Laverne G. Saunders, who led the first B-29 raid on Japan 15 and later was injured in a plane crash in India, remains in a serious condition in Walter Reed Hospital here. The Army disclosed yesterday that he suffered fractures of both legs and the right arm in the crash, which

Action On 2 Major Treaties Postponed

Washington, Nov. 22 (AP)—Action on two major treaties—the international oil agreement and the United States-Mexican water rights undertaking—will be delayed until the convening of the new Congress January 3.

The decision, reached by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today, resulted from a Senate rule that the consideration of pending treaties must begin anew with each new Congress.

"It was the view of the committee that the hearings on these two matters could not be concluded in time for action this session," Chairman Connally (D., Texas) said.

Awards Made To Ten Officers

Washington, Nov. 22 (AP)—Award of the Legion of Merit to ten flag and general officers of the navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard was announced today by the navy.

Commodore Thomas Selby Combs, of Lamar, Mo., for service as commander of naval aircraft in the Southwest Pacific area and with the Seventh Fleet, with additional duties as commander of the fleet air wing from October, 1943, to July, 1944.

Asks House Get Latest War Data

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (AP)—Representative Rogers, Republican, of Massachusetts, suggested to the House today that it invite Gen. George C. Marshall to present an up-to-date picture of the war situation. Such a presentation, she said, would allow the public to know the facts and might result in a greater effort on the home front.

Phone Rates to Bermuda Cut

sion announced today that tariffs filed by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company represent sizable reductions affecting all points in the United States. Examples listed follow: A three-minute weekday or Sunday call from New York or Washington now costing $15 will cost $9; a similar call from Miami or Chicago now costing $17.25 will cost $10.50, and a call from San Francisco now costing $19.50 will cost $12.

War Prisoners in U. S. Busy on Private Contracts

Their Employment Has Earned 16 Millions for Treasury

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (AP).—For the first time since the war began, more war prisoners worked on private contract last month than on Army jobs. They earned $4,000,000 for the United States Treasury, the Army said today.

The money represents payment by contractors for efforts of more than 74,000 prisoners at full time work and brings the total they have produced for the Treasury to $16,000,000. Seventy per cent of the private work in October was in agriculture.

The nation held 334,618 prisoners as of Nov. 1, including 281,344 Germans. Prisoners are made available for contract work only in man-power shortage areas, the Provost Marshal General's office said. The contractors pay prevailing wage rates, the money going to the Treasury. Working prisoners are paid 80 cents a day in canteen scrip in addition to their regular allowance.

The Army used 69,899 prisoners full time in October.

Japs in Relocation Camps Get Notice of Casualties

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. (AP)—A total of 263 casualties among Japanese-American service men has been reported to next of kin in relocation camps, the War Relocation Authority announced today.

Of these 69 were killed, 187 wounded and six are missing.

NAVY TRAINING PLAN OUTLINED

Reserve Courses To Be Set Up In Fifty Colleges

Washington, Nov. 22 (AP)—A program for permanent naval reserve officer training courses in 50 colleges besides Annapolis was outlined today before a Congressional committee.

In connection with the plan, the navy has asked for removal of all limits on the number of trainees in the Permanent Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps. The idea, however, ran into considerable opposition at today's hearing before the Senate Naval Affairs Committee.

Senator Geary (D., R. I.) called the bill "very unsound," and even Chairman Walsh (D., Mass.), who introduced it at the navy's request, said it was doubtful that Congress would approve the proposal without limitation as to number of trainees.

Present Limit Inadequate

The navy said the present limit of 7,200 N. R. O. T. C. students was inadequate to meet both present and post-war needs, and that for the remainder of the war especially the program would be so variable that no limitation should be imposed.

Capt. Arthur S. Adams testified that the V-12 war emergency training program in 131 colleges and universities now is being terminated gradually. This program is to be incorporated in the expanded N. R. O. T. C. program, which would then be carried on permanently in some 50 colleges besides the Naval Academy.

Adams said that by next July 1 the navy plans to have about 23,700 officer trainees in the permanent reserve program if Congress removes the limit. This would include trainees transferred from the V-12 courses.

But Senator Geary declared the naval committees of Congress should keep a check on the training program in future years, and said that without a limitation as to number of trainees he would decline to support the bill.

Compton Asks Return Of Connecticut Men 'Marooned in S. Pacific'

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. (AP)—Rep. Compton (R-Conn) pleaded today for the return to the United States of a small group of Connecticut soldiers "marooned in the South Pacific area under constant attack for nearly three years without relief."

The soldiers, members of Connecticut's old 208th anti-aircraft battery, went overseas Feb. 17, 1942, and "are victims, not beneficiaries of the so-called rotation system," Compton told the House.

He said that on Oct. 23 he asked Secretary of War Stimson to intercede personally to have the men returned to this country and that Stimson referred to request to the South Pacific commander with authorization for the commander to take whatever action he deemed appropriate.

"I have investigated carefully and I have talked with officers lately returned from the same area in which these men are marooned," Compton said, "and neither they nor I can understand the reluctance of the South Pacific commander to reward these valiant heroes of the entire South Pacific campaign with a trip home."

Ban on 'Secret' Selling Of War Surplus Is Asked

Step to Curb Profiteering May Follow Battery Offer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (AP).—A ban against "secret sales" of surplus war goods was suggested by some Senators tonight as a means of keeping speculators from making fancy profits on Army supplies bought at low prices. They expressed their views following disclosure of the cancellation—to thwart suspected speculation—of plans to sell 22,000,000 dry cell batteries without prior publicity.

Ernest L. Olrich, in charge of surplus property disposal by the Treasury Procurement Division, told the Senate War Investigating Committee that the Army requested as little publicity as possible on the sale. The Army feared, Mr. Olrich explained, that the public might get the impression that a temporary oversupply of small flashlight type batteries indicated surpluses in other types.

Accordingly, he said, the Treasury notified a group of wholesalers and jobbers by letter on Nov. 4 of plans to sell the batteries at 4 cents each, pointing out that such batteries deteriorate rapidly.

A couple of days later, he related, he was notified by an official of the Gamble Stores at Minneapolis that an unidentified person had offered him a million batteries at 5 cents each.

"We decided there was something unsatisfactory and called the whole sale off on Nov. 9," Mr. Olrich testified. Army Signal Corps officials testified the batteries cost the government an average of 7.1 cents each and that there were offers for 60,000,000 at the Treasury's price of 4 cents.

Mr. Olrich said plans for a new sale are being made and agreed with the Senators that the government should be able to avoid a loss.

To Cut Non-War Agency Funds, Cannon Says

Washington, Nov. 22 (AP)—The "most drastic money cuts" in Congressional history for non-war agencies were predicted today by Chairman Cannon (D., Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee.

Preparing for consideration of the regular appropriation bills for the coming fiscal year, Cannon said he believes "the time has come when we must cut right down through the bone and put a stop to unnecessary spending."

He foresaw no immediate sharp curtailment in war spending, but predicted total Congressional appropriations for the 1945-46 fiscal year would be below the $67,000,000,000 provided for the current 12 months.

Sees Lower Totals

"So long as we are in a war, we must be prepared to spend large sums of money to finance it," Cannon said.

He added that the fact that most capital outlays already have been made for the War and Navy departments should result in lower totals for those two agencies next year.

"It now is largely a matter of maintaining what we already have provided," he said.

"The non-war items must be severely curtailed," he continued. "Never before have there been cuts as drastic as we are going to have to make next year."

Term Explained

By "non-war items," Cannon explained, he meant "all those items which cannot be proved to be directly connected with the prosecution of the war." While in past years many civilian agencies have contended that they were doing work directly connected with the war, "they are going to have to furnish convincing proof hereafter," he warned.

The committee, now winding up its work with an overall supplemental supply measure, will begin hearings shortly on the big money bills for the new fiscal year.

Figures Given On Bond Sale

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. (AP)—Individuals have bought $482,000,000 worth of War Bonds in the Sixth War Loan drive, the treasury announced tonight.

The national quota for individuals is $5,000,000,000.

Most of the individual sales to date represent the familiar series E-Bonds, favorite of small investors.

The total also includes fragmentary reports from a few large cities of sales of various other securities to individual purchasers.

No figures for corporations will be announced before December 1, which is the date of issue of four types of securities especially designed for the corporate type of investor.

Missouri Valley Authority Issue Is Up in Senate

Langer and Murray Slip Controversial Proposal Into Flood-Control Bill

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (AP).—The controversial issue of the Missouri Valley Authority was tossed into the Senate's lap today as it struggled with post-war flood-control legislation.

The development further jeopardized the proposed billion-dollar flood-control authorization already beset by controversies unreconciled in two full days of discussion.

While argumentative Senators tried to settle disputed issues over hydro-electric power, irrigation and states' rights, Senators William Langer, Republican, of North Dakota, and Ames E. Murray, Democrat, of Montana, unobtrusively slipped in the M. V. A. amendment despite a general belief the question would be kept dormant until next year.

Their proposal to create an authority to foster a unified program of flood control, navigation, hydro-electric power and related works in the Missouri River basin coincides with President Roosevelt's idea to set up seven agencies similar to the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The legislators still faced the prospect of having the St. Lawrence Seaway proposal attached to the bill by Senator George D. Aiken, Republican, of Vermont. He said he might present the proposal Friday, although he may hold it for the $500,000,000 rivers and harbors bill which comes up later.

Some legislators said both bills might be shelved in the face of growing disagreements. The rivers and harbors bill embraces most of the issues in the flood-control bill plus a number of controversial projects.

Verbal clashes over the sale of power developed at multiple-purpose dams engaged the Senators as they recessed for Thanksgiving. Senator Josiah D. Bailey, Democrat, of North Carolina, wanted to require the Interior Department to sell power at the point of origin rather than build transmission lines to wholesalers. Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, Democrat, of Kentucky, declared that would reverse a policy to provide cheap power. He read a letter from Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, objecting strenuously to the Bailey proposal on the ground that it would deprive the consumers of low-cost electricity by "foreclosing" public and non-profit organizations from obtaining power developed at projects.

Senator Bailey declared that Federally financed transmission lines would "inevitably strike down all the power companies and lead to government control."

Earlier, the Senate approved Senator Barkley's amendment modifying a provision establishing a "definite policy of making use of existing Federal agences for the construction, operation and maintenance of public improvements in connection with navigation, flood control and allied activities." The amendment restricts the language to projects in this bill. Senator Barkley had contended that the original provision would hinder establishment of agencies such as T. V. A. and the proposed M. V. A.

U. S. CALLED OFF PLAN FOR SALE OF BATTERIES

Had Offered 22,000,000 but Got Bids From Dealers for 60,000,000.

WOULD HAVE LOST 3C. ON EACH

Making New Arrangement—Many Types Are Said Still to Be Critically Short.

Washington, Nov. 22 (A.P.)—Treasury witnesses disclosed today the cancellation—in order to thwart suspected speculators—of plans to seell quietly 22,000,000 dry cell batteries.

Ernest L. Olrich, in charge of surplus property disposal in the Treasury's procurement division, and Homer Hilton, director of the general commodities division, told the story to the Senate War Investigating Committee. They said plans for a new sale are being made.

The Army had requested a minimum of publicity, they explained, for fear that word of a large temporary surplus of the small flashlight type might lead to a false impression that surpluses exist in other battery types. Signal Corps witnesses testified that shortages in most types are critical and that it is essential for plant workers to keep their jobs.

Mr. Olrich said that the procurement division had fixed a price of 4 cents each on the batteries for which the Army had paid an average of 7.1 cents.

Bids for Sixty Million.

They were offered to wholesalers and jobbers by letters mailed November 4, and bids subsequently were received for as many as 60,000,000.

After the letters went out, Mr. Olrich testified, he met a friend in Minneapolis who told him he had been offered a million batteries at 5 cents each.

"The man who had offered the million batteries at 5 cents each was not even on the Treasury list," he said. "We decided there was something unsatisfactory, so we called the whole thing off on November 9."

Reporting that plans for a new sale are being made, Mr. Olrich said that with the public hungry for batteries he saw no need for the Government to take a loss of 3.1 cents on each battery.

"We should have gone to the OPA in the first place and had them fix a price," he told the committee. He added that while the Treasury had suggested a retail price of 10 cents for the batteries, OPA sent out telegrams fixing the price at 8 cents without consultation with the Treasury.

Wanted Workers in Plants.

Lieut.-Col. M. V. O'Shea, assistant director of the Signal Corps production division, attributed the small battery surplus to a sharp cutback in war theater requirements. He said that because batteries deteriorate in storage the Army wanted to be able to keep the workers in the plants to assure a fresh supply for the Army at all times.

Letter Writer Urges Painting Capitol Dome Red, White and Blue

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (AP)—The President's mail brought a suggestion today that the capitol dome be painted red, white and blue.

"It would make every American feel proud," wrote Oscar O'Neill, of Washington, D. C.

White House clerks decided to let Harold Ickes, the interior secretary and chief of the paint department, handle this one.

In turn, Ickes passed it on to David Lynn, the capitol architect who blinked once or twice and dictated:

"We appreciate your interest but it has long been the custom to paint the sandstone and the cast iron in colors to harmonize with the marble-faced wings.

"The traditional appearance is very satisfactory."

The dome was given a new coat of white recently.

House Passes Bill On Crop Insurance

Congressmen Reverse Previous Stand to Redeem Campaign Pledges of Both Parties —Protection Provided for Wheat, Cotton and Flax.

NOV 23 1944

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (AP)—Voting overwhelmingly to revive a farm program it once killed, the House today passed a federal crop insurance measure called for by both major party platforms this year.

254-16 Vote

The vote was 254 to 16, sending to the Senate the bill which provides for immediate insurance on wheat, cotton and flax crops and eventual protection for almost everything else a farmer plants.

Nobody knows how much the program will cost but, by a last-minute amendment, the cost of the administration cannot exceed 25 per cent of the amount collected in premiums.

The House killed a limited crop insurance program on June 23, 1943, after five years experimentation because opponents argued it was too expensive. The vote then was 208 to 160 against it.

Sentiment Changes

However, sentiment changed later, and today many members who voted to kill the program a year ago changed sides.

In two days of House consideration the bill never was in serious jeopardy although several attempts were made to kill it. Most opposition came from two sources: those who viewed federal insurance as an invasion of states rights, and those who contend the program doesn't justify its cost.

But the House was determined to set it up. With amendment after amendment members broadened the plan until, in its final form the measure will protect farmers against the loss of almost any kind of crop under almost any circumstances.

The insurance will be paid on crop losses due to drought, flood, hail, wind, frost, Winter-kill, lightnigh, hurricane, tornado, insect infestation, plant disease, fire, snow and wildlife.

The insurance plan on wheat, cotton and flax could be set up immediately in any county where 50 farmers make wirtten application It will be established on a limited, eperimental basis on others crops, later being expanded to full coverage.

Ten Republicans and six Democrats voted against the bill. They were:

Buffett (R-Neb.), Compton (R-Conn.), Disney (D-Okla.), Hoffman (R-Mich.), Jones (R-Ohio), Kean (R-N.J.), Kleberg (D-Tex.), McGehee (D-Miss.), May (D-Ky), Miller (R-Conn.), Miller (R-Mo.), Sheppard (D-Calif.), Smith (R-Ohio), Sundstrom (R-N.J.), Taber (R-N.Y.), and Tarver (D-Ga.).

Army Develops 'A Good Robot' —Just in Case!

Reveals 60-Day Rush to Reproduce V-1 Bombs for U. S. 'if Needed'

WRIGHT FIELD, Ohio, Nov. 22 (AP).—The Army Air Forces disclosed today they had developed a "good" robot bomb that could be used "if we need it" and said the weapon had been in test flight since Oct. 11.

It is a version of the German V-1 which was loosed on England last summer, the Air Technical Service Command said in relating how it raced to reproduce the Nazi terror weapon in sixty days, and then sent it skimming jet-propelled through the skies a month later.

Furthermore, its launching ramp is better than the Germans', the A. T. S. C. said. It can be built in four days, whereas the Nazis required two weeks. The A. T. S. C. did not disclose the location of its proving grounds.

Major General Bennet E. Meyers, deputy A. T. S. C. director, asserted that reconstruction of the bomb was proof that engineers left "no stone unturned."

"We may never need the robot bomb," he declared, "for the Army Air Forces do not go in for indiscriminate bombing attacks. But if we do need it, we've got a good one."

A month ago General Meyers reported that models of the "buzz" bombs had been constructed, but did not disclose that they had been test-flown. Today's account of the robots answered many of the questions which heretofore had been shrouded in military secrecy.

The story of feverish days and nights in reconstruction of the weapon was woven through with tribute to men and industrial firms which produced the counterpart. Morton Alperin, of Wichita, Kan., a civilian specialist, worked twenty hours a day running wind tunnel tests and shrank from 140 to 120 pounds.

The morning of July 4, General Meyers called in a group of avition's ablest experts and said the air forces wanted an exact copy of the V-1, wanted a lot of them, and fast.

Parts Flown from England

The men went to work and divided up the task among various war plants. On July 9, Lieutenant Tom Wigglesworth flew in from England with sections of unexploded but badly-battered bombs. The experts settled down to their assignment, despite the fact the V-1 is a complicated weapon at best and that, with its jet engine, air-driven gyros and control, it would have been a difficult job to copy even in good condition.

The battered pieces were hidden in a building here and fifteen drawing boards set up. Engineers and draftsmen arrived and went to work on design and analysis.

Meanwhile, the recovered junk went through the laboratory and technicians found it to be made of simple materials, low carbon steel, similar to automobile fenders, and a small amount of alumium in the radiator. The welding was standard, workmanship of the highest quality.

It took just ten days to put the first model in the huge wind tunnel, and a deadline of Oct. 1 was set for the first flight. The wind tunnel ran 20 hours a day for nearly a week so that aerodynamic experts could have their answers.

Exactly seventeen days after the fragments had arrived from England, an engine was running. It had some German parts and some American, and it worked. An alley was sandbagged off in the A. T. S. C.'s power plant laboratory and a huge sheet of steel set up behind the motor to catch the blast.

Air Blast Starts Motor

But getting the motor started was a tough one. Experts finally figured that since the bomb was known to stall at 175 miles an hour and flew at 300, a terrific blast of air against the radiator was necessary to get the engine going. So a force of 200 pounds per square inch was blown into the radiator and the engine worked. Over in the fuels section, meanwhile, engineers had learned that the engine would run on ordinary low-cost gasoline.

While this was being achieved, the control system was worked out, an intricate device composed of air-driven gyros, pre-set altimeter, a precision compass and an air log. These were intended to set the launched bomb at correct altitude, head it in the proper direction and hold it on course. The air log was to measure the air miles and, at a pre-set distance, arm the warhead, cut lines leading to the engine, point the bomb down, lock the elevators and drop two unequal spoilers from the elevators to give the bomb a spiral descent. A spoiler is an object, fastened outside, which distorts the airflow and produces a desired effect.

On Oct. 11, just over a week behind schedule, the first bomb was launched.

BRETTON PACT CRITICIZED

National Grange Prefers World Bank to International Fund

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Nov. 22 (AP)—The National Grange, criticizing the Bretton Woods Conference, today recommended the absorption of the proposed international monetary fund and its functions by the proposed World Bank for Reconstruction.

Agreement was reached last summer at the conference of forty-four nations to submit their respective countries' plans for the establishment of the monetary fund and world bank.

Modification of plans for the bank was asked by the grange, which adopted a recommendation of its legislative committee at its annual convention here. The bank, the grange said, should give the chief lenders greater control and should be safeguarded to insure productive use of any loans.

The grange also protested against any contemplated program of loans by the Federal Government on a large scale over and above those presently proposed by the bank and urged the revision of lend-lease to prevent its use indirectly to make loans for non-war purposes.

SAYS VICTORY MAY BE HELD UP

Legion Head Raps Jockeying for Peacetime Jobs.

New Orleans, Nov. 22 (A. P.).—The National Commander of the American Legion suggested here today that a "jockeying for peacetime advantages or peacetime jobs" may be delaying the end of the war.

Speaking before the national convention of the American Federation of Labor, Edward N. Scheiberling said that the Legion and the A. F. of L. were united in their broad objectives, adding that both want a victory so complete that it will pave the way for an enduring peace.

He then said:

"Those charged with the responsibility for supplying the tools of war tell us that those tools are not going to the battlefronts in the volume required. Our brilliant generals in the war zones are calling for tools to finish the job.

"They must go forward, or we must admit we are not backing the attack. We must go forward or we must admit we are not backing the attack. We must not tolerate any jockeying for peacetime advantage or peacetime jobs until the last German and the last Jap have laid down their last gun."

Labor's Post-war Role.

Organized labor was told here today that it should have full representation in Government to fulfill its post-war role of helping to rebuild democratic institutions in war-devastated Europe.

Joseph D. Keenan, vice-chairman of the War Production Board, assured the American Federation of Labor convention that during the last four years the Office of Labor Production "has made vigorous representations to get labor the fullest measure of representation and participation in Government."

"American labor must be permitted to send its most experienced members to help in the task of reconstruction of Europe," he said. He pointed out that rebuilding of European nations along democratic lines would "increase our economic well being at home."

A. F. of L. President William Green read a message from Gen Douglas MacArthur. The message read:

"Nothing has been more impressive than the magnificent effort of the mass of American labor. It has not failed us in the past and will not, I know, fail us in the future."

2 STATES FACE AFL BOYCOTT

Florida And Arkansas Anti-Closed Shop Laws Cited

New Orleans, Nov. 22 (AP)—The general counsel of the American Federation of Labor today shook a boycott bludgeon at Florida and Arkansas, States which adopted anti-closed shop laws in the November 7 election.

Joseph Padway, speaking at the AFL national convention, said: "If Arkansas and Florida attempt to enforce open shop laws our answer will be that the printers will not print, the bricklayers will not lay brick and members of the other trades will lay down their tools rather than work with scabs."

Padway announced that AFL lawyers have filed suits with the United States Supreme Court questioning the constitutionality of what he repeatedly referred to as anti-union laws adopted by "a number of States," adding that the high court previously had upheld the "union member's constitutional right not to work with non-union men."

War Plant Situation Safe

Assuring convention delegates that closed-shop contracts in Arkansas and Florida war plants "are entirely safe" because "the moment there is a dispute the War Labor Board will take jurisdiction and tell the States to keep hands off," Padway added that the situation might become "serious" in peacetime if States attempted to enforce laws prohibiting closed shops.

He said that a test suit against Alabama's "anti-union law" is pending before the supreme tribunal, as is an appeal from the conviction of R. J. Thomas, CIO Automobile Workers' president, for violation of a Texas law forbidding solicitation for union membership without a license.

Other States named by Padway as having in effect laws "opposed by the AFL" were Colorado—which he called "the most vicious of all"—South Dakota and Idaho. He said Florida's new anti-closed shop amendment is to become effective 30 days from now and the Arkansas law will not be in force until "and unless" the State Legislature passes an enabling act next January.

California Action Cited

He added that California recently defeated "overwhelmingly" a proposed open-shop amendment.

The counsel reported that laws "unfriendly to labor" have been passed "in some form in 12 States." He said that these laws generally take the form of: Required registration of unions, their officials and their organizers; publication of detailed union financial reports; State regulation of unions' "internal affairs, sometimes including the fixing of dues," and restrictions against picketing and strikes.

General Motors Makes Millionth Machine Gun

Detroit, Nov. 22 (AP)—General Motors Corporation announced today that it has produced its one-millionth machine gun for the War Department.

Since the first orders were received four years ago, GM said, the cost of the weapons has been reduced up to 84 per cent. Specifically the .50-caliber M-2 aircraft basic weapon has been cut 75 per cent.; the .50-caliber M-2 heavy barrel flexible, 76 per cent.; and the .30-caliber M-1919 A-4, 84 per cent. These types account for 94 per cent. of the total General Motors machine-gun production.

The announcement said production of the guns is continuing according to schedule.

Announces New Bearing 3 Times Longer Lasting

Detroit, Nov. 22 (AP)—Wartime development of a new engine bearing which tests indicate will last three times longer than regular bearings was disclosed today by the Ford Motor Company. The announcement said it would be adapted to post-war Ford-produced automobile engines.

The new bearing is described as a "tri-alloy" product, replacing cadmium, widely used as bearing material before the war. The new material consists of approximately 35 to 40 per cent. lead, 4½ to 5 per cent. silver, .5 per cent. iron and the remainder copper.

The bearings are being produced in quantity at the Ford River Rouge plant in near-by Dearborn. More than 500,000 already are in service in armored cars, universal carriers, tanks, jeeps, cargo trucks and other vehicles.

CIO Extends PAC, Looks To 1946 Election

Wild Ovation Greets Hillman, Murray as They Talk.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22. (AP)—An exuberant CIO convention voted today, after a noisy celebration of Nov. 7 election success, to continue its political action committee indefinitely and rededicate it to winning additional congressional seats in 1946.

Wild ovation reminiscent of the political conventions last Summer greeted Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO's Political Action Committee, and Philip Murray, CIO president, when they tried to talk. Virtually a full day was devoted to PAC—its part in the recent campaign and its avowed role in the future—in speeches by Hillman, Murray, and a dozen leaders of the unions in the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Murray urged "now that it's over and we start out anew, let's forget the bitterness and hatreds thrust upon the people by the enemies of our movement and their castigation of the leaders of CIO and PAC."

The CIO leader cautioned against interpreting the convention's action in continuing PAC as "a narrow movement."

"We are associating ourselves with all right-thinking and progressive peoples in building for a better country and a better world away out there.

"Our money and institutions shall be used to promote the welfare of the United Sattes and all its people," said Murray. "It's truly a movement of the common man toward the attainment of his objectives."

When the shouting had died down and a formal vote was taken on continuing the committee, Murray turned to CIO's role in the war, reading a cable he sent to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commanding Allied forces in the European theatre, in which he assured the military chief.

For Final Victory

"Our people will stay on the job until we have given you everything you need for final victory over the Nazis."

Murray said he was responding to Eisenhower's message to American war workers.

"Your call for more and still more shells, artillery, trucks and other arms and supplies finds an acceptance in CIO's unequivocal renewal of its no-strike pledge and in renewed dedication to still greater effort and devotion in the job of getting the supplies to you and your heroic men," the cable said.

Hillman said that had Mr. Roosevelt, supported by the CIO-PAC, been defeated, "we would have lost—in our generation, at least—all hope of winning a decent and enduring peace."

"Of Black Reaction"

He said forces "of black reaction" would have "turned our country from a course of collaboration and friendship among nations to a struggle for world domination, leading inevitably to international conflict on a third World War."

"Had these forces come to power, we would have lost our chance of winning jobs and security for all our people in the postwar world,' 'Hillman said.

He reiterated that PAC was not interested in forming a third party, because it "would only serve to cut us off from large and important progressive groups with which we have been so successfully allied."

Non-partisan political action "with forward-looking members of both parties" and in the mainstream of American political life, was the course he charted.

The convention will complete action on other resolutions tomorrow, going through the Thanksgiving holiday but setting aside tomorrow night for a turkey banquet. At the session on Friday, last day of the convention, officers will be elected and Secretary of Interior Ickes is scheduled to talk.

C. I. O. Pledges Job Seniority To Service Men

NOV 23 1944

Convention Adopts Plan of Accrued Rights; Assails Sewell Avery and Lewis

CHICAGO, Nov. 22 (AP).—Protection of accrued job seniority rights of returning war veterans was approved in one resolution adopted today by the Congress of Industrial Organizations convention.

It also recommended that collective-bargaining agreements provide that veterans employed for the first time in plants with which the C. I. O. has contracts be accorded cumulative seniority for time spent in service since Sept. 1, 1940, passage date of the selective service act.

This measure also continues a C. I. O. policy of waiving initiation fees from returning veterans desiring to join C. I. O. unions.

However, the resolution said that "we deplore the action of certain administrative officials who have promoted the illusion among veterans that their way of securing jobs is through displacing workers with longer seniority."

"The application of any such practice," it continued, "would only create a conflict between the veterans of this war and veterans of the last war or between veterans and other workers who were deferred, not because of their own request but in the interest of the war effort."

Denies "Raiding" Charge

Omar B. Ketchum, legislative representative of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, with which the C. I. O. has reached agreement on objectives for post-war re-employment of veterans, told the convention this co-operation was pledged to all "other groups in America."

Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, said he was glad Mr. Ketchum had "spiked another very vicious lie . . . that the C. I. O. was attempting to take over the Veterans of Foreign Wars." Mr. Murray said similar reports were circulated that the C. I. O. wanted to take over the Democratic party, "and even that we wanted to take over the American Federation of Labor." He said the A. F. of L. executive council had accused the C. I. O. of creating disorder in labor's ranks by its "raiding policy" against A. F. of L. unions.

"We have been built up because we carried the flag of trade unionism, and not because we have raided other unions," said Mr. Murray. "We have no interest in creating conflict with our ancient enemies—that is, of course, the frustrated and corroded leadership of the A. F. of L."

Unanimously and amid applause, the C. I. O. convention delegates adopted a resolution expressing a "feeling of comradeship" for rank-and-file members of the United Mine Workers of America, while taking a verbal whack at "the self-imposed and dictatorial leaders" of the U. M. W.

Harry Bridges Defended

The resolution said leaders of the U. M. W., of which John L. Lewis, originally the keystone figure in the C. I. O. until he left after the 1940 elections, is president, had "attempted to misrepresent to the nation the aims and aspirations of the membership of the United Mine Workers of America and have with blind fury sought to sow the seeds of disruption within the ranks of labor."

It said, however, that in the recent election the U. M. W. membership "demonstrated their position in such key states as Illinois, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Kentucky in a most convincing and forthright manner for the re-election of President Roosevelt."

In another resolution adopted, the delegates urged President Roosevelt to "recognize the fact that the deportation of Harry Bridges (California C. I. O. director, ordered deported as an alien Communist), would be a blow to morale, to national unity, and to war production." It asked that President Roosevelt take action to set aside the Bridges' deportation order, to "dismiss all charges against Harry Bridges and afford him full opportunity to become a citizen of the United States."

Other Resolutions

In other resolutions the convention:

Called upon Congress to repeal the Smith-Connally act, terming it "vicious legislation."

Expressed "severe condemnation of the acts and policies of Sewell Avery and Montgomery Ward & Co.," which has been in protracted labor dispute with the C. I. O. United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employees of America. This resolution asked the National War Labor Board and President Roosevelt to "take all necessary steps to protect the interests of the employees" and to "compel the company to comply with the directives of the board."

Supported permanent legislation for school lunch programs; favored establishing a permanent national youth service administration to co-ordinate solving youth reconversion and post-war problems; urged a national law to establish minimum standards of conditions of employment dealing with health and safety; commended the work of labor-management committees in the war effort and encouraged their continuation and development with Federal government assistance.

Recommended that Congress increase to $10,000,000 annually the appropriation for the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor, and that it be reorganized, expanded and headed by a full-time commissioner.

Renewed C. I. O. support of a program of improved and extended social security as outlined in the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill, urging its speedy congressional enactment.

Indorsed expanded housing improvement and slum-elimination programs, private and public; urged Federal legislation for aid to education and indorsed a national adult education program.

Crewless Fortress Flies Five Hours in Midwest

NOV 23 1944

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Nov. 22 (AP) — A crewless Flying Fortress which crashed today near Isabella, Minn., 70 miles northeast of Duluth, has been identified definitely by number as a Sioux City Army Air Base plane, Col. W. A. Dawson, air base commandant, said tonight.

Furnish Information

He said a forest ranger furnished the necessary information to base officials to make identification positive.

The crew of 10 abandoned the B-17, base officials said, near Marion, S. D., nearly five hours before a Minnesota forest ranger reported seeing a plane crash into a wooded area this afternoon.

At Sioux Falls, S. D., Major H. A. Patterson, public relations officer at the Army air field, said he spent the afternoon in Marion vicinity picking up members of the crew and jettisoned goods, including 10 bombs and ammunition.

Patterson said the pilot, identified at the Sioux City base as Lt. Colin I. Park, Glen Ridge, N. Y.—stayed with the plane after the rest of the crew jumped, but the ship lost altitude so the pilot jumped, too. The automatic pilot was set before the ship was abandoned.

The crew is now in Sioux Falls, Patterson reported, and will be returned to Sioux City tomorrow.

The plane flew about 400 miles alone.

Crewmen reported they bailed out without injury, when they were unable to "feather" the propeller of a dead engine. The ship began to vibrate and there was a threat of fire, the base announced.

Send Out Alarms

Word that a crewless plane was flying through the midwest caused state police in several states to send out alarms over their radio networks.

In Chicago, first believed to be the city toward which the Fortress was flying, all fire stations were alerted for possible emergency calls and civil and military authorities were notified to be on the lookout.

It was the third time in 18 months that a crewless bomber had flown through the sky over Iowa. In the two previous cases the planes crashed several hours after the crews had left them. No fatalities resulted.

Names of the crewmen who bailed out of the plane included: Second Lt. Michael D. Dunne, co-pilot, Ludlow, Mass.; Second Lt. Ira O. Sullivan, bombardier, Orrville, Ala.

U. S. To Pick Best Men To Fly Jet Planes

Bakersfield, Cal., Nov. 22 (AP)—The pick of the nation's flyers will be trained to handle jet propulsion planes, the War Department has disclosed.

This city has been chosen as headquarters for the segment of the Fourth Army Air Force responsible for jet-propelled P-59 Air Comet training, stated a War Department announcement yesterday.

The program has been under way for some time, but the number of planes or pilots involved was not revealed.

Ministers Apologize For Believing F.D.R. Used Profanity Nov. 7

GLENDALE, Calif., Nov. 22 (AP)—The Glendale Ministerial Association, which last week chided President Roosevelt for purportedly using profanity in a New York voting booth, today offered its public apology "for believing he said it."

Following the President's explanation that he did not take the name of God in vain, Dr. J. Whitcomb Broucher, S., association president, called a meeting last night which lasted until early today.

"We are glad that the President has denied using the profane expression he was accused by Time magazine of using," said Dr. Broucher in a statement approved by the association. "We are glad to accept his denial and to offer him our sincere apology for believing he said it. x x x

"If we made a mistake in sending a wire to the President, it has at least accomplished the purpose of getting a denial from him, which is better than an apology."

Dr. Broucher aded that he personally regretted that the issue had been raised.

Work Or Else, Navy Warns Strikers

San Francisco, Nov. 22 (AP)—The Navy, acting quickly in a walkout of several hundred San Francisco lithographers, ordered those of one of the shops affected to report back to w rk today or suffer "sanctions provided by law."

The AFL lithographers, some involved in military work, failed to report for work yesterday afternoon in protest against a National War Labor Board decision against a raise in pay.

They said they were not striking but only Christmas shopping.

NOV 23 1944

Strikers Method

The Navy was interested because one shop affected had been seized and was operating under an executive order as an outgrowth of a machinists' strike several months ago. It informed that shop's 135 lithographers, by individual telegram, that "failure to report promptly to work as ordered will result in the imposition of sanctions provided by law."

The lithographers, it said, were violating the executive order and the Smith-Connally Act.

The lithographers' pay scale runs from $33 to $70 for a 40-hour week, varying with the type of work.

Knudsen Orders Double Output Of B-29's

Seattle, Nov. 21 (AP)—Conversion of Boeing Aircraft Company's local plant No. 2—birthplace of thousands of B-17 Flying Fortresses—to B-29 Superfortress production by next March was announced by the company today.

The Boeing company has been called on by Lieut. Gen. William S. Knudsen, chief of the Air Technical Service Command, to double B-29 production in three months.

Need Is Vital

General Knudsen declared "the need for B-29's is vital because they provide the quickest and best means for smashing Japan. "We must double the production of B-29's in the next three months. We can do it if the people at home will forget this silly talk about the war being over and keep working."

The company stated that when conversion is complete, five huge plants—three Boeing, one Martin and one Bell—will be devoted entirely to production of Boeing B-29's, "principal weapon in the aerial war against Japan."

B-17's To Continue

"Production of Boeing B-17's will continue at Douglas and Lockheed plants in California, under the cooperative arrangement which has existed since May, 1941," the statement added.

The company described the plant conversion here, more than half completed, as "without parallel in industrial history. Because it is being accomplished while continuing to turn out B-17 Fortresses at a big production rate until conversion is complete."

To Produce Parts

The big Seattle plant, which will be integrated with a second Boeing plant at near-by Renton, will produce subassembly parts such as nose sections, gunners' compartments, wings, etc. They will be trucked to the Renton plant for final assembly.

"The two plants, operating in this way as a team, will be capable of producing twice as many of the giant B-29's as would be the case if completed planes were built in each," company officials said.

Navy Flies Trackless North.

Seattle, Nov. 22 (A. P.).—The Navy is making a daily flight over trackless tundra and a mountain range to Point Barrow, Alaska, 400 miles inside the Arctic Circle. Capt. D. McLennan, a former fullback at Washington State College, is captain of the flight, which supplies Navy Seabees who are surveying the Naval oil reserve in the area.

AMERICAN UNITS DROVE NEARLY TWO MILES EAST OF RAON L'ETAPSE AND CAPTURED TWO TOWNS NORTH OF ST.DIE, SENDING PATROLS INTO THE BON HOMME PASS EAST OF FRAIZE.

NORTHEAST OF THIONVILLE WHERE LT. GEN. GEORGE S. PATTON JR.'S THIRD ARMY FOUGHT INSIDE GERMANY, A COUNTERATTACK WEST OF MERZIG WAS REPULSED IN A TWO-HOUR BATTLE. AMERICAN TANKS STRUCK ON SIX MILES TO THE NORTHWEST, REACHING TUNSDORF.

THE BIGGEST ADVANCE IN THE AACHEN SECTOR WAS SCORED IN THE CENTER BY U.S. NINTH ARMY MEN WHO OCCUPIED LURKEN, NORTH OF ESCHWEILER, DURING THE NIGHT, AND PUSHED ON TO ENTER FRONHOVEN, WHERE SAVAGE FIGHTING WAS IN PROGRESS. THESE FORCES TOOK SEVERAL VILLAGES YESTERDAY, INCLUDING LANGWEILER, LAURENSBURG, ENGLESDORF AND MERZENHAUSEN.

SEVERAL HUNDRED PLANES SUPPORTED GROUND FIGHTING CLOSELY YESTERDAY PARTICULARLY IN THE AACHEN AND DUTCH FRONTIER SECTORS, DESPITE UNFAVORABLE WEATHER. RAIL LINES WERE CUT, ROAD JUNCTIONS WERE BOMBED AND ENEMY TROOPS AND TRANSPORTS WERE BLASTED AND STRAFED BY FIGHTER BOMBERS AND MEDIUM BOMBERS.

NOV 23 1944

ALONG THE LINE FROM THE SAVERNE GAP SOUTHWARD THROUGH THE MOUNTAINS TO MULHOUSE THE GERMANS WERE REPORTED PUTTING UP ONLY A DISORGANIZED REARGUARD RESISTANCE.

(THE BERN RADIO IN A BROADCAST RECORDED IN NEW YORK BY NBC SAID THE AMERICANS WERE IN THE SUBURBS OF STRASBOURG, THE FRENCH FRONTIER CITY ON THE WEST BANK OF THE RHINE. WHILE THERE WAS NO CONFIRMATION OF THE SWISS REPORT, STRASBOURG APPEARS TO BE THE NEXT MAJOR OBJECTIVE FOR THE SEVENTH ARMY).

UNCONFIRMED REPORTS SAID THE FRENCH HAD ADVANCED 22 MILES NORTH OF MULHOUSE TO COLMAR.

SCORING GAINS YESTERDAY UP TO 12 MILES, SEVENTH ARMY TROOPS CAPTURED SARREBOURG, 40 MILES EAST OF NANCY, TOOK THREE TOWNS JUST NORTHWEST OF SAVERNE GAP AND CAPTURED MITTELBRONN, NEAR THE ENTRANCE TO THE GAP.

MITTELBRONN IS 26 MILES FROM THE OUTSKIRTS OF STRASBOURG. AMERICAN UNITS OPERATING EIGHT MILES TO THE SOUTH PUSHED THROUGH A FOREST AND CAPTURED WALSCHEID AND DABO, 27 MILES WEST OF THE RHINE AT STRASBOURG.

FRENCH FIRST ARMY TROOPS, BESIDES THEIR DRIVE INTO MULHOUSE, CLEARED A LARGE AREA NORTHWEST OF BELFORT AND PUSHED NORTH FOUR MILES TO GIROMAGNY AND VESCEMONT. THE GREAT FORTRESS OF BELFORT WAS OCCUPIED BY THE FRENCH EXCEPT FOR THE SOUTHERN PART.

THE U. S. SEVENTH AND FRENCH FIRST ARMIES, OPERATING AS THE SIXTH ARMY GROUP UNDER COMMAND OF LT. GEN. JACOB L. DEVERS, HAVE FREED APPROXIMATELY 1,600 SQUARE MILES OF FRENCH SOIL CONTAINING 433 TOWNS AND VILLAGES IN THE FIRST WEEK OF THEIR OFFENSIVE. SINCE NOV. 19 THE TWO ARMIES HAVE TAKEN APPROXIMATELY 10,000 PRISONERS.

ABOVE THE SIXTH ARMY GROUP, THE U. S. THIRD ARMY MERGED ITS HOLDINGS INSIDE GERMANY TO A CONTINUOUS 11-MILE FRONT RUNNING SOUTHEAST FROM NEAR BESCH ON THE LUXEMBOURG BORDER. LT. GEN. GEORGE S. PATTON'S MEN THUS SOLIDIFIED THEIR HOLD ON SOME 25 SQUARE MILES OF ENEMY SOIL.

AT METZ, FORT QUELEU ON THE SOUTHWEST SURRENDERED WITH ITS GARRISON OF 200 NAZIS, BUT TWO ISLAND POCKETS AND SIX OTHER FORTS AROUND THAT PIERCED FORTRESS CITY OF FRANCE CONTINUED TO HOLD OUT.

THE BATTLE INSIDE GERMANY ON THE SECTOR EAST AND NORTHEAST OF AACHEN CONTINUED. THERE WERE INDICATIONS THAT THE GERMANS WERE ABOUT TO LOSE ESCHWEILER. AMERICAN FIRST ARMY TROOPS FOUGHT A HOUSE-TO-HOUSE BATTLE THERE YESTERDAY WHILE OTHER UNITS CLOSED IN TOWARD THE STRONGHOLD FROM BOTH THE NORTH AND SOUTH.

A FRONT DISPATCH SAID THE U. S. NINTH ARMY HAD ROLLED FORWARD TO WITHIN 25 MILES OF THE RHINE.

THE NINTH ENVELOPED NINE TOWNS IN 24 HOURS IN AN ADVANCE OF 2 1/2 MILES AND WAS A LITTLE OVER A MILE FROM THE ROER RIVER. THERE WERE SOME SIGNS OF A GERMAN WITHDRAWAL ON THE NINTH'S SOUTHERN FLANK BUT ENEMY RESISTANCE ON THE NORTHERN FLANK WAS FURIOUS.

NORTH OF THE NINTH'S SECTOR THE BRITISH SECOND ARMY GROUND SLOWLY AHEAD IN THE GEILENKIRCHEN AREA WHERE THE GERMANS WERE PUTTING UP A POWERFUL FIGHT. THE BRITISH ALSO CHOPPED DEEPER INTO THE THIN GERMAN-HELD SECTOR WEST OF THE MAAS RIVER IN SOUTHEASTERN HOLLAND.

BY ALEX H.SINGLETON

LONDON, NOV.22-(AP)-THE EXILED DUTCH GOVERNMENT WAS REPORTED AUTHORITATIVELY TODAY TO FAVOR A STRONG, FOUR-POWER WESTERN EUROPEAN ALLIANCE FOR MILITARY AND ECONOMIC SECURITY.

SOURCES CLOSE TO PREMIER P.S.GERBRANDY'S CABINET SAID THE CHIEF CONDITION BARRING A MORE CONCRETE COMMITMENT WAS THE DETERMINATION OF DUTCH LEADERS IN LONDON TO SOUND OUT FIRST THE PEOPLE OF THE LOW COUNTRY AND THEN OBTAIN THE CONSENT OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES. HOLLAND HAS BEEN TRADITIONALLY NEUTRAL.

THIS POSITION OBVIOUSLY WOULD MEAN A DELAY OF SEVERAL MONTHS BEFORE HOLLAND COULD OR WOULD SIGN UP IN ANY FUTURE COALATION WITH BRITAIN, FRANCE AND BELGIUM, POTENTIAL FORMATION OF WHICH HAS GRIPPED DIPLOMATIC ATTENTION HERE AND ON THE CONTINENT FOR A WEEK.

THE DUTCH ATTITUDE WAS DISCLOSED ONLY A DAY AFTER FRENCH FOREIGN MINISTER GEORGES BIDAULT, ADDRESSING THE ASSEMBLY IN PARIS, INDICATED THAT FRANCE WOULD NOT LIMIT HERSELF TO AN EXCLUSIVE WESTERN ALLIANCE.

"FRANCE," HE SAID, "HAS A MORAL AND MATERIAL TASK FARTHER EAST. FRANCE AND RUSSIA HAVE A GREAT TASK BEFORE THEM. THEY WILL ACCOMPLISH IT TOGETHER."

THIS STATEMENT WAS INTERPRETED IN SOME DIPLOMATIC QUARTERS AS NOT NECESSARILY PROHIBITIVE OF FRENCH PARTICIPATION IN A WESTERN ALLIANCE, BUT RATHER AS ASSURANCE TO RUSSIA THAT THE FRENCH WOULD REFUSE TO TAKE PART IN ANY CONTINENTAL CORDON WHICH MIGHT THREATEN SOVIET INTERESTS.

BUT IT WOULD PLUMP SQUARELY INTO THE LAPS OF THOSE PROMOTING THE BRITISH-FRENCH-BELGIUM-DUTCH ALLIANCE PLAN THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR DEMONSTRATING HOW SUCH A COMBINE COULD OPERATE WITHIN THE FRAMEWORK OF THE FUTURE WORLD SECURITY LEAGUE.

PART OF THE PRESENT DUTCH HESITANCY IS DUE TO THE UNCERTAINTY OF GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS ABOUT COMMUNIST STRENGTH WITHIN THE COUNTRY DURING THE YEARS OF GERMAN OCCUPATION AND THE POSITION THE PARTY WILL TAKE.

BUT DUTCH QUARTERS MAINTAIN THAT THE AIM OF THE ALLIANCE IS DIRECTED AGAINST GERMANY IN A MUTUAL MOVE FOR PROTECTION AGAINST FUTURE AGGRESSION, AND THEY CONTEND THAT ITS MOTIVATING FACTOR IS NO DIFFERENT FROM SOVIET PROMOTION OF SLAVIC PACTS OF MUTUAL INTEREST.

THE LAST NAZI RESISTANCE IN METZ WAS WIPED OUT ON THE 15TH DAY AFTER GENERAL PATTON SENT HIS FORCES DIGGING INTO THE SUPPOSEDLY IMPREGNABLE FORTIFICATIONS SOUTH OF THE CITY. AMERICAN DOUGHBOYS THUS BECAME THE FIRST FIGHTING MEN TO CAPTURE METZ FRONTALLY SINCE ATTILA THE HUN ACCOMPLISHED THE FEAT 1,500 YEARS AGO. PATTON RECEIVED CONGRATULATIONS FROM GEN.DWIGHT D.EISENHOWER.

THE U.S. FIFTH AND 95TH DIVISIONS SHARED IN MOPPING UP THE LAST 800 OR 900 GERMANS ON SAULCY ISLAND, IN THE MIDDLE OF THE MOSELLE RIVER WITHIN METZ. ABOUT 1,500 PRISONERS WERE TAKEN IN THE CITY YESTERDAY, INCLUDING MAJ.GEN.KITTEL, HIGHEST RANKING NAZI OFFICER IN METZ, WHO WAS FOUND IN A HOSPITAL, SERIOUSLY WOUNDED.

THE EXACT POSITIONS OF THE THIRD ARMY COLUMNS WHICH DROVE TO THE GERMAN FRONTIER EAST OF METZ TODAY WERE NOT GIVEN AT PATTON'S HEADQUARTERS, BUT THE ANNOUNCEMENT APPARENTLY MEANT THAT AMERICAN TROOPS EITHER WERE ON OR ACROSS THE REICH BORDER ALONG A BROKEN FRONT OF PERHAPS 30 MILES NORTHWEST OF SAARBRUCKEN TO THE CORNER OF LUXEMBOURG.

FARTHER SOUTH THE 80TH DIVISION CLEANED UP REMILLY FOREST AND PRESSED ON TOWARD THE GERMAN BORDER. WHILE THE 26TH DIVISION STABBED

WITHIN 15 MILES OF THE FRONTIER AT SURREGUEMINES. THE FOURTH ARMORED DIVISION ROLLED FOUR MILES TO MITTERSHEIM, 18 MILES SOUTH OF THE BORDER.

SPEEDING BEYOND CAPTURED SARREBOURG, THE SEVENTH ARMY'S 44TH DIVISION TEAMED WITH THE FRENCH SECOND ARMORED DIVISION IN DRIVING UPON SAVERNE, 19 MILES FROM STRASBOURG.

WHILE THERE WAS NO ALLIED CONFIRMATION OF THE PARIS RADIO REPORT THAT SAVERNE HAD BEEN ENTERED, A FRONT DISPATCH TONIGHT FROM THOBURN WIANT OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS SAID ALLIED TROOPS HAD REACHED THE RHINE PLAIN AT WEITHERSWEILLER, SIX AND THREE-QUARTER MILES NORTH OF SAVERNE, AND BURCKENWALD, FOUR AND A HALF MILES SOUTH OF THE TOWN. HE SAID PATCH'S TROOPS WERE "RAPIDLY BEARING DOWN ON SAVERNE."

OTHER AMERICAN AND FRENCH UNITS ROLLED STEADILY EASTWARD THROUGH ALL VOSGES PASSES AGAINST WEAKENING GERMAN REARGUARD RESISTANCE.

WEST OF MULHOUSE THE NAZIS WERE THROWING TANK-LED COUNTERATTACKS AROUND DANNEMARIE, SOUTH OF WHICH THEY SUCCEEDED IN CUTTING A SECTION OF THE CORRIDOR ALONG WHICH THE FRENCH DROVE TO THE RHINE TWO DAYS AGO. THE FRENCH CONTINUED TO MOVE THEIR SUPPLIES FORWARD ON SECONDARY ROADS, HOWEVER, AND WERE FIGHTING TO PREVENT THE NAZIS FROM DRIVING THROUGH TO THE SWISS BORDER, WHERE THEY MIGHT SEEK INTERNMENT.

(A SWISS DISPATCH SAID A STREAM OF CIVILIAN REFUGEES WAS POURING INTO SWITZERLAND SINCE THE START OF THE GERMAN COUNTERATTACKS. MORE THAN 3,500 ALREADY HAD CROSSED THE FRONTIER AT BASEL ALONE.)

WITH U.S. FIRST ARMY IN GERMANY, NOV. 22-(AP)-ESCHWEILER FELL TODAY TO AMERICAN DOUGHBOYS. IT APPEARED THAT NAZI RESISTANCE ALONG THE FIRST ARMY FRONT WAS SOFTENING. FIGHTING STILL WAS HARD AND COSTLY IN THE HURTGEN FOREST, HOWEVER.

(WHITEHEAD HAD A "CLOSE BRUSH WITH DEATH OR INJURY FROM ENEMY SHELLS IN THE NORTH END OF STOLBERG" WEDNESDAY ALONG WITH LEE CARSON OF INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE AND GEORGE HICKS OF THE BLUE NETWORK, HICKS BROADCAST. "I'VE BEEN IN PLENTY OF HOT SPOTS," WHITEHEAD TOLD HICKS, "BUT THAT ONE WAS JUST ABOUT AS BAD AS ANY.")

THE BACKBONE OF ENEMY RESISTANCE IN ESCHWEILER WAS BROKEN IN A NIGHT ATTACK WHICH STARTED AT 3 O'CLOCK THIS MORNING AND TONIGHT VIRTUALLY ALL RESISTANCE HAD ENDED IN THIS CITY OF 36,000, WHICH WAS AN IMPORTANT COMMUNICATIONS CENTER AND ONE OF THE BIG STUMBLING BLOCKS IN THE PATH OF THE FIRST ARMY.

TO THE NORTH OF ESCHWEILER DOUGHBOYS CLEANED OUT DURWISS AND THE TOWN OF LOHN, WHILE TO THE SOUTHEAST TROOPS SLOWLY PLOWED FORWARD AGAINST BITTER RESISTANCE IN THE HURTGEN FOREST WHICH HAS BEEN ONE OF THE BLOODIEST BATTLEGROUNDS OF THE INVASION.

LT.GEN.COURTNEY HODGES' TROOPS BROKE THE NAZIS' ESCHWEILER DEFENSES WITH STRAIGHT POWER, BLASTING AHEAD BEHIND HEAVY ARTILLERY AND AIR POWER.

ESCHWEILER'S CRUMBLING RUINS SHOW AGAIN WHAT WILL HAPPEN TO GERMAN CITIES WHENEVER THE ENEMY USES THEM AS STRONGHOLDS.

"IN GENERAL THE JOB OF DESTROYING GERMAN CITIES AHEAD OF US WILL BE AS SEVERE AS IT WAS IN AACHEN AND IN SOME CASES THEY WILL BE LIKE RANDAZZO IN SICILY, WHICH PROBABLY WAS THE WORLD'S RECORD FOR DESTRUCTION OF A TOWN BY BOMBING," A STAFF OFFICER SAID.

ALREADY THE PATH OF DESTRUCTION SPREADS BEFORE THE FIRST ARMY, RAVAGES OF HEAVY AERIAL RAIDS ON THE ENEMY'S MAIN POINTS OF COMMUNICATION AND SUPPLY.

NOV 231944

AERIAL RECONNAISSANCE PHOTOGRAPHS SHOW THAT 80 PER CENT OF DUREN IS DESTROYED. THE CENTER OF THE TOWN IS SMASHED COMPLETELY AND RAILROAD YARDS ARE DESTROYED. LANGERWEHE IS 50 PER CENT DESTROYED. JULISH IS 95 PER CENT DAMAGED, WITH THE RAILROAD YARDS VIRTUALLY DESTROYED.

TONIGHT DIRTY AND SCARED CIVILIANS WERE COMING OUT OF CELLARS AND THE WRECKAGE OF BUILDINGS AT ESCHWEILER TO REGISTER WITH THE MILITARY GOVERNMENT. MANY CIVILIANS REFUSED TO OBEY NAZI ORDERS TO EVACUATE.

WHILE ALL ALONG THE LINE THERE WERE INDICATIONS OF A SOFTENING OF RESISTANCE, THE FIGHTING STILL WAS HARD AND BLOODY IN THE DARK, DRIPPING WOODS OF THE HURTGEN FOREST, WHERE THE GERMANS WERE BEHIND BARBED WIRE, FIELD FORTIFICATIONS AND MINES.

ADVANCES PUT THE DOUGHBOYS NEAR WEISWEILLER AND GAVE THE ARMY CONTROL OF ABOUT NINE MILES OF THE ADOLF HITLER HIGHWAY WHICH RUNS FROM A POINT JUST OUTSIDE AACHEN TO A POINT SOUTHEAST OF COLOGNE.

THIS MILITARY ROUTE SKIRTS ESCHWEILER ON THE NORTH. IT IS A 70-FOOT WIDE, CEMENT HIGHWAY CAPABLE OF CARRYING THREE LANES OF TRAFFIC IN EACH DIRECTION.

EAST OF DURWISS IT IS KNOWN THE GERMANS HAVE BURIED 1,000-POUND BOMBS FOR DESTRUCTION OF SECTIONS OF THE ROAD. FIVE CRATERS ALREADY HAVE BEEN FOUND NORTHWEST OF ESCHWEILER.

ESCHWEILER FELL TO TROOPS COMMANDED BY MAJ.FRED NEEDHAM OF AUBURN, CALIF., AND LED BY LT.ERNEST FOX, 1074 MILITARY DRIVE, SALT LAKE CITY; CAPT.RAYMOND GARINO, 60 BURNS ST., HACKENSACK, N.J.; LT.JERRY HOOKER, 1599 N.MOSS ST., EUGENE, ORE.; AND CAPT. WILLIAM D.GUDE, BALTIMORE, MD.

PRISONERS TAKEN BY THE FIRST ARMY SINCE D-DAY NOW TOTAL 203,841.

ESCHWEILER, GERMANY, NOV.22-(AP)-LITTLE BUNCHES OF DIRTY AND BEARDED GERMAN SOLDIERS--CUT OFF IN THE FINAL THRUST OF AMERICAN INFANTRY THROUGH ESCHWEILER--ARE SURRENDERING HERE AND THERE IN A

DREARY ROUNDUP OF DREARY HUMANITY.

SLIGHTLY LARGER GROUPS OF GERMAN CIVILIANS--ABOUT 1,000 OF ESCHWEILER'S NORMAL POPULATION OF 36,000 REMAIN IN THE TOWN--ARE FILING THROUGH THE OFFICES OF OUR INTELLIGENCE AND MILITARY GOVERNMENT OFFICERS, LAMENTING THEIR FATE AND DECLARING THAT THEY, OF COURSE, NEVER WERE NAZIS.

THEIRS IS A STORY THAT HAS BEEN HEARD IN EVERY GERMAN CITY OR TOWN WE HAVE CAPTURED. I HAVE JUST HEARD TWO OF THESE CIVILIANS QUESTIONED.

ONE, A MIDDLEAGED MAN WHO HAD BEEN A MUNICIPAL EMPLOYE, SAID THAT THOSE WHO REMAINED HERE WERE IMPLACABLY ANTI-NAZI AND HAD REMAINED IN THE FACE OF STRONG PRESSURE AND THREATS FROM NAZI CIVIL POLICE. HE INSISTED THAT HE HIMSELF HAD LIVED IN A CELLAR SINCE SEPT.16.

THE SECOND, A WOMAN OF ABOUT 35, WHOSE HUSBAND WAS WITH HER AND CLAIMED TO BE A WOUNDED AND DISCHARGED GERMAN SOLDIER, DECLARED THAT SHE AND HER HUSBAND HAD FLED TO A CAVE ON SEPT.17 RATHER THAN LEAVE THE CITY AND HAD LIVED THERE UNTIL TODAY WITH FOUR OTHER PEOPLE.

FROM OTHERS IN THE MILLING GROUP OF CIVILIANS WE HEARD UNSUPPORTED STORIES THAT THE CIVIL POLICE HAD BEATEN SOME MEN FOR RESISTING THE ORDER TO LEAVE THE CITY. ONE DEVICE USED TO EFFECT EVACUATION WAS THIS: WHEN THE WOMEN OF THE TOWN WENT TO THE STORES TO GET THEIR BREAD RATIONS, THEY WERE PUT INTO TRUCKS AND HAULED AWAY WITHOUT NOTICE.

THE CITY NOW IS LARGELY UNINHABITABLE, BUT NOT TOTALLY SMASHED AS SOME OTHERS HAVE BEEN, LARGELY BECAUSE ANTI-PERSONNEL BOMBS INTENDED ONLY TO KILL GERMAN TROOPS WERE USED INSTEAD OF BLOCKBUSTERS.

A 35TH DIVISION COMMAND POST IN FRANCE, NOV.21-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THE VALOR OF LT.ROBERT T.MCCAFFREY, 40 MAIN STREET, LINCOLN, N.H., AN ARTILLERY OBSERVER WHO DIRECTED FIRE ON HIS OWN POSITION, WAS PLACED HIGH TODAY ON THE LIST OF FACTORS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE 10-MILE FORWARD PUSH OF THE 35TH DIVISION IN THE PAST FOUR DAYS.

NOV 23 1944

THE 35TH AND SIXTH ARMORED DIVISION WERE HOLDING A LINE ABOUT THREE AND A HALF MILES SOUTHWEST OF THE VILLAGE OF GROS TENQUIN, KEYSTONE OF GERMAN DEFENSES FOR THREE OR FOUR MILES ON EITHER SIDE. IT WAS NECESSARY TO TAKE THE VILAGE OF BISTROFF, PROTECTING GROS TENQUIN'S FLANK TWO OR THREE MILES BEYOND THE AMERICAN LINES, BEFORE ATTACKING GROS TENQUIN.

AT NIGHT THE THIRD BATTALION UNDER LT.COL.ALBERT H.BUTLER, HASTINGS NEB., AND PASADENA, CALIF., FELL ON THE NAZI GARRISON AT BISTROFF AND WIPED IT OUT. THEN THE SMALL FORCE OF AMERICANS PLANTED MINES

30.24 — 20599

ALL ALONG THE ROAD LEADING INTO BISTROFF FROM GROS TENQUIN AND SAT DOWN TO WAIT.

SOON AFTER DAYLIGHT THE GERMANS STARTED ROLLING INTO BISTROFF WITH TWO TANKS COVERING MORE THAN 200 INFANTRYMEN.

MCCAFFREY, THE ONLY ARTILLERY OBSERVER ORDERED THE INFANTRYMEN WITH HIM TO FALL BACK INTO THE VILLAGE AS THE TANKS APPROACHED.

ONE OF THE NAZI TANKS STRUCK A STRING OF MINES AND ITS TREADS WERE BLOWN OFF. ITS CREW AND THAT OF THE OTHER TANK, SHAKEN BY THE BLAST, JUMPED OUT AND FLED. THE NAZI INFANTRY CONTINUED THEIR ADVANCE.

NOV 23 1944

MCCAFFREY KEPT IN CONTACT WITH HIS 210TH FIELD ARTILLERY REGIMENT BY PORTABLE RADIO, DIRECTING FIRE ON THE GERMANS. AS THEY CLOSED IN HE GAVE THE BATTERIES COORDINATES CLOSER AND CLOSER TO HIS OWN POSITION UNTIL HE WAS ACTUALLY CALLING FOR FIRE ON THE HOUSE HE WAS IN. IT WAS STRUCK, BUT HE ESCAPED INJURY.

FINALLY THE GERMAN ATTACK WAS BROKEN. DEFENSES AROUND GROS TENQUIN WERE SO DISORGANIZED A FRONTAL ASSAULT A FEW HOURS LATER OVERRAN THE TOWN QUICKLY.

COL.M.A.SOLOMON, OBERLIN, OHIO, CHIEF OF STAFF TO MAJ.GEN.PAUL S. BADE, COMMANDER OF THE 35TH DIVISION, GAVE MCCAFFREY A LARGE SHARE OF THE CREDIT FOR THE SUCCESS OF THE FLANKING MOVEMENT.

COMPANY COMMANDERS OF THE THIRD BATTALION WHO PARTICIPATED IN THE ACTION WERE CAPTS.MORRIS HALNED, PHILADELPHIA, HUBERT STEVENS, WICHITA, KANS.; CLIFFORD BECKER, HALSTEAD, KANS.; JOHN LONG, ALSO OF KANSAS (HOME TOWN UNAVAILABLE). BUTLER'S EXECUTIVE CAPTAIN IS B.W.RICHMOND, LITTLE ROCK, ARK.

METZ, NOV.22-(AP)-THE BATTLE FOR METZ FLICKERED OUT TODAY IN THE SMOKE FROM BURNING BUILDINGS ON SAULCY ISLAND AFTER THE LAST FEW HUNDRED GERMANS THERE WERE BEATEN AND BROKEN BY AMERICAN TANK-INFANTRY TEAMS.

THE NAZIS LAST HOPES THAT THE SMALL ISLAND SECTOR OF THE CITY WITH ITS MANY BARRACKS AND STOUT BUILDINGS MIGHT HOLD OUT FOR A FEW DAYS WERE BLASTED BY TANK GUNS AND METHODICAL INFANTRYMEN.

LACKING ARTILLERY AND WITH ONLY A FEW BAZOOKAS TO CHALLENGE THE TANK ATTACKS, THE GERMANS HAD NO STOMACH FOR DYING AT THEIR POSTS AND THE DOUGHBOYS SELDOM HAD TO CLOSE IN ON THEM IN THE FINAL STAGES OF THE FIGHT.

"THEY'D FIRE PLENTY WITH RIFLES AND MACHINEGUNS FROM WINDOWS AND BASEMENTS BUT WHEN WE GOT CLOSE, THEY'D COME OUT AND GIVE UP," SAID PVT.CLAUDE WESTERMAN, A 95TH DIVISION FIGHTING MAN FROM ROGER CITY, MICH.

THE TANK AND ARTILLERY FIRE WHICH PRECEDED THE ASSAULT FIRED A GOOD MANY BUILDINGS ON SAULCY ISLAND AND THESE WERE BURNING OUT THIS AFTERNOON WITH NO APPARENT ATTEMPT TO CONTROL THEM.

THE CIVILIANS EMERGED FROM CELLARS AS SOON AS THE FIGHTING WAS OVER AND THE STREETS WERE CONGESTED WITH WANDERING CITIZENS WHEN WE CAME IN.

I HEARD NO SNIPING NOR ANY GUNFIRE AS I WALKED AND RODE ABOUT THE CITY FOR SEVERAL HOURS TODAY, NOR DID I SEE OR HEAR OF MINES AND BOOBYTRAPS.

"THE GERMANS WEREN'T THICK ENOUGH TO BE IN EVERY BUILDING, BUT THEY BUNCHED UP IN SMALL GROUPS OF FOUR OR FIVE IN SOME OF THE HOUSES AND UP TO 70 OR 80 IN THE LARGER BARRACKS," SAID PVT. RALPH WESTRICH, 710 WEST WAYNE STREET, FORT WAYNE, IND.

METZ WAS SWARMING TODAY WITH F.F.I. AND SOME MEMBERS OF THE FRENCH ARMY WHO PARTICIPATED IN THE FINAL STAGES OF THE FIGHTING. THE BLEAK RAINY DAY WAS BRIGHTENED BY NUMEROUS COCKADES OF RED, WHITE AND BLUE RIBBON BEING WORN BY GIRLS AND WOMEN.

UP TO LATE IN THE DAY THERE WERE NO REPORTS OF THE GUNS OF THE OUTLYING GERMAN-HELD FORTRESSES BEING TURNED ON THE CITY, ALTHOUGH THEY STILL WERE FIRING ON SOME OF THE ROADS LEADING TO METZ.

PVT. ARTHUR N. SHAW, ANOTHER 95TH INFANTRYMAN FROM GREENFIELD, MO., GAVE CREDIT TO THE TANKS, SAYING, "WHEN THOSE TANK GUNS WOULD BANG A FEW ROUNDS INTO THE BUILDINGS, THE KRAUTS WOULD SOON BE CONVINCED AND WOULD COME OUT WITH THEIR HANDS UP."

NOV 231944

SGT. ARTHUR SHAFFER, COMMANDER OF A MEDIUM TANK, "HELL'S AFIRE," TOLD HOW HIS OUTFIT ATTACHED TO THE 95TH, CROSSED THE MOSELLE RIVER FROM THE NORTH YESTERDAY WHILE THE INFANTRY WAS COMING ACROSS THE CANAL ON THE SOUTH SIDE OF THE ISLAND, AND CONTINUED:

"THEY DIDN'T HAVE ANY ARTILLERY OR ANTI-TANK GUNS AND ALL WE HAD TO WORRY ABOUT WAS BAZOOKAS. WE WOULD ROLL ALONG TO WHATEVER BUILDING WAS GIVING THE DOUGHBOYS A LOT OF FIRE AND LET IT HAVE A FEW ROUNDS FROM CANNON. I DON'T THINK WE KILLED SO MANY BUT WE MADE A GREAT MANY RUN OUT AND QUIT."

"WE WERE PLENTY LUCKY ABOUT THOSE BAZOOKAS," SAID PVT. CLYDE TAYLOR OF WALHALLA, S.C., RADIO OPERATOR IN "HELL'S AFIRE."

"TWO OF THEM HIT US ON THE FRONT AND ONE ON THE BACK, BUT THEY ALL GLANCED OFF WITHOUT GIVING US THE FULL EFFECT."

"IT CERTAINLY WAS EFFECT ENOUGH AND IT REALLY SHOOK ME IN THAT TURRET," ADDED PFC. ANGELO LERRO OF 529 EAST 89TH STREET, CHICAGO.

BY THOBURN WIANT

WITH THE U.S. SEVENTH ARMY, NOV. 22-(AP)-THE FRENCH SECOND ARMORED DIVISION, ATTACHED TO THE U.S. SEVENTH ARMY, OCCUPIED STRATEGIC SAVERNE FROM THE NORTH AND SOUTH TONIGHT WHILE THE AMERICAN 44TH AND 79TH DIVISIONS, BITING DEEPLY INTO THE GERMAN'S FLEEING REARGUARDS, WERE ONLY THREE OR FOUR MILES AWAY, APPROACHING THE TOWN OF 8,000 FROM THE WEST.

PLUNGING THROUGH THE SAVERNE PASS IN THE VOSGES MOUNTAINS TODAY, THE SEVENTH ARMY FORCES BROKE OUT ONTO THE RHINE PLAIN AT WEITERSWILLER AND BURKENWALD, NORTH AND SOUTH OF SAVERNE, WHICH IS 19 MILES NORTHWEST OF STRASBOURG, AND CONTINUED THEIR SMASH EASTWARD.

A RECONNAISSANCE PILOT REPORTED THAT THE GERMANS WERE IN WILD FLIGHT TOWARD STRASBOURG, CAPITAL OF ALSACE-LORRAINE AND THE LARGEST FRENCH CITY STILL IN GERMAN HANDS.

"RAIN, SNOW AND FOG PREVENTED OUR PLANES FROM WORKING ON THEM," THE PILOT COMPLAINED. "WHAT A FIELD DAY THEY WOULD HAVE IF THE WEATHER WAS RIGHT!"

THE FRENCH, WHO WERE THE FIRST TO REACH THE RHINE IN THE SIXTH ARMY GROUP'S SOUTHERN SECTOR, SEEMED LIKELY TONIGHT TO BE THE FIRST TO REACH THE RIVER IN THE NORTH.

"IF THE FRENCH REACH THE RHINE BEFORE WE DO, MORE POWER TO THEM," LT.COL.HERBERT SNYDER OF CINCINNATI, O., THE 44TH'S INTELLIGENCE CHIEF DECLARED. "WE DON'T CARE WHO DOES THE JOB SO LONG AS IT'S DONE. WE'RE ALL ON THE SAME TEAM, YOU KNOW."

THE SEVENTH'S OFFENSIVE, STARTING NOV. 13, PROCEEDED SO RAPIDLY THAT THE GERMANS HAVE BEEN FORCED TO LEAVE GREAT QUANTITIES OF HEAVY GUNS AND EQUIPMENT BEHIND THEM. AN AMAZING ANGLE OF THE OFFENSIVE IS THAT THE GERMANS' ELABORATE DEFENSES, ESPECIALLY AROUND THE MOUTH OF AND IN THE SAVERNE GAP, FAILED TO HALT THE SEVENTH'S STEAMROLLER DRIVE. FRENCH ARMOR ALSO HAS KEPT GOING DESPITE SUCH OBSTACLES AS A DITCH 30 FEET WIDE AT THE TOP AND 10 AT THE BOTTOM AND A MILE AND A HALF LONG.

AMONG THE TOWNS OCCUPIED IN THE SEVENTH'S EASTWARD SWEEP ARE PETERSBACH, SEVEN MILES NORTH OF PHALSBOURG, AND GUNTZVILLER, SIX MILES EAST OF SARREBOURG.

30. 24— 20601

FURTHER ADVANCES WERE MADE ALL ALONG THE SEVENTH'S 50-MILE FRONT. IN THE CENTRAL SECTOR, SLOW PROGRESS EAST OF RAON-L'ETAPE WAS DUE TO SNIPERS IN THE WOODS. SOUTHEAST OF RAON-L'ETAPE THE YANKS DROVE MORE THAN TWO MILES AGAINST LIGHT AND SCATTERED OPPOSITION EAST OF MOYENMOUTIER. THREE MILES NORTH OF ST.DIE, TWO MORE VILLAGES, DENIPAIRE AND ST.JEAN DORMONT, WERE SEIZED, THUS STRAIGHTENING THE SIXTH CORPS' LINE RUNNING NORTHWARD FROM ST.DIE.

ST.DIE ITSELF HAS BEEN ENTERED AND EXTENSIVE GAINS MADE TO THE EAST. THE THIRD DIVISION CAPTURED CHATAS AND NEARBY GRANDRUPT AS WELL AS BATTANT DE BOURRAS, ALL NORTHEAST OF ST.DIE.

GEN.JEAN DE LATTRE DE TASSIGNY'S FRENCH FIRST ARMY CLEARED ALL BUT THE SOUTHEASTERN EDGES OF BELFORT AND REPULSED A COUNTERATTACK IN THE DIRECTION OF DELLE, SOUTHEAST OF BELFORT, BY A GERMAN FORCE OF 3,000 SUPPORTED BY TANKS.

AFTER SEIZING MULHOUSE AND TAKING MORE THAN 1,000 PRISONERS, INCLUDING STAFF OFFICERS OF THE GERMAN 19TH ARMY, THE FRENCH PUSHED EASTWARD TOWARD THE UPPER ALSACE PLAIN.

THE FRENCH WHO REACHED THE RHINE IN THEIR AMAZING DRIVE THROUGH THE BELFORT GAP ARE NOW WORKING NORTHWARD CLEANING OUT THE GERMANS BETWEEN THE EASTERN EDGE OF THE VOSGES AND THE RHINE.

SEVENTY THOUSAND GERMAN TROOPS WERE REPORTED WEST OF THE RHINE IN THE SECTOR FACING THE SIXTH ARMY GROUP BEFORE THE AMERICANS AND FRENCH BEGAN THEIR OFFENSIVE NOV. 13. HOW MANY ARE LEFT IS PROBLEMATICAL. SOME MAY BE EXPECTED TO MOVE INTO THE SIEGFRIED AND OLD MAGINOT DEFENSES NORTH OF THE SAVERNE-STRASBOURG LINE AND OTHERS MAY BE ABLE TO GET ACROSS TO THE GERMAN SIDE OF THE RHINE ON THE THREE REMAINING BRIDGES IN THE AREA.

NEVERTHELESS, THE SIXTH ARMY GROUP HAS A GOOD CHANCE OF DESTROYING THOUSANDS OF THE ENEMY, WHICH IS MORE IMPORTANT THAN GAINING GROUND.

WEATHER SHARPLY RESTRICTED AIR SUPPORT TODAY, BUT THUNDERBOLTS BOMBED SOME ENEMY TRANSPORT IN THE STRASBOURG AND COLMAR AREAS.

PORRENTRUY, SWITZERLAND, NOV.22-(AP)-FRENCH INFANTRY AND ARTILLERY WAS REPORTED TODAY TO HAVE THROWN BACK A COUNTERATTACK BY A GERMAN FORMATION ESTIMATED AT 15,000 IN THE SUARCE, LEPUIX AND PFETTERHOUSE REGION A FEW KILOMETERS NORTH OF HERE.

THE GERMANS APPARENTLY WERE STRIVING TO REACH THE SWISS FRONTIER TO CUT THE FRENCH FIRST ARMY'S SUPPLY LINE. THEY FELL BACK INTO THE FOREST AREAS OF THE OLD ALSATIAN FRONTIER, WHERE A VIOLENT BATTLE CONTINUED. FROM THE DELLE SECTOR, FRENCH ARTILLERY PUMPED SHELLS CEASELESSLY INTO THE GERMAN POSITIONS. LEPUIX, WHICH THE GERMANS HAD RETAKEN, WAS REPORTED IN FLAMES TODAY.

HUNDREDS OF REFUGEES FROM ALSATIAN VILLAGES IN THE AREA PASSED INTO SWITZERLAND LAST NIGHT AND TODAY AND FEAR OF GERMAN COUNTERATTACKS DROVE APPROXIMATELY 4,000 ALSATIANS INTO BASEL, MOST OF THEM CROSSING AT BOURGFELDEN AND ST.LOUIS.

IN THE HUNINGUE REGION A NEAR-PANIC WAS CAUSED BY REPORTS THAT ISOLATED UNITS OF GERMANS NEAR DELLE AND OTHERS NEAR HUNINGUE WERE BEGINNING A PINCERS MOVEMENT.

PARIS, NOV. 22-(AP)-ON THE DAY AFTER IT PUBLISHED A ACCOUNT OF HER BATTLEFIELD DEATH, THE ARMY NEWSPAPER STARS AND STRIPES TODAY BEGAN RECEIVING LETTERS OF APPRECIATION FOR THE EDITORIAL WRITTEN BY LT.FRANCES SLANGER, ARMY NURSE AND GRADUATE OF THE BOSTON, MASS., CITY HOSPITAL, IN WHICH SHE VOICED THE NURSES' PRAISE OF THE GI'S.

FROM AMONG THESE REPLIES TO NURSE SLANGER'S EDITORIAL, PUBLISHED IN STARS AND STRIPES ALSO, THE EDITORS SELECTED ONE WRITTEN BY PFC.MILLARD IRELAND OF THE INFANTRY (HOME TOWN UNAVAILABLE) AS REPRESENTATIVE.

IRELAND WROTE: "WE MEN WERE NOT GIVEN THE CHOICE OF WORKING ON THE BATTLEFIELD OR THE HOMEFRONT. WE CANNOT TAKE ANY PERSONA CREDIT FOR BEING HERE. WE ARE HERE BECAUSE WE HAVE TO BE.

"YOU ARE HERE MERELY BECAUSE YOU FELT THAT YOU WERE NEEDED.

"IT DOESN'T MATTER THAT WE LIE IN MUD--YES, CRAWL IN IT--WHILE YOU ONLY 'WADE ANKLE-DEEP' OR THAT YOU POSSIBLY ENJOY A FEW MORE CONVENIENCES OVER HERE THAN WE.

"THE IMPORTANT THING IS THAT YOU COULD BE AT HOME, SOAKING YOURSELVES IN A BATHTUB EVERY DAY, PUTTING ON CLEAN CLOTHES OVER A CLEAN BODY AND CRAWLING BETWEEN CLEAN SHEETS AT NIGHT ON A SOFT, SPRINGY MATTRESS. INSTEAD YOU ENDURE WHATEVER HARDSHIPS YOU MUST TO BE WHERE YOU CAN DO US THE MOST GOOD.

"IF THE WORLD HAD A FEW MORE PEOPLE LIKE YOU IN IT, THERE WOULDN'T BE ANY WARS."

STARS AND STRIPES IS HAVING BOUND ALL THE LETTERS IT HAS RECEIVED IN REPLY TO THE EDITORIAL TO SEND TO LIEUTENANT SLANGER'S FAMILY, BELIEVING THAT THEY CONSTITUTE AN INSPIRING MEMORIAL TO HER.

LIEUTENANT SLANGER WAS KILLED BY A GERMAN SHELL IN BELGIUM ON THE NIGHT OF THE DAY SHE MAILED HER EDITORIAL TO STARS AND STRIPES. SEVERAL OTHER NURSES AND DOCTORS OF THE HOSPITAL TO WHICH SHE WAS ATTACHED WERE WOUNDED.

THESE ARE SOME EXTRACTS FROM HER EDITORIAL:

"IT IS 0200 (2 A.M.). I HAVE BEEN LYING AWAKE FOR AN HOUR LISTENING TO THE STEADY, EVEN BREATHING OF THREE OTHER NURSES IN MY TENT. I HAVE BEEN THINKING ABOUT SOME THINGS WE DISCUSSED DURING THE DAY. X X X X

"THE FIRE IS BURNING LOW--I COULDN'T HELP THINKING HOW SIMILAR TO A HUMAN BEING A FIRE IS. IF IT IS ALLOWED TO RUN DOWN TOO LOW AND IF THERE IS A SPARK OF LIFE IN IT, IT CAN BE NURSED BACK. SO CAN A HUMAN BEING. IT IS SLOW. IT IS GRADUAL. IT IS DONE ALL THE TIME IN THESE FIELD HOSPITALS AND IN OTHER HOSPITALS IN THE E.T.O. (EUROPEAN THEATER OF OPERATIONS).

"WE HAD READ SEVERAL ARTICLES IN DIFFERENT MAGAZINES AND PAPERS SENT IN BY GRATEFUL G.I.'S, PRAISING THE WORK OF NURSES AROUND THE COMBAT AREAS. PRAISING US--FOR WHAT? X X X X WE WADE ANKLE-DEEP IN MUD. YOU HAVE TO LIE IN IT. WE ARE RESTRICTED TO OUR IMMEDIATE AREA, A COW PASTURE OR A HAY FIELD, BUT THEN, WHO ISN'T RESTRICTED?

RESTRICTED

"SURE WE ROUGH IT, BUT IN COMPARISON TO THE WAY YOU MEN ARE TAKING IT, WE CAN'T COMPLAIN, NOR DO WE FEEL THAT BOUQUETS ARE DUE US. BUT TO YOU MEN BEHIND GUNS, DRIVING OUR TANKS, FLYING OUR PLANES, SAILING OUR SHIPS, BUILDING BRIDGES, AND TO YOU MEN WHO PAVE THE WAY AND TO MEN WHO ARE LEFT BEHIND--IT IS TO YOU WE DOFF OUR HELMETS. X X X

"GI'S, THIS TIME WE ARE HANDING OUT BOUQUETS. X X X X BUT AFTER TAKING CARE OF SOME OF YOUR BUDDIES, SEEING THEM WHEN THEY ARE BROUGHT IN BLOODY AND DIRTY WITH EARTH AND MUD AND GRIME AND MOST OF THEM SO TIRED X X X IT DOESN'T AMAZE US TO HEAR ONE OF THEM SAY 'HOW'YA BABE?' OR 'HOLY MACKEREL, AN AMERICAN WOMAN!' OR, MOST INDISCREETLY, 'HOW ABOUT A KISS?'

"THOSE SOLDIERS STAY WITH US BUT FOR A SHORT TIME, FROM TEN DAYS TO POSSIBLY TWO WEEKS. WE HAVE LEARNED A GREAT DEAL ABOUT THE AMERICAN SOLDIER AND THE STUFF HE IS MADE OF. THE WOUNDED DO NOT CRY. THEIR BUDDIES COME FIRST. THE PATIENCE AND DETERMINATION THEY SHOW, THE COURAGE AND FORTITUDE THEY HAVE IS SOMETIMES AWESOME TO BEHOLD. IT IS WE WHO ARE PROUD TO BE HERE. ROUGH IT? NO. IT IS A PRIVILEGE TO BE able TO RECEIVE YOU AND A DISTINCTION TO SEE YOU OPEN YOUR EYES AND WITH THAT SWELL AMERICAN GRIN SAY, 'HI'YA, BABE?'"

WHILE THE PRESENT ISSUE IS RELATIVELY MINOR, THE MANNER IN WHICH IT IS RESOLVED MAY HAVE BEARING ON FOLLOWING MATTERS OF MUCH WIDER SCOPE:

1. THE DEGREE TO WHICH THE ALLIED NATIONS WILL PERMIT THE ITALIAN GOVERNMENT TO ASSUME CERTAIN CONTROLS IN LINE WITH THE PROGRAM IMPLIED BY THE RECENT STRIKING OF THE WORD "CONTROL" FROM THE OFFICIAL TITLE OF THE ALLIED COMMISSION.

2. WHETHER THE UNITED STATES AND BRITAIN WIL STRIVE, EITHER BEFORE OR DURING THE PEACE CONFERENCE, TO LOOSEN THE CONTROLS OVER INTERNATIONAL COMMUNICATIONS FACILITIES EXERCISED BY SOME GOVERNMENTS PRIOR TO THE WAR.

3. WHETHER A LOWER RATE AUTHORIZED FOR RCA WILL BECOME A FORERUNNER OF AN EFFORT TO LOWER THE INTERNATIONAL RADIO AND CABLE RATES GENERALLY AS A MEANS OF PROMOTING POST-WAR INTERCOURSE AMONG NATIONS.

THE ALLIED COMMISSION DECLINED TO ELABORATE ON THE CONTROVERSY. IT MADE ON THE BRIEF STATEMENT:

NOV 231944

"RESUMPTION OF ITALIAN CIVIL RADIO AND CABLEGRAM TRAFFIC BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND THE UNITED KINGDOM AND ITALY HAS BEEN TEMPORARILY SUSPENDED PENDING SETTLEMENT OF TECHNICAL DETAILS REGARDING THE DIVISION OF TOLL CHARGES BETWEEN THE THREE PRIVATE COMPANIES--ITALO CABLES AND ITALRADIO, THE BRITISH CABLE AND WIRELESS AND THE AMERICAN RCA. FIFTH ARMY FRONT IN ITALY,NOV.20 (DELAYED)-(AP)--AS BAD OR EVEN WORSE SOMETIMES THAN THE SHATTERING INFERNO OF AN ENEMY BARRAGE OR THE SHATTERING CRACKLE OF MACHINEGUNS IS THE HELL OF AN ENEMY MINEFIELD AT NIGHT.

THAT IS WHAT FRONTLINE INFANTRYMEN SAY AND THEY TELL YOU STORIES OF THE DEATH THAT LURKS UNDER A HANDFUL OF SCATTERED EARTH TO PROVE IT.

TAKE THE NIGHT NOT SO LONG AGO WHEN RELIEF FINALLY CAME TO THE MEN OF THE 34TH DIVISION WHO TOOK THE RUGGED CREST OF BELMONTE AND HELD IT AGAINST REPEATED COUNTERATTACKS. MEN WHO WERE THERE CALL IT TOUGHER THAN CASSINO. RELIEVING FORCES ARRIVED AFTER THEY HAD SURVIVED ONE OF THE HEAVIEST AND MOST PROLONGED ARTILLERY BARRAGES OF THE ITALIAN CAMPAIGN.

IN PLATOONS OR SMALLER GROUPS THE EXHAUSTED GIS MADE THEIR WAY THROUGH THE NIGHT AND RAIN DOWN THE SLIMY SLOPES OF THE HILL TO THE REAR. THE LAST GROUP OF FOUR MEN HEADED BY LT. HARRY HODGKIS OF GARDNER,MASS., A COMPANY COMMANDER, WERE THE LAST TO LEAVE. STAFF SGT. TIM DERRICK OF LONGACRE,W.VA.,LED THE WAY.

NOV 231944

SUDDENLY, AS THEY PICKED THEIR WAY ALONG A TRAIL WHERE JUST A SIMPLE THING LIKE KEEPING IN UPRIGHT POSITIONS WAS DIFFICULT, DERRICK SAID:

"I AM LOST."

THE GROUP SEARCHED FOR FAMILIAR LANDMARKINGS. [illegible]

"THERE IS A ROAD DOWN THERE," SAID HODGKIS.

THEY LEFT THE UNSEARCHED TRAIL AND HEADED FOR THE ROAD. WITHOUT WARNING THERE WERE THREE EXPLOSIONS ALMOST SIMULTANEOUSLY.

"MY FIRST THOUGHT WAS THAT IT WAS ARTILLERY," THE LIEUTENANT SAID, "BUT THEN I SAW THE BOY IN FRONT OF ME AND THE ONE BEHIND AND I KNEW THEY WERE MINES. ONE OF THE MEN HAD LOST ONE FOOT AND HIS OTHER LEG WAS BROKEN. THE OTHER HAD A FOOT BLOWN COMPLETELY OFF. DERRICK WAS ONLY A FEW FEET FROM THE ROAD. HE JUMPED TO THE RETAINING WALL AND MADE THE ROAD SAFELY."

NOV 231944

HODGKIS FROZE IN HIS TRACKS REMAINING WITH THE TWO INJURED MEN. THEY KNEW THAT ANY MOVE WOULD MEAN FURTHER INJURY OR DEATH. HE TOLD THEM TO GET THEIR BELTS AROUND THEIR LEGS.

"I CAN'T, I CAN'T MOVE," THE MAN AHEAD OF HIM SAID. HODGKIS TOSS HIM HIS OWN BELT, AND ASKED THE MAN BEHIND HIM HOW HE WAS.

"OH, I AM ALL RIGHT," THE GI ANSWERED. "I'VE GOT MY SHOELACE AROUND MINE. LET'S GET OUT OF HERE."

HE AND HODGKIS BEGAN TO PROBE AROUND THEM WITH THEIR KNIVES FO OTHER MINES. THEY WERE EVERYWHERE, SOME LESS THAN A FOOT FROM THEM.

DESPITE HIS MISSING FOOT HE CONTINUED TO CLEAR A PATH AND [illegible] DRAGGED HIMSELF OUT.

WHEN THE MEDICOS ARRIVED ONE OF THEM STAPPED ON A MINE WHICH HAD BEEN WASHED INTO THE ROAD BY THE HEAVY RAINS. HOWEVER ANOTHER MEDICO CRAWLED THROUGH THE MINEFIELD FOR THE MAN WITH THE DOUBLE INJURIES.

"WE'VE GOT TO GET THAT MAN OUT OF THERE," HE SAID SIMPLY.

NEW DELHI, NOV. 22-(AP)-THE REMOVAL OF GEN.HO YING CHIN AS CHINESE MINISTER OF WAR WAS REGARDED HERE TODAY AS A BRIGHT DEVELOPMENT IN CHINESE AFFAIRS.

HIS SUCCESSOR, GEN.CHEN CHENG, IS CONSIDERED BY GEN.JOSEPH W. STILWELL TO BE ONE OF THE BRIGHTEST MILITARY MEN IN CHINA.

THE CHINESE CABINET SHAKEUP APPEARED TO OBSERVERS HERE TO BE AN EFFORT TO RESCUE THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT FROM A SITUATION BROUGHT ABOUT NOT ONLY BY THE CLASH WITH THE AMERICANS WHICH RESULTED IN THE OUSTING OF GEN.STILWELL AS AMERICAN COMMANDER IN THE CHINA-INDIA-BURMA THEATER, BUT BY THE MILITARY DEFEATS IN CENTRAL CHINA AND THE SUBSEQUENT ADVERSE EFFECT ON THE COUNTRY'S CURRENCY.

CHUNGKING, NOV. 22-(AP)-DONALD NELSON, HERE TO EXPAND CHINA'S WAR PRODUCTION, TOLD A PRESS CONFERENCE TODAY THAT AMERICAN PRODUCTION SPECIALISTS WHO CAME WITH HIM HAD BEEN SYSTEMATICALLY INSPECTING CHINESE MILLS AND FACTORIES.

"THEIR FIRST REPORTS SHOW THEY HAVE BEEN FAVORABLY IMPRESSED BY THE ABILITY OF THE CHINESE INDUSTRIAL MANAGERS AND BY THE GOOD USE WHICH THEY ARE MAKING OF THEIR LIMITED EQUIPMENT," HE SAID.

NELSON PREDICTED THE COMBINED REPORTS OF CHINESE AND AMERICAN PRODUCTION MEN WORKING UNDER THE NEW CHINESE WAR PRODUCTION BOARD "SHOULD BRING ABOUT AN EARLY AND SUBSTANTIAL INCREASE IN THE OUTPUT OF KEY WAR MATERIALS."

NELSON SAID CHINA FACED MANY DIFFICULTIES, NOTABLY "TERRIBLE INFLATION," AND TREMENDOUS TRANSPORTATION PROBLEMS. HE SAID HE WAS SHOCKED WHEN HE LEARNED THE NUMBER OF TRUCKS IN OPERATION.

HE ANNOUNCED THAT HOWARD COONLEY, AMERICAN MANUFACTURER WHO CAME TO CHINA WITH HIM, WOULD ACT AS HIS DEPUTY IN ADVISING THE CHINESE GOVERNMENT ON WAR PRODUCTION AFTER NELSON RETURNED TO THE UNITED STATES.

63,388 JAPANESE KILLED AND 3,267 CAPTURED IN THE SAIPAN-GUAM-TINIAN-ANGAUR-PELELIU ACTIONS WHICH BEGAN JUNE 14 AND THE LAST OF WHICH OFFICIALLY ENDED IN SEPTEMBER.

THE TOTALS INCLUDED 6,962 ENEMY DEAD AND 1,857 ENEMY PRISONERS, ALL KILLED AND CAPTURED IN ENDLESS PATROL ACTIONS ON THE VARIOUS ISLANDS FOLLOWING THE ENDING OF ORGANIZED ENEMY RESISTANCE.

ARMY AIR FORCES HEADQUARTERS, Pacific Ocean Areas, Nov. 24—(AP) A large force of B-29's, probably the greatest number yet to attack Japan, bombed industrial targets in Tokyo today, as the 20th's Thanksgiving day message to the Japanese.

Targets included vital hydroelectrical plants and dams in the Tokyo area; Tokyo's inflammable industrial district; shipping, shipbuilding yards and repair docks in and around Yokohama bay; airfields in the entire target area.

Vast Air Fleet Hit Tokyo From Base In Saipan

Gen. O'Donnel of Queens, Former West Pointer, Leader of B-29 Assault

By Vern Haugland

SAIPAN, Nov. 24 (Friday) (AP).—The United States launched a mighty aerial weapon—the brand-new 21st bomber command of the 20th Army Air Force—straight at the heart of Japan today.

A great task force of B-29 Superfortresses thundered into the dawn at breath-taking one minute intervals from this island which five months ago belonged to Japan.

The giant planes doglegged in the sky to form patterns of nine or twelve as they headed northwestward toward the most heavily guarded target in the Far East—Toyko itself, some 1,500 miles from this base.

Leading the entire formation was thirty-eight-year-old Brigadier General Emmett O'Donnel, of Jamaica, N. Y., former West Point football coach better known as "Rosie." He personally is helping avenge the losses the Americans suffered while he, then a major, was piloting B-17 bombers in the Philippines, Java and Australia early in the war.

"It's Rosie O'Donnel against Tokyo Rose," an exuberant officer said.

The B-29 flyers took off knowing the enemy was alerted by recent practice missions against Truk and the Bonin Islands and by photographic reconnaissance over Tokyo.

But they expected to rudely surprise the Japanese from the standpoint of the impressive scale of this initial major combat mission, engineered under the watchful eye of the new organization's brilliant youngish commander—Brigadier General Haywood S. Hansell, jr., of San Antonio, Tex., known as "Possum."

Ten years ago Hansell was a member of the famed aerial acrobatic team—"the three men on a flying trapeze"—at the national air races in Cleveland.

Hansell flew the first B-29 to Hawaii and Saipan and on practice raids in this area, but he was grounded for the Tokyo assaults.

A photo reconnaisance B-29, which photographed Tokyo on Nov. 1 and several times since then discovered the Japanese capital was ringed by elaborate airfields, packed with planes. The entire Yokohama area, adjacent to the sprawling capital, bristles with antiaircraft guns, which put up a most intense barrage.

On the photo plane's third trip to Tokyo a number of days ago, 100 Japanese fighters rose but failed to attack. Earlier, smaller formations of fighters also declined to engage the lone B-29, possibly because they were unable to obtain the desired speeds at that altitude. The fighters also may have been handicapped because their engines overheated. This was an early handicap to the Superforts, now largely overcome.

Some of the huge planes took off from the Isely airfield, which was constructed on the comparatively small Aslito field, the main Japanese airbase in the Marianas.

Isely is one of a series of Superfortress bases already built or under construction at Tinian and Guam, as well as Saipan.

Indicative of the scope of future operations against Japan, Hansell warned that, despite the large size of this initial raid, The B-29 attacks must be regarded as still in the experimental stage in this theater.

Today's raiders knew they would be returning after dark with little fuel. They also knew they must avoid Japanese-held islands in the Marianas and Bonins. En route they had to buck strong westerly winds, even though the Japanese autumn and winter seasons provide the best flying weather.

The mission also involved a difficult navigational problem. Flying north on the sun doesn't provide the fix that the stars give. A navigator could drift 300 miles east or west of his course without knowing it.

The 21st Bomber Command is the second unit of the 20th Air Force to be announced. Hansell said the organization thus is able to take advantage of six months' experience gained by the 20th Command, operating in China, 2,700 miles away.

B-29 service organizations established themselves in the Marianas soon after the islands were seized. The Pacific division of the Army Air Forces Air Transport Command, under Brigadier General William Ord Ryan, assembled a huge fleet of C-54 Douglas Skymasters specifically for the tremendous air movement of supplies and personnel for the new Superfortress command.

New airfields on the United States west coast were turned over to the Air Transport Command. At intermediate Pacific bases, runways were lengthened and strengthened. The A. T. C. had charge of servicing, maintaining, housing and feeding the crews.

O'Donnel said ground echelons dug in and put up their own tents, cleared the canefields, built roads and even helped rid Saipan of hordes of flies and mosquitoes. Today, it is unnecessary to use mosquito nets on the island, and there are no flies whatsoever.

Army engineers built the airdromes in less than five months in a major engineering achievement of the Pacific war. Engineers tackled Aslito field on the sixth day after the invasion.

They had Thunderbolt fighters landing within twenty-four hours, and built the B-29 runways while the fields were being used by bombers, fighters and transport planes.

Engineers built a three-lane, black-topped highway direct from the coral quarries to the field. This "great haul" road is barred to all but coral truck traffic, and protected at crossings by regular metropolitan red and green stoplights.

Announced In Washington

Washington, Friday, Nov. 24 (AP). Tokyo was attacked today by Superfortresses in a daylight mission launched from bases in the Mariana Islands, the War Department announced.

The mission was conducted by a newly established 21st Bomber Command operating from bases in Saipan approximately 1,500 miles to the south and east.

In Daylight Operation

The text of the War Department statement:

"A sizeable task force of B-29 aircraft of the 20th Air Force today attacked industrial targets in Tokyo, Gen. H. H. Arnold, in his capacity as commanding general of the 20th Air Force, announced at the War Department.

"The mission was a daylight operation by the newly-established 21st bomber command, under command of Brig. Gen. H. S. Hansell, Jr., from bases on Saipan.

"A communique covering this operation will be issued when further details are available."

Arnold, in a statement, said that the 20th Air Force "today rocked the heart of Japan with bombs from a mighty ne wtask force of B-29 aircraft based on Saipan."

Proves Pacific Island Value

The attack, he added, "should be convincing proof that these far Pacific islands captured by our army and navy at great cost in men and materiel, have been put to the greatest possible use.

Tokyo's war industries have been badly hurt by a blow made possible by the Americans who fought and died for the Marianas. Now, as our American factories feed the voracious appetite of our B-29's with replacements and bombs, we will pound Japan's war machine out of existence."

The Air Forces' chief added that "no matter where the Japanese may try to hide their factories, we will seek them out and destroy them. We are going to do just that. Japan has sowed the wind, now let it reap the whirlwind."

Reports To Roosevelt

General Arnold, in a personal report to President Roosevelt on the new raid, said:

"Our air force returned to Tokyo. A task force of B-29 Superfortresses attacked the Japanese capital from bases in the Marianas.

"This operation is in no sense a hit-and-run raid. It is a calculated extension of our air power. Combined operations of the navy and the army in the Pacific have won these island bases from which our B-29s now may strike at will into the enemy homeland. No part of the Japanese Empire is now out of our range, no war factory too remote to feel our bombs. The battle for Japan has been joined.

"Battle Just Beginning"

"The systematic demolition of Japan's war production, begun six months ago from China bases, henceforth will be carried out with decisive vigor, softening up the Japanese heart for the ultimate invasion by combined United Nations land, sea and air forces.

"This will not be accomplished in a short time. The battle is just beginning. But today we opened against Tokyo an attack which will be carried on relentlessly from the air until the day of land-sea invasion."

More than two years have elapsed between the first and second bombing of the enemy capital. The first attack was made by 16 medium bombers launched from the deck of the carrier Hornet on April 18, 1942.

That flight was commanded by the then Lieut. Col. James Doolittle, now a lieutenant general and commander of the Eighth Air Force in Europe.

The civilized world was disturbed later by reports that some of the flyers who participated in the first raid had been executed by the Japanese.

The work of building the airfields in the Marianas was started at almost the moment the last organized enemy reseistance ceased in those islands now held by the United States. Saipan was secured on July 8 and Guam a few weeks later.

The 21st Bomber Command was activated on March 8, this year and started training at Smoky Hill air base, Selina, Kansas, a few weeks later.

Harmon Named Deputy

The announcement on the Tokyo attack also disclosed the appointment of Lieut. Gen. Millard Harmon as deputy commander of the 20th air force which is headed by Arnold.

In a statement Harmon asserted that "we have brought Japan within range of our Superfortresses from the east as well as from the west. No part of the homeland of Japan is now safe from land-based air attacks. We can hit where and when we choose."

In addition to the shortened distance for operations against Japan the new bases in the Mariannas have a great logistics advantage over operations from the China bases.

One of the big handicaps that had to be overcome in operating from China was supply—all fuel, bombs and other material had to be flown in from India until extension of an oil line into Burma shortened some of the supply route.

The existence of the 20th Bomber Comand was announced at the time of the first B-29 strike against Japanese territory—the steel works at Yawata, on Kyushu, on June 15.

With few exceptions, all missions of the 20th Bomber Command were flown from bases in China up to those reported through November 21. The attack on the enemy-held oil industry at Palembang, Sumatra, on August 10, was launched from bases outside China. B-29's attacking naval installations at the former British base of Singapore on November 5 took off from India.

In five months of operations from the China and India bases, the 20th Bomber Command's targets included Yawata, Sasebo, and Omura on Kyushu, in Japan's home island groups; Mukden, Ansnan, Dairen, Laoyao, Loyang, Kaieng, Nanking, and Shanghai in Japanese dominated China; Bangkok, Thailand; Rangoon in Burma; Palembang, Singapore and Formosa.

SUPERFORTS CAN CARRY TEN TONS OF BOMBS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23—(AP) A Superfortress can carry at least ten tons of bombs.

The Army Air forces revealed this today in announcing that a B-29 would be on exhibition at Washington this weekend.

With the plane will be shown supplies and equipment including a "bomb load showing the largest load carried so far by a B-29, forty 500 pound bombs," the announcement said.

The gasoline load of the plane "will be demonstrated by one hundred and sixty 50-gallon drums," the AAF said. This would indicate that the gasoline load of the giant plane is at least 8,000 gallons.

The announcement did not make clear whether the bomb load was possible with the 8,000 gallon fuel load (which would weigh 18 tons) or only with a minimum of fuel for comparatively short operations.

On November 3, the 20th Air force announced that a mission of B29's hitting Rangoon, Burma, carried "the largest bomb loads per airplane so far known to have been lifted in aerial warfare." The Rangoon strike was launched from bases in India, which would have made the mission about an 800-mile run.

REAL AIR BATTLE OF JAPAN IS SEEN BEGINNING SOON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23—(AP) There are increasing signs that the real air battle of Japan is now beginning, with America's B-29 strategic bombing force undertaking the destruction of the Japanese air force.

Along with the invasion of the Philippines this means that the strategy for finally crushing the Pacific enemy is going into full development—even though there may be 12 to 18 months more of fighting in the Pacific and Asia.

Four Main Objectives

This strategy has at least four main objectives:

1. To knock out the Japanese fleet. This was largely accomplished during the sea battle of the Philippines last month. But the Japanese will try to repair as many as possible of their ships.

2. To knock out the Japanese air force. The Nipponese have suffered enormous losses; the rate of attrition has been running 5 to 1 in favor of united fliers. But the enemy continues to restock his blasted air bases because his plane production capacity has not been even seriously hurt. Its destruction must be the first great purpose of the strategic bombing attacks on Japan.

NOV 24 1944

3. To exploit the invasion of the Philippines by conquering Luzon, from which the southern half of Japan's empire can be cut off from the northern half. This will also afford bases for the next seaborne invasions tightening the ring of American held islands around Japan.

4. To invade China, Japan or both and finally defeat the Japanese army wherever it can be found.

The Japanese High command can now see this pattern as clearly as anybody else and has begun to make counter-moves. The first was the ill-fated attempt to destroy the Leyte landing in the Philippines by a fleet action, which precipitated the big battle. Failing in that, the Japanese poured reinforcements into Leyte and obviously into Luzon also. This slows down the Philippines campaign but speeds up destruction of the Japanese army.

The latest counter-move was the enemy's fighter-plane challenge to the B-29 raid on Kyushu island, Japanese homeland, Tuesday. Significantly, a B-29 reconnaissance flight over the main island of Honshu was reported again today by Tokyo. Since it is to be expected that the advances of American forces in the Pacific will bring a steady increase in raids on Japan itself, it is evident that we are witnessing the beginning of the air battle of Japan, comparable to the air battle of Germany in which the Nazi air force was whittled down prior to the invasion of Europe.

Jap Desperation Seen In Blows At B-29s

Washington, Nov. 23 (AP)—Japanese desperation vs. American determination, say military observers, is what's behind the attacks Nip fighter planes are risking against the big and heavily armed B-29 bombers.

The third Superfortress smash in a month against the vast Omura Aircraft Works on the homeland island of Kyushu supplied the proof Tuesday, they said.

Jap Reasoning

This is their reasoning:

It is virtually suicidal for a fighter to tangle with the terrific B-29. On the other hand, the Japanese just couldn't stand by and see their production facilities smashed.

So they ordered up strong fighter opposition and provided perhaps the greatest B-29 battle of the war. Two or three of the giant bombers were lost to Japanese pilots who got close enough to turn the trick.

The Japanese had tried closing in before with disastrous results. The loss Tuesday of 20 to 39 fighter craft and damaging of 22 others surely was expected in advance and counted worth the risk. Therefore, Japanese production must be feeling the pinch.

No Tricks Up Sleeves

The enemy had no tricks up his sleeve so far as the observers knew; no change in fighting technique; no aircraft improvement or discovery of some defense weakness in the B-29.

Enemy fighters had no part in previous B-29 losses which were due to anti-aircraft fire.

The new effort may have been an experiment, it was reasoned, and, if so, results were not encouraging.

A survey of communiques of the 20th Bomber Command showed 13 Superfortresses previously lost to enemy action, presumably ack-ack, or unaccounted for since it was organized June 15.

Japs Report Flight Over ...

San Francisco, Nov. 23 (AP) — A Superfortress made a reconnaissance flight today over the Ise Bay coastal area of the main Japanese island of Honshu, operating "apparently from a Marianas base," the Tokyo radio said.

The report, like that of a similar flight last week, was wholly unconfirmed. Ise Bay, on the Pacific side of the island, is the site of the heavily industrialized Nagova section.

ALLIES SEAL OFF ESCAPE ROUTE FOR 70,000 GERMANS

Fiercest Battle Since Invasion Rages into Seventh Day Near Cologne.

ENEMY FALLS BACK

U. S. Seventh Army Rips Through Saverne Gap to Close Death Trap.

Beatmer

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Nov. 23.—(AP) French armored forces fought their way toward the center of Strasbourg tonight after an 18-mile dash to the Rhine which sealed off the overland escape route for an estimated 70,000 troops of the German 19th army, now pinned against the almost bridgeless river.

The second spectacular Rhine breakthrough in five days, imperiling nearly one-seventh of the forces the Germans are believed to have committed on the Western front, came as the bitterest battle since the invasion thundered into its seventh day far to the north on the Cologne plain.

As the French Second Armored division pressed into the outskirts of Strasbourg against light resistance, the First French armored division more than 50 miles to the south seized Battenheim, four miles north of Mulhouse, and pushed on north up the Rhine.

Troops Close on Nazis

This was the southern jaw of a giant pincers reaching around the broken enemy Vosges mountain line, with the northern jaw formed by the French of the U. S. Seventh army which had sped through Saverne gap.

Although at Strasbourg they are farther from Berlin than their American and British Allies fighting inside the Reich in the Aachen area, the French advance to Strasbourg is the easternmost penetration on the Western front.

They are 370 miles from the German capital as the crow flies and over 400 miles from their landing point in southern France.

To the north in Germany, American and British troops fighting northeast of Geilenkirchen reported the opposition was as bitter as anything they had encountered since Normandy. The Germans counterattacked repeatedly in the areas of Hoven and Beeck on the northwest and southern approaches to Wurm.

The U. S. Third army cleared Oberleuken and advanced a mile in the Kesslingen area and increased its holdings on German soil east of Luxembourg. Other Third army forces gained two to four miles on a 25-mile front southeast of Metz where German resistance was in the nature of a rearguard action and nothing like the fierce fighting farther north.

NOV 24 1944

(More than 3,000 prisoners, including two generals, and much enemy equipment were taken by the French Second Armored division which drove into Strasbourg, a field dispatch said tonight. The western part of Strasbourg was reported cleared after stiff fighting.

(Wes Gallagher, Associated Press war correspondent with the U. S. Ninth army, reported tonight the capture of Pattern, an industrial town just northwest of Julich, representing a gain of about three miles from previously reported positions in this area).

Nazis Mass Boats

French and American forces were charging through three of the main Vosges passes, keeping up the frontal pressure, and the Germans were massing boats and barges along the Rhine in an effort to save all those that bomb-damaged bridges cannot handle.

Other forces of the Seventh, swinging north, joined up with elements of the U. S. Third army for a concerted push against the Saar industrial basin and the palatinate, lying to the east.

The Third army, battering forward two to four miles along a 35-mile front, reached the Saar border at two new undisclosed points, drove to within 15 miles of the stronghold of Saarbrucken, and pressed a mile deeper into Germany to bring 30 square miles under its control.

But for the U. S. First and Ninth and the British Second armies, locked knee deep in mud in furious battles on this Thanksgiving Day at the approaches to the Ruhr and Rhineland, it was hard and bitter slugging, yard by yard.

The Germans threw more of their new Tiger monster tanks against the U. S. Ninth army, which have knocked out more than 75 pieces of armor on this front.

In a deluge of rain—lashed horizontal by driving winds—the Ninth fought into Bourheim, less than two miles southeast of Julich, Koslar, about the same distance west, and Barmen, two and a half miles northwest. No more than 200 yards ahead was the Roer itself, and 25 miles beyond lies the Rhineland industrial city of Cologne.

The Germans had dug in their great tanks, or kept them lurking in the ruined villages nearby, and were employing more and more 170-MM artillery.

Yanks Enter Weisweiler

In a two-mile thrust beyond fallen Eschweiler, the U. S. First army edged into Weisweiler, 26 miles west of Cologne, but the Doughboys were heavily beset on both the north and south.

To the south, they were fighting tree by tree through the last of the gloomy Hurtgen forest after throwing off two early-morning counterattacks, one which was led by tanks.

A battle of tank against tank raged around the hamlet of Putzlohn, just north of Eschweiler, which the Doughboys took this morning, lost to a counterattack, then regained. In 48 hours the town changed hands five times.

The Germans were fighting to keep this crack army from crashing through to the Rhineland, and an American officer declared that "there just wasn't anything in World War one to compare with this, and the boys haven't fought so hard in all the invasion."

The British Second army on the northern edge of this front inside Germany seized Hoven and its strategic heights three miles north of Geilenkirchen, while other forces fought through Wurm, three miles northwest of Geilenkirchen.

From 15 to 20 miles to the northwest of this front, the Germans were pulling out of all Holland west of the Maas river in the face of other elements of the British Second, which drove to within three miles of the Mass stronghold of Venlo, delayed only by thick mine fields.

(German accounts said without Allied confirmation that the British had opened a big-scale assault along the Maas, and were believed about to strike northward toward the Ruhr from positions around Nijmegen, near the northern terminal of the Siegfried Line).

A front dispatch said the British cut a new gap into the German Maas bridgehead positions by taking Horst, seven miles northwest of Venlo, further imperiling the enemy stand at the threshold of the Ruhr.

French Tanks Lead Drive

The spectacular dash through Saverne pass to Strasbourg was spearheaded by elements of Brig. Gen. Jacques Le Clerc's Second French Armored division—which led the Allies into Paris—now fighting with the U. S. Seventh army as part of the 15th corps.

The lightning advance placed the Allies on three sides of Col. Gen. Johannes Blaskowitz's 19th army, and the U. S. Seventh and French First armies were putting the squeeze on an estimated six to ten German divisions, estimated to total 70,000 men.

The French on the south who made the first breakthrough earlier this week reached Battenheim despite two counterattacks, and at that point were 18 miles south of Colmar.

Between these two forces, the Germans along more than 50 miles of the rain-swollen Rhine must escape over three bridges and by boats, barges and pontoons if they are to escape entrapment.

As far as is known, the great road and railway bridge over the Rhine at Strasbourg still stands.

Bad weather kept Allied air power from smashing at this mass-crossing attempt, reminiscent of the one forced on the Germans at the Seine after they lost the battle of Normandy.

The Americans were half way through Saales pass, south of the Caverne pass, and French and Americans were well into St. Marie, Bonhomme and Schulcht passes stretching down through the Vosges toward Belfort.

2 Villages Entered In Push For Cologne

London, Nov. 23 (AP)—American Ninth Army troops drove through deep mud and German steel into the Roer Valley villages of Koslar and Barmen today in a slow advance toward Cologne, 26 miles away, on the Rhine.

Both towns are north of the Hitler superhighway from Aachen to Berlin and it was along this wide concrete road that the Germans had massed the best and most of their troops in the west. Below the road, Ninth Army troops entered Bourheim, Pattern and Lohn to form a battering ram six miles wide and pointed directly at the bomb-ravaged Rhineland arsenal city of 768,000.

18 Miles From Strasbourg

A cold rain driven by gales added to the miseries of the doughboys. It denied air support for the columns of infantry, tanks and cannon moving through the thickly fortified zone before the Rhine. The Roer and its affluents were flooded.

On the Allied southern flank, American infantry and French tanks fanned out on the flat Rhine plain less than 18 miles from Strasbourg, capital of Alsace-Lorraine, in a complete breakthrough of resistance so spotty that the crack Allied assault teams were opposed by some Nazis who had been in the army less than a month. One company was composed entirely of deaf Germans.

Air Power Cut

The implication was obvious. Marshal von Runstedt was giving up Lorraine and doubtless Alsace, too, to save what he could from the debacle of the Vosges Mountain front, where it was estimated a few days ago that 70,000 troops of the enemy's 19th Army were nailed against the Rhine and caught between Allied forces less than 60 miles apart through the Saverne and Belfort gaps. French in the south advanced four miles from Mulhouse to Battenheim.

The soupy weather of rain, snow [illegible] fog kept Allied air power executing terrible slaughter. whole Allied air force was grou[illegible] ed yesterday except for a few s[illegible] ties in the south.

The Aachen front was a series of deep pools of mud and water in which American tanks and artillery slugged it out with new King Tiger tanks at point-blank range for the Roer river city of Julich, a mile and a half east of Koslar. The Tigers bearing six-inch armor, lurked in ruined towns on the Allied side of the Roer. Infantrymen and tank specialists said the battle before Julich was the fiercest struggle they had fought in this war.

British Near Venlo

British forces in Holland moved to within two miles of Venlo in the great bend of the Maas (Meuse) river, captured the highway town of Amerika and pushed through the worst minefields and mud encountered since the early days of the invasion in Normandy. Berlin said Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery had opened a major attack toward the Ruhr arsenal after a ten-hour artillery barrage.

In the sector beyond Metz, United States Third Army forces advanced another mile into Germany.

The United States First Army, which captured the battered industrial city of Eschweiler yesterday, mopped up remaining opposition in near-by Durwiss and inched slowly forward in the dense and gloomy Hurtgen Forest against intense rifle, machine-gun, mortar and artillery fire.

Infantry of the First Army thrust two miles forward to the outskirts of Weisweiler, due east of Eschweiler, before dawn.

Counterattacks Repulsed

Southeast of Weisweiler, near Heistern, American infantry threw off two early morning German counterattacks. One was by infantry and tanks; the other by infantry only.

The battle in the north of the Cologne plain was described in front dispatches as the most severe since the breakthrough at St. Lo. Tanks, artillery and infantry all were violently engaged.

On the First Army's left, the Ninth Army overran several villages in a slow advance, but encountered dug-in Tiger tanks near Koslar. Resistance stiffened all along the Ninth Army front. Lieut. Gen. William H. Simpson's men destroyed seven tanks. Infantry in the Geilenkirchen sector captured a hamlet two miles northwest of Wurm and was fighting slowly into Wurm and Beeck.

Berlin Reports Heavy Barrage

Berlin declared that 1,000 Allied guns had opened up from the Ninth and First Army sectors while "fighter-bombers and tanks in numbers beggaring description attack us ceaselessly."

In a field dispatch, Associated Press Correspondent J. W. Gallagher said the Germans were wildly firing both V-1 flying bombs and V-2 rockets at Ninth Army rear areas, a development he said was "taken as an indication that the Nazis now are using everything they have in an effort to halt the advance of the Ninth and First armies threatening the vital Ruhr."

Above Geilenkirchen the British Second Army took Hoven and won high ground beyond Gereonsweiler in battling toward the Roer, first major terrain obstacle in the fortified Cologne plain.

Advance In Maas Sector

British troops cleaning out the last German pockets against the

Maas (Meuse) in Holland captured Baarlo in an advance on the threshold of the industrial Ruhr through oozing black mud. The bulk of the Germans were believed pulled back across the river, leaving only rearguards to delay the British advance upon Venlo. One British column moved more than a mile beyond captured Maasbree in conditions described thus by a 21st Army group spokesman:

"The going is absolutely shocking. The Germans planted masses and masses of mines all over the place. It's nothing but mud and mines, mines and mud.

Victors of Metz, where five isolated outlying forts held out, the United States Third Army men pushed another mile into Germany within 15 miles of the sprawling coal and steel city of Saarbrucken, a major rail hub. The Tenth Armored Division moved forward to Kesslingen, extending tank force control to 30 square miles of the Reich. Infantry of the Third was 14 miles due east of Metz, plunging toward the Rhine against reinforced German defenses.

Artillery Checks Drive

The Third Army made new advances inside Germany in the Ounsdorf area. Heavy artillery checked progress west of Merzig. The towns of Rohrbach, Angweiler, Bisping and Mittersheim were reached in the Dieuze area.

Other units drove north through the Maginot Line beyond Bambuderstroff, six miles from the German border.

A field dispatch reported that mechanized cavalry forces had straightened the southern end of the Third Army front with a gain of several miles and linked up with the left flank of the advancing United States Seventh Army. An infantry advance of four miles straightened the Third Army lines 14 miles east of Metz.

Hopes prevailed in the south for the destruction of a large segment of Field Marshal General Johannes Blaskowitz's 19th Army.

North From Mulhouse

The French First Army continued it advance through Alsace on Colmar, thrusting north through the Rhine Valley from captured Mulhouse. Strong pockets of Germans still fought in the eastern outlet of the Belfort Gap, but Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's communique said their counterattacks had been contained.

Another force of French armor and American Seventh Army infantry provided the upper arm of a terrific squeeze on the survivors of the German 19th Army by crashing through the lower Vosges before Saverne, in the northern corridor to the Rhine and Strasbourg.

The French Second Armored Division took Weithersweiler and Birkenwald, in the hills, then closed in to take Saverne from the north and south. The American 44th Infantry, formerly the New Jersey National Guard, joined them and today the team was pressing forward toward the German frontier, the communique said.

It appeared that in the Saverne sector, as in the extreme south, the French would be first to the Rhine.

"All On Same Team"

"We don't care who does the job so long as it's done," declared Lieut. Col. Herbert Snyder, of Cincinnati, Ohio, the 44th's intelligence chief. "We're all on the same team, you know."

A reconnaissance pilot declared the Germans were falling back in confusion from the Saverne area toward Strasbourg.

Between the flying wings of Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers' Sixth Army group (the American Seventh and French First armies) offensive in the Vosges; other units took the charred ruins of St. Die, which the Germans had burned in retreat. Others rolled up extensive gains east of the Meurthe river.

2 Generals Taken at Strasbourg

ALLIED SIXTH ARMY GROUP HEADQUARTERS, France, Nov 23 (AP)—More than 3,000 prisoners, including two generals, and much enemy equipment were taken by the French Second Armored Division, which drove into Strasbourg on the French bank of the Rhine today.

The western part of Strasbourg was reported cleared tonight after stiff fighting.

The German generals captured following the spectacular breakthrough at Saverne Gap were Maj. Gen. Bruhn, commander of the 553d Infantry Division, and Gen. Werner von Gilsa, commander of the Eighty-ninth Infantry Corps.

Nazis Holding Rhine Bastion at Swiss Frontier

French Shelling Huningue, Just Inside Own Border, as S. S. Troops Hang On

AT THE FRENCH-SWISS-GERMAN FRONTIER, Nov. 23 (AP).—French artillery is shelling without pause the German-held town of Huningue, just inside France. Thousands of Nazi S. S. (Elite Guard) troops are reported to have been ordered to fight to the last man there to prevent the Allies from reaching the Rhine at this strategic point.

With the arrival of reinforcements, the French were expected to loose a full-scale attack on the town and send thousands more refugees streaming into Switzerland. The French hold St. Louis only about a mile from Huningue. People at the frontier can hear the French heavy guns roar in Alsace and seconds later see the shells smash into the battered German village of Loerrach, only a few hundred yards away.

Throughout last night the artillery duel raged at the very outskirts of neutral but militantly ready Basel. Many Swiss stood on hills overlooking their own brightly lighted city and watched the flash of the French guns.

Occasionally a German gun answered, but there was only silence from the mighty German fortress of Istein, five miles northeast of Basel. That fortress, hewn from the solid rock and controlling the lower Alsace approaches to the Rhine, has not lived up to its reputation as the German Verdun.

If it had done so it could have blasted Mulhouse, St. Louis and other Alsatian towns into rubble. Some observers believe Istein's big guns were dismantled long ago and sent to the Atlantic wall.

All last night, ambulances shuttled wounded French and Germans to hospitals in Basel.

SAVERNE FALLS

SIXTH ARMY GROUP HEADQUARTERS, France, Nov. 23—(AP) The U. S. Seventh army's 15th corps, attacking from the west and east, today captured Phalsburg, four miles west of Saverne. It was one of the enemy's last defense zones at the entrance to Saverne gap. The French scored further gains north of Mulhouse and in the Belfort gap and south Vosges.

REDS RESUME SLOVAK DRIVE

Gain Up To 16 Miles And Retake Csap Rail Junction

London, Nov. 23 (AP)—The Red army resumed its offensive in Czechslovakia west of Ungvar today, grinding through rain and mud for gains of as much as 16 miles on a 25-mile front. At the same time the Russians recaptured the famous wine center of Tokaj in northern Hungary.

The operations by Marshal Ivan Petrov's Fourth Ukrainian army in Slovakia and Marshal Rodion Malinovsky's Second Ukrainian Army in Hungary gave the Russians a virtually continuous active front of about 55 miles stretching across the frontier northeast from Tokaj to Sobrance, a town ten miles northwest of Ungvar.

Again Take Rail Junction

In the fresh drive in Slovakia Petrov's army again seized the railway junction of Csap (Cop), which has changed hands several times in recent weeks, and occupied more than 30 other populated places.

The offensive apparently was aimed at the big highway and railway hub of Kassa (Kosice), approximately 40 miles west of the fighting today. Sobrance is on the main highway leading there from Ungvar, capital of the Carpatho-Ukraine.

A chain of hills about 800 feet high must be crossed to reach Kassa, but once this is accomplished the Russians would have practically a straight front from Miskolc, the northern Hungarian rail center, into Poland.

Strike Due West

In today's fighting Soviet forces smashed due west of Ungvar 16 miles to Budkovce.

The Russian communique said more than 3,000 German and Hungarian prisoners were taken in the fighting north and northwest of Csap and also announced the capture of more than 2,500 of the enemy in two days of battle in Hungary. Moscow said this brought the total of prisoners taken in Hungary since November 8 to 14,470.

The Russians' announcement of the recapture of Tokaj came a day after the Germans had said they had evacuated the famous wine town and a few hours later than a Romanian communique which said Romanian troops and Soviet forces had moved in.

Take Town East Of Miskolc

Moscow also said Tarcal, three miles west of Tokaj and 25 east of Miskolc, was taken during the day. This indicated that Malinovsky, already besieging Miskolc from the south, might soon be pounding the city from the east.

There was not fresh report in the communique concerning the fighting for the Hungarian capital of Budapest.

A Russian war correspondent at the front, however, said fugitives from Budapest told of the capital being in an uproar, with barricades going up in the streets and demolitions under way. They reported the puppet Government of Premier Ferenc Szalasi had crossed the Danube into the Buda section of the city. Other European radios claimed Szalasi and his clique had fled Budapest.

Tells Of Danube Crossing

Col. Ernst von Hammer, German radio commentator, said strong Soviet forces had succeeded in crossing the eastern branch of the Danube below Budapest and was taking a firm hold on the island of Csepel.

Moscow's communique said three heavily fortified places on the Island of Saare, guarding the entrance to the Gulf of Riga, were captured by the Russians and that a German garrison on the island's Sworbe peninsula, jutting to the south had been pressed back against the sea.

The war bulletin also told of a naval battle off the peninsula in which the Red Banner Baltic Fleet sank a Nazi torpedo boat Monday and said aircraft of the fleet sank a 4,000-ton enemy transport.

After a sudden Soviet surge in Latvia, reported by the Germans, the Russians apparently have slackened their pressure there.

Rain And Mud Slow Russ Drive

Moscow, Nov. 23 (AP)—Russian assault forces inched closer today to the Hungarian communications strongpoints of Hatvan, Eger and Miskolc in hand-to-hand fighting along the 85-mile battle line northeast of Budapest.

Chilly rain and deep mud slowed Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's offensive, but the Soviet communique listed six villages captured and 43 German tanks knocked out against fierce counterattacks by Hungarian and SS (Elite Guard) Nazi units.

Nazi Defense Vigorous

Front dispatches, emphasizing the vigor of the Nazi defense, reported 12 counterattacks were repulsed at Heviz-Gyor, a town just south of the Budapest-Hatvan railway captured yesterday by the Russians.

The Soviet communique said further gains were made in the area of fallen Gyongyos, stronghold in the foothills of the Matra Mountains, from which Red army tanks were fanning out in the huge sweep around Budapest toward Czechoslovakia and invasion routes to southern Germany.

Hundreds Of Russ Liberated

Russian front-line dispatches said conquered Hungary was replete with contrasts of squalid villages and luxurious castles and claimed that hundreds of Soviet citizens were liberated from years of forced labor on Magyar estates.

Other published reports here said Hungarians had been killing Russian wounded and torturing captured Red army nurses.

Romanians Take Tokaj

(The Romanian high command announced that troops of the Fourth Romanian Army, "in close collaboration with allied Soviet troops," had captured the town and height of Tokaj, 115 miles northeast of Budapest, and penetrated deeply into Hungarian territory to the west.

(The broadcast communique was recorded by the Federal Communications Commission. The Berlin radio admitted the loss of Tokaj yesterday.)

The early morning supplement of the Soviet communique broke several days of official silence about East Prussia and the area above Warsaw, reporting the repulse of a German reconnoitering outfit in East Prussia and heavy patrol combat around the Polish town of Pultusk.

CHURCHILL DEPICTS U. S. AS TOP POWER

Thanksgiving Speech Cites Military, Naval And Air Power

London, Nov. 23 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill, in a Thanksgiving speech to an Anglo-American audience, tonight hailed the United States as the world's greatest military power and declared that together the Allies were moving irresistibly "and, perhaps, with God's aid, swiftly towards victorious peace."

Nearly 8,000 people, including many hundreds of American servicemen, jammed Albert Hall to hear a gala concert dedicated to the United States and its traditional holiday.

Cheered By Audience

The audience rose and cheered when Churchill entered a box to hear the program conducted by John Barbirolli, formerly conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, and again when he mounted a flag-draped platform behind which hung a huge portrait of Abraham Lincoln.

The Prime Minister said Americans never had more justification for thanksgiving than today, "when we see that in three or four years the United States has, in sober fact, become the greatest military, naval and air power in the world."

Text Of Address

Following is the text of the speech:

"My lords, ladies and gentlemen, subjects of His Majesty the King, citizens of the United States.

"We have come here tonight to add our celebration to those which are going forward all over the world wherever Allied troops are fighting in bivouacs and dugouts, on battlefields, on the high seas and in the highest air.

"Always this annual festival has been dear to the hearts of the American people. Always there has been that desire for thanksgiving and never, I think, has there been more justification, more compulsive need than now.

Fit Cause For Thanksgiving

"It is your day of thanksgiving and when we feel the truth of the facts which are before us, that in three or four years the peaceful, peace-loving people of the United States—with all the variety and freedom of their life in such contrast to the iron discipline which has governed many other communities—when we see that in three or four years the United States has in sober fact become the greatest military, naval and air power in the world—that, I say to you in this time of war, is itself a subject for profound thanksgiving.

"We are moving forward in this struggle which spreads over all the lands and all the oceans; we are moving forward surely, steadily, irresistibly, and perhaps with God's aid, swiftly toward victorious peace.

"There again is a fitting reason for thanksgiving, but I have spoken of American thanksgiving. Tonight here, representative of vaster audiences and greater forces moving outside this hall, it is a British and American thanksgiving that we may celebrate today. And why is that? It is under the compulsion of mysterious and all-powerful destiny we are together.

Greater Thanksgivng Ahead

"We are joined together, shedding our blood side by side, struggling for the same ideals and joined together until the triumph of the great causes which we serve has been made manifest.

"But there is a greater Thanksgiving Day which still shines ahead, which beckons the bold and loyal and warm-hearted, and that is when this union of action which has been forced upon us by wars against tyranny, which we have maintained during those dark and fearful days, shall become a lasting union of sympathy and feeling and loyalty and hope between all the British and American peoples wherever they may dwell. Then indeed there will be a day of thanksgiving and one in which all the world will share."

SLAV FEDERATION IS PLEDGED BY TITO

Democratic Yugoslav States to Seek Close Collaboration in Balkans, He Says

LONDON, Nov. 23 (AP)—Marshal Tito said today that a federal democratic government would be established in Yugoslavia and that it would apply all its powers "to the closest collaboration and rapprochement with its Balkan neighbors," particularly Bulgaria.

In an interview with Stemjan Bristeff, a Bulgarian newspaperman, broadcast by the Free Yugoslav radio and monitored in London, Tito explained that the new Yugoslavia would consist of six federal units—Serbia, Croatia, Slovenia, Macedonia, Bosnia and Hercegovina—and Montenegro.

It was the first official statement disclosing any particulars of the recently concluded agreement between Tito and Dr. Ivan Subasitch, Premier in the exiled Yugoslav Government.

Plan Discussed in Moscow

Dr. Subasitch saw Premier Joseph Stalin in Moscow yesterday. Details of the new Yugoslav administrative machinery, which it is understood will consist of a regency, a cabinet with twenty-eight members and ministers of state for the six federal districts, may be announced soon from the Soviet capital, a diplomatic source said.

"Each federal unit," Tito said, "will have its national government. At the head of federative democratic Yugoslavia will be one single government. The final internal organization will be carried out—after the liberation of the country—through the constitutional assembly, to which the peoples will send their representatives elected in free elections."

The path of the new Yugoslavia, he added, will be the economic and cultural development of the country and the strengthening of the brotherhood and unity "that safeguard complete progress in every respect inside the country and the power of the country outside."

Tito said collaboration and rapprochement would guarantee that differences never again would appear in the Balkans.

"Conditions have been created for it," he declared, "because the old anti-national regimes have been an interview with the Sofia newspaper Slavyanski Yug, which was removed from power and replaced by truly national representatives."

Macedonia Freed Of Nazis

London, Nov. 23 (AP)—Clearing of the last of the Germans from Macedonia was reported today in Marshal Tito's communique.

The final phase was the annihilation of more than 3,000 Germans encircled in the upper Vardar Valley and capture of Icevo, Gostivar and Tetovo, the broadcast bulletin said.

Polish Electoral Law Drafted By Government

London, Nov. 23 (AP)—The draft of a new electoral law "to insure Poland a free, democratic Parliament" after liberation was disclosed today by the exiled Government of Prime Minister Stanislaw Mikolajczyk.

Under its terms, members of both houses—the Sejo, or Chamber of Deputies, and the Senate—will be chosen on the basis "of universal, equal, direct, secret and proportional suffrage," with the polls open to all citizens over 21, including women.

The law contemplates the division of Poland into constituencies from which 300 Deputies and 100 Senators would be chosen, five sixths of them directly and the balance from state-wide lists made up of candidates chosen by Poland's political parties.

Technical organization of the election would be supervised by a body independent of the Government and presided over by judges, while members of the central electoral committee would be chosen by the underground parliament's Council of National Unity.

Yanks at Battlefronts Enjoy Turkey Dinners on Thanksgiving

LONDON, Nov. 24—(AP) Turkey dinners went to soldiers in the front lines of Europe and Asia today and thousands of their comrades at administrative and supply posts through the world attended religious services and social functions as Americans overseas celebrated Thanksgiving Day.

Some 4,000 American soldiers, sailors, nurses and Red Cross workers trooped into bomb-scarred Westminster Abbey to offer hymns and prayers in this resting place of many of England's illustrious dead.

Around the rest of the world Americans celebrated in various ways: at the cathedral of Reims in France, at the embassy in Moscow, under air raid alarm in Chungking, with canned turkey in India and with an illegal peacock or two in Burma.

In the front lines everywhere the day was celebrated as well as possible in front of the enemy's guns, under the endless and perilous strain of war, in mud and blood.

The insecurity of war touched those in Westminster Abbey were in London and on the continent alike. Formally-clad Ambassador John G. Winant read President Roosevelt's Thanksgiving proclamation from an altar protected by sandbags, while men at the front crouched in foxholes or shattered buildings to snatch a moment which was a link with home.

Low streamed through one of the few stained glass windows not hidden away in bombproof vaults as the Rt. Rev. Henry W. Hobson, Bishop of southern Ohio, prayed for a lasting peace to follow the war.

"Give us the strength to travel the hard road of courage," he asked.

Adm. Harold R. Stark, commander of U. S. Naval forces in Europe, Maj. Gen. J. C. H. Lee, deputy commander of the European theater of operations, A. V. Alexander, first lord of the Admiralty, and Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Portal were among the visitors at the Abbey.

With Ambassador Winant, they went to a reception and luncheon at the American Society in London, where they joined Charles P. Manship, Baton Rouge publisher, who is chief liaison officer for British-American censorship, and others in a Thanksgiving celebration.

Thanksgiving became a joint American-British holiday throughout England as Britons joined in to a greater extent than ever before.

One hundred American soldiers and nurses were guests of the city of Boston, Eng., where the Pilgrims gathered before boarding the Mayflower for the New World.

From the continent Gen. Eisenhower in a Thanksgiving Day broadcast to the United States called upon Americans to oversubscribe the Sixth War loan and then transform the money quickly into vital fighting equipment which is "needed now."

"There is just one way to gain the peace we want," the Allied Supreme commander said. "Each of us must work with ever-increasing devotion and effectiveness up to the day the enemy capitulates."

American soldiers in India were feasted on canned turkey and square pumpkin pie, at least in New Delhi, while in the front lines, if experience of former Thanksgivings be taken as a guide, K-rations may have provided much of the fare.

In Burma some of the American troops were known to have been fattening chickens for two months, reluctant to depend on the dropping of canned turkey by plane. Some feasted on peacock, however illegal.

In Chungking Americans ate a turkeyless Thanksgiving dinner tonight under threat of Japanese air attack. An alarm was sounded at 6:36 p.m., but no raid matrialized and the all-clear came two hours later.

Berlin Reports Better And Better Robot Bombs

London, Nov. 23 (AP)—A Berlin broadcast asserted today that "continuous improvement" had been made in robot and rocket bombs and that the range of the vengeance weapons "is no longer a problem, in spite of the withdrawal of the German front line."

"The flying bombs are becoming more and more the flying artillery of the German army," the DNB account said. "The target aiming has been perfected to such a degree that flying bombs may be used against important small enemy centers within the front line."

GOEBBELS IS 'GLOOMY'

LONDON, Nov. 23—(AP) In one of his gloomiest articles, Nazi propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels declared tonight that the Germans are fighting now "armed with stoicism" and that "history surely cannot be so unjust" as to let Germany lose.

"It would be quite incomprehensible and completely unbearable if this woeful pilgrimage of the German people were not crowned with success," Goebbels said in his weekly article in the magazine Das Reich broadcast by the German radio.

Germans Told to Ignore The Rumors About Hitler

Radio Calls Foreign Reports 'Fairy Tales'

LONDON, Nov. 23 (AP).—The German people were told today by a Nazi spokesman to pay no attention to foreign "fairy tales" about Adolf Hitler's silence.

It was the first time the German home radio has mentioned foreign theories about Hitler's disappearance from the limelight. The fact that it was necessary bore out reports that rumors and fears are sweeping the Reich that something has happened to Der Fuehrer.

The German broadcast, heard here by the Ministry of Information, offered the same explanation as before—that Hitler was too busy at his headquarters to make his usual address to the nation on the Nov. 9 anniversary of the 1923 Munich beer-cellar putsch.

The Nazi spokesman, however, gave no further clew as to Hitler's health or whereabouts.

Hitler last broadcast on July 21—the day after an alleged attempt was made on his life. In both Allied and neutral countries there have been published reports that he is dead or mad, or has been sidetracked by Heinrich Himmler, Gestapo chief.

REPORTS HESS WEPT ON D-DAY

London Paper Says He Thinks Germany Is Beaten

London, Nov. 23 (AP)—To hear the London Daily Star tell it, Rudolph Hess—most celebrated Nazi prisoner in Britain's hands—has wilted under news of Allied victories and thinks Germany "is beaten forever."

The Star said today Hess wept on D-day, gloomily predicted Germany was beaten when France was overrun, and now is anti-Heinrich Himmler, because he says Himmler betrayed Adolf Hitler.

Hess, said the newspaper, now is living in a bungalow in a prisoner of war camp "somewhere in England."

Now Disillusioned

The former No. 2 Nazi, who came parachuting down into Britain in the spring of 1941 in one of the war's oddest episodes, hears German and British broadcasts.

"At last," said the Star, "Hess is completely disillusioned. Our victories in Africa and Italy shook him. D-day in Normandy was for him a crowning ignominy and he wept.

"When Eisenhower overran France, he sank into a strange apathy. He would go days without speaking. He hardly ate. Germany is beaten forever, he once said.

Sank Into Glum Despair

"The attempted assassination of Hitler and the generals' plot was another shock."

The Star added that it was thought at one time his mind might give way under the strain.

"Fits of acute depression alternated with paroxysms of Anglophobia," the paper said. "He wanted to be allowed to return to Germany with peace proposals. Now he has sunk into glum despair."

BOMBERS HAMMER OIL PLANT IN REICH

Allied Air Fleets Pound Gelsenkirchen, Meet Light Resistance.

LONDON, Nov. 23—(AP) A detachment of 150 Fortresses of the U.S. Eighth Air force, escorted by 75 Mustangs, jabbed the Nordstern synthetic oil plant at Gelsenkirchen—which normally produces 30,000 tons of fuel monthly—with 500 tons of bombs today and a few hours later RAF Lancasters followed up with another blow at the same target.

The American attack was made under such adverse weather conditions that special instruments were used to lay down the explosives. Only meager flak was encountered and no German planes were seen. All bombers returned safely but three fighters were missing.

Meanwhile, a small force of Italy-based 15th Air force Liberators hammered military targets in Austria and Yugoslavia. A narrow gauge rail route from Serajevo to Brod—the only line open to the Germans fleeing from central Yugoslavia—was bombed.

Poor weather for the second successive day limited operations against Germany's oil supplies after they were heavily pounded in a 24-hour attack by nearly 3,000 Allied bombers.

Hundreds of Allied warplanes blasted German positions guarding Faenza and Bologna in northern Italy with thousands of fragmentation bombs in an effort to soften defenses still holding Allied armies to gains of a few yards daily.

Kinnard Leads Fighter Group

LONDON, Nov. 23 (AP)—Lieut. Col. Claiborne H. Kinnard Jr., 32-year-old fighter pilot from Franklin, Tenn., has assumed command of the Fourth Fighter Group of the United States Eighth Air Force, headquarters announced today. Colonel Kinnard, who has destroyed six enemy planes in aerial combat and fifteen by strafing, succeeds Col. Don Blakeslee, Fairport Harbor, Ohio, who has been ordered to a new assignment in the United States.

Britain Honors Lt. Col. Dupuy

LONDON, Nov. 23 (AP)—Lieut. Col. Trevor N. Dupuy, 28-year-old West Pointer from Bronxville, N. Y., has received the British Distinguished Service Order for outstanding artillery work and personal bravery when cooperating with the Thirty-sixth British Division's advance in North Burma, it was announced today. Colonel Dupuy's father is Col. Ernest Dupuy, SHAEF public relations officer in Europe.

Voroshiloff Seen In Far East Post

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 23—The German-controlled Budapest radio said tonight it had learned "from reliable sources" that Russia's Marshal Klementy Voroshiloff had been appointed "Commander-

Chief in the Far East and has probably already taken up his new post."

It was announced yesterday in Moscow that Marshal Voroshiloff had been relieved by Premier Joseph Stalin of his duties as a member of the Soviet State Committee of Defense.

The Berlin radio gave out the same report and quoted a Wilhelmstrasse spokesman as saying: "If Stalin decided to send such an important man as Voroshiloff to the Far East some definite developments might be expected there."

Voroshilov Seen In Line For New Post

By Henry C. Cassidy

[Former Chief of the Associated Press Moscow Bureau]

Washington, Nov. 23—Marshal Klementi Voroshilov, having made his exit from the Moscow scene as a soldier, may turn up again as a statesman.

Experienced observers of Soviet affairs considered it possible that he would be appointed Russian delegate to the prospective United Nations peace conference next year and serve on the World Security Council.

Release Not A Demotion

Moscow's announcement yesterday that Voroshilov had been released from the State Committee of Defense was considered not a demotion, but a transfer for Marshal Stalin's old comrade in arms.

Voroshilov derived his power from his position as No. 3 man in the Politburo of the Communist Party, next only to Stalin and Foreign Commissar Molotov, rather than from his specific assignment to other posts. As long as he retained his party place, it would appear, his power stayed unimpaired.

Free For Other Work

His release from the Defense Committee, however, freed him for other work, such as that of postwar planning and administration.

Maxim Litvinov, former Ambassador to the United States, and Ivan Maisky, former Ambassador to Great Britain, had already been assigned as vice-commisars of foreign affairs, and Voroshilov was assigned as vice-commissars of foreign.

Voroshilov began to take an active part in diplomacy after returning from his command of the northwestern front in 1941. He acted as a Soviet delegate to the Moscow and Tehran conferences last year, and participated this year in the Finnish armistice negotiations.

Diplomats who have worked with the Russians in international negotiations say there is an evident Soviet shortage of personnel equipped for such undertakings. Vice-Commissar Andrei Vyshinsky has been shouldering virtually the entire work of Soviet special missions abroad.

With Marshal Stalin and Molotov forced to remain close to Moscow, assignment of Voroshilov to international negotiations would give the Russians a diplomat with the confidence of his leaders and sufficient authority to act.

Cigarette Black Market Warning By Eisenhower

Paris, Nov. 23 (AP)—General Eisenhower has ordered the court-martial of any service personnel engaged in black-market sales of cigarettes, it was disclosed today.

The supreme commander, ordering an investigation of reports of illegal sales, expressed determination to see that the distribution of cigarettes in this war theater is equalized if at all possible.

Communications zone headquarters, which is in charge of cigarette distribution, soon will effect a distribution at the rate of five packages weekly to combat troops and two packages to forces in rear areas. Officers and men in rear areas have been allowed no cigarettes in the last two weeks in order to maintain the issue of seven packs a week to combat men.

Overseas Cigarette Lack, Supply Problem

Washington, Nov. 23 (AP)—The overseas cigarette shortage was attributed by Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, today principally to supply and distribution problems connected with the current offensive.

Stimson said he had been informed the deficiency "will be corrected as soon as possible." Front line troops are affected less than those in the rear, he said.

"Troops subsisting on the C and K rations receive cigarettes as part of the ration," the Secretary explained. "In addition, commanders are making every effort to see that any shortage will be absorbed mainly by troops not actually in combat."

Critically needed military supplies for the offensive are given priority over cigarettes and other materials, Stimson made clear. Cigarette sales in post exchanges in France and England were halted this week to everyone but Air Forces personnel. This action was termed merely temporary.

Eisenhower Aide Becomes WAC

Paris, Nov. 23 (AP)—Mrs. Kay Summersby, driver-secretary for General Eisenhower, has been commissioned a second lieutenant in the WAC. She has driven for Eisenhower 2½ years. A British subject, she obtained the consent of her Government to become a WAC.

167 Rhine Crossings Available To Germans

Supreme Allied Expeditionary Force Headquarters, Paris, Nov. 23 (AP)—Latest intelligence reports show the Germans have available 167 crossings over the Rhine river between Wesel in northwestern Germany and Basel, Switzerland.

Of this number, 75 are bridges of various types and the remainder are ferries. The bridges include 27 of pontoon construction, of which all except four are between Mannheim and Basel on the southern end of the front.

Between Wesel and Coblenz there are eight rail bridges, 14 highway bridges, one combination road and rail structure and one pontoon type. Between Coblenz and Mannheim there are four rail and four highway bridges, one combination and three pontoon. Between Mannheim and Basel there are four rail, ten highway, two combination and 23 pontoon bridges.

U. S. TROOPS NAMED IN LORIENT EXCHANGE

PARIS, Nov. 23 (AP)—Censorship released today the names of the American officers and soldiers involved in a prisoner exchange in the German-held Lorient sector of France Nov. 16.

A six-hour armistice at the drab fishing village of Le Magour permitted the trading of seventy-nine German captives for a like number of Americans by motor boat across the Etel River.

The Americans, some held as long as ninety days, were boisterous, bearded and cheerful. They were hustled away to a rest camp where they were deloused, provided fresh clothing and given an elaborate dinner and entertainment.

Franco Foes Form Junta

Paris, Nov. 23 (AP)—Representatives of five Spanish Republican party organizations living in the Paris region formed a "Spanish Liberation Junta" today to campaign for the ouster of Generalissimo Francisco Franco and return to a republic under the 1931 constitution.

"Hands-Off" Policy Advocated

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 24 (AP)—Lord Beaverbrook's London Daily Express said today in an editorial that Great Britain should adopt a hands-off policy in any move to overthrow General Franco.

"If Britain is wise she will allow the Spanish situation to evolve without active interference on her part," says The Express. "By so doing, Britain will be free to take any advantage that may be offered by a change of Government, without assuming responsibility for its defects, its crimes or even its continued existence."

DOUGHBOYS ENJOY HOLIDAY IN PARIS

Colburn

PARIS, Nov. 23 — (AP) Hundreds of American soldiers spent Thanksgiving in Paris today, and so busy does a man become in this war that many had forgot about the traditional holiday until they arrived — some on the first leave in 169 days.

"My gosh, it's Thanksgiving," was a common expression of soldiers entering the Red Cross rainbow corner to get a 48-hour breathing spell from the mud and death of the combat zone.

Turkey was on the menu of nearly every mess, although troops in the front line ate canned rations and some outfits, rushing supplies to the front, dipped into "K" rations for their Thanksgiving.

Despite the heavy fighting on the Western front, truck-loads of mud-begrimed combat troops poured into Paris, getting a much needed rest. Some of them had ridden 13 hours on hard truck seats through rain and mud to get their first bath in weeks.

"Paris looks good to us," said Clyde Nanney, Shelby, N. C. "it is our first leave since D-day."

He was just in from the Aachen front.

Hundreds of GI's ate a free turkey dinner — the Red Cross abolished its usual 20-cent meal charge because of the holiday — at Rainbow Corner in the Hotel de Paris, where last Thanksgiving German staff officers were wining and dining.

Few Parisians were aware of this Thanksgiving Day or the significance of the occasion, and few appeared even aware of the Americans, who were sloppy and dirty in battle dress.

Fear Attempt on Giraud

PARIS, Nov. 23 (AP)—The newspaper Paris Presse reported today that police were investigating a series of blasts in towns throughout France that came after explosions in a restaurant at Royat where a few hours previously Gen. Henri Honore Giraud had been eating. The bombs exploded in the early morning, shattering the building, the newspaper said. General Giraud, former co-leader of the French Committee of National Liberation, had planned to return there for lunch. Police have not established a definite connection between the explosions and General Giraud's presence.

Wodehouse Detained

Paris, Nov. 23 (AP) — The police announced officially today that P. G. Wodehouse, British novelist, had been released after spending three nights in a police station, but it was disclosed later that he was still detained.

Although it was understood authorities had agreed not to press charges that Wodehouse aided the Germans by broadcasts from Germany in 1941 provided he left the Paris area, indications were that he would not be released until tomorrow at the earliest, pending arrangements for his residence under surveillance in the country.

Both the press and Mrs. Wodehouse were formally advised this morning that the author had been freed. Mrs. Wodehouse was awaiting him at their hotel when a British consulate representative told her that the release was deferred.

Robot Tanks Used Again

With the United States Ninth Army in Germany, Nov. 22 (AP—Delayed)—The Germans used explosive-filled robot tanks against the Ninth Army today and an increasing number of V-1 robot bombs and V-2 rockets over the entire Western front.

Robot tanks first appeared in Italy on the Anzio beachhead and in Russia. Controlled by wires stretched back to German lines, they were not particularly successful. At one time the Germans described the little tanks as V-4 weapons in Hitler's secret series.

The Germans apparently are devoting considerable manpower to manufacturing and developing the V (Vengeance) weapons. They have been used increasingly for two weeks. Many bomb and rocket launching sites must have been prepared inside Germany.

88,245 were killed. This was an increase of 16,724 since a previous report covering casualties reported through October 28.

Tankmen Brave Nazi Fire To Save Comrade

NOV 24 1944

By J. W. Gallagher

With the United States Ninth Army, Germany, Nov. 22 (AP—Delayed)—American infantry and tanks lunged stubbornly forward today through deep mud and water around the Roer river town of Julich on the direct road to Cologne.

Despite gales and torrent, the advance gained steadily and the toll of Ninth Army captives since November 16 reached 6,000.

Considerable losses were suffered by the Americans. The fighting was marked by many acts of heroism which almost passed unnoticed.

Refuse To Leave Him

Sergt. Harry Densmore, light-tank commander from Bay City, Mich., told how a tankman whose machine had been set afire by an "88" shell which cut off both his legs, lay in the pyre and groaned. When Densmore and his crew jumped from their tank while shells fell all around, the wounded man shouted:

"Get back in your tank and get out of here before you get hit. Leave me here."

Densmore and his men, however, loaded the wounded man and another, frightfully burned, on their tank and took them to a dressing station.

Back For Repairs

Densmore's tank came out of the line for repairs today and the crew's chief interest was in what happened to their pet mouse. The last night, but he hasn't shown up today; the shelling must have discouraged him," one of the base men said.

Corporal Allen Noland of the medium tank Handy G, which had a track blown off by a mine, said this of the battle:

"You want to hand it to those infantry guys we have been fighting with. They stayed right there with us all the time and it was hot up there around that Kraut town, Gereonsweiler."

Tanks Meet Headon

The crew of the tank, Heaven, met a King Tiger headon and took five shots at it, all of which missed.

"We ducked behind a house and every time we came out, that Tiger would let fly," said Corporal Harold Hes, Gettysburg, Pa.

"I don't want to see any more of those Tigers," said James Harris, Hartwell, Ga., and Radio Operator John Kyser, Birmingham, Ala., agreed.

The King Tiger is Hitler's latest model. It has more than six inches of armor in front.

Dutch Hunger Strikes Seen Unless Food Comes

Eindhoven, Holland, Nov. 23 (AP). A peaceful demonstration two days ago protesting a lack of food in the Eindhoven area has resulted in a slight increase in fats and meats supplied by Allied armies.

This success has aroused the rest of liberated Holland and there are threats from all the larger cities of massed hunger strikes unless food allotments are increased.

Baltimore Yank Says Paris Is

30.24 — 20617

'GI's Dream'

Fronhove, Germany, Nov. 23 (AP). A sergeant walks up to a soldier in the bitterly cold rain through a street flowing with foot-deep syrupy mud and says: "Okay, Bud; pack up—you're going to Paris."

It sounds like a hallucination, but it is happening these cheerless days along the Western front. A few doughboys are being picked from each company for 48-hour passes in Paris—a heavenly 48-hour respite from K rations, dead men and constant shellfire that tightens the stomach into knots.

Instead of attacking the next town with his buddies and getting shot at, the soldier is whisked 250 miles away on a truck to sip champagne and gaze upon mademoiselles.

"Paris Is GI's Dream"

Lieut. George Stewart, of Atlanta, Ga., attached to a Ninth Army front-line unit, said the plan was to furnish every combat soldier with a Paris leave, but the doughboys who have been at the front get top priority. Passes are for 48 hours, exclusive of travel time.

"Paris is a GI's dream," exclaimed T/5 Carl Brooks, of 3801½ Woodbine avenue, Baltimore, who just had returned from the capital. "The Red Cross put us up in a beautiful hotel room which would cost at least $10 at home. And get this—we had a private bath with hot water.

Champagne Chosen

"I spent my two evenings drinking cognac with champagne chasers in a cafe on Champs Elysees, or whataever you call it. I'd have given two months' pay for one more day there. It did me so much good that when I got back here I felt I could stick it out for two more months."

Sergt. James Mac Vean, of Inglewood, Cal., an anti-tank gunner, got a pass after 155 days.

"I've been in every State except three, and Paris is the best city I ever saw," he said. "Los Angeles will have to step to beat the beautiful gals in Paris.

Even MPs Are Good

"The MPs were darned good to us, and the soldiers stationed there can't do enough for you. Hell—colonels were buying me drinks. I went on a tour and saw the Joan of Arc statue, Napoleon's tomb and the Eiffel Tower."

"Say—did you go to the Rue St. Appoline?" asked T/5 Kenneth Boyce, of Bronx, New York.

"Don't ask me those big names," Mac Vean replied. "I went to the windmill."

"What got me," said Boyce, "was the girls riding bicycles and wearing fluffy dresses. Boy—what a sight!"

PATTON POLICY IS VINDICATED

General Releases Names Of All Units And Commanders

Ubach, Germany, Nov. 23 (AP)—The fall of Metz for the first time in its 1,500-year military history meant more than a military victory for the pistol-packing Third Army commander, Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., for it meant vindication of his free press policy as well.

Last September, after conferencese with Gens. George C. Marshall and Dwight D. Eisenhower, Patton ordered that the name of every division, every unit and every commander on his front be released every day for publication.

Conservative commanders were shocked by the blanket disclosure of the so-called "sacred battle order" and predicted dire results.

Morale Boost Noted

In practice, it meant that if a certain division took a city, correspondents could write that X regiment from X division, commanded by John Doe, had done the job.

Patton's theory was that the men doing the fighting liked to read what their division had accomplished, and that gains in morale among American fighting troops more than offset the fact that the Germans knew which unit was where. He maintained they knew anyway within 12 hours after a battle had started, just as the Americans and British know who opposes them within a few hours after a new division appears.

Marked On Jeeps

Withholding of the names of divisions doing the fighting is particularly ridiculous in the American armies, where every soldier wears his division patch and every jeep, half-track and tank carries its division number in letters several inches high.

Yet, except for Patton's army, other armies are clinging to the old policy of releasing names two weeks and sometimes six weeks after events have taken place.

Soldiers in the First and Ninth armies—reading in the army newspaper Stars and Stripes of the Third Army divisions in the spotlight—feel more keenly than ever that they are being left out.

Colonel Is Carried To Beachhead In Litter

On the Western Front, Nov. 17 (AP—Delayed)—Many are carried off beachheads in litters, but Lieut. Col. Stephen W. Benkosky, of Columbia, S. C., was carried ashore that way.

Aboard ship, in the middle of the Channel, in the Normandy invasion, the colonel was stricken with appendicitis. There was no operating room.

"So they just removed the salt and pepper shakers and sugar bowl from the dining-room table and went to work on me there," says the cavalry group executive officer, who now is back in action. "Then when the job was done, they called the litter-bearers and had them reverse the usual procedure and carry me ashore to the beachhead."

Letter From Mom Saved His Life

With the AEF on the Western Front, Nov. 12 (AP—Delayed)—Pfc. John J. Famiglietti, of Glen Cove, N. Y., says, "Tell Mom that letter really raised my morale."

A member of a combat engineer outfit, he was lying in an improvised bed in a battered French farmhouse at the front, wishing he'd get some mail from home. Suddenly the mail clerk yelled that Famiglietta had a letter. He got up to get it and returned to find that a shell had smashed the room and torn at least a dozen holes in his blankets.

Reims Cathedral Gets U. S.

REIMS, France, Nov. 23 (AP)—An American flag was presented today to the cathedral of Reims in a Thanksgiving Day ceremony in which more than 1,000 United States soldiers and the entire city of Reims took part. This was the first time the famous cathedral was given over to the observance of American Thanksgiving Day. Brig. Gen. C. O. Thrasher, Paxton, Ill., commander of the Oise base second, presented the flag to Archbishop Louis Marmottin of Reims.

ALLIED TROOPS

ADVANCE IN ITALY

ROME, Nov. 23 — (AP) British and Polish troops, slogging forward in the hills south of Highway 9 between Forli and Faenza against strong German resistance, have captured a few more villages and ridges and cleared most of the Nazis out of the Cosina river loop southeast of Faenza.

The Poles, after capturing Monte Piano, moved 500 yards east and took the village of San Mamante against bitter enemy resistance. They also captured Oriolo and San Biagio, northwest of Monte Piano.

In fighting through these rugged hills at the edge of the Po valley the Poles captured 140 prisoners and inflicted heavy casualties in killed and wounded on the Germans.

Other Eighth Army troops pushing up the Adriatic coast toward Ravenna continued to clear rearguards from the flooded areas just south of the city, which were immersed when the Nazis turned loose the waters of the Fiume Uniti waterway last week.

American Fifth Army forces south of Bologna engaged only in patrol clashes, in one of which they ambushed and killed a party of nine Nazis. German artillery continued to plaster Highway 65 leading to Bologna from the south.

The Mediterranean air forces flew over 2,300 sorties yesterday, including sweeps into southern Germany, Austria, Yugoslavia and northern Italy. Twenty Allied planes were reported missing, against one enemy craft known to have been destroyed.

Nazis Cleared From Cosina River Loop

Rome, Nov. 23 (AP)—Eighth Army troops battling strong enemy resistance have cleared the Germans out of the Cosina river loop less than four miles southeast of Faenza and captured a few more villages in substantial gains in that area below the Bologna-Rimini highway, Allied headquarters announced today.

Polish troops have continued their advance beyond bitterly contested Mount Fortino and captured the villages of Oriolo, San Biagio and San Mamante.

Further to the west, Fifth Army Indian troops occupied important ground north of captured Modigliana.

Allies Seek Way to End Daily Riots in Rome Jail

Prisoners' Chief Complaint Is of Delay in Trials

ROME, Nov. 23 (AP).—Allied authorities conferred today with officials of Rome's Regina Coeli prison in an effort to put an end to the daily riots among prisoners, first over food, but lately over delay in bringing them to trial.

The prison has been in turmoil since a serious riot was quelled several weeks ago. For the last five days there have been daily disturbances. On Tuesday rioters set fire to the prison roof.

This morning guards fired on several prisoners who escaped after occupants of two cell blocks managed to open doors leading into the courtyard as prisoners in other blocks set afire bedding and woodwork.

The prisoners' chief complaint now seems to be that they have been held without trial since June 4.

BIGGER LUFTWAFFE SEEN NEXT YEAR

U. S. 15th AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS, Italy, Nov. 23—(AP) The German Air force will have more planes next Spring than it has this year through production by small and scattered underground factories, 15th Air force authorities said today.

The increase in the number of Nazi craft will be offset, however, by a lack of trained pilots and by a shortage of oil, the authorities declared. Up to Nov. 1, Nazi oil production was estimated to have been cut by 564,000 tons due to Allied raids on southern Europe.

Already the Germans' dearth in trained pilots is noticeable in daily combat, said Brig. Gen. Charles F. Born, one-time West Point football player and coach, now deputy commander of the 15th Air force.

"Of course there are still single 'hot' units, as you'll find in any air force," he said, "but the experience and training of the general run of the Jerry pilot has fallen off."

It has been apparent the Germans have built small underground aircraft factories in various arts of Germany—perhaps as many as 30. The daily output of each of these might be anywhere from one to five planes, it is believed. Since these targets individually are too small to be worth attacking, 1945 probably will find the Germans with a somewhat increased air force.

Baltimorean Helps Team Win In Italy

Bari, Italy, Nov. 23 (AP)—Passes from Corporal Earl Jones, of Lawton, Okla., to Corporal Joe Kelly, of Baltimore, scored one touchdown and set up another as the Technical School outpointed the Playboys, 13-0, in a Bambino Bowl touch football game today before 5,000 fans at Bari Stadium.

Kelly took a pass for the first score in the second quarter after Jones pitched a long one to Sergt. Marion Klobucher, of Peoria, Ill. A few minutes later Kelly took a 30-yard toss from Jones to the 5 from where Jones shovel passed to Sergt. Gene Goodman, of Provo, Utah, for the tally. Corporal James Turner, of St. Louis, and Private Neal Po, of Greenwood, Del., were top carriers for the losers.

NOV 24 1944

U. S. Families Entering Europe

LISBON, Nov. 23 (AP)—Fifteen wives and three children of United States Foreign Service officers left Lisbon in a motor car convoy under American armed guard today on a journey to rejoin them in Continental cities as far away as newly liberated Brussels. The convoy is traveling by way of Madrid, Barcelona, Marseille, Paris and Brussels, a trip that will total 1,600 miles.

Thanksgiving in Moscow

MOSCOW, Nov. 23 (AP).—The American colony in Moscow—bigger than at any time since the start of the war—celebrated Thanksgiving with two official parties. Russian turkey cooked American style was featured at both affairs, one at Spasso House, home of Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, the other at the Metropole Hotel, where Major General J. Russell Deane, chief of the American military mission, put on an Army and Navy show.

Belgrade to Censor News

BELGRADE, Nov. 19 (delayed) (AP).—News dispatches from Yugoslavia "which are directed against the achievements of the national liberation struggle and its successful continuation" are forbidden under a military censorship decree promulgated today by army headquarters.

To Seize Property Of Collaborationists

Belgrade, Nov. 20 (AP—Delayed)—The Yugoslav Government will confiscate the factories of industrialists convicted of criminal collaboration with the Germans, but other manufacturers will continue along the lines of private enterprise, Andrija Hebrang, acting Minister of Commerce and Industry, said today.

Addressing the first party of American, British and Canadian correspondents to visit Belgrade since its liberation by the Red army and Marshal Tito's Partisans a month ago, Hebrang estimated that the greater part of Yugoslav manufacturers collaborated with the Nazis.

A commission, he said, will decide which cases of collaboration will be tried by the courts for final disposition.

Some Land To Be Divided

Asked whether farming would be collectivized after the war, Hebrang declared "the peasants will live as before," but added that the lands of those killed in the war would be divided among the peasants.

Ten thousand buildings were destroyed in Yugoslavia during three years of war, Hebrang said, estimating it would take two or three years alone to reconstruct.

Freed Belgrade Wrecked During Nazi Occupation

BELGRADE, Nov. 20 (delayed) (AP) The story of Belgrade's three and one-half years of Nazi occupation was unfolded to the Western world today a month after the Yugoslav capital's liberation by the Red army and Marshal Tito's partisans.

Uniforms of the western Allies are rare, Soviet emblems are everywhere, and the city is scarred by Allied bombing and German vandalism. Yugoslavia's future political orientation is declared to be a subject for post-war determination by the people themselves.

The first party of American, British and Canadian newspapermen to visit the city since its liberation found a cold, bomb-scarred metropolis resounding to the songs of hundreds of partisans drilling through streets profusely bedecked with the Red Star, the hammer and sickle and pictures of Premier Stalin and Marshal Tito.

Virtually every store window is adorned with identical portraits of Stalin and Tito side by side, and a huge two-story picture of Tito is hanging in the heart of the city at an intersection.

The city suffered heavily under Allied bombings, which strategically had put the capital out of the war in April of this year. Nearly every downtown building bears the scars of bombing and it is a rare building which has its windows intact.

Belgradians remember 13 air raids — one German just before the Nazi occupation in April, 1941, and the others Allied blows this year. While some citizens smiled on learning the identity of the Allied newsmen, others stared curiously and some coldly.

It was apparent many citizens cannot forget the destruction of the homes and buildings which surrounded them, while forgetting that the same crippling air blows hit bridges and other military objectives and helped in the liberation.

While there is no apparent food shortage, prices have sky-rocketed, sometimes as much as 200 per cent over the pre-war level. On roads leading to the city many women are trading clothes for food from peasants.

The main problem as Winter approaches is transportation. Fuel is available in the country, but the railroads are practically wiped out and almost every automobile is used for war.

With the front not far away in three directions, war is the keynote in Belgrade. The shots of drilling partisans ring out all day. The partisans are drilling to fight the Germans. They train for a month and then go to the front to join their comrades, pledged to pursue the Nazis beyond the Yugoslav borders.

Signs of street fighting and evidence of German vandalism mark the city. Wrecked Nazi tanks are still standing at intersections. The burned-out library of Belgrade university, which the citizens say was deliberately fired by the Germans, is one of the most conspicuous relics. Thousands of books and invaluable manuscripts were destroyed.

A chapter in the story of Belgrade which perhaps never will be fully told is the fate of approximately 15,000 Jewish residents. The men were rounded up by the Germans for forced labor until September, 1941, when they were taken to an unknown destination. In January of 1942 the women and children were rounded up and held in a concentration camp on the fair grounds. Eventually they disappeared. Unconfirmed reports say many were killed in gas vans.

Political leaders here emphasize that the future political orientation of Yugoslavia must await the end of the war, when the people will be allowed to choose their own form of government. They say the primary consideration at present is to defeat the Germans.

BURMA ROAD LINKS CLEARED

Chinese Take 10 More Villages South Of Mangshih

Chungking, Nov. 23 (AP)—Chinese forces who captured the Japanese stronghold of Mangshih on the Burma road last week end have cleared long additional stretches of the road with the capture of ten more towns south of the mouth of the Mangshih valley, the Chinese high command announced today.

As a result of the spirited drive by Chinese troops in Yunnan province in collaboration with the American-Chinese campaign down the Ledo road from northern Burma, the China link of the Burma road is virtually ready to be reopened to military traffic, according to the Chinese press. The stretch between Lungling and Tehgchung already is open, these reports said.

Repairing Airfield

Mangshih airfield has been taken and repair work has begun on its landing strips and hangars. Mangshih itself was found to be saturated with mines and booby traps, which are being removed with the assistance of American liaison engineer personnel.

[Mangshih is about 40 miles east of Bhamo in Burma, which was captured last week by Chinese troops who drove down from north Burma under the original command of Gen. Joseph Stilwell. There apparently remained only this 40 miles to be cleared of Japanese before supplies could begin flowing to Chungking over the Ledo-Burma road.]

Minor Fighting In Kwangsi

Only minor fighting was reported from Kwangsi province in south-central China, where Japanese invasion forces continued to regroup and consolidate their positions west of Liuchow in preparation for the next phase of their campaign to crush China.

The Chinese high command said there had been no positional change in the past 24 hours in the area of Hwaiyuanchen, 50 miles west of Liuchow. Fighting was reported just east of the town yesterday, with patrol actions both to the north and the southwest.

Chinese Clear New Burma Road Sectors

Chungking, Nov. 23 (AP)—Driving ahead in a three-pronged attack focussed on Chefang, Chinese troops have cleared further stretches of Burma road beyond fallen Mangshih and have captured strongpoints below the mouth of the Mangshih Valley, the Chinese high command announced today.

The eastern prong engaged a Japanese force at Mangka while the western prong cleared most of the hill positions on the Nam Hkwan river, three miles north of Chefang.

Mopup Completed

Repair work has been started at the Mangshih airfield. The high command said mopping up operations had been completed at Mangshih.

No change was reported in positions along the Kwangsi-Kweichow railroad, the main route for the Japanese invasion of Kweichow.

Burma Pilots Snatch Wounded Out of Jungle

IMPHAL, India—(AP) British-Indian ground forces and American airmen have devised a system for snatching gliders loaded with wounded out of the Burma jungles. Now instead of being carried painfully out of the jungle, wounded troops are brought back to base hospitals inside of an hour. The trick was made possible by gliders left over from the operation last spring in which the late Gen. Wingate's soldiers were landed in central Burma.

Landing strips in the jungle are rarely available so airplanes cannot land. However, American transport planes pull gliders over cleared spaces where the wounded have been assembled. The gliders are then cut loose and landed in the cleared space. While the airplane circles overhead the wounded are hurriedly placed in the glider, their stretchers strapped down tightly. Then a tow rope with a loop is held up so that the airplane can hook on to it on a low pass.

Part of the jar of the snatch takeoff is absorbed in the tow rope, but by no means all. The first snap gives the patients quite a jar. From then on, however, the ride back to base where the glider is again landed, is smooth as silk.

The American pilots in good weather make two trips or more daily to this central Burma front. During peak periods they have evacuated as many as 70 casualties in a day.

NEW B-29 BASE IS SUGGESTED

Wedemeyer Says Damage Is More Than Japs Admit

Chungking, Nov. 23 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer declared today that Superfortress raids on Japan were doing much more damage than the Japanese had acknowledged and said the attacks soon would be intensified from "another direction."

"Up to now, so far as has been officially announced, the big bombers have employed only Chinese bases in their blows at Japan's war industries. The island of Saipan has been mentioned as a possible future base.]

Says Chiang Approves Plan

Wedemeyer, who recently succeeded Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell as commander of United States forces in the China theater, said that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek had approved the general concept of a plan he submitted for future operations against the Japanese.

Acknowledging that his command would automatically embrace all American seaborne forces who landed in China, he reiterated his belief that the Japanese could not be defeated by island hopping, but would have to be crushed finally on the Asiatic mainland.

The Japanese already are "terribly concerned" about their overall position, Wedemeyer said, adding that this concern would be increased steadily from now on as the Allies employed "all kinds of resources from all directions."

Okamua Mountain Fighter

Wedemeyer said that Gen. Yasuji Okamua, the new Japanese commander in chief in China in succession to Marshal Shunroku Hata, was adept at mountain warfare and might prove even more energetic than was Hata in pushing the enemy's present campaign, which already has bisected China.

At present, he said, the Japanese in China were pausing to consolidate their new-won positions and bring up more strength before proceeding with the next phase of the campaign—possibly a drive on Chungking.

Wedemeyer said he was most favorably impressed with the new Chinese War Minister, Gen. Chen Gheng, who, he said, might bring about better coordination in the Allied war effort.

"Every American tells me Chen has force, drive, a good brain and thinks clearly—all attributes of a good leader," Wedemeyer observed.

Chiang Accepts Wedemeyer War Plan

Chungking, Nov. 23 (AP) — Maj. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer announced today that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has accepted the general concept of a plan he submitted for disposing Chinese forces to meet the Japanese threat and that it now is going into effect.

Wedemeyer, who came to Chungking as commander in chief of United States Army forces in China after the recent recall of Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, made the announcement at a press conference.

China Foothold "Vital"

He also declared the Japanese would not be defeated by the island-hopping strategy now under way in the Pacific but would have to be ultimately defeated on the continent of Asia.

He said his command automatically would embrace any American seaborne forces landed in China.

To root out the invader "we've got to get to grips with him on the continent," the general declared. "We must get a lodgment in China and sea communications."

Japs Worried, He Says

Asked if he would bring American troops over "the Hump" from India to China, Wedemeyer said: "I visualize the employment of all kinds of resources from all directions."

He asserted the Japanese were "terribly concerned" about their overall position. He declared the Allies would disclose many things in the future which would increase the enemy's concern.

Discusses Jap Shift

Wedemeyer said he believed Tokyo's transfer of Marshal General Shunroku Hata back to the homeland and appointment of Gen. Yasuji Okamua in his place as commander in chief of Japanese forces in China would not change the enemy's tactics materially.

The general said he had been most favorably impressed by the new Chinese War Minister, Gen. Chen Gheng, with whom he already has had two "very satisfactory" conferences. He added:

"Every American tells me Chen has force, drive, a good brain and thinks clearly—all attributes of a good leader."

Hero Of American Air Attack Gives Life To Save His Crew

A United States Bomber Base in Southwest China, Nov. 14 (AP)—Delayed)—Major Horace E. (Stump) Carswell, Jr., pilot of the Liberator which sank a Japanese cruiser and destroyer October 16 in one of the great bombing exploits of the war, gave his life 14 nights later in an effort to save members of his crew.

The 28-year-old Texan, who already had become the ranking hero of the 14th Air Force, made his final decision in the highest traditions of the air force.

Two Engines Shot Out

With two of the engines in his four-engined bomber shot out in a low-level attack on a Japanese convoy in the South China Sea, the San Angelo (Texas) flyer and his copilot, Second Lieutenant James L. O'Neal, 26, of Maywood, Ill., were nursing the plane to base when the other engines failed.

Eight crew members bailed out. Three officers remained aboard. The plane crashed in flames on a China mountainside.

Carswell and O'Neal could have jumped long before that happened, but they were sweating it out with the bombardier, Second Lieutenant Walter W. Hillier, 28, of Chicago, whose parachute had been so riddled by flak he could not use it.

Had Scored Direct Hits

Hillier, who a few hours earlier had scored a damaging near-miss on a Japanese destroyer and two direct hits on a medium-sized merchant ship, died with Carswell and O'Neal.

The last man to bail out, the nose gunner, Staff Sergeant Carlton S. Schnepf, 21, of Hicksville, N. Y., saw Hillier kneeling with his ruined 'chute on the flight deck floor between the pilot and copilot.

"The major and O'Neal were just sitting there, looking straight ahead," Schnepf said. "They knew the others were bailing out, but they made no move to stop them. They knew about Hillier's 'chute. I couldn't see their faces. They were still trying to ride her in. Then the number two engine sputtered and I jumped."

Fluid Soaked Parachute

Schnepf's own parachute had been soaked with hydraulic fluid. It failed to function properly.

"I went out through the open bomb bay and pulled the rip cord," he said. "Nothing happened. I clawed at the pack with my hands and got the 'chute out. I landed on the mountainside. The plane crashed about 500 yards away. There was a big explosion and fire.

"The flames lit up the mountainside. I stayed at the spot until daylight. I couldn't go near the fire. There were continuous little explosions as the ammunition—what we hadn't jettisoned over the sea—kept going off. The three men must have been killed instantly."

YANKS CAPTURE LIMON ON LEYTE

Americans Smash Past Fallen Bastion, Rains Lash Battlefront.

Spencer

GENERAL MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Friday, Nov. 24—(AP) Rain-pounded American infantrymen have captured the Japanese bastion of Limon and have driven 1,000 yards south in a sudden upsurge of a battle which has practically destroyed the enemy's First division.

Headquarters reported today the 32nd division plunged through shell-battered Limon Wednesday, in the biggest advance in more than two weeks.

Yamashita Line Threatened

The entire Yamashita line, upon which the Japanese depend to hold Leyte island, is in danger of being rolled up, the communique said.

As heavy rains continued to lash the battle front, the Yank infantrymen drove through the mountain village to the nearby Leyte river.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur had identified Limon as apparently the Japanese-selected site for their major defensive battle to protect the vital Ormoc corridor. Capture of th town, said today's communique, means the Nipponese have lost a "critical defensive line."

The announcement said rolling terrain lies ahead of the Yanks in their drive down the main highway toward Ormoc, last Japanese stronghold on the island.

"The enemy," said the communique, "in his bitter defense of this northern anchor of the Yamashita line has suffered terrific losses from our artillery and superior infantry firepower.

"His First division has been practically destroyed."

Earlier General MacArthur announced the destruction of the 16th Japanese division which had played an important role in the American defeat at Bataan.

Jap Resistance Ends

The battle for the mountainous defile leading to the vital Ormoc corridor began about Oct. 30 and ended in midafternoon Wednesday when infantry units under the command of Col. John A. Hettinger, Colorado Springs, Colo., broke the last vestige of Japanese resistance.

Ahead of the surging American forces is rolling country which, while it will be easier going, still will enable the Japanese to make defense stands and force the Yanks to root them out of machine gun nests and pillboxes.

Associated Press Correspondent Elmont Waite reported that other units, commanded by Lt. Col. Isaac Gill, Jr., of Rhode Island, has pushed south from Pinamopoan on the west side of the Ormoc road and had almost reached that vital artery.

Since the Americans turned into Ormoc corridor, after capturing Pinamopoan early this month, vicious fighting has flared around Limon, about four miles by road south of Carigara bay. The Japanese dug into the town, utilizing favorable terrain, for a knockout battle.

The communique reiterated that American aggressive tactics had upset Japanese plans for a strong counterattack, utilizing newly-landed reinforcements, and had placed them on the defensive. They were required to commit their troops in piecemeal attacks.

The 32nd's push, said the communique, means the Japanese now have "lost a critical defensive line at the mountain defile, with open, rolling terrain further south in the Ormoc corridor.

American troops behind the forward line are clearing out scattered enemy parties near Pinamopoan and Capoocan, on Carigara bay, the communique said.

American heavy bombs attacked supply dumps and barracks at Ipil, south of Ormoc, destroying large supply buildings.

Leyte-based fighters destroyed an enemy motor pool and strafed communication lines below Valencia, midway between Limon and Ormoc on the main highway.

Small Freighter Sunk

Light naval units operating in the Camotes islands and off Leyte's west coast sank a small freighter, two luggers and three barges loaded with enemy troops, ammunition and fuel.

Enemy air action was light. Yank patrols shot down one plane.

For more than two weeks static battle conditions existed around shell-battered Limon. Advance Japanese forces were isolated by pressure against the town and a road block south of it.

In addition to the infantry action, American artillery has kept up a constant fire—wiping out Japanese batteries whenever they reveal their positions and plastering road junctions and trails with periodic barrages.

General MacArthur's Thursday communique said the Japanese had "drawn heavily on his immediate reserves to bolster this line of resistance" at Limon. The Limon defenders have been identified as the Japanese First Division. MacArthur said two days ago the division had been "committed" to the Limon defense.

That some Japanese reinforcements may still be reaching Leyte was indicated yesterday when fighter planes attacked four freighters, four luggers and 14 barges, some of which were found on the beaches near Ormoc. Most of the vessels were sunk or damaged. Air patrols continued harassing Japanese ground forces.

No American ship was damaged. Large fires and explosions were observed during the bombardment, while Japanese batteries on the fogbound coast were silent.

NOV 24 1944

McVanis

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 23 (AP) — American fighter planes and light naval craft tightened their precautions against landing of Japanese reinforcements on Leyte Island today, as Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported the enemy has apparently chosen the Limon bastion for his major stand in defending the Ormoc corridor.

Fighter pilots sank or heavily damaged four troop-laden freighters, four luggers and 14 barges, a communique said, as they fended off an apparent Japanese attempt to send help to their forces on the Yamashita Line.

Draws On Reserves

MacArthur said the enemy "has drawn heavily on his immediate reserves to bolster this line of resistance."

No important American gains were reported in the battle for the Ormoc corridor, but Yankee infantrymen, fighting over a water-logged terrain, drew tighter the noose they have thrown around the Japanese First Division at Limon.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz issued revised figures on Japanese losses in a navy air sweep over Luzon Island last Saturday, disclosing that the Americans had sunk a small coastal cargo ship and a lugger, fired six cargo vessels, an oiler and five luggers and crippled a cruiser.

Installations Lashed

American air patrols made new attacks on enemy ground installations and communication routes in the Ormoc corridor.

The Japanese apparently are attempting to sneak reinforcements to Leyte in small units under cover of darkness, rather than risk heavier losses by sending in large convoys. Light United States naval craft struck enemy shipping along the coast south of Ormoc and near Pacijan Island, which is midway between Cebu and Ormoc.

In a supplemental communique MacArthur announced that American Liberators had damaged two Japanese transports of 6,000 and 1,000 tons at Brunei, Borneo, Sunday night. This port has been bombed frequently by Allied airmen who have scored direct hits on four warships, including a battleship.

Matina airdrome and small shipping at Davao were attacked by air patrols which sank a 1,000-ton freighter.

HOLIDAY MESSAGE VOICED BY HALSEY

Admiral, in Broadcast, Says Men of Third Fleet Give Thanks for 'Turn in Tide of Events'

PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 23 (AP)—Admiral William F. Halsey, broadcasting a Thanksgiving Day message from his Third Fleet flagship, urged America today to be grateful for the courage of its fighting men.

"Men and women of America," he said in a transcribed NBC broadcast released at fleet headquarters, "from the Western Pacific Ocean all hands of your fighting Third Fleet join you in giving thanks this Thanksgiving Day.

"In spite of homesickness and battle privation, there is much to be thankful for. We give grateful thanks for the turn in the tide of events which now is carrying the banners of decency forward—overrunning the enemy's defenses, pressing on to the sources of hatred and oppression.

"We give thanks that we have a decent homeland to fight for. We give thanks that we have been able to keep the enemy's feet and his bloody hand from touching that homeland.

"May you at home never forget to humbly give thanks for the unfaltering, unquestionable courage of the fine young Americans who have made the supreme sacrifice that we might keep the heritage for which above all things we are thankful."

Smith has directed all ground offensives against the Japanese in the Central Pacific from Tarawa to the Marianas.

7 High Bolivians Executed In Plot

La Paz, Bolivia, Nov. 23 (AP)—Seven high army officials and politicians have been executed, thus far for participating in Sunday's abortive revolt at Oruro, Bolivian national police announced last night.

The statement said Col. Militon Brito, described as the revolt leader, had committed suicide when trapped at Kakena on the Chilean frontier, but that Col. Ividio Quiroga, another leader, had escaped.

(A dispatch today from Arica, Chile, said Chilean officials had left for the frontier to investigate a report that Bolivians had entered Chilean territory in pursuit of revolt leaders. This region long has been in dispute between Bolivia and Chile.)

Canada To Use Drafted Men In Army Abroad

Government Abandons Policy Of Sending Only Volunteers Overseas In Face Of Crisis

NOV 24 1944

Ottawa, Nov. 23 (AP)—The Canadian Government, after fighting five years of war by sending only volunteers to fight abroad, abandoned the policy today under a tidal wave of opposition which threatened to put the veteran Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King out of office.

Before a tense House of Commons, called expressly to debate a nation-shaking crisis arising from an immediate need for reinforcements on the Western front, the Prime Minister announced that partial conscription for overseas service had been effected by an Order-in-Council and that 16,000 drafted men had been made available for service overseas.

Voluntary System Failed

King disclosed yesterday that he had written earlier this month that he believed conscription for overseas duty would almost inevitably bring a general election and would risk national dissension and perhaps weaken Canadian unity and strength "for generations to come." Today his Government admitted, however, that the voluntary system had failed.

The Government's new course resulted in at least one resignation from the Cabinet, Air Minister C. G. Power, of Quebec, announcing he had quit because of his opposition to the overseas conscription policy. Whether any of the other six members from the French-speaking province would follow suit was not immediately learned.

Demonstration In Quebec

King's voluntary policy was pursued in the light of the historic opposition to conscription in Quebec, where violence broke out over the issue in the last war. Reaction to the new order, from the province, comprising nearly one third of the Dominion's population, was awaited tonight.

In the city of Quebec a group of 700 youths staged an anti-conscription parade tonight carrying banners reading "down with conscription" and marched to the offices of the Chronicle-Telegraph, where two windows were broken.

Later the demonstrators paraded to the recruiting office, where they attempted to force entry, but were prevented by a large detachment of police.

To Seek New Government

Gordon Graydon, House leader of the Progressive Conservative party, said his party would move for total conscription, making all draftees liable for overseas service.

He said his party planned also to introduce a motion calling for a new government led by a man with the confidence of Parliament and favoring total conscription.

The Government was forced to adopt overseas conscription in the face of a swiftly mounting wave of opposition, which King had failed to check during the last three weeks, despite his appointment of Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, probably Canada's most popular soldier, as Defense Minister.

General McNaughton was named to succeed Col. J. L. Ralston, who resigned November 1, after failing to win the Cabinet over to his view that urgently needed reinforcements should be made from the conscripted home army — the course finally adopted today.

16,000 To Be Sent Abroad

McNaughton explained to Commons that the 16,000 to be sent was the number required to meet foreseen reinforcements for overseas infantry formations over and above those likely to be available through the voluntary system.

The general explained that when he entered the Cabinet the first of the month he had believed the voluntary system would be adequate to supply the reinforcements.

"Since then," he said, "conditions have altered. Public attention has been riveted on these matters. The paramount need of reinforcements in adequate supply had been recognized throughout our land from coast to coast."

Fails To Get Volunteers

McNaughton said that efforts to win volunteers had been increased, but added "I must admit that the results have not been adequate." He added that no home defense troops would be conscripted and sent overseas if enough men volunteered, but otherwise the Government was ready to send them.

After listening to McNaughton, Colonel Ralston, in his first comment in Commons since his resignation, said there appeared to be little difference between him and the general on policy.

Reliable reports circulated through Parliament's corridors prior to today's session that five or six Ministers had indicated they were prepared to resign unless a definite date were set for a brief trial period of the voluntary system.

King's move appeared to have placated these members, but its effect on the Cabinet Ministers from Quebec and the remainder of the 65 Quebec members of Parliament could only be guessed at.

Liberals Have Majority

The Progressive Conservatives have 39 seats in the House, the Socialist Cooperative Commonwealth Federation ten, and other parties less than a dozen. The Prime Minister's Liberals have an overwhelming majority with 161 seats, but the conscription issue is known to cut right through this membership because of the 65 Quebec members.

The Order-in-Council announced today implemented an earlier "Bill 80" passed in 1942 and authorizing the Government to send conscripted home defense troops anywhere. Previous orders under this bill had authorized use of the troops in this hemisphere only.

Today's order authorized their dispatch to the United Kingdom, Europe and other war zones, including the Pacific. The order specifically mentions the 16,000, but the number may be changed later as needs arise.

McNaughton said that the total of 16,000 included 5,000 trained infantrymen needed early in December, another 5,000 in January, and some 6,000 in the succeeding months.

McNaughton Gives Conscription View

Ottawa, Nov. 23 (AP)—The House of Commons called in Defense Minister McNaughton today to outline his views on conscription for overseas duty, a subject so controversial that Prime Minister Mackenzie King has warned that it holds the possibility of weakening Canadian unity "for generations to come."

Since General McNaughton has not been elected to the House since his appointment to the defense post November 2, it was necessary for the House to adopt a special motion yesterday to give him the legal right to make the address.

Cabinet Row "Settled"

Meanwhile, it was learned reliably that a tense situation which developed in the Canadian Cabinet apparently had been settled.

It had been reported previously that several ministers had been insisting that the Government fix a definite time limit in which to give the present voluntary system of providing overseas reinforcements a trial.

They advocate that if the voluntary system fails to make good by a fixed date the drafted home defense army of 60,000 men should be sent overseas.

One source said last night the Cabinet members had reached a "satisfactory understanding."

Defends His Policy

Prime Minister King addressed the House yesterday for nearly two hours and a half in defense of his compromise conscription policy under which men are drafted for service in the Western Hemisphere only and cannot be sent overseas unless they volunteer.

This policy was formed with an eye on the French-speaking province of Quebec, traditionally opposed to conscription.

Our Women 'Not Cowards Like U. S. Women', Jap Says

San Francisco, Nov. 23 (AP) — "The women of Japan," a feminine Japanese propagandist, said today, "are small in size, but are not cowards like American women."

The woman propagandist was introduced over Tokyo radio as Chio Furuno, former University of Chicago sociology student.

She called American women cowards on the basis of a newspaper story reporting a woman who fainted on a crowded streetcar after reading the war news.

Jap Women "Different"

In "enemy America," Miss Furuno said in the Tokyo broadcast recorded here, she saw "women from the army and navy auxiliary corps wearing uniforms resembling those of men, puffing cigarettes at a great rate and waiting to have their food served at a restaurant in Chicago.

"We women of Japan are different from such women and though wearing clothes made of father's old suits and mother's old kimonos, we cheerfully perform work which we had previously thought was possible only by men.

"When war comes I suppose the women of every nation work, but Japan's women do this work without talking about it."

JAPS REPORT 3 RAIDS ON AIRFIELDS IN CHINA

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Raids on three airfields in China by Japanese bomber units were reported yesterday by Domei, Japanese news agency.

The report, picked up by the Federal Communications commission and not confirmed from any Allied source, said thirteen Allied planes were damaged or set ablaze at Suichuan and that three fires were started at Kanchow. Results of the third raid, on Laohokow, were not ascertained, Domei said.

Kanchow is a city in inland north China, several hundred miles from the most active front in that country. Suichan and Laohokow do not appear on available maps of China.

Japs May Form Home Army

By Russell Brines

[Formerly an Associated Press Correspondent in Tokyo]

Washington, Nov. 23.—Japan's army shakeup may be the forerunner of a new long-range indoctrination program to prepare the nation for the time when, like Germany, she faces the dissolution of her main front-line defenses.

The shift of Field Marshal Shunroku Hata from supreme commander in China to inspector general of military education indicates that important domestic training is planned. It may include the military instruction of schoolboy soldiers and the organization of a people's army against the threat of Japan's invasion.

Key Army Position

The inspector generalship is one of the key positions in the army, and the dominant clique customarily gives it only to men who will use the position to support the militarists' domestic power.

The post provides direct control over the training and thoughts of thousands of conscripts. Through them, and by public utterances, the inspector general has great influence on public opinion. His role behind the scenes is equally important.

Hata held the position in 1937. For the past several months, War Minister General Gen Sugiyama has served concurrently as inspector-general. This unusual duality indicated the post was being saved for a trusted member of the ruling clique then busy elsewhere.

Only Winner Of The Year

Hata had a pressing job, the slicing of China in half, which he has completed. He became thereby the only successful Japanese commander of the year. If the reshuffle indicated displeasure with his accomplishments, he would have been dumped into obscurity—like former Premier Hideki Tojo—not retained in a top position.

The field marshal returns to Tokyo with a leading military reputation, with the lingering prestige from his former service as inspector-general and with the firm support of the jingoists, who are important in enflaming public opinion. They remember that, as war minister in 1940, Hata was the first public official to urge a grab toward the dangling European colonies of southwestern Asia.

Handwriting On Wall

Tokyo has begun propaganda preparation for the participation of civilians and already half-trained schoolboys in any defense of the home lands. Hata's role may be to undertake the program.

Americans Giving Thanks, At Home And Abroad

[By the Associated Press]

Thanksgiving came today to American fighting men in the full tide of battle—on a turkey wing and a prayer, a prayer of confidence and hope from a nation in its third wartime observance of a great American tradition.

Many civilian tables throughout the country were lacking turkey but there was no lack of it for soldiers and sailors at home and abroad.

A Must In Combat Zone

The War Department proclaimed turkey a must for the man in the trenches, while those in hospitals, training areas and combat stations also feasted on King Tom. Aship and ashore the navy served holiday dinners from the 12,000,000 pounds of "young roast tom turkey" set aside to supply its Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's feasts.

The army assured that cooked dinners were being carried "very close to the fighting lines," and the navy allotted a pound for each man in the continental United States, with an extra half pound each for the boys at sea and at battle.

NOV 24 1944

Celebration At Plymouth

The townsfolk of Plymouth, Mass.—home of the first Thanksgiving—observed the day in a manner symbolic of the spirit of celebrations throughout the nation and near the battlefronts. There was morning prayer to be followed by their most elaborate wartime feast day and an evening tableaux with a cast of Pilgrim descendants. The Plymouth programs were scheduled for broadcast over regular and short-wave channels.

While traditional church services were being held throughout the nation, religious services were also taking place at every army post on the far-flung battle areas.

Services At Notre Dame

Chaplains with combat units at the front or in towns near the front held non-sectarian services. Catholic religious services were held in the famed Notre Dame Cathedral, Paris, and in the Reims Cathedral.

Civilians of all faiths joined American soldiers in the St. Paul's American Church in Rome to celebrate the holiday. Ambassador Alexander C. Kirk read President Roosevelt's Thanksgiving proclamation.

At Rome, Count Carlo Sforza, Italian Minister without portfolio, told soldiers at the service that they would become a "real American aristocracy" in a United States without isolationism.

The joint Thanksgiving service was conducted by Chaplains Jacob Hochman, Pottsville, Pa.; J. L. Carraway, Ford City, Pa.; S. B. Parker, Junction City, Kan.; Albert S. Trickett, Madison, N. J., and Joe L. Brown, Jr., San Antonio, Texas.

At Westminster Abbey

Buck privates and colonels, Red Cross workers, nurses and British civilians sat side by side in bomb-scarred Westminster Abbey as Americans commemorated Thanksgiving Day.

"Give us the strength to travel the hard road of courage," asked the Rt. Rev. Henry W. Hobson, Episcopal Bishop of southern Ohio, in the abbey service.

Ambassador John G. Winant read President Roosevelt's Thanksgiving proclamation.

Boston, England, Celebrates

The town of Boston, England, was to entertain 100 American soldiers and nurses at an evening Thanksgiving ball, with music provided by United States Army bands.

In Cherbourg, France, French civilians and British troops joined Americans in a festival evening at the municipal theater.

Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges told his troops of the United States First Army driving inside Germany along the approaches to Cologne:

"It is enough for us to know that because of you people of all the world today are giving thanks to God Almighty, who has made possible your vast achievement."

At New Delhi American soldiers feasted on canned turkey and square pumpkin pies, but the holiday probably wasn't much for the GIs in the jungles. Some of the men had peacock, which is good though illegal.

War Plants Working

On the home front war plants remained on full production schedule, but stores and mercantile firms closed generally.

Because of the calendar quirk which produced five Thursdays this month, there again was a mixup over the holiday date. Forty-one States and the District of Columbia followed the Federal statute in celebrating today.

Arkansas, Idaho, Nebraska, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia will have their legal State holidays on the fifth Thursday, November 30, although two Arkansas cities, Fort Smith and Fayetteville, selected today for their municipal observance. Georgia will have two Thanksgivings—today by Gubernatorial proclamation and next Thursday by State law.

Looking Forward To Peace

Encouraging reports from the battlefronts provided the theme for church services giving thanks for the successes of the United Nations and looking forward to victory and peace in 1945.

Cities joined in extending hospitality to visiting servicemen and women at the special church services and at USO centers and canteens.

Patients at the Army's Fitzsimmons General Hospital in Denver had Film Actress Louise Allbritton as a guest to cut a 1,000-pound cake. There was a home Thanksgiving atmosphere at the Army's Cushing Hospital at Framingham, Mass., where patients had invited members of their immediate families for turkey dinners.

Scarity of turkeys for civilian tables resulted in the substitution of other fowl. Large shipments of turkeys reached Chicago markets too late for distribution. OPA inspectors, standing in line with patient housewives at butcher shops, reported widespread price violations in New York.

Festivity In Moscow

At Moscow, the United States colony—bigger than at any time since the start of the war—celebrated Thanksgiving with two official parties.

Russian turkey cooked American style was featured at both affairs—one at Spasso House, home of United States Ambassador W. Averell Harriman; the other at the Metropole Hotel. Maj. Gen. J. Russell Deane, chief of the United States military mission to the Soviet Union, put on an army and navy show at the Metropole.

Americans in other parts of the Soviet Union—Vladivostok, Archangel, Murmansk, Kuibyshev—all managed to find turkeys.

WORLD PLANS FOR AIR READY

Conferees Will Vote On Standards Proposed

Chicago, Nov. 23 (AP)—Except for a formal vote in a full conference session, work was completed today on a proposed world agreement for aviation standards and procedures at the International Civil Aviation Conference.

The technical committee adopted a report after making a change at Ireland's suggestion which gives each nation which desires it the assurance of a place on future technical committees. This report is related to the thousands of details in the ten annexes which will be attached to an air convention when it is ratified.

The annexes provide common standards for aircraft, airports, maps and charts, weather reports and personnel qualifications.

This released some of the technicians and a part of the secretariat from the conference. However, the great bulk of the people at the meeting must stay on for completion of work on proposed agreements for air navigation standards, an interim council and an air transport program.

bring their ideas together in nine days of private talks, in which the Canadians took a middle course and did much of the difficult work of drafting compromise proposals into formal language.

One of the men closest to the tight struggle said, however, that after yesterday's open meeting of three committees—representing all of the countries—he felt there was a 50-50 chance for success, whereas he entered the meeting feeling the chance was one in a thousand.

The meeting was the long-awaited opportunity for the various countries to speak their minds on the document prepared by American, British and Canadian leaders and submitted without commitment.

Consultative And Review Body

It created "The International Air Administration" as a consultative and review body for world airlines.

It included a plan for fixing of minimum rates by operators, provided for bilateral negotiations on routes, preserved the rights of cabotage (internal traffic) and of fixing the routes and stopping places foreign aircraft must use, provided for administration of world standards for air navigation and the technical phases of aviation.

What it left unsaid was what should be done about the right to carry intermediate traffic—a "fifth freedom" which the United States wants added to Canada's four—and how limitations should be put on the plane-carrying capacity which operators could offer.

"Surmount Numerous Obstacles"

Lord Swinton, the British leader, urged that these results should not be minimized and said that "if, though we do not reach our ultimate objective, we nevertheless go a very long way and surmount numerous obstacles." He suggested that the interim council would be "an international conference always at work."

Berle proposed that the three committees sit jointly as a subcommittee—a change which closes their sessions to the press—to consider the "Big Three" document "together with all the problems relevant thereto." John Martin, of South Africa, will preside at those sessions.

Technical Standards

Meanwhile, the technical standards committee urged that machinery for completing and later amplifying technical studies begun here be set up promptly.

Reporting at a full session, the committee suggested:

1. That the interim council of nations for air transport consultation being set up at the conference employ a secretariat of experts, and that the eventual permanent body do the same.

2. That committees of experts able to give part of their time be got together in specialized technical fields.

3. That at the same time more general technical committees concerned primarily with coordination be established.

Degrees Of Obligation

The draft called for varying degrees of obligation concerning technical standards, based on their importance to safety in international flying.

The rules for the air would be fully standardized, while such matters as minimum standards for airway organization would be in the nature of recommended practices.

54 Nations Debating Global Air Document

Chicago, Nov. 23 (AP)—Dragged out of seclusion by a spontaneous outburst the Anglo-American struggle for complete agreement on a global air transport body was placed today before delegates of 54 nations participating in the International Civil Aviation Conference.

The hope for immediate solution of the question of economic control was thus pulled from the grave during what had the appearance of a burial service, such as that given the Australian-New Zealand plan for a single world airline early in the 23-day meeting, but observers were reluctant to encourage optimism.

Nine Days Of Private Talks

It was pointed out that the British and Americans had failed to

Points Of Disagreement

In those two points lies the disagreement in which the Americans and British have been reported to agree in principle but not in writing.

As Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, of New York, put it in a closing speech at yesterday's meeting, "our minds have been unable to agree on how to say what is in our hearts."

Adolf A. Berle, Jr., chairman of the United States delegation, told the meeting that he was frank to say that the conference already had gone as far as had been supposed it could. He lauded the success of efforts to establish an air navigation agreement, and particularly the progress of an interim

Eisenhower Appeals For Bond Sales

Washington, Nov. 23 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower said today his soldiers are making daily headway by courage and suffering, but they need myriads of shells and tires and guns and blankets and planes.

The man commanding the gigantic western-front offensive against Germany appealed personally to the American people to over-subscribe the Sixth War Loan drive and "transform the money quickly into vital fighting equipment."

It was Eisenhower's second urgent appeal to buy war bonds. He made it in a talk prepared for broadcast from his European headquarters. The text of the statement also was released by the Treasury Department.

Mud Can't Stop GI's

Mud, cold, bullets and minefields can't stop the millions of American boys from pushing the enemy back if they are plentifully supplied and supported from the homeland, Eisenhower declared.

The equipment is needed "now," he said. And the soldiers must get it "from the money you lend the Government."

He said the American fighting men are "entitled to the constant assurance of your understanding, of your resolution and of your unflagging zeal."

War Loan headquarters had no new figures for Thanksgiving Day. The latest progress report yesterday chalked up $482,000,000 paid in by individuals, compared with the total quota for individuals of $5,000,000,000. The drive began Monday and will end December 16.

Nimitz Thanks Home Front

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet, said in a Thanksgiving Day message over the same program with Eisenhower: "We give thanks . . . to the men and women and children on the home front. Their toil and their savings invested in war bonds have made possible the outfitting and supply of the great fleet which has struck the enemy so effectively."

Gen. Douglas MacArthur in a war-bond message released by the Treasury said: "We at the front have complete faith in you at home. The spirit of America—always in your heart—has never failed us and we know you will supply needed money through the purchase and holding of war bonds."

BATTLE CASUALTIES 528,795 TO NOV. 7

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (AP)—Battle casualties in the armed forces in all theatres since the start of the war total 528,795.

Secretary Stimson said today Army casualties reported through Nov. 7 amounted to 454,180 of which 88,245 were killed. This was an increase of 16,724 since a previous report covering casualties reported through Oct. 28.

The latest Navy report puts casualties at 74,615, an increase of 2,776 since a report two weeks ago.

Army casualties compared with those for two weeks ago, are:

Killed, 88,245 and 84,811; wounded, 254,283 and 243,054; missing, 56,442 and 55,011 prisoners, 55,210 and 54,480.

The Navy casualties are:

Killed, 29,208 and 28,599; wounded, 31,574 and 29,442; missing, 9,347 and 9,311; prisoners, 4,486 and 4,487.

TRAINING OF YOUTH ENDORSED BY NAVY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23—(AP) Secretary Forrestal tonight gave the navy's unqualified endorsement to postwar military training for every physically fit young man.

In a statement prepared for broadcast (March of Time, Blue network) Forrestal said the Navy considered such training "imperative."

"The Navy," the Secretary said, "believes every physically fit young man should be given military training as a national life insurance policy, a contribution to our country's security. We think of this training not merely as a sensible precaution—we think it is imperative.

"The Navy, if military service is universal, can give its men basic training and nine months more of advanced training ashore and afloat. There is no reason to fear that this training would turn us into a nation of militarists. Not even war has done that. On the contrary, the preparedness of the United States is our inescapable contribution to world peace."

CRUELTY OF JAPS TOLD BY CAPTAIN

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 23 — (AP) Capt. Felix G. Sharp, Jr., who arrived home here today after having been imprisoned for two and a half years by the Japanese in the Philippines said the Japanese of Jap troops almost broke when they saw rubber heels and tin cans in Red Cross packets.

The 28-year-old officer who survived the sinking of a Japanese transport said the Japs believed the United States was out of these things. He also said that Jap newspapers "sank" the U. S. Navy at least once a week.

Capt. Sharp was among those who escaped from a Jap transport which was sunk by an American torpedo. The vessel was loaded with American prisoners of war being evacuated from the camp at Davao and headed for Manila. The panicky Japs, he said, opened fire on the helpless heads bobbing in the waves two miles off shore. Thirty or more were killed before a group of 83 struggled ashore and were hidden by friendly Filipinos.

Capt. Sharp was with a coast artillery outfit which landed in the Philippines six months before war broke out. Just 13 days after Pearl Harbor he said his outfit made contact with the enemy and battled them hand to hand all the way down the island of Mindanao. Orders came to surrender May 10, 1942 four days after the fall of Corregidor.

The Jacksonville captain was one of about a thousand prisoners sent to a prison camp at Malayabalay for about five months. He said here that if you can stick it out for six months in a Jap camp, you can live forever. When Capt. Sharp surrendered he weighed 185 pounds and when he escaped his weight had dropped to 145 pounds.

"I cut my hair every six months whether I needed it or not. It was some protection to have a thick mat of hair," Sharp said. He added "I feel funny in a uniform and shoes. We were almost naked when we got to Australia. I didn't have shoes on for two years." He has a blister on one foot now because he is not yet used to shoes.

Capt. Sharp has a three months leave.

MARINE KEEPS FIGHTING JAPS

Escaped Corregidor, Joined Guerrillas, Back In Line

NOV 24 1944

Washington, Nov. 23 (AP)—The Marine Corps today revealed the story of "the corporal who wouldn't give up."

The marine hero escaped from Corregidor the day it surrendered, became a first lieutenant in the army, fought with the guerrillas in the Philippines for nearly two years, escaped, reenlisted in the marines, demanded combat duty, and again is overseas where the Japs are thickest.

Now Is Sergeant

Now a sergeant, the rugged blue-eyed fighter is Reid C. Chamberlain, 25, El Cajor, Cal., whose Distinguished Service Cross citation early this year was for security reasons limited to a terse affirmation of "extraordinary heroism i naction. . . ."

First reported missing, then dead, then "secretly alive," young Chamberlain was a joyous secret indeed to his mother, Mrs. Ettie May Chamberlain, of El Cajon.

Serving with the Fourth Marines Private (first class) Chamberlain fought first on Bataan, winning promotion to corporal, then on Corregidor.

When the impending surrender of "the rock" was announced on the morning of May 6, 1942, the corporal, with several marine and army companions, escaped in a motor launch.

Set Out For China

How they got from island to island, where and how they served with guerrilla bands in 1942 may not told.

Near the end of the year they acquired a launch and set out for China.

Their engine failed some 70 miles at sea. They drifted 28 days before landing again in the Philippines.

Corporal Chamberlain, another American and two Filipinos acquired a native sailboat, eventually set sail for Australia. The corporal changed his mind and returned to the Philippines with some inter-islanders who put him in touch with a guerrilla outfie.

Smuggled Supplies

The corporal went "outs Ide" for the guerrillas, smuggled in guns, powder, lead, gasoline. A guerrilla leader, a colonel in the United Statesm Army, commissioned him a second lieutenant and, six adventure-filled months Lazer, promoted him to first lieutenant.

After two years in the Philippines, first Lieutenant R. C. Chamberlain, USA, came back to America.

In Washington the paper-confusion was great. The marines gave him a dischargee. The army permitted him to resign his commission and gave him the Distinguished Service Cross.

Then the youth, who did some growing up in his native Parkin, Ark., before his family moved west, re-enlisted in the Marine Corps. He was given appointment to the officer candidates class at Quantio.

Applies For Line Duty

Lieut.-Gen. Alexander A. Vandergrift, commandant of the Marine Corps, arranged a 60-day furlough.

He went to Quantico, but no sooner had he entered school than he applied for line duty.

It was an unusual request, three days after admission to an officer-training school. He got his transfer, went to a West Coast base. Orders stipulated that he was not be transferred again without the express approval of the commandant. He was "stuck for the duration."

Appeals To General

He won promotion to sergeant. In time he was presented the Purple Heart with Gold Star for wounds of 1942.

Sergeant Chamberlain could have had another fling at candidates class, but he was getting tired of his peaceful existence.

The commandant received another formal request. Please, could he be "released" for combat duty?

The sergeant was still subject to recurrent malaria, and that alone is good reason to keep a man idle. But as his commanding officer wrote approving sergeant Chamberlain's request, the Californian had "a valuable temperament for combat."

General Vandegrift agreed.

Russ-Romanian Peace Commission Men Named

Washington, Nov. 23 (AP)—Four United States military representatives on the Allied Control Commission to supervise fulfillment of armistice terms between Russia and Romania were announced today by the army and navy.

The commission, composed of Soviet, British and United States delegates, will act under general direction of the Soviet high Command.

American members are:

Brig.-Gen. Cortlandt Van Rensselaer Schuyler, Camp Davis, North Carolina; Commander Phillip B. Brannen, of Flagstaff, Ariz.; Lieut.-Col. Grady C. McGlasson, Chevy Chase, Md., and Lieut.-Col. Robert G. Emmens, Medford, Oregon.

CASTLEBERRY KILLED IN WAR

Former Georgia Tech Gridder Was Copilot Of Bomber

Atlanta, Nov. 23 (AP)—Second Lieutenant C. D. (Clint) Castleberry, 20, freshman star of the 1942 Georgia Tech football team, has been killed in the Mediterranean theater, his parents were notified today by the War Department.

Castleberry, copilot of a B-26, had previously been listed as missing while en route to a Mediterranean base on a noncombat flight.

He played for Tech while a freshman and was one of the most publicized players in the country. He made the 1942 All-Southern team, the first freshman ever to be chosen.

C. E. Gauss, Ex-Envoy To China, Back In U. S.

New York, Nov. 23 (AP)—Clarence E. Gauss, who resigned recently as United States Ambassador to China, arrived here today aboard an army transport command plane.

A fellow passenger was Dr. Chun J. Pao, Chinese Ambassador to Peru, who is en route to Lima.

Gauss said he would remain in New York overnight and then proceed to Washington.

Halifax to Tour Mid-West

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Earl of Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, and Lady Halifax will leave Washington Saturday for a week's trip through Iowa, Illinois and Wisconsin.

Stimson Refuses List Of Troop Percentages

Washington, Nov. 23 (AP)—War Secretary Stimson declined today to state the relative percentages of French, British, Canadian and American troops on the western European front.

Stimson told his news conference he did not think he should speak without an agreement among the countries. He said he is "convinced all our Allies are contributing to the full measure of their resources."

Sugar Rations May Go On For Year After War Ends

W.F.A. Says Shortage Won't End Before Pacific Liberation

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (AP).—Rationing or other restrictions on the consumption of sugar in this and other world importing countries may continue for a year or so after the war with Japan is won.

This prospect was painted by the War Food Administration today in a domestic sugar production report calling for greater acreages of sugar beets in this country in 1945.

NOV 24 1944

"It is expected," the report said, "that the sugar supply situation will be more critical during 1945 than in 1946. It is not expected that the world shortage of sugar will be overcome until the far Pacific areas are liberated and have an opportunity to rebuild and the European beet sugar producing industries have been rehabilitated."

To ease the supply situation for the United Nations, the government may soon discontinue the practice of using raw sugar from Cuba and other Caribbean areas in the manufacture of industrial alcohol for war purposes. Domestic wheat and other grains will be used instead.

Million-Acre Cut In Wheat Crop Asked

Washington, Nov. 23 (AP)—The War Food Administration is recommending a million-acre reduction in previously announced production goals for wheat for harvest in 1945.

It suggests instead that the million acres be planted to flaxseed, supplies of which are said to be needed in greater quantities for the manufacture of paints, varnishes and similar industrial materials. Spring wheat and flaxseed are interchangeable crops in some North-Central States.

The WFA said the suggested reduction in the wheat acreage would not bring a shortage of the bread grain, inasmuch as this year's crop turned out much larger than expected when the 1945 wheat goals were set originally. The national wheat goal is 67,600,000 acres.

WFA Foresees Tight Tobacco Supply In '45

Washington, Nov. 23 (AP)—To the troubles of cigarette smokers who figure they're lucky these days to find a pack anywhere, the War Food Administration today piled this unhappy thought:

The tight supply situation may continue beyond harvest of next year's tobacco crops.

In a report on 1945 tobacco production goals, the WFA said war requirements have exceeded production, reducing stocks below normal.

Demand May Increase

The demand for American tobacco, it explained, may increase next year, regardless of whether the war ends in the meantime.

"It is estimated," the report said, "that exports during the 1944-45 season will be larger than occurred during the 1943-44 season primarily because of more liberated countries in Europe and the movement abroad of foreign-owned tobacco now stored in the United States.

"Also, any easing of the shipping situation as well as the desire of liberated countries to obtain tobacco to replenish diminished or exhausted stocks will increase exports during the next year or two."

Shortages In France

There have been widespread reports and complaints of cigarette shortages in recent weeks from civilians at home and fighting men overseas, especially France.

Army authorities have explained that a lack of sufficient shipping to carry all needed ammunition, and such things as smokes as well, has caused the shortage in France.

Domestically, Price Administrator Bowles has said fears of shortages, rather than actual shortages, contributed largely to the situation. OPA has held rationing to be unfeasible, Bowles saying that "with sane buying there should be enough cigarettes available."

OPA HALTERS CLOTHES COST

Starts Move To Stop Rising Apparel Prices

Washington, Nov. 23 (AP)—The Office of Price Administration tonight launched a drive to nip a rise in clothing prices.

Chester Bowles, Price Administrator, announced that "simple, easy-to-understand" dollar-and-cent ceiling prices will be fixed on low-cost infants' and children's garments for which the War Production Board allocated 40,000,000 yards of cloth.

The second move was issuance of a regulation aimed at reduction of "overfinishing" and "fancying-up" of fabrics, a practice OPA said had "added greatly" to the cost of both cotton and rayon clothing.

Slight Rise "Must Stop"

Both programs, described as the first of a series of moves to hold clothing prices in line, follow closely Stabilization Director Vinson's edict that a recent slight but "disturbing" rise in living costs "must stop."

Bowles said for the last 18 months "price rises in clothing have been the greatest threat to the program to hold the line on the cost of living."

"In my opinion," he added, "any increases in the cost-of-living index in the coming months will stop completely as soon as [these] programs are fully effective."

With Us For Duration

He added, however, that despite these efforts "the clothing problem—as far as price control and supply are concerned—will be with us as long as the war is on."

Bowles said the new programs followed many complaints from the public "about the disappearance of low-priced clothing, about deterioration of quality—which is really a price increase—and about rising prices for garments."

Contributing to the complexity of establishing effective regulations to solve this problem, Bowles pointed out, are these factors:

Hundreds of new models, rapid changes in styles, the past close relationship of prices to style, difficulty in relating prices to quality specifications and "the ease with which manufacturers can shift from one line to another, usually a more expensive line."

The White Shirt Problem

While details of the program of dollar-and-cents ceilings for low-cost children's clothing will be announced by OPA in a few days, Bowles cautioned that it will be some time, possibly four or five months, before these garments appear in retail stores.

Of overfinishing of cotton and rayon fabric which OPA moved to curb, Bowles explained that by printing fancy designs on types of cloth that ordinarily receive simple and less expensive prints, the cost of the finished fabric is increased.

NOV 24 1944

As an example, he cited the great difficulty in obtaining an inexpensive plain white shirt "because it was more profitable to make this cloth into gaudily checked material suitable only for sports shirts."

Bowles said that prices for rayon and cotton yard goods might be reduced by as much as $60,000,000 annually as a result of the regulation covering overfinishing. This new measure will be effective on all shipments of goods from finishing plants after January 3.

25 P. C. Increase In Heavy Tires Held Vital

Washington, Nov. 23 (AP)—Attacking supply shortages one by one, the War Production Board today sent out 32 rubber executives to find means of increasing heavy-tire output 25 per cent.

Although the military demand for truck and bus tires "evidently is in excess of the industry's ability to produce," WPB Vice-Chairman Hiland G. Batcheller said the agency intends to "do everything possible to get the things that General Eisenhower needs."

Big Deficit Seen

After a meeting last night Batcheller reported a looming deficit of 1,000,000 heavy-duty tires in the first quarter of 1945. The industry reported its capacity as 3,930,000 in those three months, while absolute minimum needs—mostly those of the army—were put at 4,941,000.

Synthetic tires are not lasting as well as expected because of the rough and muddy battle-zone terrain of Europe, the WPB official disclosed. And original military estimates of need have proved insufficient.

Life Expectancy Shorter

In the Pacific, he said, abrasive coral dust has shortened the life expectancy of tires.

While it may be necessary to cut passenger tire production somewhat by diverting labor and equipment to military work, WPB declared it likely the B and C card drivers would continue to get needed tires. Domestic truck and bus tire allotments, already deeply slashed, will not be reduced further.

Full Details Sought

The tire company officials were asked to report in fullest detail what increase could be expected by the adoption of every expedient short of new plant construction.

If the resultant figures still prove short of the minimum needs, Batcheller said the country would have to launch into another tire plant construction program like the $80,000,000 expansion effort now coming to completion. And it requires nine months to a year to build a new factory even under top wartime priority.

Missouri Valley Plan Vote To Be Demanded

Washington, Nov. 23 (AP)—A test of sentiment on the proposed Missouri Valley Authority at this session of Congress is assured.

Attaching the proposal to a $1,000,000,000 post-war flood-control bill Senators Langer (R., N. D.) and Murray (D., Mont.) said they would demand a vote as soon as the Senate acts on related controversies over States' rights, irrigation and the sale of hydroelectric power.

A Missouri Valley Authority to develop the basin's resources would coincide with President Roosevelt's policy to set up agencies like the Tennessee Valley Authority. The President had not, however, requested action by the 78th Congress.

Flood Bill Jeopardized

The MVA proposal further jeopardized the flood-control authorization approved earlier by the House. When the Senators recessed over Thanksgiving they had not settled a dispute over the sale of power developed at Government projects.

Senator Bailey said proposals to build transmission lines at Federal expense would "extinguish free enterprise." This was disputed by Majority Leader Barkley (D., Ky.). He also presented a letter from Interior Secretary Ickes opposing Bailey's amendment to require that power be sold at the point of origin for three years after completion of projects.

CONGRESS FACES MANY VITAL BILLS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23—(AP) After the traditional day of feast and pleasantry, Congress grapples again tomorrow with a pre-Christmas schedule loaded with issues that may blast leadership hopes for harmony.

Focal point is the first post-election meeting of the House Ways and Means committee, headed by Rep. Doughton (D-N.C.).

When the committee breaks up Congress probably will have a good idea whether there is to be one last 1944 battle between the White House and Capitol Hill—this time on the question whether the Social Security tax will be allowed to double on January 1, as provided in the basic Social Security law.

A bloc of Republicans, aided by some Democrats, is intent on "freezing" the tax at its present level of one per cent each on employers and employees. Congress has done this thrice before.

Doughton said he wanted to avoid a fight if possible, and it appeared to be generally conceded on the bill that Mr. Roosevelt veto aonther "freeze" bill.

Meanwhile, the Senate had two brewing controversies of its own.

The question of setting up a Missouri Valley authority was tossed into its lap, as an amendment to the proposed billion-dollar flood control authorization.

Waiting for it also was the explosive St. Lawrence waterway project.

Senators Langer (R-N.D.) and Murray (D-Mont.) dropped in the Missouri Valley authority amendment. It proposes to create a MVA on the line to the TVA to foster flood control, navigation, hydro-electric power and related works, in line with Mr. Roosevelt's idea of seven agencies similar to TVA.

IDDLE ACTION

DRAWS PROBE

Senate War Group To Go Into Resignation Request

Washington, Nov. 23 (AP)—Senator Kilgore (D., W. Va.) said tonight the Senate War Investigating Committee expects to inquire into Attorney General Biddle's request for the resignation of his assistant, Norman M. Littell.

Informed sources said the resignation had been asked for on the basis of "incompatibiilty" between the two men.

Kilgore said a long-smoldering feud between the Attorney General and Littell was the result of information given by Littell during hearings of the committee when it was headed by Senator Truman (D., Mo.).

Interest 'Matter Of Policy'

Describing the committee's interest in the Justice Department rift as an important matter of policy, Kilgore told a reporter:

"Frankly, we are going to get to the bottom of this because we don't want to have witnesses punished. It is a dangerous situation and we are going to get the bedrock facts on it."

Littell said he could make no comment on the situation until his answer was given Biddle, probably late tomorrow.

The assistant attorney general, chief of the Justice Department Land Division, is a Presidential appointee, whose nomination was confirmed by the Senate.

Held Past 5 Years

Littell, a Rhodes scholar, has held his Justice Department position five years. Previously, he was a member of the law firm of Evans, McLaren and Littell in Seattle, Wash., and had undertaken extensive investigations into the West Coast oil business for the Federal Government in connection with the old National Recovery Administration.

The Assistant Attorney General analyzed the Elk Hills oil contract between the Navy Department and Standard Oil Company of California. The contract subsequently was cancelled by the President.

At that time Littell told the House Public Lands Committee the contract "went beyond" contracts involved in the Teapot Dome oil scandal of the Harding Administration.

2 Brothers In Lower House First Since 1851

Columbia, Mo., Nov. 23 (AP)—For the first time since 1851, two brothers will sit together in the lower House of Congress—and they are Republicans and natives from the stanch Democratic county of Boone in the heart of Missouri's Democratic "Little Dixie."

One is Representative Max Schwabe, reelected from the Second Missouri district. The other is George B. Schwabe, who migrated from Missouri to Oklahoma several years ago, and last week was elected from Oklahoma's First district.

Max Schwabe said the Library of Congress advised him the House had not seen a brother act since 1851, when three Washburns—brothers, were elected, Israel from Maine, Cadwalader from Wisconsin

PICKETING ALL OVER IN DAYTON

Operators Get Word From Officials And Go Home

Dayton, Ohio, Nov. 23 (AP)—Striking switchboard operators quit a week-old picket line in front of the Ohio Bell Telephone Company here at 9.11 P. M. tonight, just a few hours less than a week after the start of a strike which burgeoned into a nationwide communications crisis.

After Robert G. Pollock, Federation president, told the War Labor Board in Washington earlier today he would urge operators to resume work, Miss Jeannette Reedy, head of the Federation's Southwestern Conference, telegraphed a back-to-work order to the Dayton operators.

June Murray, conference treasurer, read the message, which said: "Settlement made. Stop all strike activity. Notify all officers and deputies to urge members to return to work as soon as they are able. This is an order."

'You Can Go Home Now'

Reading the message to approximately 30 operators on the sidewalk before the Ohio Bell Exchange, Miss Murray concluded with:

"So, girls, you can go home now."

Picket lines had been maintained constantly throughout the strike, which began in protest against payment of $18.25 weekly expense bonuses to outside girls working in Dayton.

As the settlement was announced tonight, "hello girls" sang, joked and cheered, awaiting formal word from their immediate officers that the picket line could be disbanded.

William Dobscha, education director for the federation, conferred with Wayne R. Rittenhouse, Ohio Bell traffic chief, before the telegram was read to the girls. He did not disclose the nature of the conference.

May Resume

Mrs. Betty Haley, chairman of the union local here, said the Dayton operators' position is "that if the settlement is not satisfactory we will resume appropriate action."

"These girls were out for the sole purpose for the removal of transferees from the Dayton office," she added.

Dobscha said the union would put "a corps of people on telephones throughout the night to notify other districts and the Dayton operators of the settlement."

Ohio Bell officials at Columbus redicted "ful resumption by regular shifts or operators" by tomorrow morning.

White House May Act As Phone Strike Hits Capital

NOV 24 1944

Dayton, Ohio, Nov. 23 (AP)—Miss Jeanette Reedy, leader in a strike of telephone operators that is threatening communications across the nation, advised associates here that prospects for settling the dispute today were "good."

Washington, Nov. 23 (AP)—A growing strike of women telephone operators, assuming national significance, hit Washington today, and with it came the prospect of White House action.

Not only was the war-busy Capital engulfed by the spread of walkouts which started a week ago in Dayton, Ohio, but the great production centers of Michigan as well. Other cities were in the path.

Detroit Workers Strike

Operators of the nation's Capital, center of a network which links the United Nations, began walking out hours in advance of the formal start set for 6 A. M. today.

A shift of Detroit workers left their jobs at 6 A. M. and formed picket lines, leaving a skeleton crew to handle essential calls.

In Washington, picketing began simultaneously at three telephone company buildings, but a company official said the extent of the strike would have to await a change of shifts later in the morning.

And there were rumblings of still more strikes in answer to the Ohio Federation of Telephone Workers' appeal for assistance from 41 affiliated unions.

Long-distance calls were primarily affected.

Picketing Orderly

In Washington, a long-distance operator answered promptly shortly after 8 A. M. Asked if calls were being accepted, she said: "There are a few of us here, and we will do the best we can."

Picketing was orderly in both Detroit and Washington. The shift changes here, staggered over several hours, found only a trickle of workers—both men and women—entering the exchanges. There was some good-natured banter.

A company spokesman said he anticipated no serious interruption, adding that there were enough supervisory employes with operating and maintenance experience to service equipment and provide skeleton staffs for suburban exchanges not equipped with automatic dial systems.

Ignore WLB Message

No estimate was immediately available on the number of operators out here, but the spokesman said it was large.

Just as the estimated 5,000 Ohio workers flatly rejected a get-back-to-work-or-else order of the War Labor Board, the 2,700 Washington operators ignored another WLB message which said that "any interference with telephone service in the nation's Capital at this critical period of the war cannot be tolerated."

The War Labor Board, after wrestling with the Ohio dispute throughout Wednesday, deferred its "or else" action—the possibility of the Government taking over—until today. It announced last night it would refer the case to Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson—an action which normally precedes actual presentation to President Roosevelt.

Started In Dayton

The War Production Board, the War Department and other agencies interested themselves in the case, but their officials declined to say whether they were taking any active part.

Women formed the rank and file of the strike show, for the first time on such a scale.

The strike started in a protest by Dayton operators against granting of $18.25 living expense accounts weekly to outsiders brought in to help run the switchboards. Operators in other Ohio cities fell in line.

NOV 24 1944

Practice Held Necessary

The Washington operators said they likewise objected to a similar practice here, sympathized with the Ohio strikers and, in addition, had some wage grievances as to basic pay scales.

Company officials have said the practice is necessary in these times of much work and shortage of help—that it is only fair to help out-of-towners meet extra expenses.

Effects of the strike were quickly felt in Washington, where thousands of calls are handled daily to and from war production centers and military establishments.

Only high priority long-distance calls were accepted beginning early last night. Local service on automatic dial telephones was not affected.

Emergency Force On Jobs

A spokesman of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company said it would maintain essential services. Mrs. Mary E. Gannon, Washington union president, said the only operators remaining on their jobs would be "an emergency force to handle only priority calls of top emergency."

Government seizure of the Ohio lines or a direct appeal from the President to the striking workers were noted in advance as possibilities. Should the Government take over the companies, under the Connally-Smith Act it would be illegal for anyone to foster a strike.

Earl Culp, editor of the Ohio federation's Bulletin, commented that "if the Government takes over, it would mean at least a moral victory for the federation."

Bricker Issues Appeal

Refusal of the Ohio union leaders to order their workers back on the job drew from Nathan P. Feinsinger, WLB hearing chairman, yesterday the assertion that "you have taken on the Government of the United States. No union has done this yet and succeeded. This is the effect of your decision."

War Labor Board members stressed that under WLB policy nothing could be done to settle the Ohio dispute as long as the strike continued. Later they told the Washington union that a "work stoppage will only succeed in delaying a final decision."

Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio directed an appeal "to every telephone employe who loves his or her country to respond to the call to duty and to return to work at once." Bricker said he made his appeal "to give our brave fighting forces what they must have to win and to save some lives."

Vote Slated Tomorrow

William Dunn, president of the Cincinnati Federation of Telephone Workers, announced that 2,000 union employes of the Cincinnati Suburban Bell Company would vote tomorrow on the question of joining the walkout.

At 9 A. M. (E.W.T.), three hours after the Detroit strike began, a Michigan Bell Telephone Company spokesman said service was "practically normal"; that there was no out-State interruption and that "calls to distant points, such as Washington," were being handled without difficulty.

At that hour the company reported a survey showed that of 205 operators due at work 145 had reported. In the long-lines department, the company said, 71 operators were at work, although only 57 had been scheduled to report. The company had provided sleeping accommodations for employes who chose to remain in the main telephone building at the end of their regular shifts last night.

Doubts Company's Claim

Officials of the Michigan Telephone Employes Federation maintained, however, that a "normal" number of operators left at the end of work last night and that only a few employes passed through picket lines that formed around the main Michigan Bell Office a few minutes before the strike was scheduled to begin.

Mrs. Frances Smith, president of the federation, said that "if the company's claim is true—and I doubt it—then the shift is made up largely of girls inveigled by the company into staying and of girls dragged in to break the strike."

Leon Cousens, federation attorney, claimed that if some operators were persuaded to stay on duty for two consecutive shifts, the company was violating a State law which he said restricts employment of women to ten hours in any 24-hour period.

The walkout did not affect interstate lines, since they are operated by American Telephone and Telegraph Company employes not affiliated with the Michigan federation.

A picket line of 25 or 30 women, some with cards saying "strike and support Ohio" pinned to their coats, marched before the building entrance.

The Michigan strike was termed "illegal," "illogical" and "a clear violation of the Smith-Connally Act" by George M. Welch, president of Michigan Bell.

"Everyone knows that the war effort in Detroit and throughout Michigan will be seriously impaired by interrupting the telephone service which helps the citizen get his day-to-day job done," Welch declared at Detroit.

"Makes No Sense"

"It makes no sense," he said. "It was called out of sympathy for Ohio workers who themselves were in violation of the law in striking."

Welch deplored the strike as a "shocking and bitter disappointment" to himself personally after his 40 years in the telephone industry.

"I had thought that our employes were so devoted to the service that they would not abandon their posts in such reckless fashion," he said.

The Michigan federation claims a membership of 4,000, including 2,000 Detroit operators. Several other units in the State have expressed a willingness to join in the strike, Mrs. Smith said, but they will not be called out at least for the present.

Other Developments

Elsewhere throughout the nation were these developments:

In New York, representatives of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and the Federation of Long Lines Telephone Workers arranged further consideration of a federation proposal to handle only those calls to the Ohio strike area having to do with the war effort. Under it, said Mrs. Norman Naughton, of the union, personal or social calls would be refused.

The strike was supported by a formal notice last night after a meeting between representatives of the company and the traffic, plant and administrative branches of the Federation of Long Lines Telephone Workers.

Federation members at Pittsburgh voted "to support our national federation officers in any action they may deem necessary in connection with the emergency."

"Looks Critical"

Edwin R. Hackett, of Chicago, attorney for the Illinois Telephone Traffic Union, said heads of 22 locals in Illinois had been notified to advise the State president if they were in sympathy with the Ohio walkout.

Mrs. Jewel Whatley, of Houston, acting president of the Southwestern Telephone Workers' Union, said the "situation looks critical" but aded she would await national headquarters action before taking any action. Her union has members in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Missouri and Kansas.

W. Va. Sets Meeting

The course to be pursued by West Virginia telephone workers in the spreading strike of operators throughout the nation will be determined by their union leaders at a meeting in Charleston Saturday, it was announced at Charleston today.

John Berkman, of Wheeling, president of the West Virginia Federation of Telephone Workers, said the executive committee of his organization will decide whether sympathy walkouts will be called in the State.

One group, the Indiana Bell Traffic Employes' Union, refused aid to the Ohio strikers. "Neither the union nor its members," it said in a statement issued at Indianapolis, "are in sympathy with the action taken by the Ohio union."

'Principle' Cause Of Phone Strike

Cleveland, Nov. 23 (AP)—Mrs. Margaret Farina, vice-president of the Federation of Telephone Workers and president of the union's plant council, said today "this strike, probably the first of major importance to be led by women, is an important step in getting higher wages and better working conditions for women."

The 38-year-old "hello" girl who has been employed in the accounting department of the Ohio Bell Telephone Company here for 17 years declared in an interview:

"When I first came to the telephone company, men held the jobs occupied today by women. The men were paid good livable wages, but the girls who replaced them are getting low, deplorable rates.

"For A Principle"

"The Dayton girls are fighting for a principle. The Government keeps them chained to their jobs, but when they ask the Government's aid in adjusting wage matters, they get no help."

Mrs. Farina, who has been married nine years, said she was advised by her husband, a Cleveland attorney, to "join the union and work hard for it."

Husband In Army

"My husband has been in the army in the Aleutians for 27 months and I think he would be heartily in accord with this strike. I've written him about it but I've had no reply as yet."

She explained the action of the Ohio Federation by stating:

"The Dayton girls have been asking a settlement in this dispute for more than two years. I realize the strike was called during wartime, but the dispute would have to be settled during an emergency because when the war is over, the transferee problem will no longer exist."

Man-Hour Strike Loss Decreases

Washington, Nov. 23 (AP)—Fewer man hours lost through strikes this year than in 1943 are foreseen by A. Ford Hinrichs, director of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

He said the trend is lower this year than last, when the coal strikes caused a sizable increase over 1942.

The average man hours lost during the first nine months of 1944, Hinrichs calculates, were about .1 of one per cent. of total hours worked.

Other Years' Averages

The average of one per cent in other years were listed as .14 in 1943, .05 in 1942, .32 in 1941, .1 in 1940 and .28 in 1939. The 1942 ratio was "about the lowest ever," Hinrichs said.

Total man hours lost through strikes this year by months, Hinrichs said, were: January, 625,000; February, 470,000; March, 415,000; April, 500,000; May, 1,400,000; June, 680,000; July, 680,000; August, 935,000, and September, 660,000. The October figure is not completed.

Can Halve Tax Bill, Barkley Says

Washington, Nov. 23 (AP)—Democratic Leader Barkley predicts that the present annual $45,000,000,000 Federal tax bill can be cut about in half after the war.

"I believe that when this war is over," he said, "we can build a sound economy in which there will be jobs for all who want to work. With the right cooperation and exercise of wisdom, we can have a national income of somewhere between $125,000,000,000 and $150,000,000,000, or even more.

May Halve Tax Bill

"We are now paying about $45,000,000,000 a year in taxes, which is about what the whole national income was not so many years ago. When the war is over, I believe we can reduce this tax bill to somewhere between $22,000,000,000 and $25,000,000,000."

Barkley's remarks were made during debate yesterday on the $1,000,000,000 flood-control authorization bill.

60 MILLION JOBS PLEDGED BY CIO IN POSTWAR ERA

CHICAGO, Nov. 23—(AP) The CIO today pledged its membership to work for a past-war era of 60 million jobs, homes and prosperity for all without racial discrimination, and a place for labor at the peace conferences.

Devoting nearly an entire day to discussion of economic questions, mainly those applying to the period after victory in Europe, the CIO convention unanimously adopted a series of resolutions but put off until tomorrow those dealing with the War Labor board's policy and revision of the present wage stabilization formula.

Attacks WLB Acts

A resolution attacking the National Labor Relations board's "recent acts" as reflecting a retreat from the basic principles of the Wagner act was adopted. It declared this change in "administrative attitude" was due to board member Gerard Reilly, whose activities and policies it condemned.

These acts should "compel his removal" from the board, the resolution said.

A resolution titled "60 million jobs and prosperity for all" pledged cooperation in creation of benefits under an economic bill of rights for the reconversion era.

It proposed that the government provide transportation of war workers and farmers back to their homes or to new jobs, and that it grant supplementary unemployment benefits up to $35 weekly for the full period of idleness.

The picture of new homes for all was painted by Walter Reuther, vice president of the United Automobile workers, who said that the aviation industry could readily be converted to putting out prefabricated homes, to sell for $3,000 and compare favorably with those now selling for $8,000.

Also, Reuther said, the automobile industry, by pooling its machinery, could start cars running from the assembly line sixty days after the war ends.

Urge Enactment of FEPC

The resolution reaffirming CIO policy opposing discrimination against negroes or other minorities, urged enactment of legislation to make the fair employment practices committee permanent. It prompted several ardent speeches advocating equal job opportunities.

Described by Thomas Richardson of Washington, D. C., negro vice president of the United Federal workers, as "a fundamental document of democracy," the resolution said "Jim crowism, the abnominable poll tax, and any other form of discrimination and bigotry must be excised from our national life."

President Philip Murray extended a blanket invitation to all negro workers to join CIO-affiliated unions, asserting the CIO was "peculiarly adapted" to championing their cause.

The demand for labor representation at the peace table and other international conferences came in a resolution on "international security and complete destruction of Nazism and Japanese militarism."

It called for "elimination of Fascism wherever it may be found," and this meant, the resolution said, "barring Franco Spain from the United Nations fold."

by tomorrow night.

WLB Procedure Condemned

Resolutions condemning the War Labor Board's handling of disputes and demanding that the Little Steel formula, which has braked wage increases at 15 per cent. above January, 1941, levels, be discarded, were prepared for formal action by the convention.

Concerning the board, one resolution reaffirmed its need as a "forum for a peaceful and equitable disposition of all disputes that may arise between labor and management which cannot be resolved through collective bargaining."

But, it added, the board "must completely reverse its present trend of appeasing those who actually seek its destruction and, instead, adopt a forward and forthright policies consistent with the original executive order pursuant to which it was created."

The board should streamline its procedure to eliminate long delays of routine and "innumerable appeals and reconsideration of cases which actually result in undermining the morale and productive efficiency of workers and result in a disruption of peaceful industrial relations," the resolution continued.

In the resolution on wage policy, the board was again condemned for "refusing to submit a recommendation to the President of the United States calling for a revision of the Little Steel formula to bring wages in realistic alignment with the sharp rise in the cost of living."

While wages have been frozen, living costs have been climbing, the resolution said.

Inflationary Effect Denied

Bringing wages in line with the cost of living "would not have any inflationary effect," the resolution said, and "the necessary wage adjustments should be made now to make certain that there will be the desired mass purchasing power to encourage production of peacetime goods and assure continued maximum production and full employment."

Abolition of the WPB's wage-bracket system, and establishing 65 cents an hour instead of 50, as a minimum, were other requests embodied in the resolutions.

CIO Resolution Asks End Of Wage Freezes

Chicago, Nov. 23 (AP)—The CIO turned from its political interests to the economic today as the seventh annual convention was asked to demand immediate removal of wage freezes.

The 600 delegates, who yesterday voted to continue the Political Action Committee indefinitely, worked through the Thanksgiving holiday to wind up their meetings

FOURTH LEAD WESTHERN FRONT

LONDON, NOV 23-(AP)-THE FAMOUS FRENCH SECOND ARMORED DIVISION OF MAJ.GEN. JACQUES LE CLERC DASHED 16 MILES ACROSS THE LEVEL RHINE PLAIN TODAY INTO THE OUTSKIRTS OF STRASBOURG, LARGEST FRENCH CITY STILL IN GERMAN HANDS.

FAR TO THE NORTH IN THE SOGGY, HEAVILY FORTIFIED ROER RIVER VALLEY 26 MILES FROM COLOGNE, GERMAN DIVISIONS THREW A SERIES OF COUNTERATTACKS AT THE U.S. NINTH ARMY DESPITE THE LOSS OF MORE THAN 75 TANKS IN THE WEEK-LONG BATTLE IN THE FORTIFIED ZONE APPROACHING THE RHINE.

THE WHOLE GERMAN FRONT IN THE SOUTH WAS DISSOLVING. THE FRENCH, WHO HAD FOUGHT ACROSS THE SAHARA WASTES AND HELPED MARSHAL MONTGOMERY BREAK THE MARETH LINE GUARDING TUNISIA, ENCOUNTERED ONLY LIGHT RESISTANCE. THE GERMANS OBVIOUSLY WERE SCURRYING ACROSS THE SWIFT AND BROAD RHINE BY ANY MEANS AT HAND. THE FATE OF SIX TO TEN DIVISIONS OF THE GERMAN 19TH ARMY WAS AT ISSUE; ONLY SOUPY WEATHER SAVED THEM FROM SLAUGHTER FROM ALLIED AIR POWER.

THE FRENCH TANKS AND GUNS RACED THROUGH THE SAVERNE GAP SOUTHEAST OF METZ TO REACH STRASBOURG AT THE RHINE, A STRONGLY FORTIFIED TRADE AND INDUSTRIAL CENTER ON THE ILL, AN AFFLUENT OF THE RHINE WHICH FLOWS BUT TWO MILES AWAY. NORMALLY, 193,000 LIVE IN STRASBOURG UNDER THE GUNS OF THE SIEGFRIED LINE ACROSS THE RIVER.

AN AMERICAN MAJOR GENERAL TAKING A PROMINENT ROLE IN THE DIRECTION OF THE CAMPAIGN TOWARD STRASBOURG AND THE RHINE DECLARED FLATLY THAT THE GERMAN LINES IN THE VOSGES MOUNTAINS WAS BROKEN; THAT THE ENEMY WAS DISORGANIZED COMPLETELY. GERMAN PRISONERS TOLD INTERROGATORS THEY HAD BEEN ORDERED TO ABANDON ALL EQUIPMENT, BREAK INTO SMALL GROUPS AND GET BACK INTO GERMANY AS FAST AS POSSIBLE. THE GENERAL SAID IT WOULD TAKE ORDNANCE MEN A MONTH TO COUNT THE BOOTY. HE SAID 5,380 GERMANS HAD SURRENDERED SINCE NOV. 13, ADDING:

"ONE CAPTAIN WALKED INTO OUR LINES WITH THREE MEN. THAT WAS ALL THAT WAS LEFT OF A WHOLE REGIMENT."

UNDER DISMAL DRIPPING SKIES, OTHER AMERICANS OF THE FIRST AND NINTH ARMIES BEYOND AACHEN INCHED FORWARD ALL ALONG THE LINE IN SOME OF THE BITTEREST FIGHTING OF THE WHOLE INVASION.

GALES DROVE SHEETS OF COLD RAIN INTO THE FACES OF SLOWLY ADVANCING AMERICANS ON THE COLOGNE PLAIN. MUD CLUNG TO TANK TREADS, LIMITING THEIR MOVEMENT. BUT THE RESOLUTE MEN OF THE NINTH, SENDING HUNDREDS MORE PRISONERS TO JOIN THE 6,156 GERMANS THEY HAD CAPTURED IN SIX DAYS, FOUGHT INTO THE ROER VALLEY VILLAGES OF KOSLAR AND BARMEN BEFORE THE HIGHWAY CENTER OF JULICH.

FRENCH ARMOR BOLTED FOUR MILES NORTH OF MULHOUSE AND THROUGH THE SAVERNE GAP ONTO THE LEVEL RHINE PLAIN TOWARD STRASBOURG. THE WHOLE GERMAN FRONT IN THE SOUTH WAS LIKE A MELTING ICEBERG AND THOSE REMAINING OF 70,000 GERMANS ORIGINALLY REPORTED PINNED AGAINST THE RHINE PROBABLY ALREADY ARE RETREATING ACROSS THE BROAD AND SWIFT FRONTIER STREAM.

ONE FRENCH ARMORED COLUMN THRUST NINE MILES SOUTHEAST OF SAVERNE ALONG THE WESTERN FRINGES OF THE VOSGES, REACHING WASSELONNE, FURTHER NARROWING THE ESCAPE ROUTE OF THE GERMANS FLEEING THE VOSGES ALONG THE ST. DIE-MUTZIG ROAD.

THE MAJOR GENERAL DESCRIBED THE CAMPAIGN AS A "MODEL" ONE

WHICH, A FLYING ARTILLERY OBSERVER SAID TODAY, FOUND THE GERMANS HURRYING ALONG THE ROADS TO STRASBOURG "NOSE TO TAIL" IN HORSE DRAWN VEHICLES.

THE ONLY THING SAVING THE GERMANS FROM THE RAVAGES OF ANOTHER FALAISE GAP--WHICH COST THEM SO HEAVILY IN NORMANDY--IS THE RAIN. THE WEATHER IS KEEPING ALLIED PLANES GROUNDED.

BUT AS IT IS, THE GERMANS HAVE ABANDONED EQUIPMENT IN SUCH QUANTITIES "IT WOULD TAKE OUR ORDNANCE MEN A MONTH TO COUNT IT," THE MAJOR GENERAL SAID. PRISONERS SO FAR TAKEN TOTAL 5,380.

"ONE CAPTAIN WALKED INTO OUR LINES WITH THREE MEN AND SAID THAT WAS ALL THAT WAS LEFT OF A WHOLE REGIMENT," THE GENERAL ADDED.

THE GERMANS ARE SO BADLY OFF BALANCE THEY HAVE BEEN UNABLE TO SPRING ANY REAL COUNTERATTACKS, AND ON THE ROADS TO STRASBOURG THERE IS NOTHING RESEMBLING ORGANIZED OPPOSITION.

LT.ROBERT FARNHAM, FREEPORT, ILL., AN ARTILLERY SPOTTER FOR THE 17TH FIELD ARTILLERY BATTALION OF THE SIXTH CORPS, WHO HAS BEEN GETTING A BIRD'S EYE VIEW OF THE GERMAN RETREAT, SAID "THIS IS A BIGGER RAT RACE THAN THE DRIVE ON ROME."

BELOW HIS LANDING FIELD IN A PASTURE WERE 12 MONSTER GUNS CAPTURED BY THE GERMANS FROM THE RUSSIANS. THE GERMANS DID NOT HAVE TIME TO SPIKE THEM ALL, AND HUNDREDS OF HUGE SHELLS WERE STREWN ABOUT, MANY STILL IN BOXES.

SGT. JAMES MC GRENARY OF NEW YORK HAD A LEAVE THAT WAS GOING TO EXPIRE AT 11 P.M. AND HE DID NOT WANT TO MISS THE TURKEY DINNER.

"WE'LL FIND HER," SAID LT. ETHEL RUDOLF, MILWAUKEE, WIS. "ANYONE SEEN MARGARET ZALLAR?"

PVT. BERNARD DUNSHEE, DES MOINES, N.M., DEMURRED. HE WAS JUST BACK FROM THE FRONT, AND DIRTY.

YESTERDAY THEY WERE ON A RAID OVER LINZ, AUSTRIA AND "WE SEEMED TO CATCH EVERYTHING THE JERRIES THREW AT US," MASON SAID. THE HYDRAULIC SYSTEM WAS KNOCKED OUT AND THE BOMB BAY SO BADLY DAMAGED THAT IT HAD TO BE CRANKED OPEN BY HAND BY SGT. WALTER KRAWZUK, INDIAN ORCHARD, MASS.

OVER THEIR HOME BASE THEY FOUND THEY HAD NO BRAKES, SO LT. FIFTEENTH AIRFORCE BOMBER BASE, NOV.23-(AP)-THEY HAD A BIG THANKSGIVING DAY FOOTBALL GAME HERE TODAY BETWEEN RANK (OFFICERS) AND FILE (ENLISTED MEN) TO DECIDE WHO WAS GOING TO SERVE TONIGHT'S TURKEY DINNER AND THE OUTCOME BRIEFLY WAS THAT THE FILE WAS RANKER THAN THE RANK.

THAT'S THE WAY ONE SIDELINE QUARTERBACK PUT IT ANYWAY AS HE WALKED AWAY FROM THIS "YALE BOWL WITH AN ITALIAN ACCENT" AFTER WATCHING THE OFFICERS FINISH ON TOP TWO TOUCHDOWNS TO ONE. THE HOLIDAY TOUCH FOOTBALL FEATURE HAD EVERYTHING DOWN TO PRINTED PROGRAMS. STANDS BUILT OUT OF BOMB TRAILERS AND EVEN PEANUT MEN WHO SERVED MERCHANDISE SIMPLY BY SPOTTING A PROSPECTIVE BUT UNSUSPECTING CUSTOMER IN THE STANDS AND HEAVING GOOBERS AT HIM.

THERE WAS ALSO HOT COFFEE AND DOUGHNUTS--BRING YOUR OWN CUP AND APPETITE--BETWEEN HALVES, COURTESY OF SALLY STEARNS, A RED CROSS GIRL OF PETERBOROUGH, N.H. OF COURSE THERE WAS TURKEY AND ALL THE FIXINS AND CHEERLEADERS.

WERE FAVORED IN THE BETTING OF WHICH THERE WAS SOMEWHAT MORE THAN A DOLLAR AND A QUARTER'S WORTH.

HOWEVER A BREATH OF SCANDAL FOLLOWED THE GAME WHEN THE WINNING TOUCHDOWN WAS SCORED IN THE LAST QUARTER ON A COFFIN CORNER PASS FROM MAJOR EDDIE WILSON, ONE-TIME COLGATE VARSITY GRIDDER FR[illegible] RIDGEWOOD, N.J. TO LT. ED MCKENNA OF HOLY CROSS AND BOSTON.

IT TURNS OUT THAT WILSON, A VETERAN PILOT OF 50 MISSIONS, MADE A SUDDEN TRIP BACK FROM NAPLES TO PLAY THE GAME AFTER STARTING FO[illegible] HOME LEAVE WHILE MCKENNA WAS NEITHER IN REGULAR RANK UNIFORM NOR LISTED ON PROGRAM. NATURALLY, THIS CAUSED TALK THAT THE RANK WAS RUNNING IN RINGERS. OFFICIALS REFUSED TO DISCUSS IT.

THE OFFICERS SCORED IN THE FIRST MINUTE WHEN LT. DAN (BETTER KNOWN AS TERRIBLE TERRENCE), COFFEY OF CAMBRIDGE, MASS. HEAVED A LONG ONE TO LT. EVERETT WILLIAMS OF POPLAR, MISS. WHEN THIS MISSION STARTED THE CREW KNEW IT WAS TO BE ANOTHER EXTRAORDINARY AFFAIR INVOLVING SEA-SWEEPING OPERATIONS NORMALLY ENTAILING EXTRAORDINARY RISKS. BUT THE MEN WERE EAGER AND WERE READY EARLY WITH THEIR BRIGHT YELLOW MAE WESTS HANGING LIMP FROM THEIR SHOULDERS. THEY KNEW WHAT WAS UP.

NOV 241944

A LITTLE EARLIER CAPT.DONALD S.ARMSTRONG, 28, OF CORVALLIS,ORE., WHO HAD BEEN CARSWELL'S PARTNER AT THE CONTROLS IN THE SINKING OF THE DESTROYER AND CRUISER OCT. 16, HAD BEEN SWEEPING THE SOUTH CHINA SEA ON A RECONNAISSANCE MISSION. HE HAD RADIOED SIGHTING A JAPANESE AIRCRAFT CARRIER, AND CARSWELL, ON THIS SHORT NOTICE, HAD DECIDED THAT HIS B-24 WOULD SEEK IT OUT.

"I WOULDN'T SEND THESE BOYS AFTER ANYTHING I WOULDN'T GO AFTER MYSELF," CARSWELL HAD SAID AS HE LACED HIS SHOES.

"I REMEMBER WILLIER SITTING ON THE EDGE OF THE PORCH, TURNING TO ME AS I LEFT CARSWELL'S ROOM. THE BOMBARDIER GRINNED AND CALLED OUT: "WHAT KIND OF MEDAL DO YOU GET WHEN YOU SINK AN AIRCRAFT CARRIER?"

THE CREW MEMBERS WERE GRIMLY JOLLY AS THEY WAITED FOR CARSWELL AND THE WEAPONS CARRIER THAT WOULD TAKE THEM TO THEIR PLANE. IN A LITTLE WHILE THEY WERE GONE, SWALLOWED UP BY THE NIGHT AND A SILENCE UNBROKEN EXCEPT FOR FRAGMENTARY RADIO MESSAGES THAT LEFT THEIR STORY HALF-TOLD UNTIL TODAY.

FROM REPORTS OF CREW MEMBERS, THIS WAS PART OF THAT STORY:

IT WAS WELL AFTER DARK WHEN THE BIG PLANE CROSSED THE COAST. ABOUT A HALF HOUR LATER IT PICKED UP A CONVOY OF 12 ENEMY SHIPS. THE CREW NEVER KNEW WHETHER THE AIRCRAFT CARRIER WAS AMONG THEM.

THE B-24 CARRIED OUT ITS LOW-LEVEL ATTACK.

1126

NOV 241944

ON THE RETURN TRIP THE LIMPING PLANE RAN INTO CLOUDS ALONG THE COAST. IT COULD NOT GO AROUND THEM, SO IT PLOUGHED RIGHT THROUGH. FINALLY CARSWELL MANAGED TO GET THE PLANE TO A 4,000-FOOT ALTITUDE, DESPITE COUGHING OF ITS TWO REMAINING ENGINES.

ABOUT THAT TIME ANOTHER ENGINE SPUTTERED, AND THE PLANE LOST A THOUSAND FEET IMMEDIATELY. BUT THE ENGINE PICKED UP AGAIN AND THE PLANE BEGAN TO CLIMB. TWO OR THREE TIMES IT GOT BACK TO 4,000.

CARSWELL ASKED THE RADIO OPERATOR TO CALL FOR A BEARING, BUT THE SIGNAL WAS TOO WEAK. THE PLANE KEPT GOING DOWN AND DOWN, WOBBLING FROM SIDE TO SIDE.

FIKTEEN MINUTES LATER AN ENGINE SPUTTERED AGAIN. THE PLANE WAS DIRECTLY OVER THE MOUNTAINS BY THAT TIME. IT LOST ALTITUDE RAPIDLY.

CARSWELL MANAGED TO GET BACK TO 1,500 FEET BY STRAINING THE TWO ENGINES TO THE UTMOST. HE WOULD BRING THE PLANE UP NEARLY INTO A STALL, THEN DIVE A LITTLE TO REGAIN SPEED. HE DID THIS TIME AFTER TIME, A PROCESS REQUIRING CONSUMMATE SKILL AND KNOWLEDGE OF THE CRAFT. ALL THE CREWMEN EMPHASIZED THIS POINT.

AFTER THE FIRST RUN AGAINST THE CONVOY CARSWELL HAD TOLD HIS RADIO OPERATOR TO SEND A MESSAGE SAYING A DESTROYER HAD BEEN DAMAGED. THE MAJOR ALSO ASKED HELP TO CONTINUE THE ATTACK ON THE CONVOY. NOW, MORE THAN AN HOUR LATER, HE HAD THE OPERATOR SEND ANOTHER MESSAGE SAYING THE PLANE WAS HEADING BACK WITH TWO ENGINES OUT.

NOV 241944

O'NEAL AND HILLIER HELPED TREAT CREWMEN WHO HAD BEEN INJURED.

FINALLY CARSWELL PULLED UP IN A SHARP TURN AND THE EIGHT MEN BAILED OUT, WITH HILLIER STANDING AT THE CATWALK WITH HIS DAMAGED 'CHUTE, MOTIONING THEM TO GO AHEAD.

NOV 241944

NONE OF THE CREW COULD REMEMBER WHETHER CARSWELL HAD SAID ANYTHING BEFORE THEY JUMPED. THE INTERPHONE HAD BEEN OUT MOST OF THE TIME AND THOSE CLOSEST TO HIM WERE DEAD.

BUT THE CHANCES ARE THAT "STUMP" CARSWELL, AFRAID OF SAYING SOMETHING CORNY, SAID NOTHING.

WHEN NUMBER TWO ENGINE FALTERED, SEVEN MEN DROPPED THROUGH THE BOMB BAY. THEY INCLUDED:

STAFF SGT.KAEMPER STEINMAN, 29, 745 WALNUT AVE., BELLFLOWER, CALIF., WAIST GUNNER; SGT.ERNEST P.WATRAS, 21, 60 HIGHVIEW AVE., (EDS: NO TOWN GIVEN), RADIO OPERATOR; STAFF SGT.NORMAN NUNNES, 23, MAIN ST., HARWICH, MASS., TAIL GUNNER; SECOND LT.CHARLES A.ULERY, 25, NAVIGATOR, OF 138 WEST MARKS ST., MARION, OHIO; FIRST LT.JAMES M.RINKER, 22, 208 CAMPUS ST. (EDS: NO TOWN GIVEN), AND TECH.SGT. CHARLES MADDOX, JR., 20, (NO TOWN GIVEN), ENGINEER.

RINKER BEGAN THE RAID AS CO-PILOT. HIS RIGHT HAND WAS TORN BY SHELLFIRE ON THE SECOND BOMBING RUN AND HE WAS RELIEVED AT THE CO-PILOT'S POSITION BY O'NEAL, WHO ORDINARILY WOULD HAVE BEEN RINKER'S CO-PILOT.

NOV 241944

CARSWELL, WHO WAS IN COMMAND, WAS THE ELEVENTH MAN ABOARD--ONE MORE THAN THE NORMAL B-24 CREW.

NOV 241944

NEITHER RINKER NOR STEINMAN SURVIVED THE BAILING OUT. RINKER WAS WEAK FROM LOSS OF BLOOD AND UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF MORPHINE. HE MAY HAVE PASSED OUT IN THE FALL, OR HIS CHUTE MAY HAVE FAILED. WHEN HIS BODY WAS FOUND THE CHUTE WAS UNOPENED. STEINMAN'S CHUTE FUNCTIONED, BUT TOO CLOSE TO THE GROUND.

SIX MEN SURVIVED THIS ERRAND--BUT ONE OF COUNTLESS STRIKES AT JAPANESE NAVAL POWER. IT WAS FROM THEM THAT THE STORY OF CARSWELL'S LAST FLIGHT WAS PIECED TOGETHER.

THE SAT IN A SEMI-CIRCLE AROUND THE OFFICE OF THEIR SQUADRON COMMANDER, SPEAKING IN LOW VOICES. THE MAIN NARRATIVE CAME FROM ULERY, BUT ALL AGREED THAT BUT FOR CARSWELL'S WIZARDY AT THE CONTROLS OF THE CRIPPLED SHIP, ALL WOULD HAVE PERISHED AT SEA. THEY WERE UNANIMOUS IN THEIR BELIEF CARSWELL AND O'NEAL REMAINED IN THE PLANE BECAUSE HILLIER WAS UNABLE TO BAIL OUT.

I REMEMBERED THE AFTERNOON OF OCT.26 AT AN ADVANCE BASE WHEN I VISITED CARSWELL JUST BEFORE A TAKEOFF. THE YOUNG MAJOR WAS IN HIS

NOOM PULLING ON HIS BOOKS AND HEAVY SHOES WHILE THE REST OF THE CREW WISECRACKED ON THE PORCH.

ULERY TOLD OF THE LAST ATTACK COMMANDED BY THE MAJOR.

"WE FLEW AROUND FOR ANOTHER HALF HOUR AFTER OUR FIRST RUN, STUDYING ITS EFFECTS. WE DIDN'T KNOW WE WERE AIMING AT A DESTROYER UNTIL THE BOMBS WERE DROPPED," HE SAID. "WE DROPPED SIX BOMBS. ALL FELL SHORT. THERE WAS NO FIRING YET FROM THE CONVOY."

TAIL GUNNER NUNNES, WHOSE POSITION HAD BEEN BEST FOR OBSERVATION, BROKE IN TO SAY THAT ONE OF THE SIX BOMBS HIT THE WATER 15 OR 20 FEET FROM A VESSEL, OBVIOUSLY DAMAGING IT. LATER NUNNES AND MADDOX WERE ABLE TO IDENTIFY THE VESSEL AS A DESTROYER. AT THE MOMENT THE B-24 WAS ONLY A FEW HUNDRED FEET ABOVE IT.

ABOUT A HALF HOUR LATER, AFTER STALKING THE CONVOY FROM MANY ANGLES, THE LIBERATOR WENT IN FOR ITS SECOND RUN. MILLIER WAS JUST TOGGLING THREE MORE BOMBS ON ANOTHER SHIP WHEN THE GUNS OF THE WHOLE CONVOY OPENED UP.

NOV 241944

"I DON'T KNOW HOW MANY TIMES WE WERE HIT," ULERY SAID. "BUT IT WAS PLENTY, AND NATURALLY I COULDN'T SEE WHAT OUR BOMBS DID. I WAS AT MY PLACE ACROSS FROM THE RADIO OPERATOR."

NUNNES OUT IN AGAIN:

"I HEARD OUR INTERPHONE SAY WE WERE HIT. THE INTERPHONE WENT OUT LATER, BUT IT WAS WORKING THEN. I WAS GETTING OUT OF THE TAIL TURRET --MORE OR LESS FALLING OUT--WHEN I SAW TWO FLASHES LIGHTING UP THE SKY. MILLIER GOT TWO DIRECT HITS. WHEN BOMBS HIT IN THE WATER THEY DON'T MAKE FLASHES."

ULERY CONTINUED THE STORY:

"ONE SHELL BURST INSIDE THE BOMB BAY. IT LIT UP EVERYTHING. THE RADIO OPERATOR AND I WERE THROWN AGAINST THE ARMORPLATE BEHIND THE PILOT AND CO-PILOT. O'NEAL, WHO HAD BEEN STANDING JUST BELOW THE FLIGHT DECK, WAS KNOCKED BACK UNDERNEATH TOWARDS THE NOSE. ENGINEER MADDOX, WHOSE HEAD HAD BEEN HANGING OVER THE OPEN BOMB BAY, WAS THROWN BACK INTO THE PLANE."

SHELL FRGM

SHELL FRAGMENTS HOWERED THE FORWARD C

NOV 241944

SHELL FRAGMENTS SHOWERED THE FORWARD COMPARTMENT, BUT ONLY ONE MAN WAS HIT, AND HE SAID NOTHING. AT THE SAME TIME A SHELL STRUCK THE NOSE OF THE PLANE NEAR MILLIER, RIPPING HIS PARACHUTE PACK WHICH WAS LYING ATOP AN AMMUNITION BOX. OTHER PUNCTURES TURNED FLUID ON SCHNEPF'S CHUTE. STILL OTHER HITS KNOCKED OUT THE NUMBER ONE AND NUMBER THREE ENGINES.

THE PLANE DIPPED SHARPLY TOWARD THE SEA. CARSWELL MANAGED TO LEVEL OUT JUST ABOVE THE WATER. THERE WAS AN IMMEDIATE SCRAMBLE TO LIGHTEN THE PLANE. TOOLBOXES, FLAK VESTS, EVERYTHING ELSE HEAVY OR LOOSE WAS CHUCKED OUT AND THE THREE REMAINING BOMBS WERE JETTISONED.

WHILE CARSWELL FOUGHT TO REGAIN ALTITUDE, MADDOX AND THE GUNNERS UNBOLTED SOME OF THE PLANE'S 50-CALIBER MACHINEGUNS AND DUMPED THEM AND MOST OF THE LINKED AMMUNITION. EVERY POUND COUNTED.

TO DITCH THE BOMBER IN THE SEA AND RESORT TO THE USE OF A LIFERAFT WAS OUT OF THE QUESTION. THE PLANE WAS SO DAMAGED THE BOMB BAYDOORS WOULD NOT CLOSE, AND IF THE PLANE HAD ALIGHTED ON THE WATER, IT WOULD HAVE SUNK LIKE A ROCK.

BIG BATTLE RAGES ON COLOGNE PLAIN AS ENEMY ATTACKS

American Troops Strike Into Reich in New Penetration.

MANY PRISONERS TAKEN

Germans Hurl 10 to 12 Divisions into Massive Fight Against Allies.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Nov. 24—(AP) French armor and American infantry drove the Germans tonight from all save one small bridgehead in France's great city of Strasbourg and unconfirmed reports said patrols had struck on into Germany in the first crossing of the Rhine since Napoleon's day.

As the German-speaking Strasbourgers greeted the conquering Allies with mixed emotions, the lines before the Cologne plain far to the north were swaying to blows and counterblows as the Germans threw in 10 to 12 divisions against three Allied armies in the greatest battle of the Western front.

Cross Rhine River

A battlefront dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent Thoburn Wiant contained the first reports that the Allies had succeeded in stabbing across the rain-swollen Rhine—historic barrier guarding the Reich from invasion—beyond which lies the Siegfried Line and formidable hills and mountains.

If so, the crossing probably was accomplished only by reconnaissance patrols. Wiant said the German foothold in Strasbourg was compressed to one small sector at the western end of the main Rhine bridge, which the enemy was defending fiercely.

(A dispatch from Sixth army group headquarters said a bitter battle was in progress in the dock area and 2,000 prisoners had been taken).

Almost the entire 180,000 population of Strasbourg long since had been evacuated by the French. Most of the German-speaking civilians on hand when the French and Americans charged in stared blankly, although a few smiled, Wiant said.

Meanwhile, the U. S. First army fought into Weisweiler, 13 miles inside Germany and 26 miles west of Cologne, amid indications the Germans were withdrawing under the pressure.

Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' troops registered slight gains all along its front, some of them directly in the face of German counter-attacks. The Germans also were firing an increasing number of robot bombs at the First's supply lines and they droned overhead as if in formation.

Enemy Counterattacks

In Hurtgen forest, southeast of Aachen, the enemy launched a counterattack just as the doughboys pushed off, but it was repulsed and the Americans advanced nearly a mile.

As fighting raged all along the rain-soaked Western front, the Germans threw at least seven divisions against the British Second army north of the First army sector and recaptured Hoven and Beeck in the battlefield quagmire north of Aachen.

BBC in a broadcast heard by the Blue network said both towns later were retaken by counterattacking Tommies.)

Between the two fronts, the U. S. Ninth army was striking terrific resistance at the approaches to the Roer river stronghold of Julich after knocking out 118 enemy tanks in seven days of bruising struggle which cost it as many.

Despite the mud and the temper of resistance, the Ninth seized Pattern and Lohn, three and four miles southwest of Julich, and were locked in combat with the Germans about two miles west of the city, a front dispatch said.

To the north the British Second army in Holland was closing in on Venlo, Maas river stronghold. The French press agency quoted a field dispatch saying Venlo had fallen, but this went unconfirmed here.

To the south, mechanized cavalry units of the U. S. Third army crossed the Saar river 26 miles south of the Saar basin bastion of Saarbrucken. Elements of the 90th Infantry and Tenth Armored divisions pressed to the Saar at a new point near Schwerdorf, 20 miles northwest of Saarbrucken.

Resistance Grows Sterner

Resistance was growing sterner along some sectors of the Third army front, but the 35th Division in advances up to three miles reached Remering, due east of Metz and 11 miles from the Saar border and but 13 miles from Saarbrucken itself.

A front dispatch said Strasbourg with its three bridges across the Rhine had been cleared except for a powerful German stand at the heavily-mined main bridge, and so rapidly was the city of 180,000 cleared that it was but little damaged.

But tonight the Germans had begun shelling Strasbourg from across the Rhine, possibly from Siegfried line positions.

Roads leading down to Strasbourg out of the Saverne gap were loaded with material and troops, heading for the Rhine and crusher blows at the estimated 70,000 German troops which south of Strasbourg were retaining a line across the river to the Siegfried Line.

The U. S. 44th and 79th Divisions had broadened the Saverne gap positions to 12 miles, permitting Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch to pour the Seventh army's strength out on the Rhine plain almost uninterruptedly. A few German planes tried vainly to raid the supply lines.

The southern jaw of the Rhine-and pincers last was reported some 55 miles south of Strasbourg at a point five miles north of Mulhouse as rain-flooded streams in the Belfort gap hampered the movement of supplies and reinforcements.

Frontal pressure was maintained by other units of the U. S. Seventh and French First armies who seized a dozen towns in a drive through the deepening snows of the Saales, Ste. Marie and Bonhomme passes lying between the Saverne and Belfort gaps.

With the apparent loss of the Strasbourg bridges as escape routes the Germans were faced with the problem of getting their beaten divisions across the flooded Rhine over three pontoon bridges and by boat and temporary pontoon spans, for there is not a permanent bridge intact from Strasbourg south to Switzerland.

Gen Blaskowitz Removed

(Reports reaching London said Col. Gen. Johannes Blaskowitz had been removed from command of the German southern front as a result of the Allied breakthrough.)

With the southern front badly weakened by the Vosges mountain defeat, Major Gen. Wade H. Haslip, commander of the 15th corps which made the Strasbourg breakthrough, told an Associated Press correspondent he would have Christmas dinner well in the middle of Germany.

It was possible the German debacle in the Vosges was due to a draining of this front for the defense of the Reich west of Cologne, where the Germans hurled savage counterattacks today against the U. S. First and Ninth and British Second armies.

Here, where the Germans have massed from ten to twelve armor-laden divisions on a 25-mile front apparently for a stand such as the costly one at Caen, the enemy hit with seven divisions against the northern flank guarded by the British.

They drove the Tommies from the strategic hamlet of Hoven, on a plateau three miles north of Geilenkirchen, and from Beeck, the same distance to the northeast.

Lt. Gen. Miles C. Dempsey's troops, fighting in the mud and rain, finally contained the assault with tanks and flamethrowers, then charged back across the shell-churned battlefield with fixed bayonets behind a heavy artillery barrage.

British Lose Hoven

While losing Hoyen, the British still clung to a height commanding the town on the north .Here they look down toward the Roer valley, the biggest natural barrier before the Rhine.

To the southeast, the U. S. Ninth army was locked in a mauling battle as the push for the Cologne plain entered its eighth day, the kind of bruising fighting which cost the Germans 118 tanks, including 23 new Tiger Royal monster tanks, in seven days.

One attack rolled up near Merzenhausen, three miles west of Julich—the Roer river stronghold — and another near Bourheim, two miles southwest of Julich. The Ninth was held up here by artillery fire. Heavy fighting also raged at Koslar, two miles west of Julich.

(In addition to Hoven and Beeck, the Germans claimed the capture of Bourheim, which the Ninth never has claimed; Lohn, to the south, and Putzlohn on the First army front. A late front dispatch said, however, that Lohn was firmly held by the Ninth.)

Progress on this front was described in the Allied communique as "very slow," but the Ninth succeeded in occupying Pattern, three miles southwest of Julich.

Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' infantry fought into Weisweiler, three miles east of Eschweiler, advancing house by house against stubborn resistance from rearguards believed covering a withdrawal in this sector.

On the northern end of the front, the British were stamping out the last German resistance west of the Maas and sent patrols into Blerick, across the stream from the enemy bastion of Venlo.

Guns Slow British

The Germans, who have been pulling back to the east bank, just short of the Reich frontier, threw artillery fire across the river, slowing the main British assault forces moving against the outer defense lines of Venlo. The British replied with heavy fire.

North of Venlo, the British advanced a mile on a four-mile front, slowed only by a labyrinth of mine fields. Thirteen miles northwest af Venlo the British reached Oostrum, little more than two miles west of the Maas, against only token resistance.

Well over 40,000 Germans have been captured by the six attacking armies so far in their winter offensive. Although there is no official estimate of casualties, the army axiom that as many are killed as are captured and twice as many are wounded would mean that the Germans have lost some 160,000 men in 16 days.

The largest total was 20,409 by the Third Army, which inaugurated the big push.

U. S. SOLDIERS CROSS SAAR

On Southern End of Long Front Hitler's Forces Are Showing Signs of Wild Disorder.

London, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—Allied advance units were reported today to have crossed the flooded Rhine east of Strasbourg, which French and American troops had captured save for a small but powerfully defended bridgehead at the western end of the main bridge.

Field Marshal Gen. Gerd von Rundstedt committed ten or twelve divisions to the great battle of attrition on the soggy Cologne Plain to the north and behind flame-throwers and a drumfire artillery barrage drove the British Second Army from the villages of Beeck and Hoven, three miles northeast of Geilenkirchen.

A field dispatch from an Associated Press reporter with the United States Third Army stated that Third Army elements crossed the Saar River at a new place twenty-six miles south of Saarbrucken in Germany today and scored other eastward gains up to three miles in advances which reached to within thirteen miles of the industrial center. They advanced two miles beyond Postroff in France.

The United States Ninth Army, fighting for Julich on the brown and turbulent Roer River twenty-five miles from Cologne, knocked out its 110th German tank in a seven-day battle on the right flank of the British Second Army.

[The Ninth Army has destroyed 118 German tanks, it was announced today in a dispatch dated Setterich, Germany.]

The United States First Army edged back into the Inde River village of Weisweiler, twenty-six and a half miles from Cologne, fighting house by house. German trucks and horse vehicles were observed pulling out of the town to the northeast behind a strong rear guard screen. Heavy artillery pounded the Nazi columns. The Inde is a tributary of the Roer.

Berlin asserted earlier in the day that the Allies attempted futilely to seize one of the three Rhine bridges outside Strasbourg, Alsatian city of 193,000 connected by a two-mile canal to the Rhine. The reported crossing of the swift and wide upper Rhine did not necessarily constitute the spearhead of a major drive across the border stream.

Well over 40,000 Germans have been captured by the six Allied armies on the offensive in the current campaign. This swelled the total since D day to around 700,000 men, or almost fifty full-strength divisions. Counting killed and wounded, total German casualties for the new winter offensive were estimated at Supreme Headquarters at 160,000.

The famous French Second Armored Division commanded by Major-Gen. Jacques le Clerc crashed into Strasbourg yesterday after an eighteen-mile advance and by noon had cleared the foe from all the narrow, crooked streets in the western part of the city. By 4 P. M., the whole town was liberated except for the Rhine bridge approach two miles from the center of Strasbourg. It was heavily mined, stoutly defended and intact.

Masses Tank Outfits.

Von Rundstedt massed his divisions, half of them tank outfits, along a twenty-five-mile front on the Cologne plain from north of Geilenkirchen to the bloody Hurtgen Forest, and these were the best the Germans could muster in western Europe. They faced the massed and charging might of three Allied armies, the American First and Ninth and the British Second.

On the Ninth Army's toll of 110 tanks, twenty-eight were new Tiger Royals—monsters with six-inch skins.

The battle was almost amphibious. Three days of rain left inches of water standing on the fields and the streams were well out of their banks and raging.

The resolute British backed onto high ground from Hoven and Beeck and there were reported standing firm.

The British, in yielding Hoven and Beeck, retreated a half mile.

Germans in the Strasbourg area were in the wildest disorder. Roads leading east toward the Rhine were lined bumper-to-bumper with American troops and materiel moving up in the big push. It was a Seventh Army show under command of the Guadalcanal hero, Lieut.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch, for the French Second Armored Division was fighting as a unit of his Fifteenth Corps.

Gen. Leclerc's armor drove so swiftly and with such surprise into Strasbourg that the ancient cultural, religious and industrial city escaped relatively undamaged. Strasbourg, most important center on the upper Rhine, however, was under the big guns of the Siegfried Line across the river.

Strasbourg is 360 air line miles southwest of Berlin and beyond it lie the Rhine and the Siegfried fortifications, the Black Forest and the rugged hills of Baden. The German city of Karlsruhe, a frequent Allied bombing objective, lies thirty miles north-northeast in the Rhine Valley.

A corridor sixteen miles long and twelve wide leading to Strasbourg from Saverne was cleared out by Pennsylvanians of Major-Gen. Ira T. Wyche's Seventy-ninth Infantry Division and New York and New Jersey men of Major-Gen. Robert L. Spragins's Forty-fourth Infantry. This permitted Gen. Patch to throw virtually everything he pleased up to the Rhine.

The Germans were shelling Strasbourg from across the Rhine, which has been swollen by the worst floods in ten years.

Between Strasbourg and the Cologne plain, the United States Third Army was having a harder fight in its big bulge east and southeast of Metz. Its elements already were within heavy siege gun range of the great Saar steel and rail city of Saarbrucken, less than fifteen miles away. Outside Metz itself, 3,000 Germans held out hopelessly in five by-passed fortress groups.

Battle in Morasses.

Significant of the fury of fighting in the morasses before Cologne, dispatches from the United States First Army front told of a 400-yard advance northeast of Weisweiler near the Roer. That quarter-mile was the largest reported gain of the day, but it was made in the middle of the fortified west wall.

Another counter-attack was lanced against the Ninth Army southwest of Linnich and two were hurled at the First in the Hurtgen Forest southeast of Aachen. Results were not disclosed.

Third Gains 2 To 4 Miles

The American Third Army beyond Metz captured Oberluken and deepened its northern wedge into Germany by two to four miles yesterday. Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's forces edged slowly toward Saarbrucken, with 15 miles to go.

British troops in Holland moved within easy field-gun range—a mile and a half—of Venlo.

Show, rain and fog slowed the drives in the Vosges Mountains and beyond Belfort where American and French troops were striving to bag thousands of Germans of the 19th Army. London heard an unconfirmed report that Field Marshal General Johannes Blaskowitz had been removed from his German command on the Southern Front.

Street Fighting In Strasbourg

Field reports said street fighting was in progress in the center of Strasbourg—which is two miles west of the Rhine, but linked to the river by a canal and port.

Two road bridges and one rail bridge span the Rhine outside Strasbourg and it was not immediately apparent which one the Germans believed the Allies were trying to seize. These are the only permanent Rhine bridges still available south to the Swiss border; the others are movable pontoons that the Germans fold up by day because of danger from the air.

Yanks Pour Into Passes

American infantry poured steadily into the snow of the Vosges Mountain passes and through the breached Saverne Gap toward Strasbourg, the capture of which appeared imminent.

Maj. Gen. Wade H. Haislip, commander of the United States 15th Corps which made the breakthrough, declared yesterday that he would eat Christmas dinner somewhere in the middle of Germany. Two German generals and 3,000 prisoners were captured yesterday by Haislip's men.

The Nazi Capture Of Hoven

To recapture Hoven in northwest Germany, Field Marshal General Gerd von Rundstedt used three tank, one tank Grenadier and two or three infantry divisions and two independent tank battalions. These rewon the town, shaking the soggy countryside with the violence of their blows.

But with fixed bayonets and under one of the heaviest barrages of the war, British tommies in the main stood their ground against the flame throwers, tanks and charging riflemen. Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's spokesman said:

"The German is smashing at us hard. His troops are of the best. He is determined to block our advance to the Roer."

On their right the United States First Army repulsed at least four infantry and tank attacks and inched closer to Weisweiler. Other units, although meeting bitter resistance, gained as much as 600 yards in the Hurtgen Forest.

New gains by the French forces driving north of Mulhouse in upper Alsace were reported.

Leyviller Reached

Patton's eastern wing got as far as Leyviller, 16 miles southwest of Saarbrucken, and Fenetrang, seven miles north of Saarebourg. A small Nazi attack was repulsed near Frenestroff, just southwest of Leyviller.

Limited gains were made on the Third Army's left flank, where advanced forces have established a front on German soil near the Luxembourg border, but there was virtually no change along the main part of the Lorraine front east of Metz.

The air forces gave virtually no support to ground operations yesterday because of bad weather.

Cavalry Near Romelfing

The Second Cavalry Group of the Third Army moved four miles ahead and was near Romelfing, 27 miles south of Saarbrucken, meeting little or no opposition. At Metz itself, five fortress groups manned by an estimated 3,100 Germans held out, firing sporadically from their hopelessly by-passed positions. The Third took 556 prisoners yesterday, raising its total since November 8 to 20,409.

Due east of Metz, the Third Army was within eight miles of the German border.

Many Towns Taken

The towns of Doesnheim, Hattmatt, Steinbourg, Dettwiller, Otterswiller, Schweinheim, Romansviller, Waldowsheim and Willgotteim were captured in the wedge east of the Saverne Gap. Another dozen villages were taken in the high ground in the Vosges flanking the entrances to the Saales, Ste. Marie and Bonhomme Passes.

Fighting on the Cologne plain was in quagmires underlaid by Nazi mines. General Eisenhower's communique used such phrases as "bitter fighting" northeast of Geilenkirchen, "very slow progress" northwest of Julich, "bitter fighting" and "very stubborn resistance" in the Hurtgen forest.

Four Nazi Attacks In One Area

Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' First Army withstood four attacks in a single sector near Putzlohn.

Up to a dozen German divisions opposed the three Allied armies on the Cologne plain, and all were full of fight and strong in armor. The Germans there were making their strongest stand since the battle of Caen in Normandy, throwing into the line all reinforcements possible. The fighting was deep in the West Wall fortifications, a breakthrough of which might collapse the entire Western front.

U. S. 9th Wins First Phase of Battle at Rhine

NazisLose 118Tanks,9,000 Men; Big Tigers Ripped by New Tank Destroyers

SETTERICH, Germany, Nov. 24 (AP).—The American 9th Army, despite tank losses which have been as heavy as those of the Germans, has won the first phase of the great battle raging on this side of the Rhine, knocking out 118 German tanks in seven days and inflicting 9,000 casualties.

During the heaviest fighting since St. Lo, the 9th has mauled to the point of complete destruction two German Panzer divisions, the 9th and another Panzer Grenadier outfit, besides chewing up several infantry divisions.

American tank losses have not been heavier because daring tank-destroyer crews, manning their new 90-mm. guns have been willing to fight side by side with the infantry in the front lines, although their thin-skinned destroyers make the hazards great.

The tank-destroyer men, pitting their light but powerfully armed vehicles against the monster German tanks, have found the 90-mm. gun an effective weapon against the Nazi giants.

The new German Tigers, with seven inches of armor, have proved themselves superior to other tanks and apparently are far ahead of anything the Americans and British have developed in heavy tanks.

Seventy-five-millimeter shells from the American Shermans bounce off the front of the Tigers without causing damage. Although the Tigers are vulnerable from the side and rear, mud in the front lines makes it hard for the Americans to get in those shots.

Fighting with great gallantry, the Shermans tried many times to close in and knock the Tigers out, but one shot from the German 88-mm. guns turned the Shermans into flaming coffns.

Crews of the new American tank destroyers were anxious to try these weapons on the Tigers. They forged into the front lines with the infantry and the big guns ripped a Tiger wide open.

The tank destroyers must shoot first and accurately because their own vehicles are highly vulnerable to the Tiger's 88s.

"Those tank-destroyer boys are all right. They came right up to the front with us, cut loose and knocked out six Tigers in our sector," said Staff Sergeant Frank Jacha, of Chicago, who had been fighting in the line as an infantry squad leader for the last seven days.

Vital Jap Production Targets Hit by Saipan-Based Superforts.

Tokyo Raided By Great Armada Of Superforts

NOV 24 1944

Twenty-First Bomber Command, Saipan, Nov. 24 (AP)—A mighty armada of Superfortresses blasted Tokyo today with hundreds of tons of bombs, opening what Gen. H. H. Arnold said was "an attack which will be carried on relentlessly from the air until the day of land-sea invasion" of Japan's home islands.

An undisclosed number of Superforts roared from newly completed air bases here at dawn for the 3,000-mile flight which marked the initial attack on Japan's capital by land-based planes and its first bombing since April 18, 1942.

Brig. Gen. Emmet (Rosie) O'Donnell, of Jamaica, N. Y., 38-year-old former West Point football coach, led the historic daylight assault, believed to be the largest attack yet made on Japan's homeland.

Two-Way Aerial Squeeze

The aerial task force was from the recently established 21st Bomber Command of the 20th Army Air Force, operating from the Marianas, under the command of Brig. Gen. Hayward S. (Possum) Havsell, Jr., of San Antonio, Texas.

The first use of these bases south and east of Tokyo creates a two-way aerial-squeeze against Japan's vital industries, with other B-29's from China, to the westward.

First official announcements of today's raid merely said a "sizable task force" of Superforts "attacked industrial targets in Tokyo." Another communique was promised when further details were available.

Briefed To Avoid Palace

Tokyo's great sprawling industrial area is ringed by airfields and anti-aircraft defenses, recent lone B-29 reconnaissance flights showed. Shipping and shipbuilding yards are located in near-by Yokohama.

Early reports gave no indication of the bomb loads carried. But the Army Air Forces revealed yesterday in Washington that a Superfortress can carry at least ten tons of bombs. Some B-29 flights are known to have included 100 planes.

The airmen were briefed to avoid the Imperial Palace, in the capital's heart, and shrines and temples.

They departed from here well aware that the raid would not be a surprise to the Japanese, long forewarned by reconnaissance flights and practice B-29 bombing missions against Truk and the Bonin Islands. The flight bore little resemblance to the first thrust of 16 medium bombers, launched from a carrier, which hit Tokyo in 1942 under Lieut. Col. (now Lieut. Gen.) James Doolittle.

No Hit-And-Run Raid

Its historic importance was underlined by General Arnold's personal report to President Roosevelt.

"This operation," he said, "is in no sense a hit-and-run raid. It is a calculated extension of our air power. . . . No part of the Japanese Empire is now out of our range, no war factory too remote to feel our bombs. The battle for Japan has been joined.

"The systematic demolition of Japan's war production, begun six months ago from China bases, henceforth will be carried out with decisive force, softening up the Japanese heart for the ultimate invasion by combined United Nations' land, sea and air forces. This will not be accomplished in a short time. The battle is just beginning. But today we opened against Tokyo an attack which will be carried on relentlessly from the air until the day of land-sea invasion."

Bases Built In Five Months

Lieut. Gen. Millard F. Harmon, deputy commander of the 20th Air Force under Arnold—as today's communique revealed—said "we must and will sustain and intensify our attacks for many months to come before victory will be in sight."

Army engineers built the Superfort bases in five months, a major Pacific war achievement. They started as soon as the islands were secured in July and constructed the large Isely Field on Saipan, from where some of today's raiders left, as well as other fields on Tinian and Guam. While engineers hacked out runways, service organizations were flying in huge stocks of supplies to service the giant planes and their crews.

Logistic Problem Solved

Use of bases in the Marianas solved a major logistic problem in operation of the B-29's. The islands are within far more practicable supply lines than the long "hump" flight from India which still services the 20th Air Force planes in China.

The 21st Bomber Command, the second unit of the 20th Air Force to be announced, was organized and trained initially in Colorado Springs, Col., and later in the Salina (Kan.) area. Despite the large size of this initial raid, based on five months' B-29 experience in other theaters, Hansell warned that Superfort attacks must be regarded as still in the experimental stage in this theater.

Targets Attacked

The airmen in today's attacks knew they would return after dark with little fuel, skirting their way home past Japanese-held islands in the Marianas and Bonins.

During five months' operations from China and India bases, the Superforts have hit targets at Yawata, Sasebo and Omura on Kyushu, in the Japanese homeland; Mukden, Anshan, Dairen, Laoyao, Loyang, Kaieng, Nanking and Shanghai in occupied China; Bangkok, Thailand; Rangoon, Burma, Palembang; Singapore and Formosa.

B-29's Went Over Target At More Than 400 M.P.H.

Twenty-First Bomber Command, Saipan, Nov. 24 (AP—By Radio)—The "Japs just weren't on the ball" when the American Superfortresses blasted Tokyo today in their first raid on the enemy capital, Brig. Gen. Emmet O'Donnell, leader of the historical attack, told newsmen tonight.

O'Donnell's bomber was the first to leave the base here and the first over the target area but several beat him in as they landed in rapid-fire order in the moonlight.

An hour after his return, O'Donnell was telling his experiences to correspondents. He said the Superfortresses bucked a stiff westerly wind en route to Tokyo.

When they were within 100 miles of Japan, Mount Fuji was visible but it was very hazy over the mainland except for a clear spot over Tokyo.

Over 400 M. P. H.

The Dauntless Dottie, O'Donnell's plane, was traveling at a speed of more than 400 miles an hour over the target area. All gunners reported a large percentage of their bombs went right down on the target. The plane stayed over the mainland for 25 minutes.

"The Japs just weren't on the ball," said the flying general, in describing the reception over Tokyo. "I was utterly amazed at the lack of organized fighter opposition or effective anti-aircraft. We didn't run into anything. I don't know whether they didn't have it or weren't ready.

"We learned quite a bit technically—how to adjust for winds, how the guns function under those conditions.

Comparatively "Piddling" Raid

"Actually, this was a piddling raid compared to what's done in Europe, but it was a start and much better than getting run out of the Philippines. This airplane is really a honey."

O'Donnell said his pilot, Major Robert Morgan, and the crew did a remarkably fine job leading the formation across the target.

Capt. John F. Snedaker, of Beverly Hills, Cal., went along as a passenger. In the crew were First Lieutenant Edward Thomas Lee, of Binghamton, N. Y.; Capt. Vincent Evans, of Hollywood, Cal.; Capt. Noel Stewart Alton, of San Francisco; Sergts. Robert W. Rebber, Burbank, Cal.; Willard D. Sanor, East Rochester, Ohio; Robert Bardin, Cave City, Ky.; Donald T. Black, Rushville, Mo.; Ralph W. Powell, Ellwood City, Pa., and Staff Sergeant Sherwood Fritzshall, Chicago.

F. D. R. Awaits Report, B-29 Pilots Were Told

NOV 24 1944

Saipan, Nov. 17 (AP—Delayed). Brig. Gen. Haywood S. Hansell, Jr., commander of the 21st Bomber Command, told B-29 pilots at a briefing for their raid on Tokyo that President Roosevelt himself was eagerly awaiting word of their history-making mission.

"It will be my very great pleasure to bring the word you have been waiting for—this is the works. We will hit our target," Hansell said.

"This mission is important to the Japanese people. They have been told that their military forces everywhere are successful—they were told so recently. Bombs on precise targets in the great cities of Japan will correct that impression as nothing else could do.

President Standing By

"It's important to the people of the United States. The President is standing by waiting for a message from this headquarters.

"It's important to us because precise target destruction will cut the power of the Japanese machine. I have every confidence that you will do this job. I plan to send this message: 'By precision daylight bombing we hit our target in the Tokyo area.' General Arnold will take the message to the President.

"I am confident you are going to me send that message. Good k and good bombing."

s they did in Europe, Ameri- raiders over Japan are respect- religious establishments as far possible.

Tokyo photographs plainly show the Emperor's palace and grounds. B-29 crews were instructed to avoid hitting this and other shrines.

Lieut. Col. Robert Haynes, Hermosa Beach, Cal., B-29 pilot participating in the first Saipan-based raid on Japan, said, "We have been briefed for days on the Tokyo area, but when we made the first Rome raid we were briefed 15 minutes. Our Catholic chaplain said, 'Don't hit the church.' A Catholic member of my crew entirely approved."

Practice Speed Praised

Brig. Gen. Emmett (Rosie) O'Donnell said the flight battled a stiff westerly wind, and spotted the famous Japanese shrine, Mt. Fuji, while still 100 miles from their goal.

The atmosphere was very hazy over the Japanese mainland, O'Donnell said, but there was a clear spot over Tokyo and the raiders topped the city at more than 400 miles an hour.

"Substantial bomb tonnages were dropped upon the Musashina airplane plant located in the northwestern section of the city, and on other selected targets in the industrial area," the communique said.

It explained that the Musashina plant is operated by the Nakajima company, which with Mitsubishi "is a principal supplier of Japanese aircraft."

Although previously reconnaissance flights had spotted a ring of fighter-plane fields around Tokyo, and enemy radio broadcasts had boasted their air defenses were "air tight," O'Donnell said opposition was almost nil.

"Certainly they weren't up to meet us in their fighters, and their ackack fire was meager and inaccurate," said the general, whose home is at Jamaica, N. Y.

"It was one of the easiest missions I've been on," added the flying general and former West Point football coach. He had piloted Flying Fortresses in the Philippines, Java and Australia early in the war.

O'Donnell's command post was aboard the "Dauntless Dottie," piloted by Maj. Robert Morgan of Asheville, N. C. It was the first plane over the Nakajima aircraft factory.

(A Japanese Imperial headquarters communique said about 70 sky giants made the raid. Early reports, it added, showed "three enemy planes shot down." This has not been confirmed by American sources.)

"Tokyo's war industries have been badly hurt by a blow made possible by the Americans who fought and died for the Marianas," said Gen. H.H. Arnold, commanding general of the Army's 20th Air Force, in Washington.

(The enemy communique said the planes struck at 12:20 p.m. Tokyo time—11:20 p.m. Thursday, U. S. Eastern War Time—and the raid continued about two hours.

(In contrast with recently-revealed Army figures which placed a Superfortress bomb load at 10 tons or more, the Japanese communique said "our damage has been light.")

The bombing was only a foretaste of destructive raids yet to come on Japan's industries, Lt. Gen. Millard Harmon, deputy commander of the 20th air force, said in a statement. He added:

"This marks the true beginning of a new phase of the air war against Japan, which in its various aspects will steadily unfold."

Empire Within Range

General Arnold said "China-based Superfortresses and the Saipan air arm "may now strike at Japan from two directions and sustain the attack until the destruction of her war industries has been completed."

Harmon described an even more threatening aspect for Japan, saying:

"The time is near at hand when Japan will be subjected to the combined efforts of air units based from Alaska through the Philippines and over into China—a ring of air effort focussed on the imperial empire.'

Whatever woe the Alaskan forces, air and sea, may have in store for Japan was indicated yesterday in Adm. Chester W. Nimitz' announcement at Pearl Harbor that U. S. Ninth fleet warships on Tuesday shelled Matsuwa island in the Kuriles, only 600 miles from the Japanese home island of Hokkaido. It was the third sea attack on the island.

The 21st bomber command base on Saipan is commanded by Brig. Gen. Hayward S. (Possum) Hansell, Jr., of San Antonio, Tex. His Tokyo-bound fliers were cautioned against hitting the Imperial palace or shrines and temples.

(An early Tokyo broadcast by Domei, news agency, said "residential sections, including one hospital, were slightly damaged."

(The broadcast, while attempting to minimize raid damage, admitted that important targets were hit in the remark that "practically no damage was suffered by important installations." It also said fires were started, but were quickly put out.)

NOV 24 1944

en hours after the raid showed "fires still burning in central Tokyo after the attack," said a communique issued at headquarters of the Army Air forces, Pacific Ocean areas.

Hit Vital Targets

The scores of Superforts in their surprise daylight visit deliberately worked over the vital Japanese production targets with apparently slight fighter opposition and meager and inaccurate anti-aircraft fire.

"All but two of the participating aircraft have now returned," the communique said. It did not say whether the planes were lost to ack ack or operational difficulties.

The B-29s, their exact number undisclosed by American sources (Japanese Imperial headquarters said there were about 70), struck from Saipan, one of the Marianas islands which United States forces took from Japan only five months ago.

This first raid on Tokyo since Lt. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle (then lieutenant colonel) took his Liberators over the city April 18, 1942, was staged by a "large new task force designated as the 21st bomber command," the communique said.

"We took them by surprise again," said Brig. Gen. Emmett (Rosie) O'Donnell, commander of the flight, when he returned from the 3,000-mile round trip.

O'Donnel, leader of the raid, praised the pilots for landing 36 B29's in 37 minutes in night practice.

In sports terms he addressed his pilots as he did his team when he was assistant football coach at West Point, saying: "Tomorrow the season opens. We will meet the enemy on his home ground. This is our first strike. It won't be a knock-out punch, but the enemy will know what's in store for him." General Hansell told correspondents after the briefing that the Imperial Palace was not a target.

3 Of 70 Raiders Downed, Claim

San Francisco, Nov. 24 (AP)—A Japanese imperial communique reported about 70 Superforts participated in the raid on Tokyo today (Japanese time) and claimed three were shot down.

The communique, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission in a Tokyo broadcast, said the B-29s raided Tokyo for about two hours, starting at 12.20 P. M.

"Our damages have been slight," the imperial communique said, "and the war result confirmed up to now is three enemy planes shot down."

Effect Minimized

Previous unofficial Tokyo radio broadcasts also tried to minimize the effect of the air bombardment.

Domei, official Japanese news agency, said in a broadcast that the raiders carried only light missiles and incendiaries and that they flew at a great height.

"All bombs dropped by the enemy planes were wide of their apparently intended targets," the broadcast said.

Domei said Japanese civilian defenses functioned efficiently in quelling fires.

In Waves, Tokyo Says

The broadcast claimed that the bombers still were in the sky over Tokyo when the San Francisco radio broadcast an announcement of the attack at 1.30 P. M. (Japanese time).

FCC said all Tokyo radios appeared to have been broadcasting as usual at the time of the raid.

Tokyo said the Superforts, flying in "ten-odd groups, each comprising several bombers," unloaded bombs and incendiaries on the southern and northern outskirts of Tokyo.

B-29 Crew Decorated For Pictures Of Tokyo

Saipan, Nov. 13 (AP—Delayed). The entire crew of the "Tokyo Rose," first Superfortress to fly over Tokyo, was decorated today for its daring reconnaissance mission November 1.

In the first decoration ceremony of the 20th Army Air Force's 21st Bomber Command, Brig. Gen. Haywood S. Hansell presented the Distinguished Flying Cross to the pilot, Capt. Ralph D. Steakley, Jefferson, Ohio; the Oak Leaf Cluster to an Air Medal to Navigator Lieut. Cludek Stambaugh, of San Antonio, Texas, and Air Medals to nine other crewmen.

First-Time Photos

The accompanying citation said "the crew returned with photographs of enemy terrain and installations hitherto unobtainable and with weather observations and other technical information, thereby making a major contribution to the success of the war against Japan."

Before the ceremony, "Tokyo Rose" twice had returned for further pictures.

Captain Steakley said his first 3,370-mile mission was met by inaccurate anti-aircraft fire on approaching Tokyo, and intense accurate fire over the city itself. Nineteen single-seater Japanese fighters rose to 1,500 feet below the B-29, but refused to attack. The bomber remained over Japan for an hour in excellent weather.

Steakley said that on a mission a few days later he encountered stormy weather.

"About 100 fighters came in quite close, mostly below us but some on our level and some above, but they didn't attack.

"Perhaps we were too fast for them at that altitude."

The Japanese have encircled Tokyo with airfields thickly populated with planes, said the photographic ship's gunner, Tech. Sergt. Fred H. Hutchins, of Italy, Texas, who added that there appeared to be airfields every four miles or so on all sides of Tokyo.

No Runways On Some Fields

Many fields, he said, do not have runways, but only broad, clear areas permitting a takeoff in any direction. On some fields, he said, he counted from 40 to 50 planes lined up side by side.

On the second mission, Steakley remained over Japan for two hours, photographing from Tokyo to Osaka. The third flight kept "Tokyo Rose" over the Tokyo area more than an hour.

The result was some amazingly clear pictures which were shown to correspondents and which outlined Tokyo and environs like a diagram.

The gunner, Staff Sergeant William J. Arnette, of Winnsboro, S. C., said famous Mount Fuji is an excellent landmark for flyers, and is visible for 100 miles.

20 Bursts Near Their Plane

"The Japanese have plenty of planes around Tokyo and I have a hunch they are keeping their best flyers there, too," he said.

Indicating the heavy volume of anti-aircraft fire, the flyers counted 20 bursts near their ship, and 200 black puffs in the air simultaneously.

"Tokyo Rose" returned to base just ahead of a storm, and General Hansell met and congratulated the crewmen. He also gave them a quart of whisky.

GEN. O'DONNELL EXPLAINS B-29 GUNS

Saipan, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—Maybe it's all in the mind, but the men who fire the guns on Superfortresses feel safer because they work by remote control. From turrets within the Superfortress they fire .50-caliber pieces which are mounted outside, many feet from their positions, and the roar of the guns is hardly audible within. On every other type of bomber the deafening clamor, the powder-smoke and steady hail of discharged shells make a bedlam of the gunners' compartments.

The central fire control system in the Superfortresses was explained today by the leader of today's attack on Tokyo, Brig. Gen. Emmett (Rosy) O'Donnell Jr.

"The B-29 is a damn' hard plane to attack with its system of gunnery worked through a central computer," he said. "The gunner looks into the sight, which he adjusts with a couple of knobs, keeps the attacking plane framed in the sight, tracks it in and fires the guns by pressing a button.

"All corrections are taken care of by the sighting computer. Each gunner has primary control of certain gun turrets but can relinquish it to secondary control of other gunners."

Yanks Careful To Avoid Killing Japanese Emperor

By Russell Brines

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—American airmen who pounded Tokyo today were briefed to avoid the Imperial Palace—and behind that lies a curious aspect of the Pacific war.

This unusual immunity granted to the head of an enemy state is a political aspect of the strange Japanese fanaticism.

Death Would Unite Japs

The Emperor's death by bombing would not decrease his divinity to the curiously illogical Japanese. To them, the throne is the symbol of this semi-mystical worship, and the incumbent himself has surprisingly human tastes without divine protection against harm.

But so strongly imbedded is the Emperor concept that his bomb-dealt death would unite the Japanese to a final death stand as no other single incident would. It would sweep the country with hatred for the attackers, far transcending the pinpointed hatred now being expressed.

Would Unleash Savagery

It would unleash full savagery in the brutal battle under way without accomplishing any result of value for the Allies. The people would carry on under the light of the throne itself.

Japan's militarists might some day kill the Emperor themselves to accomplish the same result.

The only way the Allies can reach the great mass of Japanese people is through the Emperor.

JUICY TARGETS PICKED IN JAPAN

Hansell Tells How They're Selected for Bombing.

Saipan, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—Brig. Gen. Haywood Hansell Jr., in a secret conference before today's Tokyo raid, said that not much could be expected at first, but that juicy targets were waiting in Janpan for American bombs.

Gen. Hansell, named Chief of Staff of the Twentieth United States Air Force when it was created last April, and commander of the Twenty-first Bomber Command in August, brought the first B-29 to Saipan.

"These raids should be regarded as in the experimental stage for a matter of months," he declared. "Let none get the impression, or give the impression, that these initial raids mean the end of Tokyo or anything like it."

Gen. Hansell explained that economic experts on the basis of a careful study of Japan's economy, listed a number of prime objectives from which bombing targets are now being chosen. He said that the same procedure had been followed when he commanded the first and third bombardment wings of the Eighth Air Force in England and led some of the first of the fortress raids over Germany.

"There are many juicy targets in Japan, but it's going to be a tough and long job to knock them out," he said.

Once In National Air Race

General Hansell, 41, a decade ago teamed with Claire Chennault— now lieutenant general commanding the 14th Air Force in China—in an aerial arcrobatic team in the Cleveland National Air Races.

He holds the Silver Star of the Legion of Merit, the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Medal and the Order of Commander of the Order of British Empire.

"Grounded," He Says

"I've been grounded," he said, grinning wryly as Brig. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell, Jr., led the first B-29 strike against Japan from the Marianas.

General O'Donnell, Brooklyn born, is 38. He was three times decorated as a squadron leader of B-17s in the Philippines at the start of the war, and now holds the Distinguished Flying Cross and the DFC Oak Leaf Cluster.

All Japan Termed Open To Air Blows

San Francisco, Nov. 24 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Millard S. Harmon said today "we have the whole of Japan under our bombsights now."

Commenting on the destructive Superfortress raid on Tokyo, Harmon was quoted as saying:

"We want to emphasize that we are not bombing people. We are bombing the Japanese war machine.

"When we have seriously crippled the war industries, all the toughness in the world won't save the Japanese.

"It is our plan to pound away from the air with power which will increase in proportion to our added need. We intend by the addition of this special air power to give the Jap a little more than he can take."

Harmon said the "phenomenal toughness" of the Japanese civilians may make it possible for them to hold out under the kind of bombing Germany has been taking, but "even if the people of Japan can hold out, their war industries cannot."

Tokyo Raid Big News in London

LONDON, Nov. 24 (AP).—London newspapers printed the news of the B-29 raid on Tokyo across their front pages today. "The Evening Standard" bannered "Superforts Hit Tokyo," and gave second place to the battle for the Rhine.

Truk Target Of First B-29 Raid From Saipan

Saipan, Mariana Islands, Nov. 24 (AP)—The first B-29 mission from Saipan was a "shakedown" against Truk, in the Caroline Islands, but the first taste of combat came in subsequent practice raids against the Bonins.

On that strike against the Bonins, said Maj. Robert K. Morgan, of Asheville, N. C., who piloted the famed B-17 Memphis Belle on European raids, "a couple of fighters were about ready to make a pass at us, but when they saw our guns they dove out."

Tokyo Is Caught Flat-Footed By Superfort Raid

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—Tokyo was caught by surprise and its war factories heavily damaged, it was indicated tonight, when Superfortresses thundered in from Saipan bases to open the "Battle for Japan."

Smoke billowed from great fires in the heart of the city hours after the first bombs were dropped, an army communique reported. Returning Superfortress crewmen said fighter and anti-aircraft opposition was astonishingly light.

Even the splutterings of the Tokyo radio, minimizing the damage to war industries, added to a picture of an enemy badly hurt by the first blow from the Saipan side of what henceforth will be a China-Saipan campaign aimed to wreck Japanese war-making power.

Musashina Plant Target

Prime target of the attack on the Nipponese capital was the Musashina plant, one of the principal Japanese producers of military aircraft. The 20th Air Force communique reported that substantial bomb tonnages struck it.

At a Saipan Island base to which the planes returned, Brig. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell, who led the attack, asserted that the enemy was taken by surprise.

"It was one of the easiest missions I've been on," O'Donnell said.

Strong fighter opposition had been anticipated since reconnaissance flights had shown the city was ringed by fighter fields.

Two Superfortresses had not returned when the 20th Air Force reported on results of the raid.

Tokyo Claims Three

[The Tokyo radio said three were shot down. It said the attacking force was comprised of about 70 Superfortresses.]

Airmen here said the apparent surprise showed one of the advantages of the new bases in the Marianas—the ability to approach targets on the Japanese homeland over the open sea where tracking and reporting of the missions' progress is difficult or impossible.

The light fighter opposition encountered over Japan's No. 1 city, it was suggested, might mean that the Japanese had dispatched planes elsewhere in the diminishing empire. In this connection it was recalled that a Superfortress mission hit Omura, on the southern island of Kyushu, on November 21 and encountered there the heaviest fighter opposition so far experienced.

Earlier, Gen. H. H. Arnold, army air forces chief, had asserted that now, with bases in both China and the Pacific, Japan would be hit from two directions. He declared the "Battle for Japan" had been joined and "we will pound Japan's war machine out of existence."

The attack on Tokyo was the second visit by American air forces to the capital. A long interval elapsed between the two attacks. The first, coming at a time when the Allies were suffering reverses on many fronts, was launched on April 18, 1942, when 16 medium bombers under the command of Jimmy Doolittle took off from an aircraft carrier.

It was apparent that in the new raid, as in the first small one, incendiary bombs represented a good percentage of the tonnage dropped on the city.

Aim Is Plane Production

Selection of the aircraft plant in northwest Tokyo as the prime target for today's daylight attack was in line with Arnold's statement a few weeks ago that Japanese fighter-plane production, as then unchecked, must be disrupted and then destroyed as the first stage of organized strategic air war against Japan.

The announcement that mighty new forces of the big planes now are based in the Marianas explained recent reports that the army was urging a vastly stepped-up production of Superfortresses. The production of five plants now turning them out must feed two operating agencies, the 21st Command on Saipan and the original 20th Command based in western China.

Saipan Raids Easier

It was presumed here that the frequency and size of missions launched from the Saipan bases would be far in excess of those which can take off from China.

Saipan, an island, can be reached by tankers and supply ships sailing directly from American or other Allied ports. On the other hand, fuel and bombs for the China-based Superfortresses must be [illegible] laboriously by air from India.

B-29s Hit Tokyo as Japan Nears Peak Production

Output Expected to Start Tapering Off Early Next Year

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24 (AP).—The Superfortress raid on Tokyo today hit hard at Japanese production, which American experts say is about to reach its peak. Increases in Japanese war production will level off early next year, they estimate, and then manufacture of war goods may begin to fall off.

General H. H. Arnold, in announcing today's attack on the Japanese capital, said "no part of the Japanese Empire is now out of our range, no war factory too remote to feel our bombs." He added that "the systematic demolition of Japan's war production, begun six months ago from China bases, henceforth will be carried out with decisive vigor." . . .

The American experts' appraisal gives no assurances of a quick collapse of Japan, it is noted, because Germany is believed to have reached her peak a year ago and been on the down grade since. Yet the Nazis still are fighting bitterly.

In two main items, airplanes and ships, the Japanese are described as having pushed about as far as they can go. Monthly ship production may rise, however, because they are building wooden ships. It takes twenty of these to equal the capacity of a medium-sized cargo vessel.

Man power and raw materials are the prime stumbling blocks, according to American information. Many schools in Japan have been closed and turned into factories, with children above twelve years put to work.

Hansell Congratulated By Arnold On Exploit

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—The leader of the 21st Bomber Command, whose existence was disclosed dramatically today with its smash at Tokyo, received congratulations from his chief.

From Gen. H. H. Arnold, as commanding general of the 20th Air Force, went this message to Brig. Gen. Heywood S. Hansell, commanding general of the 21st Bomber Command:

"You have successfully engaged the enemy in the very heart of his empire. This marks the beginning of what I know will be a most distinguished career for the 21st Bomber Command. We are proud of you. Good luck and God bless you."

Tokyo Is Fountainhead Of Sprawling Jap Empire

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—Tokyo, bombed today by a large force of Superfortresses, is the capital of an empire which now claims dominion over nearly half a billion human beings, seat of Japan's military, political and economic power, home of the Emperor and therefore fountainhead of the fanatical worship which was a mighty factor in setting Japanese legions marching.

It is the world's third largest city. The Japanese insist it is second, ranked only by New York, with London third. This calculation is based on figures that shear the suburbs away from London. It is certainly the second largest city to know the horrors of air bombardment, surpassed only by London, if you accept the non-Japanese figures.

Covers 225 Square Miles

Five years ago a census gave Tokyo 6,500,000 inhabitants. Almost certainly the booming war industries have raised that figure above 7,000,000, perhaps to 7,500,000.

Tokyo sprawls over some 225 square miles running back from the reclaimed lands along Tokyo Bay across some low hills into the Musashi plain beyond. It is subdivided into 35 wards, of which 15 make up the old city. Twenty have been added in the last dozen years as the city engulfed the outlying towns and villages.

At its heart lies the palace of the Emperor, shut off from the public eye by stone walls some 500 years old rising beyond a broad moat. This is the true heart of the empire. In the huge plaza before the big double bridge spanning the moat, great patriotic congregations have gathered to pay homage to the Mikado or celebrate victories.

Marunouchi District

Ranged about the palace are the Government buildings, including the general staff, war office and navy office buildings and the official residence of Premier Kuniaki Koiso, from which the real government of the empire is conducted. Near by, beyond the palace plaza, is a thickly conjested section of modern buildings, the Marunouchi district, economic capital.

Here also is Tokyo Central Station, hub of the country's communications system. No railways run through Tokyo. All start there.

Industrial Fringe

Industry of all kinds crams the wards around the rim of the city. Formerly most of the factories were given over to textiles, paper making, food processing, light consumers' industries. Nearly all these now have been converted to war purposes. Tokyo's industrial fringe offers one of the most inviting military targets in the world. The Doolittle raiders slashed at those industrial wards, and it is likely the Superfortresses fixed their bombsights on the same districts.

Five eighths of Tokyo was destroyed in the great earthquake and fire of 1923. Most of the destroyed part was replaced by what were to be temporary buildings, "barracks," the Japanese called them, light, jerry-built structures, easily inflammable. As time went by and military needs took all the money, these temporary buildings remained. There are, however, considerable blocks of steel and concrete construction that probably would withstand fire if no blockbusters.

SAARE FREED OF GERMANS

Reds Also Sink Four Warships Off Estonian Island

London, Saturday, Nov. 25 (AP)—Russian army and naval units yesterday cleared the last Germans from the fortified Estonian island of Saare (Osel) dominating the Gulf of Riga, and supporting red airmen sank four Nazi warships offshore and damaged four others, including a heavy cruiser, Moscow announced last night.

Conquest of the strategically important island freed Riga gulf for Soviet amphibious operations against Germany's Baltic coast, and also for landings in the rear of 30 Axis divisions isolated in western Latvia, 17 miles across the gulf's mouth from the southern tip of Saare.

52 Divisions Reported

Berlin meanwhile said the Russians had hurled 52 divisions against their troops in Latvia, making gains of undisclosed depth on a 60-mile front between Jelauce, 70 miles east of the Baltic p[illegible] of Liepaja, and Priekule, 20 m[illegible] from Liepaja.

Moscow's bulletin, reporting limited but valuable gains in Czechoslovakia and Hungary, did not confirm the Latvian offensive which Berlin said had reached a new peak of violence after five days of battles.

The Russians, drawing upon reservoir of four Soviet armies, were hurling in reinforcements and using tank, plane and artillery forces in an effort to crush the Latvian pocket and thus release hundreds of thousands of troops for blows against German East Prussia, Berlin said.

Estonian Corps Participates

An Estonian corps participated in the victory on the southern peninsula of Saare, helping wrest the last bit of Estonian territory from the enemy, Moscow said.

Berlin, admitting loss of the island, termed it an "evacuation."

Red airmen were credited with sinking a German torpedo boat, a patrol vessel and two patrol cutters, and damaging two patrol vessels, a landing barge, and the cruiser.

Outflank Budapest Areas

In Hungary the Russians were outflanking Budapest on the south and north, and slowly forcing the mountain passes northeast of the Hungarian capital in an advance toward Czechoslovakia and a future junction with troops of another Soviet army driving ahead in eastern Slovakia despite torrential rains.

Berlin said Russian troops, which had crossed an eastern arm of the Danube below Budapest and landed on 30-mile-long Csepel Island, had advanced four miles across the island and reached Tokol, a town seven miles south of Budapest.

Moscow did not confirm this operation, but did announce that Soviet troops fighting around the northern side of Budapest had captured the village of Bag, a mile across the Galna river from the rail and road junction on Aszod, 15 miles from the Danube's banks north of Budapest.

Hatvan Under Soviet Fire

Capture of Aszod, whence roads lead to Austria and Czechoslovakia, would destroy the anchor of the enemy's defense arc protecting Budapest from the north, Hatvan was under Soviet attack.

Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukraine Army gained ground on a front extending beyond besieged Miskolc, 85 miles northeast of Budapest, capturing eight villages.

In Czechoslovakia, Col. Gen. Ivan Petrov's Fourth Ukraine Army troops seized nine localities on a 25-mile front west of Ungvar and Csap.

The Russians were seven miles from the road junction of Michalovce.

In Latvia, where Premier Stalin has said more than thirty German divisions are pocketed, a late Berlin broadcast by the German commentator, Colonel Alfred von Olberg, said that fifty-two Russian divisions were attacking against "incomparably lesser numbers of German troops."

"This tremendous array of Russian forces on the northern sector again shows," he said, "that the Soviet command can and intends to launch its large-scale offensive against East Prussia when it has secured the safety of its rear in the Baltic area."

A Transocean report said "very strong" Russian forces struck east of Liepaja, west Latvian Baltic port, and penetrated Axis lines at several points. When the offensive began Monday Berlin had located the fighting near Priekule, twenty miles east of Liepaja.

Other Red army infantry units tore into German lines in the sector of Soviet-held Auce, seventy miles east of Liepaja, the broadcast said. North of Mazeikiai, twenty-two miles southwest of Auce, the Germans said their troops withstood seven fierce Russian assaults in twenty-four hours.

In Yugoslavia, Marshal Tito's headquarters announced the capture by Yugoslav troops of the important harbor and military port of Kotor, thirty miles above the northern Albanian frontier.

The communicue said the retreating German group was in "an ever more critical position" in the intervening Scutari, Podgorica and Danilovgrad area as the Yugoslavs tightened a circle around these strongholds.

London, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—Russian forces have cleared the Germans from the island of Saare, north of the entrance to the Gulf of Riga, Marshal Stalin announced tonight in a broadcast order of the day.

Stalin said that the clearing of the 1,000-square-mile island completed the liberation of all Estonian territory. Moscow saluted the victory with twenty salvos from 224 guns.

The victory was achieved by Marshal Lavrenti Govorov's Leningrad Army, supported by units of the Russian Baltic fleet.

To the south in Latvia a massive battle to annihilate the German Northern Army Corps was reported flaming again, although Moscow remained silent concerning it.

Berlin said that the Red Army had resumed the offensive in the Auce area, about fifty-five miles southwest of Riga, and was driving on the Baltic port of Liepaja (Libau), seventy miles west of Auce. Heavy artillery barrages preceded the pushes in both sectors, the Germans said.

The Russian Fourth Ukrainian Army was moving again in eastern Czecho-Slovakia.

Moscow announced last night the fresh drive by Marshal Ivan Petrov's forces already had ground out gains up to sixteen miles on a twenty-five-mile front west of Ungvar, Carpatho-Ukraine city which fell October 27. The thrust, apparently aimed at the big highway and rail hub of Kassa (Kosice), has overrun thirty populated places as well as Csap (Cop), a railway junction fifteen miles south of Ungvar.

Kassa lies about forty-five miles north, northwest of the Hungarian communications center, Miskolc, itself threatened from the south and east by units of Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukrainian Army sweeping through Hungary.

While Marshal Petrov's troops were reaching Sobrance, ten miles northwest of Ungvar, Malinovsky's army units recaptured Tokaj at the lower end of an approximately fifty-five-mile active front between those two points.

GERMANS DRIVEN FROM FORTRESS ISLE BY SOVIET TROOPS

Stalin Announces That Liberation of Estonia Has Been Completed.

In yesterday's fighting Soviet troops also smashed due west of Ungvar 16 miles to Budkovce. The railway station of Bacska, seven miles west of Csap, also fell.

Prisoners Taken Total 14,470

The Russian communique reported capture of more than 3,000 German and Hungarian prisoners north and northwest of Csap, and 2,500 in two days of battle in Hungary. Moscow said the total taken since November 8 in Hungary now stands at 14,470.

The Russian's announcement of the recapture of Tokaj in northeastern Hungary came a day after the Germans said they had evacuated the famous wine town. Moscow said Tarcal, three miles west of Tokaj and 25 miles east of Miskolc, was taken during the day.

Front dispatches reported a "cold autumn rain" falling along the 85-mile front stretching northeast from Budapest, turning roads into rivers of mud.

Hungarians' Morale Low

Moscow, Nov. 24 (AP)—High Red Army sources said today that the morale of the 24 Hungarian divisions fighting under the supreme command of German Col. Gen. Friesner had sagged to catastrophic depths.

Desertions and defeatism were declared to be rampant among Hungarian formations still in the line. Since the start of the Russian drive on Budapest early in October 60,000 prisoners have been reported taken, including 14,400 in the past fortnight.

VOROSHILOV REPORT

London, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—The Berlin and German-controlled Budapest radios declared last night that Russia's Marshal Kliment Voroshilov had been appointed commander in chief in the Far East and has probably already taken up his new post.

Moscow announced this week that Voroshilov had been relieved of his duties as a member of the Soviet State Committee of Defense.

OLD RED BANNER FLIES ON DANUBE

Moscow, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—The red banner of a Siberian infantry regiment which was carried in battle against the Japanese in outer Mongolia in 1939 now waves on a bank of the Danube River in Hungary, a dispatch to Red Star, the Soviet Army newspaper said today.

'Death Camp' Reported On Lithuanian Border

Moscow, Nov. 24 (AP)—Red Fleet, official Russian navy newspaper, reported today that a death camp had been found on the East Prussian border where 2,000 Lithuanian men, women and children were killed and buried in comomn graves by the Germans before their retreat.

The dispatch said 400 bodies had been found in one grave at the camp, located in Tubin forest.

STALIN ENDORSES SLAV FEDERATION

Tito Is Seen as Candidate for Premier—Planned Trade for 6 States Likely

MOSCOW, Nov. 24 (AP)—Premier Stalin's approval of the agreement between Marshal Tito and Dr. Ivan Subasitch, Premier of the exiled Yugoslav Government, for a "new democratic, federated Yugoslavia," was announced officially tonight.

The statement said the Soviet Union considered the union of the Royal Yugoslav Government and Tito's National Liberation Committee a "positive and constructive factor" in reaching victory and securing a European peace.

A high Yugoslav source said Marshal Tito was certain to be the new Premier. Mr. Subasitch and virtually all his present Ministers are to receive important posts, this source said.

Tito Proposes Democratic Regime

London, Nov. 24 (AP)—A proposal by Marshal Tito to establish a new Yugoslavia federal democratic government embracing six states was announced last night by the Free Yugoslavia radio.

The Partisan leader was quoted as telling a Bulgarian newspaperman that the new government would apply all its powers "to the closest collaboration and rapprochment with its Balkan neighbors," particularly Bulgaria.

Federal units under the new government will be Serbia, Croatia-Slavonia, Macedonia, Bosnia, Hercegovina and Montenegro, the broadcast said.

First Notice Of Particulars

It was the first official statement disclosing any particulars of the recently concluded agreement between Tito and Dr. Ivan Subasic, Premier of the exiled Yugoslav Government. Subasic saw Marshal Stalin in Moscow yesterday.

"Each federal unit," Tito said, "will have its national government. At the head of democratic Yugoslavia will be one single government. The final internal organization will be carried out—after the liberation of the country—through the Constitutional Assembly, to which the peoples will send their representatives selected in free elections."

TITO SEIZES KOTOR

London, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—Yugoslav troops have captured Kotor and freed its protected harbor and the Lusica peninsula, Marshal Tito's communique announced today. The Germans in that region are attempting to retreat toward Scutari, a war bulletin said.

British Sub Attacks German Convoy

London, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—A British submarine patrolling the Norwegian coast sank one of a convoy of three supply ships recently and may have sunk a second, an Admiralty communique said today.

One of the ships blew up and sank. The other was set on fire.

BLASKOWITZ OUT, LONDON INFORMED

Germans Discount Fighting in South—Declare Aachen Is Still Vital Sector

LONDON, Nov. 24 (AP)—Field Marshal Johannes Blaskowitz was reported today to have been removed from the German command in southeastern France.

The entrance of Allied troops into Strasbourg and the street fighting in that Rhine city were admitted by Berlin radio commentators. But most of them declared that attacks in the Vosges had been repulsed and that the French First Army had been unable to reopen its lines through the German "bolt" positions in the Belfort Gap outlet below Mulhouse.

The German transocean news agency said a German military spokesman compared the operations on this front to a raid, saying the forces carrying out the attack against Strasbourg were relatively small and that "considerable parts have already been wiped out."

May Not Be Replaced

The report of Marshal Blaskowitz's removal reached London from a border source that said he would not be replaced. This would leave two German Army groups defending the west front in place of three previously deployed—one under Field Marshal Gen. Walther von Model in the north and another under Gen. Hermann Balck in the south.

This would indicate a belief by the German High Command that its hold on Alsace had been destroyed by the break-through of French and American troops and a decision to considerably shorten the front west of the Rhine—the area in which Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had said the decision might be reached.

A hint of expected disaster in Alsace was given to the German people by Ludwig Sertorius, the only enemy commentator not discounting the drive to Strasbourg. Saying it was "very likely" that the Germans would surround and destroy the units that reached the city, he warned that if the counter-attacks failed and the two Allied forces east of the Vosges linked up it would mean that all German forces in the Vosges area "would be encircled completely."

Call Aachen Front Dangerous

All the reports broadcast by Berlin placed the area of greatest danger to Germany in the Aachen front and emphasized the fury of the battle there. They admitted losses worse than any yet experienced by the German Army, and said the line had been reinforced at critical points by "People's Divisions and Volkssturm"—the recently organized Home Guard.

The recapture of five villages—Beeck, Hoven, Bourheim, Lohn and Puetzlohn was claimed in one Berlin radio western front report, but Allied gains were admitted in the Huertgen Forest. Bourheim never was claimed by the Allies. Transocean reported that Allied troops broke into the German lines north of Heisten and west of Grosshau.

"The center of gravity on the western front continues to be in the Aachen area," said Transocean. "Events in Alsace and Lorraine might tempt a superficial observer to conclude that a new strategic focal point had developed on the southern wing.

"This mistake becomes obvious when comparing the numerical array of enemy forces in Alsace and in Aachen."

New attacks by the American Third Army toward Saareguemines and Saar Union were reported by the German news agency DNB.

Nazi General Is 'Ousted'

London, Nov. 24 (AP)—Unconfirmed reports from the German frontier said today that Field Marshal General Johannes Blaskowitz, commander of the German 19th Army in rout on the southern end of the Western front, had been withdrawn from his command.

The same information reaching London said Blaskowitz would not be replaced. His command has been taking terrific punishment from the United States Seventh and Third and the French First armies on the front from Metz south to the Swiss frontier.

Up To 10 Divisions Pinned

Latest advices said up to 10 of the 19th Army's undersized divisions were in precarious positions in the Vosges Mountains, pinned against the Rhine. It is believed, however, that many have escaped to the refuge of the Siegfried Line, east of the river in that sector.

The information concerning Blaskowitz said two army groups in the future would defend the Western front—Group "T," commanded by Field Marshal General Walther von Model in the north, and Group "G," under Gen. Hermann Balck in the south.

Called Logical Development

This was accepted as a logical development in London military circles.

The French-American slash to the Rhine in the south has materially shortened the Nazi front west of that river—an area in which General Eisenhower says the decisive action will be fought.

Gen. Blaskowitz was known as a close friend of Field Marshal Gen. Gerd von Rundstedt, German supreme commander in the west. There was speculation here that Gen. Blaskowitz might be sent to Italy, but this was based on the rumor, current for a week without confirmation, that something had happened to Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring in that theater.

Gen. Balck, named as the new commander of the southern wing of the western front, was previously reported to have commanded a mobile group in the center of the German line.

Churchill Hails U. S. As Top World Power

London, Nov. 24 (AP)—The United States was hailed as the world's greatest military and naval power by Prime Minister Churchill in a surprise Thanksgiving address last night.

Speaking at Albert Hall before 8,000 persons, including American servicemen attending a concert, Churchill said the Allies were moving irresistibly and "perhaps, with God's aid, swiftly toward victorious peace.

"It is a British and American Thanksgiving that we may celebrate today. And why is that? It is because under the compulsion of mysterious and all-powerful destiny we are together, shedding our blood side by side, struggling for the same ideals."

From the Continent General Eisenhower marked the Thanksgiving Day occasion with a broadcast to the United States calling for oversubscription of the Sixth War Loan drive for vital fighting equipment "needed now."

COMMONS MAY AIR WODEHOUSE CASE

NOV 25 1944

London, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—The P. G. Wodehouse case may be aired in the House of Commons.

Several members of Parliament are preparing questions in an effort to get the Government to clarify the position of the 63-year-old British novelist, who was detained by the French.

Reports from Paris, the London Daily Mail said, had "given the whole affair an unnecessary atmosphere of mystery."

The newspaper raised these questions—"what was the object of the arrest? If the British Government was not consulted in advance why was a British citizen arrested by the French?"

In Paris the Police Judiciare announced yesterday that Wodehouse had been released after spending three nights in a police station, but it was disclosed later he was still detained.

It was understood the authorities had agreed not to press charges that Wodehouse had aided the Germans by broadcasts from Germany in 1941. His release was withheld pending arrangements for his residence under surveillance not less than 100 kilometers (62 miles) from Paris.

Nazis Supermen? Well, No Or Yes—Goebbels

London, Nov. 24 (AP)—The Nazi doctrine of German racial superiority has been denied by its loudest advocate, Dr. Joseph Goebbels—but the Reich's Minister of Propaganda apparently had his wagging tongue in his gaunt cheek when he said it.

"By no means do we consider ourselves superior to other races," Goebbels wrote in Das Reich, in a home-front essay entitled "On doing our daily duty," and then he added sarcastically:

"We only note the fact that well nigh the whole world is attacking us, and yet we do not succumb. We conclude therefrom that the German people are living in exceptional circumstances."

Stoicism has become a German weapon, said Goebbels. He wrote that the German soldier, superior in bravery and determination, would balance the material superiority of the Allies. "A clearcut, imperturbable political determination is the best pre-condition for victory," Goebbels wrote. "This we possess, and in this respect, too, we are superior to our enemies."

V-2 PLANT KNOCKED OUT

Belated Report Tells of U. S. Bomber Blow Near Weimar

LONDON, Nov. 24 (AP)—A United States Eighth Air Force spokesman disclosed tonight hitherto secret details of a 400-ton bombing attack that destroyed the bulk of a V-2 rocket plant near Weimar, Germany, last Aug. 24.

Fifty German fighter planes and one of the most formidable flak belts in Germany guarded the plant, but 130 Flying Fortresses "laid down a remarkably concentrated and accurte pattern of bombs," he said.

Including both main and auxiliary factory buildings, forty-five were destroyed. All others were partly wrecked or damaged.

BOMBERS OVER REICH

London, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—The Berlin radio said tonight that Allied bombers were over Germany again and were approaching the Brunswick-Hannover area and the province of Brandenburg, which includes Berlin.

Airfields in the Brunswick-Hannover area were raked with cannon fire and bombed at low level by Mosquito bombers of the Royal Air Force last night. Planes of the Eighth United States Air Force were grounded today.

New Appointments In Vickers Industries

London, Nov. 24 (AP)—New executive appointments in the Vickers group industries were announced tonight as a result of the recent death of Sir Charles Craven, chairman and managing director of Vickers-Armstrong's, Ltd.

Sir Frederick Yapp was named chairman of Vickers-Armstrong's, and Commander E. R. Micklem, deputy chairman and managing director.

In Vickers Limited, A. A. Jamieson, chairman, was granted temporary leave from directorships in all other companies to devote full time to the chairmanship. Sir Frederick Yapp was named managing director of that company, and Commander Micklem and Sir James Callander were named directors.

Sir Alexander Dunbar was appointed chairman of the English Steel Corporation, Ltd.

352d Fighter Group Gets New Commander

London, Nov. 24 (AP)—Lieut. Col. James D. Mayden, of Junction City, Kan., has assumed command of the 352d Fighter Group of the United States Eighth Air Force.

Mayden has been deputy commander of the group since June. He replaces Col. Joe L. Mason, of Columbus, Ohio, who has returned to the United States for a new assignment.

Lieut. Col. John C. Meyer, of Forest Hills, Long Island, N. Y., succeeds Mayden as deputy commander.

British Bombers Drop Bombs On Hannover

London, Nov. 24 (AP)—Squadrons of British Mosquito bombers dropped two-ton bombs last night on Hannover and other objectives behind German lines. Intruders shot up Nazi airfields.

Before dark, American and British bombers each dropped 500 tons of explosives on the Nordstern Synthetic Oil Plant at Gelsenkirchen in the Ruhr in a double attack. Two British bombers and three United States fighters were lost to ground fire. No interceptors were seen.

British Lend-Lease To U.S. Put At 3 Billion

London, Nov. 24 (AP)—Separate British and American official papers—bare of any estimate of the United States' mutual-aid outlay—tallied the cost of the British Empire's reverse lend-lease contributions today at $3,348,127,000 up to June 30.

In Washington, President Roosevelt told Congress that lend-lease and reverse lend-lease should end with the close of the European and Pacific wars.

NOV 25 1944

Publicity Mixup

In a breakdown which covered items ranging from 186,832 bobby pins to aircraft and port facilities, the British White Paper called the United Kingdom's contributions "no small achievement" in view of the requirements of its own forces.

London's Fleet Street and the British Government's publicity offices found themselves in something of a mixup over the reports.

An arrangement apparently was made whereby the British report on reverse lend-lease would be handed to the press for publication at noon, London time. President Roosevelt's report to Congress on this same subject was issued for release at noon, Washington time.

U. S. Gets Two Billions

Due to the time difference, the British White Paper thus was given a head start in both British and American newspapers.

The British White Paper showed total British contributions amounting to approximately $4,318,592,000, and reported that, during the year July, 1943, to June, 1944, the United States received from Britain goods and services worth $2,418,920,000. Of the aggregate, Portugal received $44,532,000 and Turkey $82,724,000.

Both neutral countries have treaties with Britain. $2,193,062,000

Called Vital Factor

The British report said:

"This system under which the goods and services flow freely where they are most required for the common war effort has been a vital factor in the achievements of the United Nations in the fields."

It stressed, too, that many of the supplies called for by the United States forces required "special production programs which involved the diversion of labor and resources from other war work of urgent importance."

The report also said that British ships brought to the United Kingdom more than 865,000 uniformed Americans, including 320,500 carried on the Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth.

Chief beneficiary has been the United States, which during the year from July, 1943, to June, 1944, received from Britain alone $2,418,920,000 worth of goods and services, the report said.

In addition, during that year alone British ships brought to the United Kingdom more than 865,000 uniformed Americans, including 320,500 carried on the Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth.

Russ Get Billion

Next to the United States, the most aid was given Russia—$1,077,828,000 worth of goods during the year, including 1,042 tanks.

Aid to other countries since the war began included:

CHINA—$36,200,000.

FRANCE—Up to June, 1943—$54,400,000.

POLAND (Provisional) — $480,000,000.

GREECE—$49,472,000.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA—$74,516,000.

PORTUGAL—$44,532,000.

TURKEY—$82,724,000.

Aid given American forces, the report said, included petroleum products worth $235,528,000, aircraft worth $43,060,000, guns and ammunition worth $29,196,000 and tanks and vehicles worth $9,620,000.

133 Airfields Listed

Other items listed as having been built especially for the Americans or turned over to them were 133 airfields, barracks, roads, railways, seaport facilities and hospitals with nearly 100,000 beds.

In addition to nearly $32,000,000 worth of food provided United States troops in the United Kingdom, the report said bulk foodstuffs and raw materials amounting to $54,000,000 were shipped to the United States, mainly from British Colonies, but paid for by England. Included were 40,000 tons of natural rubber, largely from Ceylon.

The building program for airports, barracks and other quarters was estimated to have employed over 100,000 men.

In many cases, it was declared, United Kingdom production met all the requirements of the United States forces. It noted that spark plugs for certain types of American aircraft were wholly provided, including 558,500 used here and another 600,000 shipped to America.

Britain also produced 137,000 jettison fuel tanks to increase the range of United States fighter aircraft, 50,000 pieces of armor plate, and during the first six months of this year 7,087,802 "Jerricans," containers specially constructed to hold gasoline.

Nation Made Sacrifices.

"In an economy already highly organized for war the provision of mutual aid to meet the requirements of the United States, Russian and other Allied forces could only be achieved by imposing further burdens and sacrifices on the community," the report said.

"No figures can adequately measure the real cost, but the estimate in this report may serve as an indication of the magnitude of the resources that the United Kingdom, notwithstanding its own pressing needs, has made available for the needs of its Allies.

"The United Kingdom has been for five years in the front lines and the needs of its own forces and its own people have been such as to require unparalleled efforts on the part of the whole population."

Mixup in London.

London's Fleet Street and the British Government's publicity offices found themselves in something of a mixup over the long-herald reports on mutual aid.

An arrangement apparently was made whereby the British report on reverse lend-lease would be handed to the press for publication at noon, London time. President Roosevelt's report to Congress on this same subject was issued for release at noon, Washington time.

Due to the difference, the British white paper thus was given a head start in both British and American newspapers.

However, the British Press Association, a news agency owned by the British newspapers scored something of a "scoop" on the British white paper and distributed a detailed story during the early morning hours for publication at noon.

To add to the mix-up one London morning paper, the Daily Herald, displayed inconspicuously on page four this morning excerpts from President Roosevelt's report to Congress, scheduled for publication at 5:00 P. M. British time today.

LEND-LEASE REPORT GIVEN BY BRITAIN

Stapleton

LONDON, Nov. 24 — (AP) As President Roosevelt declared today that Lend-Lease would die with the end of the war, Britain—long concerned that its own contributions might not be fully appreciated—tallied its mutual aid in reverse to U. S. forces at $3,348,127,000 up to June 30.

Five hours before the President made his announcement in Washington, a British white paper was summarizing the amount of assistance the empire has poured into the Allied victory pool from its warpinched resources. It detailed the wide variety of goods—from hairnets to artificial ports—supplied American troops.

"The United Kingdom has been for five years in the front line, and the needs of its own forces and its own people have been such to require unparalleled efforts on the part of the whole population," said the White Paper proudly. "It is no small achievement that notwithstanding these calls on its resources and productive capacity, it should have also met the needs of its Allies on so substantial a scale."

Neither the British nor the American reports offered any estimate of the vast United States outlay—either to the Allies in general or to Great Britain in particular.

The British white paper, however, placed its total reverse lend-lease expenditures at $4,318,592,000. This figure included aid to Portugal and Turkey, two neutrals in the war although Allies of Britain.

Of the amount which the United States received in goods and services from that aggregate, $2,437,062,000 came from the United Kingdom itself, and the balance of the $3,348,127,000 from Australia, New Zealand and India.

The lengthy presentation of reverse Lend-Lease operation came in the wake of an insistent clamor in the British press for greater emphasis on the sacrifices made by the British in helping to sustain the mutual aid system.

Among the major items listed by the British were: transportation and communications facilities for United States forces, 2,104 aircraft including 500 gliders, $32,000,000 worth of food, 133 airfields, public utility services, landing craft bases and embarkation facilities, raw materials worth more than $52,000,000 in one year alone, and the design and construction of two pre-fabricated harbors used in the invasion.

Lend-Lease Should Halt With War, Declares FDR

NOV 25 1944

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(AP) President Roosevelt told Congress today that lend-lease and reverse lend-lease "should end with the war."

The statement appeared to be a pointed reply to suggestions that some sort of lend-lease assistance should be continued to Britain and possibly other Allied nations even after both the European and Pacific wars have ended.

Mr. Roosevelt had previously called for continuation of lend-lease so long as Japan remains in the war.

Partnership Must Continue

"Lend-lease and reverse lend-lease are a system of combined war supply," the Chief Executive said today. "They should end with the war. But the United Nations partnership must go on and must grow stronger."

The policy declaration wound up a letter by which the President transmitted to Congress a detailed report of reverse lend-lease from Britain. The British put out a similar report a few hours earlier covering about the same statistics. This showed that the United Kingdom had supplied, up to June 30 this year, munitions and other goods and services valued at $2,437,062,000 and that Australia, New Zealand and India furnished $911,065,000—a grand total of $3,348,127,000.

The United States has furnished to the United Kingdom for the same period, ending June 30, a total of $9,321,549,000 of lend-lease and to all the Allies a total of $28,270,351,000 worth. But Mr. Roosevelt urged that no comparisons are made on a dollar basis.

"We are not loaning money under lend-lease," he said. "We are not receiving payment under reverse lend-lease.

"Neither the monetary totals of the lend-lease aid we supply, nor the totals of the reverse lend-lease aid we receive are measures of the aid we have given or received in this war. That could be measured only in terms of the total contributions toward winning victory of each of the United aNtions.

"There are no statistical or monetary measurements for the value of courage, skill and sacrifice in the face of death and destruction wrought by our common enemies."

Speeded-up Invasion

The chief executive summed up his estimate of the value of Britain's reverse lend-lease contributions by saying that without it "we would surely have been forced to delay the invasion of France for many months."

"Reverse lend-lease," he told Congress, "has played an essential part in the stupendous job of preparing for and supplying the great Allied offensives in Europe.

"It would have required a thousand ships to send across the Atlantic what we received for our men through reverse lend-lease from the United Kingdom.

"We were able to use these thousand ships instead for carrying supplies and equipment that had to come from the United States.

"For the war against Japan, United States forces have also received increased quantities of supplies and services in the past six months as reverse lend-lease from Australia and New Zealand and in India. These were the months in which the forces under General MacArthur were completing the New Guinea campaign and were preparing to launch the campaign for the liberation of the Philippines."

Roosevelt's Letter on Lend-Lease

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24 (AP).—The complete text of President Roosevelt's letter to Congress today on lend-lease and reverse lend-lease:

I am submitting herewith my seventeenth report to Congress on lend-lease operations.

In fifteen of these reports I have reported on lend-lease aid extended by the United States. One year ago, the twelfth lend-lease report to Congress set forth the reverse lend-lease aid received by the United States from the British Commonwealth of Nations under the lend-lease act. That report covered the period up to June 30, 1943.

I now report on reverse lend-lease aid received by the United States from the British Commonwealth of Nations up to June 30, 1944.

One year ago the governments of the British Commonwealth reported their expenditures for reverse lend-lease aid to the United States, on the basis of estimates carefully prepared from their records, as totaling $1,175,000,000. They now report that by June 30, 1944—one year later—these expenditures had risen to $3,348,000,000 — almost three times the previous total.

The first six months of 1944 showed a significant increase in reverse lend-lease aid from the British Commonwealth. These were the months when the final preparations were being made in the United Kingdom for the liberation of western Europe and for the offensives aimed at Germany.

In these six months, United States forces in the British Isles received the equivalent of almost 3,851,000 ships' tons of supplies from the United Kingdom under reverse lend-lease exclusive of construction materials and gasoline, compared with 2,950,000 tons in the entire preceding eighteen months. In monetary value, the supplies and services we received in these six months were greater than for the entire preceding year.

By D Day, United States armed forces had reached the United Kingdom in vast numbers. From the day our first soldiers arrived in 1942, one-third of all the supplies and equipment currently required by United States troops in the British Isles has been provided under reverse lend-lease. The percentages of total United States Army requirements in the European theater provided by the United Kingdom have ranged as high as 63 per cent in the case of quartermaster supplies and 58 per cent for engineers' supplies.

Reverse lend-lease has played an essential part in the stupendous job of preparing for and supplying the great Allied offensives in Europe.

It would have required a thousand ships to send across the Atlantic what we received for our men through reverse lend-lease from the United Kingdom.

We were able to use these thousand ships instead for carrying supplies and equipment that had to come from the United States.

Without the reverse lend-lease aid that we received from the United Kingdom, we would surely have been forced to delay the invasion for many months. Now that this campaign has been successfully launched and is on the road to ultimate success, it is possible to include in this report facts about specific and vitally important reverse lend-lease projects that could not previously be safely disclosed in a public report.

For the war against Japan, United States forces have also received increased quantities of supplies and services in the last six months as reverse lend-lease from Australia and New Zealand, and in India. These were the months in which the forces under General MacArthur were completing the New Guinea campaign and were preparing to launch the campaign for the liberation of the Philippines.

Our forces in the Pacific have already received 1,850,000,000 pounds of food alone from Australia and New Zealand, including more than 400,000,000 pounds of beef and other meats.

Another important reverse lend-lease program in this theater has been the production for our forces of landing craft, small ships and boats, for the campaign we are waging in the Pacific. Tremendous numbers of these boats are needed for landing and supply operations on hundreds of islands scattered across thousands of miles of water. More than 9,500 of these craft had been produced and delivered by Australia alone in time for the Philippines campaign and over 12,000 more are on the way. In addition, Australia and New Zealand have turned over to our forces many hundreds of coastal steamers, barges, tugs, lighters, yachts and launches.

In India the increased rate of reverse lend-lease aid we have received in the first six months of 1944 has kept pace with the rising tempo of air, land and sea operations in the Burma-India and China theaters. A significant proportion of the supplies we have received in India has consisted of aviatiton gasoline and other petroleum products drawn from British oil resources in the Middle East and refined at the British refinery at Abadan. This gasoline, provided to us as reverse lend-lease, without payment by us, is helping to power our B-29 Superfortresses in their raids from both China and India on the Japanese homeland and on such enemy-occupied strong points as Singapore. It is also being used by the fighter and bomber planes of the 10th and 14th United States Army Air Forces.

II

I take the occasion of this report again to point out that the reverse lend-lease air rendered by nations of the British Commonwealth to the United States is only a part of the aid which we have received from the British in fighting this war. The United States has benefited greatly from reverse lend-lease aid, as the facts set forth in this report indicate. But we have benefited far more, and in a far larger sense, from the total fighting effort of our Allies.

As I have stated in previous lend-lease reports and as the Congress has expressed itself in reports by its appropriate committees at the time of the virtually unanimous renewals of the lend-lease act in 1943 and 1944, lend-lease and reverse lend-lease are not two sides of a financial transaction. We are not loaning money under lend-lease. We are not receiving payments on account under reverse lend-lease. The lend-lease system is, instead, a system of combined war supply, whose sole purpose is to make the most effective use against the enemy of the combined resources of the United Nations, regardless of the origin of the supplies or which of us uses them against the enemy.

Neither the monetary totals of the lend-lease aid we supply, nor the totals of the reverse lend-lease aid we receive are measures of the aid we have given or received in this war. That could be measured only in terms of the total contributions toward winning victory of each of the United Nations. There are no statistical or monetary measurements for the value of courage, skill and sacrifice in the face of death and destruction wrought by our common enemies.

We in the United States can be justly proud of our contributions in men and materials and of the courage and skill and sacrifice of the men and women in our armed forces and of all those others who have devoted themselves selflessly to the war effort at home. We can also be rightly proud of, and grateful for, the contributions in men and materials of our Allies and the courage and skill and sacrifice of their soldiers, airmen, seamen and peoples.

In this war the United Nations have all drawn strength from each other—our allies from us and we from them. We can now begin to see the full significance of the overwhelming power that this steadily closer partnership has created. We already know how much it did to save us all from disaster. We know that it has brought and will bring final victory months closer than would otherwise have been possible.

Lend-lease and reverse lend-lease are a system of combined war supply. They should end with the war. But the United Nations partnership must go on and must grow stronger. For the tasks of building a workable peace that will endure we shall need all the strength that a permanent and stronger United Nations can provide in winning security from aggression, in building the economic foundations for a more prosperous world, and in developing wider opportunities for civilized advancement for the American people and for all the other peace-loving peoples of the world.

POLISH PREMIER IN LONDON QUITS

Mikolajczyk Resignation Laid To Cabinet Dispute

London, Nov. 24 (AP)—Stanislaw Mikolajczyk resigned today as Premier of the Polish Government in exile after failing to win the support of his Cabinet for his proposals covering the terms by which Russia and the Polish Government in London could solve their long-standing dispute.

Mikolajczyk's resignation was announced tonight in an official communique which said Jan Kwapinski, Socialist, who has held the rank of Deputy Premier, had been charged with the formation of a new government.

The communique said President Wladyslaw Raczkiewicz had accepted Mikolajczyk's resignation, but had asked him and the members of his Cabinet "to remain at their posts until the appointment of a new Cabinet."

Failed To Get Support

A series of consultations with leaders of the various parties and factions represented in the exile Government preceded Mikolajczyk's action. In these consultations he failed to line up sufficient support of his policy for rapprochement with the Soviet Union and the Moscow-backed Polish National Committee of Liberation in Lublin.

The crisis which the hard-working, compromise-seeking Mikolajczyk failed to surmount had been brewing ever since he returned from Moscow, where he conferred with Soviet leaders and with delegates from the rival Lublin committee.

The Curzon Line

The Premier was understood to have pressed the exiled Cabinet to acceed to the Russian demands that the eastern boundary of Poland roughly follow the Curzon Line. This frontier, proposed by an Allied delegation after the first World War but not accepted by Poland, would give to the Soviet Union a considerable strip of former Polish territory whose population is largely White Russian and Ukrainian.

Close students of Polish affairs regarded Mikolajczyk, a member of the Polish Peasant party, as about the only leader of the London Government capable of bringing about a rapprochement with Moscow.

U. S. Comment Withheld

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—American officials, evidently surprised at the sudden turn of events, withheld any public comment tonight on the reported resignation of Premier Mikolajczyk of the Polish exile Government at London.

There was apparent fear, however, that the situation might mean a severe setback in the efforts to get the Polish Government into a settlement of its thorny problems with Russia.

Colonel Gets Silver Star For Halting Nazi Charge

With United States Seventh Armored Division, Holland, Nov. 22 (AP — Delayed) — Col. John L. Ryan, Jr., commander of the combat command reserve of the Seventh Armored Division, was awarded the Silver Star today for gallantry in stopping a heavy German counterattack which had threatened the right flank of the British Second Army at Meijel last month.

Although considerably outnumbered, Ryan's forces knocked out 11 of 16 German Tiger tanks.

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, Paris, Nov. 24 (A. P.)—Gen. Dody, commander of the Second Moroccan Division, which distinguished itself in the Italian campaign, has been appointed Military Governor of Metz by Gen. De Gaulle.

It had been expected that De Gaulle might appoint Gen. Henri Giraud, whose home town is Metz.

Giraud Returns to Metz, Home City He Once Ruled

French Leader Refused to Wear Medals Until Liberation

WITH UNITED STATES 3D ARMY, Nov. 24 (AP). — General Henri Honore Giraud returned today to his home town of Metz, where he formerly was military governor.

After the fall of France, Giraud forswore the wearing of his medals and ribbons, saying he would not put them on again until Metz was liberated.

40,000 GERMAN PRISONERS TAKEN

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Nov. 24.—(AP) More than 40,000 German prisoners have been herded into Allied cages by the six attacking Allied armies since they jumped off in the current Winter offensive on the Western front, and many hundreds more remain to be counted.

Although there have been no official estimates of casualties on either side since the all-out drive began, if the old army axiom that "you will kill as many as you capture and wound twice as many as you kill" held true it means the Germans have lost some 160,000 men, or around 16 divisions in 17 days.

Approximately half the prisoners counted as a result of these operations were taken by the American Third army, which started the great push Nov. 8. Up to last midnight Gen. Patton's troops had captured 20,409.

The Sixth army group under Lt. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, which jumped off Nov. 14, had rounded up well over 10,000 prisoners at last report, although no exact figure was available there. Sixty per cent of these were captured by the First French army and the remainder by the American Seventh.

The American 15th corps, composed of both American and French units, captured 3,000 in the last three days in its sweep through the Vosges to the Rhine.

The American First and Ninth armies and the British Second army joined the offensive Nov. 16. From then until yesterday the Ninth army had counted 6,156 prisoners. Neither the British Second nor the American First has announced an official count, but the best sources here estimate that each has captured more than 2,000 Germans.

V-1 ROBOT BOMBS BUZZ OVER FIRST ARMY FRONT

WITH THE U. S. FIRST ARMY, Germany, Nov. 24—(AP) V-1 robot bombs buzzed in increasing numbers today over the U. S. First army front.

The explosives are launched from hidden platforms in Germany. A large number were counted during the last 24 hours.

At times, it sounded as if the buzz bombs were roaring in formation as the Germans strove to hamstring Allied supply lines.

90TH DIVISION CITED FOR ACTION IN REICH

WITH THE U. S. THIRD ARMY, Nov. 24.—(AP) The 90th division commanded by Brig. Gen. James A. Van Fleet today won a formal commendation from Lt. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., for bravery and efficiency shown in establishing a bridgehead across the Moselle river in the Koenigsmacher area.

This work was performed in the early stages of current Third army operations. The Oklahoma-Texas outfit's performance against strong opposition and under the added handicap of flood conditions was described by a Third army spokesman as "the finest accomplishment of any division since we were sent into action."

Hemingway Not Captured

PARIS, Nov. 24 (AP).—The novelist Ernest Hemingway is working hard as a correspondent with the United States 1st Army, Supreme Headquarters reported today, to quiet rumors circulating in London that he was taken prisoner two weeks ago.

Five Former Officials Of Airfrance Arrested

Paris, Nov. 24 (AP)—The Air Ministry announced today the arrest of five former high officials of the French commercial airline, Airfrance, on charges of having sent equipment and personnel to the German line, Lufthansa.

The company's equipment, long requisitioned outside France, was ordered confiscated within France as well.

Arrested were Gen. Bertrand Pujo, chairman of the board of directors; Georges Edgar Bonnet, vice-chairman who also is a member of the board of directors of the Suez Canal; Michel Honolle, a member of the Airfrance and Suez Canal boards; Georges Eugene Killer, a member of the board and also a director of the Bank of French West Africa, and Jean Laurent, a member of the board and also a director of the Bank of Indo-China.

PATTON HONORED FOR METZ CAPTURE

Advanced Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—Gen. Eisenhower pinned a bronze star on Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton Jr., today in recognition of the United States Third Army Commander's part in the capture of the fortress city of Metz.

The decoration was awarded by Lieut-Gen. Omar N. Bradley as Commander of the Twelfth Army group.

The citation said: "Lieut.-Gen. Patton's brilliant victory has contributed materially to the success of American forces in the campaign against Germany."

Gen. Eisenhower's aids said that he may find time soon to march through the streets of Metz with Gen. Henri Giraud, former French commander in chief, and thus fulfill a date they made in Algiers last year.

It was in Africa that Gen. Giraud conferred the grand cordon of the Legion of Honor on Gen. Eisenhower and kissed him on both cheeks in the French manner. Later, Gen. Eisenhower made Gen. Giraud commander of the Legion of Merit. Giraud accepted but said he would not wear the medal until his home town of Metz was liberated. He has foresworn wearing decorations until then. Gen. Eisenhower said that in that case, he would refrain from wearing the Legion of Honor until both could march through Metz with their medals on.

CASTIGLIONE FALLS TO ALLIED TROOPS

ROME, Nov. 24—(AP) The singgish battle for the Appenine foothills just southeast of Faenza lumbered forward another mile today. British and Polish troops seized the fortified village of Castiglione and a few more ridges against stubborn opposition.

The British took Castiglione and advanced beyond to the Cusina river. The Poles recaptured Monte Fortino, five miles southeast of Faezna, which they had first taken several days ago and then lost.

The tactical air force joined the battle for Faezna with one of its fragmentation bombs over the area after Mustangs, Spitfires and Kittyhawks had hammered at enemy gun positions throughout the day.

Thunderbolts also joined in, using both rockets and bombs. The bombing by the Mitchells was directed along highway nine close to Faenza, which is about 30 miles from Bologna.

The British captured a number of prisoners and knocked out two self-propelled guns in their push through Castiglione. The Germans, were fighting fiercely with close tank support.

There was also heavy fighting in the area of Fugna, on a secondary road leading to Faenza.

On the American Fifth army front the Germans were considerably more aggressive as the weather improved, but one counter-attack misfired. They attacked Indian troops north of Modigliana, but the Indians returned and knocked the Germans back 1,000 yards beyond their original positions.

8th Army Crosses Cosina River

NOV 25 1944

Rome, Nov. 24 (AP)—British Eighth Army troops have crossed the Cosina river in the hills south east of Faenza and have established five small bridgeheads against strong German resistance along a two-and-a-half-mile front, Allied headquarters announced today.

German infantry was supported by heavy artillery and mortar concentrations in this critical area for the defense of the Bologna-Rimini highway stronghold, but the British captured a bridge at the river bend and tanks crossed to aid the foot soldiers.

At another point British troops crossed the river, captured the town of Figna and proceeded to expand the bridgehead.

On the left flank Polish troops advanced a half mile north of San Biago and seized Monte Ricci, overlooking the Marzeno river.

In the Adriatic coastal sector positions along the Montone river between Ravenna and Highway 9 were unchanged.

American troops on the Fifth Army front south of Bologna repulsed enemy raids against the outpost northwest of captured Livergnano and troops on Monte Cavalloro.

Prisoners Holding Out In Rome Prison

Rome, Nov. 24 (AP)—Several hundred Italian civil prisoners were holding out today in a cellblock of the Regina Coeli prison after disorders yesterday in which guards wounded three prisoners and fireman put out a blaze started by the inmates.

Prison authorities cut off their food.

There have been daily disturbances at the prison for the last five days. Allied officials adopted a "hands off" policy.

The prisoners' chief complaint now seems to be that they have been held without trial since June 4, some of them for offenses punishable by no more than three months imprisonment.

Swedish Passenger Ship Sunk, Explosion Blamed

Stockholm, Nov. 24 (AP)—The 563-ton Swedish passenger ship Hansa sank mysteriously off the Baltic island of Gotland early today and tonight it was estimated approximately 100 persons probably had drowned.

The cause of the disaster still was undetermined, but Swedish newspapers asserted flatly that the sinking had resulted either from a torpedo or a mine.

Only two survivors had been picked up tonight. They said an explosion occurred in the forward part of the ship at 5.10 A. M. and that the vessel sank shortly afterward.

Naval craft continued their search for other survivors. One loaded lifeboat in addition to scattered debris was spotted during the day by planes, a Swedish defense communique said, but fog hampered rescue efforts.

The Hansa left Stockholm Thursday night for Visby, a port on the west coast of Gotland.

SWEDISH SHIP MISSING AT SEA

NOV 25 1944

Stockholm, Nov. 24 (A. P.)—The 563-ton Swedish passenger ship Hansa was hours overdue at the Baltic Island of Gotland today, and Swedish military aircraft reported sighting debris, bodies and a lifeboat with apparent survivors twenty-five miles from Gotland.

Disappearance of the ship in good weather recalled the recent German proclamation that shipping in the Baltic and the Gulf of Bothnia was liable to be sunk without warning.

The Swedish newspaper Aftontidningen speculated that the ship, carrying more than a score of passengers and twenty-seven crew members, was sunk either by a mine or a torpedo.

The Hansa left Stockholm on Thursday night for Visby. Reports in Stockholm said a number of those aboard were Swedish soldiers on leave. The route was outside the area proscribed in the German proclamation.

ALLIED DRIVE TO REOPEN BURMA ROAD NEAR END

NEW DELHI, India, Nov. 24. —(AP) The Allied advance in northern and western Burma has been so rapid that the end of America's fighting commitment in this theater—a commitment to reopen the Burma road—now is almost in sight.

Japanese lines still lay across one critical elbow of the Burma road, but Chinese and British ground forces, supplemented by the U. S. Tenth air force, are marching steadily toward the closing of that elbow.

Soon American ground troops now in training in India and Burma will swing in to help speed up the Japanese retreat. Then, with this assignment finished, the American forces, including the Tenth air force, will have completed the task which has occupied them for nearly three years in India and Burma and will be ready for another assignment.

2 Chinese Columns Drive Into Bhamo

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 24 (AP)—Chinese troops have driven into the Japanese stronghold of Bhamo, key to central Burma, from the south and the northeast, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's command announced today.

A communique said strong Japanese positions were breached at two points in the southern part of the town, while a single Chinese column deepened the wedge in the northern suburbs. Bhamo was surrounded by Allied forces nearly two weeks ago.

Pinwe Attack Opened

In the railway corridor west of Bhamo troops of the 36th British Division opened an attack on Pinwe yesterday, crossing the Gyodin Chaung and taking their first objectives.

On the Chindwin front ground and air operations were continued against enemy positions west of Kalewa. Allied planes destroyed five bridges in the area.

Attack Near Arakan

Allied infantry attacked Japanese positions west of Paletwa, in the Arakan area.

Heavy bombers attacked the harbor at Khao Hu Gant, on the southernmost tip of Burma, November 22, damaged shipping and hit two floating planes.

U. S. PLANES BLAST JAPANESE-HELD BASE NEAR ISHAN

CHUNGKING, Nov. 24—(AP) Maj. Albert C. Wedemeyer's communique reported today that Hwaiyuachen, 50 miles west of Liuchow on the Kwangsi-Kweichow railway, had been "bombed repeatedly" by American planes of the 14th Air force, indicating the town had fallen to Japanese troops.

A Chinese army spokesman insisted, however, that Hwaiyuanchen still was in Chinese hands. He said only a small force of Japanese—less than 1,000—had pushed toward the town from Ishan, another rail town seven miles to the east. Japanese patrols, he conceded, had by-passed Hwaiyuanchen and reached a point six miles to the northwest.

(A broadcast by Domei, Japanese news agency, said Japanese forces, opening a new drive in southwest Kwangsi province, had penetrated the outskirts of Yungning (Nanning) and had "completely occupied" an American military air field on Yungning's western outskirts. "Thus," said the unconfirmed enemy broadcast, "the last base of the American air force in southwest China has been completely occupied by our forces." Yungning is approximately 85 miles from the Indo-China border).

Wedemeyer's communique said bomb-carrying Mustang fighters attacked Japanese troops who were "pushing northwestward in force" in the Ishan area, adding that "Hwaiyuanchen, west of Ishan, was bombed repeatedly."

In contrast to this new indication that the invaders were driving on northwestward up the railroad in an attempt to capture the city of Kweiyang on the Burma road and, perhaps, even Chungking, the Chinese spokesman expressed belief the Japanese instead would strike southward toward Indo-China.

He said he was "optimistic" over the military situation and attributed popular fears of a Japanese invasion of Kweichow province to "panic in business and financial circles, caused by ignorance of the conditions."

Continuing their campaign to clear the China end of the Burma road, Chinese troops in Yunnan province were reported to have surrounded a Japanese garrison at Mencka, road town 11 miles east of Chefang. The Japanese still hold Chefang, which is 28 miles from the Burma border.

(A southeast Asia command communique, issued at Kandy, Ceylon, said Chinese troops had fought into the Japanese stronghold of Bhamo in northeastern Burma at two points on its southern edge. Bhamo, on the route of the Ledo road being constructed from India to hook up with the Burma road, has been surrounded.)

Fall Of Lung River Town To Japs Indicated

Chungking, Nov. 24 (AP)—Hwaiyuanchen, zealously defended town of the Lung river, has been "bombed repeatedly" by United States 14th Air Force planes, an American communique said tonight, indicating its probable fall to the Japanese driving from Liuchow toward Kweichow province.

The Lung river is one of the remaining major water barriers before Kweichow. A Chinese spokesman said tonight Hweiyuanchen still was in Chinese hands and was by-passed by Japanese patrols attempting to cross the river.

New Drive Reported

The spokesman said that only a handful of Japanese, at most 1,000 men, had moved beyond captured Ishan, seven miles to the east and 43 miles from Liuchow, and that all enemy activity west of Ishan was patrol action.

JAPANESE TO MAKE STAND IN CHINA

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24—(AP) The Japanese army may be really making up its mind to dig in and fight it out in China.

This is the net impression gained by observers here from the puzzling command shifts which the imperial army has just carried out in China.

Most important of these changes —announced by Tokyo—was to jerk Field Marshal Shunroku Hata from his supreme command in central China just as his troops have successfully cut China in two and now threaten a drive on the free Chinese capital at Chungking.

Hata's face was saved by his new job. He has been made inspector general of military education, a high office, but one which normally has no tactical influence on the army.

In his place as central China commander, Tokyo has moved General Jasuji Okamura, commander-in-chief of the north China garrison at Peiping since before Pearl Harbor.

Okamura is replaced, in turn, by Lt. Gen. Sadashi Shimomura, commander of the western defense district on the Japanese mainland.

The apparent purpose of all this moving about, it is believed here, is to unify Japanese operations in China and consolidate and improve long supply lines.

As far as is known here, Okamura has not distinguished himself in the field except for routine North China campaigns against the Chinese communists every spring and fall.

His replacing Hata is seen here as an effort to overcome the traditional rivalry between the north and central China commands in order to strengthen the army for the coming battle of China.

Hata and Okamura both are known as "conservative" generals, but Japanese commanders in China long have been so preoccupied in building up their own zones of authority and exploitation that there has been surprisingly little coordination between them.

Perhaps significantly, none of the announced changes affects the power or the independence of the Japanese Kwantung army which garrisons Manchuria. This apparently still is held in reserve as a self-sufficient fighting force which can move against Russia without reference to what other Japanese forces are doing.

Helmick Is in China.

Chungking, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—Milton J. Helmick, former judge of the now defunct United States Court for China, arrived in Chungking today for a three-month investigation of the Chinese judicial system for the State Department.

Excitement On 'Landing'

Chungking, Nov. 24 (AP)—Chinese police were trying to trace the source of false rumors in Chungking that American troops landed two days ago on the China coast near Foochow and Wenchow.

The rumors, falsely ascribed to various news agencies, caused great excitement here. One newspaper issued extras.

It was believed the rumors were inspired by speculators trying to influence the black-market value of foreign currency.

2 TRANSPORTS, 1 ESCORT SHIP ARE BLOWN UP

4th Vessel Fired, Beached; Trips Have Cost Foe 15,000 Men

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Saturday, Nov. 25 (AP)—Low-flying American fighter planes destroyed a four-ship troop-laden Japanese convoy bound for Leyte yesterday and brought to approximately 15,000 the toll of Nipponese reinforcements killed before they could reach the island.

Headquarters announced today that approximately 3,500 of an estimated 6,000 troops aboard three transports and a destroyer escort were killed or drowned during the assault.

Sighted off the southeastern coast of Masbate Island, some 20 miles north of Leyte, the convoy was attacked shortly before noon by Thunderbolts and Warhawks in mast-height bombing and strafing attacks.

Two Transports Sunk

Two transports, 11,000 and 2,000 tons, and a destroyer escort were sunk. A third 6,000-ton transport was set afire and beached. The destroyer escort sank with all hands.

"The enemy has now lost on the high seas at least 15,000 men destined to reinforce Leyte," said today's communique. Several days ago, headquarters announced that Japanese casualties on land exceeded 45,000.

American aircraft and PT boats repeatedly have attacked Japanese reinforcement shipping. In separate strikes November 11 and 12, a total of seven transports and 13 destroyers were destroyed off Ormoc. Most of the estimated 8,000 troops carried in one of these convoys were believed to have perished, but the other succeeded in putting troops ashore.

Leyte River Crossed

Ashore, the American 32nd Division crossed the Leyte river below Limon and continued driving southward. The division's veteran infantrymen occupied bitterly defended Limon and reached the river Wednesday in an important breakthrough at the northern end of Ormoc corridor.

The Yanks repulsed a counter-attack southwest of Limon, staged by the Japanese 26th Division. The communique said this division, previously identified as being in action, now has been fully committed to the bitter battle. Virtual destruction of the Imperial First and 16th Divisions has been accomplished in previous fighting.

Behind the forward line, south of Capoocan, on Carigara Bay, the enemy's forces have "been broken up into many small groups which are fighting desperately," the communique said. Other American forces are reducing enemy strong points in the vicinity of Hill 1525, on the east flank of the main battle along the Ormoc road south of Limon.

NOV 25 1944

Air Planes Duel

With improving weather, Japanese aerial activity increased sharply. In "a series of desperate air combats," 42 Nipponese planes were shot down, including seven by anti-aircraft fire.

"Our own losses were very light," the communique said.

Associated Press War Correspondent Richard C. Bergholz reported that, of the 35 Japanese planes shot down by American fighters, Capt. Robert W. Aschenbrener, of Lac Du Flambeau, Wis., got four.

Capt. William W. Drier, of St. Louis, Mo.; Lieut. John Pietz, of Valley Stream, Long Island and Lieut. Kenneth Hart of Martinez, Cal., each got three Nipponese planes.

The advance below Limon by units of the 32nd Division was small, but the Yanks continued to maintain their initiative and captured a key ridge across the river. The Nipponese counterattack was an attempt to regain the initiative.

Artillery Has Field Day

Hard-pressed Japanese, jolted from their northern anchor position of Limon by the 32d, headed southward on the road to Ormoc today under heavy shelling of Yank artillery and mortars.

Artillerymen were having a field day, said a front-line dispatch, as they pinpointed the highway winding through the Ormoc corridor on western Leyte Island. Enemy truck convoys were blasted to bits.

Loss of Limon, where a vicious, swaying battle stalemated the Leyte invasion for three weeks, was a costly defeat for the Japanese. Not only was their veteran First Division virtually destroyed, said Thursday's communique, but their entire defense line was in danger.

Yamashita Line Periled

Capture of these critical defenses amid the rugged ridges at Limon placed the Americans in position to roll up the whole Yamashita defense front, the communique said. In their sudden upsurge of power, the Yanks not only seized Limon but drove a half mile beyond to the Leyte river and captured the bridge crossing that stream, swollen by torrential rains.

Ahead of the liberation forces is more favorable terrain. Heavy fighting was not over, however, it was emphasized, as the Nipponese still could make strong defensive stands and would have to be cleared from nests of resistance.

Infiltrations Cleared

Scattered enemy groups in the American rear in the Pinamopoan-Capoocan coastal area were being cleared out. For several days these Japanese elements, which had infiltrated the Yank lines, had posed some threat to the American supply road running eastward along the Carigara Bay coast from Pinamopoan to Carigara.

While the enemy's communication and supply road to Ormoc and his rear areas were hammered by United States heavy guns, Allied warplanes blasted his supply dumps in the Ormoc area. Ormoc, on the western coast of Leyte, has been the Japanese base for supplies and reinforcements.

LIMON CAPTORS SMASH AHEAD IN LEYTE PUSH

MacArthur Says Entire Jap Line May Be Rolled Up by U. S. Victory.

ENEMY DIVISION DESTROYED

American Artillery and Infantry Credited With Inflicting Heavy Losses on Nipponese.

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—Mud-slogging American infantrymen lunged southward from Limon today after capturing that bastion of the Japanese Yamashita line in the climax to the longest and bitterest fighting of the entire Leyte Island campaign.

The Japanese First Division has been practically destroyed, Gen. Douglas MacArthur said in announcing that the Yankee Thirty-second had smashed into and through Limon yesterday after a typhoon-slowed battle that had remained fairly static for two weeks.

Easier country lies ahead, but it was emphasized that this does not mean the heavy fighting is over. The terrain is such that the Japanese will be able to make defensive stands and force the battle-worn American doughboys to dig them out of machine gun nests and pillboxes.

May Roll Up Enemy Line.

Gen. MacArthur in his communique said that the American victory at Limon may result in the rolling up of the entire Yamashita Line upon which the enemy depends in his fight to hold Leyte Island.

The communique said the Americans had advanced 1,000 yards south of Limon and had reached the nearby Leyte River.

It fell to units under Col. John A. Hettinger, Colorado Springs, Col., to break down the last Japanese resistance in the battle for the mountainous defile leading into the Ormoc corridor.

The fight started after the Japanese had landed heavy reinforcements at Ormoc October 25. The opposing forces—great in number for this type of warfare —launched almost simultaneous attacks.

The weight of American arms

[illegible] balance and [illegible] defensive. In his commu[illegible] announcing the victory, [illegible] MacArthur credited Yankee [illegible]ery and superior infantry [illegible] power with inflicting terrific [illegible]sses on the Nipponese.

Second Division Smashed

It was the second Japanese division whose virtual annihilation has been announced by Gen. MacArthur. Earlier he had reported the destruction of the Japanese 16th, which had played a leading part in the defeat of American forces at Bataan.

American warplanes ranged the air and dealt other damaging blows to the Japanese. Heavy bombers blasted supply dumps at Ipil, south of Ormoc, and destroyed large warehouses. Fighter planes wrecked a Japanese motor pool and strafed communication lines below Valencia, about twelve miles south of Limon.

Light naval units maintained vigilance against any enemy effort to land reinforcements or supplies, sinking a small freighter, two luggers and three troop-laden barges off the Camotes Islands.

On another sector, Associated Press Correspondent Elmont Waite said that units commanded by Lieut.-Col. Isaac Gill Jr., of Rhode Island, had advanced south from Pinamopoan on the west side of the Ormoc road, almost reaching the highway.

Drenching rains, which have slowed the battle tempo, continued to pour down.

NOV 25 1944

Japanese Hold Below Limon

With 32d Infantry Division, Leyte, P. I., Nov. 24 (AP)—Japanese strongpoints south and east of Limon held fast against American attacks yesterday but sniping United States artillery batteries had a field day blasting the enemy supply route from Ormoc to Limon.

Limon itself, fallen northern anchor of the Yamashita Line, was held today by troops under Col. John A. Hettingers, of Colorado Springs, Col. They occupied Limon, were pushed out by the Japanese and then retook the village and drove half a mile farther southward to the Leyte river. The Yanks captured the bridge crossing the river in their first thrust.

Try To Silence Guns

Scattered small enemy units were operating in a wide sector on the south, east and north of Limon, to within a mile or two of the American-held north coast. Several small bands have been seen retreating southwest from American-dominated territory. Presumably they are only reconnaissance patrols. But one larger group was seen trying to manhandle artillery pieces along swampy jungle paths a mile south of Pinamopoan, United States-occupied port.

Japanese artillery thus far has been limited to firing 75's sporadically at extremely long range in futile efforts to silence American big guns. But each burst causes a few casualties.

For the past two days both the 10th and 24th United States Corps artillery has been laying an almost continuous bath of 105 and 155-millimeter shells along the enemy's Ormoc-Limon road.

TURKEY DINNERS SERVED ON LEYTE

NOV 25 1944

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 23 (A. P.).—American doughboys on typhoon-swept Leyte's battlefront and pilots flying through the heavy, murky overcast "celebrated" Thanksgiving today and, where possible, had real American turkey.

The Service and Supply Corps months ago set aside tons of frozen turkey for transport to the Philippines and front-line troops received their holiday feast where conditions permitted. Transport planes flew over some areas and dropped packed crates.

Standing alongside a busy, mud-spattered road, Pfc. Albert J. Kukcka of Cleveland, who has been overseas eighteen months, said, "This is not as bad as New Guinea and things could be lots worse—anything but those New Guinea jungles."

"I can't complain but I hope

30.24 — 20647

no one mentions turkey to me for a few days. Tinned meat even is going to look good to me," said Corporal Peter Janss of Belle Plaine, Iowa, who worked all day long preparing today's meal for one mess.

Sergt. Richard S. Wright of Portland, Me., surveyed water-filled potholes on the mud-covered road and said he was thankful he was not "freezing to death in Europe, but on the way to Manila—where we will be in a city for a change and not in some grass shacks out in the jungle."

'Move Over, General' Says Colonel, In Ditch

With the 24th Division on Leyte, (AP—Delayed)—"I don't want to bother you, Colonel," Maj. Gen. Fred Irving remarked from the safety of his deep roadside ditch, "but a machine gun has been shooting over our heads for 30 minutes."

Lieut. Col. L. L. Wheeler, of St. Petersburg, Fla., who had been walking up the road, decided on his course of action immediately.

"Move over, General," he said as he slid into the ditch.

Trapped U. S. Carrier Group Fought Powerful Jap Force

NOV 25 1944

Pearl Harbor, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—Rear Admiral Thomas L. Sprague let it be known today that his escort carrier force was surprised and one of his three divisions trapped by a Japanese battleship force off Samar Island in the second battle of the Philippines.

"We were in a pretty hot spot," the 50-year-old admiral told correspondents.

However, planes from his sixteen carriers assisted by torpedo-firing destroyers routed and turned back the force of five of Japan's newest and most modern battleships, eight of her latest type carriers and thirteen destroyers.

Three hours later planes from Admiral William F. Halsey's Third Fleet carriers joined the battle so that not one of the enemy ships escaped sinking or heavy damage.

Admiral Sprague said that his jeep carrier planes sank quite a few of the Japanese warships.

The action began early the morning of October 24 after the Japanese, turned back once by carrier planes, reorganized and slipped through San Bernardino Strait north of Samar Island during the night.

This was the situation:

Admiral Halsey's fleet was busy sinking, damaging and routing every ship of the Imperial carrier force in the greatest of the three-phased second battle of the Philippines northeast of Luzon Island.

Vice-Admiral Jesse B. Oldendorf's battleship force just had sunk every one of eight Japanese ships — two battleships, two cruisers and four destroyers—in Surigao Strait east of southern Leyte Island and was too far away to come to the CVES (escort carriers) rescue. That battle was fought about 2:50 A. M. the morning of October 24.

Admiral Sprague's carriers were disposed east of the Philippines. One division of CVES, under Rear Admiral C. A. F. Sprague, was due east of Central Samar Island. A second under Rear Admiral Felix B. Stump was east of the southern tip of Samar. The third under Admiral T. L. Sprague was east of Leyte Gulf, almost due east of the northern tip of Dinagat Island. Each division was supported by a few destroyers and destroyer escorts—far too few for adequate defense. Admiral C. A. F. Sprague's carriers, for instance, were supported by only three destroyers and four little destroyer escorts.

Jap Force Spotted.

About 6:45 A. M. on October 24 a patrol plane reported the discovery of the Japanese battleship force east of Samar and only forty miles from Admiral C. A. F. Sprague's CVES.

Every CVE in the three divisions immediately launched every one of its torpedo planes to attack the Japanese. They were escorted by fighters. Completing their attacks, they returned, rearmed, refueled, and attacked again.

Admiral C. A. F. Sprague's CVES turned and fled after having launched their planes. But their relatively slow speed permitted the Japanese, closing at more than thirty knots an hour, rapidly to overtake them.

Admiral Stump's CVES remained in their original position until it appeared the Japanese might close to within gun range; then they too fled. Admiral T. L. Sprague's CVES held their position.

"The situation developed very rapidly," Admiral T. L. Sprague said.

"At 6:59 A. M. every Japanese battleship and cruiser opened fire on Admiral C. A. F. Sprague's division at extreme range, but they began to get very close and then began to straddle the carriers with their 8 and 16-inch shells. We screamed for help from any one who could get there."

The three destroyers and four destroyer escorts with Admiral C. A. F. Sprague's division attacked with torpedoes, closing to only 2,000 yards—suicide range, it should have been. All but two were hit, but not one was lost. The little warships put up a heavy smoke screen to attempt to hide the CVES, which also made as much smoke as possible, blowing their tubes.

"A heavy squall gave the destroyers a seagoing foxhole," Admiral T. L. Sprague said.

Japs Fire Heavy Gun.

After the Japanese began to straddle the CVES with big shells "they laid down a deliberate two and one half hour bombardment, but made little effort to close the range further," Admiral T. L. Sprague said. "They stood off and continued to fire their eight and sixteen-inch guns."

Once, however, after severely crippling the Gambier Bay, the Japanese moved to within 2,000 yards—point blank range—and sank her. An eight-inch shell had hit the Gambier Bay, commanded by Capt. W. V. R. Vieweg, below the water line and flooded her engine room. That slowed her so that she fell behind the other CVES, which dared not try to assist her.

"Japanese cruisers and destroyers closed to 2,000 yards and had a regular target practice," the Admiral related. "After she rolled over on her side, the enemy fired into her bottom until she sank."

That was about 9 A. M.

St. Lo Sinks Quickly.

At 9:25 A. M., just as the CVE pilots launched their second torpedo attack on the Japanese, the enemy force surprisingly turned and fled.

It was not until 10:30 A. M. that the Saint Lo was hit—and then by a dive-bomber which fired planes on her flight and hangar decks.

"She blew up with a terrific explosion," Admiral T. L. Sprague said. "It probably was her torpedoes. She sank in two or three minutes."

It was while picking up survivors of the Saint Lo that the three destroyers were sunk.

CVE planes continued to attack the fleeing Japanese until dusk.

Liberators Dwarfed, But Will Keep Hitting

Saipan, Nov. 17 (AP—Delayed). Superfortresses may steal the spotlight now, but B-24 Liberators will go right on with their bombing tasks, coordinating their missions with those of the B-29s by which they have been dwarfed, Brig. Gen. T. H. Landon, of Carlinville, Ill., and Los Angeles, who directs the Seventh Bomber Command promised in an interview.

"B-24s won't start hitting Japan until we get bases closer to Tokyo, but will keep after shipping as well as installations in the Bonins, the Carolines and elsewhere," he said.

General Landon said opposition over the Bonins and Kazans had been "surprisingly light," and that American losses were not over two per cent.

2 Subs, 5 Warships Bombed, Tokyo Says

San Francisco, Nov. 24 (AP)—A Japanese broadcast, unconfirmed by Allied sources, claimed today that two American submarines and seven warships and transports, including an aircraft carrier, were sunk or damaged in Philippine waters this week.

An imperial communique, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, asserted Japanese planes intercepted a convoy east of Mindanao Island Tuesday and in a three-day attack sank two transports and one cruiser or destroyer and damaged an aircraft carrier.

No Damage, U. S. Says

The communique also claimed "three more enemy warships of unidentified type" were damaged Sunday in the Japanese aerial counterattack on the carrier force which attacked Manila. Admiral Chester W. Nimitz has already reported no United States ships were damaged.

Domei news agency asserted additional "enemy submarines" were sunk in the Southwest Pacific, bringing to eight the number the Japanese claim to have sunk in ten days.

Manila Broadcast Hints At Drastic Steps

San Francisco, Nov. 24 (AP)—Japan's puppet government in the Philippines, "with the help of the Japanese military authorities and public opinion," a Manila broadcast today said, has "achieved very satisfactory results" in "eradicating" persons "who disturb the equilibrium of public opinion."

"Authorities," the broadcast said, "are leawing nothing untouched in their supreme effort in preserving peace and order."

In another Manila broadcast, however, Teofilo Sison, puppet minister of the interior, urged Filipino church leaders to aid in preventing incipient native riots.

Marines Study Religion

Somewhere in the Pacific, Nov. 24 (AP)—From the general awareness of God and religion that comes to men in combat has sprung a small but flourishing seminary whose students are Fourth Marine Division veterans of Saipan and Tinian.

The class meets for two hours twice a week and the interest of the men is accented by the fact that because of other duties it is often very difficult to make the classes.

Not all the men attending are sure that they want to enter the ministry or missionary work after the war, but this is a possibility and in the meantime they are advancing their knowledge of religious matters.

One student actually transferred from a behind-the-lines outfit to an assault infantry company because he believes that manifestations of the Divine Will are more frequent in the front lines.

Another decided to become a missionary to Japan after witnessing Jap brutality on Saipan.

"Somebody has to give these people the Word," he says, "and I figure it might as well be me."

One Dead, 4 Brazilian Quints Reported Dying

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 24 (AP)—Physicians at Vitor Amaral Maternity Hospital in Curtibia said today that four of the quintuplet girls born Wednesday night were dying. The 6th was dead at birth.

Marine Gets Revenge For 'March Of Death'

By Staff Sergeant Ward Walker

[Marine Corps combat correspondent. Distributed by the Associated Press]

Peleliu, Palau Islands (Delayed). Seldom has a man gained such complete vengeance. . . .

This action is in its final stages now. Disorganized and cut off from their supplies, the Japs are holed up in caves—living in filth, dying of thirst, hunger and marine explosives.

They are kept from surrendering by some queer code of their own. They are suffering horribly, not because of marine cruelty but because of their own stubbornness.

Was In "March Of Death"

One of the marines who watches the death hunt of the caves without any pity in his eyes is Major Michiel Dobervich, 28, of Ironton, Minnesota.

He was one of the defenders of Bataan. He was one of the men with Lieut. Col. Edward Dyess in the "March of Death." He saw his men bayoneted and beaten to death by their Jap captors when they were too exhausted to move.

He hiked the 80 miles without food or water through the jungle heat of the Philippines. He was kicked in the stomach by a Jap soldier, beaten in the face by another.

NOV 25 1944

Is Glad They Want To Fight

And so there's almost a smile on his face as the days pass and the Japs hold out in their caves.

"I would say a lie if I said I didn't enjoy this," he said. "I am not a cruel man. I would treat them kindly if they surrendered to me. But I am glad they want to fight it out."

It comes as no surprise to Dobervich that the Japs are holding out here to the last man.

'Those of us left alive after the March of Death were herded into a group in an open field," he recalled. "We were kept bareheaded for nearly four hours in the sun until we were 'softened up' enough.

"A Jap captain made us a speech. I think of that talk often. He told us of the Jap conquests, of how Japan would rule the Pacific and everything in it. 'You are our enemies,' he screamed at us. 'You will always be our enemies. You are not entitled to good treatment. We will fight you for ten, even 100 years until you are all dead.'"

Dobervich was graduated from North Dakota State University in 1939 and was commissioned in the Marine Corps the same year.

He was assigned to duty in Shanghai with the famed Fourth Regiment, one of the corps' proudest organizations.

That handful of marines landed in the Philippines December 2. With the army they fought step by step until they were forced to surrender on April 9, 1942.

Nearly a year later, after eking out an existence at a Jap prison camp, Dobervich and nine others escaped, finally reaching the United States December 16, 1943.

He was married last June 4 and a month later joined the First Marine Division for duty in the Pacific.

The mother, Felicia Zachesca, of the town of San Mateus, was doing well. The infants averaged about one pound in weight.

Arias Says He Intends To Return To Panama

Buenos Aires, Nov. 24 (AP)—Arnulfo Arias declared in a written statement today his intention of returning to Panama to resume the Presidency and restoring the country to "constitutional government."

The former President said the Panamanian Assembly would meet January 2 to elect "a citizen who must occupy the Presidency until I return to the country, since I was elected to serve until February 1, 1947."

Arias said the present chief executive, Camilo de LaGuardia, who took over when Arias was ousted in 1940, "maintains himself solely by use of force."

Mexican 'Regeneration' Through War Seen

Mexico City, Nov. 24 (AP)—The war should bring thout regeneration of Mexico, says Octavio Vejar Vazaquez, head of the Mexican Post-War Planning Commission.

"The war is a veritable revolution, since it is forging a new world in politics, economics and social structure, and Mexico cannot fail to take part in that regeneration," he said.

Today a commission from the Armour Institute of Chicago began preliminary work on an industrial survey of Mexico that will continue throughout 1945. The commission, headed by Dr. Francis Goodwin, was contracted by the official bank of Mexico in connection with the nation's industrialization program.

MackenzieKing Is Staking Rule On Draft Policy

Seeks Vote of Confidence as Foes of Conscription Demonstrate in Quebec

OTTAWA, Nov. 24 (AP).—Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King decided today to stake the life of his Cabinet on his new policy of partial conscription for overseas service, which has caused violent demonstrations in Quebec and has resulted in defections among government supporters in that traditionally anti-conscription French-speaking province.

Emotion ran high in Quebec, where Provincial Premier Maurice Duplessis, following disturbances by draft-age youths, called for "respect for the laws of the country" and appealed to the people of the province to work "for national unity and consider the point of view of the other side."

The province was relatively quiet today after youths in the City of Quebec last night attempted to storm the office of the English-language newspaper "Chronicle Telegraph," which has favored conscription, a Liberal party clubroom and an Army recruiting office. This afternoon a Union Jack was torn from its staff at Chicoutimi, Quebec, after a half-hour demonstration by several hundred youths protesting against the new partial conscription order.

The disturbances were not on the scale of the serious rioting which broke out in Quebec in 1917 when the government similarly turned to conscription near the end of the first world war, after fighting most of it under a voluntary system.

Brigadier Edmond Blais, commanding the Quebec military district, said today that "there is no danger of any serious disorder." He termed the demonstrators "hot-heads" and declared he would see to it that "calm is maintained in Quebec."

Demonstrating English-speaking youths in the town of Oakville, Ont., last night locked up a group of sixteen call-up troops—men drafted for home service who had not volunteered to fight abroad—in a restaurant for two hours. Military police were called out to help local police restore order.

Prime Minister King announced today that he would open a debate in Parliament Monday on a vote of confidence motion, and he appeared to have won control of the Cabinet end of the crisis at least for the week end.

After reports had circulated that half of the sixty or more Quebec members would end their support of the government, and after it had appeared other Cabinet ministers might join Air Minister C. G. Power in resigning in protest against the conscription policy, a long caucus of Liberal party members was held today and most of the Quebec members indicated they would wait and see what Mr. King has to say Monday.

Three Quebec members left the government benches over the issue, but a wholesale defection apparently was forestalled for the time being.

Defense Minister General A. G. L. McNaughton told the House of Commons that the first 10,000 troops to be sent overseas in December and January under the new ruling would be made up of 7,500 fully trained infantrymen and 2,500 well advanced in training.

This group is to come from the drafted home army, which hitherto could not be used outside the Western Hemisphere. General McNaughton said the units from which the first 10,000 would be taken were selected this morning and already are being moved to concentration areas in eastern Canada. He said the men would be given an opportunity to volunteer, but would be sent whatever their decision.

Anti-Draft Sentiment Imperils Canada Regime

Ottawa, Nov. 24 (AP)—Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King struggled to hold his Government together today in the most serious Cabinet crisis in 20 years, sharpened by anti-conscription demonstrations in the French-speaking province of Qubec.

Disturbances reminiscent of rioting in the last war broke out in Quebec last night after the King Government announced it had adopted partial conscription to meet an urgent need for reinforcements on the Western front.

Youths in their late teens and early twenties paraded by the hundreds through the streets of Quebec city, shouting against conscription, smashing windows in the building of the English-language Chronicle-Telegraph and storming an army recruiting office and a Liberal party club. Police prevented entry in any of the buildings.

No Serious Disorder Seen

Brig. Edmond Blais, commanding the Quebec military district, said today that "there is no danger of any serious disorder." He termed the demonstrators "hotheads" and declared he would see that "calm is maintained in Quebec."

Demonstrating English-speaking youths in the town of Oakville, Ont., locked up a group of 16 call-up troops—men drafted for home service who had not volunteered to fight abroad—in a restaurant for two hours. Military police were called out to help local police restore order.

With emotions running high across the country, Prime Minister King's Liberal party was erumbling under the impact of the conscription issue. Half of the 60-odd Liberal members from Quebec were reported planning to withdraw support from the Government, and one Cabinet member from Quebec, English-Speaking Air Minister C. G. Power, already has resigned.

King declared last night he would seek to avoid a general election at this time, but it appeared that events were moving too swiftly for him to be able to dictate their course.

New Policy Outlined

The Government's new policy provides that 16,000 men may be sent overseas from the drafted home defense army, and that figure may be changed later as needs change. The step marked abandonment of five years of war effort under a system of volunteer enlistment for service abroad.

In the House, Gordon Graydon, leader of the Progressive Conservatives, said his party planned to introduce a motion calling for a new Government led by a man in favor of sending all draftees overseas.

To Prime Minister King's counsel that those speaking of a lack of confidence should consider what alternative Government they would put in if he resigned, Progressive Conservatives cried: "John Bracken." Mr. Bracken is national leader of that party.

Government's Position

In announcing the switch to partial conscription, the Government took the position that the voluntary system of obtaining reinforcements had failed.

Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Defense Minister, told Commons the 16,000 to be taken from the 60,000-man Home Defense army and sent overseas was the number required to meet foreseen reinforcements for overseas infantry formations.

BIG 3 TO SHARE REICH CONTROL

Allied Representatives Reach Agreement In London

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—British, American and Russian representatives in London have agreed on military rule of Germany under a coordinated policy directed by a supreme Allied council.

Actual administration, under the agreement, would be in separate occupation zones. Provision is now made for American, British and Russian zones, with French participation probably to be arranged.

Acting Secretary of State Stettinius announced today that the outline had been submitted to Washington, London and Moscow by the European Advisory Commission.

Approval of the three governments is necessary, although each approved the points of the plan as they were evolved.

France Added To EAC

The program was laid out without French participation, but France was added to the EAC last week. The expectation here is that control responsibilities for France will be worked into the plan after Rene Massigli, French Ambassador in London, takes his seat on the commission.

Long-range decisions on the treatment and future disposition of the Reich remain to be made.

The zone plan applies only to the period of post-war military occupation. It provides for Russian occupation of eastern Germany, including East Prussia; British occupation of northwestern Germany, and American control over southwestern areas. A separate plan is to be made for Austria, where policy will be distinct from that in the Reich.

Will Share Capital

The Berlin zone is understood to go considerably west of Berlin. However, the three main occupying powers are expected to share control in the capital.

The seat of the supreme Allied council is expected to be Berlin unless the city is damaged beyond usefulness.

Provision can be made under the plan, it was learned, for participation of the other European allies, although their representatives would not have top posts on the council.

The French Government has made it clear that France would like to occupy the rich Ruhr industrial area and the left bank of the Rhine.

Unanimity Required

London reported that decisions from the council will have to be unanimous, according to the EAC recommendations.

Leon Henderson, former chief of the Office of Price Administration, is expected to become economic head of the American section of the council; but unless the program is carried beyond the period of immediate military occupation the top members are expected to be army men.

AVIATION PARLEY TO TAKE ACTION ON WORLD AIR PLAN

CHICAGO, Nov. 24—A complete plan for regulated world air competition which could be made effective immediately through executive action was available today to delegates of the International Civil Aviation conference for the first time in their 24-day meeting.

The blanks in a proposed overall air transport plan submitted jointly by the United States, Canada and the United Kingdom Monday were filled in, today by separate documents from the American and British leaders, with the lines so close together that only one important point of controversy appeared to remain.

While this was taking place, the conference went ahead in closed session, determined to clear as quickly as possible those points on which the "Big Three" countries had agreed. The blanks were passed over and attention centered on getting a tentative general agreement. Considerable progress was reported, with the hope expressed that the two documents covering the blanks—these relate to a "fifth freedom of the air" and adjustment of carrying capacity to traffic—would be reached on Monday.

The conference atmosphere changed to one of rising optimism, although leaders still were cautious of predicting complete success.

The unsolved problem—it is freely admitted agreement on principle had been reached last week—concerns the right to pick up and discharge traffic in countries other than the home and terminus countries of the airline (the so-called "fifth freedom") and its application to the adjustment of traffic carrying capacity (escalator clause).

The differences on this point relate to both the initial allotment of capacity and the formula for increasing capacity quotas after a three-year trial period on the basis of average pay loads carried.

There seemed to be no other serious divergence between the two outlines, and much of the language used in the separately prepared documents was similar.

The British said frankly they had acceded to inclusion of a "fifth freedom" in the light of conference discussions; that they were willing to limit the functions of an international body to "advice and recommendation," as the United States proposed, and that they had accepted the escalator theory to encourage the efficient operator. Those steps represent important concessions to American and Canadian views.

One potential difficulty which the two countries solved was the British objection to a downward escalator when average payloads fall below 50 per cent. They agreed initial allotments of capacity could not be removed.

Air Parley Studies Authority Plan

Chicago, Nov. 24 (AP)—The 54 nations represented at the International Civil Aviation Conference were called back into closed session today to consider a proposed agreement for a world air transport authority.

The delegates had been given time to consider privately and separately a document prepared as the joint offering of the United States, Great Britain and Canada for a global body with advisory and review functions.

Problems Remaining

The biggest questions were the blanks left in the document, those relating to so-called freedoms of the air, adjustment of capacity to traffic, the provisions for protection of interests of war-torn countries; and as a final issue the method by which a state might withdraw from the agreement once it had accepted.

While these issues remained unsettled between the United States and Great Britain (Canada is reliably reported to be in accord with the American view), considerable debate is expected on the document as it stands. Some of the countries are known to have decided to offer amendments wtih respect to some points.

No Commitments Made

The "Big Three" submitted the document as points on which they were generally agreed both in principle and language, but without committing themselves to support it.

In other words, they have left the agreement open for modification, and are not in the position of agreeing finally on the proposal as written.

U. S. MUST RUSH SMALL AMMUNITION

100% Increase In Production Of Bullets Required

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP) — An urgent appeal from General Eisenhower today brought an order for a 100 per cent. increase in small-arms ammunition, which was cut back about a year ago.

Eisenhower reported to the War Production Board that his forces are using about four times as many small-caliber bullets "as anyone ever imagined they would."

WPB Chairman J. A. Krug, reporting this at a news conference, said that production will be "roughly doubled" at 13 plants as quickly as possible.

Battles Show Necessity

Battle experiences of the last few weeks make the boost necessary, Krug said in adding this type ammunition to the list of urgently needed items that already includes heavy trucks and tires, heavy artillery and shells, assault ships and radar equipment.

More than 77,000 additional workers will be needed to achieve the new goal. Some of the plants affected are located in acutely tight labor areas, already straining to meet manpower requirements.

The appeal for this tremendous boost in production follows by about a year a cutback of approximately 50 per cent. in output of small-arms ammunition. At that time military officials decided that an adequate stock pile could be maintained with curtailed production.

Facilities were kept ready, however, to increase output whenever battle needs warranted.

In the plants, 53,400 workers are now employed and an additional 62,200 will be needed, Krug said, adding that another 15,000 will be required in plants producing materials and component parts.

'Faced With Tough Job'

Present production of small-arms .30-caliber ammunition is about 30,000,000 rounds a month, the WPB chief said.

"This must be roughly doubled," he stated. "We know we are faced with a tough job in getting the manpower. We don t expect to get going overnight—it may take four or five months to meet the goal—but we will do it in time."

The plants involved have been put on WPB's production urgency list to divert all possible manpower to them, Krug said.

He announced also that a program for a "very substantial increase" in mortar ammunition will be put into effect soon. This program, he said, will require some few facilities.

Areas Are Listed

While the names of small-arms ammunition plants where production will be increased were not released immediately, Krug said they are located in these areas:

St. Louis, where present employment of 14,000 must be increased to 31,000; Minneapolis-St. Paul, from 8,200 to 21,000; Des Moines, from 7,500 to 16,000; Bridgeport, Conn., from 4,500 to 6,000; New Haven, Conn., from 1,900 to 3,000; East Alton, Ill., from 2,000 to 4,300; Frankford Arsenal, Philadelphia, 2,300 to 4,000; Utah (two plants near Salt Lake)—these have been on a stand-by basis and 5,700 workers must be recruited; Lake City, Mo., from 9,500 to 17,600.

Other Plants Embraced

The program also embraces the facilities of three ammunition core plants. These are the McQua-Norris plant at St. Louis, where employment must be increased from 2,600 to 3,500; the Edison General Electric plant at Chicago, from 900 to 1,700, and the Willys-Overland plant at Toledo, Ohio. The latter has been on a stand-by basis and will need 1,800 workers.

In addition, 15,000 workers must be found for brass-strip plants in the Connecticut, Cleveland and Chicago districts.

Asked if the civilian goods "spot authorization" programs in the areas affected would be curtailed, Krug said: "We will have to tighten up considerably in those areas."

Armed Forces Total Is Given As 11,859,000

Figure for Oct. 1 Includes 189,000 Women; W.A.C. to Reach Quota Dec. 31

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24 (AP).—The Senate Military Affairs Committee heard today that the nation's armed strength is close to 12,000,000 men.

Major General Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service Director, reported a net strength of all the armed forces of 11,859,000 on Oct. 1.

General Hershey's testimony, given at a closed session, later was made public, and the committee chairman, Senator Robert R. Reynolds, Democrat, of North Carolina, said General Hershey told the committee that the figure includes 109,000 women in the Navy—nurses, Waves, Spars and Marines—and 80,000 Wacs.

Since the war started, General Hershey said, 1,441,204 men have been returned to civilian life, 50.8 per cent for disability. Of the total 50,135 were returned during September.

The War Department said today that it expects to reach a satisfactory strength for the Women's Army Corps by Dec. 31, and that after that date WAC recruiting will combine, but on a reduced scale for smaller enlistment quotas to maintain the corps at the strength required for over-all Army efficiency.

By continuing W. A. C. recruiting efforts throughout November and December and maintaining monthly rates of enlistments, it is expected that the Army will have reached a satisfactory recruiting goal of 95,000 to 100,000 Wacs by Dec. 31.

This goal is based on the present strength of the Army and the deployment of its troops in the war. Its achievement will not preclude the continuing need for a comparatively smaller number of W. A. C. enlistments each month. Beginning Jan. 1, enlistments in the corps will be in lesser numbers for specialized skills.

The Senate Military Affairs Committee approved unanimously today a bill to permit General George C. Marshall to continue as Chief of Staff after Dec. 31. On that date General Marshall will be sixty-four, the age for automatic retirement from active service in the absence of special legislatin.

Discharged members of the armed forces would have ninety days in which to apply for their old civilian jobs under a bill approved today by the committee. The present law provides forty days. If hospitalization follows release from active duty and does not last more than a year, application for re-employment may be made within ninety days from release from hospital, under the proposed revision.

Lift Secrecy Surrounding Bombsight

WRIGHT FIELD, O., Nov. 24—(AP) The army air forces, lifting partially for the first time a blanket of secrecy that has shrouded the famed Norden bombsight, described it tonight as a "mass of gears, prisms, cams, lenses and mirrors" that solve bombing equations instantly.

NOV 25 1944

Several of the sights have fallen into enemy hands, the air technical service command reported, but added it would take the enemy two years to unravel the manufacturing and assembling techniques and put the sight into production. By then, ATSC said, the air force will have perfected so many improvements as to make the captured units obsolete.

Lt. Gen. William S. Knudsen, director of the ATSC, said the sight was composed of two elements—one contains the sighting telescope, computing mechanism and vertical gyroscope; the other is a directional gyro. The entire outfit will fit in an overnight bag.

Knudsen, in relating how the bombsight works, pointed out that a bomb does not strike directly under the releasing plane but lands a short distance back, and the lag is known as "trail." The distance from the point of release to the target is the "range" and it is the angle of range that the bombsight must determine.

As the plane approaches a bombing run, Knudsen explained, the bombardier sets his computer for "trail" and the time it will take the bomb to fall. With the gyroscope spinning, the bombardier then "tracks" his target by holding the cross-hairs on it for a few seconds, meanwhile making corrections for drift and other variables. When the cross-hairs automatically remain on the target, synchronization has been attained and the sight does the rest.

At the moment the plane reaches the point of release, the sight automatically releases the desired number of bombs.

NORDEN BOMBSIGHT EXHIBITED BY NAVY

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—(AP) The Navy gave the public its first glimpse of the famous Norden bombsight today—confident, the device's co-inventor said, that the enemy couldn't duplicate it "within the time the war is expected to continue."

"With all the scientific talent in Germany it is doubtful that the sight could have been built by them during this war," said Capt. Frederick I. Entwistle, assistant chief of research in the bureau of ordnance's development section.

Entwistle, identified for the first time as co-designer of the bombsight with Carl L. Norden, told newspapermen who were permitted to photograph and look at—but not handle—the device that it contains more than 2,000 parts, is manufactured in five plants and costs around $10,000.

He described the bombsight, a stabilizer fitting into an upper part resembling a football, as "simply a precision instrument which not only assures delivery of the bomb on small precision targets but also automatically directs and controls the plane to the target."

"From 10,000 feet," another officer said, you can practically drop a bomb into a pickle barrel."

Entwistle, a Rhode Island native now in Los Angeles, said the bombsight had been a major factor in American air successes and that the work of American bombers in Europe and the Pacific was "only the forerunner of greater events to come."

He said the British had asked for the sight "almost continuously" and that Russia also had requested it, both unsuccessfully.

The sight was developed between 1921 and 1931, Entwistle said. Asked why its connection with it never had been disclosed, he replied: "that's the way we do things in the Navy." He added that the sight was being improved regularly and that there was "no indication yet of any sight in the world that equals the Norden sight."

Army Getting Giant Gliders

All-Wood Trojan Horse Has Been in Construction Since 1942

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 24 (AP).—Military secrecy was lifted today to reveal that the nation's biggest gliders—the craft is made entirely of wood and appropriately dubbed the Trojan Horse—are being built exclusively in St. Louis for the Army Air Force.

John Laister, president of the Laister-Kuffmann Aircraft Corporation, announced with Air Force approval that construction of the gigantic CG-10A was begun in the summer of 1942, and the motorless aircraft was accepted by the Air Technical Service Command in November, 1943. It was designed by the St. Louis company.

Jap Aliens In U. S. May Enlist In Army

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—Japanese aliens living in the United States may volunteer for service in the American army.

The War Department, however, must pass on all applications to determine the volunteers' loyalty to this Government and other factors.

Selective service this week sent to local draft boards a memorandum outlining procedure to be followed.

Mustangs for Chinese Pilots

DALLAS, Tex., Nov. 24 (AP).—The Dallas plant of North American Aviation, Inc., said today a quantity of P-51 Mustang fighters had been assigned directly to the Chinese Air Force from its assembly lines under an allocation order from the United States Army Air Forces. The statement, in a press release approved by the War Department, added that the Chinese also were receiving a quantity of North American's AT-6 Texan combat trainers.

Canada Reduces Quota Of Pulpwood for U. S.

1945 Newsprint Exports Remain at 200,000 Tons Monthly

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24 (AP).—Canadian newsprint deliveries to the United States will be maintained at 200,000 tons monthly during the first half of 1945, but wood pulp shipments will be reduced slightly.

The War Production Board, announcing this today after conferences with Canadian officials, said that through June of next year pulp shipments to the United States will be at the annual rate of 1,000,000 tons. This compares with a rate of 1,100,000 tons this year.

This projected cut, a W. P. B. official said, will have no effect on newsprint allocations but will mean a slight reduction of supplies of other types of paper.

The expected cut in pulp shipment results, the W. P. B. said, "from the necessity recognized by all concerned" that Canada ship additional quantities "urgently needed" by Great Britain and other Allied countries.

While shortages of wood at the mills also have contributed to the pulp cut, these have been partly offset by "extraordinary efforts" of the Canadian newsprint industry to produce more pulp, the W. P. B. said.

Pulpwood exports during 1945 will be a minimum of 1,250,000 cords, the same as this year. This amount is subject to upward adjustment under an agreement between Canada and this country to share Canadian production equally.

The W. P. B. said a shortage of water in the streams had reduced deliveries of pulpwood to Canadian mills below the volume that had been expected. It added, however, that reports of wood production in Canada during the current cutting season "are encouraging and it is hoped that some improvement in deliveries of pulpwood to Canadian mills may be possible during the second half of 1945."

Refugees May Get Pay In Tokens

NOV 28 1944

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—Yugoslav refugee workers who turned down money are going to be paid in old blue ration tokens.

The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, which runs the Middle East refugee camps, disclosed today that a million used tokens are on their way to the area.

About 35,000 persons who have fled the war in Yugoslavia are being cared for in six camps. The refugees themselves built the camps, keep them in repair and do all other necessary work in the centers.

Refused Money

When the question of paying them so that they could buy little luxuries such as tobacco, needles and writing paper arose, they refused to accept money, UNRRA reported.

The camp self-government committees decided that some sort of work incentive was needed, however, so an UNRRA official struck on the idea of sending over discarded U. S. ration tokens.

The tokens are exchangeable for personal items at the camp canteen. The Office of Price Administration said it would be glad to furnish as many tokens as may be needed—so long as they aren't used in this country.

An UNRRA spokesman said the refugees refused money for their work because they considered their efforts a contribution to the war.

U. S. to Drop G. I. Franc

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24 (AP).—Issuance of the supplemental French franc by the United States—used for payments to troops in France—soon will be discontinued, a House committee was told today. Colonel E. J. Bean, of the War Department, said payments to such troops will be made in francs issued by the French government as soon as arrangements are concluded on the exchange rate. Colonel Bean said there was no authority in law for the United States to issue the supplemental French franc and Italian lira, but it was done "under a war emergency."

U. S. Was Best 1942 Customer Of Argentina

Philadelphia, Nov. 24 (AP)—Argentina's best customers in 1942 were the United Kingdom and the United States, followed by Brazil and "other countries," annual report to the Securities and Exchange Commission disclosed today.

No mention was made of exports to or imports from Germany.

The United Kingdom purchased Argentinian live stock, agricultural, forestal, mining and other products worth 601,000,000 paper pesos and the United States' purchases were valued at 510,600,000 pesos (at the end of 1942, the peso was worth $0.237 in American money. It is now $0.245).

Exports to the undefined "other countries" amounted to 230,700,000 pesos, and to Brazil 106,100,000.

OFFERS TREATY PROTOCOL

President Asks Senate to Back Water Terms With Mexico

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24 (AP)—President Roosevelt sent to the Senate today for ratification a protocol designed to clarify a Mexican-American water treaty. The treaty concerns use of the Colorado and Tijuana Rivers and of the Rio Grande.

The protocol was signed here Nov. 14 to supplement the treaty promulgated last February. It clarifies functions and jurisdiction of respective sections of an international boundary and water commission contemplated by the treaty.

Under the protocol, water-utilization facilities on international streams affected by the treaty may be built and operated by the respective Governments under specified conditions.

JEWISH PROBLEMS IN WORLD PARLEY

Atlantic City, Nov. 24.—The War Emergency Conference of the World Jewish Congress, the first international assembly of Jews since the war broke out, and the first such gathering ever held in the Western Hemisphere, will convene here for a five-day meeting, beginning Sunday, November 26.

The conference, at which forty-five countries will be represented by 310 delegates, will take up problems confronting the Jewish people today and the problems which will confront them in the post-war period.

Among the countries to be represented are Argentina, Poland, Palestine, Egypt, North Africa and South Africa. It is possible that delegates from France may also be present.

Specific recommendations and plans will be made for the restoration by international guaranty of all human rights to Jews everywhere, for the outlawing of anti-Semitism, for the punishment of crimes committed against Jews and for indemnification to property and persons.

HURLEY TO FACE QUIZ IN SENATE

Committee Pondering War Surplus Appointment Studies Narragansett Tie.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24 — (AP) The Senate Military committee today held up creation of a board to dispose of war surpluses pending an investigation of two of President Roosevelt's nominees.

The two men, Robert A. Hurley, former Democratic governor of Connecticut, the designated chairman, and Lieut. Col. Edward Heller, were directed to appear at a public hearing Tuesday for questioning.

Chairman Reynolds (D-NC), said criticism by the House Military committee of the Narragansett Machine company, Pawtucket, R. I., of which Hurley was vice president, was the basis for the inquiry.

In a formal report last September, the House committee criticized the War Department's approval of loans to this concern, headed by Norman T. Bolles.

Hurley was brought into the company in January, 1943, as $12,000 vice president, "primarily for credit effect," the report asserted, and "spent as little as one day a week at the plant" with "no specified duties."

Senator Chandler (D-Ky), chairman of the Senate committee's nominations subcommittee, said the committee understood that Colonel Heller, San Francisco, an Army Finance officer, had served under the Army official who approved the Narragansett loans.

The third $12,000-a-year post is expected to go to Senator Gillette (D-Iowa) at the end of the year when his Senate term expires. He was defeated Nov. 7 for reelection.

Tells of Pressure on Flamm

Ex-Employee of WMCA Testifies Campaign of Terror Preceded Sale of Station.

Washington, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—A former employee testified today that a campaign of terror was staged to frighten Donald Flamm, its owner, into selling station WMCA, New York, to Edward J. Noble, former Under-Secretary of Commerce.

Describing what he termed a conspiracy to force sale of the station, Leslie Evan Roberts, former public relations counsel of WMCA, related details of his participation in testimony before a House committee investigating the Federal Communications Commission. He said the "greatest portion of dubious credit" in forcing the sale should, in his opinion, "go to Noble."

"Ed Noble," he said, "was the one person who knew all the story all the time."

Asserting that he knew the campaign to "terrorize" Mr. Flamm "was all a hoax" and that the FCC would not take action against Flamm—as he feared—Mr. Roberts told of the "great confidence" in which Mr. Flamm held him. In this connection, he declared:

"If I hadn't participated in this conspiracy it's possible that Flamm would own the station today. I'd have simply told him to throw the bums out."

More Details of 'Conspiracy.'

Mr. Roberts testified that for his part in the "conspiracy" he was to become executive vice-president of the station under Mr. Noble, while Donald S. Shaw, former general manager of WMCA under Mr. Flamm, and identified by Roberts as one of the "conspirators," was to be president.

"Half the things I told Flamm," Mr. Roberts said, "would have scared any one to death."

Mr. Flamm sold the station to Mr. Noble for $850,000 in 1940. Mr. Roberts testified previously that Mr. Flamm had once refused $1,100,000 for the property. Flamm, he related, did not know the name of the would-be purchaser, until the sale was finally agreed upon after negotiations with two Washington attorneys, William J. Dempsey and William C. Koplovitz.

Corcoran Mentioned.

After learning that Mr. Noble was the buyer, Mr. Roberts said Mr. Flamm "was convinced" he was acting in the interest of Thomas O. Corcoran, a White House adviser during several years of President Roosevelt's administration. Mr. Corcoran now is practicing law here.

Mr. Flamm has testified he sold the station under "duress" and "coercion." In this connection, Mr. Roberts said, "He (Flamm) accused me of participating in the deal and charged that he knew I was to receive $100,000 for my part in the negotiations." Mr. Roberts termed the money charge "absurd" and "untrue."

A few weeks later he was discharged by Mr. Flamm, Mr. Roberts said, and began to "realize" he had "climbed out to the farthest end of the limb where I was left hanging."

OPA Opens 2 Drives On Clothing Prices

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—OPA today promised more cuts in the price of clothing and more low-priced garments on dealers' shelves.

The new, twin assault on inflated clothing prices will be followed, Price Administrator Chester Bowles said, by clamping down on the price ceilings of garment makers and tightening price rules governing retail stores.

As the whole program takes effect, "any increases in the cost-of-living index in the coming months will stop completely," Bowles predicted.

Tipoff On Wage Formula Stand

The OPA thus evidently pinned on the textile and garment trade its entire hope of carrying out the injunction of Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson, who asserted that a small but "disturbing" climb in living costs "must stop."

Vinson's instructions were construed as a tipoff to an Administration decision not to drop the Little Steel pay formula before Germany's collapse, but to give labor assurance that the cost of living would not climb while wages stood still.

OPA's opening moves are:

First—A decision to set dollars-and-cents retail prices, which will appear on easy-to-read tickets on each garment, on the 30,000,000 items of children's clothing for which the War Production Board has made a special allotment of material this quarter.

Second—An order intended to stop "fancying-up" and "over-finishing" of simple materials, which Bowles estimated may save consumers as much as $60,000,000 a year. This is to be done by reducing the margins of textile finishers.

It will be four or five months before the ceiling-tagged children's garments reach the market, Bowles estimated.

In general, this pattern will be followed: WPB fixes quality and size specifications, before granting material to manufacturers. For every level of manufacturers' prices, OPA sets a corresponding retail price. With each shipment the maker notifies the seller of the ceiling, and the retailer must plainly mark the price.

Confirmed As Ambassador

this year's indicated output of 24,600,000,000 pounds.

The food agency said the per capita supply for civilians will be about 123 pounds next year if the war in Europe should continue through 1945, and about 132 pounds should the Germans be defeated within the next few months. In either case, the per capita supply would be considerably below this year's estimated consumption of 143 pounds.

Farmers Cut Hog Production.

Meat supplies will be smaller largely because farmers, faced with reduced feed supplies, have cut down on production of hogs.

The WFA is asking for the slaughter during 1945 of 35,000,000 head of cattle and calves, 78,200,000 hogs, and 21,500,000 sheep and lambs. Slaughter this year is estimated at 33,900,000 cattle and calves, 96,000,000 hogs, and 24,300,000 sheep and lambs.

The 1945 meat production is expected to total 9,975,000 pounds of lamb and mutton, and 10,322,000,000 pounds of pork.

Military and lend-lease requirements have been put at 6,691,000,000 pounds on the assumption that the war in Europe continues through 1945 and at 5,446,000,000 pounds on the assumption that it ends early in 1945.

The per capita civilian supply would be divided as follows should the war continue through next year: Beef 59.6 pounds, veal 10.9, lamb and mutton 4.9, and pork 47.3. The supply would be as follows should the war end early in the year: Beef 59.9 pounds, veal 11, lamb and mutton 5.3, and pork 56.1.

May Ration Meat Through '45

WFA Asserts Output Next Year Will Be 1,900,000,000 Pounds Under '44.

NOV 25 1944

Washington, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—Rationing or other restrictions on civilian consumption of better grades of meats may be maintained throughout 1945 and possibly into 1946 even if the European phase of the war should end early in the year.

This prospect was pictured by the War Food Administration today in a report indicating that 1945 production of all meats will be 1,900,000,000 pounds less than

Approve Bill to Keep Marshall as Chief

Washington, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—The Senate Military Committee approved unanimously today a bill to permit Gen. George C. Marshall to keep on being Army Chief of Staff after December 31. On that date, Gen. Marshall will be 64, the age for automatic retirement from active service in the absence of special legislation.

Crowley Resignation Unaccepted; He'll Stay

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—President Roosevelt has refused to accept the resignation of Foreign Economic Administrator Leo T. Crowley.

The White House disclosed today that Crowley wrote the Chief Executive November 17, saying he wanted to give more time to business and wanted Mr. Roosevelt to bear in mind his desire to be relieved "when the time comes for you to consider making administratives changes for your new term as President.

"Not At This Time"

Mr. Roosevelt replied the next day. He said he appreciated Crowley's desire to return to private enterprise, "but at this time I cannot accept your resignation."

"You are doing a fine job," the President wrote, "and I want you to remain at least until the elimination of Germany from the war."

The Chief Executive asked the FEA chief to let him know if he could rely on him to comply with the request, and Crowley did so two days later.

LITTELL MAY NOT RESIGN

Congressmen Feel He Will Refuse Biddle's Request

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—Some members of Congress expressed belief today that Norman M. Littell, Assistant Attorney General, would refuse Attorney General Biddle's request for his resignation.

Biddle was reported to have given incompatibility as his reason for asking the resignation. Neither he nor Littell had any public comment.

But the Justice Department in a statement to Senator Mead (D., N. Y.), chairman of the Senate War Investigating Committee, said the differences were not the result of testimony Littell had given the committee.

Want Senate Investigation

Despite the Justice Department statement, Senators Ferguson (R., Mich.) and Kilgore (D., W. Va.) continued to press for a Senate investigation of the difficulties between the Federal lawyers.

After a conference the two Senators had today with James P. McGranery, assistant to Biddle, Ferguson said:

"We are definitely going to ask our committee (War Investigating) to look into this. The Biddle request was made after Littell had assisted our committee by his testimony."

Only The President

If Littell, a Presidential appointee, should decline to tender his resignation, Congressional sources contended that he could only be removed from office by Presidential revocation of his appointment.

Both Ferguson and Kilgore said the Biddle request semed to be an interference with attempts by the legislative branch to carry out its duties.

Cited by House and Senate members as examples of Littell's aid to the Congress were these occasions:

His appearance before the House Public Lands Committee when he contended the first navy-Standard Oil contract for operation of the vast Elk Hills (California) naval oil reserve "went beyond" deals involved in the Teapot Dome cases of the Harding Administration. Subsequently the contract was canceled by order of the President.

The Breakers Hotel Dispute

More recently he told the War Investigating Committee that close connections of men working in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation with national realty interests might jeopardize the public interest in post-war disposal of Government-owned surplus lands.

In a third case, Littell fought against return of the Breakers Hotel in Florida to private ownership after the Government had converted it into an army rehabilitation center.

In its statement to Mead, the Justice Department specifically referred to the Breakers Hotel case in contending Biddle's action had no connection with Littell's assistance to Mead's committee.

Although the committee fought with Littell against restoration of the hotel to its owners, the War Department has decided to return it.

House Group Bars Coal Bill

Votes Against Bituminous Regulation, but Will Consider Social Security Freeze.

Washington, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—Brushing aside a presidential recommendation, the House Ways and Means Committee voted 15 to 9 today against considering legislation reviving regulation of the bituminous coal industry.

Simultaneously, the committee agreed to consider a measure to freeze the social security tax at 1 per cent against employee and employer, instead of allowing an automatic rise to 2 per cent against each on January 1. It will start hearings Monday. This decision made possible one more battle between the White House and anti-administrationists on Capitol Hill before the Seventy-eighth Congress expires.

Some already were predicting that Mr. Roosevelt would veto any legislation freezing the tax, on which Congress thrice before has prevented a rise. The automatic increase is provided in the basic social security law.

Representative Knutson (R.-Minn.), Ways and Means Republican leader, predicted, "We are going to bring out a bill to freeze the tax."

The coal bill came up after President Roosevelt had written Representative Flannagan (D.-Va.) saying such legislation "will help stabilize the industry and safeguard the interests of thousands of producers, hundreds of thousands of mine workers and millions of consumers." Congress killed the coal law last year.

Fight Brewing Over SWPC.

A brewing congressional fight over any plan to decentralize the nation's industrial wealth broke out today in the House Banking Committee. The committee approved a bill to increase the capitalization of the Smaller War Plants Corporation, but the action came only after Representative Crawford (R.-Mich.) asserted:

"I am going to protest against Federal funds being used to kill off industry in one section of the country so it can be moved to another."

"Are you going to object to Oklahoma having even a [illegible] factory?" asked Representative Monroney (D.-Okla.).

The exchange developed over a statement by Maury Maverick, chairman of the SWPC that he favors decentralization of the nation's industrial wealth.

Flood Control Bill Amended.

The Senate today rejected a proposed prohibition against Federal construction of electric transmission lines for three years after the completion of a Government power project. Approving an amendment to the post-war flood control bill, the Senate voted to permit construction of such lines immediately, unless 90 per cent of available power is purchased at the point of origin by private or public bodies. The latter would be given preference.

The amendment was accepted by Senator Bailey (D.-N. C.) who had proposed the three-year restriction.

NOV 25 1944

Plan Hurley-Heller Hearings.

"I didn't say I wanted to 'kill off' anything," he told Mr. Crawford, "but I am in favor of encouraging free enterprise every place it is justified."

The Senate Military Committee voted today to investigate the background of two presidential nominations for the new Surplus War Property Board. The nominations, of former Gov. Robert A. Hurley of Connecticut and Lieut.-Col. Edward Heller, to two of the three $12,000-a-year posts on the board were sent to the Senate earlier this week. Mr. Hurley was proposed as chairman of the board.

Senator Reynolds, chairman of the Military Committee, announced after a closed session that the full committee would hold a public hearing next Tuesday to consider the appointments.

TAX "FREEZING" PLAN WINS POINT

House Group Agrees To Consider Security Action

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—Backers of "freezing" social security taxes at present levels for another year won agreement from the House Ways and Means Committee today to consider such legislation.

With the decision, storm signals were hoisted again on Capitol Hill, indicating that the oft-embattled 78th Congress will not quietly fold its tent and go home—not without one more big fight.

Passage of such a measure likely would bring a Presidential veto. The Administration is insisting that the tax be allowed to rise January 1 from 1 to 2 per cent.—on employer and employe—as provided in the basic social security law. Congress thrice already has refused to allow the automatic increase.

Votes Down Coal Measure

Moreover, the committee brushed aside a Presidential recommendation on another issue, balloting, 15 to 9, against consideration of legislation reviving Federal minimum-price regulations in the bituminous-coal industry. The committee killed this program last year by refusing to bring out a bill to prolong its life.

Representative Knutson (R. Minn.), committee Republican leader, predicted that the group would bring out a social security "freeze" next week. He said, however, he'd have to make a check of members before venturing a guess whether there were sufficint votes to override a veto.

The committee ordered brief public hearing on the issue. Arthur J. Altmeyer, Social Security Board chairman, will be the first witness on Monday.

To Press For "Freeze"

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) has announced he will press for the "freeze" in the Senate.

Those favoring the freeze contend the security fund has adequate reserves for old-age and survivors' benefits. The Administration insists that the reserves be allowed to build up further in "good times."

The coal bill came before the committee after Mr. Roosevelt, in a letter to Representative Flannagan (D., Va.), asked [illegible]. The President said that without [illegible] Soft Coal Act "chaos will again threaten if the industry returns to the old ways of cutthroat competition."

Under the act the Government sought to prevent ruinous competition by setting up a system of minimum soft-coal prices, and providing penalties against those violating such price schedules.

House Overwhelmingly Passes Federal Crop Insurance Bill

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24—(AP) Voting overwhelmingly to revive a farm program it once killed, the House today passed a Federal Crop Insurance measure called for by both major party platforms this year.

The vote was 254 to 16, sending to the Senate the bill which provides for immediate insurance on wheat, cotton and flax crops and eventual protection for almost everything else a farmer plants.

Nobody knows how much the program will cost but, by a last-minute amendment, the cost of Administration cannot exceed 25 per cent of the amount collected in premiums.

The House killed a limited crop insurance program on June 23, 1943 after five years experimentation because opponents argued it was too expensive. The vote then was 208 to 160 against it.

However, sentiment changed later, and today many members who voted to kill the program a year ago changed sides.

In two days of House consideration the bill never was in serious jeopardy although several attempts were made to kill it. Most opposition came from two sources: Those who view federal insurance as an invasion of states rights and those who contend the program doesn't justify its cost.

But the House was determined to set it up. With amendment after amendment members broadened the plan until, in its final form, the measure will protect farmers against the loss of almost any kind of crop under almost any circumstances.

The insurance will be paid on crop losses due to drought, flood, hail, wind, frost, winter-kill, lightning, hurricane, tornado, insect infestation, plant disease, fire, snow and wildlife.

The insurance plan on wheat, cotton and flax could be set up immediately in any county where 50 farmers make written application. It will be established on a limited, experimental basis on other crops, later being expanded to full coverage.

Ten Republicans and six Democrats voted against the bill. They were: Buffett (R-Neb.), Compton (R-Conn.), Disney (D-Okla.), Hoffman (R-Mich.), Jones (R-Ohio), Kean (R-N.J.), Kleberg (D-Tex.), McGehee (D-Miss.), May (D-Ky.), Miller (R-Conn.), Miller (R-Mo.), Sheppard (D-Calif.), Smith (R-Ohio), Sundstrom (R-N.J.), Taber (R-N.Y.) and Tarver (D-Ga.).

Flood Bill Debated

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—Senate passage of a billion-dollar post-war flood control bill hinged today on the outcome of sharp disagreements over irrigation, hydroelectric power, States' rights and the proposed Missouri Valley Authority.

Introduced by Senators Langer (R., N. D.) and Murray (D., Mont.), an amendment to create the Missouri Authority drew quick criticism from several Senators, among them Wheeler (D., Mont.) and Wherry (R., Nebr.).

NOV 25 1944

Murray insisted that the proposal had no place in the flood-control authorization and should be left for action by the new Congress convening in January. Langer said, however, that he and Murray would insist on a vote before final action on the bill.

A Missouri Valley Authority is favored by President Roosevelt along with other regional agencies like the Tennessee Valley Authority to develop the resources of the country's river basins. Administration leaders were not pressing, however, for action by this Congress.

Would Restrict Sales

The amendment by Senator Bailey (D., N. C.) got first call in the Senate today. He sought a provision to prevent the sale of electricity except at the point of origin for three years after construction of Government projects.

He contended that sales through Federally-financed transmission lines to wholesalers would threaten private enterprise.

WLB MOVES QUICKLY IN PHONE DISPUTE

With Operators Back, Agency Starts On Settlement

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—With striking telephone operators back on the job, the War Labor Board set up special machinery today for swift action on the dispute that started the walkout.

That disagreement is over the practice of paying living allowances in addition to regular salaries, to operators brought into a city from out of town. In Dayton, Ohio, a bonus of $18.25 a week was paid by the Ohio Bell Telephone Company. The strike started in Dayton and spread from there to other cities in Ohio, and to Detroit and Washington, D. C.

Impartial Panel Named

Under the plan adopted by unanimous vote of the WLB today, the Cleveland regional board will name a tripartite panel of public, industry and labor members to hear the case.

However, the regional board said the tri-partite panel would probably not meet next week as previously planned, since the parties would not have sufficient time to prepare information and file briefs. The panel will report directly to the national board.

Before leaders of the independent operators' union called off their strike last night, the WLB had pledged that, if they returned to work, speedy action would be taken on their complaints.

"Novel Issue," WLB Says

Today the board said in a statement that the special panel procedure was adopted because "the dispute involves a novel issue, the board never having passed on extra pay differentials for transferee operators."

Telephone service rapidly returned to normal when leaders of striking unions in Ohio and Washington agreed last night to return to work after previously defying WLB orders. Government seizure of affected telephone exchanges appeared imminent at the time.

On strike were unions with 5,000 members in Ohio, 2,700 in Washington and 2,000 in Detroit. Some 7,500 in Illinois and northern Indiana voted to join them just before the strike was called off, then changed their minds when the strikers were ordered back to their switchboards.

700 Vote On Work Stoppage

Philadelphia, Nov. 24 (AP)—Seven hundred operators of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company voted today to determine whether they will stop work in a demand for a $5-a-week wage increase.

The vote was taken by Local 203, Federation of Long Lines Telephone Workers, independent, despite the national union's decision to call off a stoppage which began in Ohio and spread to Washington.

CIO Demands Hard Peace For Nazis

NOV 25 1944

Chicago, Nov. 24 (AP)—The CIO temporarily sidetracked its planned protest against the wage freeze and the War Labor Board and, instead, stood on record today as favoring a hard peace for Germany.

In a resolution asking labor representation at the peace table, the huge organization called "for absolute destruction of Hitlerite Germany and the Japanese militarists.

"There can and must not be any negotiated or soft peace," the resolution adopted by the 600 delegates to the annual convention said. "The murderers of Maidanek concentration camp must not be permitted to escape retribution.

Must Assure Punishment

"The full and stern punishment of war criminals must be assured. The German people must be taught that they shall atone for the crimes and horror which they have visited upon the earth.

"The German industrialists and Junkers shall not receive any amnesty through their business and social contacts in the victorious nations to renew their drive for a world conquest in the future."

Resolutions on the WLB and urging removal of present restrictions on wage increases, and another advocating international labor unity were the major ones left for action today.

No Connection With Decision

One CIO official said this "just happened" and had no connection with the hoped-for decision by the War Labor Board in the United Steel Workers' case on several demands auxiliary to their general pay boost request. The board has been deliberating the case all week in Washington.

The resolution condemning the board refers to delays in imposing of cases and WLB's refusal to make any recommendations to the President to abandon the Little Steel formula as the peg for pay increases. The formula permits only 15 per cent, above January, 1941, levels, to allow for increased living costs up to the time it was adopted in May, 1942.

Opinion Same As AFL's

The CIO, like the AFL, now meeting in New Orleans, insists that living expenses have continued while wages have been kept rigidly restrained by the board. A committee consisting of Chairman William H. Davis and four other WLB members made a special cost-of-living report to President Roosevelt last week end, showing that this increase amounted to 30 per cent.

In addition to election of president and secretary-treasurer, for which there is no apparent opposition to Philip Murray and James B. Carey, respectively, the delegates were to select nine vice-presidents and personnel of the executive board, on which there are 49 top union officers this year.

C. I. O. DEMANDS WAGE CHANGES

Relaxation of Little Steel Policy Is Sought.

Chicago, Nov. 24 (A. P.).—The C. I. O. convention pressed a formal demand here today on the Government to relax its wage policy immediately in the interest of the war effort. The 600 delegates adopted two resolutions which expressed their displeasure with what they described as "the poor administration and unfortunate policies" of the War Labor Board. They urged that the wage lid be removed to permit cost-of-living pay adjustments.

The action, one of the convention's final items of business, came after Philip Murray, president, demanded that the Government "live up to its solemn commitment to keep wages and living costs in the same relationship as listed September 15, 1942." He criticized George W. Taylor, vice-chairman of the WLB, who worked out the Little Steel formula by which pay raises have been limited to 15 per cent above the January, 1941, levels, as "unfair and biased."

Mr. Murray said that the relationship was made by the President and by Congress, but he blamed the "bad administration of the Little Steel formula," on the public members of WLB, and on James F. Byrnes, war mobilization director, and Fred M. Vinson, economic stabilization director.

"Our unions have made their commitments—the no-strike pledge—and we intend to live up to that obligation to our soldiers, our people and our Commander in Chief," Mr. Murray said, "but, Mr. Government, we say to you, be fair and live up to your commitments."

World Labor Movement.

Another resolution adopted in the closing hours of the conclave put the C. I. O. on record for the establishment of a new world labor movement giving equal representation to all unions of free countries and excluding none.

"The C. I. O.," he said, "cannot permit the A. F. of L. or officials of the British Trade Union Congress to block organization of a new world labor movement. We must have our rightful place in the international labor picture and I do not believe any organization can stand in our way or successfully prevent the C. I. O. from having representation in interanfional labor affairs.

"We do not only want representation within the framework of a new world labor movement, but the C. I. O. also wants its rightful representation at the peace table."

JAPS SCORNED BY MITSCHER

Admiral Calls Foe "Poorest Specimens" On Earth

San Diego, Cal., Nov. 24. (AP)—Voicing his "utter contempt of the Japanese as a race," Vice-Admiral Marc A. Mitscher, Task Force 58 commander and experienced observer, today said "they are the poorest specimen of man on this earth today, and I have had an opportunity to compare them with the so-called head hunters of the Solomons."

"I find them," he told a Chamber of Commerce luncheon here, "a vicious, savage, ignorant people completely without morals or instincts that will permit them to fight fairly under the generally accepted rules of war. There may be some fair-minded Japanese in the world today, but it has not been my privilege to meet them in this war."

Pacific Picture Changes

Mitscher said that while the Pacific war picture had changed materially, it would not change overwhelmingly until defeat of Germany, which would permit an increased tempo.

"I have no doubt that certain individuals in Japan will attempt a compromise peace—one that will secure their future for other wars," he said. "I say this because I know Japan must expand or die. I am convinced that Japan is prepared to sacrifice many millions of lives in her endeavor to win this war. The Japanese are hoping we will tire of the fight."

No Intention Of Stopping

Mitscher said the fighting men had no intention of stopping short of victory, and hoped the home front had the same determination.

The duration of the war, the admiral said, depended entirely on the home front—those here supplying the material to conduct the war and those who are injecting the spirit into the man at the front to make him feel he is fighting in the interest of those at home and their country.

"No better test of our confidence in our superiority may be expressed when I say that we prefer to fight from carriers than from land bases. By actual experience we have demonstrated that mobile bases are less vulnerable than the fixed island type."

LONDON, NOV 24-(AP)-A RELIABLE REPORT TODAY SAID RUSSIA, BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES LAST WEEK SIGNED AN AGREEMENT ON THE OCCUPATION OF GERMANY, DETAILS OF THE AGREEMENT WERE NOT IMMEDIATELY KNOWN.

THE AGREEMENT WAS UNDERSTOOD TO HAVE BEEN SIGNED BY SIR WILLIAM STRANG FOR BRITAIN, FEDOR GUSEV, SOVIET AMBASSADOR TO BRITAIN, FOR RUSSIA, AND PHILIP MOSELY, DEPUTY TO AMBASSADOR JOHN G. UNDER THE AGREEMENT, IT WAS UNDERSTOOD, MACHINERY WOULD BE SET UP FOR THE CONTROL OF GERMANY DURING THE PERIOD IN WHICH SHE WOULD BE FILLING THE ALLIED TERMS OF UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER.

A RELIABLE SOURCE SAID THE MOST IMPORTANT PROVISION OF THE AGREEMENT WAS A UNANIMITY RULE, WHICH MEANS THAT ALL MAJOR DECISIONS OF THE BIG THREE ON SUPREME ALLIED CONTROL OF GERMANY WOULD HAVE TO BE REACHED UNANIMOUSLY.

IT WAS UNDERSTOOD THAT FRANCE DID NOT SIGN THE AGREEMENT BECAUSE RENE MASSIGLI, FRENCH AMBASSADOR TO BRITAIN, HAS NOT TAKEN HIS SEAT ON THE EUROPEAN ADVISORY COMMISSION. ONE SOURCE SAID, HOWEVER, THAT IT MIGHT BE DEDUCED THAT FRANCE WOULD NOT BE EXCLUDED FROM PARTICIPATING IN THE ARRANGEMENT FOR THE OCCUPATION OF GERMANY.

UNDER THE NEW PACT REPORTED LAST WEEK PROVIDING FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF CONTROL MACHINERY, THE EUROPEAN ADVISORY COMMISSION WOULD BE IN A POSITION TO DRAW UP PROCLAMATIONS FOR ALYING DOWN THE LAW TO GERMANY. THESE DECREES APPARENTLY WOULD DEAL WITH GERMAN INDUSTRY, ECONOMY, EDUCATION AND DISARMAMENT.

WITH THE U.S.FIRST ARMY IN GERMANY, NOV.24-(AP)-DOUGHBOYS OF LT.GEN.COURTNEY H.HODGES' FIRST ARMY FOUGHT INTO WEISWEILER TODAY A HOUSE AT A TIME AMID INDICATIONS THAT THE NAZIS WERE PULLING OUT OF THE TOWN UNDER COVER OF A STRONG REARGUARD ACTION.

HARD FIGHTING CONTINUED ALL ALONG THE FIRST ARMY FRONT. THE INFANTRY SLOGGED FORWARD UNDER DISMAL, DRIPPING SKIES IN A SLOW PROGRESS WHICH A STAFF OFFICER DESCRIBED AS "TREE-TO-TREE" FIGHTING.

THE GERMAN WITHDRAWAL FROM WEISWEILER WAS INDICATED BY THE MOVEMENT OF TRUCKS AND HORSE-DRAWN VEHICLES ALONG HIGHWAYS LEADING TO THE NORTHEAST.

HEAVY ARTILLERY POUNDED THE GERMANS' ESCAPE ROUTES OUT OF ESCHWEILER, TWO MILES WEST OF WEISWEILER, OVER WHICH MORE HEAVY GERMAN TRAFFIC WAS SEEN MOVING.

BOTH ALLIED AND GERMAN MOVEMENT WAS COMPLICATED BY DRIVING RAIN WHICH SENT SMALL STREAMS FLOODING FROM THEIR BANKS AND OVERFLOWING ONTO THE HIGHWAYS.

THE GERMANS WERE USING THE GRAY SKY COVER TO SEND OVER AN INCREASING NUMBER OF V-1 WEAPONS ACROSS THE FIRST ARMY AREA. LAUNCHED FROM HIDDEN SITES IN GERMANY, THESE ROBOT WEAPONS HAVE BEEN FIRED AT A SHARPLY INCREASED RATE IN THE PAST FEW DAYS.

THE GERMANS THREW IN FRESH RESERVES IN AN EFFORT TO STEM THE ARMY'S ADVANCE. WEST OF WEISWEILER THE DOUGHBOYS ENCOUNTERED STORM TROOPS ORDERED INTO THE ATTACK TO TRY TO SAVE A DETERIORATING POSITION.

"THE ENEMY'S RESISTANCE IS STUBBORN AND THE GOING IS SLOW AND DIFFICULT," A STAFF OFFICER SAID IN SUMMING UP THE DAY'S OPERATIONS.

HE SAID 3,530 GERMANS HAD BEEN CAPTURED BY THE FIRST ARMY SINCE THE OFFENSIVE BEGAN NOV.16 AND APPROXIMATELY 5,700 BY THE NINTH ARMY.

SIXTH ARMY GROUP HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, NOV.24-(AP)-THE MAJOR PART OF STRASBOURG HAS NOW BEEN LIBERATED BUT A BITTER BATTLE STILL RAGES AROUND THE DOCK AREA OF THE ALSATIAN CAPITAL, IT WAS REPORTED HERE TONIGHT.
ARMY HEADQUARTERS SAID STRASBOURG WAS ONLY SLIGHTLY DAMAGED. IT WAS ESTIMATED 2,000 PRISONERS WERE CAPTURED IN AND AROUND THE CITY.
FAR TO THE SOUTH THERE WAS A CONFUSED SITUATION AT MULHOUSE, WHERE THE FRENCH HOLD THE INSIDE OF THE CITY BUT HAVE CAPTURED ONLY ONE OF FOUR BARRACKS WHICH THE GERMANS HAVE TURNED INTO FORTRESSES.
SOME 300 GERMANS ARE BELIEVED HOLDING OUT IN THE BARRACKS, WHICH HAVE DEEP UNDERGROUND SHELTERS. ONE OF THE BARRACKS WAS SEIZED BY THE FRENCH WITH TANKS LEADING THEIR ASSAULT.
ALL OVER THE ALSATIAN PLAIN, NUMEROUS WANDERING BANDS OF GERMANS SWEEP BACK INTO TOWNS AFTER THE FRENCH PASS THROUGH AND CUT THE ROADS. PITCHED BATTLES ARE FLARING CONTINUALLY.
NORTHEAST OF SARREBOURG, AMERICAN TROOPS PUSHED INTO THE THREE VILLAGES OF DRULINGEN, DURSTEL AND TIEFFENBACH. IN THE 44TH DIVISION SECTOR, AN ENEMY COUNTERATTACK WHICH HAD DRIVEN THE YANKS BACK A FEW MILES WAS SMASHED BY AMERICAN ARMOR AND MOST OF THE LOST GROUND WAS REGAINED.
TO THE SOUTH IN THE VOSGES WOODS EAST OF RAON-L'ETAPE, THE 100TH AND THIRD DIVISIONS ADVANCED SLOWLY AND OCCUPIED ST.BLAISE, A MILE AND A HALF SOUTHEAST OF RAON-L'ETAPE.

WITH U.S.TANKS OUTSIDE WEISWEILER, GERMANY, NOV.24-(AP)-THIS IS A RECORD OF A FEW MINUTES OF BATTLE WHICH PRODUCED A SUPERB EXAMPLE OF TEAMWORK BETWEEN INFANTRY AND TANKS.
THE SCENE IS THE LAST BIT OF OPEN GROUND BETWEEN ESQMWEILER AND WEISWEILER RIGHT AT THE OUTSKIRTS OF WEISWEILER ITSEL.
IN THEIR FOXHOLES FORWARD OF THIS OBSERVATION POST THE DOUGHBOYS ARE TIRED FROM MANY DAYS IN THE LINE AND THEY ARE HAVING A HARD TIME OF IT. AGAINST THEIR LIGHT WEAPONS THE GERMANS HAVE BEEN POURING DOWN ON THEM THE FIRE OF 75-MM GUNS AND THE GUNS OF EMPLACED TANKS.
THE COMMAND DECIDES TO SEND THE TANKS IN HERE BECAUSE THESE BIG BROTHERS OF THE COMBAT TEAM HAVE THE FIREPOWER AND STEEL HIDES THICK ENOUGH TO ITHSTAND THE ENEMY FIRE.
THE TANKERS ARE NOT TIRED. THEY HAVE BEEN THREE DAYS OUT OF THE LINE AND THEY ARE JAUNTY, EVEN GLEEFUL, AS THEY MARSHAL HERE AT THE START OF THE LINE TO GO IN.
AT 2:45 THE INFANTRY LETS GO WITH WITH HUNDREDS OF TRACER BULLETS FROM 50-CALIBER MACHINEGUNS ALL ALONG THE ARC OF THE GERMAN POSITIONS, SAYING IN EFFECT TO OUR TANKERS: "THERE THEY ARE."
THE TANKS LUNGE OVER THE SLOPE ON THE IMMEDIATE RIGHT. THEIR 75'S FOLLOW THE LINE OF THE INFANTRY'S FIRE. RIGHT OFF A GERMAN TANK UP AHEAD IS HIT.
THE TANKS ROLL ON FORWARD AND NOW, AT 3 P.M., T

H

EY HAVE WORKED THROUGH AND ARE PAST OUR INFANTRY LINE AND ARE CHARGING STRONG GERMAN POSITIONS HEAD ON IN THE GREEN WOODED STRIP OFF TO THE RIGHT.
THEY DO NOT AT ONCE NOTICE THE GERMANS ARE AFTER THEM FROM THEIR LEFT, BUT IN THEIR FOXHOLES THE "LITTLE MEN"--THE TANKERS TERM FOR THE INFANTRY--NOTICE AND LET GO WITH THEIR TRACERS AGAIN.
SOME OF THE TANKERS CATCH ON. TWO TANKS WHEEL QUICKLY TO THE LEFT, BLAZING AWAY WITH THEIR 75'S. THERE ARE BIG EXPLOSIONS, SMOKE BOILS UP, AND THERE IS NO MORE GERMAN FIRE FROM THAT DIRECTION.
NOW AT 3:15 THE TANKS ARE ENGAGED DESPERATELY ON THE EXTREME RIGHT. GERMAN SHELLS FALL IN A CRAZY PATTERN OVER THE OPEN FIELD AHEAD OF US. ONE TANK HALTS AND BLOWS SMOKE. IT HAS HIT A MINE.
A TANK FLUSHES FIVE GERMANS. DOUGHBOYS RUN FROM THEIR FOXHOLES. TRACER FIRE CROSSING FROM FOUR OR FIVE DIRECTIONS ABOVE THEIR HEADS, AND TAKE THEM PRISONER. THE TANK ROLLS ON AGAIN.
AND THAT'S THE WAY THE TEAM WORKS. THE INFANTRY FOLLOWS UP THE TANKS, READY TO TAKE OVER AS SOON AS THE TANKERS HAVE KNOCKED OUT THE GERMAN FIRE ARC.

ROME, NOV. 24-(AP)-PREMIER IVANOE BONOMI'S ITALIAN COALITION GOVERNMENT HAS BEEN IN A STATE OF NEAR CRISIS FOR THE PAST TWO WEEKS OVER THE QUESTION OF WHETHER THERE WILL BE A REALIGNMENT OF PARTIES TO GIVE MORE POWER TO THE COMMUNISTS AND SOCIALISTS.

THE LIBERALS, CHRISTIAN DEMOCRATS AND BONOMI'S OWN LABOR DEMOCRATS ARE ADOPTING A "DON'T ROCK THE BOAT" POLICY, WHILE THE LEFT WING, SUPPORTED BY ACTIONISTS, HAS BEEN CRITICISING THE PRESENT SET-UP ON THE GROUNDS THAT IT IS ENABLING THE MONARCHISTS AND CONSERVATIVES TO BUILD UP POWER.

THE GOVERNMENT ALSO IS CONSTANTLY UNDER ATTACK BY THE MONARCHISTS AND REPUBLICANS, WHO ARE NOT INCLUDED IN THE CABINET.

THE PRINCIPAL POINTS OF LEFT WING CRITICISM ARE DIRECTED AGAINST THE CARABINIERI AND THE ARMY, WHICH THEY VIEW AS A PROVING GROUND FOR THE MONARCHISTS, AND AGAINST OPERATION OF THE PURGE OF STATE OFFICES, WHICH THEY DECLARE TO BE INEFFECTUAL.

THE COMMUNIST MARIE SCOCCIMARRO, WHO IS IN CHARGE OF THE PURGE, HIMSELF PUBLICLY CRITICISED THE LAW IN A NEWSPAPER INTERVIEW. HE ASSERTED THAT OUT OF MORE THAN 1,000 RECOMMENDATIONS HE HAD MADE FOR THE DISMISSAL OF STATE EMPLOYEES LESS THAN ONE THIRD HAD BEEN GRANTED BY THE PURGE COMMISSIONS OF THE VARIOUS MINISTRIES.

TA1051PEW

THE RIGHT WING, WHILE ADMITTING THAT THE GRAVE PROBLEMS OF FOOD, TRANSPORT, PUBLIC ORDER AND THE PURGE X REMAIN UNSOLVED, HAS BEEN CHARGING SCOCCIMARRO WITH WANTING DICTATORIAL POWER IN ORDER THAT COMMUNISTS AND SOCIALISTS MAY ENTER EVERY STRATA OF GOVERNMENT.

NOV 25 1944

THE GENERAL BELIEF IS THAT THERE WILL BE NO MAJOR BLOW-UP, SUCH AS THE RESIGNATION OF BONOMI, BUT THAT A TECHNICAL RESHUFFLE MIGHT BE AGREED UPON, WITH THE MINISTERS WITHOUT PORTFOLIO PERHAPS BEING GIVEN PORTFOLIOS.

U.S. Liberator base, Italy, Nov. 24-(AP)-A bomber of the squadron which attacked the Munich railroad yards made this report: "Flak heavy and intense. Ice cream frozen."

It seems that Mess Sgt. James F. O'Mally, 175 Congress Ave., Portland, Me. had a Thanksgiving menu calling for 40 gallons of ice cream and no way to freeze it.

Remembering that bombers sometimes fly in 30 below zero weather at five mile altitudes at this season, he talked a crew into carrying the ice cream along to Munich. All the way, the crew anxiously checked results. Just before Lt. Arthur D. Devlin, Lake Placid, N. Y., called "bombs away," the waist gunner, Sgt. Joe C. Worrell, Charlotte, N. Ninth Battles Outside Koslar, West of Roer; Overruns Bourheim.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Nov. 25.—(AP) The American First army, pushing steadily toward the Cologne plain against furious and undiminished German opposition, had reached the edge of the bloody Hurtgen forest tonight and was under mounting robot-bomb fire from the Nazi defenders of the Ruhr.

The First army's troops fought within a few hundred yards of Groshau and a thousand yards of Kleinhau in the Hurtgen area and brought the town of Hurtgen under artillery fire, but still had not smashed their way completely out of the forest, reports to Supreme Allied headquarters said.

NOV 26 1944

Yanks Attack Koslar

On the First army's left flank to the north U. S. Ninth army units were engaged in heavy fighting outside Koslar just west of the Roer river, the last big natural barrier before the Rhine.

(A broadcast by the German news agency DNB's chief military commentator said Allied troops had scored a seven-mile advance east of Aachen. If true, this would place the Americans on the east side of the Roer. There was no Allied confirmation, however.)

In this heavy fighting east of Aachen, the greatest battle of the Western front, the Ninth overran Bourheim, two miles southwest of Julich and less than a mile from the Roer, today, while other elements of the First fought from house to house in Weisweiler, seven miles from a second Nazi Roer river strongpoint, Duren.

Far to the south, meanwhile, infantry of the American Seventh army tore through German lines on the north side of the corridor leading eastward to Strasbourg from the Saverne area and drove a new wedge to Weyersheim, eight miles north of Strasbourg and five miles west of the Rhine.

Fall Of Strasbourg Near

Strasbourg itself was virtually cleaned up with 10,000 prisoners in the bag, but the Germans were dug in at approaches to bridges over the Rhine in the city. However, the enemy was falling back in the great Alsace pocket as the Americans advanced through the Vosges mountain passes and the First French army pressed steadily from the south.

In the central sector of the front today, the U. S. Third army gained up to four and a half miles along its 60-mile line, lengthening the strip of German soil in its possession to 20 miles and wiping out a German salient on the Seventh army's north flank.

Good weather permitted airforces to join in the battle for the first time in three days. Thirteen hundred fighters and medium bombers of the Ninth airforce and Second tactical airforce made bombing, strafing and escort sorties on the Rhineland, some of them directed against retreating German columns.

The Seventh army's 44th and 79th infantry division were placed in a strong position to rip into the Germans on the northern side of the Strasbourg corridor when elements of the Third army, which had crossed the Saar, advanced, took Baerendorf and formed a junction with the Seventh army. Both the Third and Seventh armies made their advances against a succession of German counterattacks in which infantry was supported by tanks and artillery.

Cross Nied River

The Third army's 95th division crossed the Nied river against stiff resistance and gained four and a half miles northeastward along the Metz-Saarlautern railroad.

It was reported here, but not confirmed, that two more German-occupied fortresses of the Metz area, Fort Sommy and Fort Blaize, surrendered during the day to Third army elements.

The Seventh army's columns in the upper Vosges penetrated about five miles more through Schirmeck and the Saales pass. In the Belfort region, the French army contained sharp Nazi counterattacks.

In Eastern Holland, the British Second army reached the Maas, 15 miles north of the enemy's river stronghold at Venlo, and was attacking the defenses of Venlo.

Exploiting the Strasbourg breakthrough, the American 44th and 79th Infantry Divisions struck north of the Saverne gap despite continuing tank-supported counter-attacks and moved out along both sides of the Marne-Rhine Canal in the area of Mommenheim, thirteen miles northwest of Strasbourg.

NOV 26 1944

Rhine-Nied Neck turns southward to Strasbourg, but other routes ahead of the American spearhead lead to Bischweiler and Hagenau, twelve and sixteen miles north of Strasbourg and the Rhine crossings into Karlsruhe. At Mommenheim the Americans were ten miles west of Bischweiler.

The French were battling at close quarters with the Germans who, recovering from the surprise of the Strasbourg break-through, had dug in on the French side of the Rhine bridges and were fighting from pillboxes which the French themselves built before the war.

As the total number of prisoners taken in and around Strasbourg mounted to 5,000, elements of the 79th Division moving on eight miles north of Strasburg came within sight of the Rhine at Weyerscheim and Hoerdt. They were encountering little opposition, a late report said.

Supreme headquarters announced officially that reports yesterday that patrols had crossed the Rhine east of Strasbourg were without foundation.

Nazis Pinned to Rhine

Supreme headquarters had no definite information as to what percentage of the estimated 70,000 Germans pinned against the Rhine by the twin breakthroughs had got across the river.

It was known, however, that the 19th German army, taking advantage of the bad weather which held off Allied air power, was crossing rapidly by every means at its disposal.

The U. S. Seventh and the French First armies were cracking through the thin rearguard the Germans left in the Vosges to protect this withdrawal.

Seizing Bourgh-Bruehe, in the heart of the Saales pass, elements of the Third infantry division were about 26 miles west of the Rhine.

To the south, other forces driving through Ste. Marie pass were about the same distance from the Rhine after capturing Raves and Combrimont. A number of other towns fell to the onrushing armies.

Troops of the French First army in southern Alsace captured Rougemont-Le-Chateau, seven miles northeast of Belfort, after heavy fighting.

In the drive against the retreating German forces, the Allies already were through the main belt of minefields and now were encountering only those left hurriedly by the Germans.

In the heavy fighting east of Aachen, the U. S. Ninth army overran Bourheim, two miles southwest of the Roer river pillar of Julich and were less than a mile from the Roer. It was in this area that the Germans threw in furious counter-blows yesterday.

With the United States Third Army, Nov. 25 (A. P.).—American Third Army infantry has made a fresh penetration into Germany, cutting a half mile into the Reich five miles southwest of Merzig.

Fritz

London, Nov. 25 (A. P.).—American Ninth Army troops squeezed in tighter today on Julich—the Roer River bastion twenty-five miles from Cologne—and boosted their eight-day toll of German tanks to 125.

Farther south, First Army men pushed ahead 1,000 yards almost to the edge of gloomy Hurtgen Forest, which has been one of the bloodiest battlegrounds of the war. Other First Army units cleaned out the town of Putzlohn, north of Eschweiler, and fought house to house for Weisweiler. Fighter-bombers hammered at enemy troops and supply lines.

Warplanes helped in the Ninth Army push upon Julich.

The German High Command declared the German defensive battle in this area east of Aachen was nearing a climax. One Berlin broadcast termed the action "the greatest battle of the present war."

To the south, remaining Germans in Strasbourg had been backed into the dock area, and at last advices were clinging to a foothold on the western end of the main Rhine bridge. Supreme headquarters said reports that patrols had crossed the Rhine into Germany had been found to be without basis.

Pincers Closing on Vosges.

The Paris radio said French forces seeking to trap Germans in the Vosges Mountains between Strasbourg and Colmar were only eight miles apart, but there was no confirmation.

Ninth Army infantrymen seized Bourheim, 1,500 yards from the Roer River line and two miles southwest of Julich. They knocked out seven more tanks yesterday, for a total in this offensive of 125—as many as most German armored divisions now have.

Allied planes aided the Ninth Army push hitting German reserves along the Roer Valley during a few hours of clearing weather. Planes also supported American infantry battling northwest of Strasbourg against heavy German opposition.

Two divisions of American infantry broadened the Alsatian corridor and beat off a German counter-attack northwest of the Saverne Gap above Strasbourg.

The Supreme Headquarters communique reported steady progress toward clearing the enemy from the Saales Pass in the Vosges above Colmar, and off the slopes of the commanding, round-topped mountain called the Ballon d'Alsace, north of Belfort.

An admission that German lines in the central Vosges were taken back at several points came from the Berlin radio.

In the Mulhouse region between Colmar and Belfort the Nazis were resisting desperately, with isolated battles raging around a number of towns. The Germans clung to strongpoints and the French advance surged around and past them.

On the central portion of the western front Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's United States Third Army had won a crossing of the rain-swollen Saar, last big barrier to the Rhine, at a point twenty-six miles south of Saarbrucken.

To the north, a three-Army Allied assault team, made up of the American First and Ninth and the British Second, fought on foot-by-foot on the flooded flatlands of the Cologne Plain.

There an Allied staff officer described every creek crossing as almost an amphibious battle on the Western Front.

United States First Army troops fought their way house-by-house into the outskirts of Weisweiler, six and a half miles southwest of Julich, the Roer River stronghold barring the advance to Cologne, twenty-five miles away.

Bourheim, two miles southwest of Julich, was cleared completely of the Germans late yesterday, a front dispatch said.

British Second Army troops, after losing Hoven and yielding some ground below Beeck, north and east of Geilenkirchen, held firmly against waves of counter-attacking enemy troops and a hail of artillery fire, and clung firmly to the high ground overlooking Wurm.

Yanks Use More Tanks.

The German radio said that the Allied attack flared with new intensity today between Geilenkirchen and Julich, with the Americans throwing in heavy new tank formations at Gereonsweiler.

In southeastern Holland the British closing in on the Maas River citadel of Venlo advanced up to 3,000 yards through heavily mined mud flats. Typical of the resistance was one German section that resisted to the last man, who fell dead among his slain comrades.

British Take Maashees

British infantry captured Maashees, on the Maas, 15 miles north of Venlo, and seized the villages of Wanssum and Tienraij below Maashees. The Tommies advanced to within 2,000 yards of Grubbenvorst, 3½ miles north of Venlo.

Lieut. Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey's troops were fighting their way into the enemy's major perimeter of defenses before Venlo, and only a thin finger of Germans remained on the western bank of the Maas.

FOUR TRANSPORTS SUNK WITH LOSS OF 2,000 JAP TROOPS

Warplanes Smash Fourth Attempt to Reinforce Yamashita's Forces.

YANKS GAIN ON LEYTE

U. S. Seventh Division Drives Along Coastal Road Toward Ormoc.

GENERAL MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Sunday, Nov. 26—(AP) Deadly American fighter planes yesterday destroyed a four-transport convoy, carrying an estimated 2,000 Japanese troops, in smashing the fourth major attempt to reinforce Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita's hard-pressed troops on Leyte island.

It was the second Japanese effort in two days to run fresh troops to Leyte. Both convoys were destroyed with a loss of 5,500 Nipponese soldiers.

16 Transports Destroyed

American fliers, said today's communique, have sunk a total of 16 reinforcing transports — aggregating 65,000 tons—with 17,000 troops, plus 14 escorting warships.

Bomb-carrying Warhawks and Thunderbolts caught this latest convoy north of Cebu, shortly after it left port and when it was still some distance from Leyte.

Attacking at dusk, the fighters sank three transports of an undisclosed tonnage and left a fourth blazing from stem to stern. All troops and supplies aboard were believed lost.

A headquarters spokesman said no warships were reported as escorting the Cebu convoy, and there was only slight warship support for the troopships lost the previous day. It was unknown, however, whether this indicated that Japan is running short of escort vessels.

Aground, American 7th division troops broke up Japanese night attacks at Palanas, 11 miles south of Ormoc. The 7th is pushing slowly northward along the coastal road toward Ormoc.

Some 30 miles northward, elements of the 24th division cleared the Pinamopoan and Capoocan areas, on Carigara bay, of Japanese who infiltrated there to harass American rear areas.

Ground Situation Static

The ground situation in Leyte's Ormoc corridor was static, the communique said, American Doughboys cleared the Japanese from heights east of Ormoc road, and Yank artillery heavily pounded Japanese artillery positions.

Six more Japanese planes were destroyed during the assaults on the Leyte area.

American fighter planes destroyed three transports and a destroyer escort Friday, with the probable loss of 3,500 Japanese troops, in another fierce assault off Masbate island.

Previously, aircraft had smashed two Japanese reinforcement attempts in Ormoc bay.

American ground troops, who have occupied and pushed through blasted Limon, were assaulting Japanese strongpoints in nearby mountains.

The U. S. 32nd division drove south from Limon against enemy opposition deprived of some 6,000 Nipponese troops which were aboard a convoy destroyed off Masbate island, northwest of Leyte, Friday by Yank airmen.

(The Japanese-controlled Manila radio said 60 American carrier-borne planes hit Manila and nearby Clark field yesterday, and also reported attacks on Lipa and Batangas airdromes on southern Luzon island. The report, unconfirmed, said anti-aircraft guns brought down two of the planes.)

Seventeen Japanese vessels were destroyed or damaged including two destroyers sunk, in Allied air forays reported in yesterday's headquarters communique while 69 enemy planes were destroyed in the air and on the ground. This toll was taken in aerial strikes from Masbate to Celebes island and the Bismarck-Solomons area. The communique listed only four Allied planes lost.

Jap Airfield Bombed

Bombers smashed Japanese airfields and installations with 259 tons of explosives in the air attacks. The heaviest blow was delivered against the Bacolod airdrome on Negros island, west of Leyte, where 146 tons were dropped. One American bomber was lost there.

The American fighter-bomber attack on the enemy convoy off Masbate resulted in two of the three transports being sunk and the third set on fire and beached. The communique said 3,500 of the 6,000 soldiers aboard the vessels were killed, and that the escorting destroyer was sunk with all hands aboard.

Japanese losses from convoys attempting to reinforce their Leyte divisions total at least 15,000 men, the communique said.

The Nipponese made desperate attempts to put their planes over vital American installations on Leyte, losing 42 aircraft—35 shot down in air fights and seven more destroyed by anti-aircraft. Headquarters said "our own losses were very light."

Striking in the Borneo area, Allied planes sank a destroyer in Balabac strait and damaged a 7,500-ton freighter-transport in Brunei bay.

In a surprise attack on Macassar, Celebes Island, Allied bombers destroyed 23 enemy fighters and three bombers on the ground at Mandai airdrome, sank a 6,000-ton freighter in the harbor and damaged a gunboat and nine freighters. Three of the attacking planes were lost.

Yanks Smash Ahead Below Leyte River

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 25 (AP)—A four-ship convoy carrying reinforcements for the embattled Japanese on Leyte Island has been destroyed by American fighter planes and an estimated 3,500 Nipponese were killed or drowned, a communique announced today.

The Leyte-based planes, strafing at mast height and acting as dive-bombers, sank three transports and a destroyer escort, bringing to about 15,000 the number of Nipponese perishing in attempts to reach the island fighting scene.

Destroyer Sunk

In a bombing attack on the Celebes and Borneo an enemy destroyer and a transport were sunk and a gunboat and 11 freighters damaged, Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported. Twenty-six Japanese fighters and bombers were destroyed on the ground.

Improved weather conditions quickened the battle tempo and encouraged the Japanese to increased air activity, with the result that 42 enemy planes were shot down, 35 by American planes and seven by anti-aircraft batteries.

Dogfights ranged from eastern Leyte to the near-by Visayan Islands to the west as the Japanese pressed heavy and sustained attacks against American positions and installations. A few American planes were destroyed on their own airfields and others were damaged.

"Our own losses were very light," MacArthur said.

Leyte River Crossed

On the ground the Americans were doing equally well. A communique said that the 32d Infantry Division had crossed the Leyte river below Limon, which fell to the Yanks Wednesday, and was shoving southward. A counterattack by the Japanese 26th Division, "which has now been fully committed southwest of Limon" was repulsed, the communique reported.

The blow at the Japanese relief convoy was struck by Thunderbolt and Warhawk fighter planes off Masbate Island, about 20 miles north of Leyte. Two transports of 11,000 and 2,000 tons were sunk, along with the destroyer, and a third 6,000-ton transport was set ablaze and beached. All hands aboard the destroyer were reported to have perished.

American forces were systematically knocking out enemy strongpoints on Hill 1525 on the American east flank. On the Minoro area, south of Capoocan, Japanese units have been broken up into a series of small groups which are putting up a desperate fight, the communique reported.

In the wide-ranging air battles, Capt. Robert W. Aschenbrenner, of Lac du Flambeau, Wis., downed at least four Japanese to run his score to seven. At least three were credited to Capt. William Drier, of St. Louis, and Lieut. John Pietz, of Valley Stream, Long Island, and Lieut. Kenneth Hart, of Martinez, Cal., got three each.

Taken By Surprise

In the major air action south of the Philippines a flight of bomb-carrying P-38 fighters swept over Macassar in a surprise low-level attack Wednesday. They destroyed 36 Japanese planes on Mandai airdrome, sank a large freighter and a gunboat in the harbor, and damaged nine other cargo ships.

That night the Japanese made one of their heaviest raids on Morotai, United States air-base island 300 miles south of the Philippines. Nine attacking bombers dropped their loads accurately on American installations, causing some damage and casualties. One was shot down.

Berlin Admits Conquest Of Eastern Key To Budapest

London, Sunday, Nov. 26 (AP)—The German radio announced last night that Russian troops had pressed Axis forces back in Budapest's southern outskirts on the Danube river island of Csepei, had captured Hatvan, German anchor stronghold 25 miles northeast of the capital, and also conquered nearly all of Miskolc, Hungary's fifth city.

None of these enemy reports was confirmed by Moscow's brief communique, which, however, disclosed that Soviet troops had cut the Budapest-Hatvan highway with the capture of Kerekharaszt, two miles west of Hatvan.

Both Under Siege For Week

Both Hatvan and Miskolc, the latter 85 miles northeast of Budapest, have been under Red army siege for a week. Their fall not only would speed Russian encirclement of the eastern half of Budapest, but also accelerate Soviet attacks along roads leading to Austria and Czechoslovakia.

Axis reports placed the Russian invaders of Csepel Island within seven miles of the town of Csepel, which is on the southern municipal boundary of Budapest and the site of the big Weiss Manfred war plant and many city docks serving the capital. The Budapest radio station also is just north of Csepel, on the part of the island that juts into the city.

Villages Taken, Says Moscow

Moscow's bulletin told of the capture of five villages in Hungary, including Uregcsanalos, eight miles northeast of Miskolc, and Tarnaszentmaria, in the foothills of the Matra Mountains five miles west of besieged Eger. Tarnaszentmaria is only 18 miles from the Slovakian frontier.

Berlin said that Hatvan fell after seven violent Russian tank attacks. Once during the day the Germans threw the Russians out of the strategic town, but finally withdrew their forces west of Hatvan, a late German broadcast said.

Hatvan, described by Berlin as the key to all Axis defenses east of Budapest, is on the Budapest-Miskolc railway. A line leads northward to the Czechoslovakian border, 30 miles away.

1,200 Killed, Russians Say

A midnight Soviet bulletin said that Russian troops killed 1,200 Germans and Hungarians and captured 950 in cutting the Hatvan-Aszod link of the highway to Budapest. The supplementary communique said the severed route was one "of great importance" in enemy efforts to hold the approaches to Budapest.

Aszod is eight miles southwest of captured Kerekharaszt and is only 15 miles from the Danube's banks north of the capital. Likewise, a junction of roads leading to Slovakia and Austria, it is menaced by other Soviet units, who Friday took Bag, one mile to the southeast.

Miskolc was entered by three Russian divisions striking from the south and northeast after a terrific artillery barrage, and Berlin said German and Hungarian troops had nearly completed their evacuation of the seven-way junction only twenty-five miles from the Slovakian frontier.

Due south of Budapest the Germans said other units of Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's 2d Ukranian Army were within seven miles of the Hungarian capital, pressing the Germans and Hungarian defenders back on the invaded Danube River island of Csepel, site of important Axis war plants.

Red Army shock troops crossed the eastern arm of the Danube in rubber boats and landed on thirty-mile-long Csepel Island, whose northern tip juts almost to the center of Budapest. The Russians also built a bridge to the island from the east and have landed at least a division of infantry and tanks, Berlin said.

30. 24 — 20667

"It is expected that the Russian division which has landed on Csepel is going to use this island as a springboard for the final assault on Budapest," the German radio said.

"It is thought the Russians intend to collaborate with considerable Communist elements in the suburbs and in the capital itself."

This latter enemy statement appeared to bear out reports from neutral countries that Hungarian workers had been fighting the Germans inside Budapest.

Situation In Western Latvia

In western Latvia the Germans said their isolated divisions, estimated by Premier-Marshal Stalin as over 30, had achieved a defensive success thus far, but that the Russians now were using the formidable total of eight armies against them.

The Berlin news agency DNB quoted Major Martin Sommerfeld, German high command army spokesman, as saying the German bridgehead "has fully served its purpose to draw enemy armies away from East Prussia and to wear them down."

Not Confirmed By Moscow

Moscow has not yet confirmed this great winter offensive which Berlin said was six days old and in which Red army artillery after a brief pause had fired almost 200,000 rounds but failed to secure any decisive Russian gains.

Col. Ernst von Hammer, Berlin military commentator, said Axis troops at Miskolc had been driven out of all save the southwestern fringes of the city of 73,000, which is on the eastern edge of the Bukk Mountain range.

From Miskolc several highways run northward into Slovakia, and Soviet troops battling in that direction formed the southern arm of a pincers closing on Axis troops in easterr Czechoslovakia.

Russians Enter Magyar Town

London, Nov. 25 (AP)—The Russians have entered Miskolc, strategic rail hub and strong point in northeastern Hungary, the German Transocean News Agency said today.

The Germans said the Russians also had driven into Hatvan, another important transport center 28 miles northeast of Budapest, but were thrown out.

Town Being Evacuated

The German broadcast said the Russians penetrated Miskolc, 85 miles northeast of Budapest and 25 miles south of the Czechoslovak frontier, after an attack by three divisions, and that the Germans and Hungarians "almost completely evacuated the town" in the face of the onslaught.

"The defenders of Hatvan answered every attack with a counter-attack" in the bitter battle in Hungary, the broadcast said.

Berlin also declared that eight Russian divisions had made penetrations in a wave of assaults in the Courland region of Latvia.

Sea Escape Blocked

Soviet amphibious forces virtually had blocked any sea escape for 30 German divisions being squeezed against the Baltic by capture of the fortified Estonian island of Saare (Osel).

Saare, only 17 miles across the mouth of the gulf from Latvia, fell yesterday after a two-month struggle, and Red airmen sank four Nazi warships offshore and damaged four others, including a heavy cruiser, Moscow announced.

Gains In Latvia

Berlin declared the Russians had begun a huge new offensive against the German troops pocketed in Latvia, making gains of undisclosed depth along a 50-mile front between Lielauce, 70 miles east of the Baltic port of Liepaja, and Priekule, 20 miles from Liepaja.

Berlin said the Russians were using heavily reinforced tank, plane and artillery forces in an effort to crush the Latvian pocket and release hundreds of thousands of troops for a drive on East Prussia.

The Moscow bulletin said new gains were made by Red army units in eastern Czechoslovakia and Hungary. The Berlin radio acknowledged a German retreat in Slovakia, west of Ungvar.

Gen. Ivan Petrov's Fourth Ukraine Army troops yesterday seized nine localities on the twenty-five-mile front west of Ungvar, Moscow said, and with the capture of Monca, nine miles southwest of Ungvar, were within thirty-five miles of Kassa.

Inside the Hungarian frontier units of Marshal Rodio Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukraine Army continued pressure against Miskolc, Hungary's fifth largest city.

Berlin reported that Russian troops, crossing an eastern arm of the Danube below Budapest for a landing on narrow Csepel Island, had advanced four miles and reached Tokol, a town on the western shore of the island seven miles south of the Magyar capital.

Moscow has not confirmed this operation, but yesterday's communique said that Soviet troops fighting at the northern approaches of Budapest had captured the village of Bag, fifteen miles northeast of the capital.

2,000 American Planes Raid Oil Refineries In Germany

London, Nov. 25 (AP)—More than 2,000 American warplanes attacked the German oil center of Merseburg today for the second time in four days, spreading 3,000 tons of explosives on the sprawling Leuna synthetic refinery as well as on important fuel storage facilities at Bingen, 50 miles northwest of the Saar industrial area.

A synthetic oil plant at Lutzkendorf, ten miles north of Merseburg, also was attacked.

Only a dozen or so enemy fighters, including five or six speedy jets, were seen on the Merseburg mission and they promptly took cover in thick clouds over the targets.

So slight was enemy opposition, both from ground guns and planes, that many of the 1,000 Mustangs, Thunderbolts and Lightnings of the Eighth and Ninth Air Forces which escorted the armada of more than 1,000 heavy bombers strafed at tree-top level.

14th Attack On Leuna Plant

Preliminary reports said they blew up six locomotives and nine railway cars at Bingen, communications hub for Nazi troops being sent to defend the Saar, now under direct attack from Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's American Third Army.

On their way home they also shot up 11 locomotives and 16 railway cars, damaged two parked aircraft and destroyed two FW-44 training planes.

This was the 14th attack on the huge Leuna oil plant, which is two miles long and two thirds of a mile wide and normally produced 5,000 tons of oil a month.

It usually is one of the most strongly defended targets in Germany. On November 2 the Nazis sacrificed a record-breaking 134 fighters in combat attempting to protect it. Last Tuesday American pilots picked off 73 more enemy craft in another spectacular dogfight in the area.

RAF Runs Into Flak

Mighty bombers of the RAF ran into dense flak and many Nazi fighters today while attacking the railway yards at Theydt, 12 miles ahead of the front line at Geilenkirchen.

Clouds were so thick over Rheydt, the biggest rail junction in the Geilenkirchen area, that most of the bombing was done by instruments. Some crews said they saw bursts on the main rail line, and one formation went on to bomb the railway station at Erkelenz.

Flak was so thick that 11 out of 12 aircraft in one formation were damaged and one was shot down in flames over the target.

1000 PLANES BOMB LEUNA OIL PLANTS

London, Nov. 25 (A. P.).—More than 1,000 American heavy bombers, accompanied by an equal number of fighter escorts, bombed the Leuna synthetic oil refinery at Merseburg today—the second time in less than a week—with more than 3,000 tons of explosives. The Flying Fortresses and Liberators were accompanied by more than 1,000 Thunderbolts, Mustangs and Lightnings.

The great fleet of bombers and their guards against German interceptors streaked across the Channel through cold skies.

The Leuna plant, with capacity of 50,000 tons of oil a month, was the target of Tuesday's raid of 1,250 Flying Fortresses and Liberators and 1,100 fighters.

United States Strategic Air Force Headquarters said the bombers struck also at oil storage facilities and railroad yards at Bingen, west of Mainz. Mainz lies directly behind the sprawling Saar industrial area, now under attack from the American Third Army.

Planes From Italy Attack

Heavy bombers of the Strategic Air Force in Italy attacked targets in the Linz and Munich areas in Germany last night.

A small number of planes from Italy also bombed near Innsbruck in Austria.

KWAPINSKI REGIME

Peasant Party's Decision Not to Join Coalition

Mikolajczyk's Peasant Party Spurns Polish Cabinet Place

London, Nov. 25 (AP)—Poland's Peasant party brushed off today a plea for its participation in a new coalition cabinet, raising acute doubts that the tenacious but troubled exiled government could survive the gravest of its many crises.

Plain-spoken, peasant-born Stanislaw Mikolajczyk—long the hope and link for fraternal peace in Poland and for accord between his country and Soviet Russia—led his Peasant party out of the coalition today just a day after he resigned as Prime Minister.

The decision left Jan Kwapinski, Socialist Premier Designate, with the task of forming a government from among leaders of his own party and those of the Christian and National Democrats—many of whom have been labeled anti-Russian by Moscow.

Prospects of finding a workable group acceptable to the Soviet Union and to Britain and the United States were dim indeed, but the new Premier plunged into the task immediately with the hope of announcing a Cabinet this week end.

It appeared certain, however, that loss of Mikolajczyk and the Peasant party by the exiled government would strengthen the hand of the rival, Soviet-sponsored Polish National Liberation Committee in its bid for recognition as the administrative authority in liberated Poland.

Had Favored Mikolajczyk

It was this group which twice beckoned to Mikolajcyzk, obviously with the Kremlin's approval, with an invitation to return to liberated Lublin and carry on as its Prime Minister. Each time, he rejected the offer.

Although Polish circles here indignantly repudiated the idea, the possibility remained open that he would accept the offer now to realize his long-cherished dream of returning to his homeland to help in the reconstruction.

Mikolajczyk's resignation was based on his inability to win from the Cabinet an agreement to settle now the Polish-Russian territorial dispute on terms which would give the Soviet Union a frontier roughly along the Curzon Line, with the Poles receiving compensation in the west at the expense of Germany.

Seek Postponement

Meanwhile, if Kwapinski succeeds in forming a new government, its policy is expected to be based on an attempt to postpone final territorial settlements until victory—a policy from which Mikolajczyk shifted only a few months ago under British-American pressure.

The new crisis drew mixed reaction from London Poles. One group, long bitter in their allegation of Soviet "dictation," contended the development would crystallize the issue and force the United States and Britain to take more definite action. Some Poles expressed belief it would mean the collapse of the exiled government. Still others in government circles described themselves as "martyrs" to the cause of Polish independence.

DOUBT DEVELOPS OVER STRENGTH OF

Is Severe Blow.

London, Nov. 25 (A. P.).—Grave doubt developed today that Jan Kwapinski, newly named Premier of the Polish Government in Exile, would be able to form a regime strong enough to overcome the challenge to its authority by the Soviet-sponsored National Liberation Committee. Mr. Kwapinski succeeds Stanislaw Mikolajzyk, who resigned suddenly last night.

Leaders of Poland's Peasant Party, headed by Mr. Mikolajczyk, were authoritatively reported to have decided against joining in any coalition cabinet and their decision was expected to be a severe blow to Mr. Kwapinski.

The new premier was expected to go ahead with his attempts to form a government from members of the Socialist, Christian Democratic and National Democratic parties.

Mr. Mikolajczyk's resignation was a heavy blow to American and British efforts to settle the Russian-Polish dispute.

Acceptable to Both Groups.

He was the one man in the Polish Government in London acceptable to Moscow and the Soviet-recognized Polish Committee of National Liberation at Lublin. Both Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt openly had placed their entire hopes on him in settling the dispute threatening Allied unity.

Kwapinski is a member of a group that has been denounced by Moscow. The Polish President asked Mikolajczyk and members of his cabinet to remain at their posts until the appointment of a new cabinet.

While British circles awaited Kwapinski's first move, there was a feeling here—as expressed by the Laborite London Daily Herald—that "presumably he will refuse to carry on" the negotiations with Russia started by Mikolajczyk.

Moscow radio made no immediate comment on the Polish developments, merely reporting that Mikolajczyk had resigned.

The British press suggested that the crisis within the Polish Cabinet in London, smoldering ever since Mikolajczyk's visit to Moscow at the invitation of Churchill, was brought to a climax by the United States' reluctance to join a three-Power guaranty of the future frontiers of the new Poland.

U. S. Reaffirms Policy.

Washington, Nov. 25 (A. P.).—The United States today reaffirmed its policy of not guaranteeing specific frontiers in Europe.

In connection with the resignation of Stanislaw Mikolajczyk as Premier of Poland, the State Department was asked whether the United States had refused to guarantee Polish frontiers. It replied:

"The specific question of the guaranty of Polish frontiers by this Government was not and could not have been an issue since this Government's traditional policy of not guaranteeing specific frontiers in Europe is well known."

Under-Secretary of State Stettinius also was asked about Mr. Mikolajczyk's resignation. He replied he could not comment on the question of the internal organization of a friendly government. Mr. Stettinius added that the State Department was closely following developments in the Polish situation through its representatives abroad.

British Flyer Killed

London, Nov. 25 (AP)—Wing Commander Charles Sandford Wynne Eyton, 56, who crashed at St. John's, Newfoundland, in 1930 in an attempt to fly the Atlantic, has been killed in France, it was announced today. He was in the RAF.

V-Weapon Buries Many In Wreckage

London, Nov. 25 (AP)—A German V-bomb plummeting into a main street in southern England recently buried women and children beneath the blazing wreckage of two buildings, it was disclosed today. Several passengers in a passing bus were killed. Other bodies were recovered from beneath a car. A municipal office collapsed burying a number of workers.

Another V-bomb falling in southern England recently struck a row of working class houses, reducing one corner to ruin. At one time rescue parties searched the debris for five families.

An American army officer, in shirtsleeves, worked with British crewmen to extricate those trapped. At least five dead were recovered.

Arms Shortage In Germany Indicated

London, Nov. 25 (AP)—German documents captured by the Allies indicate that Hitler's widely spread armies face a shortage of ammunition.

A British Ministry of Economic Warfare spokesman said the Nazi documents, distributed to various German commanders in the East and West, listed types of ammunition and weapons that must be used sparingly.

No Tank Shortage

However, there was no indication of a shortage of tanks or heavy guns and the spokesman warned against any wishful beliefs that the German armies would crack up because of the ammunition situation.

"We know," the spokesman said, "the Germans have no ammunition for training purposes. Documents which have fallen into Allied hands show that the German armies are operating on a hand-to-mouth basis. . . .

Told To Leave Nothing

"According to the documents, German soldiers were instructed to leave nothing behind. They were ordered to take the weapons and ammunition from the bodies of their fallen comrades."

Allied air blows have hampered the transport of German ammunition to the front. The liberation of France and Belgium and parts of Holland and Yugoslavia has reduced ammunition and weapon-producing facilities.

Allied spokesmen estimate the reduction of Germany's war-weapon output at 30 per cent. or more.

Congress Group Reaches Britain

LONDON, Nov. 25 (AP)—A seventeen-member Congressional group from the House Military Affairs Committee arrived in London today to begin an inspection of supply areas and the battlefronts. The delegation includes Representative Clare Boothe Luce of Connecticut. Representative Matthew J. Merritt, Democrat, of New York, is acting chairman of the group.

Congressmen Abroad For War-Front Survey

London, Nov. 25 (AP)—Seventeen members of the United States House Military Affairs Committee arrived in Britain today.

They will see military establishments in this country and then go to the Continent for a more extensive inspection of battle fronts and military affairs in general.

War Industry In U. S. And Britain Contrasted

Leeds, England, Nov. 25 (AP)—Ernest Bevin, Labor Minister, said today a strong grip by the British Government had averted war production troubles here similar to those suffered in the United States.

"The press and many responsible people in industry in America assumed the war was over," he told a press conference.

He said he would rather go out of public life than release men to civilian trades and thereby risk leaving "a single soldier, airman or naval man short of a single weapon."

"If the British Government had not had a pretty good grip," Bevin said, "this clamor for release from the services might have had serious results here a few months ago. Everyone pestered my life out to release people from the army. If we had listened to them—well, Hitler might have beaten us yet."

A. J. GOULD JR. WINS THE DFC FOR HEROISM

U. S. EIGHTH AIR FORCE BOMBER BASE IN ENGLAND, Nov. 25 (AP)—To Lieut. Alan J. Gould Jr., 23, of New York City, has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross "for extraordinary achievement while serving as navigator of a B-17 Flying Fortress during combat bombing attacks over Nazi Europe."

Lieut. Gold, veteran of thirty-five heavy bombardment assaults, is a son of Alan J. Gould, assistant general manager of the Associated Press.

He has participated in attacks against many German centers as well as in support of ground troops in France and Germany.

Lieutenant Gould attended Cornell University and enlisted in the air forces in July, 1942, as a navigation cadet. He received his wings and commission as second lieutenant at Selman Field, La. He also attended the AAF Bombardier School at Roswell, N. M., and the Kingman (Ariz.) Aerial Gunnery School.

Soon after his arrival overseas last June, he was selected for training as a lead navigator of his squadron, and in September was promoted to first lieutenant. He later led the group formations on bombing attacks. He holds the Air Medal with three oak leaf clusters.

His wife, Mrs. Peggy Mordt Gould, and 6-month-old son, Alan Erik, live in Port Washington, N. Y.

PEACE UP TO U. S., LLOYD GEORGE SAYS

Our Abandonment of League Called Greatest Mistake After First World War

WANTS REICH DISARMED

Former Prime Minister Holds 'Good Germans' Would Welcome This Move

LLANYSTUMDWY, North Wales, Nov. 25 (AP)—David Lloyd George, Britain's Prime Minister in the first World War and doyen of her elder statesmen in this one, asserted in an interview today that the surest way of preventing a third world war would be "by America's acting differently this time."

In one of his rare press interviews—he has not talked thus for more than two years—Mr. Lloyd George, by his own expression still keen and vigorous, was asked what had been the Allies' greatest mistake in dealing with Germany after the first World War. Rather grimly and without hesitation, he replied:

"America. If they had kept to their bargains instead of backing out and leaving the League of Nations, things would have gone differently."

Sees Changes in United States

With the blunt earnestness of his reply, he suggested that American statesmanship and public opinion would hold a broad international outlook after peace had been made. He held that the United States commitments to a potential world community would perhaps be the great stabilizer.

On his own share in the prosecution of the gigantic war of a generation ago and in the shaping of destinies at Versailles, Mr. Lloyd George, who will be 82 years old next Jan. 17, was brusque and incisive: "If I had my part to do over again, I should do precisely the same—on the assumption that America would stand by her word."

He counseled the complete disarmament of Germany after this war, holding that it would be the only reliable means of exorcising the military spirit. He said that he thought this could be done without arousing mass resentment in Germany, intimating that it would show to what extent the German people had been dragooned into war by their masters. Good Germans, in his view, would welcome absolute disarmament, involuntary or otherwise.

Concerning post-war problems and probabilities generally, Mr. Lloyd George said that he did not wish to venture too far into the twilight haze of prophecy. Although agreeing that great changes were undoubtedly in store for most nations, he withheld comment on possible political, social and economic reorganizations of the future, except for brief reference to portents in his own land.

Praises Beveridge Plan

"There will be a big change in the unemployment situation in Great Britain, thanks to the Sir William Beveridge plan for long social security," he said. "I think this will be adopted rather than the Government's White Paper on social security, which doesn't go far enough."

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd George alternate between their farm home in Churt, Surrey, and their new Welsh estate in Ty Newydd, near Criccieth, only a short distance from Mr. Lloyd George's boyhood home. There he and his brother, William, were brought up by their uncle, a village cobbler.

Mr. Lloyd George appears to be very well, despite his bouts in recent years with colds and flu and other bronchial ailments. His color is that of health and his memory seems good, although the general impression over a considerable period is that of revery.

Once a week a doctor calls—not, Mrs. Lloyd George says, because anything is wrong, but simply to keep her husband fit. Daily, unless the weather is too unfavorable, the couple walk about the farm.

Mr. Lloyd George receives relatively few visitors and seldom appears publicly. Recently, however, he was honored at a mayoral luncheon at Caernarvon, where he said:

"Great men sometimes lose the reins and lose their heads. This time, let us hope that they will retain them and that, when victory is assured, they will sit down and reckon what the future is going to be for their own countries as well as for other lands."

Sacha Guitry Quitting Stage

Paris, Nov. 25 (AP)—Sacha Guitry, France's famous playwright and actor who was recently released from a prison camp at Drancy, says he is going to retire from the stage and spend the rest of his life writing books.

The 60-year-old Guitry is in a hospital recuperating from the effects of two months' imprisonment.

"I shall definitely retire from the theater and public life," he said from his hospital bed.

"Jealousy" Cause Of Rumors

He said he felt that jealousy of his exalted position in French drama was at the base of rumors which brought about his seizure.

Much of the anti-Vichy criticism of him centered around one of his books because of its title, "From Jeanne d'Arc to Philippe Petain." It covers 500 years of French history, and his friends said there was very little about Marshal Petain in it.

Says No Warrant Was Used

Guitry asserted he was arrested without warrant and without a basis for accusation.

"I do not want to criticize anybody or anything," he said. "I understand perfectly that we are living in time of revolution."

The author and actor said that on August 23 six men, armed with revolvers and machine guns, took him into custody.

"They were not police and they had no warrant," he said.

"One of my friends—actor Tristan Bernard—whom I had succeeded in freeing from German imprisonment, intervened in my favor, but was told my case had to be examined. As a result of that examination I was liberated."

If Guitry carries through his intention to retire from the stage, it will end one of the most brilliant careers in the French theater since that of Sarah Bernhardt. He has written more than 100 plays and for 40 years had been a favorite actor of the French public.

Guitry visited the United States last in 1927. He produced several plays and films during the German occupation of France.

IDENTITY DISKS SWITCHED

Soldiers' Practice in Europe Alarms Army Authorities

PARIS, Nov. 25 (AP)—The growing Army practice of going into battle wearing someone else's identity disk is giving Army authorities concern. "Switching dogtags" started as a superstition of some soldiers that they were less likely to run into danger if they wore a comrade's disk rather than their own. Many uninjured soldiers, consequently, have erroneously been reported as casualties.

'RED BALL' LINE ENDS

Improved French Railroads Obviate Truck Service

PARIS, Nov. 25 (AP)—The United States Army Transportation Corps announced today that the "red ball" highway system that sped ammunition, food and other supplies from the beachheads to the western fronts for eighty-one days would be discontinued because of improved rail facilities.

The one-way express route, organized three months ago from sections of a network of French roads, permitted trucks to deliver more than 500,000 tons of supplies. The system stretches 700 miles from the coast through Paris to eastern France. The trucks consumed 200,000 gallons of gasoline daily.

Transportation officers said truck outfits were being rushed to points farther east for service between railheads and the fronts.

Veteran Divisions in Line

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, Paris, Nov. 25 (AP)——Headquarters announced today that three seasoned divisions now were in action with the United States Ninth Army northeast of Aachen. They are the "Old Hell on Wheels" Second Armored Division, the Twenty-ninth Infantry Division that won fame on the Normandy beaches, and the Thirtieth Infantry, whose stand at Avranches shook the United States Third Army loose for its blitz through France.

GI Gets Bronze Star For Raid In Blackout

With the Fourth Armored Division, Nov. 25 (AP)—Sergt. Carroll A. Ewing, of South Bend, Ind., was awarded the Bronze Star for guiding the Fourth Division's eight-tank battalion on a 25-mile blackout march into enemy territory last September.

The citation said: "His meritorious achievement in accurately leading the column in the face of lurking enemy patrols, coupled with the darkness of blackout conditions, resulted in the battalion successfully reaching its objective."

Ewing, 26, has been overseas with the Fourth Division for a year.

Yanks Have Electricity, Thanks To The Germans

Strasbourg, Nov. 25 (AP)—United States and French forces tonight are holding all of Strasbourg except for a 600-yard deep German bridgehead around highway and railway bridges leading across the Rhine to Kehl.

Allied troops in the city have electricity—thanks to the Germans, who are clinging stubbornly to their bridgehead. The huge power plant serving Strasbourg is within the enemy-held area and the Germans haven't turned off the power yet.

Eight German artillery batteries also are in the bridgehead, and they have been lobbing shells into the Allied-held sectors all day.

Americans, French regulars and members of the FFI are rounding up prisoners, 10,000 of whom already have been taken, including 3,000 civilians.

FOE TRIES TO CUT SAVERNE CORRIDOR

Re-Formed Enemy Tank Units Thrown Into Strong Attack Toward Sarrebourg

Wilson

WITH THE AMERICAN SEVENTH ARMY, North of the Saverne Gap, France, Nov. 25 (AP)—The Germans, supported by about twenty Tiger and Panther tanks, were driving southwest in the direction of Sarrebourg today in an audacious attempt to smash across the Saverne Gap corridor.

The attack broke at 10 A.M. over the hill from this Forty-fourth Infantry Division command post, which is about five miles northeast of Sarrebourg.

Snyder

Lieut. Col. Herbert Styder of Cincinnati, Ohio, said anti-tank guns had knocked out seven of the Tigers and Panthers.

It is through the Saverne Gap that Seventh Army forces broke through to Strasbourg.

The assault was begun last night by a Panzer Division that had just left Paderborn, Germany, where it had been newly outfitted. Approximately 3,000 infantrymen were with it.

"For a long time the enemy has been withdrawing tank units and refitting them. We think this is the first one to be thrown back into combat," Colonel Snyder said.

Germans Regain Towns

The German drive has retaken a number of towns, incl[illegible]rattel, Drulinger, Veckersviller, and Eschwiller.

The attack is not being taken lightly.

The first break in the weather since Nov. 20 permitted Twelfth Tactical Air Force Thunderbolts to bomb and strafe the tanks and troop concentrations in what would become a pocket for the enemy, for to the northeast the doughboys have entered Bouxwiller and Imbacheim.

Further to the east, the Seventy-ninth Infantry Division pushed within sight of the Rhine eight miles north of Strasbourg against little opposition at Weyersheim and Hoerdt.

NOV 26 1944

Resistance in North Weaker

In the northern Vosges, troops of the 100th Infantry Division found a decided lessening of enemy resistance. They took Allarmont, eleven miles northeast of Raon-l'Etape in the Blaise River valley and seized Schirmeck in the Saales pass. The Third Infantry Division advanced east of the Bruche River and captured the road junction of Barenbach.

[Later reports from the front said American troops had pushed through the Saales Pass to reach Urmott while other American units had reached Climont, four miles east of Saales.]

French forces continued mopping-up operations in the vicinity of Mulhouse.

Brushing aside more than fifty Messerschmitts and Focke-Wulfs, the strongest German Air Force to come over the United States Seventh Army since its invasion of southern France, Thunderbolts and medium bombers knocked out two Rhine River pontoon bridges below Strasbourg and shot up an undetermined number of tanks north of Sarrebourg. The Allied pilots shot down eleven German planes and damaged nine.

Fresh Milk 'Mine'

Alsdorf, Germany, Nov. 24 (AP—Delayed)—This American-occupied German town has been getting its milk supply from a herd of 25 Holstein cows 1,200 feet under the ground.

Coal mining is the chief industry of Alsdorf, but right now the outstanding products of its principal mine are fresh milk, pork, veal and mutton.

The cows, some pigs and sheep were taken underground by the townspeople in late September to protect them from shellfire and bombs and from other Germans who wanted them. The town is still under intermittent shellfire and the animals remain safe and sound inside the mine.

GUNS AND GRENADES MARK BELGIAN RIOT

Police Clash With Brussels Crowd of 8,000 Opposing Pierlot's Government

CASUALTY FIGURES DIFFER

Resistance Leaders Counsel Against Use of Violence, but More Is Feared

Greene

BRUSSELS, Nov. 25 (AP)—Gunfire broke out and hand grenades were thrown today during a street demonstration against Premier Hubert Pierlot's Government.

F. de Many, Belgian resistance leader, said that four civilians had been killed and thirty-eight had been wounded in the clash with state police. The police, however, said that six gendarmes had been injured by fists and sticks—not by gunfire—and that more than twenty demonstrators had been wounded by the gunfire and hand grenades of their own group.

A police spokesman said that all the shots by the police had been fired into the air. He said that the outbreak had started when a demonstrator in an automobile threw a grenade, a policeman threw it back, and it landed in the crowd in front of the Chamber of Deputies.

The three-mile-long procession of demonstrators immediately changed its chant of "Down with Pierlot!" to "Pierlot the assassin!" and a melee began. About fifty shots were fired in thirty seconds. Then the crowd broke and left the wounded on the bloody street.

Most of the crowd went on to the Palais de Sport for a mass meeting. Persons estimated to number 8,000 crowded the hall, with a sprinkling of sober-faced policemen who kept their pistols under their coats.

M. de Many and other resistance leaders instructed the people at the mass meeting to go quietly to their homes when the meeting ended and to avoid further clashes in the tense city. The crowd broke up into small groups as it left the Palais de Sport and scattered without incident. But the police were frank in predicting more trouble later.

A wounded man was carried into the hall while the crowd yelled: "Pierlot the murderer!"

Many persons carried signs demanding butter and coal. Most wore armbands of the resistance movement.

M. Pierlot's Government has been under attack almost since the moment of Belgium's liberation. Previously there have been ominous but orderly demonstrations, notably against the Government's program to disarm citizens who participated in the fight against the Germans.

FOUR ARE KILLED AND 38 WOUNDED IN BRUSSELS RIOT

Belgian State Police Fire on Crowd Demonstrating Against Pierlot Regime.

Greene

Brussels, Nov. 25 (A. P.)—Four civilians were killed today and thirty-eight were wounded in clashes between demonstrators against the government of Premier Hubert Pierlot and the black-helmeted State police, a leader of the Belgian resistance movement announced tonight. This spokesman was F. Demany.

Shooting and fist-fighting broke out at the head of a parade in front of the Chamber of Deputies and M. Pierlot's office in the Rue de la Loi. The Pierlot Government has demanded that all members of the Belgian Resistance groups surrender their weapons, saying that if they desired they might join the regular army individually.

First reports were that eight persons were shot, among them two gendarmes and a Brussels policeman.

Word of the clash spread quickly along the marching line, which probably was three miles long. Although the police had not confirmed that any one was killed, the marchers quickly changed their chant from "Down with Pierlot" to "Pierlot assassin."

Charge Grenades Were Thrown.

Some reports said that three persons were killed, two of them women, and that seven others were badly wounded.

The crowd was marching to a mass meeting at the Palais de Sport and clamoring for Pierlot's resignation when it stormed through police cordons stretched across the street. It had surged to within fifty yards of the Chamber of Deputies when a series of shots rang out.

A spokesman for the demonstrators said they were entirely unarmed, but the police declared the marchers threw hand grenades and touched off the clash.

White-helmeted Belgian gendarmes reluctantly gave way when the demonstrators broke through the first cordon. They quickly reformed farther down the street near the Government buildings.

When the crowds burst through the second cordon and explosions were heard the gendarmes brought their pistols and rifles into action, firing first into the air.

Then they opened up at the legs of the demonstrators. Approximately fifty shots were fired in the clash, which lasted about thirty seconds. Then the demonstrators broke and ran, leaving their fallen comrades on the bloody street.

Meanwhile columns of other demonstrators were marching through the streets of Brussels, converging on the Palais de Sport, the capital city's Madison Square Garden.

The chant, "Pierlot, assassin," swelled to a thunderous crescendo just before the meeting began, with the crowd stamping its feet and shouting for the resignation of the Premier.

It was estimated that 8,000 persons were crowded into the hall, with a sprinkling of sober faced gendarmes armed with pistols concealed under their great coats.

NOV 26 1944

One wounded man, his legs bound in bloody bandages, was carried into the hall by four comrades amid roars of "Pierlot, murderer."

The demonstrators carried banners with huge crimson letters demanding "butter—coal." Many of them wore uniforms. A few were Belgian Army officers, but most of them wore only the armbands of the Belgian resistance movement.

Police expected further demonstrations tonight and predicted more trouble.

BRITISH GAIN NEAR FAENZA

Assemble Armor On River Back Across From City

Norstad

Rome, Nov. 25 (AP)—British armor and infantry moved up to the east bank of the River Lamone today in preparation for an assault across the stream on the strategic Po Valley town of Faenza after giving the veteran Nazi 26th Panzer Division one of the sharpest of the many beatings it has received in Italy.

British Eighth Army units already were in Borgo Durbecco, a suburban village across the swollen river from Faenza. The city, which had a pre-war population of 25,000, is one of the major goals of the British thrust along Highway 9 at the edge of the Po plain. It is 29 miles southeast of Bologna.

Poles Make Sizable Gains

Polish units of the Eighth Army, swinging up south of Faenza, scored considerable gains in overrunning two heights commanding German positions south of the Marzeno river.

More than 300 Germans out of a force that tried to shove the British back into the Cosina were taken prisoner, and the rest were forced to withdraw.

Then one British column drove straight up Highway 9—which runs from the Adriatic coast to Bologna—into the suburb of Borgo Durbecco.

Corleto Reached

Another, planting a roadblock on Highway 9, thrust on about a mile northeast to Corleto, which is four miles east of Faenza.

Meanwhile, the Poles coming up on the south cleared the enemy from all the east bank of the Samogia river up to a point where it joins the Marzeno, then crossed it west of Monte Fortino, which is five and a half miles south of Faenza.

Fifth-Army Front Quiet

In their drive the Poles occupied Monte Chiesuola while other units took Monte Castellaccio, two high positions overlooking ground south of the Marzeno river.

To the west, the Germans sent numerous patrols into the lines of the United States Fifth Army. There were numerous clashes, but little change in the general positions.

It was announced that the Brazilian Expeditionary Force, deployed on the western flank in Italy, had lost more than 125 men killed, wounded or missing since it went into action last August.

BRITISH REACH FAENZA SUBURBS

Rome, Nov. 25 (A. P.).—Armored British patrols have reached a suburb of Faenza and haave forced the Germans to withdraw from their positions along the Cosina River, four miles southeast of the Bologna-Rimini highway town, Allied Headquarters announced today.

Fanning out from the Cosina River bridgehead, one British force cut to the northeast, put a block on Highway 9 and pressed on, reaching Corleto. A second thrust moved northwest along Highway 9 and reached the Faenza suburb of Borgo Durbecco.

A military spokesman said that this autumn had been the wettest on record in Italy, and that most of the fronts were quagmires.

4,500 Italians Back From Greece

ROME, Nov. 25 (AP)—The first Italian soldiers repatriated from Greece, 4,500 officers and men, have been landed at a port in southern Italy, it was announced today.

Brazilian Losses in Italy 125

BRAZILIAN HEADQUARTERS, in Italy, Nov. 25 (AP)—More than 125 Brazilians have been killed or wounded or are missing since Brazilian forces went into action in Italy last summer. The dead total forty-two. The Brazilian expeditionary Force has been a part of the Fifth Army for three months.

Hansa Torpedoed, Some Believe

Stockholm, Nov. 25 (AP)—The newspaper Expressen said today opinion was developing that the Swedish steamer Hansa, which sunk off Gotland yesterday with a loss of almost 100 lives, had been torpedoed.

However, it emphasized that the cause for the disaster was not officially announced and the Swedish press in general took the view that the Hansa struck a drifting mine in the early morning darkness.

Proclaimed War Zone

"In naval and military circles it is said that foreign submarines were observed off Gotland a few days ago," the Expressen said.

Germany recently proclaimed the Baltic Sea and the Gulf of Bothnia a war zone, but Swedish shipping still is delivering cargoes to Finland and to Leningrad, the Stockholm press reported.

The Hansa sinking and Nazi atrocities in northern Norway and Finland have whipped up Swedish public opinion against Germany. The press has demanded steps "which can both be heard and understood in Berlin."

Responsible Swedish opinion, however, was that Sweden could better aid Finland and Norway by continuing present relations with the Nazis.

"The time has now come to reduce Swedish-German diplomatic relations to a minimum, corresponding with the already limited commercial ties with the Herrenvolk," Expressen said.

Virtual Newspaper War

For the last two weeks a virtual German-Swedish newspaper war has been raging as a result of a series of border incidents in which the Germans were accused of stealing Swedish hay and pursuing fleeing Norwegian refugees into Sweden.

The Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet, once pro-German in its editorial policy, now is demanding stern action toward the Reich to "regain our rights as an independent state."

16 Arrested In Raids At Palestine Port

Jerusalem, Nov. 25 (AP)—An official statement announced that 16 persons known or suspected to be members of a national military organization were arrested in two raids at the Palestine port of Haifa today.

NOV 26 1944

(The military organization involved was not identified by name. However, the Stern gang, a group of extreme Jewish nationalists, has been under investigation since the assassination of Lord Moyne, British Minister of State resident in the Middle East, in Cairo, November 6.

(British Palestine police charged that the two men who shot and killed Lord Moyne and his chauffeur were Stern gangsters. Prime Minister Churchill warned the Jews of Palestine and the world in a House of Commons address last week to purge terrorist gangs to protect the future of Zionism.)

200 Arrested In Romania

Bucharest, Nov. 24 (AP—Delayed)—Two hundred Nazi Legionnaire leaders, among them university professors, attorneys, officials and writers, were arrested in Bucharest today and sent to concentration camps.

BALKAN UNION PLAN BACKED

Tito Leaves Way For Bulgaria To Join Federation

Moscow, Nov. 25 (AP)—A Balkan federation of South Slavs, embracing an area much wider than the present Yugoslavia, appeared today to be more than a theoretical topic as Dr. Ivan Subasic, Premier of the exiled Yugoslav Government, returned to Belgrade to help Marshal Tito form a unified government with Soviet Russia's blessing.

Plans drafted previously in Belgrade, under which it is understood that Tito will assume the premiership of a federalized Yugoslavia with Subasic and other ministers in the present royal Government as collaborators, now have the Kremlin's friendly approval. British assent is regarded as a foregone conclusion.

Pledge Autonomous Rights

Changes in the constitutional character of Yugoslavia guaranteeing considerable autonomous rights to Croatia, Serbia, Slovenia and other former provinces within a federation are being prepared by Tito's National Liberation movement for the post-war period.

No one well acquainted with the political views of many of Tito's supporters considers that King Peter has a good chance of remaining King of Yugoslavia for very long.

Spared the prolonged dissension that has been Poland's fate, and sharing Czechoslovakia's fortune of being on cordial terms with the major Allies both in the east and west, the new Belgrade Government about to be born may become the most important in Southeastern Europe.

To Link Dissident Races

A federation system, in the eyes of influential Yugoslavs, is a dynamic political apparatus, offering the best possibility in history of bringing together dissident races claiming Slavic origin.

In Tito's National Liberation movement there is widespread belief that a federation of South Slavs should be open to Bulgarians if they wish it.

Frankly, post-war inclusion of Bulgaria in a federation is described as a natural prospect.

Tito himself said the new federated Yugoslavia would establish a close working alliance with a "fraternal Bulgaria," seeking to prevent forever the conflicts of the Balkans. His declaration, quoted from the Bulgarian paper, Workers' Cause, was carried at length in the Soviet press today.

Chance To Clean Slate

Tito has given Bulgaria a chance to clean a slate soiled by injustices committed during the occupation of southern Serbia. At present six Bulgarian divisions are fighting alongside the National Liberation army against Nazis withdrawing from the Balkans.

Tito also has taken steps to erase Croat separation, having offered amnesty to troops of that Nazi puppet state if they will join the National Liberation cause and have not perpetrated war crimes personally. It was reported here that 60,000 of these puppet troops already had accepted his offer, leaving barely 20,000 on the Nazi side.

Besides a possible federation with Bulgaria, many of Tito's adherents are looking for other developments in the immediate post-war period.

SAYS TITO FAVORS BULGARIAN TIE-UP

Moscow, Nov. 25 (A. P.)—The Bulgarian newspaper Workers' Cause quoted Marshal Tito today as saying the new federated Yugoslavia would establish a close working alliance with "fraternal Bulgaria" in seeking to prevent Balkan conflicts. The statement, given to the newspaper's Belgrade correspondent, was quoted at length in the Soviet press.

Tito was quoted as saying the new Yugoslavia would consist of the following federated units: Serbia, Croatia, Slovenia, Macedonia, Bosnia, Montenegro and Herzegovina, with some provinces probably receiving autonomy within a federal unit.

He said that the federation would be headed by a united Government, with each unit having its own national government. Organization in Yugoslavia after the war would be achieved, he asserted, by a constitutional convention to which the people will send duly elected delegates.

"The new federation," the article quoted the Yugoslav leader, "will do its best to establish close co-operation with the neighboring Balkan countries, and first of all with Bulgaria. Such co-operation will guarantee no repetition of Balkan conflicts."

Dr. Ivan Subasic, Premier of the exiled Yugoslav Government, and his delegation left Moscow last night for Yugoslavia, after receiving the Soviet Union's indorsement of an agreement Dr. Subasic made with Marshal Tito for establishing a unified government at Belgrade.

"Constructive Factor"

An official statement said Russia considered a union of the Royal Yugoslav Government and Tito's National Liberation Committee "a positive and constructive factor" in reaching victory and securing a European peace.

Tito is certain to be Premier, while Subasic and virtually all his present Ministers will receive important posts in the new Government, a high Yugoslav source said.

Constitutional changes in the Yugoslav state will be submitted to a vote of the people later, the Yugoslav source said. This was taken to mean that elimination of the monarchy, favored by Tito's Partisans, would not be undertaken during wartime.

VICTORY NEAR, SMUTS SAYS

Premier Asserts South Africans Will Fly in Far East War

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, Nov. 25 (AP)—Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, military strategist as well as statesman, told South Africans today that "victory is in sight" and "the end cannot be long delayed."

The 74-year-old Premier, opening a "Speedy Victory" Fair, asserted that some South African air force squadrons would be sent to the Far East for the war against Japan and South African industry would be called on to make additional contributions toward prosecution of this phase of the world conflict.

4 Bhama Strong Points Fall

Southeast Asia Headquarters, Ceylon, Nov. 25 (AP)—Chinese troops have seized four more strong points at Bhamo, last major Japanese barrier to the reopening of the Burma road in northern Burma, a communique announced today.

Minor gains were scored on the right flank by the British 36th Division moving down through central Burma, but they had run up against stout opposition.

A stiffening of resistance also was reported in western Burma, where East African forces pushed to within 12½ miles of the enemy base of Kalewa.

Chinese Expand Wedge 'n Bhamo Defenses

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 25 (AP)—Chinese troops have taken four more strongpoints in Bhamo, North Burma stronghold, the Southeast Asia command announced today.

A communique said elements of the 38th Chinese Division enlarged the wedge in the Japanese defenses north of the Bhamo airstrip, while other gains were made in the southern sector of the town.

Bhamo has been encircled for two weeks.

Asks U. S. Arbitrate in India

BOMBAY, India, Nov. 25 (AP).—A suggestion that the United States and Canada provide an arbitration court for settlement of India's Moslem-Hindu political question was made today by Chakravarthi Rajagopalachari, former All-India Congress president. He appealed also to Britain to renew efforts to break the deadlock.

NEW JAP DRIVE IS INDICATED

Fighting In China Points At Burma Road Town

Chungking, Nov. 25 (AP)—Active Japanese patrolling was reported today west of Hwaiyuanchen, some 185 miles southeast of Kweiyang, amid indications that the enemy might be planning to drive from three directions on that Kweichow province capital in a strategic position on the Burma road.

The Chinese high command claimed the Japanese were thrown back northwest of Kungsheng, 40 miles northwest of Kweilin, from which some quarters believe the second drive might begin.

The third, if it develops, would be from Paoching, west of Hengyang in Hunan province and some 290 miles northeast of Kweiyang.

NOV 26 1944

Expects Yungning Thrust

An army spokesman said yesterday the Japanese in Kwangsi province were more likely to push south on Yungning (Nanning) than to swing northwest toward Kweichow. The high command made no mention of further activity in that quarter.

The Japanese plausibly laid claim to the capture of Pinyang, on the Liuchow-Yungning highway less than 50 miles from Yungning, by forces which had slashed halfway through Kwangsi province from Kwangtung.

[Tokyo radio claimed the Japanese now were only seven miles from Yungning and its fall was imminent.]

2 Alternative Routes

Even should Kweiyang be lost, Chungking would not be isolated, since two alternative routes exist to the capital, which lies more than 200 miles north of Kweiyang.

One of these is as good as the route through Kweiyang, and the other curves farther west, and could be made serviceable with comparatively easy improvement.

If the Japanese took Kweiyang they would be in a good position to cripple various hinterland air bases and could conceivably advance on the southwest into Yunnan province, through which the Burma road runs.

Loss Of Rail Town Hinted By Chinese

Chungking, Nov. 25 (AP)—Loss of the Kwangsi-Kweichow railroad town of Hwaiyuanchen, 50 miles west of fallen Liuchow, to Japanese troops was strongly indicated today with an announcement by the Chinese high command of both Chinese and Japanese patrol actions west of the town.

Yesterday's American air force communique said Hwaiyuanchen had been bombed repeatedly by American planes, but a Chinese army spokesman insisted it was still in Chinese hands.

The high command said the Chinese threw back another enemy force northwest of Kungsheng, 40 miles northwest of Kweilin, from which the Japanese apparently were uncorking another drive on Kweichow province. If this should materialize, it would supplement the main thrust along the railroad from Liuchow and another from Paoching.

Hankow Waterfront, Samah Bay Bombed

Chungking, Nov. 25 (AP)—Liberators of the United States 14th Air Force bombed the Hankow waterfront area and Samah Bay installations on Hainan Island last night, a communique from Maj. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer's headquarters announced today.

Other planes raided the Hengyang and Paoching airfields, damaging or destroying planes, buildings and supplies.

Japs Admit Damage

A Domei dispatch broadcast from Tokyo said Hankow, China, was attacked by American B-24s and B-25s last night and that "some military installations were slightly damaged."

The report said "considerable damage was caused to non-military installations" in the Japanese-held Yangtze river city.

30-24— 20671

Chinese Hail Raid on Tokyo

Chungking, Nov. 25 (A. P.).—The Saipan-based American Superfortress raid on Tokyo yesterday was hailed by the Chinese press today as "the beginning of the battle for Tokyo."

The newspaper Ta Kung Pao said the blow might make the Japanese high command divert more military weight to home defense and relieve pressure against the Chinese mainland.

Nanning Fall Held Near

London, Nov. 25 (AP)—The Tokyo radio said today that Japanese units which occupied Pinyang, in Kwangsi province, now are less than seven miles north of Yungning (Nanning), and its fall was imminent. The broadcast said that since September 14 the Chinese had lost 12,500 killed and 16,100 captured in the Kwangsi province offensive.

B-29 CHIEF SURVEYS BOMBING OF TOKYO

Mission Profitable but 'Not Perfect,' Says Gen. Hansell —One Plane Lost Over City

B-29 HEADQUARTERS ON SAIPAN, the Marianas, Nov. 25 (AP)—The Superfortress men of Saipan today counted their raid on Tokyo a successful first move for an aerial knockout of war industry in the Japanese homeland.

The raid did not come up to expectations so far as results were concerned, but on the whole was profitable, Brig. Gen. Haywood Hansell Jr., base commander, told newspaper men. Clouds prevented some of the B-29's from finding their designated targets, but only four of them failed to find worthwhile objects of attack.

General Hansell said that one of the "dozens" of Superfortresses that participated was brought down by enemy action over Tokyo and another failed to return and was presumed lost from unknown causes.

[Tokyo claimed there were seventy Superfortresses in the raid and that five were brought down and nine damaged.]

Reconnaissance photographs taken a few hours after the attack showed great fires still burning in the central Tokyo area.

The Americans claimed only four enemy fighters shot down for sure but said ten or more others may have been destroyed or damaged. The Japanese admitted losing seven defending planes.

Confident on Future

General Hansell said he was convinced that in future attacks the B-29's could "take care of themselves and do a good job."

Returning American airmen disclosed that a new type of two-engined fighter bore the burden of the Tokyo defense. They said this fighter had terrific speed and was a "slick job all around." Anti-aircraft fire was light, the men said, except in the area of the Imperial Palace.

One of the B-29's came home on two engines and several others limped in on three. Some of them landed at Guam, 150 miles south of here. The round trip from Saipan to Tokyo is about 3,000 miles.

The plane lost over Tokyo was attacked by a Japanese fighter. Either the fighter was out of control or the Japanese pilot knew he was doomed because the plane slammed into the tail of the unlucky B-29 and it crashed into the water east of Japan. Apparently none of the crew got out, General Hansell said.

Reports today said a couple of life rafts, possibly bearing survivors of the missing B-29, had been sighted and a destroyer is investigating.

"I think we caught the Jap flat-footed," General Hansell said, "but for reasons beyond my understanding. I imagine there will be a slight shift in the Fighter Command at Tokyo today.

"By and large, we can only be pleased with the mission as a whole. It wasn't perfect nor as good as we expected. It is a mistake to assume an attitude of overconfidence. Nevertheless I am confident we can take care of ourselves and do a good job."

Tokyo B-29 Raid Held Not Up To Expectations

Twenty-First United States Bomber Command, Saipan, Nov. 25 (AP—Via Navy Radio)—The first Superfortress raid on Tokyo Thursday (United States time) obviously hurt Japan, but even so it didn't come up to expectations, Brig. Gen. Haywood Hansell, Jr., base commander, said today.

The first formations over the enemy capital had clear weather and did a good job, Hansell told a press conference, but later planes ran into a thick cloud cover.

Despite that handicap, Hansell added, only four of the "dozens" of B-29's which participated (Tokyo said there were 70) failed to hit worth-while targets.

Fires Still Burning

Reconnaissance photographs taken several hours after the raid showed fires still burning in the enemy capital and smoke was rising to great heights.

Hansell disclosed that of the two Superforts lost on the raid only one went down in enemy action. The other failed to return and was presumed lost, for reasons unknown.

The plane lost over Tokyo was attacked by a Japanese Tony (fighter). Either the Tony was out of control or the Japanese pilot knew he was doomed, because the plane slammed into the tail of the unlucky B-29 and it crashed into the water east of Japan. Apparently none of the crew got out, Hansell said.

NOV 26 1944

Reports today said a couple of life rafts, possibly bearing survivors of the missing B-29, had been sighted and a destroyer was investigating.

Hansell declined to estimate the number of enemy planes brought down because crew reports were necessarily confused and hard to assess, but at least four Japanese aircraft were known to have been bagged and ten or more others might have been shot down or damaged.

"I think we caught the Jap flat-footed," Hansell said, "but for reasons beyond my understanding. I imagine there will be a slight shift in the fighter command at Tokyo today."

Some Land in Guam

One of the B-29's came back to Saipan on only two of its four engines and several landed with only three working. Others came down at Guam, 150 miles south of here. The Guam landings were not explained. Guam is even farther from Tokyo than Saipan. The round trip from here to Tokyo is about 3,000 miles.

"By the large," Hansell said, "we can only be pleased with the mission as a whole. It wasn't perfect nor as good as we expected. It is a mistake to assume an attitude of overconfidence. Nevertheless I am confident we can take care of ourselves and do a good job."

The Superfort raid, widely hailed as the beginning of a campaign to knock out Japan's war plants, was the first on Tokyo since April 18, 1942, when carrier-based B-25's under command of Lieut. Gen. James Doolittle raked the enemy capital.

Homes For B-29 Flyers Erected In Canefields

United States 21st Bomber Command, Saipan, Nov. 25 (Via Navy Radio) (AP)—When a large force of American Superfortresses took off for the Tokyo raid from Saipan Island for the first time they were cheered by several thousand enlisted men who, within three months, had fashioned a home for themselves and the flight crews in stinking, fly-infested Japanese canefields.

The home-making of the 21st Bomber Command started in mid-August when two service units pitched their pup tents in the mud as tropical rain beat down on them. The ground echelons of other service units, combat units and headquarters units followed them in.

Airdrome Started First

Two months earlier aviation engineers had started the building of a Superfortress airdrome.

Nineteen days before flight echelons were due Col. Byron E. Brugge, of Tampa, Fla., asked the headquarters personnel to build 19 Quonsett huts. They were finished within 19 days.

American ingenuity overcame many difficulties. Staff Sergeant Constantine Ellis, of Clear Lake, S. D., made a wind-driven washing machine from parts of a wrecked Japanese bomber.

Baltimorean Makes Oven

Enlisted men of two mobile repair units utilized Japanese railway freight cars and assorted battlefield scrap iron parts from disabled army amphtracs to build movable motor mounts for servicing B-29s.

Salvaging a Japanese motor wiring shaft and the mountings, Corporal Luther H. Burley, of Tacoma, Wash., built a circular buzzsaw for a carpenter shop operated by Staff Sergeant Howard L. Barton, of Luverne, Iowa.

Mess Sergeant Frederick Johnson, of 620 North Brice st., Baltimore, Md., made an oven out of scrap Japanese materials.

Superfortress Attack on Tokyo Preceded By Diversionary Bombing of the Bonins

PEARL HARBOR, Nov. 25 (AP)—Japanese bases in the Bonin Islands—along the B-29 route from Saipan to Tokyo—were heavily hit by Seventh United States Air Force bombers both before and after the Superfortresses had made their first strike against the Japanese capital, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz disclosed today.

In a communiqué the admiral also reported that a Japanese reconnaissance plane, snooping over Saipan yesterday as the B-29's were returning from their attack on war industries in Tokyo, had been shot down by an Army fighter pilot.

The Seventh Air Force bombers struck Chichi and Haha islands shipping and dock installations in the Bonins Wednesday. Chichi was the target of another strike Friday.

Liberator bombers attacked Marcus Island Friday. They hit that small outpost 1,000 miles southeast of Tokyo while the "Superforts" were on their way back from the Japanese capital.

The communiqué reported a two-day series of hard-hitting strikes by Marine and Army fighter-bombers on the Pala Islands, in the western Carolines and against Yap. These raids were carried out Wednesday and Friday. Targets included Arakabesan and Babelthuap, in the Palaus.

ARTIFICIAL SMOKE AIDS U. S. LANDINGS

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 25—(AP) Artificial smoke now helps to shield American landing forces against enemy air attacks and enemy gunfire from shore, the Navy disclosed today.

It has served primarily in the Pacific as a shield for anchored ships under night aerial attack and also has protected them from shore based artillery. It has screened assault parties during landings and has helped to keep minesweeping operations hidden from the enemy, a fleet press announcement said.

More commonly, artificial smoke is used in maneuvers at sea. Originally it was brought into use mainly for its value in concealing surface ships against enemy war vessels and planes.

After months of experimentation, it was used in amphibious operations for the first time at Saipan. There it met with "considerable success," the announcement said. During 20 successive night attacks there by Japanese bombers and fighters not a single enemy plane could penetrate the artificial smoke blanket to bomb accurately the American transports and auxiliary craft below.

One Japanese plane dived through the smoke screen but crashed, the fleet statement said. It added that artificial smoke probably would play an increasingly important part in helping American forces to probe deeper into Japanese territory.

3,000-Foot Gun Base

At An Artillery Post In Leyte Mountains, P. I., Nov. 24 (AP—Delayed)—Through storms, mud and jungle an American artillery unit has moved its big guns atop a 3,000-foot ridge of Leyte's mountainous backbone in one of the most amazing feats of the Philippine campaign.

NOV 26 1944

From its new vantage point atop the mist-wrapped mountains the artillerymen are dropping heavy shells on the Japanese across the mountains in the Ormoc pocket.

Their fire is devastating. The second salvo fired landed squarely on the target at the guns' maximum range.

"When I walked up here for the first time, if anyone had told me I would have a battery here I would have told them they were crazy," said Lieut. Col. S. K. Yarbrough, of Gunterville, Ala.

Sprague Finds Publicity For Air Aces Is Harmful

Admiral Sees Teamwork Hurt; Stars Don't Last Long

PEARL HARBOR, Nov. 25 (AP).—Rear Admiral Thomas L. Sprague believes publicity for aviation's aces "disrupts teamwork" and leads to "a decay of morale."

Admiral Sprague, who commanded a force of sixteen escort carriers in the second battle of the Philippine Sea, told a press conference: "Very few aces are still alive. Sooner or later that fellow (an ace) is going to get shot down."

"The thing about aviation," he said, "particularly naval aviation, that is important is the team spirit. Everybody is a member of the team. Aviators don't last long after they get famous. One airplane is sure to be shot down. The Germans do it, the Japanese do it and we do it."

B-29 Scores Probable Hit On Jap Vessel

New York, Nov. 25 (AP)—One of the B-29's on the Tokyo raid had to pick a substitute target 40 miles south of Tokyo when engine trouble developed, and scored a probable hit on a merchant vessel from 30,000 feet altitude, it was disclosed today in a network pool broadcast from Guam by NBC.

By Associated Press.

A Japanese imperial communique claimed today that raiding Japanese planes sank two United States transports and damaged another transport and a destroyer in Leyte Gulf of the Philippines. (The report is wholly unconfirmed by Allied sources.)

The communique, broadcast by Tokyo radio and recorded by the FCC, said that seventeen aircraft failed to return from this and other raids on Leyte and Morotai Island Wednesday and Thursday.

Foe Reports New Raid On Manila

San Francisco, Nov. 25 (AP)—American carrier-borne planes returned to the attack on Manila today, the Japanese-controlled Manila radio reported.

About 60 planes raided Manila and nearby Clark Field, the radio said in a broadcast recorded here. The report was without American confirmation, but Manila or Tokyo radios have always been first to report new air strikes at the heart of the Philippines.

Raiders also swept over the Lipa and Batangas airfields on southern Luzon Island, the broadcast said.

The radio asserted Japanese interceptors met the carrier planes and eyewitnesses in Manila "saw two enemy bombers shot down by accurate Nippon anti-aircraft fires."

Carrier planes first struck at shipping in Manila Bay, which American pilots have previously reported has been turned into a shipping graveyard.

No Need To Fear Future Raids, Jap People Told

San Francisco, Nov. 25 (AP)—Kenichi Kumagai, Japan's assistant air-raid defense chief, the Tokyo radio said today, assured the Japanese people they have nothing to be afraid of in air raids yet to come.

"If we continue to act in this tempo," the radio, heard by the Federal Communications Commission, quoted him as saying, "there is not the least need for fear in future raids."

The B-29 attack yesterday, he said, was less a real raid than "a bombing raid for the purpose of reconnaissance." (In another broadcast Domei, the Japanese news agency, called it a "propaganda attack.").

Sees Increased War Output

Kumagai declared yesterday's raid would mean increased war production, because it had "heightened the anger of the industrial soldier."

Domei said that the B-29s maintained high altitudes "of 6,000 to 10,000 meters" and carried only a "light load of small-caliber missiles and incendiary bombs" because of fear of the Japanese "interceptors and anti-aircraft batteries."

Tokyo radio last night broadcast an imperial communique claiming that five of the raiders were shot down and nine others damaged, and dismissed the attack as ineffective, because, it said, the Superfortresses carried only light bombloads and dropped them wide of their intended targets.

Claim Little Damage

"Practically no damage was suffered by important installations," the broadcast said in an indirect admission that major targets were hit.

(Substantial bomb tonnages were dropped upon selected targets in the industrial area, the 20th Air Force headquarters in Washington reported).

"Daily practices and preparation of the mind" prevented panic, the broadcast added.

Safety devices found on a B-29, which the Tokyo radio said was salvaged "almost intact" after a recent raid, illustrated the "cowardice" of American aviators, a third broadcast said.

ARGENTINES EXPLAIN MOVE

Pre-Military Training Program Termed Health Measure

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 25 (AP)—The War Ministry, aiming to dispel what it called "misleading interpretations" of the pre-military training program announced last week, issued a six-page statement today saying the program was intended only as a defense measure in improving the physical health of individuals.

The announcement, made through the press secretariat, said the new regulation sought solution of the problem of an alarming percentage of citizens' being unfit for military service.

Also in the field of relations with the press, authorities in Buenos Aires Province tonight ordered the newspaper Liberal, of Balcarce, closed for publishing an editorial entitled "We Want to be Free."

SOLDIER FIGHT DUE TOMORROW

Overseas Service Debate I

Scheduled At Ottawa

Ottawa, Nov. 25 (AP)—Canada's red-hot overseas conscription issue is due to come to a new crisis Monday when the House of Commons debates a motion to "aid the Government in its policy of maintaining a vigorous war effort."

The question was not settled by this week's order-in-council permitting employment in foreign service of drafted men, who heretofore have been subject only to duty in Canada.

The newspaper Le Soleil, in Quebec, center of resistance to the conscription movement, said today that "with few exceptions French-speaking members of the House of Commons will vote against the King Government if the Prime Minister moves his confidence motion."

King Places Motion

Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King placed a motion on the House of Commons order paper today providing for adjournment of the present emergency session until January 31 as soon as the conscription discussion is ended. He has said the life of the present Parliament will end April 17 in any case.

The depth of the dissent over conscription, however, could force an earlier dissolution and a general election.

While the present state of flux makes party lines in the House of Commons indefinite, the latest previous standing gave an overwhelming majority to King's Liberal party, with 161 members compared with 39 for the Progressive-Conservatives, next most numerous, and a total opposition of 73.

Shift Announced

Since then, four Liberal members have announced their shift to the opposition, but since the opposition is divided on conscription, it would require a tremendous changeover among the Liberals themselves to unseat the King Government.

One of these was Wilfred LaCroix, member from Quebec, who shouted in French during yesterday's session that the King Government's new policy for conscription was "treason" to Quebec province. He used the French word "trahison."

LaCroix said French-speaking members of the Cabinet had not kept their promise to the people of Quebec in allowing the Government to authorize overseas service for drafted men.

Soldiers Parade

The overseas conscription issue was not confined to Parliament.

Nearly 1,000 soldiers paraded last night through the streets of Vernon, B. C., and an unidentified captain was knocked down when he tried to stop the marchers, who shouted "down with conscription," and "conscript wealth and industry as well as manpower."

Defense headquarters declined comment today and indicated it was regarded as a local matter. It was understood, however, that discipline was being tightened in camps throughout Canada where draftees are stationed.

In Chicoutimi, Que., Friday a Union Jack was torn from its staff during a half-hour demonstration by several hundrerd youths.

CABINET CRISIS HAS EASED

Quebec Is Relatively Quiet as Premier Duplessis Asks Respect for Law.

Ottawa, Nov. 25 (A. P.).—Canadian home defense soldiers billeted in British Columbia paraded in defiant protest last night after Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King staked the life of his government on his new policy of partial conscription for overseas service. The policy already had precipitated violent demonstrations and political defections in Quebec.

Nearly 1,000 soldiers from the military camp near Vernon, paraded through the streets of the town shouting "Down with conscription," and a captain was reported struck down by the marchers when he attempted to halt them.

Forming spontaneously at the camp after broadcasts which said members of the Sixth Division stationed there would be among the first to be sent overseas, the parade swelled as the marchers streamed four abreast past the administration buildings and toward the town.

Civilians Line Streets.

The marchers also reportedly brushed aside a lieutenant with the captain, shouting: "Conscript wealth and industry as well as man power." The streets were lined with silent civilians and a scattering of soldiers who took no part in the demonstration.

Quebec was relatively quiet yesterday as Provincial Premier Maurice Duplessis in the face of earlier disturbances by draft-age youths called for respect for the laws of the country and appealed to the people of the Province to work for national unity in considering the point of view of the other side.

Prime Minister King announced that he would open a debate in Parliament Monday on a vote of confidence motion, and he appeared to have won control of the Cabinet end of the crisis at least for the weekend.

He told the House of Commons that he had received the resignation of Air Minister C. G. Power in protest against the conscription policy, but he said he did not wish to recommend its acceptance to the Governor-General until he had considered the matter further.

Maurice Bourget, Liberal from Levis, Que., last night joined three other Quebec members who left the Government benches over the issue, but a wholesale defection of the sixty-odd members apparently was temporarily forestalled.

Defense Minister Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton told Commons that the first 10,000 troops to be sent overseas in December and January under the new Government ruling would be made up of 7,500 fully trained infantrymen and 2,500 well advanced in training. This group was to come from the drafted home army which heretofore could not be used outside the Western Hemisphere except on a voluntary basis.

In Vancouver, military authorities announced that medical examination of home defense troops in the Pacific command already had been started to determine those fit for overseas service.

At Winnipeg, Brig. R. A. Macfarlane, who opposed continuance of voluntary recruiting and resigned as commander of military district 10 only a few hours before the Government announced the change in policy, said that 99 per cent of Canadian Army officers consider "over-all conscription the only way to handle an army."

Canada Expunges Talk Of Treason

Ottawa, Nov. 25 (AP)—A dissident member's charge of treason to Quebec, flung at the Government yesterday in the heat of debate in Commons over conscription for war overseas, has been expunged from the record.

Wilfrid LaCroix, member from Quebec, uttered the words at a session so noisy that Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, whose policies were under attack, said he had been unable to follow the argument.

Leaves Government Ranks

LaCroix, speaking in French, used the word "trahison"—treason or betrayal—in announcing his withdrawal from the Government ranks to the opposition.

Furnished with a copy of his remarks, King moved that they be expunged, asserting LaCroix had referred to the Government policy in favor of partial conscription for overseas service as "treason" to Quebec and had made it appear as if the Government had betrayed someone.

To maintain the dignity of the House, the Prime Minister said both LaCroix's remarks and his own in reference to them should be expunged.

Speaker J. A. Glen agreed and said no publicity of any kind should be given them by the press, and remarked that while LaCroix was speaking he was unable to inform the member he was using offensive words.

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House leader, said the words objected to might already have appeared in some publications and others appearing later would be penalized, but Glen replied that the House could not help what already had been printed.

WAR REFUGEES TELL OF NAZI ATROCITIES

U. S. Board Releases Eyewitness Accounts Of Horrors

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP)—The War Refugee Board—three members of President Roosevelt's Cabinet—sponsored today a 25,000-word detailed report of bestial cruelty and murder by the million in German extermination camps.

Said the board, comprising Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Secretary of War Stimson:

"The board has every reason to believe that these reports present a true picture of the frightful happenings in these camps. It is making the reports public in the firm conviction that they should be read and understood by all Americans."

Eyewitness Accounts

The report consisted of two eyewitness accounts of life in the Nazi camps at Auschwitz and Birkenau in southwestern Poland, prepared independently, but almost precisely parallel.

Each included an estimate that more than a million and a half Jews from various European countries were gassed and their bodies cremated at Birkenau alone between April, 1942, and April, 1944.

One, by two young Slovakian Jews who for two years had clerical posts in the camp through which they could keep fairly close track of events, set the figure at 1,765,000. The second account was by a non-Jewish Polish major. All three escaped. For their protection, their names were withheld by the board which said in an accompanying statement:

"It is a fact beyond denial that the Germans have deliberately and systematically murdered millions of innocent civilians—Jews and Christians alike—all over Europe.

"This campaign of terror and brutality, which is unprecedented in all history and which even now continues unabated, is part of the German plan to subjugate the free people of the world."

The board, of which John W. Pehle is executive director, is responsible for carrying out the policy of the Federal Government for rescue of the victims of enemy oppression.

Throughout the more detailed story of the two Jews appeared such gruesome statistics as these: "Conservative estimate" that 65,000 to 70,000 of 80,000 persons received at the camp were gassed; "lowest estimate," 30,000 gassed out of another group; one month's gassings 90,000; total capacity of crematoria, 6,000 a day, but for a period it was overloaded and bodies burned in great open pits.

Excerpts From Reports

Taken from the reports are these excerpts and paraphrases:

"The mere fact of neglecting to give information on the whereabouts of a prisoner, not to speak of extending help, is punished by death. . . . If the escapee is caught alive, he is hanged in the presence of the whole camp; but if he is found dead, his body—wherever it may have been located—is brought back to camp . . . and seated at the entrance gate, a small notice clasped in his hands, reading 'Here I am.'"

Camp buildings are divided into little cubicles, each occupied by three persons, each cubicle "too narrow for a man to lie stretched out and not high enough for him to sit upright.

Mortality High

"Working conditions were inconceivably hard, so that the majority of us, weakened by starvation and the inedible food, could not stand it. The mortality was so high that every day our group of 200 had 30 to 35 dead. Many were simply beaten to death by the overseers—the 'capos'—during work, without the slightest provocation."

30-24—20673

Later a "sick building" was set up.

"Actually this building was nothing else than an assembly center for death candidates. All prisoners incapable of working were sent there. There was no question of any medical attention or care.

"At the same time, the so-called 'selections' were introduced. Twice weekly, Mondays and Thursdays, the camp doctor indicated the number of prisoners who were to be gassed and then burned. These 'selectees' were loaded into trucks and brought to the birch forest. Those still alive upon arrival were gassed in a big barrack erected near the trench used for burning the bodies."

Typical of the descriptions given of the fate of individual groups are these:

Frenchmen Named

"Two thousand Frenchmen (Aryans) Communists and other political prisoners, among them the brother of Thorez and the young brother of Leon Blum. The latter was atrociously tortured, then gassed and burned. . . .

"Large family convoys arrived from various European countries and were at once directed to the birch wood. The special squad ('sonderkommando') employed for gassing and burning worked in day and night shifts. Hundreds of thousands of Jews were gassed during this period.

"The men (themselves prisoners) belonging to the 'special squad' lived separately. On account of the dreadful smell spread by them, people had but little contact with them. Besides they were always filthy, destitute, half wild and extraordinarily brutal and ruthless.

Killed Companions

"It was not uncommon to see one of them kill another. This was considered by the others a sensation, a change.

"At the end of February, 1943, a new modern crematoria and gassing plant was inaugurated at Birkenau. The large ditch was filled in, the ground levelled and the ashes used as before for fertilizer at the farm labor camp of Hermense."

Next to the furnace room was a large "reception hall" arranged to give the impression of the antechamber of a bathing establishment.

Holds 2,000 People

"It holds 2,000 people and apparently there is a similar waiting room on the floor below. From there a door and a few steps lead down into the very long and narrow gas chamber. The walls of this chamber are also camouflaged with simulated entries to shower rooms to mislead the victims.

"The room is fitted with three traps which can be hermetically closed from the outside. A track leads from the gas chamber through the furnace room. The gassing takes place as follows:

"The unfortunate victims are brought into the hall, where they are told to undress. To complete the fiction that they are going to bathe, each person receives a towel and a small piece of soap, issued by two men clad in white coats. Then they are crowded into the gas chamber in such numbers that there is, of course, only standing room.

Doors Are Closed

"To compress this crowd into the narrow space, shots are often fired to induce those already at the far end to huddle still closer together. When everybody is inside, the heavy doors are closed. Then there is a short pause, presumably to allow the room temperature to rise to a certain level, after which SS men with gas masks climb on the roof, open the traps and shake down a preparation in powder form out of tin cans labeled 'Cyklon—for use against vermin,' which is manufactured by a Hamburg concern. It is presumed that this is a 'cyanide' mixture of some sort which turns into gas at a certain temperature.

"After 3 minutes everyone in the chamber is dead."

The bodies are then taken out and burned.

"On principle, only Jews are gassed; Aryans very seldom, as they are usually given 'special treatment' by shooting.

"Guests" Watch Gassing

"Prominent guests from Berlin were present at the inauguration of the first crematorium in March, 1943. The 'program' consisted of the gassing and burning of 8,000 Cracow Jews. The guests, both officers and civilians, were extremely satisfied with the results, and the special peephole fitted into the door of the gas chambr was in constant use."

There is a "block recorder" who keeps the prisoners' files.

"His work is one of great responsibility and he has to keep his ledgers with painful exactitude as the index cards only indicate the number and not the name of the prisoners; errors are fatal.

"For instance, if the recorder has noted down a death by mistake, and that often occurs with the unusually high mortality—the discrepancy is simply straightened out by killing the bearer of the corresponding number."

The report by the Polish major asserted that prisoners were used for experiments in sterilizing by X-ray, in artificial insemination of women, as well as blood transfusions.

PEACE AUTHORITY DELAY IS URGED

Senator Would Postpone Defining Delegates' Powers

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP)—Senator Connally (D., Texas) proposed today that Congress delay defining the powers of an American delegate until the Senate approves an enabling treaty for a projected world security organization. Two prominent Republicans backed him up.

The Texan, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, told reporters he thought Congress could and must "write its own ticket on the extent of authority to be given this nation's representative in a world council." But he said it should not imperil by controversy over this question the peace-keeping structure for which the foundations were laid at the Dumbarton Oaks conference.

Connally's Viewpoint

"We can set up the powers of the American delegate in separate legislation after we have approved the general plan for a security organization," Connally said. "That is the way it should be done. Congress can say exactly how much authority, if any at all such a delegate could have to order American military forces into action to prevent or repel aggression."

This question of authority has developed as one of the most controversial likely to be encountered by Congress in authorizing American participation in an international organization. It played a part in the recent political campaign, with President Roosevelt advocating wide latitude for such a delegate, within the framework of constitutional procesess.

In separate interviews, Senators Austin (R., Vt.) and Ball (R., Minn.) agreed with Connally that the issue should be settled by separate legislation, apart from consideration of the treaty all expect to grow out of a first-rank conference of all of the United Nations some time early next year.

Could Find Way

Austin said it ought not to be difficult for Congress to find a way for the American delegate to act quickly, without turning over to him Congress' right to declare war, or placing him in a position where he could act so that only a formal declaration of war would result.

"The point is," he said, "that this delegate must be made wholly responsible to his Government. He should have Cabinet rank—possibly the Secretary of State could be named as the delegate. He must always move with the majority support of his Government behind him. I would never vote to set up a delegate with dictatorial powers to do as he chooses."

The Vermont Senator pointed out that the President now has power to order American military forces into action without prior Congressional approval. Both Republican and Democratic Presidents in the past have made such moves as punitive measures or for preservation of order, as in the marines' intervention in Nicaragua and the army expedition into Mexico after depredations by the bandit Villa. It was Austin's idea, he said, that this Presidential authority should be defined clearly by the Congress.

Economic Sanctions Doubted

On the other hand, he said there seemed grave doubts that the President, or any agent such as the delegate to the international council, could order economic sanctions against a potential aggressor without some sort of commitment by the legislative body. This field also must be defined clearly, he insisted.

Ball said it seemed fundamental that Congress should delay any attempt to fix the powers of the delegate until after it decided whether the United States was going to join the world organization.

But he added that he realized as a practical matter that these powers are going to be subjected to extensive discussion when the treaty is laid before the Senate.

"Reservations to the treaty are almost certain to be offered," he said. "A number of people are going to want to tie down this authority before they agree to vote on the treaty. We can only hope that no reservations are adopted that will hamstring the international organization setup."

House Group Seeking Voice In Making Peace

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP)—A Congressional group set out today on an uphill fight: To win for the House of Representatives a voice in making the coming peace.

Representative Walter (D., Pa.) called a meeting of a House Judiciary subcommittee for Monday to consider a constitutional amendment making future treaties subject to ratification by a simple majority vote in both branches of Congress.

He said he was certain the resolution would be approved and expressed confidence it would get through the Senate in time to be submitted to State Legislatures for ratification early next year.

Senate Snag Seen

Other members expressed the belief, however, that the amendment is in for trouble in the Senate, even should it win House approval. Treaties must be ratified by a two-thirds vote of the Senate and the House doesn't have a thing to say about it.

Subcommittee members said they wanted to get the amendment through Congress before it adjourns in December so that States can pass on the proposal during their regular legislative sessions next year. Forty-five State legislatures meet in 1945. Three fourths of the States must ratify a constitutional amendment to make it operative.

State Department Parley

Meanwhile, Senator Connally (D., Texas) predicted that a United Nations conference on an international security organization will be delayed until after a forthcoming Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin meeting.

Connally said after a conference with State Department officials that it did not appear to him that the higher plane conference to consider the groundwork agreements made at Dumbarton Oaks could meet until after January 1.

BURMA CALLED BRITISH ZONE

Explanation Seen In Washington For Withdrawing Troops

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP)—The United States apparently intends to withdraw its comparatively small contingent of combat troops from India and Burma when the Burma road is reopened. It considers the southeast Asia theater essentially a sphere of British interest.

Informed sources here believe that the United States 10th Air Force, however, will remain in the theater indefinitely. The 10th, together with the China-based 14th, provides aerial cover for work on and transportation over the Burma road.

NOV 26 1944

Laid To Rapid Advance

An indication of the plan to transfer the combat troops is contained in a dispatch from India by Associated Press correspondent Preston Grover, who reports that the Allied advance in northern and western Burma has been so rapid that the end of America's main fighting commitment in this theater is almost in sight. Grover says the commitment was to reopen the Burma road to China.

A general opinion in military circles here is that the primary commitment at the outset was and still remains one made to China. Whatever benefits the British derive from purely military operations is incidental to the paramount project of getting help to China.

Britain's concern, on the other hand, is more immediate—making absolute the security of India from Japanese attack, regaining Singapore and freeing Burma and the rest of Malaya.

Confined To Ground Troops

Because this is the situation, it was suggested, the future withdrawal of American forces from the India-Burma theater undoubtedly will be confined to actual ground-force combat units. Army Service Forces, including transportation specialists, and engineers will be retained to help in operation of the route to India.

The withdrawal of fighting forces will in no way affect any American soldiers now in the Chinese theater of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, it is believed here.

Aside from engineering, service and air forces, United States troops in the India-Burma theater represent only the smallest fraction of Allied forces. British forces, including Dominion and Colonial troops, make up perhaps 80 per cent. of the total, with Chinese troops fighting in northern Burma composing all but a small part of the balance.

Air Delegates Study Policy Draft

Chicago, Nov. 25 (AP)—Work was resumed today on an item-by-item study of the draft proposal for a global air transport agency, with the International Civil Aviation Conference waiting for a new break in the Anglo-American stalemate on a "fifth freedom" for the skyways.

Publication of separate documents by the United States and British delegations yesterday showed what appeared to be surprisingly close positions on the problems which were left open when the draft for an over-all agency was distributed Monday. Officials on both sides said that the differences ran deeper than appeared.

All Delegations Represented

One delegate commented that the chance of bridging the gap was about one in a hundred. Some, however, felt that the virtual mandate given the leaders to keep at it until they had completed an accord might play a big role in the adjustment effort.

All delegations are represented on the joint subcommittee studying the over-all draft. They were reported to have progressed about one third of the way.

Economic Issue

The Latin-American countries, working through a bloc organization of which Col. Pedro A. Chapa, of Mexico, is president, have been particularly active. Luis Machado, of Cuba, has been their chief spokesman.

Side work on the "fifth-freedom" problem, described as an economic and operating rather than a political issue, continued.

The United States wants intermediate traffic—traffic carried between two countries outside the home state of the operator—to figure into the volume on which the capacity quota would be based.

27 JAP VESSELS SUNK BY U. S. SUBS

Latest Sinkings Bring Total of U. S. Subs to 854 Victims.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—(AP) The Navy, pressing relentlessly its submarine war of attrition against the Japanese, today reported the sinking of 27 more Nipponese vessels.

The new Jap losses included a destroyer and a converted gunboat, a large transport, four tankers, three cargo transports and 17 cargo vessels. It was the largest bag announced in a single communique since October 18 when 32 sinkings were reported, a record total.

Today's report brought the total Navy-announced Jap losses inflicted by United States submersibles to 854 vessels sunk, 37 probably sunk and 119 damaged, for a total of 1,010 hits. Of the 854 sunk, 80 were combat ships and 774 non-combatant vessels.

A factor in the stepped-up activity of the submarines in the Pacific was obviously the establishment of American bases closer to the Japanese supply lines, obviating the necessity for return trips to Pearl Harbor for fuel, supplies and rest for the crews.

On the other side of the picture, this result has been attained with a total loss of 38 United States submarines since Dec. 7, 1941.

Today's announcement also reported a Netherlands submarine, operating in Netherlands East Indies waters under United States control, had accounted for 4,500 tons of enemy shipping.

British subs also have been active in eastern waters in recent months.

Subs Sink 27 More Ships In Pacific

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP)—Submarines operating in Pacific and Far East waters have sunk 27 additional enemy vessels including a destroyer and a converted gunboat, the Navy reported today in a communique.

The additional sinkings brought total Japanese losses inflicted by submarines to 854 sunk, 37 probably sunk and 119 damaged.

The other 38 reported today, all merchant craft, included a large transport, a large tanker, a large cargo transport, two medium tankers, two medium cargo transports, 11 medium cargo vessels, a small tanker and six small cargo vessels.

Sub Sinks 4,500 Tons

A navy communique also disclosed that a Netherlands submarine, built in England and operating under United States control in Netherlands East Indian waters, has sunk 4,500 tons of enemy shipping.

The 854 enemy vessels sunk by submarines to date included 80 combat ships and 774 noncombatant vessels. The combat vessel total included 39 destroyers, 11 cruisers, three tenders and 27 others.

Text Of Communique

The text of navy communique No. 556:

"Pacific and Far East:

"United States submarines have reported the sinking of 27 vessels, including two combatant vessels, as a result of operations against the enemy in these waters, as follows:

"One destroyer.
"One converted gunboat.
"One large transport.
"One large tanker.
"One large cargo transport.
"Two medium tankers.
"Two medium cargo transports.
"Eleven medium cargo vessels.
"One small tanker.
"Six small cargo vessels.

"These actions have not been announced in any previous Navy Department communique.

"A Netherlands submarine, while operating under United States control, has sunk 4,500 tons of enemy shipping in Netherlands East Indian waters. This submarine was built in England."

ZEMKE FAMILY HAPPY

Missoula, Mont., Nov. 25 (A. P.).—Tears and laughter echoed through the Zemke household last night upon notification that Col. Hubert Zemke of Missoula, leading American air ace in Europe with nineteen Nazi air victims, who has been missing in action since October 30, was safe and a prisoner of war in Germany.

A family group, comprising his wife, Mrs. Maria; his son, Hubert Jr., two and one-half years old, and parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benno Zemke, gave vent to tears of happiness on War Department notification of the colonel's capture, then to joyous laughter.

"We were tearful, then hilariously happy," his pretty, dark-haired wife said.

"All along we knew that we'd hear from him again—we never gave up hope," she laughed. "Of course," she added proudly, "you see, he wasn't shot down and we have enough faith in his ability to take care of himself in a disabled plane."

Hull Receives Humanitarian Award

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP)—Secretary of State Cordell Hull received the Humanitarian Award of the Variety Clubs of America last night, and President Roosevelt observed that he knew of no one "more richly deserving" of the honor.

In a message which he sent to the presentation dinner, Roosevelt thanked "the members of the amusement industry who have done so much good" in war bond campaigns, Red Cross and kindred war activities.

Hull, recovering from a throat ailment at the Bethesda Naval Hospital, couldn't be present and the award—for outstanding service to humanity—was accepted for him by Acting Secretary Stettinius.

Advisers On German Administration Named

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP)—The State Department announced today three assignments to the staff of Robert Murphy, political adviser on Germany to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, in preparation for administration of German territory.

Donald R. Heath, of Topeka, Kan., was named counselor of mission and John L. Chase, of Tully, N. Y., and Louis A. Wiesner, of Port Huron, Mich., were named vice-consuls.

Col. J. Noel Macy Named To State Department Post

Westchester Publisher Heads Oversea Information Media

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25 (AP).—The State Department announced today appointment of Colonel J. Noel Macy, of Westchester County, N. Y., as assistant chief in the International Information Division.

Colonel Macy, formerly chief of the news division of the Army Bureau of Public Relations, has been placed in charge of media in the State Deparement office which sends information overseas through films, radio and publications. He is president of Westchester County Publishers, Inc., and co-owner of radio station WFAS, and has been with the Army since Jan. 27, 1941.

Colonel Macy was for years a cavalry officer in the New York National Guard. A year after reporting to the War Department, he was promoted from captain to major. He became a lieutenant colonel in August, 1942, and a colonel in May, 1945.

With more than sixteen years of experience in publishing newspapers, Colonel Macy was assigned to the Army's Bureau of Public Relations, first to the liaison branch. He became the executive of the news division, then was appointed chief of that division.

Chinese Is First Wasp Killed on Duty

Detroit, Nov. 25 (A. P.).—The public relations office of the Air Transport Command, Romulus, Mich., reported today the death of Hazel Y. Lee, 31-year-old American-born Wasp and daughter of Chinese parents, whose plane crashed Thursday near Great Falls, Mont.

Mrs. Lee, who died this morning, was the first Woman's Air Force Service pilot to be killed on duty with the Third Ferrying Group, Ferrying Division, Air Transport Command. She had been flying since 1932 and joined the Wasps in February, 1943.

Her husband, Major Yin Cheung Lee, is serving with the Chinese Army. A sister, Mrs. Bowen Chan, resides at 68-12 Dartmouth street, Forest Hills, N. Y.

Essex Class Carrier To Be Launched Today

New York, Nov. 25 (AP)—The $60,000,000 aircraft carrier Bon Homme Richard, 13th Essex class carrier to be launched since the beginning of the war, will be commissioned at the Navy Yard in Brooklyn tomorrow.

Rear Admiral Monroe Kelly, Third Naval District commandant, will place the 27,100-ton warship in commission and turn her over to her new skipper, Capt. A. O. Rule, native of St. Louis and former commandant of the Naval Air Station at Miami, Fla.

The Bon Homme Richard, named after the frigate of Capt. John Paul Jones, will carry about 80 planes and will have a speed of more than 30 knots.

Designed to fight in the Pacific, the carrier was launched last April.

U. S. World-Aid Job Speculated On

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP)—President Roosevelt's call for post-war strengthening of the United Nations partnership was regarded in Congress today as pointing toward possible American financial help in righting the world's war-damagad economic system.

While Roosevelt said in a report that lend-lease must end when hostilities cease his observation that the "United Nations' partnership must go on and must grow stronger" set legislators to speculating about the President's plans for this country's role in world rehabilitation.

Looks For Pressure

Chairman Connally (D., Texas) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, predicted that much pressure will be exerted on Congress as soon as fighting stops to repeal or revise the Johnson Act.

This law, passed in 1934, bans loans by American individuals to foreign governments or individuals. Senator Johnson (R., Cal.) said he had no doubt efforts will be made to change it.

"Somebody will fight any change," he added.

NOV 26 1944

Legislation Called Need

Applauding the President's declaration that lend-lease will not continue in peacetime Connally said separate legislation will be required if this country is to help other nations restore their facilities and trade.

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) shared this view. Senator George (D., Ga.) added that the legislation must be specific in its form so that the American people will know exactly what is to be done.

Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) said this country "will suffer unless we stimulate a trade policy that will provide an outlet for the things we grow and produce here."

Little Lending Expected

Remembering that most of the World War I debtors failed to pay, legislators generally were reluctant to believe that this country will go in for any extensive Governmental lending operations in the post-war era. The signs pointed more toward international cooperative efforts, they agreed.

However, Senator Ball (R., Minn.) said he thought Russia would be an extremely good risk for either Governmental or private credit.

He added that this country will miss one of its greatest trade opportunities if it does not make it possible for the Soviets to purchase the products they will need after the war.

"I think the Russians are going to be careful what they buy and that they are going to pay every obligation they undertake," he said.

NCPAC Lays Plans For Future

Chicago, Nov. 25 (AP)—The National Citizens Political Action Committee, developed from the CIO's PAC, met today to determine its future in relation to the parallel union group, which the CIO already has projected into the 1946 elections.

The CIO's week-long convention, after reelecting Philip Murray as president for the fifth time, adjourned last night, leaving its executive board and the NCPAC to build their plans from the start provided by the unions.

Size Undetermined

Sidney Hillman, PAC chairman who holds the same post with NCPAC, said the committee would discuss its plans, but he divulged no details as to its prospective size or the manner in which it might be financed.

In final items of business yesterday the 600 delegates adopted a resolution which demanded that the Government relax its wage policy to catch up to living costs. The action came after Murray blamed the four public members of the War Labor Board, War Mobiliziation Director James F. Byrnes and Economic Stabilizer Fred M. Vinson for what he described "bad administration" of the Little Steel formula.

Taylor Challenged

Murray, issuing a challenge to Dr. George W. Taylor, WLB vice-chairman and author of the formula, to quit the Federal agency, said he was "biased" and "unfair." Taylor, in Washington, said he had no comment to make.

The delegates reelected the nine vice-presidents and James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer. The 49 members of the executive board, representing all CIO international unions, also were installed for another year.

Seattle Camp's Riot Detailed By Italian

Seattle, Nov. 25 (AP)—A vivid description of the trouble at Fort Lawton which led to the storming of Italian service troop barracks by Negro soldiers and eventually to this nation's largest court-martial of the war was picturesquely given the court by a former pilot of the Italian air force.

The pilot was in a group of Italians when the initial trouble started. He tried vainly to halt the attack, and during his testimony late yesterday picked as a leader of the Negroes one of three men on trial for murder.

42 Charged With Rioting

A total of 42 Negro Service Command soldiers are charged with rioting. Three of them are charged with the murder of Private Guglielmo Olivotto, who was found hanged over a near-by creek after the riot had been quelled by military police. The prisoner identified was Private William Jones.

In reply to questions of the court, the former pilot testified he and two companions were going to their quarters when they passed a group of Negroes "and one of them expressed vulgar words which I understood. One of my fellows asked me what was said."

Says He Saw Blow Struck

"I took several steps," he added, "and turned around. . . . I saw one of the Negroes strike a blow at—(a comrade)."

"Did he have anything in his fist?" the court asked.

"I saw something shiny. Then . . . struck the Negro and he fell down. I called and said we'd better go before there was trouble."

The court asked if the trouble developed and if there was much noise, to which the witness replied with emphasis in the Latin verion of "and how!"

Burst In Door

As the Negroes stormed their barracks with stones, clubs and axes, the former flyer said a comrade was hurt, and as he picked him up the Negroes burst in the door. He tried to call them to halt in both Italian and English, he said, repeating for the court, the English words he used:

"We are Italian soldiers. Please make stop."

But the attackers did not stop, and when the riot was ended Olivotto was found hanged by a tent rope over a near-by creek.

No Trial And Vindication Seen For Pearl Harbor Executives

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP) — The Army and Navy Journal said today that "there will be no court-martial" for Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel as a result of findings by the navy board investigating the Pearl Harbor attack. Kimmel was navy commander at the time of the Japanese assault.

Referring to Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, the army commander, the unofficial service publication said that "in the unlikely case that General Short should be court-martialed, his friends are convinced that he would be vindicated. Indeed, General Short is described as seeking a trial should the army board have reflected in any way upon his conduct."

Both boards have completed their inquiries and turned them over to the heads of the respective departments, Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Forrestal.

The Journal said that the army board, reaching a conclusion like that of the Pearl Harbor investigating group which was headed by Associate Justice Roberts of the Supreme Court, "is said to have found that it was the function of the army to insure the safety of the base against attack, and that the navy's function was to support the army indirectly by operations at sea and directly by making available therefor such instrumentalities as are on the vessels of the fleet when in harbor and are located or based on shore.

"As to the army board which simultaneously investigated the disaster, it also is said to support the findings of the Roberts board in the matter of the failure of officers of the War Department to comment to General Short upon the measures he had reported he took to guard the base in accordance with instructions given him, and the specific warnings given him not to resort to peacetime methods against sabotage and espionage, and not to take measures which would alarm the civil population."

Casualties Increase Among Writers

New York, Nov. 25 (AP)—Editor and Publisher, newspaper trade magazine, said yesterday an analysis of casualties among American war correspondents showed "a steady increase paralleling America's expanding war activity" from .9 per cent. a month at the start of the war to a current figure of 6.3 per cent.

In an article describing hazards encountered and anticipated, the magazine studied the deaths of 26 correspondents and the wounding of 100.

From May 8, 1940, when Webb Miller, of the United Press, met his death in London, until the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, one casualty occurred about every 41 days, the article stated, a rate of .9 a month.

Pearl Harbor To D-Day

"Casualties from Pearl Harbor until D-day, June 6, 1944, occurred at the stepped-up rate of two per month, and by D-day 17 correspondents had been killed and 71 injured," the magazine said, listing the rate on an accompanying graph as 2.0 per cent.

"Between D-day and November 15 of this year, casualties among correspon[illegible] jumped to more than six a month, and nine were killed and 29 injured in that period," the article continued.

The monthly rate during the June-to-November period was given by Editor and Publisher as 6.3 per cent.

Editor and Publisher concluded that with the advance of troops across the Rhine the war "moved into its most dangerous phase for front-line newsmen" operating in hostile, guerrilla-ridden territory.

5 Cents an Hour.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25 — (AP) Steel workers won wage adjustments tonight expected to average about 5 cents an hour, but their main demands for a base pay raise and guaranteed annual pay were checked to the White House.

The War Labor board approved several other changes in the compensation and employment conditions of the CIO United Steel Workers which could add materially to the amount of cash the workers take home in a year. Figures were not immediately available, however, on just what their effect might be.

Steel Formula Not Broken

Chairman William H. Davis of the WLB said the order did not break the Little Steel Formula—nor even "bend" it.

The formula limits general raises, to compensate for living costs, to 15 per cent [illegible] January 1, 1941. It makes provision, however, for increases to meet "inequities" or "sub-standards." The changes approved by WLB were all under the "inequities" provision.

The main demand, for 17 cents an hour, was all outside the Little Steel limit.

The board on Oct. 11 decided it would not recommend that President Roosevelt ease the Little Steel formula to allow an increase. The formula is binding on the board by presidential order.

Today's WLB order left the way open for the question of a general wage increase to be reinstated, however, in case basic government wage policy is changed.

The board is working on a report on the question of revision of the Little Steel formula which is to be referred to President Roosevelt. Indications are that the Administration will try to hold the line on wages at least until the defeat of Germany.

On the guaranteed wage demand, the WLB proposed creation of a study commission by the President to consider the question nationally.

Steel Workers Get Wage Boost

Demands for Base Pay Raise, Guaranteed Annual Pay Sent to FDR.

FORMULA NOT BROKEN

Wage Adjustments Expected to Average About

The main increase ordered was a premium of 4 cents an hour for the second or early night shift, and 6 cents for the third, or late night tour.

Most Workers Affected

Since the majority of workers in most steel mills rotate through the shifts at intervals, that increase would affect most of the men. The union had asked for differentials of 5 and 10 cents an hour.

A considerable amount of back pay was involved in that increase, and possibly in some of the other revisions, through a provision that hourly pay changes be retroactive to the expiration of old contracts. That date varies slightly from plant to plant, but WLB sources said most contracts expired around December 26, 1943.

In accordance with presidential orders, the WLB ruling contains a clause that the orders as to wages shall become effective only upon a determination by the Office of Price Administration that the adjustments will not require changes in price ceilings, or upon approval by the Director of Economic Stabilization.

Spokesmen for the steel industry sharply criticized the decision.

John A. Stephens, chairman of the Steel Case Research committee, asserted in a statement that the premiums ordered for second and third shifts were "a direct wage increase in disregard of the Little Steel formula." He said the pay boosts were accomplished by "subterfuges." The committee is a group formed by steel producers to assist in steel negotiations before the WLB.

Stephens asserted that since January, 1941, steel workers weekly pay had risen around 65 per cent.

Olds Scores Raise

Irving S. Olds, chairman of the board of U. S. Steel corporation, said the public would "eventually pay the bill" in higher prices for steel, higher taxes, or fewer jobs "resulting from the financial weakening of private enterprise."

He said wage rates for employes of his company were up about 48 per cent and weekly pay about 65 per cent.

"The board's decision further evidences a definite trend in government policy which operates to deny a fair return on their money to stockholders who represent a large segment of our population," Olds said in a statement. "Their invested savings provide the means which make jobs possible.

"Unjustified tinkering at this time with the presently existing wage stabilization policy, with all the inflationary possibilities clearly indicated, may have most serious consequences for everyone in this country, producers and consumers alike."

In addition, the Board directed adjustments to eliminate "intra-plant wage rate inequities."

Increase to Average 5 Cents

No one company may make adjustments under this section of the order greater than an average of 5 cents per hour for all its employes.

In a new policy step, the Board also directed that the union and steel companies conduct collective bargaining on establishment of severance pay. If no agreement is reached within 60 days, the question of a severance pay schedule is to be brought back to the board.

Heretofore, the Board had declined to order severance pay in any industry where it is not now customary, but has directed its continuance in industries where it has been in effect.

The Board said that it would approve a group insurance plan and a "reasonable sick leave" plan if agreed to by the company and the union but it declined to order them. Both had been asked by the union.

Granted were one week's vacation with pay for one year's service and two weeks with pay after five years' service. The union asked two weeks' vacation after three years employment.

Effected directly by the decision were 86 "basic steel" companies and approximately 400,000 employes. Indirectly the decision is likely to affect about 600 other companies with 500,000 employes where the CIO United Steel workers have collective bargaining agreements.

A guaranteed annual wage and the 17 cent general wage increase were the two major demands made by the union.

In declining to order a guaranteed annual wage, the Board announced that it was recommending to the President in a separate report:

"(1) That the whole question of guaranteed wage plans, and the possibility of their future development in American industries as an aid in the stabilization of employment and the regularization of production, should now be comprehensively studied on a national scale;

Commission to Make Study

(2) That such study should be conducted by a specially appointed commission charged with the duty of examining into the experience which industry and labor have thus far had with these plans, and of reporting the facts for the benefit of the country, together with recommendations regarding any further steps in this direction which may seem practical; (3) That such a body would be best able to perform its nationally important tasks if created independently of the War Labor board by the President; and (4) That the President appoint a commission for these purposes."

Chairman William H. Davis told a news conference that the decision in no way violated the "Little Steel" formula.

"Did not even bend it?" asked a reporter.

"Didn't even bend it," Davis replied.

Social Security Tax Compromise Is Seen

NOV 26 1944

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP)—Whether the 78th Congress will end in harmony or in bitter strife was figured today on a slim one half of one per cent.

That was the measure of a proposed compromise in the brewing controversy over efforts to "freeze" the social security tax at one per cent. instead of letting it rise automatically January 1 to two per cent., as the law now provides and as the Administration wishes.

May Split Difference

Those seeking to avoid another showdown fight between the White House and anti-administrationists indicated a willingness to split the difference—and let the tax go to one and one-half per cent.

The one per cent. tax, supporting the old age and survivors insurance program, now is yielding about $1,500,000,000 annually for the program's reserve fund. "Freezists" and "anti-freezists" differ on whether the increased tax is needed to guarantee a healthy condition for this fund.

And the "freezists" were not sure they could override a veto, if successful in passing their bill.

The Ways and Means Committee, in its first post-election meeting yesterday, opened the way for a battle, if not a compromise, by calling open hearings beginning Monday.

Green Calls Parley On Production

New Orleans, Nov. 25 (AP)—William Green, AFL president, climaxed a week of appeals and warnings to labor from persons high in the Government today by calling for a war conference of union heads on speeding up production.

Green invited heads of the molders', machinists' and electricians' unions, and of the textile and garment workers' unions, to the war materials conference, which began this morning behind closed doors and in the midst of a tropical downpour of rain.

Near-Peace Talk Denounced

The speakers before the AFL convention this week had included, among others, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, War Manpower Commissioner Paul McNutt, OPA Administrator Chester Bowles and Vice-Admiral Moreell. They had denounced the myth of the war's near end and expressed alarm at threatening shifts in labor supplies endangering critical industries. They had urged American workers not to jockey for post-war places at the possible expense of the war effort.

Green's answer was to call together the people who could help speed up production in the vitally-needed materials, particularly heavy shells and motorized armor.

Resolution Consideration Later

Meanwhile, action on the 146 resolutions before the convention, which was to have begun today, was deferred. Matthew Woll, chairman of the resolutions committee, said its report would not be ready until Tuesday. The resolutions include the controversial one over outlawing the products of so-called anti-closed-shop States.

Bowles and Moreell were speakers at yesterday's session of the convention. The OPA Administration urged American workers to hold the price line and the rent line against inflationary increases, predicting removal of price controls as soon as the danger of inflationary price increases is past.

Vice-Admiral Moreell said: "Labor should share in determining basic national policies, but by the same token, labor must share in the responsibility of making them work."

A.P. Says Suit Aims to Make It

A Public Utility

In Supreme Court Brief, It Sees Free-Press Threat in U. S. Anti-Trust Case

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25 (AP).—The Associated Press told the Supreme Court today that the basic aim of the government's civil anti-trust suit against it was to convert The Associated Press into a public utility. Disputing a Justice Department contention that a final judgment for the government would not have this result, the non-profit news co-operative stated that, regardless of disavowals and technicalities of language, the department's suit "is intended to impose upon the A. P. obligations which in substance are public-utility obligations."

In a brief filed with the court The Associated Press said: "Make no mistake, if the defendants [the A. P.] are once submitted to a decree under any of the theories advocated by the government—their hand is in the wringer and everybody knows it."

Dec. 5 Hearing Planned

The brief was presented in reply to a government brief filed earlier with the high tribunal. The court expects to hear all arguments on Dec. 5 on appeals by both A. P. and the government from a lower court ruling that the co-operative must make certain changes in its membership by-laws. The suit seeks to force the A. P. to throw open its membership to all comers.

Replying to a government argument that nothing it asked had any semblance of interference with freedom of the press, the A. P. brief stated:

"It is intended to put The Associated Press under obligations which are of a discriminatory character not applicable to other industries 'of the ordinary kind'—and applicable to the press because it is the press.

Sees "Vague" Obligations

"The press will necessarily be subject to vague and incomprehensible obligations which will involve continuing and complex supervision.

"The one industry which is expressly guaranteed freedom in the Constitution—the one industry which is expressly put in 'a preferred position'—is now put in leading strings on the ground that it is necessary for its own 'protection' and the protection of the public interests."

The A. P. said the case involves no question of monopoly, domination, indispensability, power over others, or inadequacy of competitin. It does involve, the A. P. said, a "nebulous and exceedingly controversial public policy unsupported by law or by the record in this case—and in direct conflict with the public policy embodied in the First Amendment" to the Constitution, guaranteeing freedom of the press.

VOTE PHILADELPHIA TELEPHONE STRIKE

Philadelphia, Nov. 25 (A. P.).—More than 600 long distance telephone operators voted 10 to 1 last night to go on strike against the American Telephone & Telegraph Company here if upward wage adjustments are not made within thirty days.

Miss Vera G. Butler, president of Local 302, Federation of Long Lines Telephone Operators, said the voters represented approximately 80 per cent of the membership of the union, which is unaffiliated.

Beginning in January, Miss Butler said, operators from other cities were brought here "temporarily" because of an alleged shortage in Philadelphia, and have been paid $27 weekly for expenses, since most of them come from New York. They do the same work, as the local girls who do not receive expense money, she said.

The issue upon which the strike vote was taken is the same as that which caused operators at Dayton, Ohio, to picket the company and which brought out plant employees in a score of other cities this week.

ACTION URGED ON ARMY BILL

House Group Wants Early Attention On Compulsion

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP)—Early consideration of peacetime compulsory military training was urged today by the House Committee on Post-war Military Policy.

In a formal report to Speaker Rayburn, the committee, headed by Representative Woodrum (D., Va.), listed universal training, as one of the "most important items" on its agenda and said it should be "most carefully explored at an early date."

Originally slated for consideration during the current session of Congress, compulsory training legislation has been postponed until early next year.

Opposition Grows

The postponement, requested by the War Department, was ordered because of growing opposition to pending proposals requiring every able-bodied youth to undergo at least one year of military training in peacetime.

"It has been found necessary, because of opposition based on an apparent lack of knowledge, to educate the public to the necessity for peacetime training," said an influmential member of the House Military Committee. "This educational program will require about a month or so and will be undertaken by theh American Legion."

Both Woodrum and Chairman May (D., Ky.) of the Military Committee have expressed willingness to go ahead with the legislation as soon as possible.

Reaction Foreseen

"The longer we postpone it the more difficult it will be," May said. "It may be impossible to pass such legislation after the war because there may be a natural reaction against anything military."

Without a large and well trained reserve built up through universal training, May said, it may be necessary to maintain in peacetime a large professional army.

"I don't think the American people want that," he added.

May said he was certain his committee would approve the legislation despite opposition, in the form of letters and petitions, which has been mounting in recent weeks. Most of theh opposition, he said, came from churchmen, educators "and pacifists, who apparently have forgotten the costly lesson of unpreparedness in the past."

THE THIRD ARMY'S BRIDGEHEAD ACROSS THE SAAR RIVER AT POSTROFF AND BAERENDORF WAS 26 MILES SOUTH OF SAARBRUCKEN UNDER HEAVY ARTILLERY FIRE, AND THIS SECTOR WAS DESCRIBED HERE AS "SENSITIVE" WITH THE ENEMY LOOSING COUNTERATTACKS. THE RIVER WAS CROSSED AT SEVERAL PLACES IN THIS AREA TODAY, A FRONT DISPATCH SAID.

NORTH OF THERE, WHERE THE THIRD IS MOVING UP WITHIN 13 MILES OF THE SAAR'S CITADEL OF SAARBRUCKEN, THE 19TH TACTICAL AIR FORCE SET FIRE TO AN EASTBOUND CONVOY OF 24 TRUCKS SOUTHEAST OF SAARBRUCKEN.

IN THAT SECTOR, THIRD ARMY TANKS WERE EDGING CLOSER TO THE SIEGFRIED LINE. SIXTH ARMORED DIVISION TANKS MOVED A HALF MILE NORTH OF LEYVILLER, 15 MILES SOUTHWEST OF SAARBRUCKEN, AND WERE ALMOST IN THE OLD MAGINOT LINE AT THAT POINT.

THE BRITISH SECOND ARMY CLEARING THE LAST GERMANS FROM POSITIONS WEST OF THE MAAS IN EASTERN HOLLAND WERE SLOWED MORE BY MUD AND MINES THAN BY THE THIN LINE OF REARGUARDS.

ONE FORCE CAPTURED MAASHEES, 15 MILES NORTH OF VENLO ON THE MAAS, WANNSSUM, THREE MILES SOUTHEAST, AND TIENRAIJ, NINE MILES NORTH OF VENLO.

IT WAS ANNOUNCED THAT THREE SEASONED DIVISIONS NOW WERE IN ACTION WITH THE U.S. NINTH ARMY NORTHEAST OF AACHEN.

THEY WERE THE "OLD HELL ON WHEELS" SECOND ARMORED DIVISION, THE 29TH INFANTRY DIVISION THAT WON FAME ON THE NORMANDY BEACHES, AND THE 30TH INFANTRY, WHOSE STAND AT AVRANCHES SHOOK THE U.S. THIRD ARMY LOOSE FOR ITS BLITZ THROUGH FRANCE.

THE DIVISION COMMANDER, MAJ.GEN.J.T.WYCHE, OF PINEHURST, N.C., LANDED IN NORTHERN FRANCE D-PLUS-EIGHT, TOOK CHERBOURG, WAS FIRST ACROSS THE SEINE, STARTED TOWARD BREST BUT WAS ORDERED TO BELGIUM, TRANSFERRED TO THE THIRD ARMY, AND NOW IS WITH THE SEVENTH.

APPROXIMATELY 600 GERMANS IN BURGERSPITAL, EUROPE'S LARGEST HOSPITAL, SURRENDERED TO CAPT.HUGH MCGETTIGAN, 79 MADISON AVE., BOSTON.

LT.JAMES MATHIAS, NEW YORK CITY, A FORMER HISTORY TEACHER, SAID 300 GERMANS ALONG WITH A LIEUTENANT GENERAL WHO WAS THE STRASBOURG COMMANDANT, WERE HOLDING OUT STILL AT FORT KLEBER NORTHWEST OF THE CITY.

MCCONNELL TOLD HOW CAPT.JAMES TIMOHY OF WASHINGTON, D.C., NEGOTIATED THE SURRENDER OF 379 GERMAN SOLDIERS AND 14 OFFICERS IN THE SOUTHEASTERN PART OF THE CITY.

"HE VOLUNTEERED TO GO ALONE INTO THE BARRACKS WHERE THEY WERE BARRICADED, STAYED THREE HOURS AND WE GOT WORRIED, BUT BACK HE CAME WITH THE WHOLE MOB."

FORTS FOCH AND PETAIN, BOTH NORTHWEST OF THE CITY, WERE TAKEN TODAY, AND ALSO THE AIRPORT AT NEUDORF IN THE SOUTHERN OUTSKIRTS.

SEVENTY-SEVEN ENLISTED MEN AND THE OFFICERS WERE FREED FROM THE GERMAN PRISON QUARTERS IN THE CITY. ALL HAD BEEN TAKEN PRISONER IN THE FIGHTING ON THE WESTERN SIDE OF THE VOSGES.

THE FLOOD-SWOLLEN RHINE OVERFLOWED INTO MANY GERMAN PILLBOXES ON THE GERMAN SIDE OF THE RIVER, AND SO FAR NAZI ARTILLERY BATTERIES FROM THE FAST BANK HAVE NOT BLASTED STRASBOURG.

WITH THE SIXTH ARMY GROUP, NOV.25-(AP)-WITH TWO LONG SPEAR-HEADS NOW THROUGH TO THE RHINE, LT.GEN.ALEXANDER M.PATCH'S U.S.SEVENTH ARMY POUNDED WITH INCREASING SPEED THROUGH THE PASSES OF THE VOSGES MOUNTAINS TODAY AND HAD ONLY SEVEN MILES TO GO BEFORE ITS TROOPS SPILLED OUT ON THE PLAINS OF ALSACE.

TO THE SOUTH, THE FRENCH FIRST ARMY TIGHTENED ITS GRIP ON THE BELFORT GAP WITH TWO DRIVES OF FOUR MILES EACH ALONG THE SOUTHERN FRINGES OF THE VOSGES, OCCUPYING A SERIES OF VILLAGES INCLUDING LA CHAPELLE SUR ROUGEMONT, EIGHT MILES NORTHEAST OF BELFORT; PEROUSE, ONE AND A HALF MILES EAST OF BELFORT, -,$ MEROUX, FOUR MILES SOUTHEAST.

ROLLING FORWARD SIX MILES, TROOPS OF THE AMERICAN THIRD DIVISION MOVED THROUGH THE SAALES PASS AND ENTERED URMOTT LATE IN THE DAY. THE 100TH DIVISION ENTERED GRANDFONTAINE, 10 MILES NORTHWEST OF THE TOWN OF SAALES, ITS PROGRESS IMPEDED ONLY BY SMALL ARMS FIRE AND LARGE ROAD BLOCKS. LARGE NUMBERS OF GERMANS SURRENDERED IN THIS AREA.

WITH STRASBOURG CLEAR EXCEPT FOR GERMANS STILL HOLDING RHINE BRIDGES, THE AMERICANS WERE REPORTED TO BE "SUCCESSFULLY COPING WITH COUNTERATTACKS NORTHEAST OF THE SAVERNE PASS.

THE 103RD DIVISION, MEETING ONLY LIGHT RESISTANCE BUT CONFRONTED WITH SOME OF THE WORST VOSGES TERRAIN, REACHED CLIMONT, FOUR MILES EAST OF SAALES, OVER ROADS BLOCKED BY FELLED TREES AND BLANKETED BY GERMAN MACHINEGUN FIRE.

THE 37TH DIVISION MANAGED TO SLUG ITS WAY EAST TO WISEMBACH, SIX MILES SOUTH OF SAALES.

WITH THE U.S. NINTH ARMY IN GERMANY, NOV. 25-(AP)-THE GERMANS HAVE THROWN THREE-FOURTHS OF THEIR ARMORED STRENGTH INTO THE GIANT SHOWDOWN BATTLE WEST OF THE RHINE -- A CLIMACTIC STRUGGLE WHICH HAS COST THE ENEMY MORE THAN 100,000 FIGHTING MEN IN THE PAST WEEK.

GENERAL EISENHOWER'S WINTER OFFENSIVE, NOW ENTERING ITS SECOND PHASE ON THE WESTERN FRONT, THUS MAY WELL SPELL THE DOWNFALL OF HITLERISM.

THE U.S. FIRST AND NINTH ARMIES AND THE BRITISH SECOND HAVE SLUGGED THEIR WAY INTO THE GERMAN DEFENSES OF THE RHINE AND RUHR VALLEYS WHERE IT HURTS THE MOST, IN THE COLOGNE AND DUSSELDORF AREAS.

THE NINTH ITSELF HAS CHEWED UP TWO PANZER DIVISIONS IN THE WEEK'S FIGHTING, WHILE THE FIRST AND BRITISH SECOND HAVE DONE AS WELL.

AS A RESULT, THE GERMANS NOT ONLY HAVE COMMITTED THE BULK OF THEIR ARMORED STRENGTH AGAINST THESE THREE ARMIES, BUT CRACK DIVISIONS FROM THE RUSSIAN FRONT AS WELL.

PRISONERS HAVE REPORTED THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND IS DETERMINED TO STEM THE DRIVE ON THE RUHR REGARDLESS OF THE COST TO ITS ARMIES' POSITIONS ELSEWHERE.

FOR THE MOMENT TORRENTIAL RAINS HAVE SLOWED THE PACE OF EISENHOWER'S DRIVE IN THIS SECTOR, BUT ONLY A FEW CLEAR DAYS WILL MEAN THE LAUNCHING OF THE SECOND PHASE OF THE GREAT OFFENSIVE. THE GERMANS ALREADY HAVE LOST 125 TANKS IN EIGHT DAYS' FIGHTING.

ON THE SOUTHERN FRONT THE FRENCH AND AMERICANS ARE RAPIDLY CLEARING THE GERMANS FROM FRANCE AND LT.GEN. GEORGE S. PATTON HAS BROKEN THROUGH THE METZ DEFENSES AND IS STANDING NOW ON THE GERMAN BORDER PREPARING FOR THE NEXT PHASE OF HIS BATTLE.

IT WAS THOUGHT AT FIRST THAT THE GERMAN ARMY WOULD EXECUTE ONLY A HOLDING ACTION WEST OF THE RHINE AND STAND ALONG THE RIVER. HOWEVER, PROBABLY ON HITLER'S ORDERS, DIVISIONS WERE BROUGHT ACROSS THE RHINE TO MEET THE ALLIES ON THEIR OWN GROUND.

THIS DELIGHTED THE ALLIED HIGH COMMAND, WHICH MEANT THAT THE BATTLE WOULD BE FOUGHT ON ALLIED TERMS ON SHORTER LINES OF COMMUNICATION, WITH A GREATER CHANGE OF DEALING AN ANNIHILATION BLOW AND DESTROYING THE GERMAN ARMIES BEFORE THEY CAN RETREAT ACROSS THE RHINE.

A8

THE NINTH ARMY HAS KILLED OR CAPTURED AN ESTIMATED 9,000 GERMANS IN A WEEK, THE FIRST AND BRITISH SECOND ARMIES HAVE ENJOYED SIMILAR SUCCESS, WHILE THE THIRD, U.S. SEVENTH AND FRENCH FIRST HAVE DONE FAR BETTER WITH THE RESULT THAT HITLER HAS LOST MORE THAN 100,000 FIGHTING MEN IN THE PAST WEEK.

IT IS A QUESTION HOW LONG THE GERMAN ARMY CAN ABSORB SUCH LOSSES. WHILE THE GERMANS ARE USING THEIR BEST TROOPS IN THIS SECTOR, INCLUDING CRACK PANZER UNITS, THE ADVANCING AMERICANS FIND MANY THIRD-RATE SOLDIERS OF LITTLE USE TO THE ENEMY EXCEPT FOR CANNON FODDER.

ON THE OTHER HAND, THE GERMANS APPARENTLY NO LONGER ARE LACKING IN ESSENTIAL WAR MATERIAL AND HAVE CONCENTRATED MORE ARTILLERY THAN EVER ON THE ROER VALLEY FRONT.

THE ENEMY ALSO IS STRIKING WITH AN EVER INCREASING NUMBER OF WEAPONS, INCLUDING FLYING BOMBS AND ROCKETS, WHICH HAVE SHOWN A HUGE GAIN OVER THE FIGHTING AREA IN THE PAST TEN DAYS.

RHINE
BY JAMES M.LONG
PARIS, NOV. 25(AP)-SOMEWHERE ACROSS THE RHINE LIES VICTORY IN THIS SECOND GREAT WORLD WAR. SEVEN ALLIED INVASION ARMIES HAVE WON THREE FOOTHOLDS ALONG ITS BANK AND ARE GETTING READY TO CROSS THE RIVER BARRIERS TO WREST THAT VICTORY FROM THE HEART OF THE REICH.

CROSSING WILL BE A TASK SO HERCULEAN THAT GEN. EISENHOWER HIMSELF HAS DESCRIBED IT AS VIRTUALLY A NAVAL OPERATION.

BUT THE ALLIES HAVE KNOWN SINCE BEFORE D-DAY THAT IT WAS ONE OF THE OBSTACLES ON THE ROAD TO BERLIN -- JUST AS THE ATLANTIC WALL AND SIEGFRIED LINE. AND THEY KNOW WHERE AND HOW IT WILL BE CROSSED TO CARRY WAR EAST OF THE RHINE FOR THE FIRST TIME SINCE THE DAYS OF NAPOLEON.

THEY AREN'T TELLING. SOON ENOUGH HEADLINES OF THE FREE WORLD'S PRESS AND FEAR-RIDDEN RUMOR CENTERS OF THE DOOMED REICH ALIKE WILL GIVE THE ANSWER.

THESE ARE SOME OF THE KEY FACTORS INVOLVED:

NEXT TO SPRING FLOOD TIME, THE ALP-FED RHINE IS AT ITS SWIFTEST THIS TIME OF YEAR, GORGED BY RAINS. EVEN IN MIDSUMMER IT IS ONE OF EUROPE'S SWIFTEST FLOWING MAJOR RIVERS -- DROPPING 800 FEET IN ITS 600-MILE TWISTING LENGTH FROM THE SWISS FRONTIER TO THE NORTH SEA.

IT IS EXTREMELY STEEP-BANKED -- TYPICAL CASTLES-ON-THE-RHINE COUNTRY -- FOR MUCH OF ITS LENGTH. IT RANGES FROM 160 YARDS WIDE AT THE SWISS BORDER TO 260 AT STRASBOURG 380 BETWEEN COLOGNE AND DUSSELDORF AND OVER 500 YARDS THROUGH HOLLAND.

NOT SINCE NAPOLEON HAS ANY ARMY FOUGHT ITS WAY ACROSS THE RIVER TO THE EAST. THE WAR OF 1870 WAS FOUGHT IN LORRAINE. GERMANY SWELLED BEYOND THE NATURAL RHINE BOUNDARY PARTLY FOR INDUSTRIAL RICHES OF THE GREAT SAAR VALLEY, PARTLY FOR A GREAT MILITARY BUFFER FRONT WEST OF THE WATER BARRIER.

BESIDES THE RIVER HURDLE ITSELF, GREAT FOREST AND HILL MASSES OF WESTERN GERMANY FORM TERRIFIC MILITARY OBSTACLES.

EXCEPTIONS ARE THE RUHR VALLEY AIMED TOWARD BERLIN, THE AACHEN GAP TO THE COLOGNE PLAIN, THE SAAR THROUGH TO FRANKFURT, THE KARLSRUHE GAP BETWEEN MANNHEIM AND STUTTGART, AND THE FREIBURG ROAD THROUGH THE BLACK FOREST.

BESIDES THE SO-FAR UNEXPLOITED FOOTHOLD ON THE DUTCH RHINE JUST WEST OF ARNHEM, THE ALLIES' FIRST RHINE POSITIONS ARE BOTH ON THE SOUTHERN FLANK.

THIS IS THE LATEST SUMMARY OF BRIDGES AND CROSSINGS THERE:

THERE ARE ONE ROAD AND ONE RAIL BRIDGE AT KARLSRUHE; TWO ROADS AND ONE RAIL BRIDGE AT STRASBOURG; ONE SEMI-PERMANENT PONTOON BRIDGE AT HAGENAU; AND SEVERAL MOBILE PONTOON BRIDGES OPPOSITE COLMAR.

TEN OTHER CROSSINGS, FIXED SPANS AND SEMI-PERMANENT PONTOONS BETWEEN KARLSRUHE AND THE SWISS FRONTIER HAVE BEEN KNOCKED OUT BY AIR ATTACKS OVER AN UNDISCLOSED PERIOD BUT ARE STILL NOT BELIEVED BACK IN USE.

PREVIOUSLY ALL WERE PREPARED FOR DEMOLITION BY THE GERMANS BUT THAT DOES NOT NECESSARILY MEAN THEY MAY ALL BE BLOWN UP OR EFFICIENTLY PUT OUT OF REPAIRABLE CONDITION BY THE TIME THEY FALL INTO ALLIED HANDS.

THE GERMANS HAVE PREPARED DEMOLITIONS BEFORE AND BEEN BOXED OUT BEFORE THEY COULD CARRY OUT EFFECTIVE DESTRUCTION. MUCH DEPENDS UPON SURPRISE AND SPEED OF ADVANCE.

THE RIVER IS TOO WIDE TO BE CROSSED BY A FIXED SPAN OF THE BAILEY BRIDGE TYPE THAT THE ALLIES SO FAR HAVE USED WITH EXTREME SPEED AND EFFICIENCY. IF IT IS TO BE BRIDGED IN ASSAULT, IT WILL HAVE TO BE A PONTOON JOB. AND THAT LIKELY WOULD BE IMPOSSIBLE, CONSIDERING THE SPEED OF THE RIVER, IF IT WERE NOT FOR INGENIOUS ALLIED AMPHIBIOUS EQUIPMENT -- THE DUCK AND ALLIGATOR AND THEIR KIN.

CAESAR, IT IS TRUE, BRIDGED THE RHINE IN TEN DAYS, BUT THAT WAS IN 55 B.C., LONG BEFORE THE ERA OF FIREARMS.

DETAILS OF POSSIBLE OPERATIONS BY WHICH CROSSINGS -- FOR CERTAINLY THERE WILL BE MORE THAN ONE -- WILL BE MADE CANNOT BE GIVEN, BUT ONE ALLIED STAFF OFFICER SAID IT WOULD AMOUNT TO THIS:

"WE'LL JUST HIT HIM WITH EVERYTHING WE'VE GOT-AND HE CAN'T STAND IT. WE'LL GET ACROSS, ALL RIGHT. DON'T EVER THINK WE'VE COME THIS FAR WITH THE IDEA OF STOPPING SHORT."

CRUISER SENT DOWN WITH DESTROYER

2 Luggers, 4 Small Transports Also Knocked Out; 5 Vessels Damaged

Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 26 (AP)—Carrier planes of the United States 3d Fleet sank sixteen Japanese ships, including a heavy cruiser and a destroyer, and two luggers, damaged five other surface craft and destroyed 72 planes last Friday in their fifth raid this month on Luzon, main island of the Philippines.

[A Tokyo broadcast claimed that Japanese aircraft and submarines attacked "an enemy task force" in "waters east of Luzon" Saturday (Japanese time) and sank three aircraft carriers, a "large cruiser" and a destroyer and said the attacks were continuing.]

250 Hit At Luzon

These results were reported in a communique today by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific Fleet chief. They increased to more than 250 the number of Japanese ships immobilized around Luzon Island alone by 3d Fleet carrier planes in eleven raids beginning September 20.

That total does not include the 59 warships sunk or damaged in the Second Battle of the Philippine Sea. Many others have been hit elsewhere in Philippine waters by both 3d Fleet pilots and Gen. Douglas MacArthur's land-based planes.

Nimitz said 29 Japanese planes were shot down by the raiders Friday, eight were bagged by surface ship gunners and 35 were destroyed aground.

Truck Convoy Strafed

The naval airmen strafed and left in flames seven tank cars near Nichols Field, on the outskirts of Manila. They strafed a Japanese convoy of 150 trucks south of the city.

The Friday raid extended from Santa Cruz, about 75 miles northwest of Manila, to Marinduque Island in Tayabas Bay south of Luzon, and presumably included vessels in Manila Bay.

Nimitz reported these ships sunk:

One heavy cruiser of the Kumano class, previously reported damaged.

One destroyer.

Two ships, presumably small, fast transports at Santa Cruz.

Nine cargo ships.

One small oiler.

Two luggers.

Damaged were:

Four cargo ships.

One oiler.

Carrier pilots inflicted great punishment on Japanese shipping at Cavite in the first Luzon strike September 20 and 21, when 40 ships were sunk, 11 probably sunk and 35 damaged, for a total of 86. The second most successful strike was made September 23 when 22 ships were sunk and 43 damaged in a two-

ENEMY DEFENSES WEAKENING UNDER BIG ALLIED BLOWS

Doughboys Seize Vital Height on Edge of Hurtgen Forest.

DRIVE ON DUREN

Third Army Advances in Saar, Breaks Through Maginot Line.

PARIS, Nov. 26—(AP) The U. S. First army seized the fortified town of Weisweiler today and drove the Germans from a height in the eastern edge of Hurtgen forest four and a half miles from the Roer river fortress of Duren, major barrier to the Allied smash toward the Rhine.

The enemy's defenses at the approaches to the Cologne plain were bending under the hammer blows of General Eisenhower's great Winter offensive. But there still was no hint of a collapse, Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead reported.

Near Edge of Forest

Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' Doughboys had fought out of the depths of Hurtgen forest, scene of the most sanguinary fighting on the Western front, but the northeast corner—five miles long and three miles wide—still had to be cleared before they hit the plain.

"We definitely are not out of the forest," a staff officer on the First Army front said tonight, "and the Germans are fighting stubbornly with no indication yet of any collapse."

Weisweiler, 13 miles inside the Reich and 28 miles west of Cologne on the Rhine, fell to the American infantry after three days of mauling, house-to-house combat.

Even before its fall, one armored task force by-passed it in wheeling around to the south and cutting the highway leading seven miles east to Duren.

The important height nearest to Duren is just north of Grosshau, five miles southwest of the Roer bastion, and to reach it the Doughboys had to fight across terrain where the Germans had fortified every house and connected them with trenches which were improved versions of those in the First World War.

Shell Town of Hurtgen

Two miles south of Grosshau, the town of Hurtgen was being plastered with artillery fire. Here the infantry had broken out of the forest, but to east were more woods before the Americans reach the plain.

(A Berlin military commentator declared that never before had the Americans "concentrated such strong forces in the Aachen sector." He said they were assaulting a narrow front with five divisions.)

Nine miles to the northwest of Duren a second Roer strongpoint of Julich was also hotly pressed as the U. S. Ninth army fought into Koslar, only two miles to the west.

All along the 400-mile Western Front the six Allied armies were driving steadily into Germany, Holland and into Alsace and Lorraine in France.

The last enemy resistance west of the Maas in Holland was virtually wiped out and the enemy was backed against the Reich in a thimble-size pocket on the east bank at the bastion of Venlo, whose suburbs on the west bank were under assault by the British Second army.

The U. S. Third army, wielding its assault arc around the coal fields and industries of the Saar basin, drove four miles into Germany at a new point west of the Saar, captured two Saar towns, and burst through the Maginot line to within but four miles of its border on the south.

The U.S. Seventh, army cleared Strasbourg of all Germans save those still holding out in a 600 yard bridgehead before the one railway and two highway bridges across the Rhine. Fanning out eight miles north of Strasbourg the 7th army army was within sight of the Rhine at one point.

(Berlin said the French were heavily shelling Kehl, across the Rhine at the eastern end of the bridges.)

Drive Through Saales Pass

Increasing the pressure on the German 15th army falling back out of the Vosges across the Rhine, the Seventh fought most of the way through Saales pass and was 19 miles west of Strasbourg.

On the south the French First army rooted the Germans from all forts east of Belfort, taking a large number of prisoners. On the Rhine plain the French were expanding west of Mulhouse to clear the entire area.

Perhaps none of the day's gains was more important nor hard-won than those on the first army front, where Hodges' doughboys hammered deeper into the enemy's Roer river line with advanes of up to a half mile against stoutly-held positions.

The first army staff officer declared that despite the bitterness of the fighting, the great battle of the Rhine had yet to be fought. The Germans were believed holding back reserves somewhere west of the Rhine ready to be flung into the struggle.

Still before the Doughboys are the formidable field fortifications which have made progress costly since they first broke into Germany.

The type of trench system which the Americans encountered before Grosshau extends all the way back to Duren.

When the Doughboys break out of Hurtgen forest and drive into more maneuverable country where tanks will be able to give them close support, the Germans may choose to commit the bulk of their armor and the great battle for the Rhine will be joined.

Censorship permitted disclosure that the First and Fourth infantry divisions were waging the battle of Hurtgen forest.

It also was disclosed that Major Gen. Terry Allen, who led the First Infantry division through North Africa and Sicily, had returned to the wars as commander of the 104 th infantry division—the "Timberwolves"—and that his troops were the first to enter Eschweiler.

Planes Blast Rail Line

Strongpoints, pillboxes and gun positions were under attack by fighter bombers ahead of the First army's battle lines. Fortified towns rails and fuel dumps around Duesseldorf, on the Rhine to the northeast, also were blasted by Allied warplanes.

The British Second army on the north flank of the Aachen front clung to its positions thrust within four miles of the Roer river in heavy fighting around Wurm and Beeck, three miles northeast of Geilenkirchen.

But the British were on the move a few miles to the northwest in eastern Holland.

The Germans were dug in hastily in the western suburbs of Venlo and retreat was virtually impossible, because the bridges at their backs had been blown.

The main section of Venlo, however, lies on the east bank.

Lt. Gen. Miles C. Dempsey's forces reached the Maas at a point about three miles north of Venlo, at Broekhuizenvorst, 9 miles north, and Blitterwijk, 11 miles north.

Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's new crossing into Germany west of the Saar Basin reached Tettingen, four miles inside the Reich, the Allied communique reported. This was west of previous penetrations around Oberleuken, were two savage counterattacks were hurled back yesterday.

RUSSIANS TAKE SLOVAK POINTS

2 Important Road Hubs And 60 Other Places Seized

London, Monday, Nov. 27 (AP)—Russian mountain troops shattered a main 60-mile German defense line across Eastern Slovakia yesterday by capturing the key road hubs of Michalovce and Humenne in a twelve-mile advance through flooded valleys, Moscow announced [illegible] 60 places in their drive.

Simultaneously Soviet tankmen in Hungary swept through the smoking ruins of Hatvan, collapsed German anchor point 25 miles northeast of Budapest, in an intensified effort to surround the capital and break through on the roads leading into Austria and Central Slovakia.

Berlin said Red Army units had fought their way into the fog-shrouded streets of Szigetszentmiklos, on Csepel Island in the Danube River five miles south of Budapest's municipal boundary, and also had tried to cross into Western Hungary 'to take Budapest from the rear."

The Russians, under the protection of strong artillery fire from guns mounted on Csepel, rowed across the western arm of the Danube, but failed to land because of German counterfire which sank most of the boats, Berlin said.

"The survivors had to swim back to the island while a few [illegible] remaining afloat also had to return," a Transocean broadcast said.

While Moscow officially did not confirm the landings on Csepel Island, where the Germans admitted Axis troops were being pressed back to the northern tip of the 30-mile-long tongue of land that juts into Budapest, dispatches from the Soviet capital said it was understood that the Russians were well established there.

Budapest Shelled

Budapest was being shelled by Soviet artillery mounted on Csepel and in the eastern and northeastern outskirts, and also attacked by Red Army planes. Street fighting also was reported inside the capital following Saturday's Berlin statement suggesting that the Red Army had contacts with "Communist elements" in the capital.

Moscow's communique confirmed yesterday's German announcement that Hatvan had fallen to the Red Army, whose spearheads are within fifteen miles of the Danube's banks on the northern side of Budapest, and within twenty miles of Vac, on the great Danube bend where the river turns westward toward Vienna, Austrian capital.

Astride Important Lines

Seizure of Hatvan gave the Russians control of the southern end of a line running into Central Slovakia, 30 miles to the north, and Berlin said Soviet units also had penetrated into Eger and Miskolc, 60 and 85 miles northeast of the capital.

Those two towns are astride other important railways linking the Budapest and Slovakian fronts.

Berlin reported continuing "defensive successes" against a powerful week-old Soviet Latvian offensive, which Moscow has not yet confirmed. The Germans hold a 5,000-square mile area in northwestern Latvia which the Russians appe ently intend to reduce in order to secure their flank before turning their full Winter weight against German East Prussia and Axis lines in Poland.

The newspaper Pravda in Moscow said the Russians had sealed off in Latvia one-fifth of all the German divisions on the Eastern front. That would be 40 out of 200 Axis divisions.

Stalin Reveals Capture

Premier-Marshal Stalin announced an order of the day the fall of Michalovce and Hummene to Col. Gen. Ivan Petrov's Fourth Ukraine army moving westward in Czechoslovakia on a 60-mile front between the southern Poland and northern Hungarian borders.

Michalovce, 18 miles northwest of Ungvar and only 28 miles east of the major Slovakian stronghold of Kassa (Mosice), was taken in a four-mile advance along the southern edge of the Cerna Gura mountain range, and after the Russians had crossed the Laborec river.

Hummene, a five-way junction 11 miles north of Michalovce, is 21 miles south of the Polish frontier. Both towns are on the Laborec river and also on the trunk railway connecting Sanok in southern Poland with Satoraljauhely in northern Hungary.

New Government In Iran Reported

London, Monday, Nov. 27 (AP)—The Moscow radio said early today that a new Iranian Cabinet had been formed under premiership of Baiat Sakun-Es-Yautane, replacing that of Mohammed Saed, which fell after rejecting Russia's request for oil concessions in northern Iran.

Soviet Press Resumes Denunciations of Iran

By The Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Nov. 26—The Soviet press reported, today that "the Government crisis continues in Iran," and renewed charges of official persecution or democratic elements in the country.

Tass dispatches, appearing in all the leading Moscow newspapers, contained predictions attributed to Iranian sources that even if Premier-designate Bakatu succeeded in forming a Cabinet, its life would be short.

No mention was made of the current status of the Soviet Union's request for northern Iranian oil concessions that precipitated the fall of former Premier Mohamed Maraghei Said.

Tass described how Iranian military authorities for the second time had closed down on Zafar, publication of the Teheran Trade Union Council, for publishing photographs of soldiers breaking up workers' meetings celebrating the twenty-seventh anniversary of the Russian Revolution.

46,000 Estonians Killed By Nazis, Reds Charge

30,000, Including Women and Children, Slain at Narva

LONDON, Nov. 26 (AP).—The Soviet State Extraordinary Commission on Crimes charged today in a 10,000-word document that the Germans killed more than 46,000 prisoners and civilians in Estonia.

The report, broadcast by the Moscow radio, said that at Narva alone more than 30,000 men, women and children were killed and the bodies disposed of mostly by cremation in bonfires or furnaces. More than a score of concentration camps supplied the victims, the commission declared.

It named Field Marshals Wilhelm Ritter von Leeb and Kuchler and Colonel Generals Walther von Model and Georg Lindemann as the members of the German high command principally responsible for the atrocities.

122 Nazi Planes Downed In Clash Above Refinery

Bag In Allied Raid On Misburg Natural Oil Plant, Is Third Largest To Date

London, Nov. 26 (AP)—At least 122 Nazi fighter planes of approximately 200 which rose to protect Germany's largest natural oil refinery at Misburg were shot down in aerial combat today by an American fleet of 700 fighters and 1,100 heavy bombers.

The American fighters reported downing 110 of the Nazi interceptors, while twelve were destroyed by bomber crews. The escort planes also destroyed seven German planes on the ground in strafing attacks.

37 Bombers Missing

Thirty-seven American bombers and 13 fighters were reported missing from the operations.

It was the third largest bag of Nazi fighters shot down in combat. Just last November 2, American pilots picked off 134 enemy planes over the Merseburg oil center—thirteen miles west of Leipzig—and Germany sacrificed 117 in the same area on September 11.

A gigantic aerial battle swirled through the skies over Misburg.

40 To 50 Below Zero

Through dense clouds stained with exploding flak from hundreds of ground guns, American pilots engaged the Germans in temperatures ranging from 40 to 50 degrees below zero.

Today's attack was the ninth on the Misburg refinery, which lies fifteen miles east of Hannover and has a yearly production of 220,000 tons. It followed up yesterday's raid by 2,000 American planes on the Leuna works at Merseberg, one of Germany's largest synthetic oil plants. Only a dozen enemy fighters were encountered on the Merseburg mission.

The Saturday attacks cost twelve bombers and five fighters, a delayed communique disclosed.

Rail Viaduct Bombed

Other targets hammered today were a four-lane rail viaduct at Bielefeld and rail yards at Hamm, fifteen miles farther northeast. The viaduct, a link between the Ruhr and central Germany, was attacked November 2, but reconnaissance had shown traffic still moving over it.

Nearly 4,300 Allied planes ripped at Nazi supply lines over the week end, and the toll taken included at least 56 locomotives, 248 oil cars, and 40 motor vehicles destroyed or severely damaged.

V-2 Rocket Sites Hit

Two V-2 rocket-launching sites in Holland were blasted by RAF "Pinpoint" bombers today. One site was well camouflaged in a wood, but a Spitfire squadron planted bombs on it, then raked the woods with cannon and machine-gun fire. Cannon shells were observed bursting among tree-sheltered equipment at the other launching platform.

RAF Beaufighters meanwhile struck at shipping off the Dutch and northwest German coasts.

RAF Mosquitos overnight took advantage of moonlight to shoot up twenty trains in northern Holland and Germany. Two other groups of Mosquitos attacked Nurnberg, a rail junction for supplies to the front. Nurnberg was ablaze with lights when the Mosquitos arrived. The lights were snuffed out during the attack, but came on again before it was over.

Scores Three Kills in Day

LONDON, Nov. 26 (AP).—Lieutenant William E. Whalen, of Hamilton, N. Y., scored a triple kill in the air battle over Misburg, Germany, today, in which American fighter pilots downed 116 of more Nazi planes.

Many Killed As Robot Hits Store In England

London, Nov. 26 (AP)—Many women and children were killed or injured recently when a V-bomb demolished a large store in southern England during a rush hour when the store's toyland was crowded with mothers and youngsters doing early Christmas shopping.

Twenty-four hours after the missile struck rescuers were still digging under floodlights for the bodies of persons believed trapped.

Fatal casualties were numerous and many injured were hospitalized.

RAF Curbs Rocket Attacks

Brussels, Nov. 26 (AP)—The railway bombing program of the RAF Tactical Air Force on the Rhine and Maas fronts has diminished considerably the weight and intensity of stratosphere rocket attacks, it was officially disclosed tonight.

Alexander Made Field Marshal, Given Mediterranean Command

LONDON, Nov. 26—(AP) Gen. Sir Harold Alexander has been made a field marshal and appointed to succeed Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson as Supreme commander in the Mediterranean theater, it was announced tonight.

Gen. Wilson was appointed to succeed the late Field Marshal Sir John Dill as chief of the British joint staff mission in Washington.

The announcement added that Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark, of the U. S. army, had been made commander in chief of the Allied 15th army.

"The dates of the actual transfers of command will be regulated in accordance with operational and other requirements," said the announcement from Prime Minister Churchill's office, 10 Downing street.

The appointments, the announcement said, "are the result of agreement between the Prime Minister and the President of the United States."

Alexander's promotion to field marshal was made effective from June, 1944, date of the capture of Rome.

Thus he was made senior to Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, Britain's West Front chief who Aug. 31 was appointed field marshal supernumerary as of Sept. 1.

Alexander, who will be 53 Dec. 10, becomes Britain's youngest field marshal.

Eight British generals have been promoted to field marshal since this war began, but only Alexander and Montgomery received the baton while leading armies in the field. Montgomery, 56 when promoted, previously was the youngest.

Clare Luce And Cigarettes— Where Are They? Britons Cry

London, Nov. 26 (AP)—The battle front-touring House Military Affairs Committee ran plump into two posers today—"where's Clare" and "where are the cigarettes?"—as it unfolded an ambitious program of investigations for its official inspection of the European war scene.

Over the first press conference the committee has held since arriving in London presided Representative Matt Merritt (D., N. Y.)—darkly unshaved "because," he apologized officially, "I've been plenty busy"—and ruddyfaced Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.), carrying the ball for the Republican members.

Much Ado About Clare

But the woman member, Clare Boothe Luce (R., Conn.) was missing.

So, too, were most of the other members of the committee. Among those present were a score or more of British correspondents, mostly women.

With fire in their eyes and daggers in their words, the women journalists demanded the whereabouts of Mrs. Luce after Merritt and Thomas explained that they had been appointed spokesmen for the committee.

Inquired one of them: "Would you care to set at rest the ugly rumor going around that this method of holding the conference was taken because the other members are anxious to suppress the publicity value of the lady of Connecticut?"

"Nothing to it," shot back Merritt," see the lady from Connecticut and she'll tell you the same thing."

"Then, where is she staying," persisted the feporter.

Merritt passed that one.

"Is the Army holding her incommunicado?"

"Ridiculous," said Merritt.

Merritt Not Their "Keeper"

"Did the Army forbid her to issue statements?"

"That's a lie," he asserted.

"Will you arrange for her to meet the press?"

"I'm not the keeper of members of the committee," he sidestepped.

The cigarette question was easier on Merritt—even though there's still no answer to account for the shortage.

Both he and Thomas said they have asked the Army Supply Service for an explanation immediately upon arrival and were expecting an answer soon.

"It it's the black market it ought to be uncovered," observed Thomas.

They said the committee would investigate the reported shell shortage as well as measure the morale of the GI's, study the problems of eventual demobilization, consult field soldiers on the necessity for compulsory military training and look into hospitalization of war wounded.

A trip around London convinced them that the bomb damage is "terrific" and the stamina of the British "tops."

Merritt said that the members had agreed to keep quiet except for statements issued through a spokesman.

"Just Like In Washington"

"But," he said, shrugging his shoulders, "there's nothing to stop you from talking to them and nothing to stop them from making any statements they please. Call it a gentleman's agreement, just like in Washington."

An Army spokesman said that as far as it was concerned the Congressmen are free to make any statements they please within the bounds of military secrecy.

Thomas said "if there is a shortage of shells, then the blame for it can be laid on the labor barons who have condoned strikes."

"Labor Barons" Hillman, Bridges

His statement came during the press conference at which he said he intended to find definite answers to two questions over here—"first, whether there is a real shortage, and second, who is responsible for it."

"You would absolve the employers?" inquired one correspondent.

"I'm absolving no one," snapped Thomas.

"If there is a shortage and it has anything to do with Congress, there will be a speedy recovery," declared Merritt.

"The American people won't tolerate it," said Thomas.

"Would you care to identify any of these labor barons?" he was asked.

"Sure," he said, "I'll name them. Sidney Hillman," then, after a pause, "and Harry Bridges."

"It's the strikes in wartime in war plants that may be causing the shortages in some war implements," he maintained.

Mussolini Reported To Be Seriously Ill

London, Nov. 26 (AP)—The Paris radio tonight broadcast reports from the Italian frontier that Benito Mussolini is seriously ill at his villa on Lake Garda.

"He is bedridden with a gastric ailment. Several members of his family are constantly at his bedside," the broadcast said.

Shinwell Protests "Interference"

Wheatley Hill, Durham, England, Nov. 26 (AP)—Emanuel Shinwell, Labor member of Parliament, protested in a speech here today against "unwarranted interference" with the resistance movements in France and Belgium, asserting that he refused to believe they were suppressed for military reasons.

"It was because they demanded the nationalization of banks and industries and the end of the infamous rule of reactionaries," he said.

Can't Be Suppressed, He Says

"We did not expect our men to liberate Europe in order to put the humpty dumpties back on the wall and bring back the bad old days. No action by military authorities can permanently suppress left wing opinions in Europe.

"I am not suggesting," he continued, "that Mr. Churchill should encourage left-wing movements in Europe—that is more than can be expected from him—but at the least he should refrain from interfering with men whose sole desire is to destroy the power of industrialists and financiers who were largely responsible for bringing France and Belgium to their present position."

Predicts A Labor Government

Shifting to home politics, Shinwell predicted that Britain would choose a Labor Government after the next election and termed erroneous the conclusions of Ralph Assheton, newly appointed chairman of the Conservative party, who said yesterday that he foresaw another coalition government after the war.

"This political angle to form another national government and put it in the shop windows will not deceive the electors," Shinwell said. "In any event, labor will not put itself in the undignified position of playing second fiddle to the Tories. We are not going to assist them to maintain a system which has outstayed its welcome."

Triple Air Blow Nails German Tanks On Road

With U. S. 9th Army in Germany, Nov. 26 (AP)—Flushing German tanks into the open on roads for the first time since the battle of France, American fighter bombers destroyed or damaged nineteen of them this morning by employing triple air-blow tactics.

Eleven German tanks were destroyed, bringing the total of Nazi tanks knocked out on the 9th Army front to 156 for the past ten days. Eight others were damaged. It was revealed that two German Panzer divisions which had been mangled by ground and air forces were the 9th Panzer and the 15th Panzer Grenadiers.

Makes The Boys Happy

"One mission like this morning's makes the boys happy for a month," Capt. Edward Tibbets, of Plainview, Texas, a squadron leader, declared, at the most advanced 29th Tactical Air Force field on this front. "Our squadron caught twenty on a road south of Julich near Kirchberg. We took our time and when the bombing and strafing ended, eight tanks were knocked out and eight were damaged."

"One squadron bombed the town of Kirchberg and then another came along and gave it a second working over. When we arrived, they had the tanks on the move in the road." Tibbets continued. "Some tried to get off the road and hide behind houses but we flattened the houses along with the tanks."

9th Army Drive Is Spearheaded By 3 Divisions

2d Armored, 29th and 30th Infantry Battering Way Toward Roer River Line

WITH THE 9TH ARMY, in Germany, Nov. 26 (AP).—Three veteran American divisions spearheaded the 9th Army's present offensive into Germany.

The old "Hell on Wheels" 2d

30.24 — 20691

Armored Division, veterans of North Africa, Sicily, France, Belgium, Holland and now Germany is commanded by Major General Ernest N. Harmon, veteran of Sicily and Italy. The 29th Infantry Division fought through three countries under Major General Charles Hunter Gerhardt to get into Germany. The 30th Infantry Division, veterans of St. Lo, who held the vital Avranches elbow under the massive German tank assault near Mortain, is commanded by Major General Leland S. Hobbs.

All three divisions jumped off shortly before noon ten days ago in opening the Roer Valley drive.

The 2d Armored Division, plunging into heavy mine fields and fortified positions east of Geilenkirchen, captured the initial objectives of Immendorf and Floverich and entered Puffendorf on schedule the first day.

On the 2d's southern flank, the 29th moved on Siersdorf and then swung toward Setterich, a heavily mined and strongly defended Nazi bastion.

South of the 29th was the 30th, which slugged its way forward into the town of Euchen and at the same time started a street battle to oust the Germans completely from Wurselen.

The entire operation was under the veteran 19th Army Corps and its new commander, Major General Raymond S. McLain, who formerly commanded the 90th Infantry Division.

YANKS SEIZE WEISWEILER

1st Army At Edge Of Forest But Not Entirely Out

Whitehead

With U. S. 1st Army in Germany, Nov. 26—American troops of the 1st Army captured Weisweiler today on the road to Duren.

Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges's infantry drove to the edge of the Hurtgen Forest and near the open Cologne plain.

But they still were not entirely out of the dark forest in which they have fought such bitter and bloody battles, and they had not yet reached the plain.

Enemy Fights Stubbornly

"We definitely are not out of the forest," a staff officer said tonight, "and the Germans are fighting stubbornly with no indications yet of any collapse."

Hodges's troops continued to make slow but steady gains through the forest, which has been one of the most formidable barriers yet encountered.

Near the town of Hurtgen, infantrymen fought to clear ground, but even there they were not cleared of the main forest, and have more woods fighting before reaching the plains.

Great Battle Yet To Come

The staff officer said that although the fighting had been bitter, the great battle for the Rhine has yet to be fought. The Germans, he explained, are believed to have reserves which have not yet been committed to action. These forces are believed to be somewhere west of the Rhine, ready to drive into the attack when the German high command thinks the situation warrants.

There is no reason to believe that the slow, bloody fighting on this front has come to an end. The Germans still are fighting hard.

Ahead of the doughboys are formidable field fortifications which are making the progress slow and costly.

Trenches Link Houses

An example of this is in the fortifications east of Weisweiler and in the Grosshau-Duren area. There the Germans have fortified each house. They are connected by trenches and tunnels, and have barbed wire strung around them.

On one hill the Germans had barbed wire strung to the height of a man's head, and a house defended by bazookas, machine-guns and mortars. The infantry circled the hill, attacked the house from the rear, and captured it in the face of heavy fire.

It is plain the Germans are trying to bog down the front into trench warfare and create a stalemate, but Hodges has no intention of permitting the fighting to become static. Progress is slow but steady behind a great weight of artillery fire, and of bombing whenever the weather clears up.

Extends Back To Duren

Before Grosshau, the enemy dug into trenches behind thick wire, and this same type of fortification extends on back to Duren.

The trench system is pretty much like that of the first World War, with firing parapets. But the enemy has made some improvements with efforts to protect the defenders from flak and machine-gun fire.

Once the Germans decide to commit the bulk of their armor, then the great battle for the Rhine will be under way. This is likely to begin when the infantrymen break out of the Hurtgen Forest and drive into more maneuverable country, where armor will be able to give them close support.

Yanks Hoax Nazis by Launching Drive Without Artillery Barrage

WITH THE 30TH INFANTRY DIVISION IN GERMANY, Nov. 26—(AP) Staging what 19th corps headquarters praised as "the perfect infantry attack" the 30th division snatched two villages away from outwitted German defenders in a matter of minutes in opening its part of the U. S. Ninth army Rhineland drive.

After tantalizing the Germans for a month with dangling dishpans the boys scored the success in seizing the towns of Euchen and Mariadorf before the startled Germans knew what was happening.

"We fooled them by omitting the artillery barrage which normally preceded our attacks," said Lt. E. J. Kerrigan, of Aberdeen, S. D. "Seeing no artillery fire the Huns didn't think we would attack.

"We didn't start the artillery until the infantry was charging a half mile across open fields to the towns. Before the Jerries could do anything about it we'd taken our objectives."

A number of Germans were caught sound asleep. They were on the night shift that had been digging trenches. The wily Doughboys who arrived shortly after noon had to wake them up to capture them. The perfect coordination of the daring attack was achieved through several weeks of careful planning and briefing and study of the terrain.

The Doughboys tore across the fields and the German artillery fell behind them. If they had walked instead of taking off on the double they would have been hit. As it was casualties from shells and small arms fire were few.

One unit hit a minefield but kept moving and took its objective. Heroes cropped up by the dozen. One Yank whose foot was blown off by a mine had the courage to wisecrack "for seven years I had a corn on that foot—now it won't bother me anymore.

The 117th regiment, which took Mariadorf on the Aachen-Julich road had been tantalizing the Germans for some time before the attack by waving a red comforter at them when their shells missed. This regiment, commanded by Col. Walter Johnson, of Missoula, Mont., captured intact the vital Mariadorf bridge under which the Nazis had placed 400 pounds of demolitions.

All the enemy had to do was to press a button to blow the bridge up—but they didn't have time.

While the 120th regiment, commanded by Col. Hammond Birks, of Chicago, Ill., was taking Euchen, the 119th renewed its attack on the Germans in Wurselen—the town they had shared with the enemy for a month.

During this period the 119th, commanded by Col. Edwin Sutherland, of San Francisco, annoyed the Germans by rigging up a daisy chain of dishpans and rattling them by remote control at night. The Germans wasted a lot of ammunition on the foolish targets.

The hard opening blows of the 30th, coordinated with attacks of the 29th infantry and Second Armored divisions in adjoining sectors to the north, gave such momentum to the Ninth army drive that it rolled 10 miles in 10 days against the most desperate kind of opposition.

Since landing in Normandy on June 15, the 30th fought its way across France and Belgium and Holland and, with Second Armored division, breached the Siegfried Line on Oct. 2.

Editor Made Colonel

U. S. 9th Army Headquarters, Nov. 26 (AP)—Lieut. Col. Francis F. Flaherty, of Eureka, Cal., assistant operations officer of Lieut. Gen. William H. Eisenhower Visits Front During a German Attack

By The Associated Press.

SARREBOURG, France, Nov. 24 (Delayed)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, accompanied by Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Twelfth Army Group commander, visited newly occupied Sarrebough today while the Germans were counter-attacking only five miles to the northeast.

Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, commander of the Sixth Army Group, and Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch, commander of the United States Seventh Army, traced the situation on a map for General Eisenhower, who nodded his head in approval.

General Eisenhower apparently was talked out of going farther forward by General Devers, who explained the road to Strasbourg was clear but that there were still German snipers, artillery and planes about.

American Legion Artist With 9th Army Wounded

By The Associated Press.

WITH THE AMERICAN NINTH ARMY, In Germany, Nov. 26—Hamilton Greene, artist and photographer for The American Legion Magazine, was recovering today from a machine-gun wound received when he was accompanying assault troops into Geilenkirchen.

Mr. Greene, who had just arrived on the front, went into Geilenkirchen on the day when the city was taken. His unit was pinned down by machine-gun fire and he received a severe abdominal wound.

Tank Attacks Mapped On School Sand Table

With U. S. 2nd Armored Division in Germany, Nov. 26 (AP)—Before launching its drive November 16 toward the Roer River in conjunction with other United States 9th Army outfits, Maj. Gen. Ernest N. Harmon's 2d Armored Division plotted every future move of all its units on a 12-foot-square sand table.

The table was built on the floor of a Dutch schoolhouse by a detail headed by Capt. Carl A. Lindstrom, McKeesport, Pa.

It took five days to make and was an exact miniature of the future battle terrain, with hills, rivers, trees, roads, houses, slag piles, coal mines, foxholes, anti-tank ditches and other German defenses. For more than a week all the men in the division from ranking officers down studied the layout and rehearsed individual parts in the attack.

Maquis Sentence 5 Men To Death After Explosion

Group Constitutes Self as Court But Stays Executions

PARIS, Nov. 26 (AP).—The local resistance committee of Pertuis, twenty-seven miles north of Marseille, constituted itself as a people's court today and sentenced five men to death after a barracks explosion had killed thirty-four members of a Republican Security force and injured eighteen others.

The committee then suspended execution of the sentences for twenty-four hours so that a court trial might be held.

First reports of the French Press Agency said a group had attacked the barracks with hand grenades and had placed time bombs in it. The agency later quoted official sources as saying the casualties were due to an explosion of munitions in the cellar.

De Gaulle Visits King Farouk

New York, Nov. 26 (AP)—The BBC reported tonight that Gen. Charles de Gaulle was in Cairo and visited King Farouk Saturday.

The broadcast, heard by United States Government monitors, said this was the first indication de Gaulle had left France and noted that he recently had been invited to visit Moscow.

45 Civilians Wounded

The Premier said late figures showed 45 civilians and about a dozen gendarmes were wounded in the clash. He declared that, although three German-made hand grenades were picked up by police, there was no immediate evidence it might have been a German plot to foment rebellion.

In announcing he had summoned the Cabinet, Pierlot said, "I think it will be necessary to be more severe in preventing public demonstrations. We do not desire to impose limits on normal liberties even during the current state of emergency, but we will permit only peaceful demonstrations."

The Premier said the police would begin a house-to-house search for arms still hidden by members of various resistance groups who failed to obey the Government order for the surrender of all weapons.

The Premier indicated no special decrees would be formulated at tomorrow's Cabinet session because the Government has ample powers to deal with emergencies and Belgium has been in an official state of siege since the German invasion in 1940.

Fernand Demany, leader of the anti-Government resistance movement, said yesterday's clash precipitated the final schism between the Pierlot regime and the various resistance movements.

"There can be no compromise," he said in an interview. "Until yesterday it was a misunderstanding. Now it is a drama—a brute struggle. Now it is a crisis.

Belgian Cabinet To Meet In Crisis

Greene

sels, Nov. 26 (AP)—Pre[mier] t Pierlot tonight called [an] ency meeting of his Cab[inet] morrow to consider the crisis sing from a bloody clash be[tween] een anti-Government demon[strators] rators and black-helmeted state olice in front of the Chamber of Deputies.

The Premier, who rushed to Brussels from his country home in Luxembourg by automobile, said in an interview that the demonstration yesterday "was staged by a small minority, including Communists who have the childish hope of seizing power, but we will not yield."

Two Possibilities Seen

"Two things are possible. Either Pierlot remains with dictatorial powers and reigns against the people or we get a young democratic government to work for the people."

The Pierlot Government has demanded that the members of the various resistance groups surrender their weapons and if, they desired, join the regular army individually. The deadline for the surrender of arms was a week ago Saturday night.

The Government's version of the affair, which contrasted sharply with that given by Demany, said the demonstrators touched off the clash when two of them led the crowd into the "neutral zone" around the Parliament buildings and thrust a small hand grenade into an armored car manned by two Belgian state policemen.

Thought Police Did It

"The police threw the grenade back to save their own lives and it exploded among the crowd," the spokesman said. "Then the demonstrators, seeing the grenade coming from the armored car, thought the police started the attack and began to swing fists. The police fired two volleys—one in the air over the heads of the crowd and one into the ground. The crowd fell back and order was restored."

Demany declared the police fired into the demonstrators and hurled hand grenades among them.

The Government spokesman said the "neutral zone" was established nearly twenty years ago when demonstrators invaded the Parliament building and the Government banned future demonstrations in a small zone around the Ministries, Parliament buildings and the King's palace.

Two state policemen and one gendarme were wounded in yesterday's skirmish, he said, and "several" persons were arrested. He asserted unexploded hand grenades were found in the streets after the crowd fled.

Demany, discussing the crisis, asserted:

"We must not have a revolution. We must have a succession of evolutions until we achieve a new, young government. This government of Pierlot's is old and out of touch.

"Since the Germans have been driven out, two traitors have been shot out of 60,000 collaborators arrested and now in one day we have four patriots killed by the police. That is the score—two traitors and four patriots."

Would Try Industrialists

Demany said that there were about 54,000 collaborationists in prison in Belgium with the other ten per cent set free, but he asserted the arch-supporters of Germany were still at large.

"We ask only that the big collaborationists of industry and finance be arrested and tried for treason," he said. "During German occupation they collaborated 100 per cent with the enemy. Now they are free and sabotaging industry."

Demany said that King Leopold, who still is a prisoner in Germany, was not popular with the Belgian masses.

"First," the resistance leader said, "because he capitulated to the Germans without consulting his Cabinet, and, secondly, because he refused to escape to England to carry on the fight."

BONOMI CABINET IN ROME RESIGNS

Sforza Mentioned As Possible Choice For Next Premier

Emergency meeting of Belgian Cabinet called..... Page 10

Rome, Nov. 26 (AP)—The Government of Premier Ivanoe Benomi, in power less than six months, resigned today after two weeks of crisis in which its six parties were unable to agree on a program to rule war-torn, hungry Italy.

Crown Prince Umberto, Lieutenant General of the Realm, reserved decision on the resignation, and later conferred with the presidents of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies. The Bonomi Cabinet meanwhile continued to conduct normal business.

Differences in the Bonomi Cabinet arose mainly from opposite programs of the Liberals and Christian Democrats on one hand, and Socialists and Communists on the other.

A brief official communique said the 71-year-old Bonomi, who took the helm in succession to Marshal Pietro Badoglio after the fall of Rome last June, had decided to resign after a conference with all party heads.

Armistice Terms To Stand

The Bonomi Government has protested the "severity" of Allied armistice terms, but an Allied official today declared there was absolutely no possibility of any negotiations for revision of the terms, and that any new government must abide by them.

Umberto is expected to confer with leaders of parties heretofore not represented in Bonomi's six-party coalition government, or in the Committee of National Liberation. One such group is the monarchist "democratic" party which has consistently attacked the Bonomi government.

Much speculation concerning a new government centered on whether the left wing would be given major representation, or important portfolios, such as the Ministry of the Interior and Foreign Ministry which Bonomi had held himself.

Under Attack For Fortnight

The government has been under attack for a fortnight by Communists and Socialists, supported by the Actionists, while the right wing maintained a "don't rock the boat" policy.

Major problems, which all parties agreed have remained unsolved by the Bonomi Government, are food, transportation, and the purge of Fascists.

Count Carlo Sforza, minister without portfolio in the Bonomi Government, is widely mentioned as a possible choice for the next Premier.

NAZIS DIG IN INSIDE FAENZA

British Fling Assault Arc Around Po Valley Town

Rome, Nov. 26 (AP)—British 8th Army troops in swift punches have flung an assault arc around the Po Valley town of Faenza and the Germans are digging in inside the city (population 22,500) astride broad Highway 9 southeast of Bologna.

British troops and tanks crossed the swollen, mud-piled Marzeno river south of Faenza. The village of Borgo Durbecco on the east was being cleared, and 8th Army units northeast of the city cleared the east bank of the Lamone river for more than two miles above Highway 9. The highway arrows 29 miles on to Bologna.

Yanks Seize Mount Belvedere

American troops fighting twenty miles north of Pistoia seized Mount Belvedere in limited advances northwest of Porretta, and knocked back a stiff German counterattack on that height.

The 5th Army men occupied half a dozen villages, including Gaggio Montano.

This action was about 30 miles southwest of Bologna. Headquarters reported no news from the stalemated American front about a dozen miles south of Bologna.

Germans were reported digging trenches and fortifying houses in Faenza for a last-ditch defense against British and Polish forces closing on the city. Both bridges into Faenza from the adjoining village of Borgo Durbecco had been destroyed by the enemy.

Nazis Throw In Reinforcements

German reinforcements were hastily thrown in against British units, supported by tanks, which won a mile-wide bridgehead over the Marzeno river below Faenza. The river banks are piled high with mud from previous floods, and the stream itself now is some 25 feet wide.

Polish troops south of Highway 9 occupied Mount Lodolone and Pietramora west of the Samoggia river, and pushed westward to the Marzeno river.

The advances northeast of Faenza carried through the villages of Basiago, San Barnaba, and San Giovannino. Only a few scattered German rear guards remained along the east bank of the Lamone river and along the Montone river farther east.

Swedish Warcraft Convoying Passenger Ships To Gotland

Stockholm, Nov. 26 (AP)—The Swedish Navy began convoying Swedish passenger ships operating between Stockholm and Gotland today as a result of the sinking of the steamer Hansa, naval authorities announced.

This was a resumption of the practice carried on at intervals during the war.

To Operate Only By Day

The Swedish naval authorities also announced that passenger ships between Stockholm and Gotland in the future will operate only in the daytime.

Newspapers today quoted testimony at an inquiry into the sinking the Hansa Friday that the vessel had been swept by a searchlight and speculated on the possibility it had been torpedoed by Germans or Russians.

The naval commentator for the Tidningen wrote: It is 100 per cent certain the Hansa was sunk by a torpedo from a Russian or German ship, most probably a small surface craft."

With Loss Of Nearly 100 Lives

The Hansa was sunk before dawn Friday morning off Gotland with a loss of almost 100 lives. Germany has proclaimed the eastern Baltic and the Gulf of Bothnia a war zone with all ships subject to sinking without warning. Sweden has protested the blockade.

A German Foreign Office spokesman yesterday declared no German naval or air craft were involved and suggested the Russians were responsible. The sinking occurred outside the zone proclaimed by Germany.

Survivors Saw Yellow Light

Two survivors of the Hansa were quoted by the Court of Inquiry as saying they saw a yellow light six to nine feet above the water shining on the sinking ship as they struggled aboard a life raft. Naval officers said there were no other Swedish vessels i nthat area at the time.

The newspaper Aftonbladet declared: "Russian provocation would have as its object the creating of a cause for war between Germany and Sweden but nothing indicates that the Russians are even interested in Swedish entrance into the war."

Greeks to Disband Guerrillas

ATHENS, Nov. 26 (AP)—Informed sources reported tonight that final agreement on all points regarding the disbanding of Greek guerrilla resistance forces had been reached at a meeting of Premier George Papandreou and left-wing Ministers.

Tito Seizes 30,000 Farms

MOSCOW, Nov. 26 (AP).—Soviet newspapers reported today that Marshal Josip Broz's (Tito's) Commissariat for Trade and Industry at Belgrade has confiscated 30,000 farms and numerous banks and factories belonging to Germans or to alleged Yugoslav war criminals.

JAPS CLOSING ON KWEICHOW

Also Driving South In China Toward Indo-China

Chungking, Nov. 26 (AP) — Japanese troops driving westward along the Kwangsi-Kweichow railroad in south central China are close to the Kweichow border, indirect reports indicated today, and simultaneously the enemy was believed moving southward toward the Indo-China border.

The Chinese high command in the past week has reported only enemy patrol activity west of Hwaiyuanchuen, less than 75 miles from the Kwangsi-Kweichow border and some 185 miles southeast of Kweiyang, strategic Burma road town and capital of Kweichow province. Both official and unofficial circles denied enemy patrols had crossed the Kweichow border.

Nanning Claimed

A Japanese broadcast claimed the capture of Nanning, former capital of Kwangsi province and about 100 miles from the Indo-China border. There was no confirmation of the claim in Chungking, though the plausibility of it was gloomily admitted in unofficial circles.

There was every indication the Chinese lack the weapons to meet the Japanese on equal terms in the flatlands, but intend to offer real resistance when the invaders reach the mountains barring the approach to Kweichow. These loom up just beyond Hochih, 45 miles from the border.

Junction Is Neared

Southwest of this battle area Chinese troops clearing the China end of a supply route from India have driven the last Japanese forces from the mountainous passes dividing the Mangshih and Chefang valleys and are only 33 miles from the Burma border, a communique from Brig. Gen. Frank Dorn's newly created Chinese Combat Command announced today.

[On the Burma side Chinese troops were operating between Bhamo and the Chinese border, Bhamo is only 27 miles from the frontier.]

The communique said Chinese forces were only five miles from Chefang, last important point on the China side of the Burma road. Chefang is 28 miles from the border town of Wanting.

United States Planes Aid

Chinese ground troops driving toward the border were "rendered extremely effective support" by United States Fourteenth Air Force, the communique said.

Japanese capture of Kweiyang would put them in a good position to cripple American air support in China and force a rerouting of land communications between Chungking and India. Chungking is 200 miles north of Kweiyang.

The Chinese, however, would have two alternatives should the Kweichow province capital fall to the invaders. Both would have to be put in shape with some work.

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 26 (AP)—British Fourteenth Army troops, operating east of the Chindwin River in northwestern Burma have entered Nanbon, twelve miles from the river and southeast of Sittaung, an Allied communiqué announced today. Sittaung is 178 miles northwest of Mandalay.

Headquarters said Allied patrols had clashed with Japanese forces a mile east of Nanbon.

East African forces have advanced to a point within seven miles of Kalewa, sixty-three miles south of Sittaung on the Chindwin River.

In northern Burma Chinese troops at Bhamo, 180 miles directly east of Sittaung, made slight advances and captured a Japanese strongpoint at the southern end of the Bhamo airstrip. Sixty miles west of Bhamo troops of the British Thirty-sixth Division made slight gains in the direction of Pinwe above Indaw in the Mandalay railway corridor, the communiqué said.

M'CLURE GETS CHINA POST

Succeeds Hearn as Chief of Staff of U. S. Forces

CHUNGKING, China, Nov. 26 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Robert B. McClure of Palo Alto, Calif., who commanded an American division in the Southwest Pacific, has been appointed Chief of Staff of the United States forces in the China theatre, it was announced today.

He succeeds Maj. Gen. Thomas G. Hearn, who is leaving for the United States to take up a new assignment.

Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault has been made adviser to the commanding general of United States forces in China in addition to his duties as commander of the Fourteenth United States Air Force.

MANSFIELD IN CHUNGKING

Representative Sent by Roosevelt to Study Chinese Conditions

CHUNGKING, China, Nov. 26 (AP)—Representative Mike Mansfield, Democrat, of Montana, sent by President Roosevelt to study Chinese political and economic conditions with a view toward bringing about closer Chinese-American cooperation, arrived in Chungking today.

He said that the planned to stay here about three weeks, during which time he will see Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and other Government officials.

Mr. Mansfield said that he was greatly impressed by the way in which Chinese and Americans had worked together on the Ledo Road. He declared that he believed China would receive greater aid and changes would be seen in the China theatre when India and China had been linked by highway and the pipeline from Calcutta had been completed.

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Monday, Nov. 27—(AP) American fighter planes sank three more Japanese vessels carrying reinforcements to Leyte island's Ormoc corridor, where Nipponese resistance is "steadily decreasing" under Yank pressure, headquarters announced today.

Warhawks and Thunderbolts, in mast-height strafing and bombing attacks, destroyed three small transport-cargo vessels early Saturday evening off the north tip of Cebu. They appeared to be preparing for a night run to Ormoc, with supplies and an undetermined number of troops aboard.

2,000 Japs Lost

This was a separate convoy from the four transports smashed earlier Saturday in the same area, with the probable loss of 2,000 Japanese soldiers.

In their effort to stave off disaster along the heavily-hammered Yamashita line, the Japanese have lost at least 17,000 troops, 33 convoy vessels and 14 escorting warships, destroyed in the aerial smashing off reinforcement attempts. Four ships and some 3,500 men were lost Friday off Masbate island.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, in today's communique, noted decreased Japanese resistance in Ormoc corridor while reporting that the 32nd division continued to press southward beyond shell-battered Limon. The extent of the gain was not announced.

The 32nd "easily" threw back a light Japanese counter-attack, the communique said.

Units of the 7th division, meanwhile, repulsed a second enemy night attack near Palanas, 11 miles south of Ormoc. That port is the goal of the 7th's slow push northward along the coastal highway.

(Associated Press War Correspondent Fred Hampson, reporting from the Ormoc corridor battle area, said officers of the 32nd division expected another stubborn Japanese defensive stand in the hills three miles south of Limon.)

Enemy Attacks Repulsed

The American captured Limon November 23, after a two weeks' stalemate, then beat off repeated Nipponese efforts to retake the key town, northern anchor of Yamashita line.

There was no slackening in Japanese air activity yesterday, as the moon brightened. Nipponese bombers began attacks against the Tacloban sector early in the evening, causing some damage and casualties. Four of the attackers were shot down by anti-aircraft fire.

Yank air patrols over Ormoc corridor attacked enemy motor convoys, small craft in the harbor and other targets.

Rain Ruins Soldier's Letter

WITH AMERICAN TWENTY-FOURTH DIVISION on Leyte, in the Philippines, Nov. 23 (Delayed) (AP)—Whoever mailed a letter to Pvt. Lex Skoglund of Plymouth, Mich., recently, please write and mail it again. Private Skoglund received the letter at an advanced position. He had not any more than taken it from the mail dispatcher when a Japanese mortar opened up. A monsoon storm was blowing and his foxhole was full of water. When Private Skoglund got out of the foxhole the letter was beyond reading.

N. Y. Times Writer Wounded On Leyte

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 25 (AP—Delayed)—Lindesay Parrott, 44, war correspondent for the New York Times, was wounded yesterday by Japanese bomb fragments during a Nipponese air raid on Leyte island that came without warning.

Awakened by the blast of the first bomb, Parrott was trying to roll from his bed to the floor when two fragments hit him in the upper left chest.

Doctors said the correspondent's condition, while not considered dangerous, was serious enough to require his evacuation out of the Philippines.

Wa. At Morotai

Shortly after the bombing, Parrott was taken to a hospital where a large bomb fragment was removed. A second piece near a main artery was not removed.

On his first assignment as a war correspondent, Parrott went ashore with assault troops on Morotai Island, in the Moluccas, in September. He landed on Red Beach, Leyte, the first day of the Central Philippines invasion, from Rear Admiral Daniel E. Barbey's flagship.

Is Sixth Casualty

Parrott, who came to the Southwest Pacific early in July, is the sixth casualty among the correspondents here. Four of the newsmen have been killed—Asahel Bush, Associated Press, formerly of Alem, Oregon; Stanley B. Gunn, Fort Worth Star-Telegram and Houston Chronicle, Texas; John Terry, Chicago Daily News, and Frank Prist, of Los Angeles, Cal., photographer for Acme. Clete Roberts, Blue Network reported, was wounded.

JAPS MAKE SUICIDE ATTACK ON PELELIU

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A final suicide assault by Japanese remnants on Peleliu island, in the Palaus on the western edge of the Carolines, was reported by the Nippon agency Domei in a Tokyo broadcast recorded yesterday by the Federal Communications commission.

Domei said the Japanese, besieged by American forces on Oyama peak for more than 70 days, made their banzai charge Friday night as their "last contribution to the East Asia defense."

The agency said the garrison, facing "overwhelming odds," put up a fight for more than two months and "seriously impeded the progress of the enemy's Pacific campaign."

CREW OF LOST B29 PICKED UP IN WATER

SAIPAN, Nov. 25—(Delayed)—(AP) The entire crew of one of the two B-29s lost in the Tokyo raid was rescued this afternoon from two rafts north of Saipan.

An American destroyer picked up the 12 airmen at 3 p. m. after they had drifted for almost 24 hours.

The rescue means that only one Superfortress with its crew brought down in the first B-29 strike against Tokyo war industries Friday, Tokyo time. That giant plane went down off Japan after an exploding Japanese fighter tore off the B-29s tail.

The rescued crew was that of Capt. Guice Tudor, of Beckley, W. Va., whose wife lives at San Antonio, Texas.

Captain Tudor told newsmen here "while returning from Tokyo our Nos. 2 and 3 engines quit. I ordered the crew to prepare to ditch. It was 7:30 p. m., and pitch dark.

"We went down from 8,000 feet on instruments. We couldn't see the water but made a perfect three-point landing. A big swell hit us as we touched the water, broke the nose of the ship and flooded the cockpit.

"All the others got out ahead of me. I had trouble with the escape hatch. Eight of us got aboard two rafts and an hour and a half later we found three more crewmen. Three hours later we found our navigator, 2nd Lt. Robert E. Moeller, of Chicago. He was swimming when we picked him up. We were all together at midnight.

"The plane stayed up about 10 hours, only the wings and fuselage showing.

"At 6 a. m., a B-25 sighted us. Thirty minutes later a P-47 circled us and three hours later five P-47s were overhead so we knew help was on the way.

"Only three of our men were hurt and their injuries are very slight.

"The Navy did a swell job rescuing us. I take my hat off to them."

Paratrooper Hanged

U. S. Soldier Convicted in Murder of Australian Girl

BRISBANE, Australia, Nov. 26 (AP).—Avelino Fernandez, an American paratrooper, was hanged at Oro Bay, New Guinea, last Monday after his conviction by a court martial of the murder of Doris May Roberts here in July.

It had been announced that the execution probably would have to take place outside of the State of Queensland, as capital punishment was abolished here twenty-two years ago. Under close guard, Fernandez was taken to Ora Bay and the sentence was carried out by a special American unit.

The only other American service man executed in Australia was Edward Joseph Leonski, of New York, who was hanged at Melbourne Nov. 10, 1942, for the slaying of three women.

AUSTRALIA PLANNING MORE SOCIALIZATION

MELBOURNE, Monday, Nov. 27 (AP)—Further socialization moves will follow the Australian Labor Government's nationalization of airways.

This was acknowledged by Information Minister Arthur Calwell, who, Opposition party members allege, has temporarily seized control of the Commonwealth Cabinet in the absence of Prime Minister John Curtin and three other senior Cabinet members. Mr. Curtin and another of the absentees are ill. The other two are in the United States.

In a speech at Newcastle, Mr. Calwell declared that the Government did not propose to stop at the airlines decision. It would nationalize any industry or service with which the Government had to compete, he said. This would include banking, building and civilian plane industries.

The press is speculating whether the Government will nationalize the shipbuilding industry, munitions factories, motor-car production, television, frequency-modulated broadcasting and production of drugs.

Peron Bans 'Despotic' Capital From Argentina

Buenos Aires, Nov. 26 (AP)—Col. Juan Peron, Argentine Vice President and Minister of War, declared today that "we will not allow despotic capitalism to prevail in Argentina."

Speaking at ceremonies commemorating the first anniversary of establishment of the Department of Labor and Social Insurances, Peron asserted that "if demagagism means to protect the poor and suffering classes and avoid human slavery and social injustices, work for the unity of the Argentine people under our flag, impede fights and hate between brothers, if all this is demagogic, I am a demagogue."

He also declared that "to achieve a satisfactory end, it will be necessary for some people to forget their hates, for other persons to lay out their selfishness. If they do not accept this way and if they resist, we will make corrective measures stronger."

2 CANADIANS MP'S HURT

3,000 Soldiers Hold Anti-Conscription Demonstration

Ottawa, Nov. 26 (AP)—Anti-conscription demonstrations by some 3,000 soldiers were held in five British Columbia towns, resulting in injury to two military policemen, it was learned here tonight.

The center of resistance to conscription of home defense troops for service overseas has been in French Canada.

The Pacific Command issued a statement that "the demonstrators were protesting what they termed a 'phoney conscription.'"

Hinges On Ralston

Meanwhile a member of Parliament told the Canadian press tonight he was confident the fate of Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King's Libertl Government would hinge on the attitude of former Defense Minister J. L. Ralston toward the Government.

"If Colonel Ralston votes confidence in the Government, then I think the Government will stand," this member said, "but if he votes 'no,' then it seems to me that enough members will follow his lead that, even if the Ministry is not defeated, the margin would be so small Mr. King would seriously consider resigning."

Debate Opens Tomorrow

Ralston resigned after recommending that Canada's home defense conscripts be used to meet reinforcement deficiencies in the volunteer army overseas. His recommendation was not accepted, but the Government last week passed an order-in-council implementing this policy within limits.

The House of Commons, meeting in emergency session, will open debate tomorrow when Prime Minister King moves his confidence motion in a speech in which he is expected to state the Cabinet's present policy, now that authority has been taken to send 16,000 drafted men abroad.

BIG BOMBERS RIP JAP INDUSTRIES IN RETURN RAID

Fires Still Burning from Last Attack, B-29s Based at Saipan.

3RD FLEET HITS LUZON

Carrier Planes Destroy 18 Enemy Ships, Blast 72 Warplanes.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(Monday) — (AP) The B-29 Superfortresses returned today to give Tokyo another daylight attack from the skies, "Strategic industrial targets" were their goal.

Like their first smash at the Japanese capital on Friday, the big bombers flew from Saipan in the Marianas islands.

The operation was under Brig. Gen. Haywood S. Hansell of San Antonio, Tex.

War Dept. Announcement

The announcement at the War department said:

"Gen. Hansell's 21st Bomber Command returned to Tokyo again today Nov. 27 for another daylight bombing attack upon strategic industrial targets.

"The mission was mounted from bases on Saipan in the Marianas." The announcement was made at the War department by Gen. H. H. Arnold in his capacity as commanding general of the 20th Air force.

"Further details on this B-29 mission will be released as soon as the information becomes available. There will be no further details on this mission tonight."

Hours after Friday's raid fires were still burning in Tokyo. All but two of a "large task force" of B-29s returned from this successful mission.

The principal target then—the first raid on Tokyo since General Doolittle's medium bombers attacked from a carrier in early 1943—was the Nakajima aircraft plant.

A quick return to the enemy's capital was forecast last week by Lt. Gen. Millard F. Harmon, deputy commander of the 20th Air Force under Arnold. He said then:

More Blows Promised

"We must and will sustain and intensify our attacks for many months to come before victory will be in sight."

Army engine[illegible] built the B-29 bases in Saipa[illegible] five months, beginning this w[illegible] just as soon as the Japanese were driven out of the Marianas in July.

The Marianas, in the southwest Pacific, are much more feasible bases for B-29 bombing of Japan than older ones in China, because fuel for the air giants can be shipped there.

Tokyo Heat

Washington, Nov. 26 (AP)—Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the 20th Air Force, had this comment today on enemy reaction to the B-29 attack on Tokyo:

"The Tokyo radio says this morning that in the Japanese capital 'resentment burns.' It is my humble opinion, on the basis of photo reconnaissance reports, that more than resentment was burning in Tokyo."

Arnold was describing the Tokyo attack on the Army Hour broadcast.

TOKYO PREPARED TO WITHSTAND BIG BOMBING ATTACKS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26 — (AP) Tokyo is no tinder-box but a city probably as well prepared to withstand bombing as any in the world, the Office of War Information reported tonight.

The city, heavily bombed by B-29's last week, is laid out and equipped for the best defense against earthquake and fire, OWI said, adding: "it may be assumed, on the basis of civilian reaction in England and Germany, that bombing will make inhabitants fight all the harder.

"The rather general impression that Tokyo is a tinder-box city, which could be destroyed by incendiary bombs, is one of the most inaccurate of popular fallacies, the Army reports," said OWI.

"Metropolitan Tokyo, which includes the cities of Kawasaki, Yokohama, and the naval base community of Yokosuka, has been prepared for years for earthquake and fires.

Many modern structures were built of quakeproof designs adapted from the famous imperial hotel built by Frank Lloyd Wright in the reconstruction that followed the 1923 earthquake which destroyed half of Tokyo.

"The significance of this is that buildings designed to withstand earthquake shocks are also well adapted to withstand bomb shocks," the report stated.

"Wide highways have been driven across the city to act as fire breaks in event of conflagration and to permit fire fighting equipment to each disaster scenes quickly. Prior to Pearl Harbor day, the Japanese had every opportunity to study British fire fighting and bombing protection measures x x x The Japanese also had adequate opportunity to study the effects of Allied bombing of German cities.

"From these facts, it is safe to assume, the army reports, that Tokyo is prepared, physically and perhaps psychologically, for bombing."

What are regarded as "civilian defense" activities in London are "standard civic responsibilities" in Japanese cities, it was noted, so that bucket brigades and volunteers have always worked with fire departments.

Industrial plants in Tokyo are limited in height to nine stories and are as modern as those of any American city. While most dwellings are made of wood "they also have considerable fire-resistant material in their structure," OWI continued.

"Despite the great congestion of the metropolitan area, at least 50 parks, intended as refuge centers and fire breaks, have been laid out in the city. Zoning restrictions are rigidly adhered to.

"Last week's B-29 bombing, in which anti-aircraft fire was generally inaccurate, had an element of surprise not to be expected in future raids, the War department said. But basically, the Army declares, Tokyo can withstand bombing similar to that visited upon Cologne or Berlin—and can remain operative despite these adverse circumstances."

HULL QUITS CABINET, SAY D. C. REPORTS

State Secretary, Ill, Offers Resignation To President

[Associated Press Copyright, 1944]

Washington, Nov. 26—A high Government source said tonight that Secretary of State Cordell Hull had resigned because of ill health.

Quick action is expected from the White House, with indications that President Roosevelt will accept the resignation. There is, however, a possibility the President may want to leave the way open for Hull to return later.

The source of the information, who could not be quoted by name, said ill health which has kept the 73-year-old Secretary away from his office for lengthening periods, was the only reason.

Ill For Five Weeks

Hull has been ill in the Naval Hospital in Bethesda, Md., for the last five weeks.

His current illness was not described as serious, but was reported such that he is expected to take a lengthy rest.

There was immediate speculation that if the President accepts Hull's resignation, the choice of his successor may lie among War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes, Vice President Henry A. Wallace, or Under Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr.

Friends Call Decision Reluctant

Friends who have seen Hull at the hospital recently described the 73-year old Secretary as having come to the reluctant decision that he must step out before completing arrangements for American participation in an international security organization. He long has sponsored a plan of this nature as an assurance for future peace.

There were indications that Byrnes may have strong Congressional support for the Cabinet post. Vice-President-elect Harry S. Truman was reported to be backing Wallace. Stettinius also has influential friends, both in and out of the Cabinet, who would like to see him succeed to the place.

Welles Possibility

There also remained the possibility that former Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles would be considered for the post.

Friends said they were certain that nothing less than the forced conviction that he cannot return to active work soon could have led Secretary Hull to step down.

Illness caught him in the midst of two issues which have absorbed him almost completely for a year or more—erection of machinery for enforcement of world peace and the difficulties created by Argentine defection from the united war front of the Americas.

So intent has the aging Secretary been on these matters that one close friend expressed it this way:

"If he could get to the office on crutches to attend to them, he'd be there."

Hull's last work was on his birthday, October 2.

In Hospital Five Weeks

He left the office for a rest at his home, then went to the Bethesda hospital for what was announced as a checkup. He has been in the hospital five weeks.

Told that the Associated Press had learned authoritatively that Hull's resignation had been submitted to the President, Chairman Connally (D., Texas) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said:

"It is tragic that Secretary Hull is retiring. He has made a great Secretary. His outstanding achievements toward world peace remain a monument to his service. The nation and the world have suffered a tremendous loss in his resignation."

Would Choose Byrnes

The Texas Senator declined to make a public choice for Hull's successor, but there were strong indications that if President Roosevelt asked Connally's advice in filling the post, the Senate committee chairman's preference would be Byrnes.

Byrnes' friends say that the former South Carolina Senator and former Supreme Court Justice is well qualified to take over the State Department portfolio.

They hold that his friendship with members of the Senate might prove valuable in obtaining approval in that body for the treaty which is expected to be forthcoming from a projected United Nations conference on international security organization early next spring.

Senator George (D., Ga.), a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said that if Secretary Hull's resignation has been submitted "I think it is one of the great losses, not merely to the United States, but to all the peace-loving nations of the world."

"Regretted All Over World"

Saying that if Hull steps out of the Cabinet, the action will be "universally regretted all over the world," George said he thought Byrnes would be able to "do more to hold the situation in shape than anybody else." He referred, George said, to current preparations for the international security organization conference.

The Georgia Senator pointed out that Byrnes, attached to the White House, is familiar with most of the groundwork which has been laid by Hull and said he thought the war mobilization director could "do a good job" if elevated to the Cabinet.

There were indications that President Roosevelt might act quickly, but some observers expressed the opinion that nomination of a successor might await the organization of the new Congress January 3.

Vandenberg Statement

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) said that if it is true that Hull has resigned it is "very bad news."

"Secretary Hull rightly has the confidence of Congress and the country and our Allies to an extraordinary degree," Vandenberg said. "This confidence has been a tremendous and essential assistance in the great and vital peace adventure which Secretary Hull has so devotedly launched.

"He personifies an integrity of character in public service which is not often matched and which will not be easily replaced."

BRITISH FIRM ON AIR ISSUE

U. S. Proposal Called Business Invasion Of Small States

Chicago, Nov. 26 (AP)—Lord Swinton, Great Britain's Air Minister, today pictured the United States version of the "fifth freedom" of the air as a business invasion of smaller countries and emphasized his determination to hold out against it at the International Civil Aviation Conference.

Swinton, leader of Britain's delegation to the conference, told a press conference he would insist on the British application of the privilege.

This issue has deadlocked the 26-day old meeting called to formulate a master plan for regulating world air transport.

The nineteen Latin-American republics were reported to have made a joint decision to support the United States view. The Scandinavian nations also were understood to have taken similar action.

Up For Debate Today

The big problem will come up for debate tomorrow morning.

The "fifth freedom" is the privilege of one country to pick up and deposit traffic between two other countries, as distinguished from the right contained in the other four "freedoms" which relate to traffic originating or terminating in the home states of the airlines.

The question before the conference is whether such intermediate traffic should be handled as casual business picked up on long-line operations or whether it should be included in the formula for allocating traffic-carrying capacity. The latter is the American plan.

If the United States and Great Britain do not reach a compromise, the result would mean continuance of the prewar method of establishing air-routes through separate agreements between countries. The United States came prepared to do just that at the conference.

It seems unlikely that either the United States or the British would accept the other's proposal on the basis of a conference vote.

Senator Criticizes Business Conference

[Washington Bureau of The Sun]

Washington, Nov. 26 — Senator Kilgore (D., W. Va.) today criticized the recently concluded International Business Conference at Rye, N. Y., because many of the delegates, including some Americans, he said, are associated with cartel companies.

Furthermore the Senator, who is an ardent Administration supporter, declared that the sponsoring organizations—the National Association of Manufacturers, the United States Chamber of Commerce, the American Branch of the International Chamber of Commerce, "revived for the occasion," and the National Trade Council—"do not reflect the viewpoint of small and independent business" and it "is to be questioned whether some of the prominent participants . . . are even representative of the best-thinking of large business."

He said the "prominent part" played in the conference by the delegates of neutral states, "raises a question as to whether the conference was not organized with the view that international trade could be divorced from United Nation's co-operation for winning the war and establishing the peace."

Carrier Commissioned At Brooklyn Navy Yard

New York, Nov. 26 (AP)—Another first-line carrier, the 27,100-ton Bonhomme Richard, was commissioned today at the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

The $60,000,000 craft, thirteenth of the Essex class launched since Pearl Harbor, carries 80 planes and has a top speed in excess of 30 knots.

More than 5,000 guests, including some families of the 2,000-man crew, gathered on the carrier's hangar deck and heard Rear Admiral Monroe Kelly, navy yard commandant, turn the ship over to the Navy. Capt. Adrian O. Rule, commanding officer, accepted.

The vessel was launched last April.

Modern Esther Helps 18 Jews Escape Reich

New York, Nov. 26 (AP)—The story of a "Modern Esther"—a Jewish girl who repeatedly went into Germany and helped her coreligionists escape—was told today by Harry J. Rubenstein, chairman of the business and industry of the National Labor Committee for Palestine.

"Eighteen times she went into Germany and she saved eighteen lives. She went in once more and did not come back," he told the Labor Committee's annual convention, attended by 3,200 delegates from 44 States. The girl, he added, would "marry" an man and then, using forged passports, help him reach safe territory.

Rubenstein said the girl's work was part of the activities of the Histadrut, the Jewish labor federation in Palestine.

SOCIAL SECURITY TAX BOOST HELD LIKELY FOR 1945

Congressional Leaders See Veto if Present Payroll Levy Is 'Frozen.'

OPEN HEARING TODAY

Washington Developments Hint Postwar 'New Deal'

30.24 — 20695

Program in Making.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26 — (AP) The weight of President Roosevelt's reelection is being felt in Congress and the first tangible result may be an increase in social security payroll taxes on Jan. 1.

Three times in as many years the legislators have ignored the President's protests in voting to freeze the tax at the present level of 1 per cent each on employer and employe. But this time Mr. Roosevelt may get the increase he has wanted, due to a combination of circumstances in which the results of the November election play no small part.

For the shadow of a presidential veto already has fallen across freeze legislation on which the House Ways and Means committee begins hearings tomorrow. And both Chairman Doughton (D.-N.C.) of that committee and Chairman George (D.-Ga.) of the Senate Finance committee have told colleagues they do not relish the prospect of such a veto now.

George told a reporter he thought it would be "bad" for Congress and the President to become involved in a controversy so soon after the election.

There has not been much doubt in the minds of leaders that a majority in both Houses would vote for a fourth time to put off for another year the increase that automatically would become effective Jan. 1. This would carry the tax up to 2 per cent each on employe and employer, with a maximum of $60 from the worker during the year.

Bill Faces Veto

But there was plenty of evidence that if Mr. Roosevelt then vetoed the bill its supporters could not summon the necessary two-thirds in both Houses to enact it.

In the past, Congress has attached the social security freeze to legislation that the President could ill afford to veto. It did this last year when it tacked the subject onto a measure authorizing the importation of then badly needed Canadian wheat.

Now, freeze proponents find themselves without any such revenue legislation in sight. And leaders may insist on letting the legislation stand on its own feet, though it may carry a provision somewhat attractive to the President, calling for a thorough study of the whole social security system with the view to broadening its benefits.

Attempts to compromise the issue also seemed doomed to failure. Social Security Board members have offered to support legislation which would wipe out further automatic increases carrying the tax up to 6 per cent each on employe and employer, if the raise to 2 per cent is allowed to become law.

George and Doughton have proposed that Congress split the increase, making it 1.2 of 1 per cent next January and a similar amount the following January. This probably would be acceptable to the Treasury and the Social Security Board and, by inference, to the President.

But Senator Vandenberg (R.-Mich.), chief proponent of the freeze indicated that he was in no frame of mind to accept a compromise. He contends the increase would be an unjustified additional tax burden on 48,000,000 workers and 2,000,000 employers.

Post-War "New Deal" Seen

Meanwhile broad outlines of a post-war "second New Deal" appear to taking shape from administration expressions and actions in the three weeks since the election.

Latest of these is the War Labor Board's proposal in its steel case decision that the "whole question of guaranteed (annual) wage plans and the possibility of their future development in American industries should now be comprehensively studied on a national scale."

In itself that makes no commitment. But it is highly improbable that the proposal for a presidential commission to make such a study would have come from WLB without intimation from the White House that it would not be unwelcome.

Consequently, it appears to be an important indication of administration thinking on economic matters.

Additionally in post-election news conferences, President Roosevelt has endorsed a whole series of authorities, similar to TVA, to develop major watersheds throughout the country.

This is not a new thought, so far as Mr. Roosevelt is concerned, but his remarks in their timing take on added significance.

FDR for Wilson Aim

Again, the President warmly applauded a statement by Charles E. Wilson, president of General Electric company, that G-E intends to maintain weekly take-home pay of its employes at present levels as far as possible even after peace brings a return to a shorter work week.

Mr. Roosevelt said there was a growing trend to this view among industrial leaders.

To these may be added the promises of a greatly broadened social security program, made by Mr. Roosevelt in his election campaign and promised too, by his Republican opponent, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey. Also the moves for a higher "floor" under wages, embodied in the measure by Senator Pepper (D.-Fla.) for a minimum of 65 cents an hour as compared with the present 40 cents for workers in interstate commerce.

Discuss Guaranteed Annual Wage

The guaranteed annual wage idea is strongly backed by the C.I.O. whose Political Action committee worked vigorously for President Roosevelt's re-election.

The argument for it runs that it will allow a worker to plan with assurance for his household, avoiding the ups and downs many experience when periods of employment are followed by "lay-offs." It is argued, too, that it would tend to bring economic stability to a community dependent on payrolls, averting cycles of lush business followed by depression.

One idea for carrying it out goes like this:

The employer guarantees a worker certain minimum annual earnings. Suppose this figures out to an average of $40 a week. In the early months of the year, the employers' business is good. The worker puts in overtime, earns $50 a week. But he draws only $40 with the employer in effect banking the other $10 for him.

Comes a time when the employer's business drops off. The work hours are cut down. The employe earns only $30 a week but continues to draw $40. The employer is paying out the additional $10 from the amount "banked."

If "overtime" and "undertime" neatly cancelled each other out, the whole problem of course, would be simple. But suppose the employer can supply work enough for the employe's labor to earn an average of $30. The employer still has to pay that other $10.

It is that possibility that is pointed to by opponents of the idea of the guaranteed annual wage. It would, they say, add another great uncertainty which in many cases might prove fatal, to business management already long list of uncertainties.

CONGRESS FACES KNOTTY BILLS IN FINAL SESSION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—(AP) Half a dozen knotty legislative proposals stood as hurdles today in the path of the 78th Congress toward its hoped-for final adjournment by December 10.

There were headaches for the leadership on both sides of the Capitol as the Senate and House showed signs of winding up the "Lame Duck" session in anything but an harmonious manner.

The House jumps feet first into its problems tomorrow as the Ways and Means committee meets to consider blocking an automatic rise in social security taxes while the Judiciary committee wrestles with legislation extending the Second War Powers act.

Despite opinions of House Minority Leader Martin of Massachusetts and Senator Walter F. George (D-Ga.), chairman of the Senate Finance committee, that legislation freezing the Social Security taxes at one per cent could win approval, possibility of a presidential veto caused leaders to hesitate to press for that result. Unless Congress intervenes, the taxes rise to two per cent on January 1, and the administration favors no interference with that procedure.

A new threat to the War Powers Extension bill arose with a move to write into the legislation authority for court review of War Production board allocation orders. Chairman Sumners (D-Tex.) of the House Judiciary committee predicted the committee will approve the bill tomorrow, with the WPB amendment.

House debate on the War Powers Extension bill is scheduled to follow passage of the $1,500,000,000 Federal-state postwar roads bill. Whether the road measure clears the House Tuesday depends on how long it takes to dispose of a bill creating the position of admiral of the fleet for four top-ranking admirals.

Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Naval committee said the way for passage of the Naval measure had been cleared by an agreement not to seek to amend it by creating also the post of general of the armies. The Army legislation presumably won't come up until next year. The admirals slated for a fifth star each are Ernest J. King, chief of naval operations; William D. Leahy, the President's chief of staff; Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific fleet commander, and William F. Halsey, commander of the Third fleet.

The House Judiciary committee may toss another hot potato into the Congressional lap during the week by approving a measure for a proposed constitutional amendment requiring joint Senate-House ratification of treaties. While there naturally is top-heavy sentiment for this plan in the House, there appeared to be little likelihood that the Senate would agree to share its traditional exclusive treaty powers. Without Senate approval, the proposed amendment cannot be submitted to the states for ratification.

The Senate has a full program of its own for the week, with a $971,000,000 Flood Control bill and a half-million dollar Rivers and Harbors measure on the docket for debate. Otherwise smooth sailing for both measures has been threatened by proposals to add to them approval of the St. Lawrence waterway project and a Missouri River valley authority similar to the TVA.

Also awaiting Senate action are nominations of Robert A. Hurley of Connecticut and Lieut. Col. Edward F. Heller to the recently-created Surplus Property board. The Senate Military committee will consider the nominations Tuesday.

New criticism of the nominees came today from Representative Halleck of Indiana, chairman of the Republican Congressional committee.

"As the board is being launched, the smoke of scandal envelops the whole scene," Halleck said in a statement. "Two Democratic lame ducks have already been named as stooge heads of the Surplus Property board. . . . New Deal's squandering of the taxpayers' $100,000,000,000 worth of surplus property is under way. It now appears that Harry Hopkins, the all time champion waster, again is playing Santa Claus through certain of his proteges who will administer this vast undertaking."

LITTLE STEEL BREAK SEEN

WLB Wage Grant Said To Give Hunting Ground

Washington, Nov. 26 (AP)—The framework of the Little Steel formula is preserved in the new wage award to CIO's steelworkers but the War Labor Board's grant promises to intensify the hunt for a way around the wage barricade.

The steelworkers didn't get in the decision announced last night any part of the 17-cent hourly increase in base wages which they demanded. But they did get more money.

The possibility of benefits for an individual union, without a horizontal boost in the general ceiling on raises, was what prompted American Federation of Labor representatives on the War Labor Board to withdraw last month from consideration of the steel case. They wanted the whole thing settled by a flat footed decision to revise the Little Steel formula upward.

Came Back Into Case

Last Monday the AFL members came back into the case by proxy, obviously on decisions reached at the AFL executive committee meeting in New Orleans. Simultaneously there was talk of some such decision as the WLB finally reached.

Thus the AFL is in on the award to the CIO union individually.

The position the federation will take presumably is being worked out in New Orleans, with nothing to indicate that it will take any pressure off its demands for a horizontal rise in the formula, which limits general wage increases, to compensate for living costs, to 15 per cent. of the levels in effect January 1, 1941.

The "inequities" section of the Little Steel formula, under which last night's wage awards were made, provides better hunting ground for individual labor organizations with industry and plant problems, than for the federation itself, with its over-all interests.

Few labor men with authoritative voices were left in Washington, because of the AFL meeting in New Orleans and the CIO convention in Chicago. The most commonly held opinion among those remaining was that the "inequities" approach would be taken more often in the future.

About 5 Cents An Hour

As for the steelworkers themselves, there was no indication they would back off from their basic demand for a general pay hike.

The awards announced last night, principally a shift differential, were expected to average around 5 cents an hour. They looked like Christmas money for the 400,000 steelworkers at the quickest.

The principal delay prospect lies in the necessity for the Office of Price Administration to determine whether the pay increases will necessitate higher steel prices. The WLB ruled that the boosts cannot become effective until they can be met without higher prices, or unless Fred M. Vinson, economic stabilization director, rules that they shall be granted anyway.

By normal procedure, the WLB findings go to Vinson, from him to OPA for the cost-and-price studies, and back through Vinson. Application of the increases will be practically automatic if OPA holds there are no price consequences. If OPA finds that prices must rise to meet the bigger pay bill, it will be up to Vinson to decide whether it is more important to hold the price line.

NOV 27 1944

Not Passed Along

It was understood that the particular cost and price elements of the WLB decision had not been referred in advance to either OPA or Vinson. OPA, however, has been making continuous cost studies in the steel industry for about a year and in general terms has most of the figures at hand.

No figures were immediately available on over-all cost of the WLB award of 4 cents an hour extra for the early night shift and 6 cents for the late night trick. But on its original demand for differentials of 5 and 10 cents, the union estimated $39,700,000 and the industry $41,400,000 a year.

The WLB also allowed intra-plant wage adjustments with a top limit of 5 cents an hour, and increased vacation benefits.

CHICAGO TRAIN STRIKE IS ENDED

CHICAGO, Nov. 26 — (AP) The strike of train service employes of the Chicago and North shore railroad and the Chicago, Aurora and Elgin railroads which began Nov. 10 ended at 5 p.m. (C.W.T.) today when officials of two brotherhoods accepted the five cent wage increase recommended by a presidential board.

H. M. Lytle, public relations officer of the two roads who announced the settlement, said service on both roads would be resumed at 4 a.m. (C.W.T.) tomorrow. He said officials of the brotherhood of locomotive firemen and enginemen, agreed to the five cent wage boost after a meeting this afternoon with officers of the electric railroads.

The strike was called Nov. 10 after a presidential panel of the national mediation board refused the strikers demand for a nine cent an hour wage increase. The panel offered a five cent increase, which union officials accepted today, pending further negotiations.

More than 1,500 non-striking employes of the lines were laid off because of insufficient cash to meet payrolls after 500 employes of the two roads went on strike. On Nov. 22, a spokesman for the roads announced their financial position as "precarious."

Approximately 75,000 commuters in northern and western suburbs were forced to find other means of transportation during the 16 day strike. The unions originally had set a strike date for last Sept. 18, when President Roosevelt intervened. The unions subsequently rejected the presidential board's recommendation and the walkout went into effect at 4 a.m. (C.W.T.) Nov. 10.

Previous to the walkout the wage scale of train employes was 92 cents an hour for motormen and conductors and 80 cents an hour for collectors and brakemen.

AFL HEADED INTO DEBATES

Racial Discrimination, Labor Unity Among Subjects

New Orleans, Nov. 26 (AP)—The AFL appeared headed into some potentially explosive debates this week on the issues of labor unity in the national and international fields, racial job discrimination and relations with the War Labor Board.

Work of the second and final week of the American Federation of Labor's 64th annual convention will be accelerated Tuesday, when Matthew Woll and his perspiring colleagues on the resolutions committee come in with their pick from among 125 items delegates want brought up.

AFL Future With CIO

Underlying the entire agenda is the AFL's future alongside the CIO, which wound up its convention in Chicago after pointedly ignoring AFL overtures toward resumption of peace talks.

These advances were made by the executive council of the AFL, which, although it condemned CIO tactics and blamed it for "disorder" in labor's house, nevertheless seemed anxious for its one-time Committee for Industrial Organization to return to the parent organization.

However, Philip Murray, CIO president, rejected the references to peace, and the Chicago convention was concluded without any plans for resumption of the negotiations with AFL, which broke off more than a year ago.

London Conference

Some opposition to the executive council's refusal to participate in the London conference called by the British Trade Union Congress for February may also develop, but David Dubinsky, Ladies' Garment Workers Union head, said he, for one, would not protest.

The CIO has accepted the British union invitation, as has the Soviet Trade Union Council. The prospect of carrying the AFL-CIO rivalry into the international area, where the AFL is sole American representative, through the International Federation of Trade Unions, makes this a possible convention firecracker.

There are several resolutions dealing with racial discrimination which take on new importance in the light of the CIO's bold bid last week to organize every Negro worker in America.

THE EFFECT OF THEIR ATTACKS WAS REFLECTED IN THE DAY'S ALLIED GAINS FROM THE NETHERLANDS FRONT, WHERE THE BRITISH ELIMINATED ALL THE GERMANS WEST OF THE MAAS (MEUSE) RIVER WITH THE EXCEPTION OF A SMALL BRIDGEHEAD WEST OF VENLO, TO THE BELFORT GAP NEAR THE SWISS BORDER, WHERE THE FRENCH FIRST ARMY EXPANDED ITS SALIENT TO THE RHINE AND CLEARED THE LAST GERMANS OUT OF FORTS AROUND BELFORT ITSELF.

THE BATTLE ON THE SEVENTH ARMY'S NORTHERN FLANK SWAYED BACK AND FORTH AS THE 44TH DIVISION GAVE GROUND, THEN REGAINED IT IN THE FACE OF STIFF COUNTERATTACKS NORTH OF SARREBOURG.

BUT DIRECTLY NORTH OF STRASBOURG, WHERE THE 79TH DIVISION ALREADY HAD WIDENED THE SALIENT BY PUSHING TO WITHIN VIEW OF THE RHINE EIGHT MILES ABOVE THE CITY, PATCH'S MEN DROVE NORTHWARD ANOTHER THREE MILES BEYOND WEYERSHEIM AND ENTERED WEITBRUCH AND GRIES, BOTH ONLY FOUR MILES SOUTH OF THE COMMUNICATIONS CENTER OF HAGUENAU.

ALTHOUGH NO CHANGE WAS REPORTED AT STRASBOURG ITSELF, WHERE THE GERMANS HOLD THREE BRIDGES OVER THE RHINE, THE SIXTH CORPS OPENED ANOTHER ROUTE TO THE CITY THROUGH THE VOSGES BY BURSTING THROUGH THE SAALES PASS.

FRENCH TROOPS TOOK THE LAST THREE OF THE NAZI-OCCUPIED FORTS WHICH THEY HAD BY-PASSED EN ROUTE TO THE CITY.

WITH THE U.S. SEVENTH ARMY NORTHEAST OF SAVERNE, FRANCE, NOV 26-(AP)-THE GERMAN THREAT TO THE SAVERNE CORRIDOR TO THE RHINE BEGAN TO MELT TODAY AS LT. GEN. ALEXANDER M. PATCH'S DOUGHBOYS COUNTERATTACKED THE ALREADY BADLY-MAULED PANZER UNITS AND PUSHED THEM BACK AFTER THEY HAD DRIVEN WITHIN FIVE MILES OF SARREBOURG.

"THEY BLOODIED THEIR NOSES AND I THINK THE AIR ATTACK OF YESTERDAY GAVE THEM THE IDEA THEY'D BETTER PULL BACK," SAID MAJ. GEN. WADE H. HAISLIP. HE ESTIMATED HIS 15TH CORPS HAD TAKEN 20,000 PRISONERS AND KILLED OR WOUNDED 15,000 GERMANS SINCE NOV.13.

MEANWHILE THE THIRD AND 100TH DIVISIONS, BOTH OF THE SIXTH CORPS, SPILLED OUT OF SAALES PASS THROUGH THE VOSGES ONTO THE ALSACE PLAIN 10 MILES WEST OF STRASBOURG. FRENCH TROOPS TOOK THE LAST OF THE FORTRESSES THEY HAD BYPASSED IN DRIVING INTO STRASBOURG -- FORTS NEY, PETAIN AND KLEBER.

THE GERMAN COMMANDANT OF STRASBOURG, A LIEUTENANT GENERAL, SURRENDERED IN FORT KLEBER WITH 600 MEN.

NORTH OF STRASBOURG THE U.S. 79TH DIVISION ENTERED WEITBRUCH AND GRIES, FOUR MILES SOUTH OF HAGENAU, WHERE ENEMY TANKS AND INFANTRY WERE EXTREMELY ACTIVE.

FRENCH TROOPS WERE MEETING STIFF RESISTANCE IN THE MULHOUSE AREA AND STILL WERE MOPPING UP THE BELFORT SECTOR AND A GERMAN POCKET IN THE DANNEMARIE REGION.

THERE ARE NOT MANY LEFT IN THE VOSGES OF THE 70,000 GERMANS WHO WERE ON THE SIXTH CORPS FRONT WHEN ITS DRIVE STARTED.

AFTER RETAKING RAUWILLER, THE YANKS PUSHED ON NORTHEAST AND SEIZED KIRRBERG, FURTHER RELIEVING THE THREAT ON SARREBOURG.

MEANWHILE, THIRD DIVISION TROOPS WHO PUSHED THROUGH THE SAALES PASS TO SOULTZ LINKED UP WITH OTHER TROOPS WHO HAD CUT DOWN FROM SAVERNE, THUS RINGING THAT SECTOR OF THE VOSGES.

PUSHING SOUTH FROM STRASBOURG, THE FRENCH OVERRAN 12 ENEMY FORTS AND ANNOUNCED CAPTURE OF GEN.WILHELM ULLERSPERGER IN STRASBOURG. GEN. FRANZ VATERBOT, ARMED FORCES COMMANDER IN STRASBOURG, ALSO WAS SEIZED, ALONG WITH CHIEF OF STAFF COL. WILLI KAISER.

TO KILL THE MEMBERS OF FAMILIES OF SOLDIERS WHO SURRENDER , IT WAS DISCLOSED OFFICIALLY TODAY AFTER INTERROGATION OF SEVERAL THOUSAND PRISONERS TAKEN SINCE THE OFFENSIVE BEGAN NOV.12.

SOME GERMANS REFUSED TO FOLLOW DEMOLITION ORDERS AT ST.DIE, ONE OF THE MANY TOWNS GUTTED WITHOUT MILITARY REASON BY THE WITHDRAWING ENEMY. THE PRISONERS SAID THAT, AS A RESULT OF THIS REBELLION, A FEW SOLDIERS WERE SINGLED OUT AT RANDOM FROM EACH UNIT AND WERE SHOW.

QUESTIONING DISCLOSED THAT THE AVERAGE GERMAN SOLDIER DOES NOT KNOW WHAT IS HAPPENING OUTSIDE HIS IMMEDIATE SECTOR. MOST PRISONERS COMPLAINED ABOUT THEIR LACK OF TANKS AND ARTILLERY. A FEW WEEKS AGO, THEY WERE BITTER ABOUT A LACK OF PLANES BUT NOW THEY HAVE GIVEN UP HOPE FOR AIR SUPPORT. MANY, REALIZING THEY PROBABLY WERE STRANDED WEST OF THE RHINE, SAID THOUSANDS OF OTHERS WOULD BE WILLING TO SURRENDER IF THEY COULD DO SO "GRACEFULLY."

GERMAN DESERTIONS ARE INCREASING. DURING THE PAST THREE DAYS, WHOLE UNITS GAVE UP.

SOME OF THE PRISONERS WERE ONLY 12 YEARS OLD. THEY WERE THROWN INTO THE FRONT LINES WITH GUNS AND TOLD TO KEEP SHOOTING.

THE GERMANS HAD HOPED TO HOLD THE VOSGES LINE THIS WINTER SO AS TO EXTRACT AS MANY ASSETS AS POSSIBLE FROM THE RHINE PLAIN, INTO WHICH HUGE INVESTMENTS WERE POURED AFTER 1940. IT IS TOO EARLY TO SAY YET HOW MUCH THE GERMANS WERE FORCED TO LEAVE AS A RESULT OF THE SWIFT AMERICAN-FRENCH JABS TO THE RHINE. BUT FIRST REPORTS INDICATE THE QUANTITIES ARE CONSIDERABLE.

THE ALLIED WESTERN FRONT OFFENSIVES HAVE MADE THE GERMANS ACT LIKE JACKRABBITS. WHEN THE U.S. THIRD ARMY ATTACKED NOV.8, SOME ENEMY UNITS WERE SHIFTED NORTHWARD FROM THE SEVENTH'S FRONT. WHEN THE SEVENTH ATTACKED NOV.12, OTHER UNITS WERE SHIFTED FROM NORTHERN AREAS TO THIS FRONT. THE SEVENTH'S RHINE DRIVE HAS LEFT THE GERMANS MORE JUMPY THAN EVER. THEY DO NOT KNOW WHEN OR WHETHER A RHINE CROSSING WILL BE ATTEMPTED.

U.S.DIVISION COMMAND POST, LEYTE, PHILIPPINES, NOV.26-(AP)- AFTER BEATING OFF REPEATED JAPANESE EFFORTS TO RECAPTURE LIMON VILLAGE AT THE NORTHERN END OF THE ORMOC CORRIDOR, DOUGHBOYS OF THE 32ND DIVISION LATE YESTERDAY, WITH THE AID OF THE FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION, GEARED THEMSELVES TO RESUME THEIR DRIVE SOUTH TOWARD THE NIPPON REINFORCEMENT PORT OF ORMOC.

FIGHTING THROUGH KNEE-DEEP MUD AND DRENCHED BY TOTTENTIAL RAINS, THE TROOPS TOOK LIMON NOV.23 AND DROVE 1,000 YARDS BEYOND THE STRONGLY DEFENDED VILLAGE TO CAPTURE A BRIDGE SPANNING LEYTE RIVER.

THE JAPANESE COUNTERATTACKED NOV.24 AND RECAPTURED THE BRIDGE. THEY GOT ONE TANK ACROSS THE SPAN AND TRIED FOR SEVERAL HOURS TO RETAKE LIMON BUT WERE BEATEN OFF WITH HEAVY LOSSES. THE DOUGHBOYS FORCED THEM BACK ACROSS THE BRIDGE. ARTILLERYMEN THEN DEMOLISHED THE STRUCTURE TO PREVENT FURTHER COUNTERATTACKS.

CAPT.PHILIP S.SMITH, OF COVERT, MICH., SAID THAT DURING THE 32ND'S DROVE ON AND BEYOND LIMON MANY JAPANESE WERE KILLED. BUT HE BELIEVED THE ENEMY STILL WAS MANAGING TO GET REINFORCEMENTS INTO THE AREA DESPITE TERRIFIC YANK ARTILLERZ BARRAGES.

ANOTHER STUBBORN JAPANESE DEFENSIVE STAND WAS EXPECTED IN THE HILLS THREE MILES SOUTH OF LIMON.

MEANWHILE SMALL NIPPON UNITS CONTINUE TO INFILTRATE THROUGH THE RUGGED COUNTRY TO HARASS AMERICAN COMMUNICATIONS AS FAR BACK AS THE CARIGARA BAY NORTH COASTAL ROAD. THSE JAPANESE ARE USING BOTH MACHINE GUNS AND ARTILLERY. THE TROOPS AROUND LIMON, HOWEVER, WERE GETTING THEIR SUPPLIES BY AIR TRANSPORT.

AN INDICATION THAT THE JAPANESE MEAN TO CONTINUE HEAVY FIGHTING IN THE LIMON AREA WAS SEEN IN TANK MOVEMENTS ALONG ORMOC ROAD. YESTERDAY AN ARTILLERY SPOTTER PLANE SAW EIGHT TANKS MOVING NORTHWARD. THE TANKS WERE DISPERSED. LATER A CAVALARY ARTILLERY SPOTTER IN THE MOUNTAINS CAUGHT SIGHT OF THE TANKS. HE CALLED FOR A BARRAGE AND AT LEAST FIVE WERE DESTROYED.

MAJ.HOWARD READ, OF PHILADELPHIA, PA., SAID JAPANESE TRAFFIC FARTHER SOUTH ON THE ORMOC ROAD WAS OBVIOUSLY LESSENING BUT 1ST/LT. RILEY E.FLETCHER, OF CORSICANA, TEX., INDICATED THE JIPPONESE STILL ARE RUNNING SOME SUPPLIES INTO ORMOC BY BARGE.

ONE UNIT OF THE U.S. 24TH DIVISION WHICH OUTFLANKED THE JAPANESE FROM THE EAST, IS FIGHTING SHARP DAILY ACTIONS BELOW LIMON. ANOTHER 24TH UNIT HAS WITHDRAWN FROM THE SAME ARE AFTER A FORTNIGHT ON THE BATTLE LINES DURING WHICH IT RECEIVED SUPPLIES BY PLANE-DROP AND NATIVE CARRIERS. IT MANAGED TO EXTRICATE ITSELF BY A GRUELLING TWO-DAY MARCH THROUGH THE MOUNTAINS.

U.S.PACIFIC FLEETHEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR, NOV.26-(AP)-NAVY NURSES IN THE PACIFIC AREA ARE VALUABLE MORALE BOOSTERS AS WELL AS WOUND DRESSERS, ADM.CHESTER W.NIMITZ SAID TODAY IN A PRESS RELEASE SUPPORTING A DRIVE TO ENLARGE THAT BRANCH OF THE SERVICE.

IN A "WELL DONE" MESSAGE TO THE NURSE CORPS, THE FLEET COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF SAID:

"ALTHOUGH PRIMARILY CONCRNED WITH THE PROFESSIONAL CARE OF THEIR PATIENTS, RECOGNITION IS DUE OUR NURSES FOR THEIR WORK IN SUPERVISING AND TRAINING HOSPITAL CORPSMEN, FOR THEIR SERVICES AS COMPETENT TECHNICAL ASSISTANTS TO MEDICAL OFFICERS AND FOR THE INFLUENCE OF THEIR PRESENCE AND COUNSEL IN RSTORING THE MORALE OF PATIENTS UNDER THEIR CARE."

NOV 27 1944

HE DISCLOSED THAT ABOUT 1,200 OF THE NAVY'S 8,500 NURSES WERE STATIONED IN THE HAWAIIAN AREA AND IN THE SOUTH,SOUTHWEST AND CENTRAL PACIFIC. HE SAID THIS NUMBER WOULD BE INSUFFICIENT FOR THE COMING MONTHS. THE OBJECT OF THE DRIVE IS TO INCREASE THE CORPS BY 2,000 BY DECEMBER 31.

A RECENT SURVEY AMONG NAVY NURSES SHOWED THAT THE ISLAND OG OAHU, ON WHICH HONOLUPU AND PEARL HARBOR ARE LOCATED, WS THEIR FAVORITE OVERSEAS DUTY STATION, BUT SOMEOF THEM WANT TO "FOLLOW THE FLEET ALL THE WAY TO TOKYO," NIMITZ SAID.

AS TYPICAL OF THE ESPRIT DE CORPS,HE CITED THESE COMMENTS AMONG INDIVIDUAL NURSES IN THE PACIFIC:

ENS.EVALYN KASNIIA, OF SOUTH BEND, IND.: "I DON'T WANT TO GO HOME UNTIL THE END OF THE WAR BECAUSE I FEEL I CAN BE OF MORE SERVICE TO OUR BATTLE-WOUNDED AND SICK OUT HERE."

ENS.LEILA R.GOUENMOUR (CQ) OF JACKSONVILLE, FLA.:
"BEING A NURSE OUT HERE IS SIMILAR TO BEING A CHAPLAIN. PATIENTS FROM THE WAR ZONE TREAT US WITH RESPECT AND CONSIDERATION."

LT.ELEANOR HARRINGTON, OF LOWELL, MASS.: "WE HAVE THE THRILLING SATISFACTION OF BEING AN INTEGRAL PART OF THE NAVY. IT IS NEVER BORING."

LT. (JG) MILDRED WILLMAN, OF GRAND ISLAND, NEB.: "IT IS ALWAYS REFRESHING TO CARE FOR SOME ONE WHO HAS SEEN ACTION AND WHO IS GLAD TOBE ALIVE."

U.S. 21ST BOMBER COMMAND, SAIPAN, NOV.24DELAYED)-(AP)-THE CREW OF ONE B-29 SUPERFORTRESS ACCOMPLISHED THE SEEMINGLY IMPOSSIBLE TODAY AND FLEW ITS GIANT PLANE HOME FROM TOKYO--1,500 MILES--ON TWO ENGINES.

BRIG.GEN.HAYWOOD HANSELL, JR., COMMANDER OF THE 21ST BOMBER COMMAND, COMPLIMENTED COL.SAMUEL R.HARRIS, WINSTON-SALEM, N.C., THE SUPERFORTRESS COMMANDER, AND LT.COL.GEORGE A.SHEALY, 902 WEST ONTARIO AVE., ATLANTA, GA., FORMER DELTA AIRLINES FLIER WHO DID THE ACTUAL PILOTING. HE PRAISED THEM AND THE OTHER CREWMEN FOR "A MAGNIFICENT ACHIEVEMENT."

COL.SHEALY SAID THE SHIP ENCOUNTERED NO FIGHTERS OR ANTI-AIRCRAFT TROUBLE, BUT ONLY OPERATIONAL DIFFICULTIES.

"WE LOST TWO ENGINES OVER JAPAN," HE SAID. "ONE WENT OUT JUST BEFORE WE REACHED THE TARGET, AND WE MADE OUR BOMBING RUN WITH THREE ENGINES. THE SECOND FAILED FIVE MINUTES LATER.

"IMMEDIATELY WE STARTED LOSING ALTITUDE AND PLANNED TO DITCH THE PLANE IN THE OCEAN ABOUT 50 MILES OFF JAPAN. THEN WE MANAGED TO START ONE ENGINE AGAIN, BUT IT USED SO MUCH OIL WE FIGURED IT MIGHT TAKE US ONLY 300 MILES.

"THEN WE CUT OIL CONSUMPTION DOWN ABOUT HALF, GIVING US ENOUGH FOR THREE HOURS LONGER. WE RAN THE LAST 10 MINUTES WITH NO OIL AT ALL. ACTUALLY THE ENGINE WASN'T PROVIDING ANY POWER, BUT MERELY ACTING AS A STABILIZER FOR THE TWO OUTBOARD ENGINES, WHICH FUNCTIONED PERFECTLY UNDER A LOAD THEY WERE NEVER DESIGNED FOR."

COL. HARRIS SAID THE ENLISTED MEN, ALTHOUGH KNOWING A WATER LANDING OFF JAPAN WOULD BE NO PICNIC, JOKED AND LAUGHED AS THEY STARTED CHOPPING OUT THE GIANT PLANE'S INTERIOR TO LIGHTEN IT. THEY STREWED PARTS ALL THE WAY HOME FROM TOKYO.

LEYTE ISLAND, PHILIPPINES, NOV.7-(DELAYED)-(AP)-STRANDED CREWS OF TWO P-T BOATS FOUND A SHANGRI-LA IN THE PHILIPPINES.

WHEN RESCUE BOATS ARRIVED IN THE DARKNESS AFTER THE 33 AMERICANS HAD SPENT TWO DAYS AND TWO NIGHTS IN THE FILIPINO VILLAGE, THE YANKS SAID THEY HATED TO LEAVE.

"WE WERE THE FIRST AMERICANS TO VISIT THE SOUTHWEST LEYTE COASTAL VILLAGE IN FOUR YEARS," EXPLAINED LT. (JG) ED F.WAKELIN, OF 1430 N. HAMPTON ST., HOLYOKE, MASS., SKIPPER OF ONE OF THE GROUNDED P-T'S. "THE RECEPTION WAS ALMOST UNBELIEVABLE. I CAN'T SAY ENOUGH FOR THOSE FILIPINOS. THEY MOVED OUT AND GAVE US THEIR HOMES, KILLED AND ROASTED THEIR CHICKENS, FEASTED US ON EGGS AND BANANAS AND PLANNED A ROAST PIG DINNER AND DANCE AT THE SCHOOLHOUSE THE NIGHT WE HAD TO LEAVE.

"THEY FEARED WE WERE JAPANESE WHEN OUR BOATS FIRST APPEARED, AND SCURRIED FOR COVER. BUT WHEN WE SHOUTED: 'AMERICANOS,' THEY RUSHED OUT TO AID US. WHAT THOSE FILIPINOS DID FOR US IMPRESSED ME MORE DEEPLY THAN ANYTHING IN HAVE SEEN IN A LONG TIME."

"ONE OF THE MOST FANTASTIC THINGS CAME AT 2 A.M. THE SECOND NIGHT," SAID ENS. HOWARD I.GREEN, OF (450 WEST END AVE.) NEW YORK CITY. "WE WERE BUSY RECAMOUFLAGING OUR BOATS WHEN A BLARE OF MUSIC SUDDENLY CAME FROM THE BEACH. THE FILIPINOS HAD AN ORCHESTRA OF TWO TRUMPETS, A SAXOPHONE, TROMBONE AND A BASS HORN. THEN THEY CRIED: 'YOU LIKE? YOU LIKE?' WE DID AND THEY GOT IN THEIR CANOES AND CAME OUT TO CONTINUE THE SERENADE ALONGSIDE OUR BOATS. THEY PLAYED SUCH PIECES AS STAR DUST, DOWN ARGENTINE WAY, OH JOHNNY AND THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER. IT SEEMED FANTASTIC. THEY HAD LEARNED THE TUNES FROM MOVIES."

THE DEBATE PRIOR TO A VOTE ON THE CONFIDENCE MOTION MAY EXTEND OVER THREE OR FOUR DAYS.

THE TOTAL ANTI-CONSCRIPTION VOTE, INCLUDING THOSE LIBERALS WHO WILL BREAK WITH THEIR PARTY, IS NOT EXPECTED IN SOME QUARTERS TO EXCEED 40, HOWEVER, AS EVEN THE OPPOSITION IS SPLIT ON THE ISSUE.

IF ALL VOTE TOGETHER WHO OPPOSE CONSCRIPTION AND WHO FAVOR IT BUT FEEL THE GOVERNMENT HAS NOT GONE FAR ENOUGH, THE TOTAL AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT POLICY STILL WOULD BE ONLY 95, INSUFFICIENT TO FORCE A RESIGNATION AND GENERAL ELECTION, SOURCES IN OTTAWA ASSERTED.

MEANWHILE, ALTHOUGH THE CENTER OF RESISTANCE TO CONSCRIPTION FOR OVERSEAS SERVICE HAS BEEN IN FRENCH CANADA, NEW DEMONSTRATIONS BY HOME DEFENSE CONSCRIPTS WERE REPORTED FROM BRITISH COLUMBIA.

THERE WERE DEMONSTRATIONS SATURDAY AND SATURDAY NIGHT IN FIVE BRITISH COLUMBIA TOWNS BY ABOUT 3,000 SOLDIERS. TWO MILITARY POLICEMEN WERE INJURED.

THE PACIFIC COMMAND ISSUED A STATEMENT THAT "THE DEMONSTRATIONS WERE PROTESTING WHAT THEY TERMED A 'PHONEY CONSCRIPTION'."

Nazi Defenders of Cologne Plain Fall Back to Bank of Roer River: Yanks Gain 6 Miles in Saar Drive

NOV 28 1944

PATTON'S FORCES ADVANCE TO WITHIN 16 MILES OF RHINE

NOV 28 1944

U. S. Armies Battle Bitterly in Effort to Seize Koslar, Kirchberg.

PUSH TOWARD JULICH

German Bridges Blown Up Tightening Noose on Troops Fleeing Vosges.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Nov. 27.—(AP) German defenders of the Cologne plain were driven back south of Julich tonight to the west bank of the Roer river—best natural barrier short of the Rhine—as the U. S. Ninth dealt hammer blows alongside the U. S. First in the fateful battle of the Reich.

NIGHT

The U. S. First army, pressing the enemy back a mile and a half with heavy losses, was deep inside two strongholds to the south within two and a half and four miles of the Roer. A staff officer declared that given a break from the weather, the river soon would be reached.

As the German high command threw in fresh troops to meet this mounting peril to its industrial Ruhr and Rhineland, the Saar basin—second only to the Ruhr as a source of the enemy's war might—was invaded anew by the resurgent U. S. Third army which nowhere along its 60-mile front was now more than 16 miles from the Reich after gains up to six miles.

For the fiirst time, the 7th Army received close support from American heavy bombers which hit railyards at Offenburg, ten miles southeast of Strasbourg.

First Tactical Air Force fighter-bombers knocked down a Rhine rail bridge at Breisach, southeast of Colmar, and a pontoon road bridge which also spanned the Rhine midway between Breisach and Strasbourg. Other 1st Tastical planes knocked out two tanks and strafed German troops north of Sarrebourg.

NOV 28 1944

Strafe Gun Positions

Ninth Air Force fighter-bombers blasted and strafed enemy troops and gun positions in the Duren, Julich and Linninch areas and hit factories and transport targets around Cologne. One 9th Air Force plane was lost out of the 190 which took to the air.

Nazi Bridges Destroyed

U. S. heavy bombers flew close support to the U. S. Seventh army for the first time, bombing railyards at Offenburg, 10 miles southeast of Strasbourg. First tactical air force fighter-bombers knocked out two Rhine pontoon bridges to the south, further squeezing the enemy fleeing the Vosges.

Gains Toward Saarbrucken And Cologne Scored

London, Nov. 27 (AP)—In hard and bloody fighting, United States 1st Army troops today stormed into the center of Langerwehe, 24½ miles from Cologne and the last big German road center west of the Roer river. At dusk the infantry was fighting house to house the Nazis there.

To the south, Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's 3d Army infantrymen drove through the road center of St. Avold. Their advance two miles east of St. Avold placed them within seventeen miles of Saarbrucken, one of Germany's great coal, steel and railroad

H. Simpson's Ninth army battled bitterly house-to-house in Koslar, two miles west of Julich, other forces fought half-way through Kirchberg on the west bank of the river a mile and a half south of Julich.

(Detailed maps show that Julich itself, in on the Inde, a tributary of the Roer, which it joins less than a half-mile north. Apparently it was in this sector to the north that the Germans fell back to the Roer.)

Smash Toward Julich

While this thrust against savage resistance represented a gain of only a half-mile to a mile east of Bourheim, it will give the Americans their first foothold on the Roer and enable them to drive on Julich from the south once they clean out the rest of Kirchberg.

Hammering at Julich along a 10-mile front, the Ninth on its north flank sent armored forces ahead some 500 yards and on the south advanced 500 yards northeast of Altdorf, three miles south of the town.

Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' Doughboys to the south fought into the center of Langerwehe, 14 miles inside Germany and the last major road center before the Roer, four miles east. Eight miles south they seized most of the forest anchor town of Hurtgen, two and a half miles from the river.

Five miles southwest of Duren they fought into Grosshau, which earlier was plastered by artillery. Like the Ninth, the First was fighting the bitterest kind of opposition over a battlefield turned into a quagmire by rain and snow.

Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's forces burst across the Saar's Western frontier at a new point along a three-mile front, and were driving on three Saar towns after gains of up to a mile.

They lengthened their lines inside Germany to 19 miles.

To the southwest, they slashed through the old Maginot line at a second point and gained six miles in an advance close to Merten, only one mile west of the Saar border.

Yanks Capture St. Avold

To the southeast, they captured the road center of St. Avold, where the Maginot line was breached yesterday, fought north to within two miles of the Saar frontier, and east two miles to within 13 miles of the Basin's industrial city of Saarbrucken.

(Far from underestimating this new and menacing assault, the Germans said the attacks were being made by "strong American tank forces.")

From north to south, the Winter offensive of General Eisenhower was forging ahead, meeting its greatest test of strength on the Cologne plain, which Field Marshal Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt apparently has chosen to defend at the expense of his southern front.

The British Second army scored a gain of a third of a mile in a line-straightening attack north of Geilenkirchen in Germany.

The German stand west of the Rhine on the southern end of the front was deteriorating rapidly, and their Siegfried Line positions east of the river were pounded by U. S. heavy bombers flying in close support of the U. S. Seventh army for the first time.

Seventh army forces widened the Saverne gap positions leading to Strasbourg and pushed on about four miles to a point 12 miles north of the city within sight of the Rhine.

Breaking through the Saales pass out on the Alsace plain, other forces of the Seventh seized the city of Molsheim, 11 miles southwest of Strasbourg, and were within eight miles of breaking clear through a second Vosges pass of Ste. Marie farther south.

At the extreme end of the front, the French First army cleared the Mulhouse area of the enemy with drives to the east and west, and cut the road from Belfor to Mulhouse thus sewing up any Germans still pocketed in the gap.

Clean Up Maas Salient

The British Second army in Eastern Holland cleaned up the enemy's once menacing salient west of the Maas river except for three or four pockets.

Once more the weather on the crucial front at the approaches to the Cologne plain was deteriorating, but fighter bombers gained destruction on enemy positions through thickening clouds.

Gathering new power, the First army pushed a mile northeast of newly-captured Weisweiler, seized Frenz, which was covered by entrenchments and strongly defended, and drove 400 yards beyond. The town, 25 miles west of Cologne, fell only after three successive attacks.

Meanwhile other units fought straight east of Weisweiler and penetrated into the heart of Langerwehe, less than five miles west of Duren, which stands on the Roer blocking the road to Cologne.

Heavy fighting continued for high ground in the northeastern edge of Hurtgen forest, where the Doughboys fought to within four and a half miles of Duren yesterday. Just to the south the fortified town of Grosshau was melting away in the fire of an American artillery barrage.

Seven miles southwest of Duren, the town of Hurtgen, which had withstood repeated assaults, appeared to be falling after many weeks of battle in its vicinity as the Doughboys fighting in from the west took the major part of it from the bitterly-resisting enemy. It was costly, yard-by-yard slugging.

The U. S. Ninth army on the First's north flank, at times wading knee deep through the flood waters of the Roer, was attacking the outer defenses of Julich. Lt. Gen. Simpson's boys knocked out five more enemy tanks and brought their 10-day total to 141.

Heavy fighting raged around Barmen, two and a half miles northwest of Julich, Koslar, two miles west, Kirchberg, one and a half miles due south, and Altdorf three miles south.

Floods Hamper Advance

While floods hampered the advance of Gen. Simpson's infantry, it also flushed the enemy from cellars which the Nazis had converted into strongpoints.

German artillery, backed to the east bank of the Roer, was firing on the American lines, at places with white phosphorus shells.

Lt. Gen. Miles C. Dempsey's Second British army forces fighting on the northwest ironed out a 500-yard dent in its lines near Tripsrath, two miles north of Geilenkirchen, where the British hold high ground overlooking the Wurm river, a Roer tributary.

Patton's new crossing into the Saar was between that basin's western cities of Merzig and Saarlautern. A front dispatch said the 90th infantry division was approaching the towns of Meidwilling, Furweiler and Hemmersdorf, all a half to a mile and a half inside the Reich.

Eight miles to the south, the 95th infantry division was moving up swiftly on the 90th's right flank and appeared likely to join it inside Germany momentarily.

centers. The Germans had fought stubbornly for St. Avold, but withdrew last night, allowing the infantry to enter unopposed.

The 3d Army widened its front in the German Saar Basin to nineteen miles.

Hurtgen Entered, Frenz Taken

The 1st Army finally burst into the forest battlefield town of Hurtgen also, and captured Frenz, twenty-five miles from Cologne. Langerwehe is fifteen miles east of the German border.

The bigger part of Hurtgen was in American hands.

Patrols also entered Kleinhau, a Hurtgen Forest town two miles to the northeast.

The 10th Armored Division of the United States 3d Army won high ground in an advance deeper into Germany west of Mitscholz, seven miles northeast of the road center of Merzig. The 90th Infantry drove ahead a mile and a half on a three-mile front between Merzig and Saarlautern. The 90th reached Meidwilling, Furweiler and Hemmersdorf.

Nazis Give Up Four Metz Forts

Four little forts in the ring around Metz were found abandoned by the Germans. These are between the larger-fort groups of Jean d'Arc and Driant. The 95th Infantry gained a mile and a half through outer pillboxes of the Maginot Line reaching Coume, Eblange, Velbring and Teterchen in an arc five miles southwest of Saarlautern. The 3d Army increased its prisoners by 708 in a day's span.

Despite low clouds over the Cologne plain, Thunderbolt fighter-bombers came sweeping in to support ground attacks and to batter German artillery beyond the Roer. Varying weapons of increasing numbers were used on that sector against the 9th Army. The Germans rolled up some railroad guns. One shell hit barracks for American Red Cross girls, but caused no casualties.

Frenz is fourteen miles inside Germany and north of the road leading through threatened Duren to Cologne. Troops were within four miles of Duren.

The 3d Army widened its front in the Saar basin to nineteen miles and poured tanks, guns and infantry through breaches aimed at Saarbrucken, already within seige-gun range. Ten forts in the Maginot Line were taken.

Men In Water Above Knees

Ninth Army infantry battling in the outer defenses of the Roer River fortress of Julich fought toward the stream, sometimes wading in water above their knees. The boggy ground limited the use of tanks.

Heavy infantry battles flamed around Barmen, two miles north of Julich; Koslar, a mile and a half west, and Kirchberg, two miles south. Flood waters of the Roer flowed through Barmen's streets, hampering the Americans but forcing the Germans out of cellars in the village. Hundreds of shells blasted the town. German artillery replied, shelling the 9th Army from high ground east of the Roer.

7th Army Gains

The United States 7th Army stabbed a spur twelve miles north from Strasbourg toward Karlsruhe in Germany.

The weather again turned poor for flying but the 9th Air Force got in close with attacks all along the Roer River line in the eighteen miles between Linnich, Julich and Duren. At one place the flyers dive-bombed Germans at one end of a tiny village while doughboys pushed in from the other side.

The British 2d Army, in the extreme north, moved up a quarter of a mile, ironing out a bow in its line near Tripsrath, northeast of Geilenkirchen. It probed the thick defenses of Venlo, on the Maas, in Holland.

Strasbourg Path Widened

Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's 3d Army fought through Maginot Line fortresses in a sector southeast of the new penetration of Germany, moving within four miles of the Saar border.

Seventh Army troops broadened the Strasbourg corridor to almost fifteen miles and spilled through the Saales Pass to open a new route to the French city at the Rhine. They were within eight miles of still another clean breakthrough the Vosges Mountains in the Ste. Marie Pass east of St. Die.

The 7th Army troops that pushed through the Saales Pass spread out on the Rhine plain ten miles southwest of Strasbourg. The pass was cleared yesterday in a swift advance between the upper and lower Vosges and this advance boxed off 150 square miles of the forests of Domaniale.

Two Nazi Generals Captured

In Strasbourg itself French units under Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch captured two enemy generals and squeezed the Nazis back to compact bridgeheads on the western ends of three great Rhine bridges, which at latest reports were still intact. Forts Ney, Petain, Kleber and the others in the ring around Strasbourg were captured.

Maj. Gen. Wilhelm Ullersperger, commander of the fort system, was caught trying to get back to Strasbourg from one of the forts south of the city. Maj. Gen. Franz Vaterbot, Strasbourg operations commander, and his chief of staff, Lieut. Col. Willing Kaiser, were also captured.

Five More Nazi Tanks Bagged

The 9th Army of Lieut. Gen. William H. Simpson destroyed five more tanks on the approaches to Julich. This raised its total for the offensive to 141; many of them had come straight from factories to the front. The 9th encountered heavy opposition, including dug-in tanks at Koslar, just west of Julich. The Germans fired white phosphorus shells on the 9th Army's left flank.

Patch's 7th Army fought within sight of the Rhine in the Strasbourg area from a point four miles south of Andover to one twelves miles north of Strasbourg. Since November 13 the 7th has killed or captured 37,000 Germans.

The Cologne Plain Fighting

Gains in the north of the Cologne plain were painful and bitterly contested, and the battle had not yet reached its climax. The fate of Germany perhaps was at stake, for on the arc before Cologne Marshal von Rundstedt had massed the bulk of his fighting power in the west, depending on the rough terrain of the Block Forest and the Saar to defend the southern end of his front.

The 1st and 9th armies pressed within four miles of Duren, which, like Julich, is a key bastion on the Roer River line. The Duren-Weisweiler road was cut six miles west of Duren and the Nazis were being shoved back steadily though slowly.

The 9th, fighting left of the 1st Army, fought house by house in the village of Koslar and contended with German delayed-action shells. The Nazis also made a feeble four-plane bombing and strafing attempt, but their major counterattack with tanks and infantry was smashed yesterday with the help of planes.

Leclerc's Forces Advance

In Strasbourg itself, the Germans were squeezed back to compact bridgeheads before three Rhine bridges. Patch's 79th Infantry from Pennsylvania pressed steadily toward Haguenau, last communications hub in northern Lorraine on the way to Karlruhe, 30 miles northeast. South of Strasbourg, Maj. Gen. Jacques Leclerc's French 2d Armored Division drove near Graffenstaden, where the Germans blew up a canal bridge in an effort to halt it.

The 44th Infantry and other forces of the United States 7th Army were winning back most of the ground lost over the week end to a German counterattack upon the Saverne Gap corridor. The threat to the lifeline was reported to have been smashed.

French farther south captured Ventron and Oderon Pass, 3,000 feet in the Vosges, and the town of Bussang in the pass of that name.

Along the upper valley of the Boller River, French infantry gouged out large wedges with the capture of Masebaux, Oberbruck and Wegscheid, roughly six miles southeast of Bussang. Heimsbrunn and Galfringue were taken in a steady expansion four miles southwest of Mulhouse. Southeast of Mulhouse, the Nazis clung to a strong position on the Rhine around Kembs.

St. Germain Reached

The French reached St. Germain and La Chapelle, threatening the last escape route for the Nazis holding out in pockets at Belfort. All the forest east of that Maginot Line city was cleared of Germans.

Brooklyn Former Policeman Wins One-Man Fight With Five Tanks

By The Associated Press.

PUFFENDORF, Germany, Nov. 27—He is only a Brooklyn former patrolman, but to a battalion of German Tiger tanks on this front he was more trouble than a regiment of very angry Russians.

In a few brief hours he did these things:

Attacked five German Tiger tanks and accompanying German infantry alone with hand grenades;

Killed all five tank commanders with his rifle;

"Surrounded" and staged a one-man war on a German command post, killing three officers;

Played hide and seek alone with a whole German battalion in the town of Prummern.

It was the first time he ever had been in action.

He is Lieut. Carl C. Palm, 28 years old, former New York policeman whose home is at 724 Forty-seventh Street, Brooklyn.

Here is how it happened:

Having heard the town of Prummern had been taken, Lieutenant Palm rushed his anti-tank platoon into town and found that his battalion still was engaged in street fighting.

He selected a strategic corner and began setting up his three 57-mm. guns. One was fairly well set and another was almost ready when five new Royal Tiger 68-ton tanks rolled down the street.

The tanks were accompanied by considerable infantry. To give his platoon time to finish setting up the guns, Lieutenant Palm dashed to one side and began throwing hand grenades at the tanks and infantry to direct their fire toward himself.

The tanks kept coming, however, and knocked out the American guns, even though one gun knocked a tread off one tank.

The German infantry started after Lieutenant Palm, chasing him in and out of houses and throwing grenades at him. He eluded them and got onto a roof overlooking the street where the tanks were. The tank commanders all had raised their hatches and were sitting outside. Lieutenant Palm shot all five of them.

Picks Off Three Officers

Then the former policeman ran to another house and discovered he was directly opposite a German command post. It was getting dark, so he crept to a window and shot the first three German officers who tried to go in or out of the post. German foot traffic abruptly slacked off, while Lieutenant Palm continued to hang around and wait for another shot.

Meanwhile, his battalion withdrew from the town, leaving Lieutenant Palm and nine of his men who had been separated from their units.

Down the street Sergeant Ellsworth Dover of Minco, Okla., who headed a mine-laying squad, took a hand in Lieutenant Palm's one-man war by quietly laying a mine-field diagonally across the street corner near the German command post and in front of the tanks whose commanders Lieutenant Palm had killed. One tank tried to move and promptly knocked itself out on one of Sergeant Dover's mines.

Thus encouraged, Lieutenant Palm maintained his siege of the command post all night and well into the next day, when his battalion commander came up under fire, located Lieutenant Palm and his men and led them out of the town because the infantry was preparing a new assault.

Lieutenant Palm no sooner got back to his battalion command post than he asked for volunteers to go back into Prummern and help clean out the place. He quickly got together a squad and went back into the fight.

For all this Lieutenant Palm has been cited in his division's dispatches and also in British dispatches because his division was operating under British command at the time.

Polish Award Given to Biddle

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, Paris, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—Col. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr., chief of the European Allied contact section of Supreme Headquarters, and former Ambassador to Poland, has been awarded the Cross of Valor, high Polish decoration, by Lieut.-Gen. M. Kukiel, Polish Defense Minister.

The honor was bestowed for Col. Biddle's gallantry during bombardment and evacuation of Warsaw in 1939.

AMERICAN WOUNDED WIN NURSE'S PRAISE

WITH THE AMERICAN NINTH ARMY in Germany, Nov. 27 (AP)—Americans wounded along the Ninth Army's front may have lost an arm or a leg, but not their spirit or their sense of humor.

Despite the seriousness of some of their wounds, the troops manage to be so funny that they have the evacuation hospital wards sounding like a minstrel show. The surgical wards are full of bandaged men and the odor of medicine, but the boys still laugh.

"Some of these boys are hurt so badly, I don't know how they ever will get well, but they are always thinking of something funny to say," said Lieut. Julia Blandford, a nurse, of Louisville. "Thanksgiving night they brought in a wounded boy who had been captured by the Germans while in a pillbox. All he had to eat for five days was a piece of black bread. He pretended to be mad because he missed a turkey dinner. He said he would write President Roosevelt about it.

"After watching German soldier patients, you realize what our boys have got," Lieutenant Blandford said. "The Germans may think they are a master race, but they sure change in hospitals. They whine when you touch them. They're perfect babies."

BELGIAN CABINET CONSIDERS CLASH

Brussels, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—The Cabinet of Premier Hubert Pierlot gathered for an emergency meeting today to consider a crisis arising from a bloody clash between anti-Government demonstrators and black-helmeted Belgian state police in front of the Chamber of Deputies.

The Premier, who rushed back to Brussels from his country home in Luxembourg, said in an interview yesterday that the demonstration on Saturday "was staged by a small minority, including communists who have the childish hope of seizing power."

"But we will not yield," he added.

The Premier said police would begin a house to house search for small arms hidden by members of resistance groups who failed to obey a Government order to turn them in. He said the latest figures showed forty-five civilians and about twelve gendarmes were wounded in Saturday's clash.

METZ CIVILIANS GET FOOD

U. S. 3RD ARMY, Nov. 27—(AP) The U. S. Third army released a large quantity of captured food to civilians of Metz today. The booty was the winter reserve of the German garrison and included 150 tons of frozen beef, 20 tons of frozen corn, 50 carloads of flour, another batch of 150 tons of flour, big stores of miscellaneous canned goods and quantities of cheese.

Technician Conducts Maastricht Symphony

Maastricht, Holland, Nov. 26 [AP—Delayed]—Giving its first concert since the Germans invaded Holland, the Maastricht Symphony Orchestra was revived today with Tech 5/g Henry S. Mazer, of Pittsburgh, as guest conductor.

Mazer planned to conduct only three numbers, leaving the remainder of the program to civilian conductors, but the Dutch audience of 1,000 liked him so well it forced him to remain on the podium. It was the first time an American had conducted the orchestra.

The 26-year-old musician formerly conducted the Duquesne University Bach Choir. He studied under Firtz Reiner, conductor of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, and later founded his own symphonietta of twenty players. He now is a chaplain's assistant in a combat engineer group.

German Gang Fights Cited

With U. S. 9th Army in Germany, Nov. 27 (AP)—A 17-year-old German deserter asserted today that teen-age boys in German cities are forming gangs which engage in fighting Hitler Youth groups in the streets with knives and clubs at night.

Allied Parachutists Behind Siegfried Line?

Bern, Switzerland, Nov. 27 (AP)—A dispatch to the Basel newspaper National Zeitung from Schaffhausen today said Allied parachute troops had landed in the upper Wutach Valley of Germany behind the Siegfried Line with the aim of destroying the strategic rail line from Donaueschingen to Waldschut.

2 Topics For Debate By De Gaulle, Stalin

Paris, Nov. 27 (AP)—Germany's future and "collective security" are expected in informed French diplomatic circles to be the two chief topics of conversation between Gen. de Gaulle and Premier Stalin, toward whose Kremlin stronghold the French Liberation leader was speeding tonight.

A third prime topic may be a possible treaty between France and Russia, which some quarters believe might involve both economic agreements and military cooperation, as well as a guarantee, as in the Russo-Czechoslovak pact, of France's free choice of her form of government.

French Raise 65 Billion Francs

PARIS, Nov. 27 (AP).—The French government today reported that public subscription to a liberation loan bond issue designed to absorb loose cash and relieve inflation totaled 65,000,000,000 francs Saturday after three weeks' sale. The sale amounted to $1,300,000,000 at the legal rate of two cents a franc and about $300,000,000 on the free (black) market—the latter equivalent to about $8 for every person in France.

Reds Cross Carpathians In New Slovakian Drive

Push Ahead Six Miles in Sweep from Poland; Advance in Hungary.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 28—(AP) Russian troops in a new six-mile penetration of northern Slovakia yesterday crossed the 2,700-ft. Carpathian mountains along the Polish frontier as other units in the south struck to within 11 miles of the big north Hungarian rail center of Satoraljaujhely, a Moscow communique announced last night.

Sweeping through 50 more hamlets in the Axis puppet state, Col. Gen. Ivan Petrov's Fourth Ukraine army widened its front to 75 miles from a point west of the Dukla pass in the north down to the Hungarian frontier.

Nazi Strongholds Threatened

The fresh strike from the north further imperilled the enemy strongholds of Presov and Kassa (Kosice), already threatened by central columns only 25 miles to the east.

A midnight bulletin said 470 Germans were captured in one area near the center of the front, and all the equipment and transport of the 52d Hungarian anti-aircraft artillery group seized in an attack at the Latorica River, in southern Slovakia.

Moscow did not announce any gains on the Hungarian front, and Berlin said fighting had slackened around Budapest, where the Paris radio reported grave disorders had broken out, with workers fighting the Germans inside a capital deprived of gas, electricity and water.

The Berlin radio said that Russian troops, who had crossed to the west bank of the Danube at Batina and Apatin, 107 and 120 miles south of Budapest in northern Yugoslavia, had forced the Germans back a mile or more. The Germans see this Russian operation, not yet confirmed by Moscow, as part of a Soviet plan to invade western Hungary and take Budapest from the rear.

In northern Slovakia the Russians hammered out gains on a 12-mile front on either side of the Dukla pass and last night were only three miles northeast of Svidnik junction with the capture of the village of Ladomirova.

Six miles southwest of Dukla pass a Soviet group took Dolhona, two miles inside Slovakia. At the other end of the 12-mile northern front the Russians captured Male and Velke Staskovce, seven miles northeast of Stropkov junction.

Following Sunday's seizure of Humenne and Michalovce, in the middle sector of the Sanok-Satoraljaujhely railroad running across Czechoslovakia, the Russians succeeded in clearing considerable sections of that important artery.

North of Humenne they captured Radvan and Koskovce stations, cleaning up a nine-mile section of the road and leaving only a five-mile stretch in enemy hands just north of Humenne. When that section is cleared Petrov's troops will have through communications to their bases in southern Poland.

Seven miles south of Humenne another column took Nacina Ves on the highway to Michalovce, and were close to cutting the nearby railway between those two strongholds.

Soviet spearheads thrusting beyond Humenne were within 27 miles of Presov, and also were attacking across the mountains west of the Sanok-Humenne railway, having captured Nizna Olka, three miles west of the railway and nine miles southeast of Stropkov.

Cross Trunk Highway

Pushing southwest of fallen Michalovce another central column took Laskovce, 25 miles east of Kassa, and had crossed the trunk railway which leads to Satoraljaujhely.

South of Michalovce the villages of Hatalov and Dubrovka were captured, clearing a western section of the railway from Ungvar at a point just before its junction with the main trans-Carpathian line.

To the south the Russians took Oborn, on the Laborec river 13 miles northeast of Satoraljaujhely, and also Szentes and the rail station of Velky Gires, 13 miles west of Csap and only 11 miles from the important Hungarian rail center.

With the capture of Velky Gires the Russian units under Petrov were only 29 miles northeast of Marshal Rodin Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukraine army units holding Tokaj in northeastern Hungary.

The Slovakian campaign, despite heavy rains and mud, appeared to be gaining impetus as the Russians steadily ironed out the huge Axis bulge which sticks eastward between Poland and Hungary.

In Yugoslavia Bulgarian troops captured Raska, on the Ibar river 105 miles south of Belgrade, and were fighting for the auxiliary highway junction of Novi-Pazar, 11 miles to the southwest, a Bulgarian communique said.

REDS EXTEND BUDAPEST ARC

Swing Toward Danube North of Hungarian Capital.

Moscow, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—Russian armored units lashed out from captured Hatvan toward the Danube north of Budapest today while directly downstream from the Hungarian capital another Red formation was reported to have seized a foothold on Csepel Island.

Hatvan, twenty-five miles northeast of Budapest, fell yesterday after a ten-day struggle. With its capture Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky was able to maneuver his Second Ukrainian Army for doublesided attacks to outflank Budapest.

[Berlin said Red Army units fought their way into the northern tip of Csepel Island in the Danube River five miles south of the capital's municipal boundary but had been repulsed in an attempt to cross into western Hungary "to take Budapest from the rear."]

Slovak Defense Line Broken.

Meanwhile troops of Gen. Ivan Petrov's Fourth Ukrainian Army shattered a main sixty-mile defense line across eastern Slovakia by capturing the key rail and road hubs of Michalovce and Humenne, in a twelve-mile advance northwest of Ungvar. This thrust brought the Russians within twenty-eight miles of the two Slovakian strongholds of Kossa (Kosice) and Presov.

The battle for Hatvan cost both the Russians and Germans heavily in tanks and men. The German command fed reserves almost recklessly into the struggle before giving up. The midnight Soviet bulletin said that in one day of fighting 1,000 Germans were killed and 750 Germans and Hungarians were captured.

A key to northern Hungary communications, Hatvan sits astride a north and south railway leading to central Slovakia and the vital Budapest-Miskolc line. The main north route from Hatvan leads through the Matra Mountains to the Czecho-Slovakian border stronghold of Lucenec key to invasion routes into the Reich.

Drive to Island Worries Foe.

The main western routes lead to points on the east bank of the Danube, including Vac, about nineteen miles upstream from Budapest on the great bend where the river turns westward toward Vienna, the Austrian capital.

Moves to drive across the Danube downstream from Budapest, with the island that splits the river for thirty miles south of the capital as a supporting span, admittedly were causing the Germans grave concern.

The Soviet communique did not confirm German announcements that Soviet troops had broken into the important communication towns of Eger and Miskolc, sixty and eighty-five miles northeast of Budapest. Both guard Matra mountain passes.

Pravda reported the Russians had sealed off along the Baltic one-fifth of all German divisions on the eastern front.

Swiss Official Replies to Russia

London, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—Dr. Karl Kobelt, Switzerland's Minister of War, replying to Russian press charges that Switzerland is aiding Germany, said in a broadcast speech yesterday that his country wanted friendly relations with Russia but would not accept dictation.

U. S. FIGHTERS BAG 98 NAZI PLANES

IN BIG AIR BATTLE

Americans Lose 13 Warplanes, One Bomber in 24-Hour Assault.

NAZI LOSSES HIT 239

Allied Aircraft Hammer Supply Line Feeding West Front Armies.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—(AP) In the greatest all-fighter aerial battle in history, 500 Mustangs downed at least 98 German interceptors today, boosting American fighter kills in the past 24 hours to a record-smashing 212.

This raised the total U. S. Eighth air force score for the same period to 239 German fighters downed.

Thirteen American fighters and one bomber were reported missing as a result of today's operations.

Four Planes Strafed

The unofficial number of enemy planes destroyed today was lifted to 102 with the announcement that at least four more German planes were riddled by concentrated Mustang machinegun fire as they attempted to leave the ground.

The American fighter pilots engaged more than 400 Focke-Wulfs and Meeserschmitts while strafing airports and military transport centers in northwest Germany. It was the greatest test of fighter against fighter and pilot against pilot of the war. The German area was filled with planes darting at each other in running dogfights which covered several hundred miles.

The top scoring Mustang group with 30 kills—eight short of matching a group record — was led by Major Joseph E. Broadhead, Rupert, Idaho. Capt. Leonard K. Carson, Denver, Colo., a member of the group, became the day's ace by destroying five planes. Lt. Charles E. Yeager, Hamlin, W. Va., and Capt. John B. England, Carruthersville, Mo., shot down four apiece.

"I saw more German planes than I'd ever seen before," said England, who now has a total of 18 planes to his credit. "We just mowed them down methodically."

Yeager, who previously destroyed five Nazi ships in one day, said "they were all FW190's we encountered. It was hit, fly, and hit again."

Blast Supply Lines

Switching from oil targets for a concentrated blow against supply lines feeding Germany's West front armies, upwards of 2,000 Allied war planes roamed over the entire Western front and nearly to Berlin, plastering packed railway centers and other targets.

Assaults on Nazi supplies have mounted steadily in the last 24 hours with an estimated 6,500 planes pounding targets in direct support of the six Allied armies grinding toward the Rhine.

An Eighth Airforce spokesman said that the furious air battles which involved the 500 Mustangs developed in the Magdeburg, Munster and Brunswick areas and marked the first time the Luftwaffe had attempted to interfere with ground strafing on such an ambitious scale. One Mustang group shot down 30 Focke-Wulfs and Messerschmitts out of a formation of 200 engaged over Magdeburg, 70 miles east of Berlin.

The Nazis usually save their craft for defense of oil targets and sacrificed 130 to American fighters and ter of Misburg.

Official figures on that battle disclosed that Mustangs and Thunderbolts knocked down 114 Nazi planes in combat, while losing six of their own planes. Seven fighters previously reported missing landed in friendly territory leaving six unaccounted for.

Reconnaissance showed that the heavy bombers were able to score numerous hits on the Misburg plant, largest natural oil refinery still active in Germany.

Five hundred Fortresses and Liberators, escorted by 250 Mustangs, spilled nearly 2,000 tons of bombs today on the vital railway yards at Offenbarg, 10 miles east of Strasbourg, and Bingen, 15 miles west of Mainz on the Rhine.

Both rail hubs lie directly behind the German battle lines under attack by the U. S. Seventh army and the French First army.

Meanwhile some 500 RAF Lancasters, shepherded by Spitfires, planted 3,000 tons of explosives on bombers yesterday at the oil centrict of Cologne, on the east bank of the Rhine.

94 NAZI PLANES BAGGED BY YANKS IN AIR BATTLES

Luftwaffe Battles Raiders Second Day—Bombers Blast Rail Yards.

London, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—At least ninety-four German fighters were shot down today, the second consecutive day of big air battles over the Reich, as American war planes swept almost to Berlin, and heavy bombers got in licks in the frontline battle.

Five hundred American fighters, part of a 1,300-plane force which bombed and strafed Nazi rail, road and air targets, met an almost equal number of German Focke-Wulfs and Messerschmitts on a sweep within seventy miles of Berlin.

Furious air battles developed in the Magdeburg, Munster and Brunswick areas as the low-flying raiders swooped on targets all over northwestern Germany. The ninety-four enemy planes brought down raised the total in two days to 226.

Forts Smash Rail Yards.

An Eighth Air Force spokesman said it was the first time the German Air Force had been ordered into the air to do battle in such strength against a purely fighter force.

"They must have mistaken the fighters for a bomber escort," he said.

Five hundred Fortresses and Liberators, meanwhile, were smashing at rail targets at Offenburg, ten miles southeast of Strasbourg, and Bingen, fifteen miles west of Mainz, without meeting opposition.

They followed an R. A. F. predawn attack by 270 Lancasters on Munich in which six-ton blockbusters were scattered in a German industrial city for the first time.

Both Rhine valley rail centers are vital to German forces battling the American Third and Seventh and the French First armies on the southern sector of the western front.

More than 250 Mustangs escorted the bombers, and 500 other Mustangs and Thunderbolts ranged over the Ruhr with machine guns blazing.

R. A. F. Blasts Munich.

The American attacks followed a predawn assault by R. A. F. Lancasters on Munich, and a big air battle yesterday in which approximately 450 German fighters rose to fight off 1,800 American bombers and fighters assaulting the Nazi natural oil refinery at Misburg in a campaign which has showered nearly 7,000 tons of bombs on German oil facilities in forty-eight hours.

Latest reports today said 132 of the enemy planes were shot down including sixteen by bomber gunners. Thirty-six bombers and six American fighters were lost in the Sunday fight. First reports said fifty were lost, but one bomber and seven fighters later turned up safe at friendly bases.

New Jersey flyers who scored victories in yesterday's raid were Capt. Michael Yannell, 112 Orcard street, Summit, two planes; Capt. Donald J. Strait, 25 Derwent avenue, Verona, one and one-half, and Capt. James E. Duffy Jr., 22 Park street, Montclair, one.

The Air Ministry said the fifteen-minute attack on Munch this morning resulted in fires over a wide area. One of the British bombers was lost.

More than 6,000 Anglo-American fighters and bombers roved the Reich during the week-end, 2,000 fighters working exclusively on front-line targets yesterday.

Ninth Attack on Misburg.

The attack yesterday was the ninth on the Misburg refinery, which has a yearly production of 220,000 tons. It followed up Saturday's raid by 2,000 American planes on the Leuna works at Merseburg, one of Germany's largest synthetic oil plants. A delayed communique disclosed that the Saturday attacks had cost twelve bombers and five fighters.

Other targets hammered yesterday were a four-lane rail via-duct at Bielefeld and railyards at Hamm, fifteen miles farther northeast. The viaduct, a link between the Ruhr and central Germany, was attacked November 2, but reconnaissance had shown traffic still moving over it.

Over the week end nearly 4,300 Allied planes blasted Nazi supply lines destroying or severely damaging at least fifty-six locomotives, 248 oil cars and forty motor vehicles.

R. A. F. "pinpoint" bombers blasted two V-2 rocket launching sites in the Netherlands.

NAZI CANALS BLOCKED BY BRITISH BOMBERS

LONDON, Nov. 27. — (AP) The British Air Ministry announced tonight two of Germany's principal canals were blocked by RAF Lancasters attacking the night of Nov. 21.

For the third time in two months, the ministry said, the bombers breached the Dortmund-Ems canal and drained it over a distance of 16 miles. They also hit the Mittelland canal and dried it up for about 15 miles.

The twin blows crippled seriously Germany's system of military communications to the Western front. A number of barges were observed stranded in the canals.

V-2 INSTEAD OF GUNS

London, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—Berlin declared today that the number of V-2 rocket bombs aimed at London and other targets near the front has increased almost every day. The problems of production and of speeding up the launchings have been solved, the communique said, and added that areas of London, Antwerp and Liege were targets of long-range fire.

The Germans expect to employ rocket bombs on the east and west fronts as long-range artillery, it was further stated.

"The advantage of the V-2," Berlin said, "is that it cannot be attacked from the ground nor from the air. The visible part of the trail is only in the beginning and very short."

POLES BELIEVE CRISIS ENDED

Socialists Think Cabinet Solution Is Reached

London, Nov. 27 (AP)—Leaders of the Polish Socialist party said tonight they believed they had reached a solution to the crisis in the exiled London Government caused by the Peasant party's secession from the coalition.

Party leaders, at the conclusion of a caucus following a day-long series of conferences of Polish and British leaders, issued this statement:

"We believe we have attained a solution to end the crisis tomorrow."

Mikolajczyk Return Hinted

The statement did not say whether the Socialists has succeeded in bringing the resigned premier, Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, back into the Government or whether Jan Kwapinski, premier designate, had succeeded in forming a cabinet of his own.

The inference was that Mikolajczyk may rejoin the Government. If he did, it probably would mark a victory for him in his stand to end the Russian-Polish dispute by agreement to Moscow demands to settle frontier problems now.

Both the Peasant and Socialist parties held meetings earlier in the day. President Wladyslaw Rackiewicz talked to leaders of all parties and Mikolajczyk and Tadeusz Romer, who was his Foreign Minister, conferred with Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary.

Called Screen For Enemies

The Moscow radio tonight broadcast a statement by the chairman of the Soviet-sponsored Polish Committee of National Liberation denouncing both the resigned Premier and the Premier designate of the London Polish Government as "screens behind which Poland's enemies hide."

The radio reported a speech by Edward Osubka-Morawski before a Polish workers' meeting in Lublin Saturday in which he accused the London Government of "betraying Poland."

"We are often asked whether we would agree to unity with Mikolajczyk," the radio quoted Osuba-Morawski. "To this we answer: Unity is possible, but only on our platform."

Pole May Set Up New Cabinet

London, Nov. 27 (AP)—The Polish Socialist party led by Premier-designate Jan Kwapinski was reported ready today to proceed with an effort to form a new Polish Cabinet despite a crisis caused by the Peasant party's secession from the coalition government.

Kwapinski, it was said unofficially, will attempt to organize the new group around leaders of his own party and those of the Christian and National Democrats. Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, who stepped out as Prime Minister on Friday in an argument over settlement of the Polish-Soviet territorial dispute, was expected to outline the Peasant party's position within a few days.

Accord Hopes Reduced

The Times said that Mikolajczyk's resignation "reduces almost to the vanishing point the hopes of a settlement of the Polish question" along the lines proposed when he was in Moscow.

Saying that "certain Poles" appeared to have demanded a British and American guarantee independently of Russia's guarantee of independence, the Times commented:

"Apart from traditional American objections to specific guarantees of European frontiers, such a demand was wholly impracticable . . . unity in action of the great powers is a major premise of any durable peace settlement."

There was the possibility that Mikolajczyk may return to Poland and work with the Soviet-sponsored Polish National Liberation Committee. Such a move was advocated by the London Sunday Express as "Poland's chance."

MRS. LUCE VISITS CAMPS IN BRITAIN

LONDON, Nov. 27 — (AP) Under cover of army-imposed security silence the 17 touring members of the House Military Affairs committee tonight were visiting American airfields and army camps "somewhere in England."

And though they were out of London, the memory of them lingered—especially of Representative Clare Boothe Luce (R.-Conn.), the party's eloquent glamor girl. Whatever the truth of reports that she had been gagged—or, at least muffled—by the army or her male colleagues, the rationed London press had space for pictures of the blonde Clare.

She was photographed in the Mayfair apartment of a friend, which she had occupied while the committee men stayed at a hotel, and on a tour of London's bombed areas.

The junketers also planned to visit British defense installations and war plants before heading for continental battlefields. Afterwards, they probably will go to Rome and Algiers.

House Mission's Itinerary Kept Secret

London, Nov. 27 (AP)—The whereabouts of the battle-front-bound House Military Committee was covered by secrecy today. The Army figuratively crossed its fingers in the hope all would go well during the first official Congressional inspection of the European war scene.

The sixteen men of the House and Representative Clare Boothe Luce (R., Conn.) were hustled off during the night under Army leadership—presumably bound for an inspection of Britain's defense installations, air bases and camps.

Before they left there were hints that Mrs. Luce's personality and her penchant for turning a neat phrase were attracting as much attention as the mission itself.

Ban Of Silence Denied

"Not," confided one member, "that we object to a freshman (Mrs. Luce is serving her first term, though she has been elected to a second) drawing the limelight, but some of us think that a day-by-day account of what we find out should be sent back to the American people. The Army should permit a representative of the press to go along with us."

Army spokesmen denied they had imposed a ban of silence on Mrs. Luce or anyone else in the party just so long as any statements they might make remained within the bounds of military security.

Decision Changed

Mrs. Luce was absent from the committee's first press conference yesterday, but Acting Chairman Merritt (D., N. Y.) called "ridiculous" a suggestion that the Army was holding her incommunicado. Merritt at first announced "a gentleman's agreement among the committee to let all statements emerge through an official spokesman." A contingent of women reporters from the British press helped him change that decision. They said—in no uncertain terms—that they wanted to talk with Mrs. Luce.

Merritt threw up his hands, protesting: "I'm not the keeper for members of the committee. See any of them you want. Ask 'em what you want. Tell 'em Matt Merritt said it was all right."

To Probe Shortages

It is probable the committee's first stop will be a big airbase from which American bombers roared out in force today.

The committee plans a number of investigations abroad, among them the reported shell and cigarette shortage, morale of the soldiers, value of compulsory military training, and hospitalization for the wounded.

Hitler Is Reported 'Worn Out, Broken Man'

London, Nov. 27 (AP)—The Swedish newspaper Sydsvenska Dagbladet Snällposten of Malmo reports that Adolf Hitler is neither dead nor in Japan but a "worn-out, broken man" suffering from a grave illness known only to a few people. A Swedish source, just returned from Berlin after a considerable time, was quoted by the newspaper as authority.

The informant said Hitler's doctors had ordered complete calm and rest for him.

Hermann Goering, the story continued, has been deposed as Hitler's deputy and replaced by Himmler, but Goering has not been eliminated completely, still acting as head of the Council of Ministers and as Minister for Air.

CLARK PROMOTED

London, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—Elevation of Lieut.-Gen. Mark W. Clark from command of the United States Fifth Army to commander in chief of the Allied Fifteenth Army Group in Italy was announced here last night as part of a general shift of the Allied leadership in the Mediterranean.

In other changes, Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, who has been Allied commander in Italy, becomes supreme commander in the Mediterranean, succeeding Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, who in turn takes the place of the late Field Marshal Sir John Dill as chief of the British joint staff mission in Washington.

The announcement from Prime Minister Churchill's office, 10 Downing street, said the appointments "are the result of agreement between the Prime Minister and the President of the United States."

Who is to replace Gen. Clark as Fifth Army commander was not immediately disclosed.

Nazi Cruiser Prinz Eugen Is Reported Damaged

London, Nov. 27 (AP)—The German heavy cruiser Prinz Eugen has been damaged and taken to a German Baltic port, the Paris radio said today, quoting Swedish reports.

The Russians recently reported damaging a German cruiser attempting to evacuate the Nazi garrison from Sworbe Peninsula, and the Paris broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, suggested this was possibly the 10,000-ton Prinz Eugen.

Blast In England Kills 20, Hurts 11

Burton-on-Trent, England, Nov 27 (AP)—An explosion in an underground munitions storage depot today killed 20 persons, injured 11, trapped 30 and blitzed a countryside.

Five bodies had been recovered tonight by rescue workers hampered by craters, from bombs tossed up through the earth's surface, which devastated a village and surrounding farmlands.

Five counties were shaken, and windows broken for 32 miles away. Stunned villagers told of seeing buildings, boulders, trees, telegraph poles and live stock flung high in the air.

As debris rained over the area, bombs from the depot also fell and new explosions thundered.

One farmer was blown to bits and the body of another was found in a field.

"It was staggering," said an eyewitness. "Nothing like it was ever seen on a battlefield. Roads are turned up, part of a village is gone, the rest is rubble. It looks as though every house had a direct bomb hit. Everywhere there are craters. Hundreds of cows were killed."

A cement factory was destroyed. Buildings at the depot simply disappeared. A woman two miles from the blast scene escaped injury though hundreds of pounds of wreckage smashed her house.

ENGLISH MUNITIONS BLAST KILLS SCORE

Burton-on-Trent, England, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—An explosion at a munitions dump near here killed at least twenty people today. Several more more injured, and forty others were still unaccounted for several hours after the blast.

Buildings as far away as Coventry, thirty miles distant, were shaken by the explosion.

Beveridge Sees New Ideas Of Sovereignty

Oxford, England, Nov. 27 (AP)—Present conceptions of individual liberty and national sovereignty must change with the return of peace, Sir William Beveridge, Britain's foremost social planner, said today.

Sovereignty in its old sense, whereby every nation asserted the absolute right to make war or peace or to prepare for war, must give way to "sovereign equality of peace-loving nations," he declared in an address prepared for a meeting of the Oxford University Liberal Club.

"Sovereign equality in an ordered world must mean sovereignty under law, as freedom of citizens in an ordered community means sovereignty under law," Sir William maintained.

This will mean complete independence of each nation in its internal affairs, but the "impartial determination of all disputes between nations enforced with certainty," he stated, explaining that nations, like civilians, cannot be allowed to take the law into their own hands.

U. S. 'Chutist, British Dancer Held For Trial In Murder

Feltham, Middlesex, England Nov. 27 (AP)—Private Karl Gustav Hulten, of Cambridge, Mass., an American paratrooper, and Elizabeth Marina Jones, English strip tease dancer, were ordered held for trial on a charge of murder in the robbery-slaying of George Heath, a taxicab driver, after a hearing today before four magistrates here.

Both pleaded not guilty to the murder charge and reserved their defense. They were remanded until Wednesday, December 6, when they will be committed for trial to the Old Bailey.

The 18-year-old blond dancer sat by Hulten in the dock during the hearing as the prosecution presented its case and demanded that the couple be charged with murder. Conviction on a murder charge would automatically carry the death penalty.

Prosecutor H. A. K. Morgan declared the killing was "a deliberate cold-blooded act by Hulten."

"Even if Jones did not know that Hulten intended to kill Heath," he added, "she certainly knew that Hulten was armed and that he intended to use violence if necessary to attain their joint purpose, which was robbery."

"Murder By Both"

The prosecutor declared that under British law, "the killing was murder by both people who started out to commit the felony."

It was the first trial of an American soldier in British courts. The prosecutor said that Hulten, under the Visiting Forces Act, would have been tried by an American court martial but that the American authorities had turned the 22-year-old soldier over to British courts because he was charged jointly with a British citizen.

Memorial Where GI Wed

Leicester, England, Nov. 27 (AP). A memorial service was conducted last night in the Church of St. Margaret for Sergt. Michael Sungail, of Kenosha, Wis., who was killed in action with the 82d Airborne Division. Sungail was married in the Thirteenth Century church a month before his death and left his bride to rejoin his unit seven hours after his marriage.

Gunfire Heard Off Swedish Coast

Stockholm, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—Heavy gunfire, bomb explosions and the sound of planes were heard for twenty minutes off the Swedish coast near Lysekil last night.

ROBOTS PASS OVER SWEDEN

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 27—(AP) Several flying bombs passed over the southernmost part of Sweden this afternoon, the Swedish defense staff announced tonight.

BRITISH DRAW ARC ON FAENZA

Press Upon Po Valley Junction From Three Sides

Rome, Nov. 27 (AP)—Eighth Army forces were closing a pincers tonight on the Po Valley highway junction of Faenza, 30 miles southeast of Bologna, which the Nazis apparently were preparing to defend house by house.

British troops edging in from the east were only the width of the Lamone River from the outskirts of the town. This was a considerable obstacle, however, as the enemy had destroyed both bridges over the stream.

Break Carries Flank Threat

To the south British forces broke out of their bridgehead over the Marzena River, captured the village of Belvedere and drove up to the Lamone River just three miles southwest of Faenza, threatening to flank the town.

A few miles northeast of Faenza still other British troops occupied Scaldino and reached Albereto, between the Lamone and Montone rivers, after crossing the Montone against strong Nazi resistance.

On the American 5th Army front there again were patrol clashes only, with the Germans probing constantly at the Yank line with forces varying in size.

Enemy Thrust Repulsed

One such enemy thrust near Monteramici, twelve miles south of Bologna, was preceded by a heavy curtain of artillery fire, but was repulsed.

The Americans were largely concerned with consolidating their mountain positions and combating the threat to their communications presented by deep mud, swollen streams and slippery roads.

Thick clouds seriously impeded air operations, with only fighters and fighter-bombers slashing at targets in the battle areas. Nine Nazi planes were destroyed against eleven Allied craft missing.

British Flank Faenza, Reach Lamone River

Rome, Nov. 27 (AP) — British troops, outflanking the Po Valley town of Faenza, have reached the Lamone River at a point three miles southwest of that Bologna-Rimini highway stronghold and are pressing against a new main German delaying position, Allied headquarters announced today.

The village of Belvedere was taken.

The Germans appeared to be preparing to fight another house-to-house battle.

Scaldino Occupied

Northeast of the town still other British units moving northwest from Eda occupied Scaldino and reached Albereto, between the Routine and Lamone rivers.

Farther southwest Polish troops gained a foothold on the ridge between the Marenzo and Lamone rivers.

On the 5th Army front south of Bologna American and British forces repulsed several German counterattacks.

ITALIAN PARTIES CONFER ON CRISIS

ROME, Nov. 27 — (AP) Leaders of six Italian political parties making up the committtee of national liberation held two more meetings today without finding a solution to the Italian government crisis caused by yesterday's resignation of Premier Ivanoe Bonomi and his cabinet.

There appeared no prospect that a settlement would be reached for several days.

At the end of today's first meeting, the parties were understood to have sent a delegation to inform Bonomi that they considered him unable to resolve the crisis as premier of a new cabinet unless the ministry of foreign affairs were given to Count Carlo Sforza.

Bonomi held this ministry as well as the ministry of the interior in the former cabinet.

The party leaders were understood to have reached no agreement on the ministries of the interior, war and treasury. The latter ministry has been under attack by the Communists and Socialists on the ground that the purge of Fascists had proceeded too slowly there.

Crown Prince Umberto, lieutenant general of the realm, continued to confer with party leaders. One of those he interviewed today was Alcide de Gasperi, Christian Democrat minister without portfolio. Umberto has reserved decision on the resignations, and Bonomi's cabinet has reported conducting normal business pending the outcome of the conferences.

BONOMI CABINET RESIGNS IN ITALY

Rome, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—Premier Ivanoe Bonomi's government has offered its resignation as a result of two weeks of crisis over a program for war-torn and hungry Italy, but his Cabinet was reported still conducting normal business last night.

A brief communique yesterday said that Premier Bonomi had decided to resign when representatives of the six parties forming his coalition government failed to agree on a program for governing the country, but it was said later that Crown Prince Umberto, Lieutenant-General of the Realm, had reserved decision on the resignation.

[A Rome broadcast heard by the United States Federal Communications Commission said that Premier Bonomi had accepted a request by the Italian Committee of National Liberation to continue in office, but this was not substantiated by direct dispatches.]

Higher leaders of the six parties conferred until almost midnight without reaching a decision and then adjourned until this morning. Count Carlo Sforza, widely mentioned as a possible choice for Premier, was invited to preside at today's session.

Premier Bonomi, who is 71 years old, took the helm in succession to Marshal Pietro Badoglio after the fall of Rome last June.

Politics In Zone Linked To Alexander Move

By Noland Norgaard

Rome, Nov. 27 (AP)—Field Marshal Sir Harold Alexander is a patient professional soldier who dislikes politics. His elevation to the supreme Allied command in the Mediterranean may mean an increased tendency to separate the military and political spheres of the theater, both in Italy and the Balkans.

Soldiers who worked with Alexander through the African, Sicilian and Italian campaigns find it hard to imagine his becoming the "swivel-chair" commander that administration of the intricate Mediterranean project has come to demand.

Russians In Balkans

Integration of Allied activities in the Balkans with the Russian campaign in that area, for example, is becoming increasingly a matter of delicate negotiations. The Allies are doing some fighting in the Balkans and have a big air force ready and willing to help trap and destroy the German armies left in Yugoslavia.

But the job of co-ordinating air support from Italian bases, with the ground action of Marshal Tito's Yugoslavs and the Russians, goes into the higher realm of international relations, and no longer is a mere tactical matter for military men.

Neither Tito nor the Russians seem to want the Yugoslavs and their neighbors to get the idea that American and British help is needed to kick the enemy out.

Want Planes To Carry Red Star

They have even made it known that they prefer that American-made transport planes bear the red star when helping the Yugoslav Partisans.

In Italy, too, Allied headquarters has to deal with tender diplomatic questions. Headquarters had to tell the Russians that Allied ideas on censorship did not encompass suppression of an Italian pamphlet, "Life of Lenin," which the Russians did not consider complimentary to the Soviet Union.

The same question arose when the Russians complained about a caricature of Stalin appearing in the Italian press. Americans and British, accustomed to seeing their political leaders lampooned, found it hard to take the matter seriously.

DE GAULLE IN CAIRO

Cairo, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle, en route to Moscow, had an audience lasting more than an hour with King Farouk of Egypt. They probably discussed mid-eastern political problems, especially the French position respecting Lebanon and Syria.

In Gen. de Gaulle's party going to Moscow were Alexander Bogomolov, Soviet Ambassador to Paris; Georges Bidault, French Foreign Minister; Gaston Palewski, long-time chief of De Gaulle's secretariat, and Gen. Alphonse Juin, chief of the French General Staff.

DE GAULLE IN TEHERAN

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—(AP) Gen. Charles deGaulle has arrived in Teheran from Cairo on his way to Moscow, the London radio said tonight. DeGaulle, accompanied by Foreign Minister Georges Bidault and Gen. Alphonse Juin, chief of the French general staff, was received by the Shah of Iran.

Browning New Chief Of Mountbatten Staff

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, Nov. 27 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Frederick A. M. Browning, deputy commander of the Allied 1st Airborne Army, has been appointed chief of staff to Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten in the Southeast Asia theater, is was announced today.

Browning succeeds Lieut. Gen. Sir Henry Pownall, who is retiring because of ill-health.

Maj. Gen. Horace H. Fuller of the United States Army has been named deputy chief of staff, succeeding Maj. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, now commander of United States forces in China. Fuller, 58, a West Point graduate, has commanded the United States 41st Division since 1942.

Browning is the husband of Novelist Daphne du Maurier, who wrote "Rebecca."

ALL U.S. NATIONALS ORDERED TO LEAVE KWEICHOW, HUNAN

CHUNGKING, Tuesday, Nov. 28—(AP) All American and British nationals in Kweichow province and the unoccupied portions of Hunan province were ordered to leave as two Japanese forces surged today toward Kweiyang, capital of Kweichow.

A Chinese communique said the Japanese westward drive from Liuchow had toppled Hochih and that the invaders were less than 140 miles southeast of Kweiyang. Another enemy column was headed toward Kweichow from Paoching in Hunan province.

Given Time to Escape

Missionaries, Red Cross workers and representatives of various civilian agencies were affected by the notification which gave them ample time to escape.

Most Americans were reported to have succeeded in escaping from eastern China, now cut off by the linking of Japanese forces which invaded Kwangsi province from Hunan and Kwantung.

Generally it was felt in Chungking that the next few months would be the most critical for China since the war began in 1937.

Fall of Kweiyang would place the invaders in position to strike toward Chungking, 200 miles to the northwest.

Another Japanese force moving through south China toward French Indo-China forced the abandonment and destruction of the last forward American air base in south China at Nanning—the seventh to fall before the current Japanese offensive designed, apparently, to knock out U. S. air strength in the Chinese hinterland.

No Word on Nanning

The High command was silent concerning Nanning, which the Japanese claim to have captured. But it was generally accepted here that the city, less than 100 miles from the French Indo-China border, had been taken by the enemy, thus [illegible] all practical purposes, splitting China in [illegible]. The Japanese now have an all-land communications route from Manchuria to French Indo-China.

The Chinese High command said Japanese forces moving westward from fallen Liuchow in Kwangsi province by-passed Hwaiyuanchen, a railroad town 43 miles to the west, to reach Hochin, only 20 miles from the Kwangsi-Kweichow border.

A U. S. 14th air force announcement said Nanning was abandoned Nov. 19 after all installations and runways had been destroyed. Big India-based transports carried out most of the personnel and thousands of tons of precious equipment.

As with the four major bases already lost at Hengyang, Lingling, Kweilin and Liuchow and the smaller fields at Paoking, and Tanchuk, American operations were maintained at Nanning until the field could not be defended by its own fighters and was vulnerable to surprise ground attacks.

NANNING AIR BASE IS EVACUATED BY AMERICAN FORCES

ARNSWARTH

KUMMING, China, Nov. 19—(Delayed)—(AP) The Nanning fighter base, the seventh air field to be lost by the U. S. 14th Air force as a result of the defeat of China's southeastern armies, was evacuated and blown up today.

Nanning's position had been precarious since Japanese advances forced the abandonment of Liuchow on Nov. 8, but Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chenault held his P-51's there until bad weather raised the possibility the Japanese might be able to sneak up undetected and attack the base. The evacuation was completed without loss except for one P-51 Mustang which delayed too long to take off and was grounded by the weather. It was destroyed before the Americans left.

Open to Jap Attack

As with the four major bases at Hengyang, Lingling, Kweilin and Liuchow and the lesser fields at Poaking and Tanchuk the 14th sustained operations at Nanning until the air raid warning net was so constricted the field could not be properly defended by its own fighters, and the base lay vulnerable to roving Japanese cavalry or infiltrating plainclothesmen.

Nanning thus had been scratched as a tactical asset long before the buildings were burned and the 1,000-pound bombs buried in the runways and taxiways blown up.

As evacuations go, Nanning was a smalltime job. Twelve transports from the India-China air transport command sufficed to bring out somewhat more than 100 persons and 75,000 pounds of cargo. So rugged was the weather some of the transports failed to reach Nanning.

Radio and other signal equipment, aircraft parts and even jeeps which are so precious in China were hauled away by air. Lt. Melvin M. Resnick, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., formerly operations officer at Kweilin and Liuchow, was in charge of the final loading operations.

The last transport took off at 4:47 p. m. today with the last movable materials with technical aboard. The fighters had taken off earlier.

Twelve men were left aground to complete destruction of the base. These were headed by Capt. Earl D. Gibbens, Dewey, Okla. They had eight jeeps and three trucks to make their getaway in.

Have Difficult Trail

It was not likely that the demolition party would be able to make the entire retreat on wheels since a difficult trail lay between them and the highway leading into Western China.

They carried picks and shovels and enough TNT to tear down a small mountain and probably would travel by motor as far as they could make a road, then blowup the vehicles and continue afoot or by pony if they can find the ponies. It will be days before they are heard from.

The destruction of the Nanning base completed a full turn of the wheel. More than two years ago the Japanese who had shoved in from South China abandoned Nanning for no apparent reason. They left intact the field they had helped develop together with a fine set of buildings and barracks which included cement-seated latrines and excellent shower baths.

The Americans, withdrawing, took delight in destroying the old Japanese installations along with their own newer buildings. They lacked the authority, however, to destroy one hotel which the Chinese had built.

Another U. S. Air Base In China Abandoned

Chungking, Nov. 27 (AP)—The Chinese high command tonight announced the fall of Hochih, 95 miles west of Liuchow, in Kwangsi province, southern China, in the Japanese sweep toward Kweichow province.

Hochih is but twenty miles from the Kweichow border and 120 miles southeast of Kweiyang, Burma Road town in Kweichow, whence the invaders would be in position to strike at Chungking.

Loss of Hochih was announced shortly after it was disclosed that the last forward American air base in South China, a fighter field at Nanning, had been abandoned and destroyed by the 14th United States Air Force.

Nanning Fall Hinted

There was general acceptance of the Japanese claim to the capture of Nanning, although the high command still made no mention of the enemy drive southward toward Indo-China.

It seemed possible that the Chinese were handing out bad news in small bits in order to avert panic. General uneasiness heightened despite this, however.

The communique said the Japanese bypassed Hawaiyuanchen, a railroad town 43 miles west of Liuchow, to reach Hochih, and attacked Chinese positions five miles west of Hochih.

Seventh Base To Fall

Nanning was the seventh American air base lost in the twin Japanese thrusts which for all practical purposes had split China in two.

Persons arriving in Chungking from Kweichow said all British nationals in the province had been advised by British authorities to leave.

The Nanning base was abandoned November 19.

As with the four major bases already lost at Hengyang, Lingling, Kweilin and Liuchow and the lesser fields at Poaking and Tanchuk, the United States 14th Air Force maintained operations at Nanning until the field could not be defended.

The fall of Nanning leaves the Japanese only 110 miles to go to establish a final link between Manchuria and French Indo-China. Abandonment of the airstrip indicated that this may already have been virtually accomplished.

Meanwhile, Chinese troops in Yunnan province clearing the China end of a supply route from India have driven the last enemy forces from the mountain passes between the Mangshih.

Attacking Airfield

On the Burma side Chinese troops operating between Bhamo and the Chinese border made slight advances yesterday and captured a Japanese strongpoint at the southern end of the Bhamo airstrip.

In the railway corridor further to the west of Bhamo British troops made slight gains in the direction of Pinwe, an Allied communique reported.

The evacuation of Nanning was relatively a minor operation.

Twelve transports from the India-China division of the Air Transport Command sufficed to bring out somewhat more than 100 persons and 75,000 pounds of cargo.

Even Jeeps Hauled Away

Radio and signal equipment and even jeeps—a precious item in China—were hauled away by air. Lieut. Melvin M. Resnick, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., formerly operations chief of Kweilin and Liuchow was in charge of the operation.

The last transport took off at 4.47 P. M. on November 19. Resnick was aboard.

All the P-51 fighter planes had taken off earlier.

Twelve men were left aground to complete the destruction of the base. They were headed by Capt. Earl D. Gibbens, Dewey, Okla., and had eight jeeps and three trucks for a getaway.

Another Cruiser Sunk.

Chungking, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—Two Japanese light cruisers were damaged when a Fourteenth United States Air Force Liberator attacked an enemy convoy in the South China Sea on Saturday night, Major-Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer's headquarters announced today. The action took place northeast of Tourane, on the French Indo-China coast, the communique said. One of the cruisers suffered two direct hits.

Another B-24 sank an enemy submarine chaser in a separate action in the same area. The communique said that P-51s yesterday bombed the Japanese-held airfields at Hengyang, Lingling, Kweilin and Liuchow.

NELSON OUTLINES HIS GOAL IN CHINA

Chungking, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—Donald M. Nelson said today his goal was to double China's war production within the next six months. The former chairman of the United States War Production Board, who arrived here November 16, said that he had not struck a single snag so far.

Five steel men and an alcohol expert who came here with Mr. Nelson returned to Chungking today after an initial survey in which they found that Chinese steel plants are working only one shift six days a week. They declared production could be increased substantially.

The alcohol expert, Eugene Stallings, former WPB distilling consultant at Louisville, Ky., said that he saw one plant where most of the distilling equipment was made from gasoline drums and milk cans.

The steel men—Herbert W. Graham, director of metallurgy and research for Jones & Laughlin Steel Company, Pittsburgh; Harry A. Strain, United States Steel Corporation, Pittsburgh; Carl Bell, United Engineering and Foundry Company, New Castle, Pa.; Henrik Ovesen, Lukens Steel Company, Coatesville, Pa., and Edward Waldschmidt—formerly in the WPB's steel division said inflation, transportation problems and lack of demand had badly hit China's small steel industry.

SUPERFORTS BLAST TOKYO, BANGKOK IN MIGHTY ASSAULT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—(AP) The first coordinated Superfortress strike from east and west today clamped down a giant aerial pincers on the Japanese.

A "sizeable force" from the new 21st bomber command's base on Saipan island in the Marianas beat at Tokyo for an hour and a half in the second such thrust in days.

Hammer Bangkok Base

A flight of "substantial force" from India bases of the 20th bomber command, was hurled across the Bay of Bengal and blasted with results called "good" at the vital Japanese-dominated rail center of Bangkok in Thailand.

Not one of the great B-29s was lost to enemy action in either strike, a communique from the 20th air force reported several hours afterward.

Opposition by either fighters or antiaircraft over Tokyo was reported "virtually nil." Fire from the ground at the Thailand capital was called "meager" and the huge bombers downed six, probably destroyed three more and damaged two of the opposing fighters.

The communique described targets in both strikes as "strategic industrial objectives." In the case of the Bangkok thrust by Maj. Gen. Curtis E. Le May's bombers from India, it was specified that these targets were railroad marshaling yards and repair facilities.

The "industrial waterfront" was the specific target of the Tokyo raiders, unquestionably with special attention to great airplane manufacturing plants in that area.

Both were daylight strikes, and the bombing at Bangkok was visual precision work from cloudless skies. At Tokyo the big planes encountered a heavy cloud cover and aimed their explosives by means of precision instruments. Results were not observed.

"Reports from returning crews confirm direct hits upon the heart of the target," the afternoon communique said of the Bangkok thrust, "and the aggregate bombing results of all participating planes was described as good. Preliminary strike photographs confirm the eyewitness appraisal of bomb damage."

The Tokyo run was only the second operation for Brig. Gen. Haywood S. Hansell's new 21st command. The existence of the force was announced only last Friday in the roar of its bombs smashing into Tokyo.

A dispatch from Saipan by Vern Haugland, Associated Press war correspondent, described the operation as an amazing display of sustained power, with few of the men who took part in the initial raid going back over the 3,000-mile round trip today.

Mission Led by Sweeney

Today's mission was led by Col. Walter C. Sweeney, Jr., 35, of Wheeling, W. Va., son of Maj. Gen. Sweeney of San Francisco. He rode a plane commanded by Maj. Robert Sewell, Jr., of San Antonio, Tex. Brig. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell of Jamaica, N. Y., leader of the Friday mission, remained on Saipan. Two planes were lost on the first mission, but the entire crew of one of them was rescued, adrift on rafts.

Today's Tokyo raiders set out, Haugland reported, expecting heavier opposition than the fighter force of up to 100 planes that met the earlier Tokyo strike. The light opposition actually met was evidently a surprise.

From the 20th's base in India, Associated Press Correspondent John Grover reported that the Bangkok raiders encountered perfect weather and laid heavy loads of demolition bombs squarely on rail repair shops, warehouses, and the maze of switchyard trackage. Returning fliers called it one of the most successful and easiest missions they ever flew.

The target is the center of Japanese rail transport in southeast Asia, a bottleneck for munitions headed to the fronts and foodstuffs and raw materials on the way to the Japanese home islands.

Tokyo radio, estimating the size of each striking force at 40 Superfortresses, asserted "blind bombing" was necessary at both Tokyo and Bangkok, and claimed little damage was done. The broadcast said one of the B-29s was downed over the Thailand capital but laid no claim even to damaging any Tokyo raiders, although it did assert that Japanese fighters were attacking them.

Bombs started to fall on the Japanese capital at about 1 p.m. (last midnight, Eastern War Time). Twentieth Air force headquarters here announced the raid only a few minutes later. Announcement of the Bangkok thrust came more than an hour later, but the afternoon communique giving details called the strikes simultaneous.

B-29's Strike Tokyo Again; None Lost

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—Not one Superfortress was lost to the enemy as the twin commands of the newly extended B-29 armada smashed at the Tokyo industrial waterfront and vital railroad yards in Bangkok in Japanese-occupied Thailand.

A War Department announcement said the second attack in four days on the Japanese capital was conducted in "sizable force," but results were not observed because the bombing was accomplished through a heavy undercast with precision instruments.

(Tokyo radio placed the size of both the Tokyo and Bangkok raiding groups at about 40 planes.)

Opposition Light

Opposition in both raids was light, a 20th Air Force communique said. The force hitting railroad marshaling and repair yards at Bangkok with results described as good destroyed six enemy fighter planes, probably destroyed three others and damaged two. It met only "meager" anti-aircraft opposition. The attack was made by the 20th Bomber Command coming across the Bay of Bengal from bases in India.

The attack on the heart of the Japanese homeland—the second mission for the newly announced 2st Bomber Command—hopped off from its bases on Saipan, in the Marianas Islands, and encountered virtually no anti-aircraft or fighter opposition.

Daylight Missions

Both missions were carried out in daylight against what the communique termed "strategic industrial objectives."

(A Domei broadcast from Tokyo recorded by the FCC said 16 India-based United States Superforts, escorted by several fighters, bombed Hanoi, capital of Japanese-occupied Indo-China, late today. The broadcast said the attack was aimed at the suburbs and "none of the important industrial or military targets was hit.")

Operated From Saipan

The War Department first reported the Tokyo mission under the leadership of Brig. Gen. Haywood S. Hansell from bases on Saipan in the Marianas—the same spot the B-29s operated from Friday to pound the Japanese capital. Of today's raid, the War Department said:

"General Hansell's 21st Bomber Command returned to Tokyo again today, November 27, for another daylight bombing attack upon strategic industrial targets.

"The mission was mounted from bases on Saipan, in the Marianas. The announcement was made at the War Department by Gen. H. H. Arnold in his capacity as commanding general of the 20th Air Force."

Banghok Area Hit

Then, about an hour later, it told of this attack under Maj. Gen. Curtis Lemay from bases in India:

"A substantial force of B-29 aircraft from General Lemay's 20th Bomber Command today (November 27, Tokyo time) conducted a daylight bombing mission against strategic targets in the Bangkok area of Japanese-occupied Thailand, Gen. H. H. Arnold, in his capacity as commanding general of the 20th Air Force, announced at the War Department.

"This operation from India bases is a separate attack from the Marianas base strike against the Tokyo area, which took place simultaneously."

This was the second time Superfortresses attacked Bangkok. The giant bombers visited the Thailand port on the first bombing flight in Asia early last June. That attack, however, was not reported until after the initial strike of B-29's against targets on Japan's Kyushu Island on June 16.

No Estimate Of Number

These jointly timed attacks demonstrated forcefully the growing power of the B-29s. And it's a lot of weight they can throw around—these world's biggest bombers can carry as much as ten tons of explosives each.

In the original announcement, there was no estimate of the number of Superfortresses returning to Tokyo today. Last Friday's contingent was described as a "large task force."

Two of the bombers were lost in the Friday raid—the first on the enemy capital since Jimmy Doolittle's little squad of medium bombers hit there on April 18, 1942, flying from a carrier.

B-29 Crew Rescued

Yesterday came the welcome word from Saipan that the entire crew of one of these two B-29s had been rescued from two rafts. An American destroyer picked them up after they had drifted for almost 24 hours.

The plane's skipper, Capt. Guice Tudor, of Beckley, W. Va., said two of his engines quit on the return trip and he came down from 8,000 feet on instruments in pitch dark. A swell broke off the plane's nose in the landing. All reached life rafts eventually and none was injured seriously.

Another Superfortress managed to get back on two engines. The crew threw out almost everything removable to lighten the plane, and it made the 1,500-mile flight miraculously.

The one Superfortress lost from an attacking force which Tokyo claimed numbered 70 planes went down off Japan after an exploding enemy fighter tore off its tail.

Gen. Millard F. Harmon, deputy commander of the 20th Air Force, said:

"We must and will sustain and intensify our attacks."

SUPERFORTS BOMB TOKYO, BANGKOK

No Planes Lost In Raid On Japan; One Over Thailand

Superfortress Base, Saipan, Marianas Islands, Nov. 27 (AP)—A sizable force of Superfortresses bombed Tokyo's crowded industrial area through a thick overcast by precision instruments for more than an hour, starting at 1.07 P.M. today, while India-based Superfortresses hit Bangkok, Thailand's capital.

Col. Walter C. Sweeney, Jr., of San Francisco, leader of this second Superfortress mission against the Japanese capital within four days said upon his return to Saipan that clouds prevented the observation of results, but "there's no reason there shouldn't be lots of fires in the industrial areas of the city tonight."

None of the Superforts encountered anti-aircraft fire. Sweeney's ship was one of a few which sighted Japanese fighters, but the enemy planes did not attack.

Not A Plane Lost

Not a plane was lost on this "quiet, uneventful raid," as Sweeney called it.

The flight leader said the Superforts flew in good formation all the way to Tokyo, where they found a thick cloud layer. They had a 90 to 100 mile an hour tailwind over the target.

India-based Superforts dealt the other part of a two-day blow at Japan by striking strategic targets in Bangkok, capital of Thailand.

[Tokyo radio said 40 Superforts participated in each of the Tokyo and Bangkok raids. This meant the first coordinated action of the 20th and 21st Bomber Commands.

Japanese radio propagandists insisted no important damage was done, and claimed one Superfortress was shot down over Bangkok.

Hanoi Reported Hit

[A Domei broadcast from Tokyo said 16 China-based American Liberator bombers, with a fighter escort, attacked Hanoi, capital of Japanese-occupied Indo-China, late today, but again the enemy disclaimed that any damage was caused.]

Most of the bomb tonnage unloaded in the first Superfortress raid on Tokyo last Friday (Japan time) was concentrated on the Nakajima Aircraft Company's Musashina factory in northwestern Tokyo. Many fires were started and damage was observed to be extensive. One Superfortress was lost in that attack.

Heart Of Big Jap Rail System Hit

By John Grover

A B-29 Base Somewhere in India, Nov. 27 (AP)—Superbombers roared across the Bay of Bengal early this morning to smash Bansue, Bangkok, Thailand, which is the heart of the enemy rail system radiating to Singapore, Burma and Indo-China.

The substantial force took advantage of perfect weather to lay heavy loads of demolition bombs squarely on rail repair shops at the north end of the yards, warehouses at the south end of the yards and intricate trackage between. Officially, the results of the bombings were called excellent.

Planes Return Safely

Returning crews said only a half dozen interceptors were seen, and these refused to press their attacks. Anti-aircraft fire was meager and ineffective.

All planes returned safely. Crews described the mission as one of the most successful and easiest ever flown by the 20th Bomber Command. Major Don Humphrey, of Postville, Iowa, said "It was a picnic—just a picnic." Capt. Frank Martin Decatur, Alabama, said "It was just a long ride, that's all."

Rail Transport Hub

Intelligence officers estimated fifteen locomotives were in the repair shops which were squarely hit. The Bansue yards and shops are the hub of Japanese rail transport in southeast Asia. It is the greatest transshipping center in the whole area.

Most of the munitions from the Jap homeland and large quantities of rice and other foodstuffs destined for Japan funneled through the yards.

As Big As Previous One

Superfortress Base, Saipan, Marianas Islands, Nov. 27 (AP) [Via Navy Radio]—B-29s pounded the Tokyo industrial area for the second time in four days today, matching the initial sizable raiding task of Superforts almost plane for plane.

In an amazing display of sustained power, the great silvered planes stood in line along taxiways and roared down the mile-and-a-half-long paved runways at one-minute intervals with even greater clockwork precision than on last Friday's initial raid.

B-29s In Reserve

Two Tokyo raids within four days by Brig. Gen. Haywood Hansell's 21st Bomber Command were a striking demonstration of the slight amount of damage done by Tokyo's defenders and of the impressive resources in still unused B-29s and men.

Comparatively few flyers in today's raid took part in last Friday's strike.

The second Superfortress mission to Tokyo was led by Col. Walter C. Sweeney, Jr., 35, of Wheeling, W. Va., son of Major General Sweeney, of San Francisco.

Colonel Sweeney rode in a B-29 commanded by Major Robert Sewell, Jr., of San Antonio, Texas.

Brig. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell, Jamaica, N. Y., who led the Friday attack, remained at the base today. Major Robert K. Morgan, of Asheville, N. C., who piloted the first Superfort bombing Tokyo over the target, returned to the attack on this mission, leading one of the component formations.

The Superforts were scheduled to start hitting Tokyo about noon. (Tokyo radio said they began dropping bombs at 1 P. M.) There were enough bombers to keep pressing the attack for two hours.

Members of today's mission, who had the benefit of the experience gained by flyers last Friday, expected less difficulty in maneuvering the 1,500 miles to Tokyo and pin-pointing their targets.

Expected Stiffer Resistance

But they anticipated stronger Japanese fighter and anti-aircraft resistance.

Most of Friday's raiders concentrated their bombs on the Nakajima Aircraft Company's Musashina factory in northwestern Tokyo, while others hit the harbor area eleven miles to the east. The bomb tonnage was "substantial," despite Tokyo propaganda claims that it was "light." Musashina is one of three Nakajima plants participating in production of three quarters of Japan's fighter planes, plus some bomber output.

Reconnaissance photographs disclosed that many fires were started and considerable damage inflicted. The Japanese acknowledged the loss of seven fighters in combat.

One B-29 was lost Friday near Tokyo, another landed in the ocean, but the entire crew of twelve from one plane was rescued.

Sweeney arrived in Saipan too late to participate in the first Tokyo raid. He served with the 5th and 11th Bombardment groups in Hawaii from 1939 to 1942, leading B-17s from Hickam Field in the battle of Midway in June, 1942.

Tokyo Damage Slight, Japs Claim

San Francisco, Nov. 27 (AP)—Tokyo radio reported today that two formations of about 40 Superfortresses struck simultaneously at the Tokyo area and Bangkok in Thailand.

The Superforts "conducted blind bombing" over both targets, the broadcasts, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, reported. As usual, they claimed little damage was inflicted.

Plane Bagged, Japs Say

Tokyo said one plane was shot down over Bangkok, but an imperial communique made no reference even to damaging Superforts over Tokyo.

The B-29's were over Tokyo and other industrial sections of central Honshu for more than an hour and a half Monday afternoon (Tokyo time), the communique said.

Simultaneously, Domei news agency reported that long range Japanese planes counterattacked the B-29 base on Saipan island, setting fire to several of the giant bombers on the ground.

The imperial communique reported that Superforts attacking the main island of Japan carried out "blind bombings from above thick clouds over the Kanto, Tokaido and the southern part of the Kinki districts."

Rain Reported

The areas roughly covered the major part of Honshu. Kanto includes Tokyo and the neighboring eastern section, Kinki the central and Tokaido the southern coastal sector of central Honshu.

The raids started about 1 P. M. Unofficial reports said the B-29's came over Tokyo in several formations at extremely high altitude, where they were attacked by Japanese interceptors. They reported a drizzling rain and low-hanging clouds over the capital.

Cebu, Negros Airdromes Hit With 235 Tons Of U. S. Bombs

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Tuesday, Nov. 28 (AP)—American Leyte-based planes dropped 235 tons of bombs on Japanese airdromes on Cebu and Negros and at Davao Friday, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique said today.

Thirty Japanese planes rose to intercept the American flight and eight were shot down.

Terrific rains brought ground fighting to a standstill in the Ormoc corridor. No American advances were reported.

Weather Grounds Planes

The weather also curtailed aerial activity over Leyte Sunday. Four attacking Japanese planes were shot down, in addition to the eight pagged in American assaults against other Philippine targets.

Lieut. Chatham Gupton, of Durham, N. C., got one of the Japanese planes destroyed over Leyte, bringing his total to five and making him an ace. Lieutenants Oliver Atchison, of Birmingham, Ala., and Cecil Archer, of Akron, Ohio, each got a plane, for their first kills.

Liberators, escorted by Lightning fighters, pounded the Japanese airdromes on Cebu, Negros and Mindanao. Aircraft facilities, bivouacs and supply areas were hit.

6 Barges Destroyed

Six enemy barges were destroyed in other strikes at Palawan, Celebes and Halmahera Island.

Japanese planes again raided American-held Morotai Island at night. Night fighters and anti-aircraft guns shot down four attackers.

American successes in the air, at sea and on the ground today emphasized the desperate but losing fight Japan is putting up on Leyte Island to retain her hold on the Philippines.

Attrition Noticeable

The steady attrition suffered by all branches of Nippon's forces was becoming noticeable. Japanese continued to fight doggedly for the Ormoc corridor on northwestern Leyte but their resistance was decreasing steadily, said Monday's communique.

For three consecutive days Japanese efforts to reinforce and supply the Leyte garrison have been thwarted by American warplanes based on the island. Inbound convoys were [illegible] and sunk. It was estimated that at least [illegible]000 enemy troops had been lost in the reinforcement attempts since Leyte was invaded. Nineteen convoy vessels and fourteen escorting warships have been sunk.

1,085 Jap Planes Lost

[Admiral Chester W. Nimitz reported Sunday that fourteen enemy ships, including a heavy cruiser and a destroyer, were sunk and 72 Japanese planes destroyed by American carrier aircraft in a sweep over the Manila area last Friday. Four additional cargo ships and an oiler were damaged. The results still were incomplete.

[Japan has lost 1,085 planes already this month in defense of the Philippines, a tabulation of official reports shows. Of these, 505 were shot down in aerial combat and 580 wiped out on the ground. American losses so far reported total 41.]

Painfully Slow Advance

The American advance down the Ormoc corridor was painfully slow, hampered by stubborn resistance and sodden terrain. A field dispatch said an enemy stand was expected in the hills three miles south of Limon, the mountain village which American forces captured November 23 after weeks of bitter fighting.

One unit of the United States 24th Infantry Division clung to a hill near the Ormoc road more than two miles below Limon. Heavy opposition failed to dislodge it.

Japs Weaken North of Ormoc

Yanks Repel Counter-blow and Advance—Flyers Smash Reinforcing Convoy.

Headquarters, Leyte, Philippines, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—Infantrymen of the American 32d Division continued their southward push on Leyte Island today, as a communique noted that Jap resistance is "steadily decreasing" in vital Ormoc corridor.

Though incessant rains, quagmire roads and stubborn Jap resistance prevented any considerable American advance in the Limon sector, an element of the Thirty-second Division was attempting to cross hills to the left of the Ormoc Road, Associated Press Correspondent Fred Hampson reported. Their purpose was to close an area through which Japs have been infiltrating across the mountains to harass the coastal road.

Around Limon the American troops continued to dig in and make preparations to resume their drive south against the enemy forces in the Ormoc corridor. Forward elements of contesting forces were on either side of the Leyte River, a thousand yards south of the village.

One element of the Twenty-fourth Division held a hill near the road two miles farther south in the face of heavy opposition. Artillerymen of the Thirty-second Division knocked out a Jap 75-mm. gun—the eighth enemy artillery piece put out of action in that region.

Japs Harass Coastal Road.

Jap artillery continued to harass the coastal road and command posts, but air observers reported lessening in attempts to reinforce the Jap force trapped below Limon.

Alert American pilots sank three small troop-laden freighter-transports off Cebu Saturday night in smashing another Jap attempt to reinforce their Leyte forces.

The Thirty-second threw back a light counter-attack and continued to press southward from Limon, captured northern anchor of the Yamashita line. The communique did not mention the extent of the gain. Units of the Seventh Division, meanwhile, repulsed a second night attack at Palanas, eleven miles south of Ormoc.

In the Jap attempt to get badly needed reinforcements ashore, at least 17,000 Nipponese have been lost at sea and nineteen convoy vessels and fourteen escorting warships have been sunk.

Planes Smash Convoy.

After destroying four transports off Cebu Saturday, repeating of a similar performance the previous day, American pilots found another convoy of the three freighter-transports in the evening. Apparently they were planning to sneak into Ormoc under cover of night, but they had hardly left port when Warhawks and Thunderbolts swept in mast-height strafing and bombing attacks, to sink all three.

Although steady American pressure in the Ormoc corridor has caused decreased Jap resistance, Associated Press War Correspondent Fred Hampson reported from the field that Thirty-second Division officers were expecting the Japs to make another stand in the hills three miles south of Limon. Units of the Thirty-second seized Limon November 23, then beat off several Jap attempts to retake the strategic town.

Gen. MacArthur[illegible]eadquarters, Philippines, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—American airmen destroyed an already beached 6,000-ton freighter-transport and probably sank or damaged four small freighters and three coastal vessels during strikes throughout the southwest Pacific area, headquarters reported today.

Another 6,000-ton freighter-transport was straddled with bombs and two of the small freighters were damaged in the Visayan Islands, near Leyte.

The beached freighter was caught and destroyed in the Talaud group of the Molucca Islands. Other targets ranged from the Matina airdrome, near Davao on Mindanao, to installations in New Guinea and the Solomons.

Men In Pacific Get Smokes

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 27 (AP)—GI Joe, fighting the Japanese in the Philippines, may not see cities like Paris and have pretty girls swarm over his jeep, but he is assured of cigarettes while his buddies in Europe face a shortage.

Battleline fatigue and nervousness under fire make cigarettes almost a necessity for soldiers.

Supply Officer Major Robert O. Russell, Champaign, Ill., said that so far in this campaign cigarettes are available for all at the rate of a pack per man per day.

"We figure cigarettes in with rations the same as sugar, salt, or meat," he said. "Officers and enlisted men get the same allowance and no partiality is shown as to favorite brands."

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 27 (AP)—An upward revision of destruction inflicted on Japanese shipping in the Manila area Friday showed today that United States 3d Fleet carrier planes sank a heavy cruiser, three destroyers, a destroyer escort, thirteen other ships and two luggers.

At least 87 aircraft were knocked down in air combat and by anti-aircraft fire.

A communique by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz added two old destroyers to the list of enemy ships sunk and identified one ship previously reported wiped out as a destroyer escort.

The score of ships damaged was raised to 28—a sharp increase of 23 over the original count. These included "two destroyers or small transports" bombed, and nine luggers.

Grand Total Is 48

This made a grand total of 48 ships sunk or damaged in the devastating attack.

The total number of Japanese ships sunk or damaged during November in steady pounding of the enemy's supply center for the Philippines thus is increased to 151.

Hellcat fighters and anti-aircraft fire from the American surface ships downed 58 Japanese planes. Twenty-nine more were destroyed on the ground and an additional thirty-two probably were damaged on the ground.

Avengers and Helldivers ranged over most of Luzon and adjacent islands, carrying out one of the heaviest attrition blows in weeks on the Nipponese supply line to American-invaded Leyte Island in the central Philippines.

Revised Summary

The communique's revised summary:

Sunk—One heavy cruiser at Santa Cruz, on the west coast of Luzon; one destroyer at Santa Cruz, two old destroyers at Marinduque Island, about 100 miles southeast of Manila; one destroyer escort ten miles west of Santa Cruz, three medium landing ships ten miles west of Santa Cruz, one cargo ship north of San Fernando, a port 150 miles north of Manila; one small freighter off Subic Bay, 50 miles north of Manila; four oilers near Lubang Island, about 75 miles southeast of Manila; four small coastal cargo ships at Banton Island, 137 miles south of Manila; two luggers west of Bataan.

Damaged—Two cargo ships, hit on previous raids near San Fernando, torpedoed, beached and wrecked; one cargo ship, previously damaged, bombed and set ablaze 30 miles south of San Fernando; three landing craft beached near Santa Cruz; two medium cargo ships bombed and believed sunk off Hermana Mayor Island, 112 miles north of Manila; one small oiler bombed and wrecked near Del Monte, northwest of Mindoro Island; two destroyers or small transports bombed at Marinduque; one oiler, three large cargo ships, two medium cargo ships, one small coastal cargo ship and one small cargo ship hit in Manila harbor; three luggers hit near the south shore entrance to Manila Bay. Six luggers hit on the west coast of Bataan.

Japs Try Saipan Raid

The communique disclosed that the Japanese apparently attempted a fighter sweep yesterday over Saipan, Superfortress base for the Tokyo raids. Six Japanese fighters were downed by interceptors. Anti-aircraft fire destroyed seven more.

No explanation was forthcoming as to from what base the short-ranged Nipponese fighters flew but it was likely they took off from the Bonin Islands and tried to refuel at Pagan, where some of them were caught in an attempt to balk a newly inaugurated Superfortress bombing campaign against Tokyo.

Liberators hitting the Bonins on the route from the Marianas to Tokyo on Friday hit Chichi Jima's radio station and airfield and bombed Iwo Jima in the Volcano Islands. Mitchells again hit Chichi Jima harbor shipping Saturday.

Marine Corsairs set fire to an ammunition dump at Babelthuap in a series of strikes against the Palaus, which are partly in American hands.

Flyers Sink Jap Heavy Cruiser

Destroyer and 14 Other Ships Also Down and 72 Planes Destroyed in Luzon Raid.

Pearl Harbor, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—A Japanese heavy cruiser, a destroyer, fourteen other ships and seventy-two airplanes were sunk as American carrier aircraft swooped upon the Manila area and its vicinity last Friday. Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced yesterday the results of this the fifth raid of the month on Luzon Island.

Two luggers were also sunk and four cargo ships and one oiler were damaged, the Admiral declared.

The toll exacted raised to more than 250 the total number of enemy ships immobilized around Luzon alone in eleven raids carried out since September 20 by carrier planes of Admiral William F. Halsey's Third United States Fleet. This does not include the fifty-nine warships sunk or damaged in the recent Philippines sea battles.

Twenty-nine Japanese aircraft were shot down by the attacking force, eight more were knocked out of the sky by anti-aircraft guns of the surface ships and thirty-five were destroyed on the ground. The raid extended from Santa Cruz, about seventy-five miles northwest of Manila, to Tayabas Bay at the southern end of Luzon. In the Manila Bay area the planes strafed seven tank cars near Nichols Field and left them ablaze. They broke up a convoy of 150 trucks south of Manila.

The ships sunk included a heavy cruiser of the Kumano class which had previously been reported damaged, one destroyer, nine cargo ships, four transports and a small oiler.

MACKENZIE KING SEEKS SUPPORT OF OVERSEAS DRAFT

MONTGOMERY

Ottawa, Nov. 27 (AP)—Active-service troops, sailors and civilians broke up an anti-conscription parade of about 100 drafted home-defense troops tonight before the demonstrators could reach Parliament Hill, where the House of Commons is debating the issue.

Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, seeking a vote of confidence for his Government, which has decided on limited use of drafted men overseas, moved in the House tonight for a secret session tomorrow.

Demonstrators Challenged

During debate today he told a grave House that if it did not "unite in a reasonable measure" on conscription, Canada faced the possibility of "anarchy."

Tonight's marchers were challenged by two sailors and a active-service soldier who scuffled with them when the paraders declined invitations to "step out and fight." The crowd broke up when city police, military police and the naval shore patrol arrived on the scene.

During the night there were renewed anti-conscription demonstrations by drafted home-defense troops in ritish Columbia and by youths in Montreal.

Decision To Be Made Today

In the course of the debate on a motion for a vote of confidence, M. J. Coldwell, leader of the Left-wing Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, said he would like information on reinforcements for Canadian troops abroad and Gen. Andrew G. L. McNaughton, defense Minister, had said he could not give such data in open session.

King told the House that the secret session, if held, was not likely to be a long one. Decision will be made tomorrow.

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House leader, said his party was opposed to a secret session.

Faced with a possibly sweeping defection from his Liberal party by French-speaking members from Quebec who normally provide a substantial part of his support, the Prime Minister called for a vote of confidence and declared that unless he received a good majority he would resign.

Quebec Leader's Warning

The possibility of such a course was heightened during the day when the Liberal party leader in Quebec, Adelard Godbout, former provincial Premier, declared that if the Government persisted in its new policy of partial conscription for overseas service, "it will have to count on the opposition of the Liberals of Quebec, of which I am the head."

King, in a vigorous and often fiery address which lasted nearly three hours, made it plain that he intended to hew to his present course and stake the life of his nine-year-old regime on the issue. He moved as a question of confidence that the House support his Government "in its policy of maintaining a vigorous war."

A vote is expected later in the week.

Special Session Of Parliament

Throughout the address, delivered before a Parliament gathered in special session under one of the most serious crises in Canada's modern history, King emphasized his view that the conscription issue has so divided the country that Canadian unity and strength have been endangered perhaps "for generations to come."

The Prime Minister charged that his opponents on the conscription issue had "organized" a "measure of unrest" in Canada, "the like of which never before has been seen," and declared that this development, erupting in recent weeks, was a factor along with changing conditions abroad which had led his Government in an eleventh-hour decision last week to abandon its historic voluntary policy and institute partial conscription for service overseas.

First Prime Minister Quoted

Drawing boldly the historic differences which have existed between French-speaking and English-speaking Canada since the country was first settled, the Prime Minister quoted Sir John A. Macdonald, the first Premier under confederation, as saying in 1865 that the differences between Upper Canada and Lower Canada—the modern Ontario and Quebec—were so great that anarchy impended.

The House was hushed as King added that the same remarks were applicable today.

"I say," King continued firmly, "that unless the House of Commons can unite in a reasonable measure to support an administration that can carry on at this time of war, we have to face the possibility of anarchy in Canada while our men are fighting overseas, giving their lives that we may maintain our free institutions and that we may have a continuation in peace and accord through the years to come."

Cabinet Division Disclosed

King declared that the conscription issue had so divided his Cabinet in recent weeks that the question had arisen whether the Government could carry on at all.

He said that early this month when J. L. Ralston, Defense Minister, resigned because he could not then persuade the Government to abandon the voluntary system it had followed throughout the war, Ralston was asked whether he would take the responsibility of heading a Government advocating conscription for overseas. Ralston replied that he could not, the Prime Minister added.

"Most Serious" Question

"Here I may say," King went on, "that from the outset I have been conscious that what has been a source of division in the Cabinet was but a reflection of what was certain to be a source of division in this House of Commons, and that, again, this House of Commons would be reflecting a source of division in all parts of the country.

"That is what has made and still makes the present question the most serious one with which this Parliament, I believe, has been faced at any time."

Hostile Amendment Offered

Graydon tonight proposed an amendment to the Government's motion of confidence, declaring the Government had failed to obtain reinforcements by making all conscripted personnel available for overseas service and failed to secure equality of service and sacrifice.

[Adoption of this amendment would nullify the vote of confidence which the Government has asked.]

M. J. Coldwell, leader of the Left-wing group of Commons, proposed removal of all distinction between drafted and volunteer personnel in the Canadian Army and total conscription of all resources, financial and material as well as human.

CANADA'S PREMIER GAINS SUPPORT

MONTGOMERY

Ottawa, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—Support for Prime Minister Mackenzie King's regime appeared among Parliament members for Quebec today as the House of Commons gathered to take a vote of confidence on King's new policy of partial conscription for overseas service.

A spokesman for the members from Quebec—center of opposition to conscription—said they likely would vote for Prime Minister King if their votes were necessary to uphold the administration. He explained the members felt that if the Government were defeated it would be succeeded by a regime favoring all-out conscription rather than the limited application Mr. King's regime has installed.

Measures to insure order were taken in draftee camps as the House met to discuss the most explosive political issue in Canada's modern history.

In some areas of the French-speaking Province of Quebec, traditionally opposed to conscription for service abroad, troops of all categories were told to keep off the streets in certain cities to lessen the possibility of violent outbreaks such as marked the week end in various parts of the Dominion.

West Coast Precautions

Similar precautions were taken in the West Coast province of British Columbia, where more than 25,000 Home Defense soldiers are stationed, approximately 3,000 of them French-speaking, and where demonstrations occurred in at least five places over the week end.

The Home Defense troops are draftees from among whom the Government is conscripting 16,000 for immediate reinforcement of depleted infantry ranks fighting on the Western front.

Tension ran high on Parliament Hill as the House of Commons convened to hear Prime Minister King defend this policy. His confidence motion asks the House "to aid this Government in its policy of maintaining a vigorous war."

Compromise Solution

The wording—not mentioning conscription—is calculated to win as many votes as possible from various groups of his own supporters whose desires range all the way from total conscription to none at all. The partial conscription policy itself is a compromise between these opposite views.

Debate on the Prime Minister's motion was expected to run through several days, with opposition motions being offered and voted upon in the meantime.

Much was expected to depend on the stand of former Defense Minister J. L. Ralston, who resigned his Cabinet post early this month because he could not win the Government to his view of digging into the Home Defense army for urgently needed reinforcements abroad.

Margin Of Victory

If Rolston votes with the Government, the Government should win easily, since its normal majority is overwhelming. If Col. Ralston votes against the Government, the Prime Minister may be defeated or win by a majority so slim that he would be compelled to dissolve Parliament and call for a general election.

The Quebec newspaper Le Soleil, a leading supporter of King's Liberal Party in Quebec, said that French-speaking members of the House of Commons, "with only a few exceptions," would vote against King's confidence motion, a defection which would cut deeply into the Government's strength.

Meanwhile, the Dominion was restive, and sporadic outbreaks continued.

At Rimouski, Quebec, three Union Jacks were burned last night in an anti-conscription demonstration by about 200 civilians headed by a few soldiers from the vocational training school, most of the participants being under 20. Emotions ran high elsewhere in the province.

In British Columbia two military police were injured and another flag was torn down in anti-conscription parades involving a total of about 2,900 Home Defense soldiers in five different towns of the province over the week end.

The Pacific Army Command said that the demonstrators in all cases were "protesting what they termed a 'phony conscription" and expressing their disapproval of a form of compulsion which they considered discriminatory."

P. J. A. Cardin, former Public Works Minister who left the King Cabire' in 1940 on the conscription issue, told a rally in Montreal last night that "conscription for overseas service is not necessary" and that "if our commitments are too great, they should be reduced to smaller proportions, in conformity with our capacity."

Canada And India Sign Pact

Ottawa, Nov. 27 (AP)—Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King announced tonight that a mutual aid agreement has been reached between Canada and India. The agreement was signed by Sir Girja Bajpai Indian agent general in the United States, King and C. D. Howe, Canadian munitions minister.

race village, where draftees of three regiments are staging a "sit-down" strike while they await a reply from Army headquarters at Ottawa to a demand that they be returned to their homes in Quebec.

The report of the demonstration came from the Prince Rupert daily news correspondent at Terrace. He said no violence or damage had been reported, however.

Military officials during the day had announced that "dissatisfaction still exists in a French-Canadian unit stationed at Terrace," and said that inquiries would be made into disturbances at various points in British Columbia during the week-end.

About 500 home defense troops at Prince George paraded through the snowy streets for an hour today, carrying anti-conscription placards and shouting slogans. They were orderly and later returned to their barracks in army trucks.

Meanwhile in Montreal about 700 young men paraded tonight and congregated silently for 15 minutes "unite in a reasonable measure" on the city, as a token of their opposition to conscription. They carried a number of anti-conscription banners in French.

Stettinius Named Secretary of State

FDR Sends Nomination to Senate After Announcing Hull's Resignation.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—(AP) With "inexpressible disappointment" that he can not finish his task of organizing world peace, weary and work-worn Cordell Hull today yielded the position of secretary of state to his dynamic young lieutenant, Edward R. Stettinius, Jr.

President Roosevelt submitted the promotion of the 44-year-old undersecretary to the Senate about three hours after announcing the resignation of Hull, whom he praised as the "father of the United Nations." Senate leaders predicted prompt confirmation of the appointment.

Resigns Due to Health

In his letter of resignation, tendered last Tuesday, Hull told the President "it is a supreme tragedy to me personally" to be unable to continue the work of post-war world organization. But his health, he said, forces him to step aside.

He was 73 years old Oct. 2 and that day was his last at the State department. He has been ill of a throat ailment, followed by exhaustion, ever since and for the last five weeks has been under treatment at Bethesda, Md., Naval hospital.

On the day he received Hull's letter, the President replied that the resignation "has hit me between wind and water"—a nautical term for a grievous blow. The letters were made public by the White House.

"When the organization of the United Nations is set up," the President wrote, "I shall continue to pray that you as the father of the United Nations may preside over its first session.

"That has nothing to do with whether you are secretary of state or not at the time, but should go to you as the one person in all the world who has done the most to make this great plan for peace an effective fact."

Saying that it would give me "great satisfaction if we should round out the three terms together, the President urged Hull to let him accept the resignation as of January 20th. But in the week between the writing of the letter and today's swift actions, Hull and his doctors decided that his recovery depended on his breaking completely with the responsibilities of the office he has held since 1933.

The resignation leaves in the cabinet only two of those who joined it at the outset of the Roosevelt administration. They are Secretaries Perkins of Labor and Ickes of Interior. At the same time the promotion of Stettinius opens the way for a new appointment to the position of undersecretary of state.

The keynote of Hull's whole letter was the disappointment he feels at having to leave his great task of world peace unfinished. And he concluded by offering his services to the President "when I recover my strength."

At his news conference Mr. Roosevelt said that as soon as he was able the Tennessean would become his adviser on foreign policy—a sort of elder statesman in world affairs.

Selection of Stettinius, former chairman of U. S. Steel corporation, placed a relative newcomer to diplomacy in control of this government's foreign affairs machinery on the eve of one of history's most critical periods. Together with the fourth-term President he will be responsible for maintaining American leadership in the move to bring a peaceful and prosperous world out of the suffering and devastation of this war.

Senatorial Approval Expected

Prompt Senatorial approval of the appointment was freely predicted although many ranking members had favored their old colleague and long-time associate, War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes for the top cabinet spot. Vice President Henry A. Wallace had also been mentioned, reportedly with strong labor backing.

Chairman Connally (D-Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations committee led off the forecasts of Senatorial approval. He announced his committee would take up the appointment Wednesday. Stettinius, he said, "is a man of good capacity and will prove to be an industrious and zealous Secretary of State and active in the promotion of international peace and security."

Hull's illness cut short his career at its peak. He had set his heart on seeing through to creation the Dumbarton Oaks plan for World Security organization. Stettinius had been his and President Roosevelt's lieutenant in bringing that plan into being in the Anglo-American-Soviet-Chinese conference here last Summer.

Associates have found Stettinius devoted to both men. He has expressed to this reporter many times his devotion to the policies of Secretary Hull. He has seen eye-to-eye with Hull on tariff reduction to promote freer world trade and on ways to organize peace and security around the wartime coalition of the United States, Britain and Russia and the other United Nations.

1 zelSU etaoinshrdlucmfwypvbgk

Unlike the relationship he had with Sumner Welles, whose resignation he finally forced more than a year ago, Hull liked and worked well with Stettinius, from the time the latter joined the department as under secretary in September, 1943.

His rise to the high position he now takes has been a phenomenon of wartime Washington. In 1939 he became chairman of the War Resources board and also headed what eventually became the War Production board.

Took Over Lend-Lease

Subsequently in January, 1941, he took over the Lend-Lease program. His work on this program was considered so satisfactory that when Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hull were looking around for a new under secretary of state, Stettinius was the one man whom Hull wanted.

At that time he had won the admiration of the Russians for his handling of Lend-Lease. This strengthened his White House ties, since Mr. Roosevelt has felt all along that the main objective of American postwar foreign policy must be to make sure that Russia takes a key position in world co-operation.

His associates expect him to adapt to State department organization the methods he used in Lend-Lease administration. He built a top team of expert advisers on whose counsel and judgment he relied heavily at all times. This will necessitate some reorganization of the State department.

In fact, Stettinius had started a mild reorganization of the department, ironing out mostly little kinks, when the burden of world organization planning and later the illnesses of the Secretary compelled him to put aside administrative tasks, which he likes, in favor of more pressing policy problems.

Roosevelt And Hull Letters

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—The White House made public late today the following texts of the letters, both dated November 21, exchanged by President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull, incident to the latter's resignation.

From Mr. Hull:

My Dear Mr. President: It is with inexpressible disappointment that I find it necessary for considerations of health, to retire from public service.

I, therefore, with utmost regret tender herewith my resignation as Secretary of State.

It is a matter of special satisfaction to me that throughout my almost twelve years at the Department of State our personal relations have been uniformly and invariably agreeable and that, by our joint efforts, many difficult tasks growing out of the foreign relations of this country before and during this war have been brought to partial or full completion; many great questions have been faced successfully and many forward movements of surpassing importance to friendly relations among nations have been instituted.

Problems Ahead

As the war draws to a close there remains a vast area of complex and difficult conditions and problems which must be dealt with in the months and years immediately ahead.

It is a supreme tragedy to me personally that I am unable to continue making my full contribution to such great international undertakings as the creation of the postwar peace organization, the solution of the many other problems involved in the promotion of international co-operation and the final development of a full and complete structure of a world order under law.

When I recover my strength, I shall individually be always at your service in every possible way.

Sincerely yours,

CORDELL HULL.

The President's Reply

Mr. Roosevelt replied:

My Dear Cordell—Your letter of this afternoon has hit me between wind and water. It has been very sad for me even to contemplate the ending of our close relationship during all these twelve years.

It is not merely that our personal relations have been so uniformly and invariably agreeable, or that our joint work has borne true success in so many fields, as it is the personal feeling of not being able to lean on you for aid and intimate interchange of thought.

This is especially true because we have come so far along the road of friendly relations among nations that I have counted so much on your help in carrying this work through the final stage of complex and difficult conditions which still face us.

Your health is honestly my first thought, and I am really confident that you will be on your feet again in a relatively short time, even though you are limited to special tasks and avoid the daily routine of department work. As of today, therefore, you must devote all your thought to getting back on your feet and on this all your friends will join in helping.

"End Of Our Third Term"

I will, of course, accept your resignation as Secretary of State if you want me to do so. But I wish you would, as an alternative, allow me to accept it as of January 20, which is the end of our third term. Perhaps sentiment enters into this suggestion a little bit, but it would give me great satisfaction if we should round out the three terms. That means two months more, and during that time I could see you from time to time and get your advice on some of the things that will come before us.

Incidentally, when the organization of the United Nations is set up, I shall continue to pray that you as the father of the United Nations may preside over its first session. That has nothing to do with whether you are Secretary of State or not at the time, but should go to you as the one person in all the world who has done the most to make this great plan for peace an effective fact. In so many different ways you have contributed to friendly relations among nations that even though you may not remain in a position of executive administration, you will continue to help the world with your moral guidance.

With my affectionate regards, as ever yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Stettinius Learned Diplomacy As Top-Notch Business Man

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(AP) Today isn't the first time that Edward Reilly Stettinius, Jr. has earned the monicker of white-haired boy.

Stettinius, who at 43 had been Undersecretary of State just over a year, has received President Roosevelt's nomination to take the place of Cordell Hull, as secretary, and it seems virtually certain that the Senate will agree with the White House that he can do the job.

Held High Business Posts

Husky and energetic, Stettinius got the white-haired tag for his amazing leaps across the upper peaks of business and government rather than for his prematurely silvery crown.

In his year at the State department, the grinning, hustling executive has reorganized administration, dashed to London and back on a diplomatic mission, and headed negotiations with other governments on organizing the world for peace.

The Dumbarton Oaks security plan is his prime interest now and it has top priority on the State department list of jobs to be done.

"Stet", as his colleagues call him, came to the State department from lend lease, which he organized and got rolling as administrator.

Since the beginning of the Roosevelt administration he has been in and out of Washington constantly.

First it was the NRA, then preparations to mobilize American industry, then the Office of Production Management—the War Production Board's predecessor.

Between times, he reached one of America's top industrial posts — chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corp. and that when he was 38.

Stet considers himself primarily a business man, and that's the way he has worked in the State department.

But he has never forgotten his feeling that he has a social mission. Before he ever went into the world of Wall street, he wanted to be a preacher.

Attended Virginia University

When young Stet was at the University of Virginia he used to go out in the back woods to bring enlightment to hillbillys. Another way he thought up to carry out his social urge was to found a one-man employment agency for his fellow students.

Scooting about Charlottesville in his rattle-trap car (his parents drove to see him in a Rolls-Royce), he made such a success of the venture that it came to the attention of John Lee Pratt, then a vice president of General Motors and now a special consultant at the State department.

Pratt talked him out of the ministry and into a job as stock room attendant at the Hyatt Roller Bearing Works. The pay was 44 cents an hour.

Three years later Stettinius stepped up to a white collar job as Pratt's assistant and not long afterwards became vice president of General Motors.

On one of his trips back to his mother's birthplace at Richmond, Va., Stettinius married Virginia Wallace, a slim blue eyed girl whose hair is now almost as prematurely white as his own. They have three children, 16-year-old Teddy and the twins, Wallace and Joey, 11 and a half.

Big business was not new in Stettinius's family—his father was a partner in the J. P. Morgan Co. but Stettinius senior refused to raise his sons in the Long Island-Connecticut-Harvard-Wall street pattern.

Born on Staten Island

Stet was born on Staten Island, went to school nearby and then to the University of Virginia, where he never graduated because he decided he could learn more by going off on a trip to Europe and seeing things for himself.

He still works on that theory, although his colleagues say he has a genius for picking competent people and giving them freedom to do their work.

When he had the comparatively tranquil job of running the United States Steel corporation, Stettinius used to relax by riding horseback and swimming on his large farm at Rapida, Va.

Now, he has little time for rest or hobbies, but he steals away to the farm whenever he can spare a little time. Since he has been in the State department, there have always been carpenters somewhere cleaning up the place, painters tinting the walls pale green, rug men laying green plush carpets, and furniture men bringing in new and comfortable desks and chairs. The outside of the grubby, ornate building remains unchanged.

Stettinius' experience in diplomacy dates from his arrival at the State department a year ago but he has often been on Capitol Hill, where he is popular.

An example of the regard in which he is held in Congress came while he was still at Lend-Lease, testifying before the House Foreign Affairs committee. The only comment one Republican congressman wanted to add after Stet's testimony was "lets vote a resolution to have him run for vice president."

"No," said a Democrat, "not unless you let him run on both tickets."

Stettinius, clinging to his Virginia background, is a Democrat, but he describes himself as a conservative.

Nazi Agency Calls Hull 'Warmonger'

New York, Nov. 27 (AP)—The Nazi DNB agency, quick to comment on the resignation of Cordell Hull as Secretary of State, today termed him "the most furious of warmongers," but declared his resignation "does not signify any change in American policy."

The broadcast, reported by the FCC, said "this inveterate warmonger has striven for what in his opinion the United States of America missed in the first World War, i.e., intervention in all European and Far Eastern questions."

ARGENTINA SILENT ON HULL RESIGNATION

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 27—(AP) Argentine officialdom maintained strict silence on the resignation of Secretary of State Cordell Hull today, but it was generally understood that the Argentine government was not hailed at the retirement of one of its severest critics.

Hull is regarded here as the chief architect of the United States' refusal to recognize the regime of President Farrell.

HALIFAX PRAISES HULL

Des Moines, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—Lauding Secretary of State Cordell Hull for his character, integrity and grasp of great issues, Lord Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, today expressed his regret that illness might compel him to resign.

"I have seen him (Hull) in all moments, in all stages of the war—black days and gray days and good days—and I've never once seen his determination or courage or his resolution flag for one moment," the Ambassador told a news conference.

He described Secretary Hull as a "great public servant to his country and a great example to the statesmen of any country—universally respected, known and trusted."

Lord Halifax, accompanied by Lady Halifax and their son, Lieut. Richard Wood, was in Iowa for a one-day visit scheduled to include conferences with the State's labor leaders and visits to three Iowa farms. They will return to Chicago tonight and spend the rest of the week in Illinois and Wisconsin.

Cabinet Appointments By Roosevelt Reach 23

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—With his naming today of Edward R. Stettinius Jr. as Secretary of State, President Roosevelt has made twenty-three Cabinet appointments.

He has had four Secretaries of the Navy and four Attorneys General.

Secretary Hull, Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Secretary of Labor Perkins were original 1933 choices.

Mr. Stettinius, 44, will be the youngest Cabinet member. Secretary of War Stimson, 77, is the oldest.

GEN. HURLEY GETS AMBASSADOR POST

Nominated by President to Succeed Gauss in China.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(AP) Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, trouble shooter, was nominated by President Roosevelt today for one of the nation's toughest diplomatic assignments, ambassador to China.

Hurley is taking over the post Clarence Gauss gave up at the time Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell was pulled out of the China-Burma command after a clash with the Chinese leader, Chiang Kai-Shek.

Resignations Not Connected

The President has said, however, that there was no connection between Gauss' resignation and Stilwell's removal as Chiang's chief of staff.

Hurley, a jack of all trades who has handled many secret assignments for the President since the war began, already is in Chungking with Donald M. Nelson, former War Production board chief, trying to speed up China's war efforts.

The 61-year-old soldier's chief task, once the Senate formally approves his nomination as ambassador, will be to key the dynamic American strategy with the crippled Chinese war machine—without ruffling Chinese feelings.

Stilwell and Chiang squabbled vigorously over China's effectiveness in the war, it was reported, before Chiang—in a face saving move—finally asked for Stilwell's ouster.

Hurley, whose colorful career spans services as a soldier, statesman and diplomat, has had a lot of experience with tough and touchy problems.

Shortly after Pearl Harbor, President Roosevelt picked him to run international errands. His first job took him to Australia with a bag of gold to buy ships and crews to run supplies to beleaguered Bataan.

Minister to New Zealand

Then he took on the assignment as the First American minister to New Zealand. Five months later, he bobbed up again in Washington and then set out for Moscow on another secret job. Stalin liked him and told President Roosevelt so.

After that he trekked to the Middle East as the President's personal envoy, then to China and to the Cairo and Teheran conferences.

Six foot two, handsome, and affable, Hurley gained most of his fame in the army, but he's also made his mark in law, banking and the oil business.

He entered World War I as a captain and emerged with a lieutenant colonelcy, the Distinguished Service medal and the Silver Star for exceptional gallantry. Oil made him rich in the 20's. When President Hoover was elected he joined the administration as assistant secretary of war. Later, he became secretary.

Although Hurley, a Republican, has been a salty critic of President Roosevelt's domestic policies, the two men obviously get along well on foreign policy.

Nearly 59 when America entered the Second World war, Hurley once complained he was "missing all the excitement."

FDR's Handy Man

So he became what Roosevelt described as the President's own handy man. He barely missed death on at least two occasions while carrying out presidential missions.

Once he was flying out of beleaguered Java in a bomber which was set upon by Japanese fighter planes. Later at Darwin, he was slightly wounded in a Japanese bombing.

On his mission to Russia, Hurley endeared himself to the Russian guards division by teaching them the Choctaw Indian warwhoop during a tour of the front.

He resigned as minister to New Zealand in March, 1943, to undertake the new mission for President Roosevelt in the Near and Middle East.

A few days after the historic Teheran conference, on December 8, 1943, Hurley was promoted to major general.

The Hurleys maintain a residence at Santa Fe, N. M.

Nazi 'Persecutions' Stir Congressmen

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—Congress erupted today with demands for relentless punishment of Germans guilty of what a Cabinet committee calls the systematic murder of millions of innocent European civilians.

There was no angry talk of retaliation in kind, of eye-for-an-eye retribution.

But in both Senate and House arose a measured call for peace terms severe enough to keep the Nazis from ever again committing crimes of atrocity and for the death penalty for those found guilty of them in this war.

Chairman Bloom (D., N. Y.) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and Senator Johnson (D., Col.) declared that Germany should not be allowed to keep a single gun. And they said the peace machinery should include the means of meting out punishment to Nazis responsible for war murders.

Responsible for the Congressional clamor was a 25,000-word report released yesterday by the War Refugee Board. Named by President Roosevelt to try to arrange the rescue of victims of enemy persecution, its members are Secretary of State Hull, Treasury Secretary Morgenthau and Secretary of War Stimson.

"It is a fact beyond denial," they said, "that the Germans have deliberately and systmaetically murdered millions of innocent civilians, Jews and Christians alike, all over Europe.

"This campaign of terror and brutality, which is unpredecented in all history and which even now continues unabated, is part of the German plan to subjugate the free people of the world."

VOICE ON TREATIES SOUGHT BY HOUSE

Committee Approves Proposal But Obstacles Lie Ahead

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—The House bid against heavy odds today for a share in the writing of a future peace.

A Judiciary subcommittee unanimously approved a proposed Constitutional amendment which, if adopted, would end for all time the Senate's traditional and exclusive voice in ratifying treaties. But to become effective, the Senate has to agree to the change.

The resolution provides that future treaties be ratified by a simple majority vote by both branches of Congress. The Senate now has sole powers, by two-thirds vote, to ratify international agreements.

Many Obstacles Ahead

The committee action was only the first step on a legislative path filled with so many obstacles many members say privately that the amendment doesn't have a chance this session.

Even should the House pass the resolution many members are confident it will be trapped in the Senate and die with the end of the 78th Congress next month.

House backers want to get it through the short session of Congress so it can be submitted to State Legislatures in January and win possible approval in time to give the House a voice in the treaties which will come with the end of the war.

Constitutional amendments need ratification by three fourths of the States. Forty State Legislatures meet in January and approval of 36 would be necessary.

ARMY CASUALTIES

Washington, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—The War Department announced today the names of 2,089 casualties in the European area. Included in the list are the following with their next of kin:

2,000-Plane Blows At Japs From Carriers Foreseen

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—The Navy's carrier fleet will be able to launch 1,500 to 2,000 planes on single blows at the Japanese on a "not very" distant day, Rear Admiral John H. Cassady said today.

Cassady, deputy chief of naval operations for air and recently a carrier commander, spoke at a meeting of the Wings Club.

"Haymaker In Store"

He recalled that Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of Army Air Forces, had described Thursday's B-29 attack on Tokyo as only the beginning. Then the admiral added:

"So, too, can you rest assured that the full punch of our carrier-based aircraft is yet to be felt by the Jap. He has felt our short jabs, but the haymaker is still in store for him.

"Just slightly over a year ago the carrier task group of which my ship was a part made the first naval air raid on Rabaul. We were mighty proud of the fact that we were able to send 105 planes in on that attack. Today 1,000-plane attacks from our carriers are not uncommon, and that is not the end."

2,346 Planes Bagged

He thereupon predicted the advent of the 2,000-plane blow. Within a period of about two months of naval air action in the Philippine-Formosa area, Cassady said, naval carrier aircraft hit and rehit some 200 Japanese airfields and destroyed 2,346 enemy aircraft.

"That doesn't leave very many aircraft available in the Philippines to oppose our occupation of those islands," he said. "However, the immediate job of our carrier force, ably assisted by army and marine shore-based aircraft, is to see that the Japs do not move replacement aircraft into the Philippines."

GERMANY NOW DIPPING INTO VITAL RESERVES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 — (AP) With outside sources virtually cut off, Germany is now dipping into her reserves of vital ferro-alloys.

And once that the supply is exhaused, the Foreign Economic Administration reported today, "Germany cannot continue to produce many of the most important munitions she needs."

Ferro-alloys such as menganese, chrome and nickel, are essential to the manufacture of steel for machine tools, projectile cores and other vital war supplies.

WAR POWERS ACT APPROVED

Renewal, With Court Review Provision, Is Favored

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—The House Judiciary Committee approved a one-year extension of the Administration's sweeping War Powers Act today but pinned to it a provision for a court review of war agency rulings.

The War Powers Act is the Congressional basis for the War Production Board, War Foods Administration, Office of Defense Transportation, parts of the Office of Price Administration and many other emergency agencies set up to gear the nation's industry to wartime production.

Today's bill, which will be reported to the House probably tomorrow, extends for one year the life of the act, which otherwise would expire with the close of this year.

30. 24— 20719

With its approval, however, the committee adopted an amendment providing for a court review of WPB and OPA suspension orders by which the use of priority materials can be withdrawn from individual manufacturers or dealers.

The present act provides no appeal from agency orders. Under the amendment individuals can go into court and get a stop order against a WPB suspension order anytime within ten days after the order is issued.

Sponsored By Hobbs

The amendment, sponsored by Representative Hobbs (D., Ala.), gives Federal District Courts jurisdiction to pass on suspension orders, priority allocations or an agency's refusal to pass on an application to stay a suspension.

Under the present arrangement the WPB, ODT or other war agencies can suspend an allocation of critical materials after once granting it and the person affected cannot go into court. The withdrawal of a "B" gasoline ration, for example, amounts to a suspension order.

Through the Hobbs amendment a manufacturer who loses a supply of critical materials through a WPB suspension order could go into Federal District Court in his home district and ask for an injunction against the suspension. No suspension order could take effect within five days of its issuance.

Opposed By Administration

The Administration opposed the amendment from the outset, contending its adoption might glut the court with war-priority litigation and slow up the allocation of critical materials needed for war manufacturing.

Appeals from WPB or war agency orders now go up through the agency itself and are passed upon finally by the office of James F. Byrnes, Director of War Mobilization and Reconversion.

Marshall Continuance Voted

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—Legislation permitting Gen. George C. Marshall to remain on the active-officer list after he becomes 64 years old next month was passed today by the House and sent to the Senate.

FILIPINOS BECOME CITIZENS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—(AP) The House Immigration committee approved today a bill to make Filipinos who are residents of this country eligible for citizenship.

VOTE ON GENERALS WAITS

Senator Gurney Speaks for Officers Kept on Home Duty

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 (AP)—An angry protest by Senator Gurney, South Dakota Republican, against committee delay on promotions for Army officers serving at home delayed confirmation today for sixty-one generals overseas.

Senator Johnson of Colorado, a ranking member of the Military Affairs Committee, described the home front officers involved as "so-called arm chair generals," but

Senator Gurney said: "Every officer is a member of the team, whether he is serving in the United States or overseas. Those here would give their right arms to be sent overseas. I don't think it is fair to differentiate."

After the protest the Senate postponed until Friday action on the nominations of nine major generals and fifty-two brigadier generals in combat areas.

Senator Gurney asserted that the nominations of the overseas generals never were considered by the military committee and were ordered reported to the full Senate at a time when a quorum of the committee was not present.

Says Seaway Must Be in Treaty Form

Washington, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—Dr. Edwin Borchard, veteran professor of international and constitutional law, said today that the St. Lawrence seaway, if authorized by executive agreement, would be unconstitutional. Testifying before a Senate commerce sub-committee attempting to decide if legislation should take the form of an agreement or a treaty, Dr. Borchard said that if it were enacted as an agreement, it would "violate the treaty-making power" of the Senate.

"I don't think you could get much protection from the Supreme Court," he added.

Green Quits Congress For Post In U. S. Navy

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—Representative Green (D., Fla.) today resigned from the House to become a lieutenant commander in the Navy.

Dean of the Florida delegation in Congress, Green was chairman of the Committee on Territories and had served on seven other committees.

He was elected to Congress in 1924 and served continuously since.

Last spring he did not seek renomination in the Florida primary.

Editors Discuss Problems Of World News Freedom

Find Various Nations Receptive to Free Interchange

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 (AP).—How world freedom of information may be fostered and perhaps achieved through international agreements was considered today by the board of directors of the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

Paul Miller, assistant general manager of The Associated Press and Washington bureau chief, and Hugh Baillie, president of The United Press, discussed some of the problems involved—Mr. Baillie reporting on reaction he found abroad on a recent trip and Mr. Miller outlining the present situation in so far as the United States government is concerned.

Telling of contacts with the heads of various governments abroad, Mr. Baillie said he found them receptive to the idea that there should be free and unhindered interchange of news among all nations after the war. Mr. Baillie alluded also to the action of the De Gaulle government of France in relaxing previous censorship restrictions imposed at Algiers.

"The next step by this government" Mr. Miller said, "probably will come within the next several months. Under Secretary of State Stettinius has stated that this government will undertake discussions with other governments soon. It is possible that the subject of world freedom of information may be on the agenda of the United Nations meeting which may be held during the winter. If not, this government plans to take it up on an explanatory basis with other governments individually."

The board voted to begin at its April, 1945, meeting the awarding of scrolls and medals to the families and the newspapers of the twenty or more newspaper correspondents who have been killed in line of duty during the war.

Ship-Airlines Plan Backed

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP) — The fight of American steamship lines for the right to operate postwar airlines overseas won a forward boost from the House Merchant Marine Committee today.

It unanimously approved a bill which would give steamship lines authority to operate in air traffic and, in passing, criticizing the Civil Aeronautics Board for failing to grant shipping companies earlier operating certificates.

Declaring shipping companies face the loss of business on their own lines unless they can operate ship-air service, the committee said:

"Pan American and our domestic airlines plan to blanket the world with transport aircraft and to take from the steamship companies the passenger, express and mail business previously developed and enjoyed by them."

"Should the Civil Aeronautics Board grant (operating) certificates to the airline applicants and refuse certificates to the steamship companies," the committee report said, "the inevitable loss of passenger, mail and express revenues will seriously damage and impair the future of the merchant marine."

BILL WOULD ALLOW MARINE AIR LINES

Washington, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—The House Merchant Marine Committee unanimously recommended to Congress today that American steamship companies be given the right to participate in overseas air traffic. It reported to the House a bill which would give shipping companies the right to establish air-line service in foreign commerce and said the Civil Aeronautics Board has "ample authority" to grant such rights.

The committee report said these steamship lines have applied for air service certificates: Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies, Inc.; American President Lines, Ltd.; Grace Lines, Inc.; Matson Navigation Company, Moore-McCormack Lines, Inc.; Seas Shipping Company, United Fruit Company and Waterman Steamship Corporation.

The committee's recommendation followed a lengthy investigation of foreign air traffic possibilities and concluded that "the American Merchant Marine should not be handicapped by denying it the right to use aviation service.

"All the other great maritime powers have already cleared the way for combined ship-air operations by their merchant fleets," the committee said. The Civil Aeronautics Board, said the committee report, has withheld full operational air certificates from the steamship companies, contending that the law gives them the right to air traffic "incidental" to regular shipping lines.

Pearl Harbor Action Extension

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—The Senate approved by voice vote today a resolution extending six months from December 7 the deadline for court-martial proceedings growing out of the Pearl Harbor attack. The proposal now goes to the House.

Individual Sales In War Loan Drive

Washington, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—Officially reported individual sales in the Sixth War Loan through Saturday amounted to $810,000,000, against a quota of $5,000,000,000. The Treasury, announcing this today, said that E bond sales totaled $498,000,000, compared with a goal of $2,500,000,000.

available there any more, either, she said, and people visiting there bring along their own—if they can get them.

The vending machine in the White House today was just as empty as the one in the corner confectionery.

"Facts" To Be Announced

There is a prospect that the White House, along with the country, may get some news tomorrow on what's happened to the cigarette supply.

At least, Chairman Flannagan (D., Va.) of the House Agriculture Committee promised the committee will find out the "facts" on the shortage. He said there is "untrue propaganda" that a shortage of leaf tobacco is responsible for the scarcity.

Military Gets About One Third

Meantime, Army authorities said, cigarettes are pouring in and out of domestic military depots in numbers sufficient to furnish a normal amount to Uncle Sam's armed forces everywhere.

The military is taking virtually a third of the nation's output this year. The Army alone is getting 4,070,000,000 packs, one source said, with 2,190,000,000 of them ticketed for overseas.

Shortages current in the European theater, where in France and England post exchanges have limited sharply sales behind the combat zone, have been blamed principally on local supply problems.

Calamia told the Kansas City tobacco roundtable there was no one explanation for the shortage; but asserted he believed it started when the raising of a tobacco crop was classified as an essential industry by the Government while the manufacture of cigars and cigarettes is considered nonessential. Tobacco men now are suggesting a plan of prorating the available cigarette supply to aid in better distribution, he added.

Enough 'Fags' For All Troops Promised

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—Cigarettes are pouring in and out of domestic military depots in numbers sufficient to furnish a normal amount to Uncle Sam's armed forces everywhere, army authorities said today.

The military is taking virtually a third of the nation's output this year, or 4,070,000,000 packs, one source said, with 2,190,000,000 of them ticketed for overseas.

Shortages current in the European theater, where in France and England post exchanges have limited sales behind the combat zone, have been blamed principally on local supply problems. Enough cigarettes have been shipped from this country, it was stated.

President Smokes Less, Lack Of Cigarettes Felt By Staff

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—President Roosevelt, like many another cigarette smoker, is lighting up less often these days.

But the cigarette shortage isn't primarily to blame even though it's hit the White House, too.

The Chief Executive told his news conference today that he's been cutting down since he had trouble with a bronchial ailment last spring. He's now smoking less than a pack a day instead of two packs.

Supply Apparently Ample

Apparently, he has an ample supply to take care of his needs.

Other folks at the Executive Mansion, however, aren't so fortunate, Mrs. Roosevelt disclosed earlier.

Cartons of cigarettes aren't

Favor Men In Combat

Officials here had no information on the progress made toward easing the deficiency, which Secretary of War Stimson said last week would be done as soon as possible. Men in the combat zone are to be favored in the process.

The Army supply system has aimed at delivering a pack and a half a day for each man in all the armed services.

Worse Cigarette Shortage Seen

Kansas City, Nov. 27 (AP)—An even more severe cigarette shortage in the next three months than in the last two was predicted today by Eric Calamia, president of the National Retail Tobacco Merchants' Association.

INAUGURAL SPEECH MAY BE VERY BRIEF

Washington, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt is considering holding his fourth inaugural address to four or five minutes.

Senator Byrd (D.-Va.), chairman of the committee in charge of inauguration plans, reported today that the whole ceremony will be short. After conferring with the President, he said Mr. Roosevelt told him he would speak no more than five minutes.

Furthermore, the crowd which will hear him personally will be limited to four or five thousand persons, most of whom will stand on the lawn beneath the south portico of the White House.

Invitations will be issued by the inaugural committee, but the list will be supplied by the White House at the committee's request, Senator Byrd said.

David Lynn, Capitol architect, who accompanied Senator Byrd to the White House along with Senate Secretary Edwin H. Halsey, said there isn't enough lumber available to erect spectators' seats.

ROOSEVELT PLANS TO TAKE VACATION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—(AP) President Roosevelt prepared tonight to take a vacation. It was expected to be entirely off the record, as long as it lasts.

The President himself told reporters he might go to almost any point—north, east, south or west. He said his plans were somewhat in a state of flux and added cryptically that he might surprise everybody.

What that surprise might be, he did not indicate. But there was no intimation that a holiday might blend at the latter end into another Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin conference on plans for war and peace.

The Chief Executive has said several times that the Big Three hoped to get together again as soon as possible.

With a fresh haircut and dressed in a neat grey suit, Mr. Roosevelt looked fit today when he called reporters in for an informal news conference to tell them he had accepted the resignation of Secretary of State Hull. Later he nominated Under Secretary Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., for the cabinet position.

The President has had no vacation since Spring.

Roosevelt Plurality In Virginia Is 97,033

Richmond, Nov. 27 (AP)—Complete and official returns in the November 7 general election in Virginia announced today by the Board of Canvassers showed President Roosevelt received a plurality of 97,033 over Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican candidate.

Roosevelt received 242,276 and Dewey 145,243 votes.

The official returns for other presidential candidates were 459 for Claude A. Watson, Prohibition; 360 for Norman Thomas, Socialist, and 90 for Edward E. Teichert, Socialist-Labor.

Post-War Roads, Airports Provided in 12 Billion Bill

Snyder Asks 9 Superhighways and 18 Fields 4 Miles Square

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 (AP).—Legislation to authorize appropriation of $12,000,000,000 for a system of post-war superhighways and airports was proposed today by Representative J. Buell Snyder, Democrat, of Pennsylvania.

Three transcontinental highways and six north-south roadways would be constructed. A four-mile square airport would be constructed at each of eighteen intersections.

The highways would include:

From Boston to Salem, Ore., by way of Albany, Cleveland, Chicago, Rapid City, S. D., and Yellowstone National Park.

From Buffalo to Pensacola, Fla., by way of Pittsburgh, Uniontown, Pa., Charleston W. Va., Jonesboro, Tenn., and Atlanta.

Mr. Snyder introduced a similar measure in May, 1943. He included one change in today's bill—a clause to give veterans first preference in jobs on the projects and men between fifty-two and sixty-five second chance.

Cotton Ed's Successor Sworn In

Washington, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—South Carolina's Senator Wilton E. Hall was sworn in today as successor to the late Ellison (Cotton Ed) Smith. He said that he would not talk much, but was "more concerned about winning the war and carrying Woodrow Wilson's ideas into winning the peace." Senator Hall, 43 years old, publisher of the Anderson Independent and Daily Mail, also operates radio station WAIM.

Heads Polio Fund Appeal Group.

Russell Maguire, president of Maguire Industries and an officer of industrial firms here and in South America, will head the Commerce and Industry Division of the annual fund-raising appeal of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, it was announced today at the foundation's headquarters, 120 Broadway. The appeal gets under way on December 5.

TEXTILE LABOR PAY DEMANDS STUDIED

WLB Considers Complaints Of Substandard Wage

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—Textile workers are next in line before the War Labor Board with pay increase demands outside the scope of the Little Steel formula.

WLB began consideration today of the substandard pay complaints posed in a case between 50,000 CIO textile workers and 54 textile and rayon mills in the South, New England, New York and Pennsylvania.

Would Not Infringe

CIO demands in this case, like those involved in WLB's decision handing an average 5-cents-an-hour wage increase to 400,000 CIO steel workers, could be granted without infringing on the formula.

The formula rule limits living-cost-compensating pay increases to 15 per cent beyond levels in effect January 1, 1941, but the Administration's stabilization policy permits some increases to correct hardships.

WLB made its steel pay adjustments contingent, however, upon a finding by the Office of Price Administration that they would not result in any advanced prices for steel, or if OPA found a steel price would result, upon approval of Fred M. Vinson, economic stabilization director.

Panels Process Cases

Fact-finding panels have finished processing the textile wage cases for WLB. The principal issue involved is the textile worker demand for an industry-wide minimum wage of 60 cents an hour. This compares with the 50-cent minimum WLB has been granting right along and the 65-cent minimum Senator Pepper (D., Fla.), is seeking to have established through Congressional resolution.

"After textiles, the board has put down for consideration, in this order, the demands of workers involved in meat packing, General Motors, glass, aluminum, General Electric and Westinghouse cases. As in steel, WLB will not consider any base wage increases until the White House speaks in regard to general pay boosts.

REPORT FCC TOLD 'FORGET' CHARGES ON SALE OF WMCA

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—(AP) The White House advised the Federal Communications commission to "forget" accusations that radio station WMCA, New York, had been sold under "duress", a former FCC commissioner testified today.

The witness, George Henry Payne, said the accusations came from William Weismann, an attorney for Donald Flamm, former owner of the station, who sold it to Edward J. Noble, chairman of the board of the Blue Network and former under-Secretary of Commerce.

Payne, before a House committee investigating the FCC, quoted Weismann as saying, in substance, that there had been "persecutions, injustices etc.," attending the sale. That was after the FCC had approved the transfer, Payne said.

Members of the Commission, he testified, felt it best to notify the White House of the charges to "see if it were interested."

Through an executive clerk of the White House, the late Rudolph Forster, Payne added, the Commission was advised "to forget all about it."

David H. Deivler, an FCC attorney who preceded Payne as a witness, said he knew of no "specific example" of pressure on the Commission to approve the transfer of the station.

In response to a question Deivler said, however, that "very few" applications for transfer had been approved as quickly as that of WMCA.

Donald S. Shaw, former general manager of the station, who denied participation in a "scare campaign" to induce Flamm to sell, declared he had been "delighted" by Noble's purchase of the station.

Shaw has been named by Leslie Evan Roberts, former public relations counsel for WMCA, as one of the participants in what the latter termed a "conspiracy" to force Flamm into selling the station. Roberts has testified he himself had a part in the "scare Flamm" campaign.

Later, in a statement, Shaw declared Roberts' charges "utterly false and completely untrue."

At one point during the hearing, Rep. Hart (D-N.J.) a member of the committee, interrupted to ask committee counsel, John J. Sirica, "What has this got to do with the FCC?"

Sirica replied the questioning was all part of a picture "to show that if Noble was guilty of being a part of the conspiracy to force Flamm to sell, then the Commission was derelict in granting him (Noble) a license."

"We will prove," he said, "that Fly (former FCC chairman James L. Fly) shut his eyes to this conspiracy—that he refused to listen to evidence regarding Noble's fitness to operate."

Farm Equipment Already Aiding Liberated Areas

New York, Nov. 27 (AP)—Farm machinery distributed in liberated areas in France and Belgium already has started to produce a portion of their food needs, Serge G. Troubetzkoy, of the United States Foreign Economic Administration, said today.

Troubetzkoy, who arrived by plane after five months in London, said the speedy retreat of the Germans from France prevented their destruction of harvesting machinery.

"The problem of supplying farm machinery to the liberated areas was not as bad as we thought at first," he said. "There is a great need for repair parts for machinery which had been imported, particularly tractors."

NOV 28 1944

Capt. Hoskins, in Philadelphia Hospital, Tells of Battle Off Philippines.

Philadelphia, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—Capt. John M. Hoskins, U. S. N., 46-year-old skipper of the light carrier Princeton, lost his right foot when his ship was sunk in the second battle of the Philippines.

Bridgeporter on 51 Missions, Says Nobody in Crew Ever Hurt

NOV 28 1944

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 27—(AP) "God was flying with us," said Staff Sergeant Joseph T. Iovino, 22, Bridgeport, Conn., in telling of his 51 missions in Italy as ball turret gunner on a Liberator bomber, "and nobody in our crew was ever hurt."

Iovino flew on a ship named "Hard to Get" and it certainly was.

"On a raid to Munich," the sergeant declared, "all four of our engines were hit by flak over the target. One was knocked out completely and we could only pull full power on two during the trip back.

"We fell behind our formation and were so long in reaching our base that everybody thought we were missing. But even though we had been riddled from one end of the ship to the other and didn't have all our controls working, we made a normal landing.

"It took two months to get all the flak out of the bomber," Iovino said.

The sergeant, son of Mr. and Mrs. Iovino, 26 Taft avenue, Bridgeport, is now at the AAF redistribution station in Atlantic City. After a medical checkup and an interview with personnel specialists, he will be reassigned to one of the air force commands in the U. S. where his overseas experience will be most valuable.

Iovino graduated from Bridgeport Central High school in 1940 and entered the Army in September, 1942. Going overseas last March, he won the Distinguished Flying Cross and Air Medal with 3 clusters.

"When the bomb storage art exploded I was thrown flat on the deck and felt a burning sensation. Then I looked down and saw a bare foot on the deck. It was my own right foot, completely severed but for a tendon."

He grabbed a line, made a tourniquet about his thigh, and waited until a Navy doctor came to him with an abandon-ship knife, which is something like an ordinary hunting knife, and severed the tendon.

"The tendon was tough and the knife was dull," the Brookeville, Md., officer recalled with a grimace.

"I was sure lucky, though," he added. "It could have been my head instead of my foot."

He was taken off the carrier about an hour before she was scuttled. Three days later he was transferred to a hospital ship, and later he was evacuated by air to Alameda, Cal. After ten days in a hospital at Mare Island, he was flown here last Friday.

Capt. Hoskins, a 1921 graduate of Annapolis, formerly was chief of staff to the command of air fleet at Quonset Point, R. I.

He hopes for active duty again, as chief of staff to the commander of another carrier.

WEEK AFTER WAR

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 27—(AP) A resolution urging Congress to establish a 30-hour week after the war to spread employment and to relieve production "tensions" was adopted by the American Federation of Labor convention today.

The committee report said that "technical advances in industry and the accelerating rate of production have developed tensions which cause workers to burn out at early age." It added this was "justifiable in time of war."

AFL President William Green rejected anew a suggestion from the British trades union delegate that the AFL attend an international labor conference in London, but he urged all labor groups to join in a worldwide movement to preserve peace after the war.

Green replied in what he called a "friendly way" to a speech by Arthur Horner, the fraternal delegate from the British trades union Congress, who had pledged earlier for international labor unity as a foundation for enduring peace.

Horner, a member of the central committee of the British Communist party, referred again to the forthcoming international labor conference in February, which was called by the British Congress.

Green said he objected to the 30.24 — 20721

invitation being extended also to "dissident forces in our country" in the labor field. The CIO has accepted an invitation to the London conference.

Green said the conference should have been called "by our own" International Federation of Trades Unions, in which the AFL is represented and in which the British Trades Union Congress also is represented.

"For some reason or other this agency (IFTU) did not participate in the call," the AFL head said.

Horner, who Green declared was "being extended a warm and cordial welcome" by the convention, said of trade union unity in the postwar world:

"I do not believe that we will allow the unity that has been built up in the furnace of war to be thrown aside in the days of peace.

"If this does take place, then we must face what it means—a hectic short-lived trade boom, followed by unemployment, depression on a scale greater than 1931, intensified rivalries between the nations of the world, and especially between Britain and America, leading to further economic crises and World War No. 3."

BRETTON PLAN UNDER FIRE

Head Of I. B. A. Attacks Monetary Proposals

Chicago, Nov. 27 (AP)—The monetary proposals adopted at Bretton Woods last July were criticized today by J. Clifford Folger, president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, as "spreading low-cost money throughout the world, with Uncle Sam putting up the lion's share of the money, either through the front door or the back door."

Folger, head of a Washington investment firm, spoke on the Bretton Woods proposals for a currency stabilization fund and a world reconstruction bank, in his address at the opening session of the I.B.A.'s 33d annual meeting.

"Credits Concealed"

Asserting that "with one or two exceptions, bankers were conspicuously absent" at Bretton Woods, Folger said:

"Those in our country with the widest practical experience feel that credits to other countries were concealed by the gentle word stabilization. They question whether the stabilization fund needs as much capital as suggested. They point out that probably no other nation in the world situated as we are would do what is suggested for us. . . ."

Under the proposals formulated at Bretton Woods, the United States' share of the monetary fund and world bank would be approximately $6.000,000,000 in dollars, gold or loan guarantees. The plans must be approved by Congress before this nation can participate in them.

Cites No. 1 Job

Folger said the No. 1 job of the postwar period was getting idle capital back to work.

"The best encouragement for venture capital will come with tax relief," he asserted. "Based on present tax laws, no banker can conscientiously put his clients in anything but more or less riskless investments. Security offerings in the last ten years tell the story. Ninety-five per cent are of senior securities, mostly bonds. . . .

"Some things can be done tax-wise to help business. Averaging losses and gains backward and forward over a period, say of five years, would be most beneficial.

Will Take Chances

"The capital gains tax should be lowered or eliminated. No satisfactory basis for its collection has been evolved. Wealthy people are facing the probability that the days of very large income are over. They will, however, take chances in the hope of increasing capital.

"Give the large investor his chance at capital gains, avoid soaking corporations confiscating taxes before the money ever gets to the stockholders, help new and little business tax-wise and we'll do more than anything else to get venture capital out into the open."

U. S. AIR PLAN WINS SUPPORT

'Fifth Freedom' Formula Favored Over British Scheme

Chicago, Nov. 27 (AP)—Support of a post-war airline formula acceptable to the United States developed rapidly today as the International Civil Aviation Conference tried to break an Anglo-American deadlock.

Expressions by 24 nations in the first day of debate on the "Fifth Freedom" of the air, a program submitted by the United States, showed nineteen countries either in favor of the American plan or Canada's compromise offer, which this nation will accept.

This recapitulation from an authoritative source placed France in support of the United Kingdom proposal, with Australia and New Zealand uncertain but inclined in the same direction, and Belgium possibly leaning toward the British.

The Lineup

Officials who heard the day's discussion offered this lineup of the American support:

China, Mexico, Netherlands, Cuba, Venezuela, Philippines, Ecuador, Panama, Liberia, Dominican Republic, Peru, Nicaragua and Uruguay for the United States plan announced last week; Sweden and Denmark willing to accept the plan and definitely against the British proposal; Brazil favorable to the United States but making further study; Greece leaning toward the United States plan.

The issue turns on the application of so-called "Fifth Freedom" traffic or intermediate business in calculating the amount of carrying capacity which will be allotted on long airline routes under the plan. This "freedom" was developed by the United States delegation after the British insisted on "capacity" quotas based on the amount of terminal traffic carried by an airline.

Answer To Britain

The United States delegation looked at the debate as an answer to British claims that the American proposal would mean an invasion of potential airline business for small countries.

The United States contends that the British proposal, which would fix capacity quotas on a terminal basis, without considering intermediate business, would restrict the development of long routes.

Both Lord Swinton, British Air Minister, and Adolf A. Berle, assistant Secretary of State, restated their stout opposition to acceptance of the other's proposal without considerable change.

Canada had sought to provide a middle course by writing a draft which called for concessions by both sides. While Berle was understood to have stated that the plan was operable and, therefore, presumably acceptable, the British gave no indication of going along.

CANADA OFFERS COMPROMISE ON FREEDOM OF AIR

Its Proposal to Dissipate Deadlock Retains Much Detail of U. S. Plan.

54 NATIONS DEBATE PROBLEM

Anglo-British Stalemate Is Over Intermediate Traffic on Long Air Line Operations.

Chicago, Nov. 27 (A. P.).—The Canadian delegation attempted today to break the Anglo-American deadlock on a fifth freedom of the air with a compromise proposal which retains much of the detail outlined in the United States plan. The Canadian draft was submitted at a joint subcommittee meeting called to work on the stalemate in free debate, by the fifty-four countries represented at the International Civil Aviation Conference.

The key item in the Canadian version of the application of the so-called fifth freedom privilege —the carrying of traffic of two intermediate countries by a third country operating an air line through their territories — appeared to be a limitation by which carrying capacity allotted in areas beyond the one nearest the home State could never be more than 50 per cent of the total for the nearest sector. This presumably was written as a safeguard against fears expressed by the British that a long line operator might cut heavily into the regional services offered by intermediate countries.

Stronger Safeguard Proposed.

A further and more clearcut safeguard appeared in the Canadian proposal that each State be granted the right to contract out of the fifth freedom—that is, decide that its traffic could not be carried by the air line of another country. At the same time, such State could exchange rights for such traffic with another country, so long as the agreement was not on an exclusive basis.

This provision goes considerably beyond the United States safeguard, which merely would permit two States to say that traffic carried between them by a third country could not be considered in the escalator formula by which traffic carrying capacity could be increased.

The Canadian plan appeared to be a frank effort to adjust the differences between the Americans and British, with some concession to both sides. The major concession to the United States would be acceptance of its idea that capacity allotments for long lines should be determined on a divisional basis rather than on a terminal basis.

To put it simply, on a New York-Karachi route, the Americans would allot capacity on the basis of business carried between, for example, New York and London, London and Cairo, Cairo and Karachi, while the British would allot it simply on the basis of business originating in New York and destined for Karachi, without consideration of the in-between traffic. Certain other concessions relating to the technicalities of air line operations were put into the Canadian compromise draft.

Issuance of the compromise after a busy week end of conferences among the Americans-British-Canadian delegations was taken as a hopeful sign that some break in the deadlock might be accomplished today or tomorrow.

Later the Canadians introduced another proposal which would have the effect of putting the formula outlined into the annexes to the treaty, with merely a general statement of the right in the treaty itself.

Thomas Labels Striker As "Guilty Of Scabbing"

Chicago, Nov. 27 (AP) — R. J. Thomas, president of the CIO United Automobile Workers, declared today in an interview "the worker who strikes while the war is on is guilty of scabbing."

"My organization will enforce the most stringent policy to punish the offenders," Thomas said in an interview with the Chicago Herald American, and added:

"Anyone who strikes today while our sons and brothers are shedding their blood on the battle fronts is a 100 per cent scab. He is scabbing on his union because any strike today hurts the union; and he is also scabbing on his country because any interruption to production, no matter how slight, causes delay in our ultimate victory in the war."

Discussing unauthorized strikes Thomas said the policy of his union was "perfectly clear" on the subject. "We will enforce now more than ever the policy adopted by our union on February 26, 1944, which aims to prevent such unauthorized strikes."

MARSHAL GETS FISH

St. Joseph, Mo., Nov. 27 (A. P.).—Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery reports that his six goldfish have arrived, "in terrific heart."

The goldfish were shipped by the Missouri Voiture of the 40 & 8. This organization decided that Marshal Montgomery was surrounded with noisy pets. How about some nice, quiet ones for a change?

Replied Montgomery:

"Thank you very much indeed for your interesting and amusing present of six Missouri goldfish. They arrived yesterday via Paris, only seven days en route, and were in terrific heart. I should say that in the goldfish world this is probably one of the longest journeys ever made."

Disregard Bones on Saipan, Look for Shrapnel

LOGAN, Utah, Nov. 27 (AP).—Here's how G. I.s fish on Saipan, writes Technician Third Class Grant Robbins:

"The fishing party loads up with several cans of 'C' ration hash and a few grenades, catches a ride on the nearest landing barge and heads for open water. The hash is tossed in, and in a few moments the fish hit the hash.

"When there is practically a solid mass of fish you yank out the pin, toss the grenade and a slight underwater explosion provides hundreds of dead fish."

Main problem: "Don't worry about small bones as you eat them, but look out for shrapnel."

TEAMING WITH NINTH AIRFORCE FIGHTERBOMBERS LT.GEN.WILLIAM H. SIMPSON'S MEN REPULSED A TANK-SUPPORTED GERMAN COUNTERTHRUST LAUNCHED FROM KIRCHBERG AND AIMED AT BOURHEIM, TWO MILES SOUTHWEST OF JULICH. YANKEE FLIERS DESTROYED 11 ENEMY TANKS AND DAMAGED EIGHT OTHERS.

AMERICAN FIRST ARMY--GAINS OF UP TO A HALF MILE WERE SCORED AGAINST STUBBORNLY-HELD ENEMY POSITIONS. WEISWEILER, 13 MILES INSIDE GERMANY AND THE FIRST IMPORTANT POINT ON THE ESCHWEILER DUREN LEG OF THE HIGHWAY TO COLOGNE, WAS TAKEN AFTER THE AMERICANS FOUGHT IN THE STREETS FOR MORE THAN 24 HOURS.

ADVANCING 500 YARDS IN THE HURTGEN FOREST THE DOUGHBOYS APPROACHING DUREN DROVE THE GERMANS FROM AN IMPORTANT HEIGHT JUST NORTH OF GROSSHAU. IN THIS ADVANCE THE AMERICANS FOUGHT ACROSS TERRAIN WHERE THE ENEMY HAD CONSTRUCTED TRENCHES WHICH WERE IMPROVED VERSIONS OF THOSE IN THE FIRST WORLD WAR.

AMERICAN THIRD ARMY--IN BURSTING THROUGH THE OLD MAGINOT LINE, THE AMERICANS SWEPT FORWARD AS MUCH AS 4 1/2 MILES AND WERE WITHIN A MILE OF ST.AVOLD, FOUR MILES SOUTH OF THE SAAR BORDER AND 14 MILES SOUTHWEST OF SAARBRUCKEN.

LT.GEN.GEORGE S.PATTON'S MEN ALSO MADE A NEW CROSSING INTO GERMANY WEST OF THE SAAR BASIN, REACHING TETTINGEN, FOUR MILES INSIDE THE REICH. SOUTHEAST OF TETTINGEN, THIRD ARMY UNITS TOOK THE SAAR TOWNS OF BIRINGEN AND OBERESCH, BOTH ABOUT A MILE INSIDE THE INDUSTRIAL BASIN.

NOV 28 1944

AMERICAN SEVENTH ARMY--THE GERMANS THREATENING THE SAVERNE-STRASBOURG CORRIDOR DROVE WITHIN FIVE MILES OF SARREBOURG BEFORE LT.GEN.ALEXANDER M.PATCH'S MEN COUNTERATTACKED AND DROVE THEM BACK. THE SEVENTH ARMY NOW HAS PUSHED APPROXIMATELY 11 MILES NORTH OF STRASBOURG BY ENTERING WEITBRUCH AND GRIES.

FRENCH FIRST ARMY--THE FRENCH REACHED ST.GERMAIN AND LA CHAPELLE, SIX AND EIGHT MILES NORTHEAST OF BELFORT, RESPECTIVELY, CREATING A SERIOUS THREAT TO THE ENEMY'S REAR IN THAT AREA. THE GERMANS ABANDONED ALL FRONT LINE FORTS EAST OF BELFORT BUT SOME STILL ARE RESISTING IN BELFORT ITSELF.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, PARIS, NOV. 27-(AP)-WAR IS NOT FOOTBALL AND THE YARDS GAINED DO NOT NECESSARILY SHOW WHO IS WINNING.

IN WAR THE OBJECTIVE IS NOT JUST TO COVER TERRITORY BUT TO DESTROY THE OPPONENT.

THAT IS WHAT IS HEPPNING IN THE TANK AND SHELL CHURNED MUDFIELDS OF THE AACHEN GAP.

IN A BATTLE FIERCER THAN THE STAND AT CAEN, THE GERMAN ARMY IS BEING DRAWN INTO A VORTEX FROM WHICH ALLIED OFFICERS CONFIDENTLY BELIEVE IT NEVER CAN ESCAPE IN CONDITION TO FIGHT ANOTHER MAJOR BATTLE.

THE ALLIES' COLDLY CALCULATED PLAN IS TO DESTROY THE ENEMY'S FIGHTING STRENGTH ON THE LINE OF BATTLE, AND THEN DO THE GROUND GAINING.

SUCH STRATEGY WORKED ON THE NORMANDY LINE, AND ALMOST ALL OF FRANCE FELL LIKE THE RIPE FRUIT OF THAT VICTORY. NOV -3 1944

THE VERY SLOWNESS OF THE ALLIED ADVANCE NOW--WHICH AT ITS HIGH POINT HAS WON ONLY SOME SEVEN MILES IN A WEEK AND A HALK--MAY BE A HARBINGER OF ULTIMATE SUCCESS OF THOSE TACTICS A SECOND TIME.

GERMANY IS BEING FORCED TO COMMIT HER STRENGTH TO THE TEST, AND THAT IS EXACTLY WHAT THE ALLIES WANT.

FOR THE ALLIES HAVE THE POWER TO BREAK THAT STAND, HOWEVER FIRM IT MAY BE, AND IF THEY HAVE TO BREAK IT, THEY WOULD PREFER TO CRUSH IT FINALLY AND FOR ALL RATHER THAN MEET IT A BIT AT A TIME ON LINES ALL THE WAY ACROSS GERMANY.

THE ALLIED WINTER OFFENSIVE HAS FORCED THE WEHRMACHT TO THIS TEST ON THE COLOGNE PLAIN AND LORRAINE FIELDS---BATTLEGROUNDS TOO FAR APART TO BE MUTUALLY SELF-SUPPORTING, AS ONE HIGH ALLIED OFFICER PUT IT.

THE GERMANS ARE FIGHTING WITH THEIR BACKS TO THE RHINE--WHICH MAKES WITHDRAWAL OF FORCES ONCE COMMITTED VIRTUALLY IMPOSSIBLE ON ANY REAL SCALE.

VIRTUALLY ALL GERMAN LOCAL RESERVES ALREADY HAVE BEEN POURED INTO THE BATTLE WEST OF COLOGNE.

ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT DON WHITEHEAD REPORTED A STAFF OFFICER AT FIRST ARMY HEADQUARTERS AS SAYING THE GERMANS STILL HAD RESERVES WEST OF THE RHINE. BUT THESE ARE NOT LOCAL RESERVES--THEY WERE DRAINED FROM THE THIN, MOBILE STRATEGIC RESERVES, AND SOME OF THEM WERE EVEN VOLKS MILITIA DIVISIONS.

GENERAL EISENHOWER'S POLICY OF POURING NOV THE POWER IS EXPECTED TO FORCE EVEN THESE INTO THE FIGHT. NOV 28 1944

WITH U.S. FIRST ARMY IN GERMANY, NOV. 27-(AP)-AMERICAN DOUGHBOYS SMASHED INTO THE CENTER OF LANGERWEHE, LAST MAJOR GERMAN-HELD ROAD CENTER WEST OF THE ROER RIVER, TODAY AND WERE SLUGGING IT OUT HOUSE TO HOUSE WITH THE GERMANS AT DUSK.

LANGERWEHE, 24 1/2 MILES FROM COLOGNE AND FIVE MILES FROM DUREN, WAS ENTERED ONLY AFTER SOME OF THE HARDEST FIGHTING.

JUST ABOVE THIS AREA, OTHER AMERICAN INFANTRY FOUGHT FORWARD 400 YARDS BEYOND CAPTURED FRENZ TOWARD THE TOWN OF LAMMERSDORF IN THE FACE OF SOME OF THE MOST PUNISHING MORTAR FIRE OF THE EUROPEAN CAMPAIGN.

AT THE SAME TIME THE AMERICANS WRESTED AWAY FROM THE NAZIS THE BIGGER PART OF THE TOWN OF HURTGEN, SEVEN MILES SOUTHWEST OF DUREN, AND SENT PATROLS INTO KLEINHAU, TWO MILES TO THE NORTHEAST.

THE GERMANS ARE RESISTING DESPERATELY ALL ALONG THE LINE FROM UNDREDS OF YARDS OF INTERLOCKING TRENCHES AND CELLARS TURNED INTO TRONGLY FORTIFIED PILLBOXES.

NOV 28 1944

THEY ARE TRYING TO BUY TIME AT THE APPROACHES TO THE ROER BUT A ENIOR AMERICAN STAFF OFFICER DECLARED TONIGHT THAT WITH LUCK IN THE EATHER THAT BARRIER SHOULD BE REACHED SOON.

FRESH AND ELITE GERMAN TROOPS, PARTICULARLY PARACHUTE SOLDIERS AVE BEEN BROUGHT UP TO THE LINE. THEIR FIRE WAS HEAVY ALL DAY, SPECIALLY IN THE OPEN AREA BETWEEN WEISWEILER AND FRENZ, WHERE THEY ERE TRYING TO BREAK UP AMERICAN REINFORCEMENTS.

WHERE GERMAN ARTILLERY FIRE WAS EXTRAORDINARILY HEAVY, THE MERICANS' WAS NOTHING SHORT OF HELLISH FOR THE ENEMY. IN GROSSHAU, ORTHEAST OF KLEINHAU, WHOLE HOUSES WERE LIFTED OFF THE GROUND AND EEN TO DISINTEGRATE IN THE AIR WHEN HIT BY OUR SHELLS.

IN HURTGEN, TOO, THE FIGHTING WAS A CASE OF GAINS YARD BY YARD.

FOR HOURS TODAY--UNTIL THE ONSET OF POOR WEATHER LATE IN THE FTERNOON--AMERICAN FIGHTER-BOMBERS CLOSELY SUPPORTED THE STRUGGLING NFANTRYMEN AND SEVERAL ENEMY TANKS AND SELF-PROPELLED GUNS WERE OCKED OUT BY THE AIRMEN.

NOV 28 1944

FRENZ IS A TYPICAL EXAMPLE OF THE NATURE OF THE GERMAN DEFENSES THIS SIDE OF THE ROER. THREE ATTACKS WERE REQUIRED TO CAPTURE AT VILLAGE, DEFENDED BY TRENCHES 350 YARDS LONG RUNNING IN JAGGED ERS TO A DEPTH ALSO OF 350 YARDS.

THE HOUSES BEHIND THE TRENCHES, IN WHICH THE GERMANS TOOK ELTER DURING OUR ARTILLERY BARRAGES, WERE EQUIPPED WITH ELABORATE RTRESS-LIKE CELLARS.

THIS IS FIGHTING WITHOUT SPECTACULAR GAINS--NASTY AND PUNISHING-' AS A SENIOR AMERICAN OFFICER OBSERVED GRIMLY, "WE ARE KILLING A OF THE BOCHE."

ALDHOVEN, GERMANY, NOV. 27-(AP)-WHEN W MEDIUM SHERMAN TANK RUNS INTO A HEAVY GERMAN TIGER TANK TWICE ITS SIZE, THE PROSPECTS USUALLY ARE NOT TOO BRIGHT FOR THE YANKS, BUT THE CREW OF SGT.HERMAN BEAVER, 111 WEST BRIGHT STREET, KINGSTON, N.C., PROVED THAT A SHERMAN CAN KNOCK OUT A TIGER JUST AS QUICKLY AS IT CAN A MARK IV OR MARK V.

WITH ITS THICKER ARMOR AND GREATER FIREPOWER, THE NEW GERMAN TANK IS MORE OF A JOB FOR ARTILLERY OR THE AIR FORCE TO TACKLE, BUT THIS PLUCKY QUINTET, ELECTING TO SLUG IT OUT, BLEW UP THE TIGER AND OPENED

UP A LANE FOR NINTH ARMY INFANTRY TO CAPTURE A GERMAN TOWN.

"IT WAS DAMN GOOD WORK," SAID MAJ.ELVIN SEBASTA OF BRENHAM, TEXAS, TANK BATTALION OPERATIONS OFFICER. "IT'S PRETTY HARD FOR A MAN TO STAY OUT THERE WHEN HE KNOWS THAT IF THE TIGER HITS HIM IT'S THE END."

THE CREW KNEW THAT ONLY TOO WELL--THEIR TANK, "ANNABELLA," WAS THE SOLE SURVIVOR OF FIVE WHICH HAD ATTACKED TWO TIGERS AND SOME SELF-PROPELLED GUNS.

"WHEN I SAW WE WERE THE ONLY ONES LEFT, I GOT NERVOUS, BUT SERGEANT BEAVER GOT MAD," SAID T/5 CHARLES (SLATS) HOMERKAMP, 433 LINDENWOOD AVENUE, ST.CHARLES, MO., THE DRIVER.

"HE YELLED 'I'LL GET THAT --- -- - ------ TIGER' AND HE OPENED UP WITH OUR 75.

"WE WERE SHOOTING AT 2,200 YARDS, WHICH IS A PRETTY GOOD DISTANCE FOR OUR 75, WHILE THE TIGER'S 88 COULD HANDLE IT EASILY.

"THE TIGER PUT A COUPLE OF SHELLS RIGHT NEXT TO US, BUT WE GOT HITS ALL OVER IT WITH ROUNDS OF ANTI-PERSONNEL AND HIGH EXPLOSIVES. I THINK ONE ROUND PENETRATED THE TIGER'S TURRET BECAUSE IT NEVER MOVED AFTER THAT. IT BLEW UP AND STARTED TO SMOKE. I NEVER SAW THE CREW GET OUT."

NOV 28 1944

THE DAVID-AND-GOLIATH BATTLE WAS THE LAST FOR THE HEROIC "ANNABELLA." THE NEXT DAY WHILE SHE LED AN ATTACK ON ANOTHER TOWN GERMAN GUNNERS ZEROED HER IN AND DESTROYED HER.

"I NEVER SAW WHAT HIT US," SAID HOMERKAMP. "I JUST HEARD A RACKET AND THE CANNONEER HOLLERED 'GET OUT. WE'RE HIT.' WE ALL RUSHED OUT WITHOUT A SCRATCH."

A U.S.REGIMENTAL COMMAND POST NEAR SAVERNE, FRANCE, NOV. 27-(AP)- A HAIR-RAISING EXPERIENCE BEFELL MAJ.EDWARD BUSCHKAMPER, WHO WAS TRAPPED TWO DAYS BEHIND THE ENEMY LINES DURING THE GERMAN ARMORED ATTACK WHICH ATTEMPTED TO CUT THE ALLIES' SAVERNE CORRIDOR TO THE RHINE.

BUSCHKAMPER, A 28-YEAR-OLD BATTALION COMMANDER, WAS RESCUED YESTERDAY WHEN TROOPS OF THE 44TH DIVISION RECAPTURED RAUWILLER TO HALT THE NAZI ATTACK FIVE MILES SHORT OF SARREBOURG. HE IS A FORMER NEW YORK MAIL CARRIER WHOSE ROUTE WAS IN HARLEM. HIS WIFE LIVES AT 37 THOMPSON AVE., WHITE PLAINS, N.Y.

THE GERMANS OVERRAN HIS COMMAND POST, WHICH WAS A HOUSE IN RAUWILLER EARLY LAST FRIDAY MORNING, KILLING, WOUNDING OR TAKING PRISONER HIS SIX OFFICERS AND 20 MEN AFTER ATTACKING THE HOUSE WITH MACHINEGUNS AND TANKS. FOR THE NEXT 48 HOURS HE HID IN THE ATTIC OF THE HOUSE AFTER THE GERMANS OCCUPIED IT. TO ESCAPE HE HAD TO DASH THROUGH FLAMES WHEN THE GERMANS EVENTUALLY SET THE STRUCTURE AFIRE.

ONCE OUT OF THE BURNING HOUSE HE HAD TO PASS THROUGH AN ADJACENT BARN WHERE THE AMMUNITION THE GERMANS CAPTURED FROM THE AMERICANS WAS EXPLODING IN THE FIRE, THEN CRAWL TWO HOURS ON HIS STOMACH THROUGH THE MUD TOWARD HIS OWN LINES.

HE HAD ONLY A THIRD OF A DAY'S RATIONS AND ONE AND A HALF HOURS SLEEP IN TWO DAYS. HE HADN'T SLEPT MUCH IN THE ATTIC BECAUSE OF THE GERMANS' NOISY SNORING ON THE FLOOR BELOW HIM.

THE MAJOR AND HIS MEN MOVED INTO RANVILLER AT 2 A.M. LAST FRIDAY. AT ABOUT 6 A.M. HE GLANCED OUT THE WINDOW AND "THERE SMACK IN FRONT OF US WERE THREE TIGER TANKS. I WENT UP THE STAIRS AND LOOKED OUT THE BACK WINDOW AND THERE WERE 40 GERMANS LOOTING OUR TRUCKS.

"I LOOKED OUT THE WINDOW WHERE THE TANKS WERE AND 75 MORE GERMANS WERE COMING DOWN THE ROAD. THEN I HEARD A RIFLE SHOT DOWNSTAIRS. ONE OF OUR MEN MUST HAVE FIRED. ALL HELL BROKE LOOSE. THE GERMANS OPENED UP WITH MACHINEGUNS AND BACKED THE TIGERS UP 15 YARDS AND THEN LET GO WITH THEIR TANK GUNS. I DIDN'T LIKE THE SOUNDS I HEARD THEN AMONG OUR MEN DOWNSTAIRS."

AT THIS POINT IN THE STORY CAPT. JOHN ROGERS OF BLOOMFIELD, N.J., BROKE IN: "BACK HERE AT REGIMENTAL HEADQUARTERS WE GOT A RADIO MESSAGE FROM ONE OF ED'S MEN THAT TANKS WERE SETTING OUTSIDE THEIR WINDOWS. IT SO HAPPENED THAT A BATTALION WAS GOING UP THAT ROAD OUT THERE, SO WE MESSAGED THAT HELP WAS COMING."

"YEAH, UP THERE IN THE ATTIC I HEARD TWO ATTACKS LAUNCHED AGAINST THE TOWN AND KNEW HELP WAS COMING," BUSCHKAMPER SAID.

"WE WERE ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF THE TOWN MAKING ONE OF THOSE ATTACKS AND WE ALMOST GOT CUT OFF, TOO," SAID PVT. ALTON HORNSBY OF HALLETTVILLE, TEX.

AMONG THOSE IN THE ANTI-TANK COMPANY MAKING THIS ATTACK, WHICH WAS SUBJECTED TO A GERMAN COUNTERTHRUST OF FLAME-THROWERS, WERE SGT. ALFRED HIDENCE OF ELMHURST, N.Y.; CORP. STANLEY MEDORS OF COLUMBUS, OHIO; AND PVTS. ROBERT HITCHCOCK OF CLOVERDALE, OHIO; GERTLE PERRY OF

THUS FAR, MEDIEAVAL MASONRY IS HOLDING ITS OWN.

THERE ARE AN ESTIMATED 40 FANATICAL PARATROOPS AND OFFICER CADETS IN THIS CASTLE--ALL SWORN TO DIE FOR HITLER. THE BRITISH DEPLOYED AROUND THE ANCIENT MOATED PLACE ARE PREPARED FULLY TO HELP THEM CARRY OUT THEIR OATH.

THE ENEMY TROOPS--PUSHED AND BADGERED ACROSS THE FLOODED DUTCH WASTELANDS IN THIS SALIENT WEST OF THE MAAS RIVER--SLOSHED INTO THE CASTLE LAST FRIDAY. THEY PREPARED TO MAKE A DO-OR-DIE STAND THERE.

WITH THE REAR OF THE CASTLE ALMOST ON THE BANK OF THE TWISTING MAAS, THIS SUICIDAL BAND OF GERMAN SOLDIERS WAS RECEIVING ARTILLERY SUPPORT FROM ACROSS THE RIVER BUT THEY HAVE HAD TO TAKE PLENTY.

THE BRITISH HAVE HURLED MORTAR AND ARTILLERY FIRE ON THE CASTLE. SHARPSHOOTERS AND MACHINEGUNNERS HAVE SPRAYED THE PLACE CONTINUALLY AND, TO TOP THIS HOLOCAUST OF FLYING DYNAMITE, TYPHOONS HAVE ROCKET-BOMBED THE PLACE. YET THE GERMANS AND THE SOLID WALLS OF THE CASTLE STILL HOLD.

THE FORTRESS IS OWNED BY BARON WEICH DE WENNE.

WHEN THE GERMANS FLED TO THE CASTLE, THEY GAVE THE BARON THE CHOICE OF GOING TO GERMANY OR GOING THROUGH TO ALLIED LINES, SAYING, "WE ARE STANDING HERE AND ARE NOT COMING OUT ALIVE."

THE BARON, HIS WIFE AND THEIR FOUR PRETTY DAUGHTERS WENT BACK TO THE ALLIED LINES.

with the u.s. third army, nov. 27-(ap)-troubles are what sgt leo a. blakeslee has had trying "for revenge and to see that we don't make the same mistake twice."

blakeslee acquired a permanent distaste for germans when he was over here in 1918 with the 90th division and stopped a piece of shrapnel at metz and lost his brother and several good friends.

through 26 years that dislike remained and on aug. 12, 1941 he showed up at the recruiting office in san antonio after making a qu run from his home at cuero, texas, demanding readmission to the army a a spot in the 90th division.

his troubles started then and there. he was 52 years old, h had only 14 teeth against the required 16 and he had piles.

"but i fixed some of that quick by having all my teeth pull a fine new set put in and i had an operation to fix the other trouble."

in the face of such determination and a physical condition erwise sound, blakeslee was in, but he was sorely disappointed when he nd that his old outfit wasn't even activated NOV 28 but he agreed to go into another outfit on a temporary basis soon all five feet, five inches of his white-thatched frame was in hting trim at 138 pounds. "if i go a pound over that i get sluggish," said.

so when the 90th was activated, he pleaded, agitated and ued until he got transferred to the texas-oklahoma outfit. another troub se when he was told he was too old to go overseas, but he shouted that down, too.

over here he was made sergeant of the guard, which job norma ps a fellow around headquarters, but he solved that by ~~xinx~~ slipping on patrols and solid trouble came again when he was hit by ~~xxipxxxx~~ a of this come-uppance he solemnly said, "it was both a luc as questioned about why it also was lucky, the texas avenger shouted:

"dammit, i didn't get killed, did i!"

so now he has recovered and is back at his old job and is biggest trouble is that his colonel is watching clo ser to see that e doesn't slip off on those combat jobs.

ST.AVOLD, FRANCE, NOV. 27-(AP)-AMERICAN INFANTRY CUT SWIFTLY THROUGH THIS IMPORTANT COMMUNICATIONS CENTER TODAY AND PUSHED ON NORTHEASTWARD BEHIND THE FLEEING GERMANS.

I WATCHED FORWARD ELEMENTS MOVING ALONG THE ROAD TWO MILES EAST OF TOWN LATE THIS AFTERNOON AND LATER UNOFFICIAL REPORTS SAID VANGUARDS HAD REACHED THE EDGE OF HOMBOURG-HAUT A MILE FARTHER ON

AND BUT 12 MILES SOUTHWEST OF SAARBRUCKEN.

UNITS OF THE U.S. 80TH DIVISION, WHICH ENTERED THE TOWN TODAY AFTER BREACHING THE MAGINOT LINE YESTERDAY, ALSO CLEARED THE WOODED HEIGHTS TO THE NORTH AND WERE WITHIN A COUPLE OF MILES OF GERMANY.

TEN MILES NORTH OF HERE, UNITS OF THE U.S. 95TH INFANTRY DIVISION MENACED THE SAAR FROM A NEW QUARTER WITH A SIX-MILE SWEEP WHICH CARRIED IT NEAR MERTEN, UNDER A MILE FROM THE BORDER AND LITTLE MORE THAN FIVE MILES SOUTHWEST OF SAARLAUTERN.

THE 378TH REGIMENT OF THE 95TH EARLIER HAD BREACHED THE MAGINOT LINE DEFENSES FOR THE SECOND TIME IN TWO DAYS FARTHER BACK.

THE 379TH REGIMENT, COMMANDED BY COL.ORION L.DAVIDSON, TERRELL, TEX., WAS GIVEN THE JOB YESTERDAY OF ASSAULTING ST.AVOLD, WHICH WAS LEFT EXPOSED BY THE STORMING OF THE MAGINOT LINE AND NEARBY DOMINATING HIGH GROUND.

THE THIRD BATTALION, UNDER LT.COL.ELLIOTT D.RHESTON, 53 COLLEGE AVE., ANNAPOLIS, MD., AND THE SECOND UNDER MAJOR PAUL BANDY, HILLSBOROUGH, TEX., QUICKLY FOUND THE GERMANS WERE NOT YET READY TO GIVE UP THE CITY.

THE THIRD, APPROACHING ACROSS THE HILLS FROM THE SOUTHWEST, FOUND ITSELF CAUGHT IN A STORM OF FIRE ON THE EXPOSED SLOPE.

"THEY REALLY THREW EVERYTHING IN THE BOOK AT US, FROM 88'S TO MORTARS AND MACHINE GUNS," SAID MAJOR ARTHUR CLARK, 10 BIDWELL PARKWAY, BUFFALO, N.Y., BATTALION EXECUTIVE. "BUT OUR MEN DUGGED IN AND PUSHED ON."

NOV 28 1944

PVT.GARLAND ACKELSON, PERU, IOWA, ONE OF THE HEAVY MORTAR CREWMEN WHO RODE OUT THE STORM, SAID "WE WERE THROWING EVERYTHING AT THEM, TOO, AND HITTING THEM."

THE SECOND WAS GIVEN THE JOB OF MOVING IN FROM THE WEST AND FOUND ITS FRONT NARROWED FROM ABOUT 800 YARDS TO 200 YARDS BY FLOODS. THE GERMANS HAD BLOWN TWO SMALL DAMS NORTHWEST OF THE CITY.

"THE GERMANS HAD ALL KINDS OF GUNS ZEROED IN ON THAT NARROW AREA," SAID CAPT.SAM L.WILLIAMS, 804 MERRIMAN AVE., ASHEVILLE, N.C., BATTALION EXECUTIVE. "BUT WE MANAGED TO PRESS ON SLOWLY AND WE TOOK 79 PRISONERS."

NOV 28 1944

INFANTRY KEPT THE PRESSURE ON UNTIL DARK AND DURING THE NIGHT ARTILLERY BEAT HEAVILY ON THE GARRISON SO THAT ABOUT 4 A.M. IT STARTED PULLING OUT, AND WHEN THE FIRST BATTALION UNDER LT.COL.HIRAM D.IVES, AMBASSADOR APTS., BALTIMORE, MD., CAME IN FROM THE SOUTH AFTER A FLANKING MOVE NO OPPOSITION WAS MET.

MOVING WITH THE TROOPS OUT FORBACH ROAD TO THE EAST THE ADVANCE WAS FOUND TO BE GOING SMOOTHLY WITH LITTLE OPPOSITION.

MEDICS AND MINESWEEPERS WERE MOVING RIGHT ALONG WITH THE RIFLEMEN, AND ONE ENGINEER OF THE SWEEPERS, SGT.THOMAS CLERK, 3045 NO. BAILEY ST., PHILADELPHIA, SAID:

NOV 28 1944

"I DON'T KNOW WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH THE KRAUTS. WE'VE ONLY FOUND A FEW MINES BUT THERE'S PLENTY OF DYNAMITE UNDER CULVERTS WHERE THEY FAILED TO BLOW IT."

THE ONLY WAY OF GETTING COPY OUT OF BELGRADE WAS BY COURIER PLANES WHICH DEPENDED ON THE WEATHER. THE FIRST BATCH OF ~~XXX~~ COPY TO LEAVE BELGRADE CAME ON THE SAME PLANE THAT I TOOK TO RETURN TO ITALY. THIS WAS FIVE DAYS AFTER WE ARRIVED IN BELGRADE

~~XXXXXX~~ I FILED MY STORIES FROM ITALY. THESE INCLUDED A STORY ON YUGOSLAV CENSORSHIP REGULATIONS WHICH THE YUGOSLAV CENSORS HAD KILLED IN BELGRADE. THEY WANTED ME TO QUOTE THE COMPLET REGULATIONS OF MILITARY CENSORSHIP, INCLUDING THE BAN ON~~E~~ WRITING ANYTHING ABOUT "MILITARY SECRETS." THE STORY I FILED FROM ITALY WAS CONFINED TO WHAT I CONSIDERED THE NEWSWORTHY POINTS OF THE BAN ON DISPATCHES ~~B~~ BELITTLING THE "ACHIEVEMENTS" OF THE NATIONAL LIBERATION STRUGGLE.

I FOUND YUGOSLAV CENSORSHIP INEXPERIENCED, SLOW AND JUMPY~~X~~ IN ONE STORY I WROTE IN BELGRADE, THE YUGOSLAV CENSOR KILLED A SECTION IN WHICH I SA~~I~~ SIXTEEN WOMEN APPROACHED ME AND TWO COLLEAGUES IN THE STREET AND TOLD US THEY WERE UNABLE TO FIND ANYONE WHO WOULD TELL THEM HOW THEY COULD VISIT RELATIVES WHO HAD BEEN IMPRISONED SINCE THE CAPITAL HAD BEEN LIBERATED.

ALL COPY SUBMITTED TO THE YUGOSLAV CENSOR HAD TO BE TRANSLATED BY HIS TAFF BEFORE IT WAS PASSED UPON. THIS CAUSED DELAYS OF TWO AND EVEN THREE DAYS. THE YUGOSLAVS APPEARED TO BE UNPREPARED TO HANDLE THE COPY OF ~~X~~ WHOLE PARTY OF CORRESPONDENTS WHICH DESCENDED ON THEM. APPARENTLY NO DETAILED ARRANGEMENTS HAD BEEN MADE TO RECEIVE US, ALTHOUGH WE HAD TO BE APPROVED BEFORE LEAVING ITALY.

BY LEIF ERICKSON

PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR, NOV.27-(AP)-THE VALIANT BUT FUTILE FIGHT TO SAVE THE USS PRINCETON AFTER SHE WAS SET AFIRE BY A JAPANESE BOMB WAS RELATED AT A PRESS CONFERENCE TODAY BY CAPT.WILLIAM H.BURACKER, SKIPPER OF THE LIGHT CARRIER WHICH CRAMMED A BRILLIANT ACTION RECORD INTO HER SHORT LIFE OF 21 MONTHS.

THE PRINCETON WAS HIT AT 9:30 A.M. OCT.24 ABOUT 150 MILES EAST OF MANILA BY A BOMB DROPPED BY A JAPANESE PLANE MAKING A SNEAK ATTACK OUT OF A SQUALL CLOUD. NEARLY EIGHT AND A HALF HOURS LATER, CRIPPLED BY BLASTS OF HER OWN TORPEDOES AND A MAGAZINE EXPLOSION, THE PRINCETON WAS SUNK BY TORPEDOES FIRED BY AMERICAN DESTROYERS THAT HAD BEEN TRYING TO SAVE HER.

CAPTAIN BURBACKER, WHOSE WIFE AND TWO DAUGHTERS LIVE AT (94 CHURCH ST.) WINCHESTER,MASS., SAID THAT AT FIRST HE DIDN'T BELIEVE THE DAMAGE WAS SERIOUS, BUT THAT HALF AN HOUR AFTER THE BOMB HIT TORPEDOES STARTED EXPLODING IN THE PRINCETON'S HANGAR. THE FIRE BUILT UP QUICKLY AMONG THE GAS-LOADED PLANES.

BY 10:30 A.M. ENGINE ROOM SPACES HAD TO BE SECURED BECAUSE SMOKE WAS TOO THICK FOR ENGINEERING PERSONNEL TO STAY BELOW. WITH THIS THE PRINCETON LOST ALL WATER PRESSURE FOR FIGHTING THE FIRE WITH HER OWN HOSE LINES.

THE CRUISER, BIRMINGHAM, AND THE DESTROYER MORRISON CAME ALONGSIDE WITH THEIR HOSE LINES, THE FIRE WAS DRIVEN DOWN AND CONFINED ON AN AFTER SECTION OF THE HANGAR DECK, BURBACKER SAID.

NOV 28 1944

"WE HAD THE FIRE ALMOST OUT AND I WAS SURE I WAS GOING TO BRING THE SHIP HOME," BURBACKER SAID. THEN ABOUT 1:30 P.M. CAME A WARNING THAT ENEMY PLANES WERE APPROACHING AND JAPANESE SUBMARINE HAD BEEN DETECTED. THE BIRMINGHAM AND THE MORRISON HAD TO CAST LOOSE SO THEY WOULDN'T BE CAUGHT DEAD IN THE WATER BY AN AIR ATTACK.

THIS AIR ATTACK DOOMED THE PRINCETON, ALTHOUGH NONE OF THE PLANES GOT THROUGH TO THE CARRIER. THE FIRE BUILT UP AGAIN.

WHEN THE AIR ALERT WAS OVER, BURBACKER AGAIN ASKED THE BIRMINGMAM AND THE MORRISON TO RETURN ALONGSIDE WITH THEIR HOSE LINES. HE STILL WAS CERTAIN HE COULD SAVE HIS SHIP.

BUT AS THE BIRMINGHAM CLOSED ON THE PRINCETON, AN AUXILIARY BOMB MAGAZINE AFT ON THE MAIN DECK BLEW UP.

"IT WAS A TERRIBLE EXPLOSION, THE MOST VIOLENT OF THE DAY," BURACKER SAID. "IT WAS JUST AS SURPRISING AS IT WAS TERRIFYING.

BURACKER (CQT) GAVE ORDERS TO ABANDON SHIP AND PROCEEDED TO THE CRUISER RENO AND AT 5:50 P.M. THE TASK GROUP COMMANDER ORDERED THE PRINCETON SUNK.

WITH BURACKER AMIDSHIPS WHEN THE MAGAZINE WENT UP WAS CAPT.JOHN HOSKINS, BETHESDA, MD., WHO SOON WAS TO RELIEVE BURACKER AS THE PRINCETON'S SKIPPER. AND CMDR.ROLAND O.SALA, 1907 FIFTH AVE., ROCK ISLAND ILL., THE SHIP'S MEDICAL OFFICER.

BURACKER HEARD A CALL, "STAND BY FOR CAPTAIN HOSKINS. HE'S BADLY HURT."

BURACKER TURNED AND SAW HOSKIN'S RIGHT LEG "WAS HANGING BY A THREAD." HE YELLED FOR THE DOCTOR. COMMANDER SALA, HURT HIMSELF, HAD REACHED THE FORECASTLE WITHOUT KNOWING HOW HE GOT THERE. WHEN HE REACHED HOSKINS, THE CAPTAIN HIMSELF HAD FOUND A LINE AND TIGHTENED A TOURNIQUET AROUND HIS LEG.

WITH A SHEATH KNIFE, DR.SALA FINISHED A ROUGH AMPUTATION OF HOSKIN'S LEG AND GAVE HIM SULFA AND MORPHONE.

AMAZINGLY, WHEN CAPTAIN BURACHER AT 4:40 P.M. GAVE THEORDER TO ABANDON SHIP, CAPTAIN HOSKINS WAS THE ONLY STRETCHER CASE WHO HAD TO BE LOWERED OVER THE SIDE. MANY HAD BEEN HURT, BUT NOT MANY SERIOUSLY. TEN OFFICERS AND 98 MEN WERE LOST.

NOV 28 1944

BURACKER SAID HE LATER SAW CAPTAIN HOSKINS IN A NAVY HOSPITAL, AND SAID HE WAS MAKING A FINE RECOVERY.

-0-

BY COINCIDENCE THE VESSEL HAD TWO SKIPPERS AT THE TIME SHE WAS SUNK. CAPT. JOHN M. HOSKINS, 46, WAS ABOARD TO TAKE OVER COMMAND OF THE SHIP, BUT HAD NOT YET DONE SO WHEN THE CARRIER MADE HER LAST FIGHT. CAPT. HOSKINS LOST HIS RIGHT FOOT IN THE BATTLE AND IS NOW IN THE PHILADELPHIA NAVAL HOSPITAL.

THE NAVY IN WASHINGTON SAID THAT CAPT. BURACKER WAS THE SHIP'S COMMANDER DURING THE BATTLE.

X X X [redacted]." HUMAN (MONTGOMERY)

AFTER A WEEK-END OF DEMONSTRATIONS AGAINST CONSCRIPTION STAGED IN THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC WHERE THE FRENCH-SPEAKING POPULATION HAS AN HISTORIC TRADITION OF OPPOSITION TO CONSCRIPTION FOR FIGHTING ABROAD, AND IN BRITISH COLUMBIA, WHERE 25,000 HOME SERVICE DRAFTEES ARE STATIONED, THE DOMINION WAS RELATIVELY QUIET TODAY.

IT IS FROM AMONG THESE HOME SERVICE DRAFTEES THAT THE GOVERNMENT

IN ITS NEW POLICY IS TO DISPATCH AN INITIAL 16,000 INFANTRY REINFORCEMENTS TO BOLSTER CANADA'S LINES ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

KING REVIEWED THE ENTIRE COURSE OF THE CONSCRIPTION ISSUE SINCE THE BEGINNING OF THE WAR FIVE YEARS AGO. HE SAID THAT AT FIRST ALL PARTIES WERE AGREED THERE SHOULD BE NO CONSCRIPTION FOR SERVICE ABROAD; THAT CONDITIONS CHANGED WITH THE FALL OF FRANCE; THAT THE GOVERNMENT WON THE RIGHT TO INVOKE CONSCRIPTION FOR SERVICE ABROAD IF NECESSARY IN THE PLEBISCITE OF 1942; AND THAT IN THE PAST FEW DAYS SWIFT-MOVING EVENTS HAD MADE IT NECESSARY AND ADVISABLE TO ADOPT ITS "LIBERAL MEASURE OF CONSCRIPTION."

THE PLEBISCITE, THE PRIME MINISTER STRESSED, WAS NOT A "MANDATE" TO INVOKE CONSCRIPTION. THE QUESTION UPON WHICH THE PEOPLE VOTED WAS WHETHER THE GOVERNMENT SHOULD BE FREED FROM "ANY PAST COMMITMENTS RESTRICTING THE METHODS OF RAISING MEN FOR MILITARY SERVICE." THE VOTE WAS NEARLY 3,000,000 "YES," APPROXIMATELY 1,000,000 "NO," THE OUTCOME SHARPLY DIVIDED ALONG RACIAL LINES.

NOV 28 1944

QUEBEC, WHICH VOTED MORE THAN 70 PER CENT "NO" -- INCLUDING A LARGE "YES" VOTE IN ENGLISH-SPEAKING SECTIONS OF MONTREAL-- HAS ALWAYS MAINTAINED THAT IT HAS NEVER RELEASED THE GOVERNMENT FROM ITS EARLY COMMITMENTS AGAINST CONSCRIPTION FOR OVERSEAS.

KING DECLARED THAT AS A RESULT OF THE "ORGANIZED" UNREST CREATED OVER THE CONSCRIPTION ISSUE, A "VERY SERIOUS CONDITION" HAD ARISEN, AND HE ADDED THAT THE "METHODS" OF THE UNREST FOMENTERS WOULD BE "EXPOSED" LATER.

THE PRIME MINISTER DECLARED THAT A GENERAL ELECTION AT THIS STAGE OF THE WAR ON A CONSCRIPTION ISSUE, WOULD BE A GREAT AND "CRUEL" BLOW TO CANADIAN UNITY, AND THAT HE WOULD SEEK TO AVOID IT, BUT HE ALSO DECLARED THAT IF HIS RESIGNATION WERE FORCED BY A LACK OF CONFIDENCE, DISSOLUTION OF PARLIAMENT AND THE NECESSARY ELECTIONS WOULD FOLLOW.

NOV 28 1944

MAJ.C.J.POWER, SPEAKING ON HIS RESIGNATION AS AIR MINISTER IN PROTEST AGAINST THE NEW POLICY OF CONSCRIPTION FOR OVERSEAS DUTY, TOLD THE HOUSE OF COMMONS TODAY THAT ALTHOUGH GENERAL EISENHOWER'S STRATEGY REQUIRED REPLACEMENT OF CASUALTIES WITHIN 24 HOURS, "NEITHER ULTIMATE VICTORY NOR NATIONAL HONOR REQUIRE THAT CANADIAN TROOPS SHOULD BE IN ACTION EVERY HOUR OR EVERY DAY."

HE ASSERTED THAT THE NEW POLICY "MIGHT VERY EASILY MAKE FOR MORE" CASUALTIES BECAUSE "NO COMMANDER WILL TAKE HIS EXPERIENCED MEN OUT OF THE UNIT AND UNDERTAKE AN ENGAGEMENT WITH ONLY THE NEWLY-ARRIVED, HOWEVER WELL TRAINED THEY MAY BE."

POWER SPOKE AFTER KING HAD ANNOUNCED ACCEPTANCE OF HIS RESIGNATION.

AT THE CONCLUSION OF KING'S THREE-HOUR SPEECH, REPRESENTATIVES OF THE PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE AND THE COOPERATIVE COMMONWEALTH FEDERATION PARTIES ADVOCATED TOTAL CONSCRIPTION FOR OVERSEAS SERVICE.

NOV 28 1944

GORDON GRAYDON, PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE HOUSE LEADER, ALSO URGED THAT KING'S REFERENCE TO "ANARCHY" BE EXPUNGED FROM THE RECORD AS IT WAS LIKELY TO BE MISUNDERSTOOD.

GRAYDON MOVED AN AMENDMENT TO THE GOVERNMENT CONFIDENCE MOTION, ASKING THAT THE HOUSE DECLARE THE GOVERNMENT HAD FAILED TO OBTAIN REINFORCEMENTS IN SUFFICIENT NUMBER BY NOT

REINFORCEMENTS IN SUFFICIENT NUMBER BY NOT MAKING ALL THE 60,000 DRAFTEE EFFECTIVES AVAILABLE FOR OVERSEAS SERVICE AND HAD FAILED TO SECURE EQUALITY OF SERVICE AND SACRIFICE.

M.J.COLDWELL, C.C.F.LEADER, MOVED A FURTHER AMENDMENT, [illegible] 1944 ASKING THAT ALL DISTINCTION BETWEEN DRAFTED AND VOLUNTEER PERSONNEL IN THE ARMY BE REMOVED AND THAT THERE BE TOTAL CONSCRIPTION OF RESOURCES, FINANCIAL AND MATERIAL AS WELL AS HUMAN.

AFTER GEN.ANDREW G.L.MCNAUGHTON TOOK OVER AS DEFENSE MINISTER NOV. 2 HE BEGAN TO APPEAL TO HOME DEFENSE TROOPS TO GO OVERSEAS, HE SAID BUT THE APPEAL DID NOT RECEIVE THE SUPPORT IT SHOULD HAVE RECEIVED.

AGREEMENT FINALLY WAS REACHED, KING SAID, ON AN ORDER-IN-COUNCIL TO SEE THAT THE MEN OVERSEAS WERE GUARANTEED REINFORCEMENTS OF TRAINED MEN, MAKING POSSIBLE THE SENDING OVERSEAS OF 16,000 MEN FROM THE HOME DEFENSE ARMY OF 65,000.

KING SAID HE WOULD NOT SEEK TO CARRY ON "ONE MOMENT" IF THE GOVERNMENT HAD NOT THE CONFIDENCE OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR DECIDING WHETHER THE GOVERNMENT CARRIED ON NOW RESTED ON THE MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE.

NOV 28 1944

"FURTHERMORE," SAID MR.KING, "I AM NOT GOING TO ATTEMPT TO CARRY ON ALONE WITH THE SUPPORT OF THE GROUPS OPPOSITE. IF I DON'T HAVE A SUFFICIENT GROUP OF MY OWN PARTY ON WHICH I CAN RELY I WILL NOT CARRY ON."

Ninth Army Seizes Three Towns on West Bank of Roer River.

NOV 29 1944

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Nov. 28.—(AP) The U. S. Third army broke into the rich Saar basin along a new seven-mile front today and a full-scale battle at the Siegfried Line appeared near as three main fortress cities of Saarbrucken, Saarlautern and Merzig were brought within American artillery range.

To the north the U. S. Ninth army seized three towns on the west banks of the flooded Roer and Inde rivers, closing in on the stronghold of Julich from three directions, while the U. S. First army squeezed closer to Duren, another barrier to the Cologne plain.

Fighters Support Troops

As the hard-working U. S. First and Ninth army battle teams fought deeper into the enemy's tough Roer river line, hundreds of fighter-bombers roared out in close support of the ground forces.

Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third army, in gains totaling seven miles, lengthened its holding inside Germany to a front of 26 miles.

The newest gains placed Third army troops within three and a half miles of Saarlautern and within eight and a half miles of Saarbrucken. They previously were reported within two miles of Merzig.

A front dispatch from Lewis Hawkins, Associated Press correspondent, said some prisoners reported non-essential civilians already had been evacuated from the three cities, as well as from the French border cities of Sarreguemines and Forbach.

NOV 29 1944

It was the fast-rolling 95th Division which lunged across the German frontier as far as Duren, ten miles south of Merzig, and Berus, three miles farther southeast. Both are a mile inside the border.

At the same time, the 90th Division moved up to the Saar border at a new quarter—beyond Guerstling, eight miles southwest of Merzig.

Nazis Stiffen in South

German resistance stiffened along the northern edge of the Allies' Saverne-Strasbourg corridor, but the 15th corps on the Seventh army's left flank pushed northward two miles and captured Weinburg and Weitersweiler, ten miles northwest of Saverne.

Seventh army patrols probing the area of Kreigsheim and Weitbruch, about three miles south of Hagenau and 13 miles north of Strasbourg, found strong enemy defense.

In the Bonhomme pass, Lt. Gen. Jacob L. Devers' troops advanced to within 11 miles of Colmar, by generous use of artillery and fields in the high passes of the southern Vosges indicated the enemy intends to defend that area to the last in order to get as many troops as possible out of the Vosges pocket and across the Rhine.

From north to south, the continuing heavy offensive against the Reich brought these developments:

The Ninth army completed capture of Kirchberg on the west bank of the flooded Roer less than a mile from Julich, and Altdorf on the south. Koslar and Merzenhausen were being cleaned out despite fierce German tank counter-attacks.

The Doughboys in Kirchberg and Barmen had to wade through knee-deep water from the flooded Roer. They captured an entire German battalion and its headquarters in the outskirts of Merzenhausen. American artillery virtually wiped out another entire German battalion which tried to counter-attack in the early morning moonlight.

The fighting was along and on both sides of one of Hitler's superhighways leading almost due east to Cologne, 24 airline miles distant.

Yanks Enter Jungersdorf

A half-dozen miles south, the U. S. First Army doughboys pushed east astride another of the Nazis' prized motor routes, fighting their way into Jungersdorf, only four miles from Duren, in three-pronged assault that carried another mile and a quarter into the Roer river defenses where the Germans are making an all-out stand.

First Army troops also slugged into Inden on the Inde river three miles from the Roer and midway between Duren and Julich. They were closing in on Lamersdorf, on the Inde between Inden and newly-captured Frenz.

All these stern battles were not to be measured in terms of miles or yards gained, and Gen. Eisenhower's aim was to destroy the German army, which has elected to fight it out west of the Rhine river.

The Third army, however, continued to score notable advances. Its 95th Division plunged over the German border from the vicinity of Villing in a two-mile advance that carried a mile inside Germany and three and one-half miles from Saarlautern.

This penetration, south of the previous Third Army invasions of German soil, gave Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's men a 26-mile front inside the Reich and control of something more than 40 square miles of German territory.

Still farther down the front, the Fourth Armored division extended its bridgehead across the Saar river another two miles northward and sent reconnaissance units into Sarrewerden, one and one-half miles south of the city of Sarre union. In that same sector on the Third army's southern flank the 26th infantry division had virtually cleared the Bois de Fontaine and enveloped Wolfskirchen.

Nazis Retreat in Saar

A military commentator on the Berlin radio announced that the Germans were in retreat near Saar union and towards the Rhine southeast of Hagenau.

"German rear guards are safeguarding the withdrawal of the German troops against the right wing of the Third army and the left wing of the Seventh American army," he said, but contended the new German positions still would be some distance below the Reich frontier in those areas.

In the Sixth army group sector action flared along a 40-mile front from north of Sarrebourg to north of Strasbourg. Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's American Seventh army there took several unidentified villages in a push eastward while the French First army to the south beat back German counter-attacks.

Troops of that army group were patrolling a four-mile stretch along the Rhine north of Fort Hoche.

Supreme headquarters in Paris denied reports emanating from Switzerland that American parachutists had landed in Germany on that front and attacked a German feeder railway between Lake Constance and Loerrach.

Both Supreme headquarters and the French war ministry expressed surprise over other reports that French forces had crossed the Rhine three miles north of Strasbourg. The French war ministry denied the reports categorically.

American Ninth Army Reaches the Roer—German Forces Retreat in France—Enemy Is Using Reserves.

NOV 29 1944

London, Nov. 28 (A. P.).—Infantry units of the Third United States Army today thrust within eight and a half miles of Saarbrucken, arsenal capital of the Saar, while their comrades to the north reached the River Roer and punched deeper into the German defenses guarding Cologne.

Simultaneously with the advance on Saarbrucken, other Third Army units cut into Germany at a new point along a seven-mile front, thrusting to within three and a half miles of Saarlautern. This fresh invasion gave Lieut.-Gen. Patton's men a twenty-six-mile front inside the Reich, and control of more than forty square miles of Germany.

The Ninth Army reached the Roer at Kirchberg, twenty-three miles from Cologne and less than a mile across the Roer from Julich.

Fairly clear skies allowed planes to attack tanks and artillery positions all along the critical eighteen-mile front before Cologne between Linnich and Duren. They struck farther back on the Cologne Plain, shooting up trains and fortified houses. The town of Pier was set afire.

The battle aim of Gen. Eisenhower was the destruction of the German Army, and his counter-part, Marshal von Rundstedt, was forced to commit new reserves in the last twenty-four hours. Probably eight or nine tank divisions are bracing the enemy lines in the Cologne Plain sector.

Meanwhile, Nazi forces were reported by the Berlin radio to be in retreat tonight in areas both north and south of Strasbourg, on the southern end of the line.

Between the Ninth and Third armies, First Army infantry of Lieut.-Gen. Courtney H. Hodges fought into the streets of Inden and Jungersdorf and close to Lamersdorf. Other First Army troops won two-thirds of Langerwehe, last important enemy communications point west of the Roer. German defenses in that village five miles from Duren appeared to be breaking up. Planes attacked the eastern exits while infantry fought through. Other men of the First Army fought in the streets of Grosshau and for the last third of the forest town of Hurtgen.

Third Army Advances.

The Third Army advanced closest to Saarbrucken at captured Seingbousse to the southwest. Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's men gained two to four miles, broadening their battle positions close to the German frontier.

The German radio said that both the Third and Seventh armies were pushing forces into the Saar from a French triangle along the Rhine southeast of Hagenau and north of Strasbourg.

Nazis Retreat in Saar Sector.

Germans between the Saar coal canal near Saar Union and the Rhine, southeast of Hagenau, are retreating, the German military commentator Ludwig Sertorius said.

"German rearguards are safeguarding the withdrawal of the German troops against the right wing of the Third Army and the left wing of the Seventh American Army," the enemy commentator said. "The Germans are withdrawing to newly prepared positions which should be a good way south of the frontier."

A French broadcast asserting that French units of the American Seventh Army had crossed the Rhine north of Strasbourg had no confirmation.

Below Strasbourg, the Seventh and French First armies were consolidating and cleaning out the Vosges Mountains and Alsace Plain. The German radio announced wholesale retreats both north and south of the city.

28 Rhine Bridges Still Intact.

"Relentless enemy pressure south of the Rhine-Rhone Canal has led to a planned withdrawal to shorten our lines," Berlin said of the flight from the pocket south of Strasbourg.

Major-Gen. Ralph Royce, commander of the American First Tactical Air Force, said twenty-eight Rhine bridges were available to the Germans between Strasbourg and Switzerland, and that at least ten were pontoons which could be replaced in twenty-four hours. This refuted recent Army inelligence reports that only three permanent bridges were available at Strasbourg along with three more pontoons between there and Basle.

Bulk of Nazis Before Cologne.

British on the north cleared a pocket north of Venlo and again felt out the maze of defenses before that Dutch road center.

Germany had the bulk of her forces and her precious mobile reserves deployed on the Cologne Plain. Advances accordingly were slow, for the fight there was a great battle of attrition, and Gen. Eisenhower's maximum objective was to destroy the German Army.

The massing of German strength on an eighteen-mile sector beyond Aachen weakened the enemy before the Saar, rich in coal and steel, and it was here that Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton threw his Third Army at this gateway into Germany. The Seventh Army in part joined the Third in this offensive north of Saarebourg.

The 80th Infantry of Major-Gen. Horace L. McBride advanced three and a half miles, capturing seingbousse, ten miles southwest of Saarbrucken, city of 135,000. the 95th Division of Major-Gen. Harry L. Twaddle moved within five miles of Saarlautern on the frontier.

Seventh Pursues Nazis.

The Third Army moved well beyond the captured road town of St. Avold and swept toward the German border along the entire Lorraine front, while exerting steady pressure on the nineteen-mile sector inside the Reich beyond Luxembourg.

The Seventh Army of Lieut.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch, its flanks secured by a breakthrough to the Rhine, sent tanks chasing withdrawing Germans above Saarebourg. The Germans were under terrible pressure as they retreated toward the refuge of the Siegfried Line.

German concern for safety of the Saar was reflected in a Berlin broadcast which assessed this front second only to that beyond Aachen. The Saar, after the Ruhr and Silesia, is Germany's third largest producer of coal and steel.

At places, the Third Army was at the outer works of the Siegfried Line. At many points, the Americans were under the guns of those enemy positions. And at many others, they were through the old French Maginot Line, many of whose forts were built on eastern slopes of hills making reversal of guns impossible.

The Third passed Hombourg, eleven miles southwest of Saarbrucken and seven miles southwest of the French frontier town of Forbach. Hagenau, where railroads lead from the extreme east of France to Karlsruhe and Neustadt, was threatened.

The Ninth Army fighting for the ruins of Julich cleared Kirchberg "rather easily," an official report said. Fighting progressed in nearby Koslar. The Germans were tossed from Merzenhausen again, and two counter-attacks were repelled.

Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges's 1st Army advanced a mile and reached Inden. Another attack was directed toward Lamersdorf, just south of Inden. Still another force pushed into Jungersdorf, half a mile south of Langerwehe.

The 7th Army widened the corridor to Strasbourg through the Saverne Gap to about twenty miles and overran about 300 square miles of forest from which the Germans had withdrawn. The juncture between the 7th and 3d armies was effected by the capture of Mutzig and Molsheim, ten miles west of Strasbourg.

The French 1st Army improved its positions north of Belfort. It captured Rimback and numerous other villages, and took 1,000 prisoners. Two bridges across the Rhine near Colmar were reported to have been destroyed yesterday.

3d-Army Front 60 Miles

A front-line dispatch said that along a 60-mile front running southeastward from the Luxembourg border the United States 3d Army is either inside Germany or not more than 16 miles from the border. In twenty days the 3d Army has liberated more than 1,300 square miles of France. No more than 350 square miles of French territory remain in front of its advancing divisions.

American heavy bombers, giving United States 7th Army troops close support for the first time, hit the railyards at Offenburg, ten miles southeast of Strasbourg, yesterday.

'Chutist Move Reported

A Swiss dispatch said Allied parachute troops had landed in the upper Wutach Valley of Germany behind the Siegfried Line with the aim of destroying the strategic railroad from Donaueschingen to Waldshut.

A force of 1,000 RAF heavy bombers last night hammered Freiburg and Neuss. Freiburg, east of Colmar, is a railroad center and advance supply base for German troops battling the French 1st Army at the extreme southern end of the front. Neuss, west of Dusseldorf, is a German supply point for the northern end of the front.

Drank Rain Water and Treated Wounded With Blood Dropped to Them by Cub Planes

ENGELSDORF, Germany, Nov. 28 (AP)—Drinking rain water and treating their wounds with blood plasma dropped to them from Cub planes, two Ninth Army infantry companies, cut off from their battalion for two days and nights, held out heroically against superior German forces until another battalion fought its way to nearby Koslar and rescued them last night.

In the absence of medical air men, the GI's, suffering from painful trenchfoot, bandaged each other's wounds with first-aid kits and administered plasma themselves.

"One boy was pretty badly off and plasma pulled him through," said Capt. Daniel Keyes of Concord, Mass., commander of one of the companies.

Lieut. Col. Sidney Bingham of Dallas, Tex., battalion commander, said the companies attacked Koslar, fifteen miles northeast of Aachen, early Saturday even though there were tremendous odds against them from the start.

"They had trenchfoot from walking through water a foot deep for a whole week," he said. "They were covered with mud and few of their weapons fired properly.

"They got into the town by sheer main strength, barreling in like a football team and hurdling trenches on the outskirts.

"There were just too many Nazis in the town for them, but no one knew this in advance."

The big factor in enabling the besieged companies to avoid capture or annihilation was the excellent artillery support directed by Lieut. Emmett House of Atlanta, Ga., by radio, the only means of communication they had with their own lines.

"He put our men in cellars and brought down artillery fire all around us, keeping the Jerries back," said Captain Keyes. "Even while observing, he shot a Jerry with his pistol."

The radio started to weaken, but the Cubs dropped radio batteries and ammunition in addition to the plasma.

"We were running low on ammunition and had to count our shots for a while," Captain Keyes said.

Typical of the way they made every bullet count was the feat of Pvt. Robert Sanderson of Hillside, N. J., who, sniping from an attic, got three Germans with three shots.

They also shot up a couple of companies of Nazis preparing to make a counter-attack on their own battalion.

They had some nervous moments when a monst[illegible] Tiger tank and German infa[illegible]ttacked them.

Postman Escapes From Blazing Trap After Hiding Under Noses of Germans Who Captured His Command Post.

An American Regimental Command Post, Near Saverne, France, Nov. 28 (A. P.).—A hair-raising experience befell Major Edward Buschkamper, who was trapped for two days behind the enemy lines during the German armored attack which attempted to cut the Allies' Saverne corridor to the Rhine.

Major Buschkamper, a 28-year-old battalion commander, was rescued yesterday when troops of the 44th Division recaptured Rauwiller to halt the Nazi attack five miles short of Sarrebourg. He is a former New York letter carrier whose route was in Harlem. His wife lives at 37 Thompson avenue, White Plains.

The Germans overran his command post, which was a house in Rauwiller, early last Friday morning, killing, wounding or taking prisoner his six officers and twenty men after attacking the house with machine-guns and tanks. For the next forty-eight hours he hid in the attic of the house after the Germans had occupied it. To escape he had to dash through flames when the Germans eventually set the structure afire.

Looked Out at Tanks.

Once out of the burning house he had to pass through an adjacent barn where the ammunition the Germans captured from the Americans was exploding in the fire, then crawl for two hours on his stomach through the mud toward his own lines.

He had only a third of a day's rations and one and a half hours of sleep in two days. He hadn't slept much in the attic because of the Germans' noisy snoring on the floor below him.

The major and his men moved into Rauwiller at 2 A. M. last Friday. At about 6 A. M. he glanced out the window, and, he continued: "There smack in front of us were three Tiger tanks. I went up the stairs and looked out the back window and there were forty Germans looting our trucks.

"I looked out the window where the tanks were and seventy-five more Germans were coming down the road. Then I he[illegible] a rifle shot downstairs. On[illegible] our men must have fired. All bro[illegible] loose. The Germans opened up with machine guns and backed the Tigers up fifteen yards and then let go with their tank guns. I didn't like the sounds I heard then among our men downstairs."

At this point in the story Capt. John Rogers of Bloomfield, N. J., broke in with: "Back here at Regimental Headquarters we got a radio message from one of Ed's men that tanks were setting outside their windows. It so happened that a battalion was going up that road out there, so we notified them that help was coming."

"Yeah, up there in the attic I heard two attacks launched against the town and knew help was coming," Major Buschkamper said.

"We were on the outskirts of the town making one of those attacks and we almost got cut off, too," said Pvt. Alton Hornshu of Halletville, Tex.

Among those in the anti-tank company making this attack, which was subjected to a German counter-thrust of flame-throwers, was Sergt. Alfred Midence of Elmhurst, Queens.

Still reconnoitering, Major Buschkamper went up to the attic of the house and then heard the Germans entering and taking his men prisoner.

"There was a little stone smokehouse in the attic with meat inside," the major said. "It had stone walls five or six inches thick, but I didn't want to get in there, for I figured if the Germans came up the first thing they would do would be to open the door and I would be caught like a rat."

So he climbed to the top of the smokehouse and wedged himself in among some debris, which was "the ordinary kind of junk you throw in an attic."

"And half an hour later three Germans came up to the attic," he said. "The first thing they did was open the door and look into

Whole Town Ablaze.

This was about 6 A. M. on Friday. The Germans made the house their headquarters, so all that day and night and all the next day Major Buschkamper lay cramped in his hideout, with the Germans on the floor below him and battles raging on the village's outskirts.

"I must have dozed off," he said, "for I woke up on Saturday night and found the attic full of smoke."

He got down to the second floor all right, but the staircase to the first floor was burning. So he wet a handkerchief from his canteen, tied it over his face and dashed down through the flames. He saw that the whole town was ablaze, then made his way through the back door leading into the barn.

He had to run a gantlet of exploding ammunition to the outside and then, even though the barn was ablaze, he hugged its shadows.

"I knew I'd have to pass through their lines to get out, so I started crawling. The fires made it bright as daylight. I would crawl five minutes and then stop, listen and pray."

After two hours he saw two figures dash by fifty yards away. Then he saw them coming back, he took a chance and shouted. They answered "Friend," so he knew he was finally among Americans again and safe.

Ordered To Leave Luxurious Dugout

With the AEF on the Western Front, Nov. 24 [AP—Delayed]—There's a rumor in the 216th Field Artillery that its commander, Lieut. Col. K. H. Reed, of Horton, Kan., has a sense of humor which sometimes is not entirely shared by some of his men.

Not long ago he was inspecting a bivouac only a few hundred yards from the German lines, and discovered that a group of his artillerymen showed an amazing amount of ingenuity in improvising the comforts of home.

He found one dugout heated with an old stove. Electricity was obtained by tapping the command post generator, and desks and shelves had been built in. Entertainment was provided by a telephone wire hookup to the CP radio. There also was a slightly primitive but completely hygienic plumbing system. Proudly the men put on the finishing touches to their front-line home under the hill while the colonel watched with parental approval.

"Boys," he said, "I want to compliment you on your skill, ambition and ingenuity. I also want to tell you that we have received orders to move within an hour."

BELGIAN-PROTEST CLASH REPORTED

Tension Mounts On Eve Of General Strike Set For Today

NOV 29 1944

British Ambassador Lord Acheson is reported to veto appointment of Count Sforza as Italian Premier or Foreign Minister..... Page 2

Brussels, Nov. 28 (AP)—Tension mounted hourly tonight on the eve of the "National Day of Protest" as marching columns of demonstrators from all parts of the country approached the capital.

Inside the city the crisis seemed to have eased as a scheduled demonstration in the vicinity of the Chamber of Deputies failed to materialize after Premier Hubert Pierlot told Parliament in one of his strongest speches that it should be banned.

The first clashes between the police and the demonstrators marching toward the capital from the provinces were reported to have flared on the road from Ath to Brussels this morning. Eyewitnesses told of hearing gunfire, but said they raced by without stopping to get details.

General Strike Set For Today

A general strike is scheduled to take place tomorrow, with Communists, who are roughly 40,000 strong in the resistance movement, insisting on complete paralyzation of the nation's industrial and economic life until the Pierlot regime falls. Other resistance factions, estimated at 70,000 members, however, have called for the strike to last one day and no more.

As a general alert went into effect, the city appeared calm late tonight. Great crowds lined up at streetcar stops waiting for transportation home, but, although today's tram strike had petered out, there were few cars running.

Chamber Votes Confidence

The Chamber of Deputies gave Pierlot a vote of confidence today while British tanks stood guard outside the building.

Repeatedly interrupted by cheers, Pierlot told the Chamber his Government would not step down in the face of demonstrations.

A short time later the deputies approved by a vote of 116 to 12 the Pierlot measure granting the premier extraordinary powers in this time of crisis.

As the chamber assembled, street car workers struck, demanding the resignation of the Pierlot government, but the communications ministry announced the walkout had ended after communications throughout Brussels were paralyzed during the morning.

"The strike was more in the nature of a demonstration to call attention to dissatisfaction with food and coal shortages than a strike," a communications official said.

Despite the easing of tension in the capital, columns of marchers were reported moving on Brussels for a "national day of protest" tomorrow against Pierlot's regime.

Steel-helmeted British troops moved out of the Capital intent on disarming one column of 600 marchers coming up north from Mons and first reports said 200 persons yielded their arms without a struggle.

The morning street car strike put Brussels afoot. Motormen, conductors, trackmen and repairmen quit. Since taxis were reserved for official use and private automobiles have no gasoline, the lucky ones were those who had hidden their bicycles from the Germans.

Pierlot declared in the Chamber that a demonstration set for tonight by the Communist newspaper, Le Drapeau Rouge, would be prohibited.

Steps also will be taken against the newspaper, he said, unless it desists from provocative activities.

The crisis in the Pierlot government arose after a bloody street clash last Saturday between anti-government demonstrators and state police. Pierlot charged the demonstration was organized by a small minority, including Communists, who had "the childish ppe of seizing power."

STRIKE IS ABRUPTLY ENDED

Premier Bars Demonstration Set for Tonight and Threatens to Punish Red Newspaper.

Brussels, Nov. 28 (A. P.).—British tanks and steel-helmeted troops guarded the Belgian Parliament today as the Chamber of Deputies passed a vote of confidence in Premier Hubert Pierlot. The Chamber approved by 116 votes to 12 M. Pierlot's bill vesting him with extraordinary powers.

Just before the vote was announced M. Pierlot told the Chamber that his government would not resign in the face of demonstrations. He declared that a demonstration scheduled for tonight by Le Drapeau Rouge, the Communist newspaper, would be banned and that unless it refrained from provocative activities steps would be taken against the newspaper itself. Cheers several times interrupted his speech and afterward many members stood and applauded.

Street-car workers had struck several hours earlier, demanding the resignation of the Pierlot Government, and columns of marchers were reported converging on the tense capital to join in a "national day of protest" tomorrow against M. Pierlot's regime. British troops set out to disarm one column of 600 marchers from Mons, and first reports said that 200 persons of the Mons delegation had surrendered their arms without a struggle.

Meanwhile Brussels had only foot transportation because of the street car strike.

The Belgian State police reinforced the British Tommies on guard at the main approaches to a "neutral zone" around the Government buildings on the Rue de la Loi, scene of last Saturday's bloody clash between anti-Government demonstrators and the State troopers. Barbed-wire barricades were established, and the British troops set up machine guns at strategic points along the street.

Two Vichy Militia Members Executed

A third defendant in the Mandel slaying was given twenty years in prison. He pleaded he was not a member of the militia but acted only as a civilian chauffeur.

Report French Interned Wodehouse Is Denied

Paris, Nov. 28 (AP)—Both French officials and the British Embassy today denied a report attributed to the British Broadcasting Corporation that P. G. Wodehouse was being put in a French concentration camp.

The Police Judiciaire, which took the 63-year-old English novelist into custody last week on charges of pro-German activities, asserted that Wodehouse still is in a suburban clinic, where he is expected to stay until he and his wife find a new residence. He was released on condition that he live under surveillance outside Paris.

Wodehouse made five talks on the Berlin radio in 1941 while being held by the Germans, but he has denied any intent to disseminate German propaganda.

Thorez Back From Moscow

Paris, Nov. 28 (AP)—The Communist Leader Maurice Thorez arrived from Moscow today and scheduled a speech Thursday night. The Government recently granted him amnesty on charges of desertion dating from 1939, when he fled his army post to avoid arrest in a Communist roundup.

Occupied France Liked U. S. Book

Paris, Nov. 28 (AP)—Passed from hand to hand until the covers were torn and the pages dog-eared, sold "under the counter" for three and four times its original price, an American romantic novel of the Civil War was the most sought after book during the German occupation of France.

Worth 65 francs before the war, you were lucky to pick up a copy of "Gone With the Wind" for 500 francs. The story of Scarlett O'Hara became not only a best seller but a symbol of freedom. Germans were everywhere.

Privacy Only In Home

Only at home by his empty, cold fireside could a Frenchman be sure of privacy and escape from the Boche, lost in the escapist world of romance, in the story of somebody else's struggle for freedom.

Restrictions on paper, bans by the Germans on "undesirable" authors and the virtual cessation of cheap book publishing turned the book trade into the black market. Anything by Sinclair Lewis, Winston Churchill and Emil Ludwig reached peak prices, but anything by an American or British auther would sell.

Fabulous Paper Prices

During the occupation paper could be bought in the black market for fabulous prices. In order to exist, however, publishers had to print expensive, limited and luxury editions as the only way to make any money.

The French people, more used to cheap paper bindings than Americans or British, became ardent collectors of rare books.

YANK DESTROYERS SHELL ORMOC IN DARING ASSAULT

13 PLANES DOWNED

Rains Stall American Drive Leyte, Jap Attacks Hurled Back.

NOV 29 1944

GENERAL MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Wednesday, Nov. 29—(AP) Japanese torpedo and dive bombers swarmed down on American warships and transports at Leyte gulf Monday in the heaviest such raid since reinvasion of the Philippines and U. S. destroyers the same night negotiated treacherous waters to shell Ormoc in their first penetration of the Philippines inland sea.

The actions, on opposite sides of an island where storms stalemated the ground action, were announced today by Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Attack U. S. Battleships

The enemy planes, boring through intense ack ack from the warships, attacked units which included a battleship and unspecified damage was acknowledged.

The swift American destroyers, to get over to the west side of Leyte, had to pass through straits washing islands in the hands of the Japanese.

Dean Schedler, Associated Press war correspondent, who was aboard one of the destroyers, said the small force boldly shelled Ormoc from close range for three hours. They blasted enemy installations both in and around the vital town.

He reported the ships went through mined waters to carry out the dangerous assignment and got away without a scratch. Rain clouds acted as a shield.

The Nipponese raiders of Leyte gulf had to contend with stormy weather as well as anti-aircraft fire and interceptors. The raid cost the enemy 13 planes destroyed by ack-ack—a fine example of accurate fire by gun crews—and two by fighters. That amounted to half the attacking force.

Japanese planes also attacked targets throughout Leyte the same day.

The destroyer attack on Ormoc, the port into which the Japanese have been feeding reinforcements for the bitter draw out fight for west Leyte, was a daring enterprise.

(It probably entailed movement through the selfsame waters which Japanese fleet units found so perilous when they tried to slip into Leyte gulf by way of Surigao strait in one of three actions last October.)

American patrol torpedo boats have been operating in the Camotes sea off Ormoc but this was the first appearance of the destroyers.

Rains Stall Yanks

Incessant rains stalled Yanks forces operating north and south of Ormoc. The 32nd Infantry division which has pushed south from Carigara bay below Limon, more than 15 miles from Ormoc, sloshed around their mudholes, maintaining pressure on the enemy.

Along the single north-south road connecting Ormoc and Carigara bay, the Japanese counter attacked three times Monday night but were hurled back.

Today's communique reported the sinking of a 1,000 ton enemy frighter, destruction of a coastal vessel and damage of a second off Mindanao by aerial action. Another coastal vessel was damaged south of Luzon island.

In waters south of the Philippines, another enemy freighter probably was destroyed off Timor and a vessel of undesignated type was damaged off Borneo.

Blast Bases in Visayas

Army Liberators dropped 169 tons of bombs on two enemy air bases in the Visayas, which are islands near Leyte ringing the Visayan sea.

Enemy planes made a night raid on American-held Morotai 300 miles south of Mindanao, Southern Philippines, causing slight damage.

A field dispatch from Spencer Davis, AP War Correspondent with the U. S. 7th Infantry Division, said the Nipponese were constructing defenses along the Palanas river, 13 airline miles south of Ormoc, and reinforcing the front. The 7th has been advancing northward along the coast toward Ormoc and indications were that the enemy intended to make a stand on the Palanas river line.

The Palanas is one of numerous streams that run out of the coastal hills into Ormoc bay. Once the 7th cracks the Palanas line, it will have two more rivers to cross in the next four miles before reaching the narrow coastal plain leading northward to Ormoc.

Davis reported that troops of the Japanese 26th Division were skirting the foothills to the east in an effort to outflank the 7th Division's advanced position.

Jap Ship Losses About Manila Growing

Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 28 (AP)—The toll of Japanese ships sunk or damaged this month in American carrier-plane raids on the Manila area stood at 151 today, with upward revision of figures on Friday's strike, which bagged 48 ships and 87 airplanes.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz in a communique added two ships sunk and 23 damaged to the earlier score.

Cebu And Negros Bombed

The fight for Leyte Island slithered to a virtual standstill in the Ormoc corridor's mud as terrific rains fell, but United States planes based on the island dropped 235 tons of bombs on Japanese air installations on Cebu and Negros and at Davao Friday, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique reported.

In the Friday strikes on the Manila area, Hellcat fighters and anti-aircraft batteries on American surface ships have downed 58 Japanese planes, in addition to 29 more destroyed and 32 probably damaged on the ground.

Vessels Listed

Admiral Nimitz's communique listed the following vessels sunk in the attacks:

A heavy cruiser at Santa Cruz, on the west coast of Luzon.

One destroyer at Santa Cruz.

Two old destroyers at Marinduque Island, about 100 miles southeast of Manila.

One destroyer escort.

Three medium landing ships ten miles west of Santa Cruz.

One cargo vessel north of San Fernando, a port 150 miles north of Manila.

One small freighter off Subic Bay, 50 miles north of Manila.

Four oilers near Lubang Island, about 75 miles southeast of Manila.

Four small coastal freighters at Banton Island, 137 miles south of Manila.

Two luggers west of Bataan.

Air Operations Retarded

In the Leyte battle no American advances were reported by MacArthur, who said that the storm also had retarded air operations Sunday. Four Japanese planes were shot down, in addition to eight bagged on American attacks on other Philippines targets.

In attacks on Cebu, Negros and Mindanao, Liberators escorted by Lightning fighters, bombed Japanese air bases, supply areas and bivouacs.

Nipponese planes raided Morotai Island. Four were downed by United States night fighters and anti-aircraft guns.

Japs Claim Hits On 2 Warships, Transports

San Francisco, Nov. 28 (AP)—A Japanese imperial communique today claimed Nipponese flyers damaged three transports and two warships in attacks on Allied ships in Leyte Gulf of the Philippines last Friday night.

The unconfirmed claims were contained in a broadcast recorded here.

The communique asserted 24 fires were started in Japanese raids on Leyte and Morotai Island, 300 miles south of the Philippines, and airfields on both islands were bombed and strafed.

"In the Gulf of Leyte," the broadcast continued, "three transports were set ablaze and two warships of unidentified type were damaged.

"Six Japanese planes failed to return."

1 Bomb Nets 2 Jap Subs

Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 28 (AP)—American fighter plane pilots seldom bag submarines.

But an exceptional exception to the usual order of things is Ensign Raymond B. Baldwin, of Devon, Conn. He bagged two Japanese subersibles with one bomb.

The young ensign went out with a carrier flight for a bit of hunting in the Ryukyu Islands, 200 miles south of the main Japanese positions on the south side of the Palanas River, seventeen airline miles above Baybay, but they were repulsed without budging the battle-seasoned veterans of Attu and Kwajalein.

A small group of the enemy occupied a hill on hte right flank. The hill dominates the surrounding terrain.

Other enemy troops identified as elements of the 26th Division are now skirting the foothills in an effort to swing around the 7th Division's advanced positions.

The enemy's flanking move has brought elements of Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita's men to a point through which they must pass a number of trails leading to the east, over rough mountain passes to Burauen and American airfields in the immediate vicinity.

Maj. Gen. Archibald V. Arnold's 7th Division may meet tough resistance from these enemy forces defending the back door to Ormoc, but the mud is still a more formidable antagonist than the Japs.

Defenses Of Ormoc Strengthened By Japs

NOV 29 1944

By Spencer Davis

With the 7th Division, Leyte, Nov. 28 (AP)—Japanese defenders of Ormoc are hastening the construction of ground defenses and are piling an increasing number of troops along the Palunas River front, thirteen airline miles below the provincial support port, to meet the threat of a pus hto the north by elements of the 7th Division.

While American artillery is pounding the Ormoc area from the south the enemy has been making a strong effort to locate and silence them.

Jap Attack Repulsed

The night of November 25-26 (Saturday) an enemy party filtered through the American lines and tossed a bundle of dynamite into a howitzer position, knocking it out temporarily, killing one man and wounding three.

Enemy artillery has also been probing for our big guns, not without minor success.

One night approximately 500 Japs made a frontal attack on American

By Spencer Davis

With 7th Division, Leyte, P. I., Nov. 28 (AP)—An American patrol, caught at dusk by enemy machine-gun fire directly ahead and from the rear, moved to the sidelines and, from a grassy knoll, watched two parties of Japanese battle each other through the night.

Japs Wave At Him

Second Lieutenant Daniel A. Blue, of Laurinburg, N. C., led a platoon of C Company of a 7th Division infantry regiment over the rugged mountain trails skirting Mount Catmon on a five-day reconnaissance. His party saw 30 Japanese encamped across a river bed.

The enemy also spotted Blue, but instead of firing, waved to him. Blue, who is short, stocky, deeply-tanned with a curly beard and mustache, figured he had been mistaken for a Japanese. He waved back, and beckoned the Japanese across the stream in hope of capturing some prisoners.

Fired On Again

When the enemy patrol was in midstream some of Blue's men opened fire prematurely. In the resulting e[illegible]e 25 Nipponese were kille[illegible] caped.

It was p[illegible]t when Blue's platoon examined the bodies and dragged them to cover. As they did so heavy machine-gun fire opened up on them. The spatter of a Japanese Woodpecker sounded from the rear and Blue found himself being fired on from both the front and rear. He decided to withdraw.

The Americans swiftly filed upstream and out of danger on a hillside. But the Japanese machine-gun fire continued at a furious rate.

Obviously each enemy party thought the other was an American patrol. At daylight the firing stopped abruptly and the Japanese melted away into the jungle after burying their dead.

At one point there were 35 fresh shallow graves.

No Room To Notch All Japs He's Killed

On Leyte, Nov. 28 (AP)—Pfc. Johnny Freeman, of Springdale, Ark., can't carve a notch in his automatic rifle for every Japanese he has killed. There isn't room.

Lieut. Robert E. Rector, of Bluffton, Ind., says Freeman has killed 23 Japanese.

"I got my biggest bag when fifhomeland chain. The flyers spotted four Sydney-type subs in a sheltered anchorage, tied together in pairs.

Scores On Second Run

Baldwin's leader, Lieut. Rudy Gmitro, of Minneapolis, ordered a bombing run. The Hellcats roared in as the Japanese manned their deck guns. On his second run Baldwin put a bomb between two of the undersea craft, blowing out their sides. They sank almost immediately. Other flyers sank another sub and damaged the fourth.

In prewar days Baldwin was a toolmaker for the Remington Arms Company at Bridgeport, Conn. Four times he has brought ack-ack-riddled Hellcats back to the carrier. He has shot down three Japanese planes, one a twin-engine bomber, over Manila.

teen came toward our positions," Freeman recalled. "I sort of warmed them up.

"One of the easiest was a foolish Jap. He took a bath in a stream only a hundred yards away."

SPOTTER PLANES AID U. S. GUNNERS

Carigara, Leyte, Nov. 28 (A. P.).—Artillery spotter planes—flimsy Cub ships which probably wouldn't weather a "45" hit—have been responsible for knocking out several Japanese guns in the Ormoc Corridor through which the Yanks have been trying to drive to erase the last nip resistance and end the Leyte campaign.

Among those doing the dangerous "spotter" work with telling effect are Lieuts. John G. Drachnik of Staten Island, N. Y., L. G. Dalton of Perth Amboy, N. J., and Second Lieut. Leon Abair of Burlington, Vt., who remained a half an hour behind the enemy lines despite a Zero attack to spot for our artillery until it destroyed a Japanese command post and a munitions dump.

A Leyte Doctor Tells A Lie

By Fred Hampson

A Division Command Post on Leyte, Nov. 28 (AP)—A doctor told a lie up in the jungle about which he will be happy to his dying day.

There was this boy with a patrol of the 24th Division, which had fought far behind the Japanese lines below Limon in the Ormoc corridor, who got a peppering of fragments from a mortar shell in his face.

His face wounds were superficial but both eyeballs were punctured.

The doctor bandaged both of his eyes and, knowing that the lad could not be evacuated for a long time, told him he'd regain his sight in one eye.

That assurance was enough to keep the boy cheerful for ten isolated days while he was living on half and sometimes quarter rations.

Then, when the patrol pulled out over the mountains of Leyte to rejoin the regiment, the sightless boy insisted on walking and he was led by his buddies.

At one point in their advance, a Jap machine gun surprised them. The column melted into the jungle for cover. The blind youth was shot through the heart—without ever knowing that he would never see again.

Guam's OPA Holds Line

Guam, Nov. 11 [AP—Delayed]—Guam's OPA is holding down the cost of living for the 23,000 natives.

Ceiling prices decreed by the military government for laundry include shirts, 5 cents each; trousers, 8 cents; undershirts, 2 cents.

Top price for haircuts is 25 cents; shave, 15 cents; shampoo, 35 cents.

It's against the law for a tailor to charge more than $1.25 for men's trousers.

Samples of food ceiling prices: Hamburger, 18 cents; T-bone steak, 25 cents; pork chops, 20 cents per pound; fresh bacon, 15 cents; lobster, 15 cents per pound; eggs, 40 to 60 cents a dozen; broiler chickens, 30 cents per pound; fryers, 25 cents.

4 Japs A Day, 3 Times

Aboard U. S. Carrier Flagship, Western Pacific, Nov. 27 [AP—Delayed]—Lieut. Cecil E. Harris, ex-farm boy from South Dakota, for the third time has shot down four Japanese planes in one day.

It gave the Navy's leading active ace a total of 24 Japanese planes. It placed him within ten of the Navy's record of 34, held by Commander David McCampbell, who recently completed his tour of duty.

Bagged Over Manila

The 27-year-old Harris made his latest quadruple kill two days ago. He picked off three fighters in a morning sweep over Manila and destroyed another fighter over the United States task force during a Japanese daylight attack.

The Hellcat pilot shot down four planes over Negros Island in the central Philippines September 12 and again October 12 in a strike at Formosa. Seventeen of his 24 total were fighters.

Came To Area In 1943

Harris first came out to the Pacific in January, 1943, aboard an escort carrier after helping Allied landings at Casa Blanca in November, 1942. For a while he operated from Guadalcanal.

He got his first pair of Zekes over the Russell Islands in the South Pacific in April, 1943, and the other 22 planes in the last few months since the Philippines air war began.

Harris's home is on a big farm at Cresbard, S. D. He has two non-flying brothers in the Army—Captain Gerard, 24, and Corporal Calvin, 28.

Destroyers In Mined Waters Unscathed In Ormoc Shelling

NOV 29 1944

By DEAN SCHEDLER

Aboard an American Destroyer in Ormoc Bay, Nov. 28 (AP)—For three hours last night a small force of American warships swept boldly along the coast of Ormoc Bay bombarding Japanese shore installations in and around the vital town of Ormoc. Entrance was made via the Camotes Sea.

Although P-T boats have operated in this bay and Navy for the first time risked heavier ships to pound the Japanese west of the Pacific Ocean. The United States craft operated in waters completely controlled and mined by the enemy, but the force early today was well on its way out of the danger area without suffering a scratch.

Under Cover Of Clouds

Under cover of low-hanging, thick black rain clouds, this task force, commanded by Capt. Robert Hall Smith, Macon, Ga., made the hazardous venture. Captain Smith said the main objective was to shell Japanese concentrations along the bay coast, and engage and attack any enemy surface craft sighted.

We made circles around the harbor, slowed to low speed, and fired salvo after salvo of star and high-explosive shells, but did not receive any return fire nor have we made contact with any surface craft.

Although enemy planes have been reported over our area, we were fortunate in escaping attack, probably due to the heavy weather.

A great pall of cordite smoke hung over the topside bridge, choking us and burning our throats as guns barked with methodical precision.

Hunted Supply Ships

After more than an hour of heavy fire we sped due west in the direction of Cebu across the Camotes Sea in search of night supply ships, but failed even to sight a barge.

The destroyers were tense, busy and seemed almost human as the shelling reached its peak. Radio loud-speakers blared out short clipped phrases in the dark, making the black night a little more friendly as American voices exchanged battle plans on the ship's talker system.

Our echelon of fast warships under Captain Smith's command had an able skipper aboard in Commander Harry L. T. Thompson, Jr., of Reading, Pa.

Superfortress Saipan Base Is Raided Twice

Saipan, Marianas Islands, Nov. 27 [AP — Delayed] — America's big base from which Superfortresses have struck at Tokyo was raided twice today by Japanese planes.

At a cost of thirteen planes, the enemy bombed and strafed the area, causing unspecified damage.

Two or three low-flying planes made a brief raid shortly after midnight, sending Yanks on the ground to rarely used shelters. At noon, more than a dozen enemy planes swung in as low as 300 feet. Seven raiders fell before anti-aircraft gunners. Six others were downed by American fighters which pursued survivors almost to the Volcano Islands.

13 JAP PLANES SHOT OUT OF AIR IN SAIPAN RAID

HAUGLAND

No Americans Are Killed in Low-flying Attack on Superfortress Base.

Saipan, Marianas Islands, Nov. 27 (Delayed) (A. P.).—In an obvious attempt to retaliate for the first superfortress raid on Tokyo, Japanese fighter planes twice bombed and strafed the Saipan superfortress base today at a cost of at least thirteen Japanese aircraft. There was no announcement of American damage.

Brig.-Gen. Haywood Hansell Jr., commander of the Twenty-first United States Bomber Command, said he had no comment because the defense of the island was not his responsibility, but at a press conference before the first Tokyo raid last Friday he warned that the Japanese would react instantly and strongly to an attack on their mainland, inevitably inflicting some damage on this base, but at a high cost.

The first attack was by two or three low-flying airplanes which bombed and strafed Saipan shortly after midnight today. This raid lasted only a couple of minutes. At noon more than a dozen fighters boldly struck, dropping a few bombs and strafing from as low as 300 feet. Anti-aircraft gunners brought down at least seven. P-38s and P-47s tackled the Japanese planes as soon as they left the anti-aircraft range and brought down six more in running battles extending over several hundred miles to the north, almost to Iwo Island in the Volcano group.

No One Is Killed.

The early-morning attack sent every one running to rarely used shelters. Half a dozen men neglected to put on their shoes and had to be treated later for coral bruises. No one was killed.

The noon raid, with Japanese planes darting about close overhead, was much more exciting. One Japanese plane broke into flames about 100 feet above the ground and skimmed the beach so low that its heat painfully burned some men in foxholes. The plane crashed into the ocean.

Just before another plane struck an unoccupied open area, its pilot bailed out. He drew a gun as soon as he landed and started shooting. A Negro marine killed him with a carbine.

Another enemy pilot bailed out over Tinian as his riddled plane went into a spin. One Japanese plane thundered to earth within a mile of this camp. The pilot's body was intact in the plane, except for the right arm which lay 200 feet away. All of his clothes were burned off and the pilot slowly roasted in the fiercely burning plane in full view of scores of Americans. About half a mile beyond that another enemy plane hurtled to earth without injuring any Americans and almost disintegrated.

Ex-Skipper of Memphis Belle Tells How He Bombed Tokyo

B-29 Base, Saipan, Marianas Islands, Nov. 27 (Delayed) (Via Navy Radio) (A. P.).—Major Robert K. Morgan, whose B- Dauntless Dotty was the first to bomb Tokyo, had big ws to tell the folks back home.

But there are no telephone or telegraph facilities here, and air mail might take a week or more. So the Associated Press is transmitting this letter to his wife, Dorothy, of Weaverville Road, Asheville, N. C.

Major Morgan, who won fame piloting the Flying Fortress Memphis Belle in the European theater, wrote it in pencil on a ruled paper pad as he was returning from his second trip to Tokyo this afternoon and handed to the Associated Press on his arrival at this base. Here it is:

Nov. 27, 1944,
After leaving Tokyo.

My Dearest Darling:

I am writing this after having just left the coastline of Japan behind. The target again today was Tokyo. Only seventy-two hours ago I was over the same coastline. (Dauntless Dotty has done a wonderful job. Your namesake is living up to her name.)

Friday I led the whole flight, a thrill that comes once in a lifetime. You remember that was my one ambition, to lead the first B-29 raid on Tokyo.

Today I led just one element, but even so it was nearly as big a thrill as before. John (Major John A. Carroll of Fredericktown, Pa.), flew as my deputy leader in the first raid. Capt. Cox (Leonard Cox of Tulsa, Okla.), flew as my deputy today. I had Major Joe Baird of Tempe, Ariz., with me in the plane today and, as you know, Gen. O'Donnell (Brig. - Gen. Emmett O'Donnell of Jamaica, L. I.), was with me on the first one.

First Raid for His Wife.

The first raid was for you, darling. Today's was for our two-week-old daughter, Sandra Lea. All those raids to come will be for you both and the things you stand for.

You know all about my trips over Germany and so the best way to describe today's mission is to compare it with those raids over Germany.

The trip to the target is a long one—twice as long as some complete missions to Germany. As we approached Japan about noon Mount Fuji stuck out above the clouds like a traffic light directing us to the target.

As we turned toward the target the gunners kept their eyes searching the sky for fighters, but all we saw was B-29s leaving the target after having dropped their bombs. Since we were the high flight today, all the other planes were below us as they left the target.

Bomb Doors Are Opened.

We turned onto our bombing run and opened the bomb doors and began the bomb run, less than a minute later the bombs fell forth from all the planes in my squadron, downward they fell toward Tokyo. The sight of all those bombs dropping on the Tokyo war machine does my heart good. Even more satisfaction is gained than was in dropping bombs on Germany. I have waited a long time to drop those bombs. Now my wishes are coming true and this is only the beginning.

Fighter opposition on both raids has been very light. The flak also has been extremely light and inaccurate. Therefore it goes without much debate that both of these raids were much easier than any I had over Germany. I can add that I am surprised as are John and Leonard who were with me over there.

We have left Tokyo behind with many fires burning in the industrial area and soon we will be back at our base.

I might add that my boys (all crews) have done a swell job and I am proud of them. We have only begun the bombing of Tokyo and there is much ahead. I know our fighting outfit will be on top. We take a second best to no one.

I must close now and get the plane ready for landing. Give my love to our daughter; goodnight to you, my darling, with all the love in my heart,

Your Bob.

NOV 29 1944

Wife Pleased by News.

Asheville, N. C., Nov. 28 (A. P.).—The telephone rang and Mrs. Dorothy Morgan heard: "This is the Associated Press and we have a letter for you, from your husband on Saipan, by cable."

"Oh, no!" She cried, astonished.

She listened as Major Robert K. Morgan's letter was read.

"Wonderful" she said.

Sandra Lea, their two-weeks-old daughter, was fine and growing every day, Mrs. Morgan said.

The Marriages of Morgan.

There is an understandable amount of confusion concerning the identity of Major Morgan's wife, Dorothy, since the last the public heard of the Major's romantic side he was engaged to Patricia Jane Huckins of San Antonio, Tex. This was after the engagement, if one actually existed, between the flyer and Margaret Polk of Memphis, Tenn., for whom his Flying Fortress, "Memphis Belle," was named. The Major later said that he and Miss Polk had not been engaged but that she had been present when the fortress was christened.

The present Mrs. Morgan is the former Dorothy Johnson, of Asheville, N. C., also the home of the flyer, and their marriage made the fourth for the youthful pilot. When Major Morgan was only 15 years of age he eloped with 13-year-old Doris Newman while both were pupils at the Asheville Public School. They were wed on June 6, 1931, and divorced on June 15.

The second Mrs. Morgan was Alice Rutherford Lane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Lane of Asheville. Morgan was 21 years of age at the time in 1940, and the marriage didn't last out the year. The third marriage took place shortly after Morgan had received his wings and a lieutenant's commission at Barksdale Field, La. This wife was Martha L. Stone of Mount Lebanan, Pa. It was a fast courtship and a rapid divorce like the others.

RUSSIANS SWEEP ACROSS SLOVAKIA; GAIN IN HUNGARY

Soviet Forces Advance in Driving Rain to Reach Magyar Border.

NAZIS REPORT NEW DRIVE

Claim Reds Launch Offensive West of Danube by Seizing Mohacs.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 29—(AP) The Red army thrust westward in the rain across wildly flooding streams along the full breadth of Czechoslovakia and cleared the Germans from the right bank of the Tisza river in northern Hungary yesterday in advances up to 14 miles on two closely-linked fronts totalling more than 110 miles, Moscow disclosed.

Combat engineers got a major share of the credit for the gains, the Moscow radio reporting early today that they worked constantly for more than 24 hours, quaffing hot chocolate and strong vodka to ward off the cold as they bridged the torrents pouring down from the Carpathians.

Drive on Bohemian Plateau

Seldom have engineers ever been called upon for such tasks as Gen. Ivan Petrov's Fourth Ukrainian army men are performing in the thrust westward towards the Bohemian plateau, Moscow said.

More than 60 communities were captured in Czechoslovakia and 14 in upper Hungary, the Russian communique said. Four hundred Germans were slain and 150 captured in fighting for the Slovak town of Vysni Svidnik alone, a supplemental communique said, and another 600 of the enemy were captured at a highway junction on the Hungarian border.

Moscow was officially silent concerning a German announcement that Soviet troops had begun a new offensive west of the Danube by seizing Mohacs, 98 miles south of Budapest, and driving on the coal-mining city of Pecs. News dispatches from Moscow today, however, described the whole front at Budapest and in Southern Hungary as a morass because of a sudden thaw that followed one of the worst sleet storms in years, implying that operations were stalled.

The Paris radio said the Red army also was approaching Lake Balaton, 55 miles northwest of Pecs, but on this, too, the Russians were silent.

The Russians never have confirmed any operations west of the Danube, about which the Germans have been broadcasting for more than a week.

Rain Hampers Operations

Although Moscow dispatches said heavy rainfall hampered operations during the day, the Soviet communique disclosed steady advances on a right-angled front across Slovakia and in northern Hungary.

Crossings of the Tisza river put the Red army within 35-mile stretch of that stream. Russian hands from Tokaj (Tokay) northeastward. The lower reaches of the river below Tokaj already were Russian-held.

In Slovakia one of the important centers taken was Vysni Svidnik, in the southern approach to Dukla pass and 10 miles southwest of the Polish border. The advance was general right on down to the Hungarian border due north of Nyiregyhaza.

Fighting currently was within 25 miles of the Slovakian strongpoints of Kassa and Presov, with General Ivan Petrov's Fourth Ukrainian army pressing the Germans steadily back through the mountains where there are an estimated 25,000 anti-Nazi Slovak partisans.

The Germans, ignoring their losses in that sector, stressed instead the new Russian offensive in southwest Hungary, where they said several infantry and armored divisions were driving on both sides of Pecs.

A broadcast by Col. Ernst Von Hammer, the German news agency's military commentator, stated the Russians emerged from their Batina bridgehead and tried to take Pecs by surprise.

A mile or more from the town, which is 22 miles northwest of Mohacs, the Soviet column was met by mobile artillery and halted Von Hammer said.

Nazis Use Flak Guns

Another enemy radio account of the action said the Germans were forced to use flak guns to protect the town, regular artillery apparently being unavailable. Von Hammer claimed 18 Soviet tanks were knocked out during an attack which came from three sides of Pecs.

The German radio reported earlier today that Soviet troops had captured Mohacs in the beginning of a march on the rear of Budapest.

Transocean broadcast a statement by a German military spokesman that, with the incorporation of Mohacs, the Russian bridgehead across the Danube was six miles wide. Von Hammer admitted it had been enlarged farther, north and northwest of the town. Mohacs is 12 miles northwest of Batina, in Yugoslavia, where the initial crossing was made.

It appeared that the Russians intended not only to advance, north along the river to take the Budapest defenders in the rear, but also to strike northwestward toward the Austrian frontier.

German accounts of the heavy fighting in this area did not identify the Russian forces involved, but it was possible they were elements of Marshal Feodor Tolbukhin's Third Ukrainian army, regrouped after the conquest of Bulgaria and successful operations against Belgrade, capital of Yugoslavia.

Await Winter Offensive

The long battlefield of the Eastern front, winding more than 1,500 miles from the Baltics to the Balkans, was comparatively quiet in other sectors tonight. On the west side of it the Germans waited tensely for Marshal Stalin's promised winter offensive.

Reports reaching London indicated the Red Army had gone into winter white and now was standing by for a break in the weather. On many key sectors a hard freeze was needed to make the ground strong enough for tank and heavy artillery operations.

BIG SNOWFALL SLOWS UP REDS

Budapest Action Curbed—Gains Made in Slovakia.

NOV 29 1944

Moscow, Nov. 28 (A. P.).—The heaviest snowfall of the year following a severe sleet storm slowed down action today in the battle for Budapest.

German and Hungarian troops were occupying defense positions along a 26-mile curve from the southern limits of Budapest to the rail junction of Aszod on the northeast, front advices said.

The Russian command made no mention of progress on that front although reports here said the situation in the Hungarian capital was tense.

The Soviet war bulletin, however, reported capture of fifty additional hamlets in the puppet state of Slovakia. Red Army columns in a six-mile penetration of northern Slovakia crossed the 2,700 foot Carpathian Mountains along the Polish frontier. Other units in the south advanced to within eleven miles of the big north Hungarian rail center of Satoraljaujhely.

Thus Col.-Gen. Ivan Petrov's Fourth Ukraine Army widened its front to seventy-five miles from a point west of Dukla Pass in the north down to the Hungarian frontier, and further imperilled the enemy strongholds of Presov and Kassa (Kosice). Red Army units only twenty-five miles to the east already menace those two points.

For two months Russian divisions and units of the Firs Czecho-Slovakian Army have been trying to force Dukla Pass by a frontal blow.

The assault from the rear by Gen. Petrov's troops promised to shorten and better his supply lines to Red Army bases in Poland.

[A broadcast Romanian communique recorded by the FCC said Romanian troops, renewing their attack northwest of Tokaj in northeastern Hungary, had captured Bekecs, twelve miles northwest. Southwest of Miskolc and northeast of Budapest tank-supported enemy counterattacks were repulsed by Romanian and Soviet troops, the communique added.]

In one area near the center of the eastern Slovakia front 470 Germans were captured, and all equipment and transport of the Fifty-second Hungarian Anti-Aircraft Artillery Group was seized in attack at the Latorica River in the south, the Russian war bulletin said.

[The Berlin radio said Soviet troops that had crossed to the west bank of the Danube at Batina and Apatin in northern Yugoslavia had forced the Germans back a mile or more. This operation was seen by the Germans as an attempt to take Budapest from the rear.]

Nazis Report Soviet Gain.

London, Nov. 28 (A. P.).—The German radio reported today Soviet troops had captured Mohacs in their march on the rear of Budapest. Mohacs lies on the west side of the Danube just across the border from Yugoslavia and ninety-eight miles south of the Hungarian capital.

A German military spokesman said that with the incorporation of Mohacs the Russian bridgehead across the Danube was six miles wide. Mohacs is twelve miles northwest of Batina, in Yugoslavia, where the initial crossing was made.

Soviet strategy at this stage of the operation appeared to be a northward advance along the river to take the Budapest defenses from the rear. The capital already is closely besieged on the eastern side of the river.

Russians Making Farm Jeep

Gorki Plant Produces Six-Cylinder Light Vehicle With Steel Body

MOSCOW, Nov. 28 (AP).—Production of a new medium-sized automobile, a new light truck and a vehicle similar to the American jeep to be used on farms was announced here today.

The new truck is a six-cylinder two and one-half-ton model with a very strong steel body. It replaces the present one and one-half-ton, four-cylinder truck.

The models are being turned out by the Gorki auto plant.

BRITISH PLANES BLAST NUERNBERG

Huge Force of Mosquitos Pounds Target, Weather Hinders Raids.

LONDON, Nov. 28—(AP) Nuernberg was bombed tonight by the strongest force of Mosquitos ever dispatched to Germany to attack a single target, the Air ministry announced tonight.

While poor operational weather kept British-based heavy bombers on the ground, the Mosquitos dashed deep into the Reich to pound Nazidom's shrine which also is an important industrial city.

Bombing "Extremely Accurate"

First reports said the bombing was "extremely accurate" and that soon after the first bombs went down in a tight concentration there was a tremendous explosion and a glare which lit up the Mosquitos flying at a great height.

Actual size of the formation was not disclosed.

An almost unbroken 72-hour aerial blitz against Germany by Britain-based warplanes, which ripped Nazi transportation and oil targets with some 15,000 tons of bombs and destroyed 240 enemy fighters, was slowed today by the weather.

Before the weather closed in this morning at least 1,000 RAF heavy bombers in pre-dawn raids hurled more than 4,000 tons of explosives on Neuss and Freiburg, German supply centers just back of the Western front.

Freiburg is just behind the French First and the U. S. Seventh armies' front on the western bank of the Rhine. Neuss is far to the north in the Dusseldorf area and is a junction point for rail lines feeding the Nazis before Aachen, Cologne and Gladbach, where the British Second army and the U. S. First and Ninth armies are engaged.

NOV 29 1944

The three-day concentration of air might climaxed the biggest winter operational month of the war. Since Nov. 1, the U. S. Eighth air force alone has sent its Flying Fortresses and Liberators on 11,600 sorties and slashed the Reich with 34,800 tons of explosives.

Out of 17 operations—more than the combined total for November 1943 and 1942—11 were aimed at Germany's main oil refineries, carrying the campaign of draining the life blood of the enemy's war machine into its seventh month.

Nazi Oil Output Reduced

"On Oct. 1 production of German oil refineries had been reduced by 75 per cent from the time they were first attacked in the latter part of April and early May," said Brig. Gen. Edward P. Curtis, chief of staff, U. S. Strategic air forces in Europe.

Fighters of the Eighth airforce went out on 9,425 sorties this month and wrecked supply columns moving to Germany's hard-pressed Western front troops on almost an unprecedented scale.

Among equipment destroyed or badly damaged during strafing jobs were 355 locomotives and 1,422 rail and freight cars—the equivalent of train 15 miles long.

Mustangs and Thunderbolts, mixing with the Luftwaffe in record-breaking dogfights, also destroyed 451 Nazi planes. Bombers accounted for 70 more. In a 24-hour period since Sunday, 240 enemy craft were blasted to bits—216 by fighters in combat.

From the month's operation, 134 American Fighters are missing after knocking down Messerschmitts and Focke-Wulfs at a rate which in one fight was as high as 19-1.

4000 TONS RAINED ON TWO NAZI BASES

London, Nov. 28 (A. P.).—At least 1,000 heavy bombers of the Royal Air Force in pre-dawn raids today hurled 4,000 tons of explosive on Neuss and Freiburg, German supply centers just back of the western front, as the sustained seventy-two-hour assault on Nazi frontline railway and supply centers continued.

Freiburg lies behind the Mulhouse-Kolmar sector, where the French First Army and the American Seventh Army are pressing up to the west bank of the Rhine. Neuss is far to the north in the Dusseldorf area and is a junction point for rail lines to Aachen, Cologne and Gladbach, where the British Second Army and the American First are engaged. The most series of raids on the intricate railway system in western Germany began on Saturday with an attack on Bingen-on-the-Rhine, fifteen miles east of Mainz.

British Mosquitos made another night attack on Berlin.

American fighter pilots shot down 98 German planes yesterday in the greatest all-fighter air battle of the war and destroyed another four on the ground, bringing their kills for 24 hours to 212. The total for the entire United States 8th Air Force, including bomber gunners, thus was raised to at least 239 German fighters downed for that period.

14 Planes Missing

Thirteen American fighters and one bomber were missing from yesterday's operations.

The fighter-plane battle, involving some 500 United States Mustangs against more than 400 German Focke-Wulfs and Messerschmitts, took place while the Americans were strafing airports and military transport centers in Northwest Germany.

P-51 Squadron Has 20-0 Record

LONDON, Nov. 28 (AP)—A new fighter squadron record of shooting down twenty Nazi planes without loss has been chalked up by a squadron of United States Eighth Air Force P-51 Mustangs led by Capt. John B. England, 21, of Caruthersville, Mo. Captain England, whose own score is now seventeen Nazis in the air and one on the ground, paced his squadron by knocking down four Focke-Wulfs in the battle over northwest Germany yesterday.

BRITISH REPORT COUNTS WAR COST

NOV 29 1944

Loss Of Trade Cited—5 Years Casualties Total 733,030

London, Nov. 28 (AP)—The cost of Britain's five years of total war—the normal life of the nation obliterated, 1.5 per cent of the whole population casualties, the riches stored up by past generations dissipated—was described to the world today in a Government White Paper.

Statistics told the story of the United Kingdom's war contribution:

Total casualties of 733,030, including 136,115 civilians killed and wounded and 29,629 merchant seamen killed; the export trade, basis of Britain's wealth and power—virtually abandoned; overseas gold reserves spent on war materials; one home in three damaged and one in 30 destroyed; more than 5,500 factories damaged; monotonous diet; strictly rationed clothing; high taxes.

Inheritance Sacrificed

"We have sacrificed most of our Victorian inheritance," said Brendan Bracken, Minister of Information, in a press conference after the release of the document. "What was the treasure of our grandfathers has gone, and it has been well and gladly sacrificed."

Britain, he said, gave up her export business at the start of the war and converted the whole of her manpower to the making and using of war goods. Her workers since have produced more than 102,000 planes, 25,000 tanks, 35,000 guns, 5,700 ships.

In five years her people have paid approximately $15,900,000,000 in income tax and other direct taxes and have turned over to the Government approximately $19,248,000,000 in personal savings.

Sold Out Whole Stocks

"The Victorians," Bracken observed, "were proud to be called a nation of shopkeepers, but there never have been such shopkeepers as the British. No shopkeepers ever before sold out their entire stocks in order to fight."

Bracken said that Britain's large gold reserves in the United States at the beginning of the war "have all been paid over and the money spent in building up American munitions industries."

"This expenditure," he added, "helped America come into the war with her industries already on something of a wartime footing. We are glad to have rendered this service to the United States as a small return for her tremendous generosity to us."

59 Per Cent In Service

The White Paper, titled "Statistics Relating to the War Effort of the United Kingdom," disclosed that Britain has mustered 59 per cent of all her men between 18 and 40 in the armed forces and has called up 55 per cent of her women of the same ages for the military services or for munitions work.

Britain's armed forces now number 4,500,000 men and 500,000 women. The number of persons in munitions industries rose from 3,000,000 in 1939 to 5,000,000 in 1944. Britain's total population is about 47,000,000.

Citing these figures, Bracken declared that "one tremendous fact stood out clearly—that the total war effort of the population of Great Britain is greater than that of any other belligerent."

"We have not attempted to mulct the British Empire," he continued. "Canada is the only empire country from which we have received reverse lend-lease. With all the other dominions we have made financial arrangements much less favorable to ourselves than the United States."

Two Thirds Of Original Tonnage

Covering statistically almost every aspect of the nation at war, the White Paper disclosed that by the end of 1943 enemy submarines and other weapons had sunk 11,500,000 gross tons of British shipping—two thirds of the tonnage with which Britain began the war.

To save shipping space, Britain was compelled to cut her imports from a prewar average of 55,000,000 tons a year to 23,000,000 tons in 1942 and 26,000,000 tons in 1943. Imports of finished goods were confined almost exclusively to munitions.

Lend-lease supplies from the United States and Canada, the White Paper pointed out, enabled Britain to intensify her war effort by taking men and women out of production for exports—previously needed to pay for cash purchases of war supplies abroad—and putting them into uniform or war production.

Five Years Of Complete Blackout

"For five years men and women have lived and worked under complete blackout," the document said. "Family life has been broken up. There have been two long periods when work was carried on under constant and severe air attacks."

The average British civilian, who consumed 7.63 ounces of butter a week before the war, got only 2.34 ounces in 1943. Meat is rationed at about one pound a week. A man can buy a pair of shoes once in 13 months; a woman once in eight months. The British woman gets five or six pairs of stockings a year, compared with 14 pairs before the war.

No New Houses Built

No new houses have been built in the past five years and only minor repairs have been possible. Only the most urgent repairs have been made to industrial equipment.

"To this depreciation of Britain's capital assets at home," the White Paper said, "must be added the sale of overseas assets amounting to $4,260,000,000 and the contracting of a new overseas debt amounting to $9,200,000,000."

Britain now has 19.4 million acres under production, compared to 12.9 acres when the war began. She has almost exactly doubled her wheat production.

England's Casualties In War Total 733

London, Nov. 28 (AP)—Britain disclosed today her story of five years of war, years that have cost 733,030 casualties, including 136,116 civilians, and "most of the treasure of our grandfathers."

A 60-page White Paper gave Parliament the statistical story of England's conversion into a factory-fortress, her production and her losses. It announced that one of every three homes in Britain had been destroyed or damaged.

Minister of Information Brendan Bracken told a press conference:

"Sold Out Stock"

"The total war effort of the population of Great Britain is greater than that of any other belligerent. We have not attempted to mulct the British Empire. Canada is the only Empire country from which we have received reverse lend-lease. With all the other dominions we have made financial arrangements much less favorable to ourselves than the United States."

Bracken, saying the Victorians were proud "to be called a nation of shopkeepers," declared "there never have been such shopkeepers as the British. No shopkeeper ever before sold out his entire stocks in order to fight.

"We have sacrificed most of our Victorian inheritance. What was the treasure of our grandfathers has gone, and it has been well and gladly sacrificed."

[Reuter reported that Bracken said the large pre-war gold reserve Britain had in the United States had been spent in building up America's munition industry, thus helping America to come into the war with her industries already on something like a wartime footing.

["We are glad to have rendered this service to the United States," Bracken said, "as a small return for her tremendous generosity to us."]

Many In Service

The White Paper reported that more than a third of all British men between 14 and 64 are in the armed forces and that nearly half of the country's women between 14 and 59 are in uniform or in industry.

By the end of last year Great Britain had lost 11,500,000 gross tons of shipping, two thirds of the tonnage she had when war broke out in 1939.

Civilian casualties through last September 3 included 57,298 killed. Casualties among the armed forces totaled 563,112 with 176,081 killed. In addition 29,629 merchant seamen have been killed and 4,173 interned.

The White Paper said that Britain herself has produced 70 per cent of all munitions turned out by or supplied to the Commonwealth; 722 major warships, over 100,000 airplanes, over 25,000 tanks and nearly 4,000,000 machine guns and submachine guns.

Lend-Lease Lauded

Lauding lend-lease aid from the United States and Canada, the White Paper said it permitted men and women to be taken from export production and put in uniform or war plants because cash no longer was required to pay for purchases from those countries.

Reviewing the financial cost of war, the White Paper said governmental expenditures have jumped from $4,000,000,000 in 1938 to $23,000,000,000 in 1943.

It pointed to sharply increased tax rates and heavy borrowing, adding that, "although the Government has in this way been able to raise the money needed for the prosecution of the war, the consequences on the economic structure of the country have been far-reaching."

Foreign Debts Added

In addition to war damage at home, the White Paper said, the nation has sold assets abroad amounting to $4,260,000,000 and has added $9,200,000,000 in foreign debts.

Commercial exports from the United Kingdom, it said, have been halved in value. They dropped from $1,884,000,000 in 1938 to $928,000,000 last year.

"When allowance is made for the rise in prices," it added, "the quantity of exports was reduced to only 29 per cent of the 1938 level."

Pointing to the effect of the war on the civilian economy, the White Paper said that the total quantity of goods and services purchased by civilians had fallen by 21 per cent, without taking into consideration its deterioration in quality.

Weekly food consumption cuts were recited, including butter from 7.63 ounces before the war to 2.34 ounces last year; fresh meat from 30.40 ounces to 22.18 and fresh fruit from 27.17 ounces to 12.06. Potato eating, however, rose from 3.40 pounds to 5.25.

A sixty-four-page document, the White Paper, was prepared for presentation to Parliament.

NO AMMUNITION SHORTAGE SEEN FOR BRITISH ARMY

CHESTER

LONDON, Nov. 28 — (AP) Prime Minister Churchill declared in Commons today that Britain's armies have all "the necessary ammunition to fight their battles" and promised a more vigorous attack on Japan after Germany's defeat.

His statement on ammunition attracted attention because it came so soon after President Roosevelt's declaration that shell shortages were costing the lives of American soldiers.

In good humor after a recess—which followed assurance of a tenth and probably final session of the fourth longest parliament in history—Churchill readily answered many questions.

"Nine months ago," he said, "we opened up our shell filling and shell making plants again on a large scale on account of impending operations. The immense piling up of reserves which had occurred earlier had led to a temporary dampening down. Since then further important expansions have been made.

"I am prepared to say that provided factory workers maintain—and they may even improve upon—the present planned output, there is no reason to suppose that the British armies will be short of the necessary ammunition to fight their battles."

His statement on Japan came during a brief debate on Britain's post-war army. There was some disruption after the last war, he conceded, but continued:

"In this case the change-over will not be so violent because there is another war which will open with greater vigor at the other end of the world when this present one is finished."

Churchill said a future military system of "national service" was being considered when asked if he was considering voluntary recruiting for a post-war army in view of the fact that 86 per cent of the Canadian army had volunteered for service anywhere in the world.

He added that he had "of course realized the magnificent character of the Canadian war effort."

Asked about Britain's position in post-war trade, he said:

"Every preparation that can be made is being either made or foreseen. But the resources of war are not large that are left over from the war. Expansion of our export trade is possible only to the very limited extent war production allows."

In answer to another question he said married men in distant theaters of war could not be given preference over bachelors on home leaves for, among other reasons, "unmarried people have feelings as well as married people."

Tommies 'Won't Lack Supplies'

London, Nov. 28 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill assured the House of Commons today that "there is no reason to support a belief that the British armies will be short of the necessary ammunition to fight their battles."

PAY NIGHT

The Premier's statement, made in answer to a query soon after the Parliament elected in 1935, opened its tenth consecutive session, followed a statement by President Roosevelt that shell shortages were costing the lives of American fighting men.

NOV 29 1944

Schedules May Be Exceeded

Churchill based his reply on factory workers maintaining their present planned output, which, he said, "they may even improve upon."

He added:

"We have very considerable reserves, the use of which depends on the varying estimates as to the duration of the German resistance."

Asked whether this assurance covered all theaters of war, he replied in the affirmative. He said expenditures on the Burmese front were not on the great scale of those in Europe and the problem was one of transport rather than available supply.

War Against Japs

Churchill said "another war will open with greater vigor at the other end of the world when this present one is finished." This statement was made in answer to a query about the reconstruction of the British Army after the war. He said, "National service as a foundation of our military system" was being considered, but contended the matter was not urgent because Japan had to be beaten after Germany.

The brief debate arose when Mr. Churchill was asked whether he was aware that 86 per cent of the Canadian Army had volunteered for service anywhere. He replied that he realized the "magnificent character of the Canadian war effort."

CHURCHILL ON TRADE

London, Nov. 28 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Churchill was asked in the House of Commons today whether he was aware that the American Government was making post-war trade a part of its war strategy, and whether there were any reasons why England should not do the same.

"Every preparation that can be made is being either made or forseen," replied Mr. Churchill, "but the resources are not large that are left over from the war. Expansion of our export trade is possible only to the very limited extent war production allows."

Yugoslavs Drive for Bojana

Sweep Through South Montenegro to Join Albanian Partisans

LONDON, Nov. 28 (AP).—A Yugoslav Liberation Army was spearing southward through southern Montenegro tonight, heading for Bojana and a link-up with Albanian Partisans for an attack on Scutari, Marshal Josip Broz's (Tito's) communique said tonight.

In Serbia Yugoslav troops which had broken through river valley defense lines now were menacing Kraljevo, and in Dalmatia bitter fighting continued for the town of Knin.

De Gaulle Reaches Teheran On Trip

London, Nov. 28 (AP)—General de Gaulle has arrived in Teheran on his way to Moscow for talks with Marshal Stalin, the Ankara radio reported last night.

With de Gaulle is the French Foreign Minister, Georges Bidault, and Gen. Alphonse Juin, chief of the French general staff.

Long-range measures of keeping Germany permanently in her place are understood to be first on the agenda for the Moscow discussions, a Paris dispatch said.

A possible treaty between France and Russia was seen as another topic.

EXILED POLISH PREMIER TALKS WITH CHURCHILL

LONDON, Nov. 28.—(AP) Speculation that Stanislaw Mikolajczyk would be asked to take over another attempt to form a Polish cabinet—undoubtedly on his own terms — arose again tonight with the announcement that he had conferred with Prime Minister Churchill.

Present were Tadeusz Romer, who was foreign minister in Mikolajczyk's cabinet, and Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary.

Mikolajczyk resigned suddenly Friday.

Mikolajczyk and Romer conferred yesterday with Eden, leading to the first stirrings of speculation that premier-designate Jan Kwapinski was unable to get a satisfactory group of ministers and that Mikolajczyk would again come to the fore.

End To Polish Crisis Declared Possible

London, Nov. 28 (AP)—Polish Socialist party leaders announced last night that "we believe we have attained a solution that may bring an end to the Polish Government crisis sometime today.

The announcement did not say whether the Socialists had succeeded in bringing Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, resigned Premier, back into the Government, or whether the Premier-designate, Jan Kwapinski, had succeeded in forming a cabinet.

If Mikolajczyk returns it would probably mark a victory for him in his stand to end the Russian-Polish dispute by agreeing to Moscow demands to settle border problems immediately.

Opens Door to Mikolajczyk

MOSCOW, Nov. 28 (AP).—The Polish National Council opened the door today for Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, but stipulated that if the former Premier of the London exile government comes in it must be on the Council's own terms.

Edward Osubka-Morawski, president of the National Committee of Liberation, declared in Lublin that a union with the resigned Premier was possible, and it was believed if he went that far his statement may be construed as a bid.

It has been predicted in foreign diplomatic circles that Mikolajczyk, who took the stand that the exile government should seek to end the Polish dispute by agreeing with Russia on frontier problems at once, would show up here shortly for unity conferences.

LONDON PAPER SAYS CHIANGS ARE SEPARATED

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 29—(AP) The London Daily Mail said today that Generalissimo and Mrs. Chiang Kai-Shek have separated and that she may make her home in Miami, Fla.

In a Calcutta dispatch, the Mail reported it had been common knowledge in Chungking for some time that the Chiangs were unhappy and the break finally was made after an open disagreement at a Chungking tea party.

Mrs. Chiang, who is in the United States for medical treatment, is "likely to carry out a lecture tour on the Chinese political situation, which is bound to create a sensation," the Mail said.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28 (AP)—Dr. H. H. Kung, Vice Premier of China, said in a statement tonight that a London report that Mme. Chiang might establish a Florida residence was "an unmitigated falsehood."

His statement did not mention the London report that the Generalissimo and Mme. Chiang had separated.

Wants Peace Talk Ban on De Valera

London, Nov. 28 (A. P.).—Sir William Davidson asked assurances in Commons today that Eamon de Valera would have nothing to do with either the peace or armistice terms. Paul Emrys-Evans, Under-Secretary for the Dominions, answered that the British Government saw "no reason why any Government which has not made a positive contribution as a Government to the United Nations war effort should be represented at the peace conference."

British Policy on Arm[illegible] Leaves

LONDON, Nov. 28 (AP).—"Unmarried people have feelings as well as married people" and married soldiers will have to take their chances with the bachelors for home leave, Prime Minister Churchill said today in Commons, in answer to a question as to why married men in the British forces in the Mediterranean and Pacific areas could not have preference in leave regulations. He said some commanders were allowing their men to ballot on who should come home first.

U. S. Junket Visits British Supply Depot

London, Nov. 28 (AP)—Still under security wraps, the House Military Committee from Washington turned up today at a big supply depot "somewhere in England" for a first-hand checkup on how industry is meeting the Army's materiel needs.

One of the committee's objects is to determine whether there are any unnecessary surpluses in the thousands of articles necessary to maintain modern fighting forces, as well as to learn what the deficits are.

BRITISH RADIO LOOKS AHEAD

But Director Warns It Can Only Supplement Press.

London, Nov. 28 (A. P.).—W. J. Haley, director-general of the British Broadcasting Corporation said today that the BBC plans to put United Kingdom radio fans "ahead of any other listener in the world," but declared at the same time that the power of the world's press must never be weakened.

"The spoken word can supplement the written word; it cannot supplant the written word," Mr. Haley told the Radio Industries Club.

He spoke out for free access to news facts, both for the press and for radio, and said that "the BBC in the years ahead will maintain in broadcasting the people's freedom to know."

On the general subject of the press and radio, he declared: "Anything which weakens the importance of the press in our national life would be against the public interest. I do not believe anything could happen to weaken the importance of the press. . . . The press is one of our most enduring and vital heritages.

"Broadcasting has come to stay. In our different ways we must both help each other to serve the public well."

Urges Co-Operation

Haley said the future of international broadcasting must be a matter of major international policy, adding his belief that no great nation could act unilaterally in this matter. He proposed the continuance of a "sensibly modified system of world broadcasting."

All the BBC's sister organizations in the British dominions will confer in London in February, he said.

Three Simultaneous Programs

Haley announced also that after the war BBC, which carries no commercials or advertising, planned to operate three separate simultaneous programs on three different wave lengths.

Haley conceded that B.B.C. now has bad as well as good shows and that it would be a mistake for Americans to believe there was a continuous string of hit performances, just as it would for "us to believe every United States radio show is a Charlie McCarthy or a Bob Hope."

"Until Britain has its Hollywood," he said, "it is no use blaming the B.B.C. for not finding starts that are non-existent."

To Try "Bold Experiment"

He said the British corporation was about to try "one of the boldest experiments ever made at microphone"—an eight-night discussion "of jobs for all" during the peak listening period.

"Broadcasting has grown up," he said. "It must be adult. In our post-war plans we shall sacrifice nothing in the quality or quantity of our entertainment, but we shall safeguard broadcasting from becoming a glorified jukebox. By news, by discussions, by talks, by documentaries, by still new forms which we will seek and perfect, we shall play our part in making this country the best-informed democracy in the world."

had a price tag of $600 in 1939.

Earmarked For Export

Twenty per cent of the total pre-war production of British cars was exported and the Government intends to keep its world market by earmarking a fixed percentage of production for outside trade.

With this plan, England expects to offer immediate competition to the United States industry, which British car builders forsee as bidding for domination of the world's private auto market.

One industrialist said:

"We are aware that America, capable of quickly swinging over to production in a larger scale than Britain can hope for, can get the jump on postwar output of newly designed cars and use it effectively to bid for overseas trade—and still meet demands of her own public."

"Britain must get $140,000,000 worth of exports to redress the adverse overseas trade balance arising by the disappearance of investments she held before the war," said Sir Miles Thomas, Chairman of the public relations committee of the British Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders. "The Government desires to devote a fixed percentage of auto production to export trade for a period of two or three years after the war."

U. S. May Undersell

If England limits home sales to boost exports and if American interests can undersell British models by at least $400, the country's home market would be open for invasion by the United States, industrialists said.

"This will be especially true," Sir Miles predicted, "if the jeep makes America so small-car con-[illegible] scious that there will be a heavy demand for production of smaller models for public use.

"In the past, the larger size and greater fuel consumption of American cars undoubtedly limited their sales in England. They were not fitted for this country's facilities or pocketbooks.

Heavy Tax Dropped

"Another limitation in sales here was a Government tax equal to one third the domestic price of American cars. This tax was dropped during the war and there is no assurance it will be replaced. Even if it is, it will not prove much of a barrier."

The genuine postwar English car, he said, would be "smoothlined" rather than streamlined and will embody many features of springing, suspension, road-holding and easier maintenance learned in the building of armored vehicles, tanks and trucks during the war.

A postwar car also will be built especially for mother and children. The designer plans to make the back seat of the car as safe as a nursery, with door handles sunk so that small fingers and sleeves will not catch on them. The doors can be locked from the driver's position.

Parcel Compartment

A "shopping-parcel" compartment will be introduced so mother can put in her packages without stepping out into the road.

"Extras" will include kitchen equipment so baby food can be heated on long journeys.

"We may have the conveniences," said Sir Miles, "but I am afraid we never will be able to approach America's ideal of looks in our models."

U. S., British Race For Postwar Car Markets Seen

London, Nov. 28 (AP)—Three months after V-day automobiles will be rolling off production lines of British factories by the thousands, but their prices will be almost double the prewar cost, according to the best estimate of England's big manufacturers.

Prewar models only will be produced for two or three years before new designs can be drawn and plants retooled for turning out genuine postwar cars. Meanwhile, England's customers will pay an etsimated $1,200 for virtually the same average-type machine that

2-Man Torpedo Destroyed Italian Cruiser, British Reveal

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—A British human torpedo—manned by a Royal Navy Reserve sub-lieutenant and an able seaman—sank the 10,000-ton Bolzano, last of the Italian cruisers fitted with eight-inch guns, in Spezia harbor last June 21, the Admiralty disclosed today.

Sitting astride the killer torpedo, Sub-Lt. Malcolm Causer and Able Seaman Harry Smith went inside the well-protected harbor, dived under the Bolzano and fixed the torpedo's warhead to the hull.

The parent ship waited for the men after the explosion but they did not return. Later it was learned Causer had been captured. Seaman Smith still is reported missing. The DSO has been awarded Lt. Causer and the Conspicuous Gallantry Medal went to Seaman Smith.

It was the second known successful "human torpedo" exploit by British naval men. In January, 1943, the Italian Regolo class cruiser Ulpia Traiano was sunk in Palermo harbor. An 8500-ton transport lying nearby, seriously damaged, later sank.

DEATH TOLL RISES IN BRITISH BLAST

LAND-FROM

More Than 160 Believed Killed in Explosion of Bomb Depot.

BURTON-ON-TRENT, England, Nov. 28—(AP) Rescue work among the craters of the RAF's bomb depot near here led to fears tonight that more than 160 persons might have died in the explosion which shook the countryside yesterday.

The estimate of the dead was made by the British Press association, which reported 23 bodies had been recovered from debris of the ammunition store. Rescue workers stated that another 100 bodies might be buried there, while 31 were known to have been crushed in the collapse of an adjoining plaster works. Six bodies have been brought out of the factory.

After preliminary proceedings, an inquest over seven of the bodies was adjourned indefinitely. A coroner indicated it might be some time before the inquiry was resumed.

The Bratislava radio [illegible] German language broadcast said flatly that "yesterday's explosion in Derbyshire was caused by a German V-weapon."

Earlier, unofficial reports, speculated that the number of dead would reach perhaps more than 250, but an Air Minister spokesman said "it is not likely that the number killed will exceed the 20 or so known dead and the 22 to 25 now missing, who may be dead."

An additional 30 or more persons are missing, but it is believed most of these may be alive. The British Press association said only a few persons were known to have been injured seriously.

Policemen on the scene said that the task of compiling a list of casualties was complicated by "scores of people who simply have disappeared."

The tremendous blast, heaving up soil, buildings and livestock over a wide radius, and making craters 250 yards across, shocked the people of nearby villages as if an earthquake or a great bombardment had hit them. Many ran for air raid shelters, or huddled against brick blast walls.

More than 24 hours after the explosions—starting apparently from a single bomb and then spreading swiftly—the search continued for those missing. American troops were among the rescuers.

Roundabout the subterranean storage dump—described as a modern Aladdin's cave filled with many millions of dollars worth of bombs, sufficient for hundreds of major attacks on Germany—the landscape resembled a no-man's-country: grass and other vegetation were burned, jagged pits were on every hand, and hundreds of cattle and sheep lay dead in the fields. In one village every house was damaged by the explosions. A village school was badly damaged but not a child was hurt.

Eyewitness accounts said that horses and wagons, and presumably even human beings had been blown from the fields and barns. At one place a farmer, his wife, sister-in-law and three hired men were at work when the dump exploded: no trace of them has been found. At another farm a wagon, team and driver were seen no more. With the deadly consistency of such tragedies, families suffered terrible disaster: a father and son are missing, the mother lives. A brother killed, a husband missing. A child is safe, but her parents cannot be found.

None of the rescued men could tell their questioners what had caused the explosion. This theory was submitted to the coroner by a former officer in the Royal engineers who had an important job at the dump: "what appears to have happened is that one bomb exploded and the rush of air acted as a detonator for all the bombs in the dump."

Bomb-Dump Blast Deaths Mount

Burton-on-Trent, England, Nov. 28 (AP)—Estimates of the death toll in yesterday's explosion of an RAF underground bomb dump still ranged from 200 to more than 250 today. A former British army officer declared that "enough bombs for hundreds of major raids on Germany" were detonated in the blast.

Scores of persons "simply have disappeared, and until we can check up on them we are unable to say whether they are dead or alive," a Burton policeman said. The British Press Association said the toll might mount to 250 or more.

Earthquake Effect

One bomb burst and the rush of air apparently acted as a detonator for all the bombs in the dump, situated near Burton. This detonating wave underground caused the earthquake effect felt several miles away, driving many persons to air-raid shelters.

The village vanished as the blast shook the entire countryside and sent bombs high into the sky. They rained down like a large-scale enemy bombardment.

Scores were trapped in wreckage. Rescuers tunneled through rubble to bring out safely 40 persons buried in a munitions works near the scene.

BRITISH TIGHTEN GRIP ON FAENZA

HEINZERLING

ROME, Nov. 28. — (AP) British troops have cleared the Lamone river's east bank for five miles northeast of Faenza and have sent patrols lancing across the stream on the southwest in a gathering threat to that strategic highway city at the edge of the Po Plain, Allied headquarters announced today.

The patrols crossed the river — where they were but three miles from the city yesterday—and established contact with the Germans deployed on high ground before Faenza, the communique said.

The British Eighth army extended its control of the Lamone's east bank to the area of Albereto, five miles northeast of Faenza where a fierce engagement was in progress.

The Germans were entrenched in Faenza itself and were facing the British just across the Lamone to the east.

Italy's autumn rains, which have plagued Allied operations for weeks, fell continuously in the last 24 hours, deepening the mud that has made footing uncertain.

The remainder of the front, including the U. S. Fifth army's sector south of Balogna, was quiet except for patrols which were active on both sides, the Allied communique said.

Italian River Bank Cleared

Rome, Nov. 28 (AP)—British troops of the 8th Army have driven most of the Germans from the Lamone River's east bank to positions on the opposite side in the Albereto region five miles northeast of Faenza, Allied headquarters said today.

Southwest of Faenza patrols crossed the Lamone and established contact with the Germans on high ground beyond.

On the eastern sector of the 5th Army front Indian troops pushing northwest of Modigliana against slight opposition captured Casale, less than ten miles south of Faenza.

High Italian Officer Honored For Resistance

Fifth Army Front, Italy, Nov. 28 (AP)—Italian Lieut. Gen. Roberto Bencivenga today was made a commander of the Legion of Merit for his leadership of the civilian resistance movement in Rome prior to its capture and for services to the Allied forces after the German withdrawal from the city.

Fourteen other Italians also were decorated for services in support of 5th Army combat operations but their names were not released for fear of German reprisals against relations living in northern Italy.

SFORZA QUITS 6-PARTY POST

BRA

British Said To Veto Him As Premier Or Foreign Minister

NOV 29 1944

Rome, Nov. 28 (AP)—Count Carlo Sforza, on whom British Ambassador Sir Noel Charles reportedly has turned thumbs down as either Premier or Foreign Minister of Italy because of "political unreliability," resigned tonight from chairmanship of the six-party conferences which have been seeking solution of Italy's Cabinet crisis.

In resigning, Sforza submitted a letter which said:

"It would be regrettable if even a few people thought my presence was protracting arguments. The purpose of my words and actions has been to speed up the choice (of leaders) which will give the country the best possible government in the present circumstances."

Action Party Backs Sforza

The Action party was reported to be backing Sforza and refusing to participate in any coalition government in which he is not either Premier or Foreign Minister and the Socialists are reported to be siding with the Actionists.

British disapproval of Sforza is a major obstacle in the settlement of the Government crisis which led two days ago to the resignation of Premier Ivanoe Bonomi and his Cabinet.

The British Embassy declined to make an official statement on a conference during the day between Sir Charles and three members of Bonomi's Cabinet who proposed Sforza for the premiership.

Americans Are Hands Off

But it was learned unofficially the British Ambassador informed them he did not consider that Sforza could head a stable government.

With the Americans reported maintaining a strictly hands-off policy with regard to Sforza, the British attitude toward the pre-Fascism Italian Foreign Minister, who returned to Naples last fall after exile in the United States, was reliably summed up as follows:

Sforza allegedly obtained quick permission to return to Italy after pledging support to the regime of aged Marshal Pietro Badoglio and not to raise the monarchial question.

His Shifts Recalled

When he arrived, however, he refused to support Badoglio and the monarchy. Later, after the Communists agreed to compromise with Badoglio and the Monarch, Sforza changed his mind again. Sforza, who had been a Minister without portfolio in Bonomi's Cabinet, at present belongs to no party and in the eyes of the British commands no ascertainable support of the Italian people.

The British disapproval of Sforza was reported to have led the action party, which is headed by Alberto Cianca, minister without portfolio in the Bonomi cabinet, to inform government leaders the party would refuse to take part in a new government although it was willing to collaborate with it.

The British attitude toward Sforza practically eliminates the possibility of his obtaining the premiership since under Allied occupation the formation of any Italian Government is dependent on Allied approval.

Must Keep Armistice Terms

Allied officials already have emphasized that any new Cabinet must abide by the armistice terms imposed on the Badoglio government and inherited by the Bonomi regime. They also have said any new government will be held to the pledge not to touch on the monarchial question until the end of the war.

At a meeting of the leaders of Italy's six major political parties during the day Pietro Nenni, Socialist party secretary, was reported to have proposed a six-point platform for approval by the National Committee of Liberation.

Among the points were the oft-repeated left-wing demands for a swift and hard-hitting purge of Fascist, a "democratic" reorganization of the Army; reorganization of food and transport facilities to assure the people of a subsistence minimum and a foreign policy aimed at reducing Allied control in Italy in the sphere not concerned with the war.

During the day Crown Prince Umberto, lieutenant general of the realm, conferred with various party leaders.

British Reported Against Sforza

BRA

Rome, Nov. 28 (AP) — A reported British disapproval of Count Carlo Sforza as Premier or Foreign Minister emerged today as an obstacle in the crisis which led to resignation of Ivanhoe Bonomi's Government.

Sforza has been presiding over conferences of party leaders. The British were reported against him, with the Americans maintaining a hands-off policy, but there was no immediate confirmation.

The Actionist newspaper Italia Libera, in an editorial praising Sforza, questioned, "Is there a veto?"

Sforza Proposed

Two members of the Bonomi Cabinet conferred with British Ambassador Sir Noel Charles and it was understood they formally proposed Sforza for the Premiership.

Crown Prince Umberto scheduled conferences with Sforza and Palmiro Togliatti, both of whom served as Ministers without portfolio in the Bonomi Cabinet.

Representatives of the six parties making up the Committee of National Liberation were understood to have informed Bonomi that they considered him unable to resolve the crisis as premier of a new Cabinet unless Sforza is given the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Three Named By Press Office

The Government press office had announced that Pietro Nenni, Socialist party secretary; Sforza and Togliatti, a Communist, would be among those who would see Umberto.

But Nenni denied that he would call on Umberto.

Nenni, in an editorial in Avanti, lashed out again at the operation of the Fascist purge, which, he said, left those truly responsible for the Italian disaster unpunished.

CHINESE STOP JAPS BEFORE KWEIYANG

MOOSA

CHUNGKING, Nov. 28. — (AP) The Chinese High Command declared tonight that the Japanese had been driven back in their push toward Kweichow province's Burma road capital of Kweiyang.

A local success—in contrast to the days of gloom as the enemy was splitting China in half with his march through Kwangsi province on the south—was claimed at Tashantang (Big Mountain Hall), about 138 miles southwest of Kweiyang.

Here, seven miles north of newly-fallen Hochin, the Japanese were checked and sent retreating southward, a brief communique said.

The war bulletin contained no confirmation of reports that the Japanese had crossed the border into Kweichow province in this area, which would put them about 115 miles south of the provincial capital.

(The Japanese asserted in a Tokyo broadcast that their forces had stabbed eight miles into Kweichow province.)

Arrivals here from Kweiyang said all accommodations there were crowded with refugees from the danger zones. All American and British nationals have been ordered to avacuate the province.

The Chinese high command reported a second and more distant threat to Kweiyang from Hunan province on the east, where the Japanese are advancing from Paoching. Kweiyang lies about 160 miles west of the Hunan-Kweichow border in that sector.

The High command also failed to confirm the fall of Yungning (Nanning) in southern Kwangsi province, where the Americans blew up an advanced base Nov. 19 in the face of the enemy advance.

Allied Nationals Evacuate Kweichow

Chungking, Nov. 28 (AP)—Evacuation of all American and British nationals in Kweichow province and unoccupied portions of Hunan was ordered today as two Japanese forces menaced Kweiyang, capital of Kweichow.

(A Tokyo broadcast asserted Japanese forces already had stabbed eight miles into Kweichow.)

NOV 29 1944

Hochih Enveloped

The Chinese high command said one Japanese drive from Liuchow had enveloped Hochih in advancing to less than 140 miles southeast of Kweiyang, while another enemy column was pressing toward the provincial capital from Paoching in Hunan.

The evacuation order affected missionaries, Red Cross workers and representatives of various evilian agencies.

Americans Escape

Most Americans were reported to have escaped from eastern China, now cut off by the linking of Japanese forces which invaded Kwangsi province from Hunan and Kwangtung.

Fall of Kweiyang would enable the Japanese to stab at Chungking, 200 miles to the northwest.

Nelson Tells Chungking Group Output Should Double

NOV 29 1944

Chungking, Wednesday, Nov. 29 (AP)—Donald Nelson told the Peoples' Political Council today that the objective for the coming year must be to double or triple the weapons provided by Chinese industry for China's soldiers.

The Chinese situation might become "very precarious indeed" unless there is full co-operation between the Government, military and industry in making the newly created Chinese War Production Board a success, declared the former chairman of the United States War Production Board.

Would Mobilize Industry

Mobilization of Chinese industry for war would increase the flow of urgently needed munitions and strengthen the morale of the Chinese people, Nelson said.

"If any one group in the economy were in this critical time to take an uncompromising position at the expense of the national war effort," he continued, "the result would be to injure the war plans of the United Nations and cost the lives of many thousands of Chinese, American and British fighting men.

"If that were to happen, it is perfectly plain that the status of China during the war and after the war might be seriously damaged. Given full co-operation in war production, I think the outlook for China is brighter than it ever has been during this war."

Nelson, sent to China by President Roosevelt to help step up war production, described the Chinese war-production board as a vigorous new instrument of war.

"We cannot realistically expect the military position of China to improve very much until China wins her battles of production and supply," he continued.

"Like the problem of the United Nations at the time of Pearl Harbor, the Chinese problem is to find ways of containing the enemy's advance while winning the battles of production and supply. These battles must be won and soon."

Acknowledges Difficulties

Nelson acknowledged China's difficulties—much of her richest territory overrun, her coasts blockaded, inflation and a "terrible transportation shortage with fewer than 6,000 trucks to serve 200,000,000 people of Free China."

Lacking industrial equipment, Nelson said, Free China's efforts to produce "in the face of these great odds have been brought together as a single force" under the War Production Board.

"The world's attitude toward China," he concluded, "is bound to be favorably affected by wartime proof of China's ability to obtain internal co-operation and work as a national unit toward a constructive goal."

Hurley's New Post Called Difficult One

Washington, Nov. 28 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, soldier-statesman-business man, gets probably the toughest assignment of an action-packed career as Ambassador to China.

Nominated by President Roosevelt to succeed Clarence E. Gauss, Hurley's assignment will be to tie in this nation's Pacific strategy with the crippled Chinese war machine.

Gauss quit shortly after Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell was removed from his China-Burma command at the insistence of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

In Chungking Now

Now in Chungking, Hurley is working with Donald M. Nelson, former War Production Board chairman, to strengthen China's military and industrial organization.

The 61-year-old soldier's appointment is subject to Senate confirmation.

A former Minister to New Zealand, Hurley has done diplomatic errands for President Roosevelt in Australia, Russia, the Middle East and China. He was Secretary of War under President Hoover.

Chungking Welcomes News

Chungking, Nov. 28 (AP)—Ranking Chinese welcomed today the appointment of Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley as United States Ambassador, expressing belief that it reflected Washington's acute interest and concern in the critical China situation.

It was felt that Hurley, who came here as President Roosevelt's personal representative, enjoyed more intimate contact with the White House than his predecessors. In frequent discussions with President Chiang Kai-shek, Hurley has become closer personally to the Generalissimo than any other American Ambassador or other foreigner.

Donald M. Nelson, Mr. Roosevelt's present personal representative in Chungking, accepted appointment today as high economic adviser to the National Government. Howard Coonley, who came with Nelson, was named adviser to the Chinese War Production Board.

'Coffee Revolt' Reported Among Latin Producers

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 28 (AP).—A "coffee revolt" is spreading in Latin-American producing nations as the result of refusal by the United States Office of Price Administration to raise ceiling prices, and a protest meeting in Mexico City is being planned, a Mexican exporter said today.

Martin Diaz de Cossio, coffee department head of one of Mexico's largest exporting and importing firms, predicted that O. P. A.'s refusal will lead to a coffee shortage in the United States.

"The exporters are operating at a loss," he said. "The ceiling prices, upheld by O. P. A. in a short and curt reply to petitioners for increases, do not provide a profitable margin over producers' prices. One exporting company has lost $300,000 the past two years."

Draftee Outbreaks Mark Rising Canadian Crisis

NOV 29 1944

MONTGOMERY

Soldiers Demonstrate Against Overseas Draft as Parliament Meets.

OTTAWA, Nov. 28. — (AP) French-Canadian troops drafted originally for home service and now liable to be sent to the Western front staged anti-conscription demonstrations in Pacific coast camps today as Parliament debated the government-shaking conscription crisis in a rare secret session.

The draftee outbreaks, involving both English-speaking and French-speaking units in half a dozen British Columbia camps, took an admittedly mutinous turn as they went into their fourth day, and there was no sign of abatement.

King Wins Support

Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King during the day apparently won enough Parliamentary support to assure him of victory in a vote of confidence to be taken later in the week on his new partial conscription program under which 16,000 of the home service draftees are to be sent abroad, and the purely governmental crisis here in Ottawa seemed nearing a solution.

The draftee camp outbreaks, however, grew increasingly serious as the home service troops refused to take orders from their officers and in one instance by threat of armed violence kept confined to their barracks a Saskatchewan draftee regiment which was about to entrain for service abroad.

These striking troops, a French-Canadian outfit stationed at Terrace, British Columbia, were described frankly by a military spokesman on the scene as "mutineers" since they interfered with other troops in performance of duty. Terrace is a small community 450 miles north of Vancouver.

Military authorities in Ottawa were officially silent in the face of the growing disturbances.

About 300 of these mutinous soldiers left their camp on Terrace's north side and marched to the camp of an English-speaking unit at the other end of town, most of them carrying rifles and wearing steel helmets. An hour later approximately 1,500 more men some of these carrying Bren guns marched to a third camp in another part of town. They had one truck understood to have been commandeered.

Under this threat, the Saskatchewan regiment which had been scheduled to leave to reinforce the Western front was held to its barracks, and a waiting troop train stood idle on a siding.

Leaders Threaten Troops

Threats and intimidation were being used by leaders of the recalcitrant home troops to keep less fervent members in line, some men reported.

"Our regiment arrived here the day before yesterday," one soldier said, "men of a regiment that was due to leave Terrace on draft today have been told by other home defense men that if they prepare to leave they will be shot at. They mean it, too, and they have plenty of ammunition.

"I think that there is going to be serious trouble here."

The French-Canadian unit, the only French-speaking unit of all those involved in the British Columbia outbreaks which began Saturday, said they were awaiting a reply to their request to be returned to their Quebec homes.

The armed march which kept at Terrace the troops scheduled to entrain was held despite the fact that military authorities earlier in the day formally notified the strikers that they were liable to life imprisonment and that demonstrators might be fired upon.

In Ottawa Parliament sat for hours in the first secret session since 1942 and the third of the war, hearing secret military information from Defense Minister General A. G. L. McNaughton.

The Quebec members of Prime Minister King's liberal party, providing some 60 of his usual 160-odd votes in a Parliament of a total membership of 245, met in caucus with King and were reported to have agreed to support him in the forthcoming vote of confidence.

This seemed to assure King of victory. The Quebec members, despite their strong opposition to the new partial conscription policy, were understood to have fallen in line on the ground that to vote with the all-out conscriptionist opposition could mean only that a new government would give them even less satisfaction.

In another indication of a trend of feeling in Quebec seven French-Canadian labor leaders representing Canada's two major labor organizations appealed to their compatriots to support the government against the opposition's "hatred campaign."

Appeal for Unity

The King government, the labor leaders said, is a "government which alone, in present circumstances, can save national unity and prevent anti-French elements from taking over with their sole purpose to keep Quebec in bondage and crush organized labor in Canada."

After three days of anti-conscription demonstrations frequently breaking into violence at half a dozen West Coast draftee camps, authorities stopped their pay and allowances in some instances today. Both French-speaking and English-speaking regiments are involved.

At Vernon, B. C., army regulations were read to every man in camp with emphasis on penalties threatening imprisonment for life for any soldier convicted of inciting to mutiny, rioting or taking part in any similar disturbance.

Furthermore, each man was informed individually that now that he had been made aware of the rules he was liable to be fired upon if he should take part in any demonstrations.

A French Canadian regiment at Terrace, demonstrating with guns for the first time, was stopped last night after marching through the streets for hours. From 1,000 to 1,500 men participated. School classes ordinarily held in the Canadian Legion hall were cancelled by authorities fearing trouble.

Approximately 25,000 draftees are stationed in British Columbia camps, of whom approximately 3,000 are estimated to be French-speaking.

Similar demonstrations on a smaller scale have been sporadic elsewhere in Canada, and in the French-speaking province of Quebec youthful draft age civilians have staged protests.

Secret Session Called In Canada Draft Row

MONTGOMERY

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, Nov. 28.—The House of Commons was called into secret session today on the Dominion-splitting conscription issue after a declaration by Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King that lack of a "reasonable" unity on the question might lead to anarchy in Canada.

The Prime Minister told Parliament last night that he would resign if he did not get strong support in a vote of confidence to be taken later in the week. He insisted that this support must include members of his own badly split Liberal party.

He appealed especially to the wavering French-speaking members from Quebec, who reflect that province's opposition to conscription for overseas service. He called for an end of nationalistic divergences which have been a bar to complete Canadian unity since the Dominion's earliest history.

Anti-Draft Demonstrations.

Even as Mr. King spoke, these differences broke into anticonscription demonstrations as far away as British Columbia, on the west coast, and as near as Lansdowne Park, just a mile and a half from Parliament Hill in Ottawa.

About 100 home defense troops—conscripted for service in this hemisphere and now under the government's new policy liable to be sent overseas—organized an anticonscription parade and began a march on Parliament, but were dispersed by active service troops, sailors and civilians.

Today's session, to open at 3 p. m., E. W. T., was asked by the Prime Minister to hear secret military information bearing on the conscription issue.

Difficult Position.

The Prime Minister's peculiar position was that his new policy of partial conscription for overseas service is opposed by two groups—those who, like the Progressive Conservative opposition and some of his own Liberals, believe it does not go far enough, and those who, like the Quebec members, believe it goes too far. Two Cabinet Ministers already have resigned, taking opposite sides of the issue.

The French-speaking members are expected to vote against the government if it seems likely to stay safely in power without their votes, and to vote with it if defeat looms.

Dispatches last night said draftees stationed in northern British Columbia near Prince Rupert were staging a "sitdown" while awaiting a reply from army headquarters at Ottawa to a demand that they be returned to their homes in Quebec. In Montreal, in the heart of French Canada, about 700 young men paraded last night and stood silently in the city's main square as a token of their opposition to conscription.

Balky Draftees Called 'Mutineers' In Canada

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 28 (AP)—French-Canadian draftee troops stationed at Terrace, B. C., who have demonstrated for three days against the Conscription for Foreign Service Act, were termed "mutineers" today by an Army spokesman. Their pay and allowances have been stopped as long as they refuse to take orders from their officers.

The demonstrations at Terrace, 450 miles north of Vancouver, were the largest of half a dozen in British Columbia over the week end, and the Army spokesman estimated that 1,000 to 1,500 men participated in a parade and sitdown last night. He added that not more than 25 per cent of the troops in the area were involved.

The spokesman said the grievances of the men at Terrace "boils down to the fact they just don't want to go overseas."

Russ, British Regret Resignation Of Hull

[By the Associated Press]

British and Russian quarters expressed regret today at the resignation of Secretary Hull, but were pleased with nomination of Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., as his successor.

The French press devoted only two-inch items to the United States State Department turnover and did not comment. But this reflected the general feeling that American policy toward France was stabilized with admission of France to the European Advisory Commission, rather than lack of interest.

Argentina Silent

The Japanese pictured Hull's action as due to trouble in the Roosevelt Cabinet. The Germanse describe Hull as "the most furious of warmongers," declared his resignation "does not signify any change in American policy."

Argentine officialdom maintained strict silence on the change. From Chile came praise for Hull's good-neighbor policy.

The Russians regarded the resignation of Hull as the loss of a good friend but considered that they have gained a good new one in Stettinius. It was apparent in Moscow with the re-election of Roosevelt that Russian-American relations would continue along virtually the same lines no matter who is Secretary of State.

"Auspicious Choice"

The Yorkshire Post said Hull's resignation would cause "sharp regret in Britain as well as in the United States" but that the appointment of Stettinius was a "reassuring and auspicious choice."

The London Daily Telegraph observed that Stettinius—as industrialist, administrator of lend-lease and under secretary—had "proved himself to have the weight to take his place in an illustrious succession."

BRITISH EMPIRE REPORTED IN RED, MAY NEED LOANS

NOV 29 1944

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28 — (AP) Harold Butler, British minister, said today that although the empire is running in the red it isn't broke.

He indicated that the British won't need post-war civilian Lend-Lease to get them back on an even economic keel.

Will Need U. S. Loans

His assertions gave substance to information current among American government officials that the British will come out of the war able to do a cash business in the United States and that the only kind of assistance needed from this country will be long range production loans.

However, both British and American officials agree that if there is to be any export of luxury items, even including such things as automobiles, in the immediate post-war years, for the broad purpose of building up employment in this country then there will have to be some kind of additional financing to speed up Britain's economic restoration beyond what the Britishers themselves expect to do unaided.

Butler said at a news conference that as things stand he doubts whether Britain's economy can be restored by 1950.

At the same time, interpreting the British White Paper on the war effort of the United Kingdom, he declared that the figures do not show that the British empire is broke. He added that the British do not want to obtain Lend-Lease goods for re-export.

So far as he knows, he said, there is no consideration now among officials here of a "grant in aid" of several billion dollars to help get the British back on their feet quickly after the war. Such a grant has been suggested by Winthrop Aldrich, New York financier.

The White Paper showed that the British have disposed of overseas assets totaling $4,300,000,000 to help finance the war up to the time they started getting Lend-Lease, and that they have also run up liabilities abroad amounting to $9,200,000,000. This makes a total of about $13,500,000,000 which they no longer have to draw upon.

Great Bomb Damage

It also showed that at home they have suffered heavily from bomb damage, their most spectacular loss being in the destruction or damaging of 4,000,000 houses. However, the British people have been unable to spend their money either on repairing their houses or on buying household goods, clothing, better foods and the like. Consequently that have run their savings as of 1943 up to almost $7,000,000,000, as compared to about $1,500,000,00 in 1938.

Butler said the savings will be extremely useful for national recovery in the immediate post-war years by stimulating production of things the British people want.

Initial British purchases abroad probably will include considerable timber in Scandinavia and Russia and some necessities from this side of the Atlantic but Butler said that British imports would have to be tailored to fit Britain's ability to pay and he did not foresee a chance of importing any luxury items.

As for his country's overall financial position at the moment he said that "we are going more and more into the red and will until the end of the Japanese war."

More, Heavier B-29 Blows Promised

Washington, Nov. 28 (AP)—Japan can expect more deadly assaults by the Superfortresses more often.

A 20th Air Force spokesman said today it can be stated with certainty that from our present position attacks against key Japanese industrial targets will now increase in weight and frequency.

The American public was cautioned, however, not to expect anything like daily missions at this time.

But the Allies no longer must wait two years between blows at Tokyo itself. They came within three days of each other this week end, underlining Gen. H. H. Arnold's declaration that the battle of Japan is now joined.

Slower Pace Seen

Wide-ranging twin-bombing commands, the 21st operating from Saipan Island, and the 20th on the Asiatic continent, staged three heavy missions this week end. Observers weighed obstacles and expressed belief that such a pace should not be expected to be maintained at this stage of growth of the force.

Up until October, the B-29's were carrying on their work of pulverizing Japanese strategic targets at the rate of about two forays a month. There have been seven so far in November.

Negro Seabees Lauded For Aid On Peleliu

Washington, Nov. 28 (AP)—Volunteer services of a Negro Seabee battalion in the first hours of the 1st Marine Division's landing on Peleliu has won for the unit the coveted commendation, "Well done!"

The unit was the 17th Special United States Naval Construction Battalion, and Lieut. Com. Moses E. Berry, of Gulfport, Miss., was the officer in charge.

The first section of the battalion, the Navy reported today, landed with the 1st Division on Peleliu two hours after the first wave of marines hits the beaches. The Seabees were part of the shore party, but while engaged primarily in that duty, on the first night responded to a call for volunteers when a shortage of ammunition was reported in the forward lines.

Practically the entire battalion carried ammunition to the front and brought wounded back. The Seabees also took part in the fighting on one of the fronts when the marines became shorthanded in that sector. Some of them manned 37-mm. guns, and "did whatever else was needed," the Navy reported.

GREW PREDICTS LONG PACIFIC WAR

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(AP) Joseph C. Grew, former ambassador to Japan, said tonight on returning from a mission to Pearl Harbor that the Pacific war "may be long and costly before we are through."

He said in a talk prepared for radio delivery (CBS) that Admiral Chester Nimitz knows there is a long, hard road ahead and wants "the full support of our people in bringing that job to a successful conclusion."

Grew declared: "I ask our people to give him that support. That does not mean passive support, and you and I can give him active support. I have bought war bonds, but I am going to buy more as a result of my visit to Pearl Harbor. I only wish I could inspire everyone who is listening tonight to do the same."

Meantime the Treasury announced that individuals have piled up $960,000,000 so far in the sixth war loan that started a week ago. The individuals' quota is $5,000,000,000.

Three weeks are left in the intensive Nov. 20-Dec. 16 sales campaign. The national totals of sales run several day behind the actual payments of cash by purchasers, because of the time required for deposit of the money.

Treasury officials said $960,000,000 is almost exactly on the schedule worked out in advance.

Grew said that on his recent Pacific trip he found Nimitz and his officers radiating confidence, eager, determined, and highly gratified over results so far—but "indulging in no wishful thinking, no false optimism."

Earlier today, a hero of Bataan, who recently escaped from the Japanese after two years in prison camps, bought a $1,000 bond "to help my buddies." He is Infantry Sergeant Charles G. Johnstone, of Cleveland, Ohio, now a patient at Walter Reed hospital.

Allies And Neutrals Lose 5,758 Ships Through '43

Washington, Nov. 28 (AP)—Shipping losses of the Allies and neutrals from the beginning of the war through 1943 totaled 5,758 vessels, aggregating 22,161,000 gross tons. This was officially announced today.

The British Government released through the Office of War Information a year-by-year breakdown of losses by Britain, the Allies, including the United States, and neutrals, presumably in the service of the United Nations. Simultaneously the War Shipping Administration announced United States losses totaled 753 vessels, aggregating 3,311,000 gross tons.

U. S. Construction

In the period covered by the announcement the United States constructed about 30,000,000 deadweight tons of merchant ships, roughly offsetting the losses.

The Maritime Commission in its construction reports used deadweight tons as a measuring stick, while today's report spoke in gross tons. A merchant ship's deadweight tonnage is somewhere in the neighborhood of 30 per cent greater than its gross tonnage.

(Gross tonnage—the entire capacity of a ship expressed in units of 100 cubic feet to the ton; deadweight tonnage—the carrying capacity of a ship, including supplies as well as cargo, expressed in long tons, 2,240 pounds.)

Enemy Action

The report covered losses to enemy action, as well as marine casualties resulting from perils of the sea.

No figures were given on losses for 1944, but the ratio of construction to losses is known to be extremely favorable.

Losses were severe in 1942, followed by vast improvement in 1943.

In 1942, 1,859 vessels aggregating 8,338,000 tons were lost, 422 of them American ships aggregating 2,053,000 tons. Losses dropped to 812 ships aggregating 3,646,000 tons in 1943.

The combined losses of Britain, the Allies and neutrals in 1942 far outstripped United States construction, and may have exceeded all construction available to the Allies, since this country had the major role in merchant shipbuilding.

'42 Loss Greater Than Gain

Against total losses of 8,338,000 gross tons in 1942, American shipyards turned out 8,089,732 deadweight tons. Translated into gross tons, this construction amounted to something less than 6,500,000 tons.

By 1943 the picture was changed entirely. Against losses of 3,646,000 gross tons, this country produced 19,238,626 deadweight tons, or about 13,000,000 gross tons, for a net gain exceeding 9,000,000 gross tons.

This favorable ratio presumably is continuing into 1944.

The United States began losing ships in 1939, the first year of the war in Europe. Between September and December of that year, four American vessels went down.

Here are the shipping losses as announced by the British Government (weights are gross tons, in thousands):

Roosevelt Voids 300 Transport Plane Limit

Washington, Nov. 28 (AP)—President Roosevelt has wiped out the limitation, now at 300, on the number of planes domestic air lines may operate. The action may lead to early easing of the air transportation situation.

Mr. Roosevelt's decision was announced by the War Department, which said that unless the strategic military situation changes drastically, the Army Air Force expects "certain transport aircraft, largely of models and types nonstandard to military usage," will be available for the carriers within the next few months.

The Air Force will release to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or the Foreign Economic Administration such planes as are declared surplus above the combined requirements of the United Nations. They will be made available for sale under the Surplus Property Act. Domestic airlines had 324 planes when the war broke out.

Editors To Seek World Free Press

NOV 29 1944

Washington, Nov. 28 (AP)—The American Society of Newspaper Editors pledged itself today to "campaign until freedom of information becomes a living reality everywhere in the world."

To discuss these purposes and spread word of them abroad, President John S. Knight of the Knight Newspapers was authorized to name a committee to visit various world capitals.

Through its boards of directors in session here, the A.S.N.E. went on record for "the removal of all political, economic and military barriers to the freedom of world information" after the war. Such freedom everywhere, this pronouncement of policy said, is vital to enduring peace.

Reciprocal Statements Asked

The policy declaration invited reciprocal statements by the United States Government and all other governments, press radio and other media of information, embracing "the right of the people to read and hear news without hindrance."

Before adjourning, the board approved a resolution calling for a committee to go overseas at its early convenience to confer with appropriate authorities, and news service and newspaper and radio executives.

The committee is to acquaint them with "the aims of the society and learn their views on the post-war freedom of information."

Knight is expected to make appointments promptly, since it is hoped the members may be able to make the trip and report back at the A.S.N.E. annual meeting in Washington, April 19 to 21.

Atlanta Editor Chairman

The A.S.N.E. statement was prepared by the committee on freedom of information headed by Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution.

The statement noted actions and declarations from within the American Government on freedom of information and said several other governments and leaders also have shown they regard it as "a keystone to world law and order with justice based on the consent of the governed."

"All these signs and statements are encouraging," the statement said, "but the A.S.N.E. never will relax in its campaign until freedom of information becomes a living reality everywhere in the world."

It was urged specifically that both administrative and legislative branches of the American Government and other organizations in this country and abroad join the A.S.N.E. program to further free-dom of information.

Four Goals Defined

It said this program should encompass these four goals:

1. Recognition that complete friendship with any other sovereign power is dependent, among other considerations, on the freedom, the abundance and the exchange of information between people.

2. Recognition that any printed matter, film, broadcast or other media of public information paid for in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, by a government, organization or person, shall carry conspicuous labels as to source.

3. Recognition that any government or private monopoly of the media of information is inimical to the public interest and incompatible with freedom of expression and competition of ideas on which a well-informed public opinion is based.

4. Refusal to recognize the right of any government, organization or person:

To discriminate against any media of information.

To infringe upon freedom of of information or expression.

To place any barriers, technical, political, legal or economic against the free exchange of information between the peoples of the world.

To censor information in time of peace, except for obscenity or fraud.

Members of the committee which drafted the statement are Chairman McGill, Sevellon Brown, of the Providence Journal-Bulletin; Ralph Coghlan, of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch; Laurence L. Winship, of the Boston Globe; Dean Carl W. Ackerman, of the Columbia School of Journalism; Raymond McCaw, of the New York Times; Nelson D. Poynter, of the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times, and John H. Sorrells, executive editor of the Scripps-Howard newspapers.

Other Committee Members

Other members of the committee are Palmer Hoyt, Portland Oregonian; Paul Scott Mowrer, Chicago Daily News; Carl D. Groat, Cincinnati Post; James E. Chappell, Birmingham News and Age Herald; Gardner Cowles, Jr., Des Moines Register and Tribune; R. T. Van Ettisch, Los Angeles Examiner.

At the invitation of the chairman, Paul Miller, assistant general manager of the Associated Press, and Hugh Baillie, president of the United Press, sat in with the committee.

At a luncheon today presided over by President Knight, Senator Connally (D., Texas), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee; Senator Taft (R., Ohio) and Representative Bloom (D., N.Y.), chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, were speakers.

Congressional Interest Seen

All three expressed their interest in the goal of world freedom of information, as outlined by the society and by Knight, and voiced confidence their views on the subject are shared by members of the Congress generally.

Later, members of the committee on freedom of communications, headed by President Knight and Chairman McGill, met with Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., acting Secretary of State. He expressed full accord with the aim of a free interchange of news among all nations.

Another resolution adopted today by the A.S.N.E. board took recognition of what was described as the apparent need for a more authoritative and comprehensive accrediting system for schools of journalism, a system to represent both newspapers and schools.

With Council On Education

The board said authority for setting it up should lie with the American Council on Education for Journalism and directed its representative and alternate on the council to collaborate.

Two press representatives of the new French Government appeared before the closing session of the A.S.N.E. to ask the society's suggestions for insuring an honest, free press in France.

They were Robert Valeur, head of the French press service in the United States, and James W. Walsh, press attache. They were told to put their unusual requests in writing—the A.S.N.E. never before had received anything like it from representatives from a foreign Government—and they probably will receive a written reply.

LOST: 1 ATLANTIC

CHARTER; REWARD

Capital At Sea On Whereabouts Of F.D.R.-Churchill Pact

Washington, Nov. 28 (AP)—Lost—[or is it?]—important document. One Atlantic Charter, slightly used. Bears the signatures of Franklin Roosevelt and Winston Churchill. Liberal reward.

No one around this town seems to know the whereabouts of the original proclamation of the Four Freedoms, adopted on the cruiser Augusta in August, 1941, by the heads of the American and British states.

The Library of Congress, which has the Declaration of Independence and other important documents, doesn't have it.

Not In State Department

The next try—the State Department—seemed fruitful for a time.

"Oh, sure, I believe we have it," said the information gentleman. "Hang on a minute."

His voice came back a moment later, somewhat abashed.

"No, I'll have to look around and call you back."

The White House surely would know.

"No, we don't know where it is," said the information gentleman there. "But I'll ask."

"I Can't Tell You"

This procedure took the load off the much-relieved State Department gentleman.

Days later the earnest White House gentleman said:

"I'm sorry, but I can't tell you where it is."

It seems there is a regulation that forbids anybody to say where the Atlantic Charter is. They are not even permitted to say it is being kept in a secret place.

So, as far as we're concerned, it's lost.

ARMS CRISIS SESSION HELD

90,000 Munitions Workers Needed At Once, WMC Says

Washington, Nov. 28 (AP)—The Army called an emergency conference to discuss critical shortages in vital war materials today at the same time that the War Manpower Commission disclosed 90,000 workers are needed immediately in munitions plants.

Fifty high-ranking officers of the Army Service Forces came here to confer with Gen. Brehon Somervell on the emergency.

Paul V. McNutt, war manpower commissioner, announced seventeen war-material programs as "top-must" and said their manpower requirements were "supercritical."

General Somervell described the problem as "essentially one of manning the factories," and urged the officers to let no obstacle stand in the way of solving the difficulty. A War Department announcement quoted him as saying he was assured that all other Government agencies and both CIO and AFL leaders would co-operate.

The Most Critical Needs

The War Department listed heavy and medium artillery and ammunition, heavy truck tires and airborne radar equipment among the most critically needed materials.

"Certain other items including small-arms ammunition threaten to be among the short supplies in the near future unless more workers are moved into the plants engaged in their production," the War Department said.

The conference was described unofficially as a fact-finding meeting to determine what particular shortages of manpower exists and what to do about them.

200,000 Over-All Deficit

McNutt reported the over-all labor deficit, including less urgent war plants, is 200,000 with an additional 63,000 needed in the small arms ammunition program announced after the WMC survey was made.

"Topmust" programs and their immediate labor needs were listed by the WMC as follows:

Aircraft, 6,200; ammunition, naval high capacity, 700; ammunition, heavy artillery, 9,000; artillery and gun carriages, 1,400; batteries, dry cell, 1,000; duck and tent twill, 4,200; foundries, 10,200; guns, Navy 40 millimeter, 500; naval repair, 10,000; radar, 3,000; rockets, 2,100; shipyards, 28,500; tanks and self-propelled guns, 2,000; tetraethyl lead and sodium, 200; tires and tubes, 1,000; trucks and components, 6,500; wire and wire rope, 2,500.

The labor shortages listed are approximate minimums, McNutt said, and they may be expected to increase in the next 60 days in those plants which have been assigned rising production schedules, especially if labor turnover continues at the present rate.

The WMC chairman said Baltimore needed 2,000 additional workers in the aircraft industry and 5,000 in ship construction.

27 to Spur Shell Production

Eisenhower Sends Men From Front to Tell of Shortage of Ammunition.

NOV 29 1944

Washington, Nov. 28 (A. P.).—Twenty-seven enlisted men who saw their artillery ammunition rationed in the front lines have been brought back from western Europe to inspire more production at home.

Gen. Eisenhower sent them as special emissaries, the War Department said today, and told them before they left the combat zone last week to "go back home and tell simply and frankly just what you were up against."

The men, divided into five groups, each under an officer with combat experience, will visit war plants throughout the country during the next six weeks.

Under-Secretary of War Patterson told a news conference that ammunition is being turned out as fast as we can but we believe the extra spurt needed will be furnished when these men are heard."

Plants are running full blast and there are no reserves in this country, Mr. Patterson declared. Shells are hustled off to the fighting zones as fast as they are loaded.

Some Can Speed Up.

Brig.-Gen. R. E. Hardy, chief of the ammunition division of the ordnance and industrial service, said however that not all plants are operating up to their mechanical limits. Some, he said, can speed up and work longer hours.

The men, nineteen of whom have been more than two years overseas, told reporters how it felt to have to hold down on ammunition when it was badly needed.

"We could fire twice the amount and do three times the amount of damage," asserted Sergt. Edward T. Bearden, 29, of Waco, Tex., who was chief of section in the Fifth Field Artillery, First Infantry Division. After one counter-attack was withstood on the Normandy beachhead, he recalled, "we couldn't fire for three days due to shortage of ammunition."

U. S. Acuracy Good.

"We are sending over against the Germans more ammunition than we are taking, despite the need for more," said Sergt. Richard O. Vanderbloemen, 24, of Depere, Wis. He said that our accuracy is very good. The Sergeat was chief of section in a battery of 105mm artillery.

"The point is we are up against the Siegfried Line," commented Tech. Sergt. Alvin F. Jankowske, 25, of Chicago, who described his "line" mortars. "We are shooting more than we used to. Jerry is dug in pretty good. He is sitting comfortably in his concrete pillboxes and making us mad. We need a heck of a lot more ammunition."

Pfc. Vincent J. Romano, 25, Brooklyn, N. Y., gunner of a 155mm. howitzer crew, said that at one time his group was limited to eighty rounds per gun a day.

The War Department announced a tentative list of cities which the five groups will visit. Dates have not been set. One of the cities is Dover, N. J.

The department announced a tentative list of cities which the five groups will visit. Dates have not been set. The cities include: Buffalo, Rochester, and Syracuse, N. Y.; Dover, N. J.; New London, and Stamford, Conn.

Among the twenty-seven men is Pfc. John Krasnowski, 31 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Krasnowski, 188 Chestnut street, Avenel, N. J.

Others include:

Staff Sergt. Clarence W. Alexis 28, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Alexis, 215 Elmwood avenue, Falconer, N. Y.

Corporal Frank Christopian, 27, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Christopian, 69 Liberty street, Newburgh, N. Y.

Corporal Joseph H. Rostohar, 31, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rostohar, Route 2, Worcester, N. Y.

Pfc. Frank C. Hall, 22, son of Mrs. Violet Hall, Box 201, Poquonock, Conn. He lived at 39 Fallkill avenue, Poughkeepsie, before entering the Army.

Marshall Bill Passes Senate

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28 (AP).—The Senate passed today and sent to the White House the bill to permit General George C. Marshall to continue as Army chief of staff after he reaches sixty-four, the normal retirement age. The bill passed the House yesterday. General Marshall will be sixty-four on Dec. 31.

Refusal To Promote Officers Causes Senate Dispute

Washington, Nov. 28 (AP)—A lively dispute developed today with the disclosure that the Senate Military Committee has held up promotions for officers described by one Senator as "armchair generals."

Senator Gurney (R., S. D.) protested that the committee had "unfairly delayed action on 25 or 30 promotions for officers assigned to posts in the United States, while advancement to the rank of brigadier and major general had been approved for over 60 officers serving in overseas war zones.

No Committee Hearing

Furthermore, said Gurney, the overseas promotion list was approved without the customary committee hearing, and at a time when only two of the eighteen committee members were present.

Senator Johnson (D., Col.) defended the committee for giving priority to combat-officer promotions.

"There never has been any objection to promoting overseas generals, but there has been quite a bit of objection to the promotion of so-called arm-chair generals down there at the Pentagon Building," Johnson told a reporter.

Senator Gurney Disagrees

But Gurney, like Johnson, a Military Committee member, declared:

"Officers serving under General Marshall are members of the team, and I object to the way this list has been handled. I, for one, don't intend to differentiate between those serving at home and those overseas. Those at home would give their right arms to get overseas assignments."

House Resolution Calls For Pearl Harbor Reports

Short Would Also Start Courts Martial at Once

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28 (UP).—Representative Dewey Short, Republican, of Missouri, decrying "procrastination and delay" in revealing the facts of Pearl Harbor, today introduced legislation directing the Army and Navy to provide Congress with the secret reports of two military tribunals which investigated the catastrophe.

His resolution would direct the Secretaries of War and Navy to "commence forthwith' 'any court martial or civil proceedings against military or civilian personnel held responsible by the military boards of inquiry. It also would extend the statute of limitations for such trials until June 7, 1945, as provided in a Senate resolution now awaiting House action.

STETTINIUS PLANS GRADUAL CHANGES IN DEPARTMENT

NOV 29 1944

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28 — (AP) Now that he's about to be Secretary of State, Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., is expected to push ahead reorganization of the State department, especially toward meshing economic and political affairs.

Colleagues don't think Stettinius will make any spectacular policy reversals or shake-ups when he formally takes over the reins. But he is sure to continue progressive stream-lining of the Department, they say.

Come Before Committee

Stettinius' appointment comes before the Senate Foreign Relations committee tomorrow, and is likely to be confirmed by the Senate this week.

His first job when he came to the department as under secretary last year was to tighten up on Administration. Stettinius has said that work remains to be done on that job.

Main goal would be to gear together political divisions and economic sections working on similar problems. One favored plan, which may eventually be adopted, would be to eliminate the present division set-up and have geographical offices comprising both economic and political experts.

Another likely move would be development of a group of special advisers around Stettinius. His executive technique, which he used in business as well as in the Lend-Lease administration, is to gather a team of trusted colleagues about him and give them wide responsibility.

Stettinius has already brought some of his earlier assistants to the State department. He may appoint others, as well as select men from the Department to form a sort of cabinet.

A confirmed internationalist, Stettinius is considered sure to follow Cordell Hull's footsteps in trying to organize the world for peace and to cut down trade barriers.

To Form Loan Program

He will undoubtedly take an active part in forming a loan program for Allied nations to come into operation when Lend-Lease is cut off with the end of the war. Some Lend-Lease funds may be left over, Stettinius has said, and they could be reappropriated Congress for long term small interest credits to friendly countries.

While his interests as under secretary have centered primarily on peace planning and European matters, during the past few months Stettinius has taken an active hand in Latin American affairs.

He can be expected to continue Hull's Argentine policy without any dramatic changes.

And State department officials are betting that as soon as war shortages of materials permit, Stettinius will do something about the State department building.

"Maybe," some say, "he'll have it painted green—as walls and rugs in all the redecorated offices are. But he's bound to have it washed off."

Speedy Stettinius Okay Expected

Washington, Nov. 28 (AP)—Quick Senate confirmation was predicted today for the appointment of Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., as Secretary of State.

Speed was indicated not only by the general acclaim which greeted President Roosevelt's chosen successor to Cordell Hull, but also by the urgency of pending international problems, headed by the need to complete the Dumbarton Oaks plan for world security.

Chairman Connally (D., Texas) summoned the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to meet tomorrow and Vice President Wallace said he is confident "the Senate will support the President's choice by confirming him unanimously."

Buckles Down To Job

At the State Department the 44-year-old Stettinius, who has been Acting Secretary since Hull entered the naval hospital at Bethesda, Md., buckled down to the enormous job confronting him in guiding American foreign policy into new fields of international co-operation.

With a Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin meeting indefinitely delayed by the prolonged winter war in Europe, it is likely that the President will turn over to Stettinius the job of completing the Dumbarton Oaks plan either through diplomatic channels or in a conference with the foreign ministers of Britain, Russia and China.

Stettinius himself is anxious to reach agreement with the other big powers on voting procedure in the proposed world security council.

Essential To Early Conference

This is essential if a United Nations' conference to set up the organization is to be held early next year.

If and when such a conference approves the proposal it will be up to Stettinius, working with the President, to help put it through the Senate. The friendly relations he has had with Congress during his years in Washington, as lend-lease administrator and Under Secretary of State, are expected to be a valuable asset in this work.

In the main, associates predicted that the secretary-designate would continue the basic policies laid down by his retiring chief. Notable among these is the policy of non-recognition of the militarist regime in Argentina, of which policy Stettinius has been an outspoken advocate.

Roosevelt sent his nomination to the Senate late yesterday, leaving unfilled for the time being the position of Under Secretary, which Stettinius has filled since September, 1943.

Stettinius Seen As Presidental Timber In '48

Washington, Nov. 28 (AP)—President Roosevelt's nomination of Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., for Secretary of State may have lifted him into the field of potential Democratic Presidential candidates in 1948.

With Senate confirmation likely this week, the Under Secretary will become officially No. 2 man in the executive branch of the Government.

As such, he will head American efforts to weld a world peace organization in the period when that endeavor is likely to become of absorbing interest to the people of this country. If he makes a marked success in this field, he is almost certain to be a contender for the Presidential nomination if Roosevelt is not a candidate.

Had Political Mention

A native of Illinois, who now claims Virginia as his residence, the 44-year-old former chairman of United States Steel has had political mention.

The President's action in transferring him from his post as lend-lease administrator to that of Under Secretary of State last year bred a crop of rumors that Stettinius might get the nod for the Vice Presidential nomination which eventually went to Senator Harry S. Truman, of Missouri.

In one sense, Stettinius was regarded as a compromise choice for the post Secretary of State Hull relinquished because of ill health.

Wallace Supported

Strong representations were reported to have been made to the President that he ought to appoint Vice President Wallace, who retires on January 20, to the place.

The feeling in Congressional circles was that the CIO leaders who strongly backed Wallace's unsuccessful bid for renomination hoped thus to place their favorite in a position where he could be advanced for the presidential nomination in 1948.

On the other hand, a well-organized, if short-lived, drive developed among legislators to convince the President that he ought to name War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes.

Minority Leader White (R., Maine) called the selection "satisfactory," and Vice President Wallace praised Stettinius' "purity of purpose," adding that he had always found the under secretary's "executive work most dependable."

"Unfortunate," Wherry Says

Without referring to Stettinius, Senator Wherry, of Nebraska, the Republican whip, said it was "unfortunate" that Hull had resigned twenty days after the election.

"It is unfortunate that many people who like and respect Cordell Hull voted for this Administration because he was Secretary of State, only to learn of his resignation twenty days after the election," Wherry said. "We might properly ask the question whether they would have voted as they did if they had known that Hull might resign."

Navy Would Double Peacetime NROTC

Washington, Nov. 28 (A. P.).—The Navy told Congress today that it intends regularly to train twice as many naval officer candidates after the war as it did before.

It submitted through the Senate Naval Affairs Committee a revised bill to authorize a permanent increase in the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps from 7,200 to 14,000. The same bill would allow a temporary wartime N. R. O. T. C. of 24,000 students.

Reporting the revised bill to the Senate, Senator Walsh (D.-Mass.), the chairman of the committee said about fifty colleges and universities—still to be selected—would enroll N. R. O. T. C. students and offer them curricula comparable to that of the Annapolis Naval Academy.

Fight Seen Over War Powers Act

Washington, Nov. 28 (AP)—The Administration got the promise of another fight in Congress today if it tries to hold intact its vast war powers over industry and private individuals.

The House Judiciary Committee approved a one-year extension of the second War Powers Act—the authority for most of the war controls over manufacturing and marketing—but it pinned to the act an Administration-opposed amendment making the war agencies subject to the courts.

Under the amendment, affected dealers can go into Federal District Court and ask an injunction any time the War Production Board or other war agency tries to suspend a priority or allocation of critical materials. Under the present act the courts have no jurisdiction in such cases.

Agency spokesmen—and the Army and Navy—opposed the amendment in executive sessions of the committee. Some of them, it was reported, expressed a private belief the change would fill the courts with litigation and impede the Government's attempts to control the use of war-critical materials.

HEAVY PROGRAM FACES CONGRESS BEFORE HOLIDAYS

NOV 29 1944

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28 — (AP) Prospects for mid-December adjournment of Congress all but went out the window today as a new batch of "must" legislation was programmed by the House Rules committee.

The committee cleared for floor action four controversial measures, tentatively approved a fifth, and called another meeting for tomorrow to take up proposals for streamlining of Congressional procedure.

With the original goal of adjournment by December 10 abandoned, the House fretted along with consideration of a $1,500,000,000 Post-war Highway bill and will continue it tomorrow. The Senate spent its day on a Flood Control measure, with a Rivers and Harbors bill next on the docket.

Still awaiting consideration is legislation extending the Second War Powers act, determining the rate of Social Security taxes for 1945, boosting the capital stock of the Smaller War Plants corporation, creating new and higher Army and Navy titles, and authorizing a Rivers and Harbors improvement program, to say nothing of a host of relatively less-important measures.

The way for House consideration of the War Powers and Smaller War plants corporation bills was cleared as the rules committee gave its sanction to both measures and to two other bills, amid indications of stiff floor fights on all four.

Opponents of the bill boosting the capital stock of the SWPC from $150,000,000 to $350,000,000 indicated they would seek to impose curbs on the extent to which the corporation could enter the private banking field.

Representative Hobbs (D-Ala.) served formal notice on the committee he would try to amend the War Powers act, under which most of the emergency "home front" agencies operate, to provide for court review of all agency orders dealing with priorities and allocations. The Hobbs proposal, for example, would allow an aggrieved motorist to go to court if his gasoline rations were suspended. Unless extended by Congress, the War Powers act expires on December 31.

The other two bills cleared by the rules group call for creation of a separate dental corps in the Navy and seek to nullify a recent Supreme court ruling on the admissibility of confessions obtained before a defendant has been arraigned formally.

With no prospect for an agreement before the end of the week, the House Ways and Means committee continued hearings on proposals to require Social Security payroll taxes to remain at one per cent in 1945 instead of increasing automatically to two per cent.

The Judiciary committee, meanwhile, scheduled a hearing for tomorrow on a proposed constitutional amendment which would give the House equal voice with the Senate in ratifying or rejecting peace treaties.

WIDER PENSION PLAN PROPOSED

Families Of World War I Veterans Would Benefit

Washington, Nov. 28 (AP)—The Senate Finance Committee today tentatively approved a compensation plan for widows and orphans of honorably discharged veterans of World War I regardless of whether the veteran had a service-incurred disability.

Committee Chairman George (D., Ga.) said the bill will be reported out this week in time for action by the present Congress.

Existing statutes provide for compensation only where the veteran was either killed in service or was known to have incurred a service-connected disability.

Provisions Limited

With the provision that the act shall not apply to any widow whose annual income exceeds $1,000 or to a widow with a child or children whose annual income exceeds $2,500, this monthly compensation would be provided:

Widow but no child, $35; widow with one child, $45 (with $5 for each additional child); no widow but one child, $18; no widow but two children, $27 (equally divided); no widow but three children, $36 (equally divided, with $4 for each additional child, the total amount to be equally divided).

The total compensation a month would not exceed $74.

Is A Substitute

The bill as tentatively approved is a substitute offered by the Veterans Administration for another bill which had been before the committee.

The committee eliminated from it a provision which would have wiped out certain compensation for widows and orphans of World War II veterans, which now is law.

Disabled Veterans Given Job Privilege

Washington, Nov. 28 (AP)—The Government today gave disabled war veterans the right to take Federal jobs for which they have received vocational training without competing in civil service examinations.

President Roosevelt signed an executive order permitting Government agencies to hire veterans through noncompetitive examinations upon recommendation of the employing agency and determination by the Civil Service Commission that the training has been adequate.

The order is expected to affect chiefly veterans in skilled trades who might seek jobs in navy yards, arsenals or similar activities.

SAYS WAR PLANTS NEED 90,000 HANDS

NOV 29 1944

Washington, Nov. 28 (A. P.).—Ninety thousand workers are needed immediately in plants making the most urgent munitions items, Paul V. McNutt, War Manpower Commissioner, reported today.

Coining words to emphasize the shortage, Mr. McNutt designated the manpower requirement in seventeen "top-must" programs as "super-critical."

The overall labor deficit is 200,000, including less urgent war plants, Mr. McNutt reported after a WMC survey, plus about 63,000 needed in the small arms ammunition program announced after the survey was made.

The "top-must" programs and the immediate labor need in each were listed as follows:

Aircraft, 6,200; ammunition, naval high capacity, 700; ammunition, heavy artillery, 9,000; artillery and gun carriages, 1,400; batteries, dry cell, 1,000; duck and tent twill, 4,200; foundries, 10,200; guns, Navy 40 millimeter, 500; naval repair, 10,000; radar, 3,000; rockets, 2,100; shipyards, 28,500; tanks and self-propelled guns, 2,000; tetraethyl lead and sodium, 200; tires and tubes, 1,000; trucks and components, 6,500; wire and wire rope, 2,500.

ROOSEVELT SEEKS FUNDS TO SET UP JOBS IN POST-WAR

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(AP) The administration made its first request today for cash to help get post-war employment rolling toward President Roosevelt's goal of 60,000,000 jobs.

The President asked Congress to appropriate $75,900,000. The money may be included in a deficiency appropriation bill before the end of the year, since Congress already has approved the purpose for which it will be spent.

Will Lend Funds

The idea is for the Federal Works agency to split most of it up—not give it away, but lend it—among states, counties and cities on a population basis. They, in turn, would spend it on plans, blueprints and engineering for schools, hospitals and other public works.

Then, if employment needs a stimulant in the reconversion period, contracts can be let and the projects started immediately—provided the states, counties and towns have the construction money. The loans will be repayable when construction starts.

As yet Congress has not authorized revival of the old public works administration, under which the Federal pocketbook supplied grants and loans for projects.

Furthermore, Congress has declared clearly that it is assuming no obligation to provide any construction cash just because Prairie Ridge gets a $5,000 loan from FWA to draft plans for a $100,000 waterworks.

Many Projects Seen

FWA estimates $5,000,000,000 of construction may be needed if public works projects are to carry their proportionate share of the employment load in the first post-war year.

But states and their subdivisions thus far have plans ready for only $1,000,000,000 of building. The $75,900,000 asked of Congress today would let them blueprint another $1,500,000,000.

Beyond that, FWA is counting on them for still another $1,000,000,000 of construction to help make up the $5,000,000,000 total. Thus their portion of it would be $3,500,000,000.

State and Federal-aid highways are relied on for $1,000,000,000 and all-Federal developments, such as flood control and river and harbor improvements, are listed for $500,000,000.

FWA officials already are advising potential applicants for blueprint loans that they won't have to bring their cases to Washington. Their applications will be handled almost entirely through field offices and regional directors.

And they are being told that a football stadium will receive less favorable attention than some project making a more direct contribution to community welfare or health—such as a school or sewer system or hospital.

BIDDLE CHARGED WITH TRYING TO AID CORCORAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28 — (AP) Attorney General Francis Biddle was accused by Assistant Attorney General Norman M. Littell today of intervening in a Justice department case in behalf of Thomas E. (Tommy the Cork) Corcoran, onetime New Deal brain truster now in private law practice.

Littell advised Senators, it is understood, that the differences between him and Biddle arose because the Attorney General followed practices contrary to basic principles of good government. Biddle has demanded Littell's resignation but Littell, a presidential appointee, has not complied.

Testifies Before Senate Group

Littell's assertions concerning Biddle were made in a memorandum he sent the Senate War Investigating committee which is seeking to determine whether Biddle's demand for Littell's resignation was the result of Littell's testimony before that committee.

Denying that was the fact, Biddle is reported to have informed the Committee there were many personal differences between the two. Biddle said Littell's work in the Lands division was commendable, but he (Biddle) lacked personal confidence in his assistant attorney general.

It was learned Littell's report stated:

"It was only when sharp difference on matters of principle in the conduct of government business within the Department developed between us that our relations deteriorated. I do not consider that such differences can be classified as 'personal incompatibility' when the estrangement resulted from my refusal to cooperate with conduct of the attorney general which was contrary to basic principles of good government. Such matters cannot be classified as mere differences of opinion on matters of policy."

Lacked Confidence in Biddle

Littell is also reported to have informed the committee that because he lacked confidence in Biddle, he (Littell) considered it his "public duty" to refuse to comply with Biddle's request that he resign.

Explaining why he lacked confidence in Biddle, Littell's memorandum said:

Biddle, after conferences with Thomas G. Corcoran, tried to get Littell to settle the Savannah Shipyards company case involving condemnation procedures filed by the Justice department at the request of the Maritime commission. Corcoran, as a private attorney, was interested in the case.

Littell said Biddle and his former assistant, James Rowe, repeatedly talked to him about settlement of the case following conferences they had with Corcoran.

Littell, it is reported, refused to consent to settlement of the shipyard case on any but the government's terms which were considerably below the settlement figure of the firm's representatives.

Tobacco Stocks Plentiful,

Cigaret Probe Shows

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28 — (AP) The House Agriculture committee didn't find out what's causing the cigaret shortage today — but it heard a number of reasons why there shouldn't be done.

While Chairman Flannagan (D.-Va.) complained that strange brands of cigarets are blistering his tongue, witnesses testified:

There is an 18-months stock of tobacco on hand.

The largest tobacco crop in history was produced this year.

Cigaret manufacturing has doubled since the war and a lower percentage of tobacco production is exported.

There is no shortage of cigaret paper.

(A number of opinions as to the causes of the shortage has been given by government officials and trade experts. They include: (1) greatly increased demands due to improved wages of millions of war workers, (2) hoarding, (3) poor distribution among consuming areas due to wartime population shifts, (4) withdrawal of cigarets from civilian channels for shipment in Christmas packages to fighting men overseas, (5) shortages of manufacturing facilities, labor and packaging materials, and (6) delayed deliveries in both this country and overseas due to transportation difficulties.)

NOV 29 1944

The committee devoted its session to tobacco growing—Flannagan announced in advance the meeting was "to expose false propaganda and give the country the facts with reference to tobacco stocks." He will decide later whether to call in cigaret makers and distributors. A senate inquiry also is a possibility. That body's War Investigating committee has its agents looking into the situation.

Rep. Chapman (D.-Ky.) told the House committee this year's crop will be "the largest in the history of the industry—and will be available to (cigaret) manufacturers before there is any likelihood of exhausting the existing aged stocks."

Tobacco used for cigarets ordinarily is aged for 18 months to two years.

Flannagan said the use of tobacco by manufacturers is lower than current production and there is an 18-months supply of tobacco now on hand in addition to the 1944 crop.

"There are ample stocks on hand," interposed Chapman, "and an extra-ordinarily large crop.

"Then what is the trouble?" asked Rep. Zimmerman (D-Mo.).

"I don't know. Chapman replied, "all I know is that the tobacco growers are not guilty."

He was only one of several witnesses who said they had no idea what is causing the shortage of cigarets here at home and on the fighting fronts.

Flannagan said shipments last year to servicemen overseas were 51,000,000,000 cigarets and this year will be 91 billion—"and yet they say there is a cigaret shortage among the armed forces."

George E. Powell, an official of the Commodity Credit corporation who gave the committee columns of figures on tobacco production and exports came closest to giving an answer to the question of why there is a shortage.

"It probably is due to a number of factors," he said, emphasizing that this is a personal opinion.

Most of the witnesses devoted their testimony to a defense of the AAA Tobacco Production program and told the committee growers do not want the program abandoned in favor of unlimited production. Unrestricted tobacco growing, said Chapman, "would ruin prices and ruin entire communities in the tobacco region."

At the War Food administration, officials said this year's crop of cigaret types of tobacco is estimated at 1,550,000,000 pounds. Present plans call for allocating 400,000,000 pounds for export under lend-lease and other programs. This would leave 1,150,000,000 pounds for domestic use and officials said that amount never had been used in a single year for cigarets and smoking tobacco.

House Committee to Probe FCC Behind Closed Doors

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28 — (AP) Amid cries of "scandal" and "whitewash," the House committee investigating the Federal Communications commission decided today to conduct future hearings behind closed doors.

As a result, its counsel resigned and two of its members publicly protested. Rep. Wigglesworth (R.-Mass.), who voted against the termination of public hearings, as did Chairman Lea (D.-Calif.), asserted that the action "might well create a national scandal."

Lea termed the decision of the five-man committee "unfortunate, unwise and a mistake."

Probe WMCA Sale

The decision came as the committee dealt specifically with sale of radio station WMCA, New York, to Edward J. Noble, former undersecretary of commerce, by Donald Flamm.

One witness, Leslie Evan Roberts, former public relations director of the station, has testified that he participated in what he termed a "conspiracy" to "scare Flamm into selling the station."

Noble purchased the property in 1940 for $850,000 and subsequently sold it to Nathan Straus, New York City financier, for $1,255,000. Noble issued a statement today declaring he wanted no white wash. He accused the committee's chief counsel, John J. Sirica, of using his official position "to try a private lawsuit which Flamm has brought against me."

Immediately following the committee's decision to close the hearings to the public, Sirica tendered his resignation, declaring:

"There is great public interest in this case. I don't want it on my conscience that I submitted to a whitewash. Therefore, I am tendering my resignation, effective at once."

Robert Barker, assistant counsel, was named his successor.

In protesting the committee's action, Wigglesworth, reading from a prepared statement, told colleagues:

"Ever since the start of this investigation, this committee and its staff has met with constant obstruction, intimidation, and underhand tactics from those in high places in the attempt to hamstring its work and to suppress the truth.

"Every time the attempt has been made to take this case up, tremendous pressure has been brought to bear from administration sources to suppress the case entirely or to postpone indefinitely the presentation of the facts to the Congress and to the people."

He declared that "the strength and character of this pressure" constituted the "strongest evidence" there "is something rotten in Denmark" which could not stand "the light of honest investigation."

Rep. Hart (D.-N. J.), who supported the committee's action, said "all talk of intimidation" of this committee is without foundation," and that the objective of the investigation could "best be obtained" by conducting closed hearings.

Before the session was closed, Philip Handlemann, an attorney for Flamm, endeavored to protest the action and was ordered from the room.

"I want the record to show that I was forcibly evicted," Handlemann shouted as a policeman led him out. "I am not under your jurisdiction. I am a taxpayer. I pay your salaries."

Roberts Testifies

Testifying about what he called the "scare Flamm" campaign, Roberts told the committee he had advised Flamm that failure to sell the station would result in the FCC "taking away his licensee and assigning his frequency to some one else."

Similar advice, he testified, was given Flamm by Donald S. Shaw, former general manager of WMCA. Shaw characterized Roberts' accusations as "utterly false and without foundation."

Noble, who has attended all sessions of the hearings but has made only a brief appearance on the stand, told newsmen that Roberts' accusations were "absurd."

After today's committee decision Noble issued a statement saying he wanted "the record to show that I strongly desire that all pertinent facts to the House investigation be made public."

"I want no whitewash, as has been charged," he declared, "and I want an opportunity to answer, fully and completely, Mr. Flamm's allegations."

Flamm has contended he was "coerced" into selling WMCA.

E. K. Jett, acting FCC chairman, said in a statement that the commission desired a "prompt and full investigation" of the WMCA sale, but that the manner of the investigation was for the House committee to decide.

SULLIVAN RESIGNS AS TREASURY AID

Washington, Nov. 28 (A. P.).—Resignation of John L. Sullivan as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury was announced today. Mr. Sullivan, who had been with the Treasury five years, told President Roosevelt he desired to return to his law practice. His law firm is in Manchester, N. H.

In a letter accepting the resignation effective next Thursday, President Roosevelt told Mr. Sullivan:

"The five years of your service have been epochal in the importance of the fiscal problems with which you have been called upon to deal. I have only the highest praise for the contribution which you have made so unselfishly in the public interest. I shall hope, as need arises, to have the benefit of your wide knowledge and experienced judgment."

Mr. Sullivan entered the Government service as assistant to the Internal Revenue Commissioner in September, 1939. He became Assistant Treasury Secretary the following January.

In his letter of resignation he recalled that he had arranged to give up his professional responsibilities for one year when he came to Washington. Since then, the period has been extended four times. "Unfortunately," he asserted, "the cumulative pressure of the problems of those people with whom I am associated, and of others who have relied upon me, make it imperative that I now return to private practice."

SENATE APPROVES BILL TO BREAK PETRILLO BAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(AP) Legislation designed to break the ban imposed by James C. Petrillo's union on the broadcasting of high school music was approved today by the Senate Interstate Commerce committee.

Shortly after the bill was sent to the Senate with a recommendation for passage, its author, Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) said the measure would "take Mr. Petrillo's foot off the neck of the school children of the country."

The bill would make it unlawful for any individual or organization to interfere with the broadcasting of any non-commercial musical program presented by an accredited school or college, if the radio station derived no profit from the broadcast.

WLB Backs Pay Boost Of Phone Operators

Washington, Nov. 28 (AP) — The War Labor Board announced tonight its approval of $2 weekly pay increases for long-distance telephone operators employed by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company at Louisville and Memphis.

At the same time the board made public a WLB panel's recommendation for a $5 weekly increase for 5,800 long-distance operators at New York city and an additional $1 weekly for the 475 Louisville and 430 Memphis operators.

The company estimated the increases, if granted, would advance operating expenses by approximately $1,500,000.

NEW AIRPORT PLAN URGED

CAA Recommends Billion Dollar Postwar Building Program

Washington, Nov. 28 (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Administration recommended to Congress today a billion-dollar postwar program of airport construction and improvement.

The agency intimated there will be 400,000 civilian aircraft in this country within ten years after the war ends, compared with 25,000 now.

It proposed building 3,050 new airports and improving 1,625 existing fields at an estimated cost of $1,021,567,945 for clearing, grading, paving, lighting and radio facilities.

Cost $230,000,000

Costs for land acquisition and construction of buildings other than hangars would raise this amount an additional $230,000,000, the report said.

CAA recommended that the huge undertaking be financed by the Federal and State governments on a matching-funds basis over a period of from five to ten years, the estimated time for completion of the project.

The report recommended an immediate Federal appropriation of $3,000,000 for surveys and other preparatory work.

The program calls for construction or improvements to increase the number of Class 1 ports, designed primarily for private flying, from 981 to 2,597; Class 2 ports, suitable for feeder airlines and private flying, from 810 to 2,198; Class 3 ports, suitable for present-day twin-engine planes, from 443 to 654; Class 4 ports, suitable for four-motor and other larger planes, from 403 to 520, and Class 5 ports, designed for long-range domestic and foreign operations, from 305 to 336.

Deficiencies Still Exist

The report said that although the CAA's $400,000,000 national defense program has been chiefly responsible for increasing the number of Class 3 or better ports from 57 to 1,094 since 1940, deficiencies still exist in 174 localities now designated for air service and in 585 localities to which airlines have proposed introducing service.

The report was prepared in response to a House resolution sponsored by Chairman Lea (D., Cal.) of the Interstate Commerce Committee.

FDR RECOMMENDS APPROVAL OF PLAN TO ESTABLISH MVA

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—(AP) A special message from President Roosevelt renewing his advocacy of a Missouri Valley Authority today cheered senators trying to write provisions for an MVA into pending postwar flood control legislation.

The President recommended approval of a plan developed jointly by army engineers and the reclamation bureau. He said it would provide a "basic engineering program" for development of the valley.

Mr. Roosevelt expressed an opinion as to whether the plan should be written into the Flood Control bill or put forward in separate legislation for action by the new Congress next year.

Strengthens Cause

Senator Murray (D-Mont.) and other MVA proponents who want to include it in the flood control measure suggested their cause was strengthened by the message. Senator Aiken (R-Vt.) said the President's statement "could be interpreted either way."

Murray and Senator Langer (R-N.D.) said they intended to press for a vote on their amendments to the Flood Control bill proposing MVA.

Some Senators had expressed hope they would withdraw it in order to speed action on the $1,000,000,000 House-approved bill.

As Murray and Langer announced their intention to go ahead with their amendment, the Senate settled several other controversies over the Flood Control measure.

It discarded an amendment by Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.), at his own suggestion, to give State governments virtual veto power over Federal projects. Approved, however, was a new section declaring it to be the policy of Congress "to recognize" the rights of states in the development of watersheds within their borders.

The policy also stipulated that navigation projects should not impede other water uses. Thus, the Senate disposed of the states' rights issue and apparently satisfied westerners demanding priority in water use for irrigation.

The Senate still had on its hands a dispute among New Englanders. One group opposed construction of any dams except for flood control. Another insisted on facilities to permit subsequent development of hydro-electric power.

Renews Recommendation

President Roosevelt, recalling that he already had recommended a Missouri Valley Authority in a message on September 21, suggested that the joint plan of the engineers and bureau of reclamation represented a beginning in the solution of the problems of the Missouri Valley.

"But it is only a beginning, for other important matters not within the scope of this joint report bear very materially upon the entire region," he said.

"As a practical matter, most of these cannot be dealt with by conference and agreement among the 10 states directly involved working with separate Federal agencies, for the delay in getting action would be too great to bring about the objectives important to the economy of the entire region.

"A single authority, such as the Tennessee Valley Authority, over the entire region would provide an adequate mechanism for the adjustment of the interests of the states and for the planning and development of the entire valley."

Senator O'Mahoney has introduced a bill embracing the reclamation plan. The army engineers program is covered by the Flood Control bill.

The two agencies agreed on sites and sizes for dams but they remained at odds over irrigation and navigation.

Cooper Calls For Free Press

New York, Nov. 28 (AP)—Kent Cooper, manager and executive director of the Associated Press, tonight called for immediate action to guarantee universal freedom of information, which he termed a prerequisite for a lasting peace.

Declaring that "there is an entire world that needs the benefactions of a free press entirely rid of government control," he said in an address prepared for the annual dinner of the English-Speaking Union:

"I would not wait until the war ends, then to have these vital elements tossed around upon the sea of indecision and intrigue that always prevails in peace negotiations.

Wants Action Now

"So important do I believe the matter to be that I would ask acceptance of the proposals involved in advance of any support or aid given by the United States in the reconstruction of the economic life of any country devastated by this war, besides imposing acceptance upon the enemy."

Cooper said he believed peace could be maintained only "by short-circuiting self-seeking, predatory governments through letting the people of each nation really know the peoples of other nations."

"This," he continued, "can best be brought about through the medium of a world-wide free press and freedom of international news exchange that will establish an international community of interest.

America Must Keep Faith

". . . We should see to it that America holds forth inexorably for the things that are a prime necessity to make world-wide community of interest possible—among them a world-wide free press, a world-wide communications system and the necessary facilities for news men to do their work everywhere without interference.

"For myself I would proclaim now that we expect to accomplish this in the peace."

The press association executive said it was the United States's responsibility to see to it that the principle of true and unbiased news "is given to the world in a militant effort to improve international relations."

"Availability of the truth, the most powerful force in the world, through a free press, served by news writers with adequate facilities for getting at the truth and a world-wide system of communications established for the purpose, should be the aim," he declared.

Mrs. Cordell Hull Resigns Wilson Foundation Post

Jesse Jones Will Succeed Her as President

STAUNTON, Va., Nov. 28 (AP).—Resignation of Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the retiring Secretary of State, as president of the Woodrow Wilson Birthplace Foundation was announced here today. Mrs. Hull will be succeeded by Jesse H. Jones, Secretary of Commerce, who has been a trustee and treasurer of the foundation for some years. Mrs. Hull will continue as a trustee.

Vacancies on the board caused by death have been filled by election of Governor Colgate W. Darden, Mrs. Alexander Weddell, of Richmond, and Dr. William Pendleton Gaines, president of Washington and Lee University.

Mr. Hull has just contributed to the birthplace endowment a fund of $1,000 awarded him by the Variety Clubs of America as the greatest humanitarian of the year. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson recently designated the endowment fund to receive the $50,000 from Twentieth Century-Fox which she declined for her help in making the picture "Wilson."

Green Willing To Quit Helm

To Unite Labor

Offers Resignation in New Bid to C.I.O. and Lewis to Combine With A.F.L.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 28 (AP).—President William Green, in a fervent bid for union with the Congress of Industrial Organizations and United Mine Workers, offered today to quit the helm of the American Federation of Labor if it would lead to labor solidarity.

Mr. Green, deploring the reception accorded to his other pleas for unity by C. I. O. President Philip Murray, and asserting he had been subjected to unprecedented attack by U. M. W. A. President John L. Lewis, told the A. F. L. convention he would be "willing to go" as president after twenty years in the office if it would bring about a combination of forces.

The convention voted to reopen negotiations, if possible, with the C. I. O. and miners, which collapsed during 1943. Combined membership of the big three groups would total about 13,000,000 workers.

Protest by Progressives

The convention took the step over the protest of John Marchiando, president-elect of the A. F. of L. progressive miners, who said Lewis "hasn't changed his spots" and that the 35,000 members of that A. F. of L. group "won't stop fighting" against absorption by the Lewis-dominated union.

The A. F. of L. in effect "buried" resolutions which would have set up a "political action group" similar to C. I. O.'s P. A. C. It sent to its executive committee, without a word of debate, the proposals that A. F. of L. organize to get out the labor vote.

On the controversial wage stabilization question, the convention approved the naming of a committee to call upon President Roosevelt and request that he immediately revise the policy to allow for increased living costs. The convention asked for an executive order "to realistically adjust the Little Steel Formula" to permit employers and workers to make voluntary wage adjustments without submission to the National War Labor Board.

George Meany, an A. F. of L. member of the W. L. B., said the C. I. O. had refused to go along with A. F. of L. members in a joint effort to break the Little Steel Formula, on which the Administration stabilization policy is built.

Meany Assails Wage Policy

Referring to the W. L. B. decision in the C. I. O. steel worker cases last Saturday, Mr. Meany said, "The C. I. O. also failed to break the formula but did get a few crumbs from the board in the form of a few cents here and there." Meany, while he did not clarify to whom he referred, said further:

"We call it the refinement of cruelty when we hear some publi official talk about 60,000,000 post war jobs and at the same time doesn't see that this evil (wage policy) is corrected.

"Any one who says this can be done without providing for post war wages and purchasing power is telling the people of the country a damnable untruth."

(President Roosevelt in his pre election Chicago speech envisioned a post-war program of jobs for 60,000,000 Americans. Vice-President Wallace also frequently referred to such a goal. Later Mr. Meany said he was not referring to the President.)

The convention indorsed goals similar to those of its rival C. I. O.-Political Action Committee for getting out the labor vote in elections, but left to its executive council in effect the decision of creating an A. F. of L.-P. A. C.

The convention also adopted resolutions demanding a place at the peace table for A. F. of L. representatives and calling for legislation to require the State Department to include a labor attache in American embassies abroad.

Additional resolutions asked that labor have a voice in all international councils dealing with peace machinery.

Florida Contempt Case Held Free-Press Threat

'Miami Herald' Counsel Defends Right to Criticize Judges

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 28 (AP).—Two Miami circuit judges were told today that freedom of the press was at stake in their citation of "The Miami Herald" and John D. Pennekamp, associate editor, for contempt of court.

Judges Marshall C. Wisehart and Paul D. Barns cited "The Herald" and Mr. Pennekamp after the publication early this month of two editorials and a cartoon reviewing their actions in specific gambling, rape and assault cases.

Robert R. Milam, former president of the Florida Bar Association, was first to argue that the newspaper and its editor should not be adjudged guilty of contempt. Joining him in the defense were Elisha Hanson, general counsel for the American Newspaper Publishers Association, and attorney Edward Fleming.

"The respondents believe it was not only the privilege but the right and duty of the newspaper to comment on these cases and the administration of the law," Mr. Milam declared.

"The freedom of the press is here at stake.

"The defendants made what they considered fair comment and criticism. The court's attempt to lay them by the heels is bad enough, but when it heaps odium upon them, branding them as not worthy of their duty in keeping the public informed, this makes the case very serious.

"The minute a newspaper feels not free to criticize legal administration, then freedom of the press has been abridged."

UPHOLDS LABOR REGULATION

Florida Supreme Court Rules For State Law

Tallahassee, Fla., Nov. 28 (AP)—Labor organizations "so vitally affect the public" they may be regulated by law like other organizations, the Florida Supreme Court ruled today.

The tribunal held that labor union business agents may be regulated in their conduct like insurance agents, real-estate brokers and others.

Calls Law Unconstitutional

The unanimous ruling upheld a 1943 legislative act requiring union business agents to obtain licenses from the State and requiring unions to make reports showing their name, location and names and addresses of their officers.

President Leo H. Hill of the Florida Federation of Labor filed an attack upan the law, contending it was an unconstitutional restriction of freedom of speech and assembly. He also declared labor organizations should be treated like religious, charitable and educational organizations and left free of licensing regulations.

One Of Several Measures Adopted

The act upheld by the Supreme Court was one of several labor regulations adopted by the 1943 Legislature, which also submitted to the people a constitutional amendment outlawing the closed shop. The amendment was ratified in the general election this month. Justice Glenn Terrell wrote the court's opinion. He said the licensing of labor-union business agents requires "nothing more than a showing of Americanism, good moral character and freedom from felony."

Strikers At Detroit Plant Get Warning

Detroit, Nov. 28 (AP)—Implying drastic action by Wednesday if a strike does not end at the Cross company plant, the Regional War Labor Board today sent telegrams to the plant's 75 employes asking them to return to work immediately.

The company is one of two in the country manufacturing lathes for heavy shells and Army Ordnance officers stated that its continuous operation is vital to the war effort. The strike began Monday when the employes walked out over the dismissal of two workers.

Has No Union Contract

No union has a contract with the company, although Local 155, United Automobile Workers (CIO) is seeking recognition through a National Labor Relations Board election.

Strikes in four other plants kept more than 9,000 war workers from their jobs. Plants affected were the Ford Motor Company Rouge plant, the Revere Copper and Brass Company, the Michigan Die Casting Company and Graham Paige Motors Corporation.

A spokesman at the Ford plant reported that workers in several foundry departments were idle on three shifts. The dispute began in the production foundry over a dispute involving work schedules. While only a few hundred workers were actually on strike, the company said that it had been forced to send more than 9,000 home.

Vote To Return At Revere

Strikers at Revere, 600 workers on the day shift, voted to return to work Wednesday. Company and union officials said the dispute was due to a "misunderstanding."

Workers at the Michigan Die Casting Company struck over a wage dispute, but most of the afternoon shift were at their jobs. Approximately 250 were involved.

6,850 Bombers Made At Willow Run Plant

Detroit, Nov. 28 (AP)—The Ford Motor Company disclosed today that approximately 6,850 giant four-engined Liberator bomber planes have been produced at the Ford-operated Willow Run bomber plant in the last two years.

Of the total nearly 4,600 bombers have been produced in the last twelve months.

The company noted that it was just two years ago today that the first big bomber was flown away from Willow Run.

CO-OPERATION, HALIFAX TENET

NOV 29 1944

Briton Says 'Scramble' Is Alternative In Postwar Era

Chicago, Nov. 28—A policy of co-operation in world business was advanced tonight by Lord Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, as the solution to the world's postwar ills, with the only alternative a "wild scramble" in a cut-throat war for international trade.

"The prosperity of the world depends upon the prosperity of all," he told the Investment Bankers Association of America at a dinner climaxing its 33d annual meeting. "It is just as important to the rest of the world that America should be prosperous as it is to America that the rest of the world should be economically in good health."

"It is as essential for you as it is for us that our peace partners should be strong," he said in advocating a policy for world trade along international lines laid down at Dumbarton Oaks and Bretton Woods.

Practical Attempts

These conferences, together with the United Nations relief organization, were described by Lord Halifax as "practical attempts to get going" on international co-operation.

"What they have initiated for relief or for world security or for world currency, he said, is an example of what may be attempted for world economics."

"We have two alternative policies from which to choose. We can turn the economic life of the world into a wild scramble, leaving the less fortunate or less well-equipped to go to the wall—or national bankruptcy — in whatever way they choose. And we can spend some feverish years of jungle line, in a cut-throat war for international trade, of scrambling and of outsmarting each other, of stealing each other's customers and blackening each other's faces until another Hitler arises to exploit the miseries of the people and to multiply them tenfold by another war.'

Expansion The Aim

On the other hand, he said, a policy of co-operation would proceed on a "totally different plan from that of economic isolation' and the "co-operators" would be more interested in the expansion and enlargement of world markets with the idea that "if we can handle these large matters with sufficient foresight, there will be enough on the plate for everybody."

"Long term finance, for example, provided it is wisely administered, can do much to help the rehabilitation of the world. After the last war, American and British bankers competed in granting international loans, with the result that they and the public lost a great deal of money.

"Should it not be possible this time to marry your money and experience with ours, and by so doing, limit our joint risk, save our joint capital and ensure that the money we both lend is spent constructively?"

"During these war days, your country and mine, with others, have been in close partnership. Its results are plain for all to see—on every battle front of sea and land and air. It has been a partnership born of common danger and of the plain necessities of the struggle for survival. And the question for the next 20, 30 or 50 years is whether we can find a motive force as strong as immediate danger to hold that partnership together."

FORRESTAL FOR CONSCRIPTION

Tells Bankers It Must Be Kept to Safeguard U. S.

30.24— 20763

Chicago, Nov. 28 A. P.).—Universal military service and maintenance of a large Navy were urged today by Secretary of the Navy Forrestal as being necessary to "prevent conquest of the world by men with Napoleonic ambitions."

Mr. Forrestal; in a speech before the thirty-third meeting of the Investment Bankers Association of America, said: "It is not too early for you to begin doing your share to see that they become part of our national policy."

"Already there are rumblings of protest against the concept of universal military training," he said. "You will hear it said that it is against democracy, that it is the beginning of a totalitarian system, that it gives the state and not the parent control over children. On the contrary, I believe that only by such preparation can we retain democracy to prevent the spread of totalitarianism and to guarantee the secure freedom for which we are now fighting."

In urging the maintenance of a large navy, the Secretary said, "Regardless of whatever organization finally emerges for the maintenance and insuring of world peace it will need as one of its cornerstones the power which now rests in the Navy of the United States. That power must be maintained, strong, efficient and competent, as a guaranty not only of our own security but of the security of the world."

Secretary Forrestal, prior to his talk before the investment bankers, toured the Navy's big Sixth War Loan exhibition, "Pacific Theater," at Navy pier.

ACTION ON AIR PLAN DELAYED AT TALKS

CHICAGO, Nov. 28—Fluctuating feelings about achievement of a complete plan for a world air transport organization were clearly on the upswing today at the International Civil Aviation conference.

From the standpoint of formal activity, the four-week old conference did little in its one session of the day. There was an implication in the decision to grant delegates more time in which to study a Canadian compromise, however, that the main assault on an Anglo-American deadlock have reverted to private offices.

The conference went through a second reading of a joint proposal by the American-British-Canadian "Big Three" for an international air transport organization. Few changes were reported, and the one undecided issue continued to be intermediate traffic in its relation to capacity quotas; that is, the right to carry traffic originating outside the homeland of any particular airline.

The drafting committee of the committee on provisional route organization made its report, presenting a document resembling closely the plan for a permanent organization and embodying the provisions brought out by the Latin American bloc. The body's functions would be merely advisory and consultative.

As that plan stands, it is believed to fit within the limits of powers granted under the 1938 Civil Aeronautics act, which would permit the United States to participate in the organization pending the ratification by the Senate of the treaty to establish a permanent body.

A committee studying air navigation also issued its report, setting up a full outline of rules for the skyways. Both reports will be discussed in open meetings before the conference takes final action.

Air Parley Works On '5th Freedom'

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 28 (AP)—Delegates to the World Air Conference looked today for some new twist to solve a complex problem which holds the key to agreement on a co-operative plan for supervising airline competition.

The hope lay in the decision to attempt a sort of nonpartisan drafting of a provision for granting the so-called "fifth freedom" of the air—a privilege which would permit one country to carry business originating in another.

Accepted In Principle

There has been acceptance of the principle on all sides. The difficulty lies in the British proposal which would permit the carrying of such traffic only as an incidental to routes extending through the intermediate territories. The United States wants to claim extra space on its planes for traffic which might be handled intermediately.

The issue came up for general discussion for the first time yesterday, and a rough analysis of the 24 speeches indicated about 4 to 1 in favor of the American view.

Committee To Write Answer

It was decided then to have the drafting committee of the joint subcommittee, on which are sitting all of the 54 nations represented, write out an answer to the problem. The conference already has before it drafts prepared by the Americans, British and Canadians.

U. S. Lawyers Asked To Give Ideas On Peace

Houston, Texas, Nov. 28 (AP)—The lawyers of America will have a voice in planning a world organization to prevent further wars, says D. A. Simmons, of Houston, president of the American Bar Association.

The office of the United States Secretary of State has asked the bar association to sponsor conferences of its members throughout the nation to discuss the proposals put forward at Dumbarton Oaks and to make suggestions, Simmons stated last night at a dinner in his honor.

Added Simmons: "If you lawyers have anything to say on it, now is the time to speak up."

NAZIS SLEW 7 OF KIN, SAYS PIERRE MONTEUX

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28 (AP)—Pierre Monteux, conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, disclosed today that seven members of his immediate family had been slain by the Nazis during their occupation of France.

The musician said the information came from his one remaining brother, André, and his son-in-law, Simon Barendse, a staff sergeant at Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force.

Their letters informed him, he said, that his actor-brother, Henri Monteux, 70 years old; another brother, Emil, 82; their wives and children had been killed by the Gestapo for patriotic activities of the family heads.

The 69-year-old conductor said only music could solace his grief.

Yank Flyer Thinks His Guns Brought Death To Rommel

Santa Monica, Cal., Nov. 28 (AP)—Lieut. Harold O. Miller, 20, Santa Rosa (Cal.) army flyer, told today how he strafed a staff car believed by army intelligence to be the one in which German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, "the Desert Fox," was fatally injured on the Normandy front last July.

Miller, a member of a Thunderbolt fighter-bomber group of the 8th Fighter Command under orders to strike at all German attempts to bring up reinforcements, swooped down on the enemy staff car about 20 miles behind the lines.

Direct Hits By First Burst

"I spotted the staff car coming down the road and I made a diving turn," the lieutenant said. "When I got it in my sights within range, I let loose with all my guns.

"I was lucky and my first burst scored direct hits."

His gun camera recorded the event, which army intelligence believes marked the fatal injury of Rommel. The date was July 24, and the German radio later admitted "high-ranking German officers were injured today when a staff car was strafed by enemy fighter planes." Allied intelligence had definitely placed Rommel in the vicinity. The Nazis admitted his death several weeks later.

NOV 29 1944

Fuel Tank Exploded

After his fire riddled the car, Miller said, "the fuel tank exploded and burst into flames."

"It left a trail of blazing gasoline for about 200 yards and then swerved into a ditch. Then it bounced into a field and I watched it burn. I came back for another look to make sure it was a goner. Then I went back upstairs, rejoined the other fellows and went about my business."

Lieut. Miller is credited with 76 missions completed successfully and six enemy planes destroyed, and holds the Distinguished Flying Cross with cluster and the Air Medal with three clusters.

"THE AMERICANS ARE SPARING NO AMMUNITION," HE SAID. "THEY SENT OUT DIVEBOMBERS AND STRAFING PLANES TIME AND AGAIN. MY MEN ARE STANDING TERRIBLE TRIALS, BUT THEY HOLD."

THE GERMAN AGENCY TRANSOCEAN REPORTED THAT 1,800,000 PERSONS WERE TRYING TO THROW UP FORTIFICATIONS ON THE FRONTIER.

DESPITE THE BREVITY OF TERRITORIAL GAINS, THE SUCCESSES OF THAT SLOGGING DRIVE IN THE NORTH WERE INDICATED BY THE CAPTURE OF MEMBERS OF THE THIRD GERMAN PARACHUTIST DIVISION BY THE U.S. FIRST ARMY TODAY. THE PRISONERS SAID THEY HAD MOVED IN TO RELIEVE THE BADLY BATTERED 12TH AND 47TH INFANTRY DIVISIONS WHICH WERE MAULED SO BADLY THEY HAD TO BE WITHDRAWN.

IT WAS DISCLOSED THAT THE EIGHTH AND 83RD DIVISIONS NOW WERE IN THE AMERICAN FIRST ARMY. THE FORMER UNDER MAJ. GEN. DONALD A. STROH OF CHEVY CHASE, MD., WAS THE DIVISION WHICH CRACKED BREST'S OUTER DEFENSES AND THEN TOOK OVER A WIDE FRONT ALONG THE LUXEMBOURG BORDER.

JUST AN HOUR AFTER DAWN THIS MORNING ANOTHER FORCE OF U.S.

INFANTRY CHARGED ACROSS 1,000 YARDS OF OPEN GROUND BEFORE THIS OLD PILE TO SMASH THE GERMANS AND RELIEVE THE LITTLE FORCE CONFRONTING THEM ACROSS THE MOAT.

BUT DURING THE HOURS OF DARKNESS THE GERMANS HAD ESCAPED EASTWARD--TWO OFFICERS AND 60 MEN. ELEVEN OTHER GERMANS, ALL WOUNDED, HAD BEEN EVACUATED EARLIER WITH PERMISSION OF AN AMERICAN NEGOTIATOR, CAPT.WILLIAM EWALD OF RED BANK, N.J.

IT WAS EWALD WHO WALKED TO THE CASTLE ACROSS AN OPEN FIELD AT 5:45 P.M. YESTERDAY BEARING A WHITE FLAG MADE FROM A GERMAN CIVILIAN'S SHIRT. THE CASTLE IS SOUTHEAST OF THE TOWN OF FRENZ.

HE ENTERED THE CASTLE THROUGH THE SOUTHERN END, HELD BY AMERICANS, AND CROSSED BY THE DRAWBRIDGE TO THE GERMAN-HELD NORTHERN END.

NOV 29 1944

"WE GOT WORD BACK AT THE COMMAND POST THAT OUR MEN HAD CAPTURED A JERRY AMBULANCE AS IT TRIED TO ENTER THE CASTLE," EWALD SAID. "MY C.O. TOLD ME TO GO UP THERE FOR TWO REASONS: FIRST TO MAKE SURE THAT ONLY JERRY WOUNDED ENLISTED MEN AND NO UNWOUNDED WERE EVACUATED, AND SECOND TO DEMAND THE SURRENDER OF THE GARRISON. IT WAS A FUNNY FEELING WALKING ACROSS THAT FIELD, FOR THERE WAS PLENTY OF FIRE ON IT.

"I KNEW THE NAME OF THE GERMAN COMMANDER THROUGH PRISONERS WE HAD PICKED UP EARLIER. I ASKED FOR HIM BY NAME AND TOLD HIM HE HAD TO SURRENDER. HE PASSED A BOTTLE OF LIQUOR OVER TO ME--IT WAS GOOD, TOO--SHOOK HANDS AND SAID 'IT'S NICE OF YOU TO COME OVER, BUT I'M NOT IN SUCH A POSITION THAT I HAVE TO SURRENDER.'

"HE POINTED TO THE KNIGHT'S CROSS HE WAS WEARING AND ADDED 'THAT, IN FACT, IS ONE OF THE REASONS I CANNOT SURRENDER.'

"I LET HIM SEND OUT 11 OF HIS WOUNDED. AND THEN ABOUT 7:30 I LEFT WITH MY FLAG AND CAME BACK TO OUR LINES.

"ALL THE TIME I WAS THERE THE WHOLE JERRY PART OF THE CASTLE WASULIGHTED LIKE DAY FROM A FIRE THAT WAS BURNING IN THE UPPER PART. THE JERRIES WERE DOWN IN THE DEEP CELLARS, JUST LIKE OUR BOYS JUST ACROSS THE MOAT.

NOV 29 1944

"NOTHING WAS BETWEEN THE JERRIES ON ONE SIDE AND THE YANKS ON THE OTHER THAN THAT MOAT. THOSE JERRIES WERE ALL PACKED AND READY TO BEAT IT WHEN I WAS IN THERE. THERE WAS ONE DEAD GERMAN OFFICER ON THE DRAWBRIDGE OVER THE MOAT AND ANOTHER ONE ON THE DOOR TO ONE OF THE CELLARS ON OUR SIDE OF THE CASTLE.

"WHAT THOSE JERRIES DID WAS TO SNEAK UP OUT OF THERE SOMETIME DURING THE NIGHT. WHEN WE PUT IN OUR ATTACK THIS MORNING AND CHARGED THAT PLACE, EVERY JERRY WAS GONE."

SCOTT, WHO IS A COMPANY COMMANDER IN THE 603RD TANK DESTROYER BATTALION, WAS WOUNDED IN A KNEE BY A MORTAR FRAGMENT AT LANDROFF RECENTLY. HE WAS EVACUATED TO AN AID STATION AND AFTER HAVING HIS WOUND BANDAGED HE STARTED TO LEAVE. HE HAD GONE ABOUT A 100 FEET WHEN A SHELL BURST DROVE SHRAPNEL INTO HIS BACK AND LEFT ARM. WITH THE U.S. THIRD ARMY, NOV.28-(AP)-DOUGHBOYS OF THIS ARMY CUT INTO GERMANY ALONG A SEVEN-MILE FRONT AND PENETRATED WITHIN THREE AND ONE-HALF MILES OF SAARLAUTERN TODAY.
THESE GAINS OF UP TO TWO MILES CAME WHILE OTHER INFANTRY PUSHED WITHIN EIGHT MILES OF SAARBRUCKEN.
THE FRESH INVASION OF GERMANY GAVE THE THIRD ARMY A 26-MILE FRONT INSIDE THE REICH AND CONTROL OF MORE THAN 40 SQUARE MILES OF GERMANY.
THE FOURTH ARMORED DIVISION BRIDGEHEAD ACROSS THE SAAR RIVER IN FRANCE WAS EXTENDED TWO MILES NORTHWARD WHILE RECONNAISSANCE UNITS ENTERED SARREWERDEN AFTER A NEW CROSSING.
THE 90TH DIVISION'S 357TH REGIMENT ADDED A MILE TO THE LENGTH OF THE FRONT INSIDE GERMANY BY PUSHING UP TO A MILE INTO THE REICH JUST BEYOND GUERSTLING, SIX MILES WEST OF SAARLAUTERN. JUST TO THE SOUTH THE 377TH REGIMENT ADDED ANOTHER THREE MILES, AND STILL FARTHER SOUTH THE 378TH OF THE 95TH DIVISION GAINED TWO AND A HALF MILES, CROSSING THE BORDER AND APPROACHING BERUS, FOUR MILES SOUTHWEST OF SAARLAUTERN.
SAARLAUTERN AND SAARBRUCKEN ARE THE TWO MOST IMPORTANT TOWNS IN THIS SECTOR. RESISTANCE, HOWEVER, WAS ONLY MODERATE AS THE GERMANS CONTINUED TO PULL BACK TOWARD THE SIEGFRIED LINE DEFENSES.
IMMEDIATELY EAST OF ST.AVOLD ENEMY RESISTANCE HARDENED QUICKLY AND THE 80TH DIVISION'S 319TH REGIMENT REPORTED GAINS OF ONLY A HALF-MILE ALONG A THREE-MILE FRONT. THE COMPANION 317TH REGIMENT, HOWEVER, CAPTURED ONE TOWN AND WAS MOVING BRISKLY.
THE SIXTH ARMORED DIVISION, PRESSING NORTHWARD AND NORTHEASTWARD ALONG SEVERAL PATHS, APPROACHED BIDING, FOUR MILES SOUTHEAST OF ST.AVOLD, AND ENTERED CAPPEL, SIX MILES SOUTHEAST, TO JOIN UP WITH UNITS OF THE 80TH DIVISION AFTER A MILE AND A HALF ADVANCE.
THE 328TH REGIMENT OF THE 26TH DIVISION DROVE THREE MILES EAST TO HINSINGEN, 11 MILES SOUTH OF SARREGUEMINES, WHILE FOURTH ARMORED RECONNAISSANCE PATROLS MOVED TWO MILES THROUGH THE WOODS BETWEEN THE SAAR AND THE SALINS CANAL TO ENTER SARREWERDEN.
FOURTH ARMORED UNITS IN A NORTHWARD SHOVE OF TWO MILES EAST OF THE SAAR CARRIED BEYOND BURBACH AND BERG, ABOUT 14 MILES SOUTH OF SARREGUEMINES.
A FULL-SCALE BATTLE FOR THE SAAR AND THE SIEGFRIED LINE DEFENSES ALONG OR NEAR IT APPEARED TO BE IMMINENT AS THE GERMAN RETREAT BROUGHT THE THREE MAIN SAAR CITIES OF SAARBRUCKEN, SAARLAUTERN AND MERZIG WITHIN AMERICAN ARTILLERY RANGE.
SOME PRISONERS OF WAR REPORTED THAT NON-ESSENTIAL CIVILIANS WERE BEING MOVED OUT OF THOSE CITIES, ALTHOUGH IT WAS FELT GENERALLY THAT MILITARY PERSONNEL CHARGED WITH THEIR DEFENSE WOULD GET THE FAMILIAR NAZI "FIGHT TO THE DEATH" ORDERS.

WITH THE U. S. SEVENTH ARMY IN ALSACE, FRANCE, NOV. 28-(AP)-BEFORE WITHDRAWING UNDER FRENCH AND AMERICAN PRESSURE FROM STRASBOURG THE GERMANS DID NOT HAVE TIME TO PLANT MANY MINES OR BOOBY TRAPS; BUT THEY DID ALL RIGHT BY OFFICE SAFES.

MAJ. MERRITT HURSH OF WENONAH, N.J., WHO HAS BEEN IN STRASBOURG SINCE THE FIRST DAY THE FRENCH AND AMERICANS CRASHED INTO THE CITY, SAID THE GERMANS STUFFED DYNAMITE INTO SAFES AT THE LUXURIOUS GESTAPO HEADQUARTERS AND AT THE POST OFFICE. WHEN FRENCH SQUADS OPENED THE SAFES, THE BLEW UP, BUT ONLY A FEW CASUALTIES RESULTED.

HURSH SAID HUNDREDS OF FOUNTAIN PENS, DESIGNED FOR USE AS BOOBY TRAPS BUT NOT LOADED, WERE FOUND IN A BUILDING ACROSS THE STREET FROM GESTAPO HEADUQARTERS.

AFTER JEEPING ON MOST OF STRASBOURG'S STREETS EXCEPT IN THE AREA AROUND THE FRENCH END OF TJE KEHL BRIDGES, WHERE THE GERMANS STILL HELD A BRIDGEHEAD, HURSH MINES WERE AN EXTREME RARITY.

"THE FRENCH AND AMERICANS CAUGHT THE GERMANS COMPLETELY BY SURPRISE," HE EXPLAINED. "I AM SURE THAT'S WHY THEY DIDN'T PREPARE THEIR USUAL RECEPTION FOR US."

NOV 29 1944

GESTAPO HEADQUARTERS WAS A FOUR-STORY BUILDING WITH 100 PRIVATE OFFICES, EACH CONTAINING A PICTURE OF HITLER.

AN AMERICAN 45-CALIBRE PISTOL WAS FOUND IN ONE OFFICE.

ACCORDING TO LT. COL. C. L. SAGMOEN OF MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., STRASBOURG WAS SUBJECTED TO LITTLE SHELLFIRE TODAY, BUT THERE WAS PLENTY OF SMALL ARMS FIRE IN THE AREA OF THE GERMAN

BRIDGEHEAD.

THE KEHL BRIDGES ARE THREE PERMANENT STRUCTURES -- A 14-SPAN HIGHWAY BRIDGE 1090 FEET LONG; A FIVE-SPAN HIGHWAY BRIDGE 780 FEET LONG; AND A SEVEN-SPAN RAILROAD BRIDGE 785 FEET LONG. ALL ARE SAID TO BE HEAVILY MINED.

HURSH SAID NEARLY 12 MILES OF TUNNELS WERE FOUND UNDER BURGERSPITAL, EUROPE'S LARGEST HOSPITAL, WHICH SURRENDERED QUICKLY TO THE AMERICANS.

MANY CIVILIANS, HURSH SAID, ARE SURLY AND INDIFFERENT, COMPLAIN ABOUT THE DAMAGE CAUSED BY ALLIED PLANES AND ARTILLERY, AND BUSINESSES ARE STILL GENERALLY CLOSED.

THIRD, ANY PERSON WHO GIVES SHELTER TO SNIPERS OR HELPS THEM IN ANY WAY WILL BE SHOT. FOURTH, PERSONS CARRYING WEAPONS WITHOUT PERMITS WILL BE ARRESTED AND COURTMARTIALLED.

stockholm, nov. 28-(ap)-negotiations to open passenger railway traffic between narvik, norway, and sweden to relieve the critical north norwegian refugee problem is understood to be in progress between swedes and germans, a reliable informant said today.

in this connection, the informed source said, sweden already has made a strong representation in berlin regarding the whole forced evacuation of northern norway ordered by the nazis in the face of the russian advance.

the negotiations are wholy independent of an earlier quisling request that sweden permit transit of norweigan refugees through sweden back to norway. this request was refused.

the swedish people generally are aroused by the plight of thousands of northern norweigians who were compelled to leave their homes with virtually no food or clothing and seek shelter in the overcrowded tromsoe and narvik districts.

the visit of german minister hans thomsen to berlin--he returned to stockholm today--is interpreted in some circles as indication that the swedish government is pressing for settlement of the norwegian question.

A BOMBER BASE IN ITALY, NOV 14-(DELAYED)-(AP)-"MICKEY", THE NEW INSTRUMENT THAT LOOKS THROUGH HEAVY CLOUDS AND PICKU OUT TARGETS, HAS TURNED THE U.S. 15TH AIR FORCE FROM A FAIR WEATHER PUNCHING FORCE INTO A 24-HOUR RAIN OR SHINE THREAT TO THE SOUTHERN PORTION OF HITLER'S SHRINKING EUROPE.

(A LONDON DISPATCH SAID THE NEW RADAR DEVICE PERMITS ACCURATE BOMBING THROUGH CLOUD COVER THREE MILES THICK. THE DEVICE TRANSMITS RADIO WAVES WHICH STRIKE SURFACE OBJECTS AND REBOUND TO A RECEIVER IN A BOMBER, GIVING AN OUTLINE OF CITIES, COASTLINES, SHIPS, RAILROAD YARDS AND OTHER TARGETS. EVEN INDIVIDUAL BUILDINGS CAN BE BOMBED.)

IN ADDITION TO THIS BRAND NEW WEAPON, THE 15TH HAS DEVELOPED THE FIRST AMERICAN NIGHT RAIDING TACTICS. NIGHT RAIDING HAD BEEN A PROCEDURE LEFT TO THE RAF EXCLUSIVELY WHILE U.S.AIRMEN CONCENTRATED ON SHARP PRECISION BOMBING IN DAYLIGHT.

ALREADY CREDITED WITH PIONEERING A TECHNIQUE FOR CRASHING THROUGH TO ENEMY OIL TARGETS AND PENETRATING TARGETS ARTFULLY SCREENED BY SMOKE, THE 15TH--THE AIR CORPS' YOUNGEST OVERSEAS UNIT--HAS ADVANCED SO FAR NOW IN NIGHT AND BAD WEATHER BOMBING TACTICS THAT ALREADY REGULAR RUNS ARE BEING CARRIED OUT UNDER BOTH CONDITIONS.

FROM THE VERY FIRST EXPERIMENTAL MISSIONS MADE BY FLYING FORTRESSES AND LIBERATORS OVER MUNICH, KLAGENFURT AND VIENNA IN LATE OCTOBER, THE CHIEF DISCOVERY WAS THAT ENEMY FLAK, USUALLY DEADLY IN THESE AREAS, WAS NOT SO GOOD AT NIGHT AND IN BAD WEATHER AND THAT OPPOSITION FROM THE LUFTWAFFE WAS CONSPICUOUSLY ABSENT.

NOV 29 1944

"IT IS MUCH HARDER TO MAP YOUR COURSE AND GET YOUR SHIP OVER THE TARGET," LT.CHESTER E.TOTON, A NAVIGATOR FROM 2548 WEST IOWA ST., CHICAGO, SAID AFTER ONE OF THE FIRST NIGHT RAIDS. "BUT THE LESSENED EFFECT OF THE ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE MORE THAN MAKES UP FOR IT."

OUT OF THE PATTERN SO THAT THE SPLIT SECOND TIMING OF THE PATTERN WILL NOT BE TANGLED UP. IN THIS TYPE OF FLYING EACH CRAFT IS VIRTUALLY ON ITS OWN.

"NEVER BEFORE," SAID LT.DONALD L.WHITE, 405 BEALL ST., CUMBERLAND, MD., A BOMBARDIER, "HAS THE SUCCESS OF A RAID DEPENDED SO MUCH ON THE ACCURACY OF MY COMPUTATIONS ALONE."

LT.MURRAY G.STONE, A PILOT, FROM 624 G.STREET, SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, SAID THIU FEELING OF "BEING ON YOUR OWN" GAVE THE CREWS A NEW "SELF-CONFIDENCE."

NOV 29 1944

"YEAH," SAID NAVIGATOR LT.RICHARD VAN HEUSEN OF SANDSTON, VA., "I LIKE THIS WAY MUCH BETTER."

ABOARD A U.S.CARRIER OFF LUZON,NOV.25-(AP)-THE JAPANESE LOST ONE OF THEIR PRIZE HEAVY CRUISERS AND THREE DESTROYERS IN ATTACKS BY UNITED STATES NAVY AIRMEN WHO HUNTED DOWN ENEMY SHIPPING ALONG BOTH COASTS OF LUZON TODAY.

NOV 29 1944

THE CRUISER WAS A 17,000-TON MOGAMI CLASS WARSHIP DAMAGED BY FLIERS OF THIS CARRIER OCTOBER 26TH OFF MINDORA ISLAND, SOUTH OF LUZON, DURING THE PHILIPPINE'S SEA BATTLE. THE JAPANESE WERE TRYING TO RUN THE CRUISER BACK TO HOME BASE FOR REPAIR.

A BOMB FROM ANOTHER CARRIER CAUGHT UP WITH IT TODAY AT SANTA CRUZ HARBOR IN BASOL BAY, WEST CENTRAL LUZON, AND OUR FLIERS REPORTED THE CRUISER WAS SUNK.

FOUR OLD DESTROYERS AND A CONCENTRATION OF TROOPS TRANSPORTS WERE FOUND ANCHORED OFF THE LITTLE ISLAND OF MARINDUQUE OFF SOUTHERN LUZON.

ALL FOUR OF THESE DESTROYERS WERE DAMAGED IN THE FIRST ATTACK.

LT.R.M.COLLING OF MITCHELL,S.D., REPORTED TWO OF THEM SANK IN A LATER STRIKE.

OTHER CARRIER PILOTS MEANWHILE WIPED OUT A CONVOY OF THREE CARGO SHIPS AND A DESTROYER WHICH WERE UNDERWAY TO THE WEST OF SANTACRUZ. TWO TANKERS WERE SUNK OFF LUBANG AND BELMONTE, SOUTHWEST OF LUZON.

AT THE SAME TIME, A MASTHEAD BOMBING ATTACK DESTROYED A THREE THOUSAND TON CARGO VESSEL AND TWO LUGGERS IN MANILA HARBOR, WHILE SIX OTHER VESSELS WERE DAMAGED.

WHILE MAKING A PASS OVER LUZON, FIGHTERS STRAFED A TRAIN OF SEVEN TANK CARS SETTING THEM ON FIRE. OTHER FIGHTERS ATTACKED A 150 TRUCK CONVOY.

ABOARD ADMIRAL HALSEY'S THIRD FLEET FLAGSHIP OFF PHILIPPINES, VIA NAVY RADIO, NOV.25-(DELAYED)-(AAP)-FROM BEHIND THE THIN STEEL SPLINTER-SHIELD ON HIS FLAG BRIDGE, AD.WILLIAM F.HALSEY STOOD WATCHING A DARK SPECK OF AIRPLANES OUTLINED AGAINST GRAY PUFFS OF CLOUDS. THERE WAS A COOL GLEAM IN HIS EYES, AND HIS BATTLE HELMET WAS CLAMPED ON HIS HEAD.

FOR THE FIRST TIME SINCE THE FORMOSA STRIKES BY CARRIERS SIX WEEKS AGO, A SIZABLE FORCE OF JAPANESE PLANES, PERHAPS 33, WAS ATTACKING VESSELS IN THE TASK GROUP AROUND THIS FLAGSHIP.THEY CAME OUT OF THE CLOUDS AND FROM A DOZEN POINTS AS HALSEY WATCHED, HIS FLAGSHIP'S GUNS OPENED FIRE.

ONE PLANE DIVED SUDDENLY TOWARD A NEARBY CARRIER. AROUND HALSEY THE NOISE ON THE FLAG BRIDGE DOUBLED, AND MACHINEGUNS ADDED TO THE DN OF THE HAVIER WEAPONS.

THE DIVING PLANE KEPT COMING. AS IT RELEASED ITS BOMBS, A SHELL FROM ADM.HALSEY'S SHIP HIT IT SQUARELY. THE BOMBS SPLASHED HARMLESSLY IN THE WATER.

THEN OUT OF THE BLACK SMOKE WHERE THE SHELLED PLANE HAD EXPLODED A WHITE SILK PARACHUTE BLOSSOMED. EMPTY IT DRIFTED DOWN INTO THE CARRIER'S WAKE, THE BLAST HAD DESTROYED THE PILOT, BUT SOME-HOW THE EXPLOSION HAD BLOWN HIS PARACHUTE CLEAR AND TUGGED THE RIPCORD SO THAT IT OPENED.

THE UNDAMAGED CARRIER KEPT ON GOING. OTHER ATTACKING PLANES CAME IN AND THE SHIP'S GUNNERS HAD A FIELD DAY, ACCOUNTING FOR EIGHT ENEMY PLANES IN HALF AN HOUR WHILE HALSEY LOOKED ON.

THE ATTACK ON THE U.S.SHIPS, NONE OF WHICH WAS EVENFORCED OFF TATION FORMATION, WAS THE ENEMY'S EFFORT TO STRIKE BACK FTER ABSORBING HEAVY PUNISHMENT IN A NEW BLOW AT THE PHILIPPINES.

TOPNOTCH NAVY FLIERS ALREADY HAD TURNED MANILA BAY INTO A ARITIME JUNKYARD AND SUNK AT LEST 18 MORE JAPANESE SHIPS.

(IN A PREVIOUS REPORT ON THIS ACTION, WHICH TOOK PLACE NOV.24, DM.CHESTER W.NIMITZ PLACED THE ENEMY'S LOSSES AS 48 SHIPS SUNK R DAMAGED.)

THE PORTION OF MANILA HARBOR LYING OUTSIDE THE BREAKWATER IVES INDICATION OF THE FAST VANISHING USEFULNESS OF THE ENEMY HIPPING POINT THERE.

ARMY AIR FORCES HEADQUARTERS,PACIFIC OCEAN AREAS,CENTRAL PACIFIC,NOV.25-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THE SEVENTH ARMY AIR FORCE DISCLOSED TODAY HOW A LIGHTNING PILOT FLEW HIS PHOTO PLANE AT 350 MILES AN HOUR ONLY 50 FEET ABOVE A JAPANESE AIRFIELD STUDDED WITH ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS AND CAME HOME WITH VALUABLE RECONNAISSANCE PICTURES.

NOV 29 1944

THE PILOT WAS FIRST LT.CLARENCE E.WILLIAMS, 23 SALT LAKE CITY. THE PICTURES HE TOOK PROVIDED CLUES RESULTING IN VIRTUAL NEUTRALIZATION OF THE ENEMY STRONGHOLD, THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID.

THE FLIGHT PLANS WERE LAID BY WILLIAMS AND FIRST LT.ALFRED S. WOOTON,BUCKEYE,ARIZ. WOOTON FLEW OVER PAGAN AT 15,000 FEET, ACTING AS A DECOY. WHILE THE JAPANESE WERE THUS DISTRICTED, WILLIAMS ZIPPED IN JUST OVER THE WAVES.

WITH THESE DEMONSTRATIONS SHOWING NO SIGNS [illegible]ING,
PRIME MINISTER W.L.MACKENZIE KING BATTLED HERE ON PARLIAMENT HILL
TO SAVE THE LIFE OF HIS GOVERNMENT AFTER WARNING THE COUNTRY IN A THREE-HOUR ADDRESS YESTERDAY THAT "ANARCHY" FACED THE COUNTRY UNLESS IT COULD GET TOGETHER IN "REASONABLE" UNITY ON THE CONSCRIPTION ISSUE.

KING WAS IN THE PECULIAR POSITION OF FACING DEFEAT BY A COMBINATION OF VOTES FROM TWO EXTREME OPPOSITE QUARTERS--THOSE WHO OPPOSE ANY FORM OF CONSCRIPTION FOR OVERSEAS DUTY, AND THOSE WHO FEEL THE GOVERNMENT'S PARTIAL CONSCRIPTION POLICY OF ORDERING ONLY
AN INITIAL 16,000 ABROAD DOES NOT GO FAR ENOUGH.

THE OPPOSITION TO ANY TYPE OF OVERSEAS CONSCRIPTION COMES ENTIRELY FROM THE FRENCH-SPEAKING PROVINCE OF QUEBEC, WHICH NORMALLY PROVIDES SOME 60 VOTES FOR KING'S LIBERAL GOVERNMENT. IT NORMALLY CAN COUNT ON AROUND 160 OF THE APPROXIMATE 220 EXPECTED TO VOTE THIS WEEK ON A MOTION OF CONFIDENCE.

THE PRIME MINISTER MET WITH THE QUEBEC GROUP IN A THREE-HOUR CAUCUS THIS MORNING, AFTER WHICH IT WAS REPORTED THE PARTY WOULD HOLD TOGETHER ON THE CONSCRIPTION ISSUE. THERE STILL WAS A POSSIBILITY, HOWEVER, THAT A NUMBER OF MEMBERS WOULD JOIN FOUR QUEBEC LIBERALS WHO ALREADY HAVE QUIT THE GOVERNMENT RANKS. AFTER THE CAUCUS THE HOUSE OF COMMONS MET IN SECRET SESSION TO HEAR SECRET
MILITARY INFORMATION BEARING ON THE CONSCRIPTION CRISIS.

LEAVING THE CAUCUS OF QUEBEC LIBERALS, L.R.LAFLECHE (CAP L AND F)
SAID "IT WAS A VERY CORDIAL MEETING AND THERE WILL BE NO BOLTERS" BUT ONE MEMBER SAID HE GOT THE IMPRESSION SOME QUEBEC MEMBERS WOULD VOTE AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT.

AND ANOTHER ADMINISTRATION IMMEDIATELY TAKE ITS PLACE."

THE OPPOSITION LEADER GORDON GRAYDON, PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE, FOLLOWED KING BRIEFLY WITH A RHETORICAL REQUEST THAT THE PRIME

THE ARMED DEMONSTRATION AND SIT-DOWN WAS RELATED BY A CORRESPOND-

MEMBERS OF THE UNIT HAD DEMANDED FROM ARMH HEADQUARTERS IN OTTAWA
THAT THEY BE RETURNED TO THEIR HOMES IN QUEBEC.

MEANWHILE AT VERNON,B.C., FAR SOUTH AND INLAND, AN INDIRECT

EMPHASIS WAS LAID, IN THE READING, ON THE PENALTY PHRASE UNDER

WASHINGTON,NOV.28-(AP)-FOLLOWING IS THE TEXT OF A POLICY STATEMENT ON WORLD FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ISSUED TODAY BY THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE AMERICAN SOCIETY OF NEWSPAPER EDITORS (ABOUT 900):

LOOKING FORWARD TO THE RESTORATION OF INTERNATIONAL COMMUNICATION ON A PEACE BASIS, THE AMERICAN SOCIETY OF NEWSPAPER EDITORS TODAY INVITED RECIPROCAL DECLARATIONS BY THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT AND ALL OTHER GOVERNMENTS, PRESS, RADIO AND OTHER MEDIA OF INFORMATION, EMBRACING THE RIGHT OF THE PEOPLE TO READ AND HEAR NEWS WITHOUT HINDRANCE.

THE SOCIETY URGED THE REMOVAL OF ALL POLITICAL, ECONOMIC AND MILITARY BARRIERS TO THE FREEDOM OF WORLD INFORMATION.

THE SOCIETY NOTES WITH SATISFACTION THE RECENT STATEMENT BY EDWARD R. STETTINIUS JR., NEWLY-APPOINTED SECRETARY OF STATE, THAT THE UNITED STATES PLANS EXPLORATORY TALKS WITH OTHER NATIONS LOOKING TO INTERNATIONAL UNDERSTANDINGS GUARANTEEING THERE SHALL BE NO BARRIERS TO INTERCHANGE OF INFORMATION AMONG ALL NATIONS.

IN ITS DEEP CONVICTION THAT FREEDOM OF INFORMATION THROUGHOUT THE WORLD IS VITAL TO AN ENDURING PEACE, THE AMERICAN SOCIETY OF NEWSPAPER EDITORS ACCLAIMS THE STATEMENTS OF THIS PRINCIPLE WHICH HAVE BEEN MADE BY THE PRESIDENT, BY BOTH REPUBLICAN AND DEMOCRATIC PARTIES AND BY THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES.

NOV 29 1944

IN HIS HISTORIC SPEECH OF JAN. 6, 1941, DEFINING THE FOUR FREEDOMS, PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT SAID: "THE FIRST IS FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND EXPRESSION -- EVERYWHERE IN THE WORLD."

AT ITS CHICAGO CONVENTION IN JUNE, 1944, THE REPUBLICAN PARTY ADOPTED THE FOLLOWING PLATFORM PLANK: "ALL CHANNELS OF NEWS MUST BE KEPT OPEN WITH EQUALITY OF ACCESS TO INFORMATION AT THE SOURCE. IF AGREEMENT CAN BE ACHIEVED WITH FOREIGN NATIONS TO ESTABLISH THE SAME PRINCIPLES, IT WILL BE A VALUABLE CONTRIBUTION TO FUTURE PEACE."

IN JULY, 1944, THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY, AT ITS NATIONAL CONVENTION, ADOPTED THIS PLATFORM PLANK: "WE BELIEVE IN THE WORLD RIGHT OF ALL MEN TO WRITE, SEND AND PUBLISH NEWS AT UNIFORM COMMUNICATION RATES AND WITHOUT INTERFERENCE BY GOVERNMENTAL AND PRIVATE MONOPOLY AND THAT RIGHT SHOULD BE PROTECTED BY TREATY."

ON SEPT. 21, 1944, BOTH HOUSES OF CONGRESS, BY CONCURRENT RESOLUTION, MADE THE FOLLOWING DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLE: "RESOLVED BY THE SENATE (THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES CONCURRING), THAT THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES EXPRESSES ITS BELIEF IN THE WORLD-WIDE RIGHT OF INTERCHANGE OF NEWS BY NEWS-GATHERING AND DISTRIBUTING AGENCIES, WHETHER INDIVIDUAL OR ASSOCIATE, BY ANY NAME, WITHOUT DISCRIMINATION AS TO SOURCES, DISTRIBUTION, RATES, OR CHARGES; AND THAT THIS RIGHT SHOULD BE PROTECTED BY INTERNATIONAL COMPACT."

SEVERAL OTHER GOVERNMENTS AND LEADERS BY THEIR RECENT STATEMENTS SHOW THAT THEY ALSO RECOGNIZE THAT FREEDOM OF INFORMATION IS A KEYSTONE TO WORLD LAW AND ORDER WITH JUSTICE BASED ON THE CONSENT OF THE GOVERNED.

NOV 29 1944

ALL THESE SIGNS AND STATEMENTS ARE ENCOURAGING, BUT THE ASNE NEVER WILL RELAX IN ITS CAMPAIGN UNTIL FREEDOM OF INFORMATION BECOMES A LIVING REALITY EVERYWHERE IN THE WORLD.

WE BELIEVE THAT MOST AMERICANS AND THEIR NEWSPAPERS WILL SUPPORT GOVERNMENT POLICIES AND ACTIO TOWARD REMOVAL OF ALL POLITICAL, LEGAL AND ECONOMIC BARRIERS TO THE MEDIA OF INFORMATION, AND THAT OUR GOVERNMENT SHOULD MAKE THIS ABUNDANTLY CLEAR TO OTHER NATIONS.

SPECIFICALLY WE URGE THAT BOTH THE ADMINISTRATIVE AND LEGISLATIVE BRANCHES OF OUR GOVERNMENT, AND THAT OTHER ORGANIZATIONS IN THIS COUNTRY AND ABROAD JOIN US IN A PROGRAM TO FURTHER FREEDOM OF INFOR-

MATION. THIS PROGRAM SHOULD EMBRACE THE FOLLOWING GOALS:

1. RECOGNITION THAT COMPLETE FRIENDSHIP WITH ANY OTHER SOVEREIGN POWER IS DEPENDENT, AMONG OTHER CONSIDERATIONS, ON THE FREEDOM, THE ABUNDANCE AND THE EXCHANGE OF INFORMATION BETWEEN PEOPLE.

2. RECOGNITION THAT ANY PRINTED MATTER, FILM. BROADCAST OR OTHER MEDIA OF PUBLIC INFORMATION PAID IN WHOLE OR IN PART, DIRECTLY OR INDIRECTLY, BY A GOVERNMENT, ORGANIZATION OR PERSON, SHALL CARRY CONSPICUOUS LABELS AS TO SOURCE.

3. RECOGNITION THAT ANY GOVERNMENT OR PRIVATE MONOPOLY OF THE MEDIA OF INFORMATION IS INIMICAL TO THE PUBLIC INTEREST AND INCOMPATIBLE WITH FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION AND COMPETITION OF IDEAS ON WHICH A WELL-INFORMED PUBLIC OPINION IS BASED.

4. REFUSAL TO RECOGNIZE THE RIGHT OF ANY GOVERNMENT, ORGANIZATION OR PERSON:

NOV 29 1944

(A) TO DISCRIMINATE AGAINST ANY MEDIA OF INFORMATION.

(B) TO INFRINGE UPON FREEDOM OF INFORMATION OR EXPRESSION.

(B) TO PLACE ANY BARRIERS, TECHNICAL, POLITICAL, LEGAL OR ECONOMIC AGAINST THE FREE EXCHANGE OF INFORMATION BETWEEN THE PEOPLES OF THE WORLD.

(B) TO CENSOR INFORMATION IN TIME OF PEACE, EXCEPT FOR OBSCENITY OR FRAUD.

JAPAN'S THREATS OF TORTURE FAIL TO DAUNT FLIERS

Third Attack in Week Adds to Damage in Nipponese Capitol.

FIRES ARE REPORTED

Air Force Spokesman Declares Only Military Objectives Hit.

By JOHN B. OWEN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(AP) American Superfort crews, defying thinly-veiled Japanese threats of torture and murder, plunged bombs into Tokyo today for the third time in a week.

Up from their bases on Saipan island 1,480 miles away, flashed forces of the vigorous new 21st Bomber Command to attack objectives in the area of the Japanese capitol. Details were not available.

Smashes were made last Friday at an important aircraft plant by a large force which left fires burning in the heart of Tokyo. Then on Monday a sizeable group of the B-29s picked out its waterfront industrial section for instrument bombing through clouds.

Today the Japanese radio hissed angrily that the Americans are "enemies of civilization." The propaganda broadcast described the bombings as "indiscriminate" and the speaker said that "American fliers participating in such attacks are not entitled to protection of international law." The broadcast was heard by the OWI.

An Air Forces spokesman here said indiscriminate bombing is not in the American plans; the aim is "strategic reduction of the enemy sources of production, namely factories and similar heavy structures."

The Japanese followed up the April, 1942, Tokyo raid led by Jimmy Doolittle by executing some of his men. That any of the personnel of the 21st are in Japanese hands as a result of the first two raids appears unlikely on the basis of official announcements up to today. One plane was lost to enemy action Friday when a Japanese flier smashed into it.

Naval Aviation Eliminated

Meantime an expert opinion that the exploits of navy and army fliers had virtually" eliminated "Japan's naval aviation came today from Vice Admiral Mark A. Mitscher, famous commander of a Pacific fleet carrier task force.

At a news conference here, Mitscher, one of the heroes of the battle of the Philippines, said that fliers have shot down about 4,000 Japanese in the last 18 months and that B-29 bombings of the enemy homeland have further cut the Japanese aviation potential.

Mitscher called Japanese fighting men "vicious brutes" and "educated savages" and warned the nation that it is in for a long war in the Pacific.

General Douglas MacArthur underscored the effectiveness of the Tokyo attacks today by wiring General H. H. Arnold, Air Forces chief, that they had diverted Japanese attention from the Philippines campaign.

"You will help me greatly if you hit hard and often," MacArthur said.

A 20th airforce spokesman said this week that attacks on key Japanese industrial targets will increase in weight and frequency.

The job of the B-29, reduction of the enemy's production sources, is shared by the veteran 20th Bomber Command based on the Asiatic mainland. On Monday it hustled over from India to tangle up vital transportation facilities of Bangkok, capital of Thailand.

The third mission against Tokyo was the eighth assault by the Super Fortresses in November on widely separated Japanese war production centers.

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—The new 21st Bomber Command bombed Tokyo from their Superfortresses for the third time in a week.

The War Department announced simply that "targets in the Tokyo area" were attacked. No details were available. It was stated a communique will be issued.

The attack, the third since announcement of formation of the 21st Command last Friday, was launched from its base on Saipan Island, south of Japan.

Two Waves Reported

[A later Tokyo radio broadcast said the raid was carried out in two waves. The first was over the target area for two hours, starting just before midnight, and the second struck two hours later and remained over the city for 45 minutes.

[The broadcast, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, said that the first wave dropped incendiaries over the city and the second penetrated the industrial Shizuoka prefecture, on the coastline below Tokyo, dropping bombs there.

Both flights were in "minor formation," the broadcast asserted.

Fires were started by the first flight, but these were quickly extinguished, said the broadcast. It claimed also that fires ignited by the second attack were "immediately" put out.

'Blind Bombing'

This third aerial thrust at Tokyo within a week, the Japanese homeland was informed, had been carried out "from a high altitude above the clouds" and "in general" was a "blind bombing on civilian homes." The assault on the Shizuoka district was characterized as "blond bombings on farm houses and fields."

"Our air defense units each time intercepted the enemy planes, repulsing them," said the broadcast. There was no claim that any of the raiders were shot down.]

An air forces spokesman here said indiscriminate bombing is not in the American plans; the aim is "strategic reduction of the enemy sources of production, namely factories and similar heavy structures."

It was the eighth foray of the mighty sky dreadnaughts this month, and sharply emphasized the stepped-up tempo of operations.

Smashes were made last Friday at an important aircraft plant by a large force which left fires burning in the heart of Tokyo. Then on Monday a sizable group of the Superfortresses picked Tokyo's water-front industrial section for instrument bombing through clouds.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur underscored the effectiveness of the Tokyo attacks today by wiring Gen. H. H. Arnold, air forces chief, that they had diverted Japanese attention from the Philippines campaign.

"You will help me greatly if you hit hard and often," MacArthur said.

A 20th Air Force spokesman said this week that attacks on key Japanese industrial targets will increase in weight and frequency.

San Francisco, Nov. 29 (AP)—Radio Tokyo said today that American bombers were again over the Japanese capital. The broadcast came at 8.30 A.M. (P.W.T.) today and was recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

Enemy Reports Fires.

The Tokyo radio said today that "a minor formation of B-29's attempted their first night attack" today on the Japanese capital, starting fires at two places. The fires immediately were brought under control, said the broadcast, recorded here by the Federal Communications Commission, and there was virtually no damage.

The Superfortresses dropped incendiaries and flare bombs, but were "repulsed by our effective interception," Tokyo declared.

FIFTH ARMY UNIT BATTLES ACROSS GERMAN FRONTIER

Five Ruined Nazi Towns Captured by Surging American Drive.

USE FLAMETHROWERS

Americans Near Duren, Important German Defense Center.

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

PARIS, Nov. 29—(AP) American Doughboys hammered new wedges into the Duren-Julich gateway to the Rhine today in a smash through five more of Germany's ruined towns. Elements of a Fifth Allied army battled onto Nazi soil in a stab at the northern anchor of the Siegfried line.

(A Canaian press war reporter's dispatch said Canadians of the Fifth and latest army to penetrate German soil were fighting in the area of de Wyler forest. The town of Wyler is just inside Germany east of Nijmegen, Holland, and about six miles northwest of Cleve, northern end of the Siegfried line.)

The flaming American assault west of Cologne toppled Hurtgen, in the vicinity of which Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's men have fought so fiercely for weeks. Langerwehe, Jungersdorf, Kleinhau and Koslar also fell in a surge which broke across the Inde river at two points and carried to within 3 1-2 miles of the stronghold of Duren.

It spread to the north where flamethrowers opened a path across the road connecting Lindren and Linich, five miles northeast of Geilenkirchen and seven miles northwest of Julich, threatening the latter place.

Floodgates Opened

This northeastern push of the Americans, matched by another flamethrower assault around Wurm to the west, caused the Germans to open the floodgates of dams along the river, flooding the valley north of Geilenkirchen to the width of nearly a mile.

At the other end of the long western front the American Seventh and French First armies gained control of nearly half of the Alsatian plain on the French side of the Rhine and moved within 40 miles of a junction of their two forces, a front dispatch said.

Americans captured the stronghold of Erstein, ten miles south of Strasbourg, after heavy fighting, and pushed on southward two miles, capturing Matzenheim. Other Seventh Army units, striking through the Vosges southwest of Erstein, seized Andlau and St. Maurice.

Langerwehe, last important communications center west of the Roer, was cleared of enemy troops after two days of house-to-house fighting.

Lt. Gen. Courtney Hodges' U. S. First army, in its smashing drive along both sides of the Adolf Hitler highway toward Duren, also seized Hurtgen, Jungersdorf, and Kleinhau.

Lt. Gen. William Simpson's U. S. Ninth army, boring forward on Hodges' left through knee-deep mud, drew an asault arc around the fortified road center of Julich by wiping out the last organized Nazi resistance in Koslar, a mile west of Julich, and by crossing the little Inde river just to the south on a captured bridge.

The Ninth was firmly established along the west bank of the Roer, last serious water barrier before the Rhine, for several miles both north and south of Julich. The Nazis had destroyed the only bridge across the stream at Julich. Allied planes and Ninth army artillery were reported to have knocked out 15 more German tanks in the past 24 hours.

In perhaps the day's most vital development, Hodges' battle-tried veterans at last began working their way out of Hurtgen forest, southwest of Duren, where infantry casualties have been severe, onto open terrain where tanks could operate.

(The German High command which chose to make a major stand west of the Rhine, described the fighting east of Aachen as a "bitter battle of attrition" and declared the Americans were suffering heavy tank losses.)

Units of five Allied armies were disclosed to be fighting on German soil with the announcement that troops of the First Canadian army had penetrated the Reich from the Nijmegen sector in Holland, presumably in the wedge the Allies drove into the Reichswald forest two months ago. The total of German prisoners captured since D-day rose to 737,000.

Patton Drives Ahead

Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's U. S. Third Army, driving into the German industrial Saar along a 26-mile front, was reported to have gained as much as 10 miles at undisclosed points and to be imminently threatening the important towns of Saarlautern, Hagenau, Merzig, Forbach, Saareguemines and Saare Louis.

Farther south Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's U. S. Seventh army approached Hagenau, an important communications center of 25,000 population. The French First army snapped shut a trap on thousands of German troops isolated between Mulhouse and Belfort. The French freed more than 30 villages during the day.

Only about 3,000 square miles of France remained in German hands—two rectangular stretches of borderland in Alsace and Lorraine and the long by-passed and besieged ports of Dunkerque, Lorient and St. Nazaire. Nazi troops also held some land at the mouth of the Garonne estuary leading to Bordeaux.

Port of Antwerp Used

Prime Minister Churchill disclosed that the Belgian port of Antwerp, second greatest in Europe, was in operation, pouring reinforcements and supplies to General Eisenhower's armies.

There was little change in the situation on the British front at the northern extremity of the line, but Lt. Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey's forces on the west side of the Maas river were brought under increasingly heavy fire by German artillery between Venlo and Roermond, apparently in expectation of a British attack.

Bad weather curtailed fighter-bomber support on the American front in the early part of the day, but 150 Marauder mediums used the "Pathfinder" technique to blast enemy positions without loss. In waves of 30, the Marauders bombed the Nazis in Elsdorf, nine miles north of Duren, and at two other points northwest of Duren.

(The Berlin radio said a bomb heavily damaged the famous Cologne cathedral during Monday's attack by American planes, piercing the roof and exploding inside the building. There was no report from Allied sources that the structure had been hit.)

A front dispatch said that while German troops opposing the American first army's advance east of Aachen were putting up tough resistance at most points, they were in many instances not up to the caliber of enemy forces encountered earlier in the war.

The Third parachute division—once a crack outfit—was said to be composed now partly of youths of 16 and 17 who had been given only the briefest training and never had jumped from a plane. Captured German officers and noncoms complained that their troops were ready to quit when they came under artillery fire.

The American troops who drove the last Nazi defenders from Langerwhe late Tuesday had a comparatively easy night, for the Germans did not counterattack.

North of Langerwhe, however, the enemy resisted strongly in the villages of Inden and Lamersdorf and counterattacked several times. Most Lamersdorf was in Yank hands.

FR NOV 30 1944

London, Nov. 29 (A. P.).—American tanks and infantry drove deeper into the weakening German front along the Roer River today after pushing the Germans from five towns in bitter battles to force open the gates to Cologne, twenty-three miles away.

Langerwehe, last major communications point west of the Roer and four miles from the river citadel of Duren, fell late yesterday, dispatches from the First Army said. The town had been entered Monday morning and the beaten Germans did not attempt a counter-attack after quitting its eastern limits. Also seized were Hurtgen, Kleinhau, Jungersdorf and Koslar.

The First Army advanced through stiff opposition into the western outskirts of Merode, a mile southeast of Jungersdorf and three and a half miles from Duren.

Patton at Siegfried Line.

In the center of the western front, Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's divisions gained as much as ten miles and at places reached the tough outer crust of the Siegfried Line in the Saar Basin. His men were within eight miles of Saarbrucken, capital of the Saar, and inside the industrial basin on a twenty-six-mile front. The important towns of Saarlautern, Hagenau, Merzig, Forbach, Sarreguemines and Saare union all were threatened.

The French First Army in the south trapped many Germans between Mulhouse and Belfort.

American First Army veterans cleaned the last house and cellar of the devastated forest town of Hurtgen after three days, and then drove a mile northeast and captured Kleinhau.

The Ninth Army shattered organized resistance at Koslar and moved within less than a mile of Julich, a pivot of the Roer River line. Two bridges were seized over the narrow Inde River, tributary of the Roer, at Inden and Altdorf.

Hurtgen is 27½ miles southwest of Cologne. Jungersdorf is four miles from Duren, and Koslar is less than two from Julich. Duren and Julich are fortress towns on the Roer River line, the last great natural barrier before the Rhine.

Other Americans of the 1st and 9th armies crawling slowly forward on a 25-mile front between Linnich and Hurtgen on the Cologne plain east of Aachen fought for every house and cellar in the ruined villages of Inden, Langerwehe, Lamersdorf and Grosshau. Some were within 23 miles of Cologne. Between the towns were intricate trench systems like those of the last war.

Fog Prevents Air Raid

Although organized resistance collapsed in Koslar under the impact of Lieut. Gen. William H. Simpson's 9th Army, a few Germans held out in the mud.

The 1st Army of Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges captured Hurtgen and Jungersdorf in painfully slow advances before dawn and in thick, drizzling fog that prevented air support.

The 9th and 1st armies appeared to be slowly forcing open the Roer River gate to Cologne.

Nazis Counterattack

A few hours after Hurtgen had been taken, 1st Army troops advanced half a mile northeastward to the outskirts of Kleinhaus. To the north, the Americans had hard going and made little or no progress around Inden and Lamersdorf. Instead, they were busy meeting counterattacks.

At Inden, one small but significant success was scored when an American patrol got astride the Inde River, which flows north into the Roer.

NOV 30 1944

Driving On Merzig

Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's 3d Army grasped for Merzig, in Rhenish Prussia near the Moselle River. The vanguards were two miles away. Others drove within eight miles of Sarrbrucken in the area east of St. Avold.

Patton's troops fought into the French coal town of Sarre Union, 21 miles below Saarbrucken, and within 3½ miles of the border city of Saarlautern.

The large French traffic center of Hagenau was threatened by troops three miles to the west. Railroads lead across the Rhine from there to Karlsruhe, 31 miles to the northeast, and to Neustadt.

Gain Near Ten Miles

Patton's 95th Division bolted forward almost ten miles yesterday and crossed the border at Berus and Duren—a town of the same name as that before Cologne. That extended the 3d Army front in Germany to 26 miles, reaching northwest to Besch, opposite Luxembourg.

On the southern flank, the French 1st Corps drove east from Rougemont le Chateau and the French 2nd Corps struck west from Mulhouse, joining at Burnhaput le Haut and trapping a German force of undisclosed size in a box 50 miles square between Mulhouse and B[illegible] fort.

Canadians On German Soil

Canadian troops were fighting on German soil for the first time, having crossed the Dutch border in the Nijmegen sector, presumably in the wedge the Allies drove into the Reichswald two months ago. At the extreme north, the British mopped up Nazi stragglers west of the Maas river in Holland and probed the defense mazes before Venlo and Roermond.

The 9th Army before Juelich captured a bridge intact at Altdorf over the Inde River, actually a little creek which flows into the Roer. Two more German tanks were destroyed, bringing the total for this army alone to 143 in the current offensive. The 9th destroyed an ammunition dump near Linnich on the Roer.

Both the 9th and the 1st Armies were fighting in flood water and mud, sometimes hipdeep, in a deadly hail of mortar fire and against the stiffest opposition the Germans could muster. Supplies and equipment had to go forward on the shoulders of men or the tops of tanks.

Barmen and Kerchberg fell yesterday. The defenses of the hamlet of Langerwehe, last important road center held by the Germans west of the Roer were broken.

The general picture of the 400-mile western front:

1. In the north, a deadly battle of attrition continued and its object was to destroy the bulk of German forces and reserves which were massed on this narrow front. 2. In the center, Allied progress was swift in the western fringe of the Saar Basin and in the last sizable corner of France. 3. In the south below Strasbourg, American and French units were consolidating and mopping up those Germans in the difficult Vosges Mountains and Alsatian Plain.

On all sections of the front, communications were being strengthened, supplies and reserves were moving up, and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's assault forces of 55 or more identified divisions were being strengthened for yet another and more powerful surge at the vitals of Germany—the arsenal industrial centers of the Ruhr, Rhineland and Saar.

The 7th Army fighting on their 3rd Army's right reached the outskirts of Zutzendorf. Berlin announced a withdrawal from the entire area north of Strasbourg.

The 7th Army approached Hagenau, a city of about 25,000, by fighting into the streets of Winterhaus and Ballendorf. Hagenau is the last important communication center between the Allies and Karlruhe, behind the Rhine.

To the west, infantry cut the Hagenau-Sarreguemines railroad. In the rough country southeast of the Saverne Pass, the Allied corridor to Strasbourg and the Rhine was broadened when the 3rd Infantry Division of Maj. Gen. John W. O'Daniel reached Grendelbruch and Rosenwiller.

The 103rd Infantry Division reached the outskirts of Barr in its penetration to the east side of the Vosges Mountains. The 36th Division captured St. Crox and Lievre on the eastern, down slope of St. Marie Pass.

Supreme headquarters would not estimate the number of Germans penned in the box south of the Vosges, but prisoners already were streaming in. It seemed possible the bag might be considerable. The French 1st Army in this area north of Switzerland captured 30 towns and villages in general advances near Dannemarie.

Drastic French Order About Snipers Stands

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Nov. 29 (AP)—The proclamation of Maj. Gen. Jacques LeClerc that five German hostages will be shot for every French soldier killed by snipers in Strasbourg still stands so far as Supreme Allied Headquarters is concerned.

A senior officer here declined to comment on reports that the proclamation might be countermanded, but pointed out that this headquarters had not yet issued any orders contrary to the proclamation.

LeClerc, commander of the 2nd French Armored Division attached to the United States 7th Army, said yesterday he was determined to halt sniping and proclaimed his intention of shooting hostages if it continued.

730,749 Germans Taken By Allies

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—Allied armies have captured at least 730,749 prisoners on the Western front since D-day, the equivalent of 73 German divisions as now constituted.

PATTON GIVES D.S.C. TO JERSEY OFFICER

With the United States Third Army, Nov. 29 (A. P.).—The first Allied soldier to cross the Moselle River, a Newark, N. J., tank lieutenant, received the Distinguished Service Cross Monday from Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton Jr., in the presence of the American Ambassador to Russia.

Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, on an inspection tour of the front in Gen. Patton's armored car, watched the general pin the medal on Lieut. William J. Marshall, of 11 Littleton avenue, Newark, at an Alsace-Lorraine crossroads village which had been under fire from German guns.

The 26-year-old platoon leader, now fighting in the Fourth Armored Division's bridgehead across the Sarre River, opened the Moselle bridgehead in September when he forded that river with five tanks and held off the enemy until a bridge was thrown across. First he had to cross a canal west of the Moselle under fire by throwing in logs while exchanging shots with the Germans on the opposite side.

Lieut. Marshall was originally awarded the Silver Star for the action, but when Gen. Patton visited the division Monday with Ambassador Harriman he reviewed the story and raised the award to the D. S. C. on the spot.

With the U.S. 7th Army in France, Nov. 29 (AP)—Sergt. Homer Wise received the Congressional Medal of Honor today for "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity" in battle June 6 at Magliano, Italy, in which he fired everything at the enemy, from a submachine gun to a gun mounted on a tank.

Wise, 27, of Baton Rouge, La., in civilian life a gasoline salesman at Orange, Texas, was decorated by Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch in the presence of five general officers.

Saluted By Generals

"Gentlemen, let's give this man a salute," Patch directed the other generals.

"I wish we had an army full of soldiers like you," Patch told the sergeant.

Wise's platoon was pinned down by enemy fire that wounded one of his men. With three other men, he carried the wounded soldier 100 yards through enemy fire to a spot where he could be given medical aid.

Gets Three Nazis

Returning to the battle, he rushed three heavily armed enemy soldiers trying to flank the American position and killed them with a machine gun. Wit ha rifle grenade launcher he broke up the enemy position, his men pursuing the Germans, firing submachine guns from the hip.

Heavy fire poured in frontally and from the flanks when the battalion took its immediate objective. Wise grabbed an automatic rifle and walked straight into the fire. His men moved up and captured an enemy gun crew.

Mans Gun On Tank

A tank came to the support of his company, but enemy fire forced it to button up. Seeing a machine gun mounted on the tank unmanned, Wise dashed forward, cleared the weapon of a jam and began firing. The enemy rained lead on the tank trying to knock him off. Wise got off 750 rounds that neutralized the enemy flanking position and the battalion took its objective.

Wise, who holds the Silver Star, Bronze Medal, Purple Heart and two Oak Leaf Clusters for three wounds in action since June 22, is entitled to a trip home now. One of the first persons he will look up is Madelyn Disesa, of Stamford, Conn., whom he intends to marry.

War Correspondents' Landlord Arrested

With U.S. 9th Army in Holland, Nov. 29 (AP)—When 9th Army correspondents returned to their hotel billet from the front today they found more news there than they had on the fighting line.

Dutch police had arrested the proprietor of the hotel and his son as black-market operators and collaborators with the Germans.

The son had tried to kill himself by jumping from a third-floor window.

Police, tapping walls of the cellar, had found a hidden tunnel filled with rare liquors, cigars and food which the proprietor apparently got from the Germans.

FRENCH TO SHOOT GERMAN HOSTAGES

With the U. S. Seventh Army in Alsace, Nov. 29 (A. P.).—Five German hostages will be shot for every French soldier killed by snipers in Strasbourg under a proclamation by Major Gen. Jacques LeClerc.

His order, which reduced sniping to only a small bother, declared:

First, for every French soldier killed in the city, five German hostages will be shot. Second, all snipers will immediately be shot. Third, any person who gives shelter to snipers or helps them in any way will be shot. Fourth, persons carrying weapons without permits will be arrested and court-martialed.

German Flying Bomb Wrecks U.S. Hospital

Somewhere in Belgium, Nov. 29 (AP)—A German flying bomb struck and wrecked a U.S. Army general hospital well behind the battlelines several days ago, killing 12 persons, injuring nearly 50 and forcing evacuation of the hospital's 1,150 patients, it was disclosed today.

The bomb demolished the laboratory-pharmacy section of the hospital. The blast blew in the walls and demolished the roof of the remaining section of the building, making it unusable.

Fifteen nurses were sent to a rest area suffering from shock.

Belgian Strike-Call Response Is Weak

Brussels, Nov. 29 (AP)—A call by the resistance front for a nation-wide general strike in protest against Premier Hubert Pierlot's Government apparently had gained little response today.

Columns of demonstrators, however, were reported converging on the capital for a national day of protest."

NOV 30

The Communists, estimated at 40,000 strong in the resistance movement, called for a full general strike until Pierlot's Government collapsed, while other resistance groups urged only a one-day strike.

Red Star Attacks Government

[In Moscow, the Soviet army newspaper Red Star linked the Pierlot Government with a discussion of survival of the Fifth Column in western Europe. "Firing at the people, the Pierlot Government has proved its special regard for elements that collaborated with the Hitlerite invaders," Red Star said, adding: "A Fifth Column still attempts to prevent consolidation of democratic forces for speeding up the defeat of the enemy of mankind."]

While the situation in Brussels remained tense, there were few omens of danger. British troops and Belgian police stood by.

Marching columns of demonstrators were reported last night to be converging upon Brussels from all parts of the country. First clashes between police and demonstrators were reported to have taken place on the road from Ath to Brussels.

Premier Pierlot was given a resounding vote of confidence yesterday by the Belgian Chamber of Deputies. He told the cheering chamber he would not step down in the face of demonstrations.

Human Fly Blasts Nazi Nest in Cliff means of stopping the harassing fire, he reasoned, was to climb down a steep cliff and toss some dynamite into the nests of Germans.

Inching his way down the precipice and disregarding sniper fire, even though bullets smashed constantly along his path, Sgt. Deojay dynamited the machine gunners and then crawled back up the cliff to safety.

Inventor Loses Foot

Sgt. C. G. Culin Jr., Who Devised Tank Blade, Hit by Mine

AN AMERICAN HOSPITAL IN ENGLAND, Nov. 29 (AP).—Sergeant Curtis G. Culin jr., twenty-eight years old, who won the Legion of Merit for his tank-shearing blade invention which cut a swath through the Normandy hedgerows, lost his left foot by accidentally setting off an enemy mine in the Siegfried line.

It was announced today that he is recovering at this hospital where his condition was described as satisfactory. His home is at 215 Holly Street, Cranford, N. J.

No improvement could be made at the aid station, and at a clearing station the only additional treatment needed was to insert the regular tracheotomy tube.

Kinman's main interest when he entered the army was mechanics, but now he thinks he might become a physician.

'Nothin' to Do But Shoot Folks'

By the Associated Press.

WITH THE AEF ON THE WESTERN FRONT, Nov. 24 (Delayed).—Everybody's getting a kick out of the story about the major and the mountaineer. It seems a rear echelon major visited the front the other day in the 26th Division sector. He was one of those officers who ask lots of stiff questions.

When he met the lanky, slow-talking Tennessee hill-country doughboy, he asked his name, outfit, location, and the sort of job he had. The mountain boy seemed slow to answer and the major barked: "What do you do? What do you do?"

...l, now, sir," said the ...ineer, leaning on his ... spitting carefully down-wind out of deference to the major's highly polished boots, "Well, now, sir, there don't rightly seem to be nothing much anybody can do around here except shoot folks."

Soldier's Penknife Operation Saves Life of Wounded Buddy

WITH THE U. S. THIRD ARMY, Nov. 29.—(AP) Two lectures heard a year ago during training, plus rare presence of mind and determination enabled Pvt. Duane N. Kinman of College Place, Wash., to save a fellow soldier's life by cutting the man's throat.

The 19-year-old medical aid man found a rifleman with a shrapnel wound through the neck thrashing about on the ground, with his face turning blue from lack of oxygen.

Realizing the wound had in some way halted breathing, Kinman knew the only way to save him was to open the windpipe below the wound and keep it open so air could get to the lungs.

With a jackknife, with no anaesthetic, and with mortar shells ...ursting nearby, Kinman made a ...eat incision in the wounded man's neck, cut a proper vertical incision and inserted the soldier's fountain pen to keep the windpipe open.

Lt. Edward M. Eberlin, a platoon leader from Lincoln, Neb., assisted Kinman by holding the patient down. After the breathing had been restored, he helped the wounded man to a tank which took him to the aid station.

DUTCH TELL STORY OF AMERICAN HERO

London, Nov. 29 (A. P.).—The story of an unidentified American flyer who gave his life in a fight as a member of the Dutch underground that Holland might be free was told today by the Army newspaper Stars and Stripes. Marshall Morgan, the newspaper's staff writer with the Seventh Armored Division, said that the only information available concerning the American's identity was that he was a 24-year-old member of a Liberator bomber's crew who came from Boston.

The American bailed out of a flak-riddled bomber over Holland ten months ago. Two Dutch Partisans found him, ill and battered, and the underground nursed him back to health.

Then the American joined the Partisans in nightly missions of sabotage against German communications. Three nights before American troops captured a Dutch village where the underground had plotted its movements in candle-lit cellars, the American called for volunteers for an especially dangerous mission.

A short time later two Dutch fighting men staggered back, carrying the mortally wounded American. A German ambush had caught them. The Germans were in the village, but the Partisans buried the American under cover of darkness.

"They buried him in the place they thought would best honor his deeds," Mr. Morgan wrote. "It was their own churchyard."

Task Of Relief Assumed By French Government

Paris, Nov. 29 (AP)—The French Government has assumed full responsibility for alleviation of war distress within France, and the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration is just standing by in case help is needed, Herbert Lehman told a press conference today.

Lehman, UNRRA chief, predicted extreme hardships this winter among liberated nations because of lack of supplies, shortage of shipping and disrupted conditions of inland communications.

French Corporation Formed To Run Mines

Paris, Nov. 29 (AP) — Northern French coal mines whose nationalization was ordered by the Government yesterday will be operated by a state-owned corporation with an initial capital of $40,000,000 in Government funds, the Ministry of Information explained today.

In its operations the new corporation will be separate from the Government, independent of regulations governing ministries, with freedom of action in financies similar to that enjoyed by private concerns, a spokesman said. Its initial capital must be repaid with interest. The corporation also must pay the former owners of the mines an indemnity.

The setup for the coal mines is expected to furnish a pattern for nationalization of other vital industries.

THREE ROUTES OPEN TO REDS

Forces In Hungary Likely To Turn To Yugoslavia

Moscow, Thursday, Nov. 30 (AP)—As the Russian offensive crunched through southwestern Hungary today on a front nearly one hundred miles wide beyond the Danube and approached within one hundred miles of the Austrian frontier against faltering German resistance, these possibilities were opened up to Marshal Feodor Tolbukhin:

1. A strike northward to clear the enemy from the west bank of the Danube as far up as outflanked Budapest.

2. A concentrated drive westward to seal off Croatia, especially its capital city of Zagreb, and assure entrapment of more than ten German divisions trying to escape from southern Yugoslavia.

3. A mopping-up to the shores of Lake Balaton and an endeavor to reach Austrian territory in the shortest possible time.

Tolbukhin has formations of Tito's Yugoslav liberation army under his command, and this fact indicated that military relief for Yugoslavia might have high priority—perhaps as high as aid for the Russians who have been battering at the stubborn defenses of Budapest from the east.

The most popular move from the point of view of the ordinary Soviet citizens, however, would see a blow aimed straight at Austria.

SOVIET ADVANCE FLANKS BUDAPEST

Reds Push Ahead 25 Miles After Breakthrough Across Danube.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 30—(AP) The Red army has thrust westward 25 miles beyond the Danube in southern Hungary and extended its break-through to a width of 93 miles, outflanking embattled Budapest and posing a mounting threat to Austria, Moscow disclosed last night.

The great offensive, about which the Berlin radio has been talking dolorously for a week, was confirmed in an order of the day by Premier Stalin, followed by the regular nightly communique, which said that more than 350 communities had been captured in southern Hungary and northern Yugoslavia.

Most notable were Pecs, coal-mining and railway center 98 miles southwest of Budapest; Mohacs, the same distance south of Budapest; and Bataszek, 85 miles south of the Hungarian capital. The Germans acknowledged loss of the first two.

(Yugoslav Marshal Tito, in a broadcast communique reported by the Federal Communications Commission, said the Russians, aided by his Partisans, had advanced more than 31 miles and now were "pursuing the beaten Germans toward the west."

Tito's communique also contained a long list of successes by his own forces inside Yugoslavia, and it appeared possible that one aim of the coordinated Russian-Yugoslav operations was to force the Germans out of Yugoslavia by a flank threat.)

The broadcast Moscow communique specified that the break across the Danube of Marshal Feodor Tolbukhin's Third Ukraine army and Yugoslav partisans was north of its confluence with the Drava. That point is 130 miles due south of Budapest.

Extension of the break-through to its announced width of 93 miles therefore would put the Russians within 37 miles of Budapest on the west side of the Danube.

Moscow named no captured towns north of Bataszek, apparently keeping the northward extent of the break-through secret for operational reasons.

Apparently, however, Red army troops today stood somewhere between the Danube and the north end of the large Lake Balaton, barely 100 miles from the Austrian border and some 130 miles from Vienna. Pecs, one of the announced captures, is but 115 miles from the southeast border of Austria.

The Russians, for weeks have stood almost as near to Austria on the northeast side of Budapest, which remains under close siege but towards which no gains have been announced. Now Budapest apparently was rapidly being outflanked.

The Germans, acknowledging uncertainty about Russian intentions, said today that it could not yet be foretold whether the Red army would turn northward along the west bank of the Danube to take Budapest in the rear or would continue westward.

A German military spokesman contended on the Berlin radio, however, that the Russians were "playing a risky game with this operation," which he said was aimed at bringing a decision in Hungary before German troops that had left the Balkans could make their weight felt.

The Germans acknowledged still further reverses on the long front stretching northeast from Budapest, announcing that the Russians finally had broken into Eger, 60 miles northeast of the capital, and were fighting in the streets. Eger has been virtually surrounded for days, but the Russians have laid no claim to it.

Eger controls good military routes north into the heart of Slovakia, and Czechoslovak sources in London expressed belief that once Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky sent his Second Ukraine army 45 miles to the border he would be joined by some 25,000 partisans who have been hiding in the mountains.

Another Soviet army, the Fourth Ukraine, led by Gen. Ivan Petrov, continued today to battle its way westward in Slovakia across rain-swollen streams and mountainous terrain. Flank guards of Petrov's and Malinovsky's armies already have established contact in the Hungarian-Slovakian border area, according to Moscow dispatches, and Petrov is near to cleaning out the Dukla pass into Poland on his northern flank. This would ease his supply problem and give the Russians a continuous front right across Europe.

There has been little offensive action on the Polish fronts since September, and the country was clogged so deeply in mud today that Moscow accounts predicted several weeks of comparative quiet.

The British radio, however, suggested that the "imminent junction" of the armies in Slovakia and southern Poland might be "the signal for the grand Soviet winter offensive."

NEW SOVIET PUSH CROSSES DANUBE BELOW BUDAPEST

Seizes Bridgehead 90 Miles Wide and 25 Miles in Depth.

London, Nov. 29 (A. P.)—Premier Stalin announced tonight that Marshal Feodor Tolbukhin's army had crossed the Danube in force south of Budapest, forging a bridgehead ninety miles wide and twenty-five miles deep and capturing the important town of Pecs.

Mohacs and Bataszek were among other towns seized in the push by Marshal Tolbukhin's combined Russian and Yugoslav forces. Pecs and Mohacs are about 100 miles south of Budapest.

The new offensive swept up 330 other populated places, Stalin's order said.

Mohacs, a road junction on the west bank of the Danube, lies ten miles from the Yugoslav border. It is twenty-three miles southeast of the important coal mining town and communications center of Pecs, which the Berlin radio said was being stormed by the Russians.

Stalin ordered a salute of twenty salvos from 224 guns.

Other Red Army forces were striking westward along the breadth of eastern Slovakia and had captured more than sixty communities.

In northern Hungary the Russians cleared the enemy from the right bank of the Tisza River.

occupying an additional fourteen populated places. The advances measured up to fourteen miles on two closely linked fronts that total more than 110 miles.

Many Germans Killed.

The Soviet communique said 400 Germans were killed and 150 captured in the fighting for the Slovak town of Vysni Svidnik, while another 600 were captured at a highway junction on the Hungarian border.

The German high command declared a new Soviet offensive west of the Danube in Hungary had reached the coal mining city of Pecs, carrying 23 miles beyond captured Mohacs. Pecs is about 100 miles south of Budapest. Moscow has made no announcement of a new drive in this area.

Vysni Svidnik, captured after bitter fighting, is in the southern approach to Dukla Pass and ten miles southwest of the Polish border. The advance in Slovakia was general down to the Hungarian border north of Nyiregyhaza, and within twenty-five miles of the Slovakian stronghold of Kassa and Presov.

Crossing of the Tizsa put the last thirty-five-mile stretch of the river in Soviet hands northeast from Tokaj (Tokay). The river's lower reaches below Tokaj were already Russian held.

Elsewhere along the 1,500-mile eastern front winding from the Baltics to the Balkans there was tenseness as the Germans awaited the first blows in Premier-Marshal Stalin's promised winter offensive. Today that front is anchored in the Latvian capital and port of Riga. It stretches from Riga to the vicinity of Priekule, twenty-three miles southeast of the Baltic port of Liepaja, thence to the coast between Liepaja and Memel, fifty-five miles to the south. Pressed back into the Courland Peninsula in this sector were an estimated thirty German divisions—all that remains of the northern army corps.

Memel is still under siege. From there the Soviet line stretches to the mouth of the Nemunas and along the northern bank of the river—the northern frontier of East Prussia—to Jubarkas. From Jubarkas it swells roughly twenty miles into East Prussia, coming out through Suwalki and Augustow for anchorage at Osowiec, in Poland, and Lomza, sixty miles southeast of Augustow.

Petroo Seeks Short Route.

From the Lomza area the Russian line runs southwest into Praga, suburb of Warsaw, and down the east bank of the Vistula to the Sand-Omierz bridgehead. There ot billows west toward Krakow, cuts back through Debica, forty-six miles south of Sandomierz, and continues south to the Carpathians.

Marshal Ivan Petrov's Fourth Ukrainian Army fighting in Dukla Pass is seeking a short route linking Russian armies in Poland with those operating in eastern Slovakia and Hungary. His line is just inside eastern Slovakia, with a southwest extension from Csap ten miles to the area of Miskolc, where it was close to a junction with Marshal Rodion Malinovsky's Second Ukrainian Army.

Marshal Malinovsky is holding a line just below Michole, sixty miles southwest to Hatvan, twenty-five miles northeast of Budapest. It closes on Budapest to the east and southeast, then runs roughly along the Danube

LONDON POLISH REGIME 'HOSTILE' MOSCOW DECLARES

LONDON, Nov. 29.—(AP) Russia charged reactionary members of the Polish government in exile with seeking "to sow the seeds of a new war" today as Tomasz Arciszewski, a veteran of the underground who escaped from Poland last spring, sought to form a new cabinet.

Moscow newspaper Pravda said the London Polish regime had become a hostile political force with which any future negotiations obviously were impossible.

An official Polish spokesman announced that the 68-year-old Arciszewski had been charged by President Wladyslaw Raczkiewicz with the job of forming a new cabinet after Premier-Designate Jan Kwapinski had admitted he was unable to do so and resigned. Arciszewski was named president-designate of the London Polish government last May, after his arrival in England.

The new premier-designate was scribed as an energetic man eatly concerned with the probms of the working class.

After the Nazis conquered Poland he worked with the underground against the Germans.

The Polish spokesman said Arciszewski had accepted the president's request to form a new cabinet "and is presently attempting to fulfill the assignment."

There was no indication whether Stanislaw Nikolajczyk, who resigned suddenly as premier last Friday, precipitating the crisis, would take part in the new government. He and members of his peasant party had refused to join any coalition government under Kwapinski.

Cabinet Task Assigned.

London, Nov. 29 (A. P.).—Tomasz Arciszewski, president-designate of the Polish Government in Exile, was assigned the task tonight of forming a new Cabinet. An official Polish spokesman disclosed that Mr. Arciszewski had been chosen by President Wladyslaw Raczkiewicz after premier-designate Jan Kwapinski admitted that his mission was a complete failure and resigned.

Mr. Arciszewski was appointed President-Designate of the Polish Government in May, 1944, after Pravda Says Moscow Cannot Deal Further With Exile Government.

(CLOCE) NOV 30 1944

Moscow, Nov. 29 (A. P.).—Russia served notice through the columns of Pravda today that the Polish Government in Exile had become a hostile political force with which any future negotiations were obviously impossible.

Accusing Polish reactionaries of a scheme to split the Allies and foster a new war, Pravda said that it looked upon the withdrawal of Stanislaw Mikolajczyk as Premier as destroying the last hopes of rapprochement with the exiled regime.

Ex-Premier Mikolajczyk received gentle treatment in Pravda's discussion and apparently the possibility was envisaged that he and a number of other members of the Peasant party abroad might go to Lublin, the seat of the Soviet-sponsored Committee of National Liberation.

There was no evidence here to indicate doubt that he would be welcomed by the committee if he chose to join it.

Accused by Pravda.

With or without Mr. Mikolajczyk the liberation committee continues as the governing machine for liberated Poland. Relying upon its friendship with the Soviet Union, it seems certain to consolidate its power as additional areas of Poland are cleared of the enemy.

Pravda declared that the Polish Government in London "does not strive for friendship between the peoples, but aims to sow seeds for a new war."

"The Polish people turn back in disdain from this clique," the Communist party newspaper declared.

The two-column commentary, by Yakov Viktorov, was given prominent display on the foreign language page of Pravda. The article cited London newspapers as its authority for the belief Mikolajczyk tried to obtain an agreement from his Cabinet to his return to Moscow to resume negotiations.

Pravda described Jan Kwapinski, who was named Premier-Designate after M. Mikolajczyk's resignation, as anti-Soviet and said his connections with the Socialist party were "camouflage."

escaping from Poland, where he was prominent in the underground movement.

At 68 he is described as an energetic man concerned with problems of the working classes. In the 1905 revolution he was a Socialist party leader and helped organize underground activities.

In British diplomatic quarters it was made plain that Britain was growing tired of the persistent wrangling among the Poles.

Unconfirmed reports persisted that Stanislaw Mikolajczyk had broken with the London Poles and might go to Lublin to offer his services to the Polish Liberation Committee.

1,500 Poles At Trial Of Lublin SS Troops

Moscow, Nov. 29 (AP)—The Soviet news agency Tass reported today that the trial of six German officials of the Majdanek "extermination" camp drew a crowd of more than 1,500 Poles to the special court in Lublin's "Soldiers' House."

The state appointed five lawyers to defend the Germans, who face charges punishable by death.

Four of the defendants were noncoms with an SS (Elite Guard) detachment which operated the Majdanek camp for three years.

Theaters in Lublin exhibited newsreels of the Majdanek camp, showing excavation pits where human ashes and bones were discovered.

U.S. Craft Bomb Hamm, Misburg Despite Heavy Clouds

London, Nov. 29 (AP)—More than 2,000 American planes climaxed a day-long aerial offensive against Germany today with attacks on Hamm, Misburg and other targets in northwestern Germany.

Four American bombers were lost, but all fighter planes returned.

RAF heavy bombers started the day off with a predawn attack on rail objectives at Essen and Neuss. Except for an early morning assault on Neuss and Freiburg, the big bombers had been idle yesterday because of the weather. Today's attacks were made despite heavy clouds over the targets.

The 30-mile-long rail yards at Hamm and the extensive oil plant at Misburg were the principal objectives of more than 1,000 Flying Fortresses and Liberators, escorted by more than 1,000 Mustangs, Thunderbolts and Lightnings which met scant air opposition.

Misburg Output Halved

It was the tenth attack by the United States 8th Air Force on Misburg, which once had an annual output of 242,000 tons of petroleum products but which, it was estimated, had been slashed one half since last Spring.

Misburg, a few miles east of Hannover, was attacked last Sunday and in the air battle that followed 130 German fighters were shot down, 114 by escorting American fighters and the remainder by bombers.

Continent-based aircraft smashed at communications, airfields and supply dumps back of the battle lines.

Mosquitos Hit Nuernberg

RAF Mosquitos kept the offensive rolling last night with a strong block-busting attack on Nuernberg and they were back in the thick of the battle this afternoon with darting raids in the Duisberg area.

Heavy clouds over the target areas were credited with keeping down German fighter opposition, which generally is heavy when an oil refinery is a target.

An Air Ministry communique said three bombers failed to return from the two operations.

British and American continent-based fighters and bombers flew almost 1,200 sorties yesterday. Five German planes were shot down but the United States 9th Air Force lost two medium-bombers and two fighters, and the RAF Second Tactical Air Force lost three fighters.

Nazis Say Bomb Damaged Cathedral

The Berlin radio said today that a bomb heavily damaged Cologne Cathedral Monday during an attack by American planes. The bomb was reported to have pierced the roof and exploded inside the building. There was no word from Allied sources that the cathedral had been hit.

2000 U. S. PLANES IN RAIDS ON REICH

London, Nov. 29 (A. P.).—More than 1,000 heavy bombers and 1,000 American fighters attacked rail and oil targets in northwestern Germany today. The huge natural oil refinery at Misburg and the railyards at Hamm were the prime objectives of the Flying Fortresses and Liberators, escorted by Mustangs, Thunderbolts and Lightnings of the United States Eighth and Ninth Air Forces.

Almost 4,000 tons of explosives were heaped on the thirty miles of railroad yards at Hamm, and on the Misburg oil refinery, near Hanover.

British heavy bombers jolted German rail lines at Essen and Neuss in the Ruhr today. Bombardiers aimed their loads of explosive on pathfinder flares dropped through layers of clouds.

An area of some four-square miles of cloud, reflected the glare of fires set in Essen. It was the R. A. F.'s second attack in twenty-four hours on Neuss, which is in the Duesseldorf area.

British Mosquito bombers rocked Nurnburg, in southwestern Germany, with two-ton block-busters earlier in the night.

Former Movie Stunt Flier Anxious to Bomb Berlin

CHAMBERLAIN

LONDON, Nov. 29.—(AP) Capt. Dick Grace, former Hollywood stunt pilot who estimates he has flown 18,000 hours, said today he hoped to celebrate his 47th birthday in January on a bomb dropping mission over Berlin—an opportunity for which he has waited since 1918.

Grace cracked up planes in such war films as "Wings" and "Hell's Angels"—pictures which held most of the pilots of today spellbound when they were children.

He has made 47 plane crashes in the movies and has suffered 81 fractures, including a broken neck.

On one of his 12 missions in the European theater as pilot of a Flying Fortress he recently bombed the German island fortress of Helgoland. As a lieutenant (J.G.) in the Navy Air Arm in 1918 Grace bombed this same target in a Spad which carried three 100-pound fragmentation bombs. Later he planned to bomb Berlin, but received explicit orders not to attempt it.

"After I get my chance to dump some stuff on Berlin this time," he said, "I am going to try to do the same to Tokyo in a B-29. The only difference between crashing planes for a living and flying over Germany is that it is more dangerous to fly over Germany. When they shove clouds of flak up at you they aren't kidding."

He was a pilot for the Air Transport Command when he was offered a post as U. S. Eighth Air Force operations officer. He took the job after he was assured he would be allowed to fly in combat. In the ATC he delivered planes to the China-Burma-India theater and to Europe.

After World War I Grace went in for commercial flying and established a passenger airline. Later Cowboy Actor Tom Mix asked him to stage a plane crash for a scene in the picture "Eyes of the Forest." This launched his career as a stunt man for the movies.

RAF's 'Dam Buster' Is Listed As Missing

London, Nov. 29 (AP)—Wing Commander Guy P. (Dam Buster) Gibson, 26, hero of the RAF's attack on Germany's Mohne and Eder dams in May, 1943, was officially reported missing tonight.

An Air Ministry announcement said Gibson, who holds the Victoria Cross, failed to return from a raid on Rheydt, near Muchen-Gladbach, Germany, the night of September 19.

He was flying then as a master bomber, directing the bombing, and flying much lower than the main force. He was last heard by other raiders giving instructions for releasing bombs over the target.

'42 SINKING REVEALED BY LONDON PAPER

Photos Show Torpedoing Of Liner Carrying U.S. Troops

London, Thursday, Nov. 30 (AP)—The 20,000-ton ocean liner Viceroy of India was sunk by a German submarine in the Atlantic in November, 1942, while bringing United States troops to Britain, the Daily Mail said today.

The newspaper published two photographs of the ship in its death throes, one showing it wallowing heavily on its side and the other as it plunged to the bottom, its bow high out of water.

No Details Given

Both photographs were taken from a rescue ship. No details of the sinking or the rescue of troo were given.

The newspaper also told of t sinking of the 20,000-ton Canadi Pacific liner Duchess of Atholl in October, 1942, while en route from the Near East to Britain with 826 persons aboard, many of them wom en and children.

Without a sign of panic, passengers abandoned the torpedoed craft in 21 lifeboats. The submarine surfaced and its commander gave the Nazi salute to lifeboat occupants near him.

Answer To Nazi Salute

"His answer was a burst of laughter from the children and the V-for-Victory salute from men and women," said a survivor, Daniel Reynolds, of Liverpool.

A United States Army plane located the lifeboat fleet and a naval vessel raced to the rescue.

EARLY WAR END IS DISCOUNTED

CHESTER

Churchill Hints Former Predictions Were Too Optimistic

London, Nov. 29 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill will observe his 70th birthday tomorrow without fuss or flourish in the fashion characteristic of his wartime leadership of the British people.

LANDSTROM

London, Nov. 29 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill, opening a new session of the British Parliament with centuries-old ceremonies, gave somber warning today that his predictions of German defeat by the early Summer of 1945 may be too optimistic.

He disclosed that the Belgian port of Antwerp is now receiving large convoys of ocean-going ships for the supply of the northern group of Allied armies in Europe, and declared that the enemy "has everywhere been thrust back" with enormous losses.

But the Prime Minister nevertheless reminded that the Lower Rhine has not yet been reached, that a bridgehead has not yet been established over that formidable barrier and that invaded Germany would be fighting with a desperation that marked England's efforts in 1940 and 1941.

"Last Lap" That Counts

It is in the "last lap" that Britain, the United States and the other Allies must bring their greatest exertions to crush enemy resistance, he said.

With the preface that "no one knows when the German war will be finished," Churchill recalled an earlier prediction that victory in Europe might come by "late spring or early summer" in 1945.

"If I were to make any change in the duration of the unfolding of events it would be to leave out the word 'early' before the word 'summer,'" he said.

The Prime Minister, who spoke on the eve of his 70th birthday, gave glowing praise to Allied armies as he opened the tenth consecutive session of a Parliament elected in 1935 which thus has become the fourth longest in Britain's records.

King George VI began the day by declaring in the traditional speech from the throne to the assembled Houses of Lords and Commons that Britain would "reinforce as rapidly as possible" the United Kingdom forces fighting the war with Japan. He spoke with "greater confidence than ever before" of the final victories, he said.

Then, while the assembly stood, he took Queen Elizabeth by the hand and led her from the throne. The King wore the gold-braided uniform of an admiral of the fleet, the Queen a black dress in mourning for her father.

For the 338th time since the Guy Fawkes gunpowder plot seven of the King's "Beefeaters" clad in traditional costume searched the vaults of Westminster before their Majesties appeared between long lines of honor guards—made up of home guardsmen—leading to the royal gallery.

Far From Pessimistic

Churchill was far from pessimistic in addressing what already has been called the "Victory Parliament."

"The vast battle that is in progress in the west has yielded to us important gains," he said. "The enemy has everyhere been thrust back. The capture of Metz and Strasbourg are glorious and massive achievements.

"The brilliant fighting and maneuvering of the French Army near the Swiss frontier and their forcing of the Belfort Gap and advance on a broad front to the Rhine is not only a military episode of high importance, but it shows what many of us have never doubted, that the French Army will rise again and be a great factor in the life of France and Europe, and that the French soldier properly equipped and well fed is unsurpassed among the nations."

With high praise for American troops in their operations around Metz and Strasbourg, Churchill said it was in the present battle of the Rhineland opposite Cologne that gains in ground were most important and therefore most disputed.

Tribute Paid Americans

"Of course, any large and effective break on the German fronts in these regions of Cologne and northward would have the highest strategic consequences," he said in describing the battle there as a "wearing-down process" which had cost United States forces dear, but which had cost the Germans more.

Americans, holding the greater part of the front, were "bearing the brunt with customary distinction and courage," he said.

The drive to the lower Maas in Holland by Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's forces with substantial American assistance and the storming of the Schelde Islands by Canadians contained "episodes of marvelous gallantry, grand feats of arms," the Prime Minister said, and cost Britain and Canadian forces about 40,000 casualties.

With a promise to give a more extended war review after Christmas, the Prime Minister closed with an exhortation that "this is just the moment not to slacken."

Longer War Now Foreseen By Churchill

London, Nov. 29 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill warned today that the war against Germany might last longer than he had thought. He said his recent prediction of a possible end by "early summer" might be revised by dropping the word "early."

Churchill addressed Parliament after King George VI, opening the tenth session of the legislators elected in 1935, said that Britain intended to "reinforce as rapidly as possible the United Kingdom forces" now fighting Japan.

The Prime Minister announced for the first time that the port of Antwerp had finally been opened "and is now receiving large convoys of ocean-going ships, thus making an incomparable sea base available for the nourishment of the northern group of British armies and the various groups of American armies also deployed in these operations."

Hails Armies' Progress

Churchill praised the progress of the Allied armies on the Western front.

"The enemy everywhere has been thrust back," he said. "Any large and effective breakthrough in the German front in the region of Cologne would have the highest strategic consequences."

But, Churchill added, "we must remember that the enemy whose country is invaded has also the supreme stimuli which we ourselves responded to in the very dark days of 1940 and 1941."

Tells Of Immense Losses

Churchill lauded the fighting of the French troops near the Swiss frontier, where they slashed through to the Rhine, and declared it showed the French Army "would rise again and that the French soldier, properly led and properly equipped, is unsurpassed."

The weather had badly hampered the American and British forces at the northern end of the front, he said, but the battle was continuing with vigor and "immense losses have been inflicted on the enemy."

The Allies, too, had suffered, he declared, adding there had been approximately 40,000 British and Canadian casualties in the drive into Holland and Ge ny.

Mr. Churchill spoke highly of the accomplishments of the American armies on the western front. The captures of Metz and Strasbourg he describes as "glorious and massive achievements." He said that though American losses had been severe on northern sectors of the front, the cost had been even greater to the enemy.

A full-fledged war review might be given after Christmas, when "it may be much easier to put hard facts and cheering facts before the House," he said. The House cheered as Mr. Churchill ended his long address, devoted mainly to legislation to be tackled, with the assertion that the Great Powers "were never more closely and intimately and comprehendingly united than they are at this moment."

"Victory remains our supreme aim," the King said.

"Victory Session"

"Once, however, the war in Europe is over, the transition from war to peace will begin and my Ministers are actively preparing plans to insure that, without in any way prejudicing the active prosecution of the war against Japan, an increasing part of our resources is made available for civilian production."

These words opened what already has been termed the "Victory Session" of the fourth longest Parliament in British history.

The King, in his traditional "throne speech," declared the United Nations could "now look forward with greater confidence than ever before to those final victories which will give to the peoples of the world the just peace which is our chief desire."

He wore the gold-braided uniform of an admiral of the British Fleet.

NOV 30 1944

Queen In Mourning

The Queen, still in mourning for her father, wore a simple black dress and black hat at the colorful ceremonies in the House of Lords debating chamber.

As the King finished his speech, the whole assembly rose. Taking his Queen by the hand, the King led her down the steps of the throne and out of the chamber.

"I pray that the Almighty may give his blessing to your counsels," were his final words.

King George reviewed briefly the events of the year since he opened the last session on November 24, 1943—a session from which Prime Minister Churchill was absent because of the impending conferences in Cairo.

Forecasts Legislation

Looking ahead, he forecast legislation for a comprehensive health service, national insurance, a new scheme of industrial injury insurance, family allowances and some measures for the transition period after the war with Germany. Among these he mentioned expanding export trade and increasing the supply of civilian goods.

In general, the King did not go beyond the words of his prorogation speech of yesterday—a ceremony covered by censorship in order not to disclose to the enemy that the royal family would travel to Westminster again today.

King Hails FFI

However, in disbanding the ninth session of the current Parliament yesterday, he made a special point of praising Britain's Allies.

"Resounding victories have continued to reward the skill and valor of my Russian allies," he said and added later that he had "watched with warm admiration the great part which the French forces of the interior have played in ridding their country of the invader."

"The victories achieved," he said, "are the fruits of the close friendship which knits together my governments and those of my Allies."

The King said he had welcomed the establishment of a provisional government in France and the appointment of a permanent French member on the European Advisory Commission.

Reports On Agreement

He reported on the agreement to form a United Nations maritime authority, so that the combined shipping resources of all would be available for the prosecution of the wars against Germany and Japan.

He spoke of the Bumbarton Oaks agreement on an international organization designed to maintain peace, and stressed the need "for an enlightened international settlement under which civil air transport will flourish."

MORE SMOKES FOR SOLDIERS IN ENGLAND

NOV 30 1944

LONDON, Nov. 29—(AP) Noncombatant United States soldiers, who have puffed expensive English cigarettes for the past ten days, will be allowed two packages a week of their favorite American brands, starting next Monday.

The army announced tonight that personnel authorized to make purchases in the exchanges may buy two packs of cigarettes, or five cigars, or two packages of pipe tobacco per week.

Airforce combat personnel, hospital patients, airborne units returning from operations or training, and personnel attached to anti-aircraft units will be allowed five packs of cigarettes a week, as a present.

The sale of cigarettes to noncombatants was stopped about ten days ago and raised a storm of protest from soldiers. Previously the ration was seven packages of cigarettes or four packets of pipe tobacco.

BERLIN REPORTS HITLER MESSAGE

London, Nov. 29 (A. P.).—A message signed Adolf Hitler was broadcast by Berlin today, the first direct word attributed to the long-silent Fuehrer since Heinrich Himmler read a proclamation for him at the swearing in of the Volksturm at Munich on November 12.

Today's message, replying to a telegram from Dr. Robert Ley on the anniversary of the "Strength Through Joy" organization, thanked German labor for "great accomplishments" during difficult conditions, and asserted that "when this fateful struggle has come to a successful end we will continue to build the socialistic structure of the Reich."

Hitler has not appeared publicly since the bomb attempt on his life in July.

Norwegian Patrol Sinks German Convoy Ships

London, Nov. 29 (AP)—A Norwegian naval patrol pounced upon a German convoy Monday night off Sogne Fjord, north of Bergen, Norway, and torpedoed a merchant ship, sank two of its escorts and damaged three others, a Norwegian communique announced tonight.

The attacking force, composed of light coastal craft, suffered no losses and only a few casualties, the communique said.

CONGRESSMEN SEE BOMBERS TAKE OFF

SINGLETON

A Bomber Base in Britain, Nov. 29 (A. P.).—The roving Congressmen of the House Military Committee underwent a swift schooling in aerial warfare today. Four hours before dawn they left a special train and drove shivering through twisting English country lanes to this big bomber base.

Some were suffering from lingering attacks of dysentery, apparently the result of an inoculation they took for their trip. Sitting at the briefing of pilots before the day's mission to Germany, the Congressmen had Lieut.-Gen. James H. Doolittle as schoolmaster.

The Eighth Air Force commander elaborated and translated for the Military Committee the aerial jargon of the day's guidance. As they trouped through the mud to the messhall, one Congressman turned to a companion and observed:

"Perhaps there have been as many Congressmen up as late before, but I'll take a bet there have never been as many up this early." But the wind and the hour whipped up congressional appetites. They ate scrambled eggs, bacon, hot rolls and coffee before going to control towers to watch the bombers shuttle off to Germany.

Later they visited two other bases and saw how the work of fighter pilots and the bomber air men was co-ordinated. For many Congressmen it was a day of reunion with old constituents. For some, it was a day, too, for the protests which fall to congressional lots, and the greatest of these was the current shortage of cigarettes.

Rescuers May Quit Hunting Blast Dead

By the Associated Press.

BURTON-ON-TRENT, England, Nov. 29.—A physician who had been working steadily for more than 36 hours at the scene of Monday's bomb depot disaster said today rescue work might have to be abandoned as the task of reaching buried men appeared hopeless.

The men buried in the dump," he said, "are covered by thousands of tons of earth. It would take weeks to reach some of the galleries."

Only a relatively few bodies were recovered in all-night labors. It still is feared the number of dead might exceed 160.

Tribute to the fine work of assisting American troops was voiced by the chief medical officer at the blasted dump. "They were magnificent," he asserted.

Police on the scene said compilation of a casualty list was complicated by scores of people who simply have disappeared.

The Batislava radio asserted the explosion was caused by "a German V-weapon."

SWEDEN IS URGED TO RISK NAZI WAR

Stockholm, Nov. 29 (A. P.).—A parliamentary delegation asked the Swedish Government today to do everything possible to aid residents of northern Norway forced from their homes by the Germans, "even if it means taking the greatest risk." It was obvious that the parliamentarians had in mind a break with Germany, and even war.

Christian Gunther, Foreign Minister, advised the lawmakers that Berlin had rejected a Swedish proposal to provide assistance for the thousands of Norwegians evacuating their properties under Nazi orders. Sweden sought to open passenger railway traffic between Narvik, Norway, and Sweden to help thousands of Norwegians ordered from their homes by the Nazis in the face of Russian advances.

Swedish newspapers in the last few days have said that German refusal of Swedish aid would make refugees trudge through the icy northlands menaced by death. Gunther had declared in a previous speech that continuation of the German terrorist tactics in Norway would be bound to lead to a deterioration in relations.

NOV 30 1944

German authorities "have ordered a curfew in Bergen, Norway, because of sabotage activities," the London radio reported today in a broadcast recorded here by the Columbia short-wave listening station.

Danish Patriots Switch Films Under Nazi Eyes

Stockholm, Nov. 29 (AP)—Danes crowded into Odd Fellows Hall in Copenhagen to see a new religious film entitled "God's Odd Ways."

When the picture was about to begin, the Free Danish press service said today, patriots took control and instead showed a 40-minute newsreel of American entry into Paris while the audience applauded.

Then the patriots drove off under the noses of German guards across the street.

WORKERS REPORTED SHOT

Germans Said to Use Mass Killings to Prevent Strikes

BERNE, Switzerland, Nov. 29 (AP)—A dispatch today in the Schaffhausen Arbeiter Zeitung, quoting persons arriving from Germany, declared that the Germans were resorting to mass shootings to compel workers to stay in armament factories.

The dispatch declared that 300 workers had been summarily shot on Heinrich Himmler's orders when a strike broke out at Mannheim recently after an air attack. At Duesseldorf another strike was quelled only after the Nazis had received reinforcements in the surrounding area and massacred "several hundreds," the dispatch asserted.

NAZIS HOLDING BEFORE FAENZA

British, Hampered By Rain, Fight Hard Along Lamone

Rome, Nov. 29 (AP) — German troops, aided by continued rains which have widened the Lamone River to 50 feet northeast of Faenza, are fighting furiously from their new positions along the west bank of the stream.

At one point north of Faenza the Germans have established a strong outpost on the Lamone's east bank, it was disclosed today.

Farther north there still was heavy fighting between the Lamone and Montone rivers, and in the Albereto area—well into the Po valley—both sides were supporting their infantry with tanks and heavy artillery fire. British troops had not succeeded in budging the Nazis there.

Foe Firmly Established

Southwest of Faenza the Germans were firmly established on high ground behind the Lamone River.

The downpour continued all along the 8th Army front clear to the Adriatic. Some streams and canals were so swollen that forward Allied troops were being supplied by boats.

The Germans probed tirelessly at positions of the American 5th Army in the mountains south of Bologna, attacking in company strength at one point.

On the 5th's right flank, southwest of Faenza, Yank troops occupied the village of Terpignano. The most serious enemy counterattack came about a mile north of Livergnano in the central sector and was thrown back with losses.

Nazis Stiffen Near Faenza

Rome, Nov. 29 (AP)—Eighth Army troops pushing into the Po Valley are meeting heavy resistance in the Albereto area about five miles northeast of Faenza, Allied headquarters announced today.

South of Faenza, British and Indian troops of the Fifth Army have made further progress in high ground to the north and west of Modigliana.

Strong enemy raids on American Fifth Army positions below Bologna have been driven off, the communique said.

Air operations were restricted by weather. The Mediterranean Allied air forces flew approximately 470 sorties yesterday, from which three aircraft are missing.

Clark Expects Foe To Cling To Italy

U. S. 5th Army Front in Italy, Nov. 29 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, new commander of all Allied fighting forces in Italy, said today the Germans had given every indication that they would continue to fight tenaciously on this front.

Clark said that when he assumed his enlarged command as head of both the United States 5th and British 8th armies he intended to be a field general in the fullest sense. He said the Germans were continuing to send reinforcements into Italy and that future operations would be tough.

Clark succeeds Field Marshal Sir Harold Alexander, who was named Allied commander in chief in the Mediterranean after General Sir Harry Maitland Wilson was shifted to Washington as head of the British Military Mission in the United States.

CONFER ON BALKANS

Rome, Nov. 29 (A. P.).—W. Averell Harriman, United States Ambassador to Russia, arrived at Allied headquarters today and is believed to be conferring with military officials on efforts to achieve closer co-operation among Soviet forces operating in the Balkans and the Allied forces based in Italy. It was learned that Mr. Harriman flew from France, where he visited the Third Army front, with Lieut.-Gen. Ira C. Eaker, commander of the Mediterranean Allied Air force. Gen. Eaker has faced the difficult task of trying to bomb Germans in Hungary and Yugo-Slavia, which are Russian zones of operation.

Part of the above dispatch was held up by censorship.

UMBERTO MAY ASK BONOMI TO REMAIN

ROME, Nov. 29.—(AP) The Italian political spotlight focused on Crown Prince Umberto tonight with the possibility that he might seize the whip hand and reappoint the 71-year-old Ivanoe Bonomi to form a new cabinet.

The Bonomi government resigned Sunday, and a series of conferences since then has failed to reach any agreement among Italy's six political parties on the makeup of a new cabinet.

Umberto, as lieutenant general of the realm, named Bonomi premier last June. If Bonomi should be reappointed now that his cabinet has fallen, it would split the six-party coalition, since the Socialists and Actionists are unwilling to participate in a government that he heads.

The Actionists already have announced they would not participate in a new government in view of British disapproval of their man, Count Carlo Sforza, as premier.

A conference of the various parties tonight ended without agreement when the liberals walked out.

SFORZA RESIGNS ONE POST IN ITALY

Rome, Nov. 29 (A. P.).—Count Carlo Sforza, whom the British reportedly do not regard as suitable either for Premier or Foreign Minister of Italy, has resigned from the chairmanship of a six-party conference seeking a solution to Italy's Cabinet crisis.

Count Sforza, minister without portfolio in the resigned cabinet of Premier Ivanoe Bonomi, said in a letter last night "it would be regrettable if even a few people thought my presence (as committee chairman) was protracting arguments. The purpose of my words and actions has been to speed up the choice (of leaders) who will give the country the best possible government in the present circumstances."

British Ambassador Sir Noel Charles was reported to have turned thumbs down on Count Sforza because of political "unreliability." Under the Italian armistice any Government formed must meet Allied approval.

The British radio reported today from Rome that Prince Humbert, the Lieutenant of the Realm, has asked Ivanoe Bonomi to form a new government.

When the leaders of the six parties trying to form a new Cabinet met in Rome today Count Sforza was not present, according to the BBC broadcast which was recorded here by CBS.

JAPS RETREATING IN NORTH BURMA

F. MARTIN

MYITKYINA, Burma, Nov. 29—(AP) Chinese troops which bypassed Bhamo in their southward offensive in North Burma were driving down a branch highway toward the old Burma road today without meeting any organized Japanese resistance.

Air force reports said the Japanese were retreating from north Burma by day and night and that there were indications even of a Japanese withdrawal from the Mandalay area toward Bangkok, Thailand.

Although the aerial reconnaissance gave more substance to previous reports that the Japanese were getting ready to give up all Burma, the enemy is leaving suicide units at key points. These are delaying the Allied advance.

(Progress of the Japanese campaign in southwest China threatening the Burma road in China itself may lessen considerably the military value of Burma to the Japanese. Burma is at the end of a long and exposed supply line which has cost the enemy an increasing loss of ships to Allied submarines and planes in recent months.)

Details of the Chinese advance south of Bhamo are being withheld for military reasons, but the operations can be described as deep penetration by large bodies of infiltration troops.

Deep Penetration

The general Japanese retreat is by troops facing two Chinese armies, closing in on the northern stretch of the old Burma Road from western China and north Burma.

For security reasons the extent of the Chinese advance south of Bhamo was withheld, but the operations may be described as a deep penetration.

Japanese troops below Bhamo are retreating down the Shweli River toward Mong Mit, which is above Mandalay, while Japanese from the Salween sector are moving down the old Burma Road by night to avoid American fighters.

Checkered Vacation In India For U.S. Flyer

He piloted a B-25 bomber and a P-47 fighter on combat missions over Burma and then took controls of a C-47 transport on a food-dropping mission to Chinese troops in northern Burma.

Success of Saipan Field Raids on Japan Point to Island Concentration

A B-BASE IN INDIA, Nov. 29 (AP).—The success of Superfortresses based in the Marianas in their raids on Japan raised speculation here today whether any B-29s would continue to be based in China. The 20th Bomber Command, now based in China, is at a disadvantage in comparison with the Saipanbased 21st Bomber Command from the standpoint of cost and adequacy of supply, safety of operations and weight of bombs possible to be carried to Japan.

Since June 5 the B-29s of the 20th have completed eighteen missions, thirteen of them flown from Chinese fields. The Palembang and Singapore raids, respectively, were the longest night and daylight assaults ever flown by military aircraft. But the job of servicing the Superfortresses in Chin ais tremendous. Every drop of gasoline must be flown from India and all equipment, including trucks and heavy maintenance gear, likewise must come in by air over the hump, across some of the world's worst mountains.

By contrast the Saipan-based bombers have relatively simple supply and operational problems. They have a sea supply route, sea leved takeoffs aiding the heavy planes, and sea leved routes to the targets with the comforting thought that no clouds encountered will have gra nite linings. One tank ship can move as much aviation fuel to Saipan as a fleet of tanker planes can carry to China in 1,000 hours of dangerous flying.

The tremendous expenditures of money, equipment and man hours necessary to maintain the 20th in action from China previously was held to be justified in that there were no other platforms available. Japa nthen was straining to build up her heavy industry and increase her war production. If not subjected to a bombing brake, the expanded program of production probably would have lengthened the Pacific war.

Reports Hint Japs May Quit Burma

Myitkyina, Burma, Nov. 29 (AP)—Air Force report that the Japanese are retreating from the Mandalay area south toward Bangkok tended today to confirm advices that the Japanese plan to evacuate all of Burma.

F. MARTIN

In north Burma the Japanese were leaving behind only suicide units at keys point in an effort to delay the advancing Chinese, latest reports said.

Forward elements of Lieut. Gen. Daniel I. Sultan's Chinese troops, which have bypassed, Bhamo in their southward drive, have not met any organized resistance.

STARTLING GAIN MADE BY JAPS

Foe In China Found On Road Past Kweiyang Defenders

Chungking, Nov. 29 (AP)—Japanese vanguards have made startling advances inside Kweichow province toward Kweiyang, its Burma road capital and junction point of a highway network linking Chungking, Kunming and other southwest China cities, a United States 14th Air Force communique disclosed tonight.

The air-force bulletin, relayed by the headquarters of Maj. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, announced that fighters strafed enemy cavalry troops on the Pachai-Tukiang road yesterday. This indicated the Japanese had either cut through or outflanked some of the Chinese units which had been expected to defend Kweiyang.

Nantan Claimed

[The Japanese news agency, Domei, broadcast a report that 50,000 Chinese were fleeing toward Kweiyang along the southwestern highway and the Kwangsi-Kweichow railway after Japanese forces yesterday occupied Nantan. The report called Nantan "the remaining important enemy stronghold" in Kwangsi.]

Pachai is 65 miles east-southeast of Kweiyang and less than fifteen miles from Tuyun, terminus of the Kwangsi-Kweichow railway. The Pachai-Tukiang road roughly parallels the main highway from Japanese-held Liuchow to Kweiyang.

There was nothing in the American communique to show the strength of the penetration. Indications were that the Japanese intended to advance on Tuyun.

At Most 95 Miles Off

The exact points where the Japanese were attacked were not stated. The invaders could have been at the most 95 miles from Kweiyang, and possibly less.

From Tuyun the highway runs to Kweiyang and thence to Chungking. Like the Burma road, it is extremely difficult for military forces to negotiate. However, observers assessing the situation recalled the 1942 Japanese advance up the Burma road from Lashio to the Salween.

Wedemeyer's report also told of sizable enemy forces astride the main road toward Kweiyang in the vicinity of Nantan and Hochih, which were attacked by the fighters.

While Government officials in Chungking admitted the Chinese military situation was grave, the Chinese high command communique mentioned only clashes near the Kwangsi town of Hochih, 95 miles norhtwest of Liuchow.

Chinese Report Local Gain

The high command said the Chinese troops battling the threat to Kweiyang and to Chungking itself, scored local successes in Kwangsi, checking the enemy at Tashantang (Big Mountain Pond), 138 miles southwest of Kweiyang.

P. H. Chang, Chinese Cabinet spokesman, acknowledging the gravity of the military situation, stated emphatically that he believed Chungking, Chinese wartime capital, never would be taken by the Japanese.

Chang said it would be necessary for the Government to reach an agreement with the Chinese Communists, and added that "the Government is sparing no effort in trying to reach a settlement." He declined to comment on rumors that some sort of compromise already had been reached.

Chungking Safe, Chinese Say

MOOSA

Chungking, Nov. 29 (AP)—A Chinese Government spokesman admitted today that the military situation in Chihkiang was grave, but added emphatically that he believed the Japanese never could take China's wartime capital of Chungking.

P. H. Chang, Cabinet spokesman, acknowledged an agreement must be reached with the Chinese Communists and said "the Government is sparing no effort in trying to reach a settlement."

Jap Drive Checked

Chinese troops, battling a Japanese threat to Kweichow province, its Burma Road capital of Kweiyang and to Chungking itself, scored local successes against the enemy push toward Kweichow, the high command said. The enemy was declared checked 138 miles southwest of Kweiyang.

[Domei, Japanese news agency, broadcast that 50,000 Chinese were fleeing toward Kweiyang along the southwestern highway and the Kwangsi-Kweichow railway, after Japanese forces yesterday occupied Nantan, which the broadcast called "the remaining important enemy stronghold in Kkangsi province."]

In the west, stiffening Japanese resistance in Yunnan province slowed the Chinese advance toward Chefang, last important objective on the Chipa side of the Burma Road before the border town of Wanting, 28 miles away, the high command said.

4,000 JAP TROOPS LOST WHEN PLANES WIPE OUT CONVOY

10 Transports and Three Destroyers Sunk by Yank Aviators.

SEA LOSSES HIGH

Japanese Airmen Press Home Attack on American Ships in Gulf.

By MURLIN SPENCER

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, PHILIPPINES, Thursday, Nov. 30—(AP) Dive-bombing American fighter planes wiped out a 13-ship Japanese reinforcement convoy Tuesday and Wednesday, spilling an estimated 4,000 enemy troops to death at sea, sinking 10 transports and three destroyers.

Piling into the sixth large convoy the Nipponese have sent to Leyte, the fighters erased eight transports far from their goal at Ormoc, in accounting for the 4,000 troops but other enemy soldiers got ashore from two docked transports at Ormoc, which later were sunk.

Headquarters announced the action today.

There was no estimate of how many troops reached shore to bolster Lt. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita's veterans now engaged with the 32nd and Seventh American Divisions. Well over 35,000 have been brought into Leyte since Oct. 25.

The convoy battle extended over a wide area from Ormoc west into the Camotes sea and around Cebu. It was sighted in late afternoon Tuesday west of Leyte and some damage was inflicted.

All during that night, fighters hovered over the convoy, keeping watch and harassing. Early Wednesday morning, planes went out to finish the job, particularly the two transports docked at Ormoc. One, a large transport, was seen to blow to pieces when hit.

Others which turned and fled without continuing to Ormoc were bagged as far west as off the coast of Cebu.

The 4,000 made enemy losses at sea in such reinforcements more than 21,000 in recent weeks.

Allied fighter planes destroyed three cargo transports, seven troop transports and three destroyers.

Probably an entire reinforcing division was aboard the convoy. Some of the remnants probably reached Ormoc, the west Leyte port into which the enemy has fed troops into the Yamashita line.

Two of the cargo ships partially were unloaded during the two day and night air attack Nov. 28-29.

The total ships destroyed by Allied air and patrol torpedo action since the Japanese began their reinforcement efforts stands at 26 transports and 17 escort vessels, mostly destroyers.

(The total of transports would be 29 if they included three others sunk by air action last week off the north tip of Cebu while "apparently headed" for Ormoc.)

Seven covering enemy aircraft were shot down.

Among the ships erased in the latest attacks were three transports ranging from 3,000 to 8,000 tons, four ranging from 1,000 to 2,000 and three of 750 tons each.

Seven of the troop transports and one of the cargo vessels were sunk "well out at sea," headquarters said.

The belief that the convoy sought to bring in a reinforcing division was based on statements taken from enemy prisoners of war. They said the second Japanese infantry division was expected.

It was the sixth enemy reinforcement convoy so far destroyed.

For the third straight day pouring rains stalemated the ground action on Leyte where the Yanks hold eastern Leyte and are pushing from north and south on western Leyte against Ormoc.

Heavy Rainfall

"Since the beginning of the month, 23 and one-half inches of rain has fallen on Leyte," today's communique said, "an unprecedented record for November.

"We are partially supplying our front line echelons by dropping (supplies) from the air."

American torpedo bombers and fighters bombed and strafed the airdrome and bivouacs at Legaspi on Luzon, main island of the Philippines.

The destruction of the seven enemy planes in the convoy battle gave the American 49th fighter group its 100th accounted for since arriving Oct. 27th at Leyte.

A headquarters spokesman said several of the fleeing ships sunk Wednesday were believed to have begun their flight immediately after the first heavy attacks of the low flying Kittyhawks, Thunderbolts and Lightnings were loosed.

Making probably their most determined attack since Leyte was invaded, Japanese airmen pressed home an assault on U. S. warships and other shipping in Leyte gulf

Monday, causing some casualties and damage."

Fifteen enemy planes were shot down, said Wednesday's communique in a terse report of the assault. It gave no details on American losses.

U.S. Destroyers In Ormoc Bay

American destroyers meanwhile were stealing into Ormoc Bay, on the western side of Leyte, and Monday night shelled the strategic enemy port of Ormoc without drawing any shore fire. It was the first time anything larger than a PT boat had dared to enter the mine-infested waters.

The speedy greyhounds of the fleet had to steam through narrow straits and close to enemy-held shores to reach their objective.

A field dispatch from Spencer Davis disclosed that the United States 7th Division, which includes veterans of the Aleutians and Marshall islands campaigns, had hurled back numerous night counter-attacks on Leyte's western coast, south of Ormoc.

Doughboys Stand Firm

The doughboys had not budged an inch from their Palanas River defenses, about thirteen miles below Ormoc. The enemy, however, had lost more than 600 men in his artillery supported assaults.

Lieut. Col. James H. Keller, a regimental executive officer, told Davis that the attackers "are the best Japanese troops we've run upon yet." They were attacking frontally and probing for soft spots on the American right (inland) flank.

Destroyers Blast Jap Forts.

Gen. MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 29 (A. P.).—Action flared on both sides of the storm-bogged Leyte as American destroyers braved the mined inner Philippine seas to shell Ormoc and the Japanese Air Force bombed United States warships and transports in Leyte Gulf, headquarters announced today.

The naval and air action at Leyte reported today by Gen. Douglas MacArthur was in sharp relief to the ground situation, where the American, pressing the enemy along the Ormoc corridor, were at a near halt because of torrential rains. American patrol-torpedo boats have been operating in the Camotes Sea, but this was the first appearance of destroyers. They had to move through narrow straits and past enemy-held islands.

Destroyer Attack Described.

On the other side of Leyte, thirty Japanese torpedo planes and dive bombers swarmed through a thick overcast during the daylight hours on Monday to hit American shipping in Leyte Gulf, but thirteen were knocked down by unusually deadly anti-aircraft fire and two others were destroyed by fighters. Gen. MacArthur acknowledged "some casualties and damage."

Naval units in Leyte Gulf included a battleship and other warships and transports. In their first penetration of the dangerous inland seas from the Pacific, the destroyers boldly skirted Leyte Island on Monday night and entered the Camotes Sea, from which they bombarded Japanese positions around Ormoc for three hours from close range.

Dean Schedler, an Associated Press correspondent, aboard one destroyer, said that the force circled about Ormoc Harbor at slow speed and fired salvo after salvo at enemy targets without drawing return fire. The destroyers left unscratched. Raineloud acted as a shield.

Tokyo Claims Heard Here.

Tokyo's claim of the counter-landing by a "powerful Japanese unit" on Morotai, an island invaded last September 15 by Gen. MacArthur in preparation for the Philippines operations, was recorded here today by the Federal Communications Commission. The broadcast said that "bitter fighting is progressing on the island between our unit and American troops."

The FCC also recorded a Tokyo claim of a Japanese strike against Saipan, where Tokyo said the raiders caused "heavy damage." American headquarters on Saipan have confirmed that of the enemy planes which twice bombed and strafed the base on Monday, thirteen were shot down, but the damage caused was not specified.

Radio Tokyo asserted that the counter-landing on Morotai was accomplished "without the loss of a single soldier." Morotai was invaded in mid-September by Gen. MacArthur's men in preparation for the October reinvasion of the Philippines and subsequently was used as an air and light naval base.

Account of Landing.

A purported eyewitness account of the Morotai landing, transmitted by a Domei war correspondent, said that the Japanese under Commander Morita reached the beach by approaching under cover of darkness in landing boats "with their muffled motors roaring defiantly." The landing troops, he said, "reverently bowed toward the Imperial Palace and began their march inland."

Radio Tokyo, which said at first that the landing was on November 26, later changed the date to November 16. Explaining the absence of recent reports from Morotai, Domei said that the Americans had a "sizable air force with heavy bombers as a mainstay" on the island and that the communications of the remaining Japanese garrison had been severed by American naval action.

Since the Americans occupied Morotai, PT boats and United States planes have thwarted several Japanese attempts to land forces there from nearby Halmahera Island.

Jap Raid on Leyte.

In describing the air raid on American surface ships at Leyte, the Japanese Imperial Command claimed that "units of the Kamikaze Special Attack Corps, with ten planes, on November 27, attacked enemy ships in Leyte Gulf and either sank or damaged ten.

"Sunk: One battleship, three large cruisers and four transports.

"Damaged or set ablaze: One battleship or large cruiser and one large transport."

Japanese Imperial Headquarters, in reporting the Saipan raid, said that "Japanese air units staged two attacks on the American airfields at Saipan and Tinian Islands, and inflicted considerable damage" on grounded aircraft and field facilities.

Nightly Attacks Fail To Budge Leyte Yanks

DAVIS

With U. S. 7th Division South of Ormoc, Leyte, P. I., Nov. 29 (AP)—In a week of night attacks, fresh Japanese troops have succeeded in losing more than 600 killed without budging the 7th Division spearhead on the Palanas river front, thirteen miles south of Ormoc.

The veterans of the Aleutians and Marshalls campaigns hold fast, with casualties less than one sixth of those of the enemy, but division officers are not inclined to minimize the Japanese tactics.

One regimental executive officer, Lieut. Col. James H. Keller, of Annapolis, grudgingly admitted, "these are the best Japanese troops we've run upon yet. They are fighting like an army out to fight."

Frontal Assaults

The Japanese have been making the main assault frontally, preceded by jabs on the American right flank. At the least indication of weakness the Nipponese are ready to pour at least 2,000 troops into the gap. Thus far there has been no opportunity for a breakthrough.

The enemy has the advantage of high ground from which to launch night-long blows. Alert gun crews, dug in on a ridge forming the American perimeter have succeeded in wiping out all infiltration parties as they descended into the valley and charged up the hillside.

It is not unusual for a single anti-tank gun to wipe out 30 or more Japanese in a single rush.

Identification Removed

Before withdrawing at dawn the enemy is careful to remove identifications from his dead and to evacuate his wounded.

The Japanese have tried their age-old wiles as well. While striking at one outfit they succeeded in wounding the company commander. There came a momentary confusion and in the midst of it a voice called out in English: "Withdraw! Withdraw!" The trick was effective the first time and it cost several hundred hard-earned yards before the company counterattacked and regained its old position.

The Japanese air force had not paid much attention to Baybay until yesterday, when bombers circled over the West Coast base and dropped their bombs without damage to military targets. That bombing took place, incidentally, while radio Tokyo was blatantly announcing that Baybay had been recaptured by the troops of Nippon. The claim drew loud guffaws from thousands of 7th Division men who were crowded around the little radio.

U. S. Warships Dodge Mines, Shell Ormoc

Leyte, Nov. 29 (AP)—American destroyers braved the mined inner Philippine seas to shell Ormoc, and the Japanese airforce bombed U. S. warships and transports in Leyte Gulf, headquarters announced today.

Tokyo radio, in unconfirmed broadcasts, expanded the Pacific's war picture, saying Jap troops were locked in battle on Morotai Island, 300 miles south of the Philippines, after a surprise counter-landing there Sunday.

Tokyo also claimed that Japanese planes today struck for the third straight day at Saipan in the Marianas from which superfortresses twice have flown to bomb Tokyo.

NOV 30 1944

Rain Slows Advance

The naval and air action at Leyte reported by Gen. MacArthur was in sharp relief to the ground situation where the Yanks, pressing the enemy along the Ormoc corridor, still were at a near halt because of torrential rain.

American patrol-torpedo boats had been operating in the enemy-controlled Camotes Sea off western eLyte but this was the first appearance of destroyers. They had to move through narrow straits and past enemy-held islands. The warships bombarded Japanese positions around Ormoc for three hours from colse range without drawing return fire.

On the other side of Leyte, 30 Japanes torpedo planes and five bombers hit American shipping in Leyte Gulf Monday, but 13 were downed by ack-ack fire and two others destroyed by fighters.

Gen. MacArthur acknowledged "some casualties and damage." Unit sin Leyte Gulf included a battleship and other warships and transports.

Gratefulness— Filipino Style

Carigara Village, Leyte, Nov. 29 [AP—Delayed]—Eight enlisted men of the 24th Division got a sample of Filipino gratefulness November 8.

They had occupied a substantial but empty home in Carigara when the Americans captured the town. Yesterday—related Pfc M. H. Chamberlain, Greensboro, Md.—the owner and his two sisters, all teachers at various Leyte village schools returned. They had been hiding out in the hills.

The boys insisted on moving out immediately but the owner would not hear of it.

"You are our saviors," they said. "We have lived in the hills a long time. We can live there until you need our home no longer."

Old Glory Raised In Record Time

Leyte Island, Nov. 29 (AP)—When the Coast Guard boat crews who landed army assault troops on Leyte came within 500 yards of shore, they spotted two large American flags flying from coconut trees.

Ashore, they learned an army officer in the first wave had disregarded any possible Japanese beach fire and rushed inland to secure the flags to the shattered trees, thus creating something of a speed record for raising Old Glory over enemy-held territory.

Fair Sailor Lass Blinker Outblinked

Leyte, Philippines, Nov. 29 (AP)—A Norwegian merchant steamer dropped anchor at a United States fleet base. Word went around that an attractive Canadian lass operated the ship's blinker signal system.

All ships soon were winking their blinker lights. Thus the navy learned she was 23, 5 feet 2, weighed 126 pounds. But the courtships ended abruptly.

The young man was wooed so ardently he gave out winking back!

DOGS TOO ALERT

CAPOOCAN VILLAGE, LEYTE, P. I. — (AP) There's just one little drawback to the war dogs used by the Army on Leyte. They're too good.

The dogs alert the soldiers for anything—Japs, Filipinos or—

Well, for instance, one dog had a squad alerted for 20 minutes one day. The squad carefully stalked down a monkey.

Liberators Give Iwo Fields Heavy Bombing

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Nov. 29 (AP)—Lightning-escorted Liberators have struck heavy blows at enemy airfields on Iwo Jima in the Volcano Islands, the Navy announced today.

The big bombers dropped 112 tons of bombs at two Iwo Jima airstrips Sunday only a few hours after enemy fighters, believed based there, strafed the Superfortress bases on Saipan.

Iwo Jima is 725 land miles north of Saipan and is the nearest base from which the Japanese could raid Saipan.

ERICKSON

Was Foe's Relay Base

Plainly indicating intent to knock out the Iwo Jima fields, the Liberators went back there Monday and unloaded 53 more tons of bombs.

Monday night, a single Liberator went back to Iwo Jima to check on the damage.

Iwo Jima is 750 miles south of Tokyo. Enemy fighters thus could fly out from the homeland, gas up and arm at Iwo Jima, then go to Saipan to harass the Superfort base.

Long-range Lightnings, making the round-trip flight of more than 1,400 miles from Saipan to Iwo Jima, bagged two out of from five to seven enemy interceptors Sunday. Monday only one enemy fighter was seen aloft.

Marcus Hit Monday

Marcus Island, which might be used by the enemy to detect Superfortresses winging to Toyko, was blasted Monday by Liberators.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz said the Iwo Jima raiders spread fire and explosion over the enemy airstrips.

There was no mention of any raiding losses, but one Liberator was damaged by anti-aircraft fire.

In other actions:

Mitchells attacked Haha Jima in the Bonins, within 650 miles of Tokyo, Sunday.

Corsairs hit enemy bases at Babelthuap and Arakabsan in the northern Palau group Saturday, Hellcats returned for another attack that night and other Corsairs hit Yap.

The phosphate-producing island of Nauru was blasted by Marine Corsairs and Navy Venturas Monday.

Amphibious Base Captain Honored

Pearl Harbor, Nov. 29 (A. P.).—Capt. James W. Whitefield, U. S N., of Wilmington, Del., was awarded the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct as commanding officer of the amphibious training base, Camp Bradford, Va., from March, 1943, to October, 1944, in a ceremony at Pacific Fleet Headquarters here. Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief, United States Pacific Fleet and Pacific Ocean areas, made the presentation.

Morotai Reinvaded, Tokyo Radio Reports

San Francisco, Nov. 29 (AP)—The Tokyo radio claimed today that Japanese amphibious troops reinvaded Morotai Island, while Nipponese planes sank eight United States warships and transports in the Philippines and made two prolonged raids on Superfortress bases in the Marianas Islands.

United States communiques and front line dispatches have acknowledged some damage to United States warships in Leyte Gulf and admitted attacks on the Saipan B-29 base. Otherwise the enemy broadcasts, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, were unsupported from any Allied source.

Bloodless, Japs Say

Radio Tokyo asserted an unopposed counterlanding on Morotai, United States air base 300 miles south of the Philippines, was accomplished "without the loss of a single soldier."

The "bloodless" landing November 26 was effected by a "powerful Japanese unit," radio Tokyo said.

The broadcast said "bitter fighting is progressing on the island between our unit and American troops."

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique today made brief mention of Morotai, reporting that enemy night raiders caused "slight damage."

Morotai was invaded in mid-September by MacArthur's men in preparation for the October invasion of the Philippines and has been used subsequently as an air and light naval base.

Recently, radio Tokyo made two other claims of successful landings on American-held Palau Islands in the Carolines. One of these was acknowledged by American headquarters, but the islet later was retaken.

In describing the raid on American surface ships at Leyte, the Japanese imperial command claimed that "units of the Kamikaze special attack corps with ten planes on November 27 attacked enemy ships in Leyte Gulf and either sank or damaged ten of them.

Ships Are Listed

"Sunk: One battleship, three large cruisers and four transports.

"Damaged or set ablaze: One battleship or large cruiser and one large transport."

MacArthur's headquarters acknowledged that "unspecified damage" had been done.

Japanese imperial headquarters in reporting the Saipan raid said that "Japanese air units had staged two attacks on American airfields at Saipan and Tinian Islands, and had inflicted "considerable damage" on ground aircraft and field facilities.

American headquarters said the raids cost the Japanese thirteen planes and admitted that damage had been done.

Called Night Operation

A purported eyewitness account of the Morotai landing, transmitted by a Domei war correspondent said the Japanese under Commander Morita reached the beach by approaching under cover of darkness in landing boats "with their muffled motors roaring defiantly."

The landing troops, he said, "reverently bowed toward the imperial palace and began their march inland."

Radio Tokyo which, at first said the landing was November 26, later changed the date to November 16.

Communications Cut

Explaining the absence of recent reports from Morotai, Domei said the Americans had a "sizable air force with heavy bombers as a mainstay" on the island and that the communications of the remaining Japanese garrison had been "severed" by American naval action.

Since Americans occupied Morotai, PT boats and United States planes have thwarted several Japanese attempts to land forces there from near-by Halmahera Island.

King Wins Support On Draft Issue

Ottawa, Nov. 29 (AP)—Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, with the life of his Government at stake in the conscription crisis, won important support tonight when former Defense Minister Colonel J. L. Ralston announced in Parliament that he would vote with the Government on a confidence motion now pending.

Ralston declared he favored for overseas duty conscription of the entire home army, originally drafted for service only in the Western Hemisphere, but said he would support King's new policy of partial conscription for service abroad because to do otherwise would cause further delay in dispatch of urgently needed reinforcements to the Western front.

The former Minister, who resigned November 1 because he could not then win the Cabinet to his view that men should be sent abroad from the home army, declared he would have accepted the partial policy rather than resign. The Cabinet at that time, however, would not adopt even that intermediate measure. The new policy was effected three weeks later.

—o—

Before Ralston made his eagerly awaited address, Prime Minister King announced in Parliament that anti-conscription disorders among draftee troops on Canada's West Coast are being "carefully watched and completely controlled."

In the first official comment on the increasingly tense atmosphere in half a dozen draftee camps in British Columbia, both King and his Defense Minister, Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, sought to reassure the country, but they admitted the situation was difficult.

The protesting troops were drafted originally for service only at home. Under the Government's new partial conscription policy they are now liable to be sent to the Western front to reinforce Canada's depleted infantry lines.

In the most serious instance to date a French-Canadian unit at Terrace, B.C., prevented by force of arms an English-speaking unit from entraining for another camp, reportedly en route abroad. A military spokesman on the scene described the troops as "mutineers."

Referred to this by an opposition spokesman, King protested "use of the word mutiny."

"It is not mutiny," the Prime Minister said, "most decidedly not."

King was replying to R. B. Hanson, acting floor leader of the official opposition group, the Progessive Conservatives, who said the reports from British Columbia were "rather alarming." He said the troops involved "are armed and have live ammunition," and he asked the Government what it "proposes to do or has done" about it.

—o—

General McNaughton, who does not have a seat in Parliament, took cognizance of the situation publicly for the first time with a statement that the disturbances were chiefly due to a comparatively small minority in each unit.

The trouble has been stirred, he said, by about 25 per cent of the 25,000 home-defense troops stationed in the West Coast province. He acknowledged that in some instances these troops were "exceedingly active."

"Some of these men were drafted three years ago," he said. "At first they developed an anti-persecution complex. Then they changed to a defensive complex and finally instead of being ashamed of being 'Zombies,' were proud of it. They are the ones who are stirring up the others in their units."

"Zombies" is a term applied to home-defense troops who throughout the war have declined to volunteer for service abroad.

In a demonstration at Port Alberni, on Vancouver Island, in British Columbia, several hundred home-defense troops early today paraded with large signs declaring: "We'll be Zombies forever."

Pacific Coast Command headquarters at Vancouver said during the day that the situation was easing at Terrace and that the troop train had departed with its English-speaking unit despite the threat of the French-speaking group.

—o—

Prime Minister King, who has laid before the House a motion of confidence to be voted upon later in the week, still had a fight on his hands to garner the majority he has demanded to remain in office.

Tuesday morning his position was regarded as precarious, but later in the day it seemed solid after a caucus with his large bloc of supporters from the French-speaking Province of Quebec. Overnight, however, there developed a sentiment among many of these members that they would desert him.

The situation regarding the Quebec members appeared to be that they would uphold King if their votes were needed, but are very anxious to vote against him if they can do so without turning him out of office.

On the other hand, the members are aware that to defeat King would in all probability only bring a Government favoring all-out conscription rather than the present partial plan, under which a group of only 16,000 is to be sent abroad to meet immediate needs.

As debate opened on the confidence motion the Prime Minister won a measure of support when Capt. J. Allan Johnston, a Liberal member just returned from the Italian front after serving there virtually throughout the campaign, declared his support of the partial conscription policy.

Canada Draft Near Solution In Parliament

Protests of Troops On Overseas Service Seen Dying Down

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, Nov. 29.—Canada's explosive conscription problem moved toward solution in its purely Parliamentary phases today but drafted troops in Pacific coast camps still were protesting against the government's new policy of sending some of them overseas.

In a rare secret session Parliament heard Defense Minister A. G. L. McNaughton until nearly midnight last night, then adjourned to resume open deliberations this afternoon.

In a statement last night at Vancouver Maj. Gen. R. R. Pearkes, commanding officer in that area, declared that one mutinous demonstration at Terrace, British Columbia, had resulted from a misunderstanding.

Situation Eased.

A spokesman said simultaneously that the situation there seemed to be "easier" after one unit suporting the demonstrators had turned in their arms.

Gen. Pearkes said:

"A unit which now has been given a coast defense role and which was being moved from Terrace to another point in British Columbia was prevented from entraining by pickets of other units in Terrace. A previous report that this unit was moving overseas was in error."

What effect, if any, this statement would have on demonstrators at half a dozen other camps in British Columbia was not immediately clear. Under the government program 16,000 draftees are to be sent overseas.

Vote in Few Days.

In Parliament, after a week of one of the gravest crises in Canada's modern history revolving around the traditional racial conflict over conscription of troops for overseas duty, Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King appeared to have won sufficient support to give him a comfortable majority on a vote of confidence to be taken in the next few days.

A military spokesman at Terrace described the striking troops as "mutineers," as they interfered with other troops in performance of duty.

Beer parlors and liquor stores were ordered closed in the town, and a Canadian Air Force detachment stationed there was ordered confined to barracks.

At Terrace, a town of only a few hundred civilian population 450 miles north of Vancouver, a French-speaking draftee regiment armed with rifles and Bren guns and wearing steel helmets marched yesterday to the camps of two English-speaking draftee regiments also quartered in the town and prevented a scheduled entraining of one unit. Protest demonstrations of a less violent nature were staged elsewhere in British Columbia, all involving English-speaking units, and demonstrations by small groups and individuals occurred in other parts of Canada.

The French-speaking regiment at Terrace staged its demonstration despite the fact that earlier in the day the authorities had reminded each man individually that military regulations provided a penalty of life imprisonment for such disturbances, and that participants might be fired upon.

The House today will hear the former Defense Minister, Col. J. L. Ralston, who resigned early this month when he failed to win the Cabinet over to his view that conscription should be adopted to reinforce depleted Canadian infantry lines in Europe. Prime Minister King, after a three-hour meeting with his French-speaking Liberal party supporters from Quebec, who had threatened to desert him on the confidence vote, was reported to have won them over despite their opposition to any form of conscription.

JAP NAVY'S AIR ARM DONE FOR

Mitscher Also Disparages Jap Plane Production And Pilots

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—Belief that Japanese naval aviation has been "practically eliminated" was expressed today by Vice Admiral Marc A. Mitscher, commanding officer of a Pacific Fleet carrier task force.

Admiral Mitscher made his remarks at a news conference in which he revealed Navy flyers have shot down approximately 4,000 Japanese naval flyers in the past year and a half, and added:

"I have an idea Japanese plane production is not as great as they would have us believe."

Published estimates of Japanese plane production have been around 1,500 planes monthly.

Our Pilots Better

Admiral Mitscher said our material is much better than Japanese material and "our pilots always have been superior. Those coming out today are just as good as those we started out with."

Mitscher said the Superfortress bombings of aircraft plants and navy yards on the Japanese mainland was helping reduce effectiveness of the naval air force and he added the quality of Japanese pilots has gone down materially."

United States pilots, he said, actually feel sorry for them. "They feel like they are shooting ducks on the water."

He characterized the Japanese fighting man as a "vicious brute" and an "educated savage which reverts to type."

A Long War

The Admiral cautioned, however, that he thought "it is going to be a long war and as soon as our people realize that fact the sooner they can inspire our men out there to keep on fighting."

He predicted that the Japanese fleet would "come out again," but explained that "as soon as we get bases in the Philippines we can drive them out of any port in the area, including the China area. Even if they get into the Sea of Japan we can drive them out of there."

Prefers Carrier Planes

Mitscher, in discussing the value of land-based versus carrier-based planes, expressed preference for a "mobile base." He said experience had been that airbases built on islands soon lost their usefulness after enemy communication lines were cut and their aircraft shot down. On the other hand, carriers can move forward and move fast and will therefore become more and more important "as we go along."

Modern carriers can carry types of planes equivalent to almost anything on a land base and land bases have always been overcrowded unless many fields were available, he said.

Acting As If War Were Over Makes No Sense To Infantry

Washington, Nov. 29 [Special]—In the leading editorial of its current issue, the Infantry Journal, published by the Infantry Association, sharply takes issue with those who think and talk as though the war were already over, and who are responsible for a corresponding letdown in the home-front war effort.

The editorial, appearing in the December issue, follows:

"The infantry soldier is closer to the war than any other man. He doesn't see the enemy for a few flashing, dramatic [illegible]ghly tense, and dangerous seco[illegible] of time. Day upon day he is close to the enemy.

"If he isn't actually fighting he is usually within artillery range or even mortar range—no farther than a few city blocks—from the fighting enemy.

"A Long, Long Time"

"He may go on for a hundred days at a time—for even longer—close to constant danger.

"The infantryman has a long, long time in which to realize what war is, how hard the German or the Jap can fight. He doesn't need headlines of columnists or correspondents to keep him informed.

"Bullets, bayonets, shells, bombs, are his firsthand sources of war information. He knows.

"Close To The Enemy"

"He knows more than simply how hard the enemy fights. He knows that the German or the Japanese will fight that hard any time he can get his hands on the weapons with which to fight.

"The infantryman can figure right on from there. He can see that the job must be finished this time beyond the slightest doubt.

"He has a good idea how much of the job he himself can do. He knows, above all, that the main part of the job will have to be finished by a million or two others like himself—by men who fight close to the enemy, close enough to realize daily just how tough the enemy is.

"Thousands Of Miles"

"The infantryman, better than anyone else, can figure out that when the job in Europe is finished—and there may still be plenty more to do in that huge theater of war—then another tremendous task will still have to be finished up on the other side of the world.

"The infantryman in Europe has been too busy daily with the German enemy to do much studying about the Pacific war. But he knows there is a great campaign in progress out there which, although there is no harder fighting in it than he has seen in Africa, Italy, France and Germany, is a campaign covering thousands of miles where his own campaigns have been covering hundreds.

"It makes sense to him that when the job in Europe is done and our armies are completely victorious over those of Germany, the war in the Pacific theaters must be brought to the same conclusion.

"These things make sense to the infantryman.

"But there are a lot of things that do not make sense to him. It doesn't make sense to the infantryman that any man or woman at home safe in the United States can think for a moment that the war is over until it is completely over.

Just Doesn't Make Sense

"It makes sense to him that people are trying to think and plan already for the safety of the world after the war. But it doesn't make any sense to him at all if these thoughts about the future world are allowed to interfere in the least with the winning of the complete victories needed to destroy the armies of the Japs and the Germans.

NOV 30 1944

"It doesn't make sense to the infantryman for any American who is not alongside of him in combat to let up on his war effort for a single second—to think, 'Well, it's nearly over; we can begin to take it easy.'

"The infantryman won't have the chance to take it easy until the last attack is made—until the last German and Jap soldier who is still willing to fight has been accommodated — until two of the world's strongest conquering armies haven't a single particle of spirit left within them.

Knows The War Isn't Over

"The soldier of the infantry knows, for he is closer to the war than anyone else.

"What he knows he learns from daily fighting—from daily, desperate, hard-fought contact with the enemy, with the fighting enemy. He knows that the war isn't over and that it must be fought with all our strength to the very end."

A.A.F. Sets Combat Mark Of 3,432 Sorties a Day

Average for 1944 Compares With 7 a Day Before '43

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29 (AP).—The Army Air Forces have been flying an average of 3,432 combat sorties a day in 1944. This record—startling in contrast to the average of only seven a day prior to 1943—was compiled in reaching a grand total of 1,500,251 sorties since Pearl Harbor. A sortie is one trip by one plane.

More than two-thirds of the total since war started were flown this year up to Nov. 18—1,108,441—an air forces spokesman disclosed today.

The 1944 average of 3,432 combat sorties daily more than triples the 1943 record of 1,000 a day. That year's total was 364,910. Before 1943, the number flown was only 26,900.

The Japanese have absorbed 24.8 per cent of the total stabs or 372,528, while the Germans have taken the remainder 1,127,723 or 75.2 per cent.

The United States and Great Britain are operating roughly equal numbers of aircraft, without regard to type, on the western European front, the spokesman said. No disclosure has been made by the War Department with regard to troops committed by the various allies there.

The Army divided the grand total of combat sorties into these categories: 1,318 by very heavy bombers, 390,562 by heavy bombers; 238,042 by medium and light bombers and 870,329 by fighters.

Henderson Going To Post In Reich

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—Leon Henderson, economist and former chief of OPA, is scheduled to leave for London next week with an assignment to handle economic affairs in the American-controlled third of defeated Germany.

With Henderson will go James A. Perkins, an assistant to Lauchlin Currie, acting deputy administrator of the Foreign Economic Administration.

Henderson will serve under the chief of the American-occupied section of Germany, who presumably will be Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

His appointment has been pending for several weeks. At the moment it has not been formally completed but is expected to be signed, sealed and delivered in the next few days.

Free-News Group To Be Named

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—John S. Knight, president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, said today he would name within a week a committee to carry abroad the banner of universal freedom of information.

The committee's mission to foreign capitals is to explain and seek support for the society's campaign to crush "all political economic and military barriers to freedom of world information."

The ASNE board of directors authorized the committee at a meeting here yesterday. Once overseas, it will visit and consult with representatives of Government, press and radio in various world capitals.

To Report Back In April

Then it will report back to the ASNE annual meeting to be held here April 19-21.

Knight is planning to put three prominent ASNE members on the committee.

NOV 30 1944

Back of the committee is a formal pronouncement of society policy. A policy statement invited "reciprocal declarations by the United States Government and all other Governments, press, radio and other media of information, embracing the right of the people to read and hear news without hindrance."

Form Part Of Program

The program, the ASNE said, should cover:

Recognition that a free exchange of information is essential to complete international friendship.

Recognition that any media of public information financed to any degree by a government, organization or person shall be conspicuously labeled as to source.

Recognition that any monopoly of the media of information is harmful to the public interest and incompatible with freedom of expression and competition of ideas.

Refusal to recognize the right of any government, organization or person to discriminate against any media of information, to infringe upon freedom of information or expression, to place any barriers in the way of free exchange of information, or to impose peacetime censorship except for obscenity or fraud.

House Committee Wants Palestine Open to Jews

Senate Group Defers Action on Similar Resolution

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29 (AP).—The House Foreign Affairs Committee recommended today that Palestine be reopened to the Jews for free entry and colonization. It approved a resolution to be sent to the full House which declared:

"The United States shall use its good offices to the end that the doors of Palestine shall be opened for free entry of Jews into that country, and that there shall be full opportunity for colonization,

30. 24— 20797

so that the Jewish people may ultimately reconstitute Palestine as a free and democratic commonwealth."

Across the Capitol, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee heard Senator Robert A. Taft, Republican, of Ohio, urge approval of a similar resolution, but decided to defer action for a week.

Senator Taft called attention to indorsement of the project in the 1944 platforms of both major political parties, to favorable declarations by President Roosevelt and Governor Thomas E. Dewey, and to a letter from War Secretary Henry L. Stimson.

OFFICIALS CALL LEAGUE SESSION

Legal Ground For New World Agency To Be Cleared

NOV 30 1944

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—League of Nations officials have scheduled a meeting in London in the next few days to figure out how to clear legal ground for a new world-peace agency.

Although the League became generally inactive after the present war started, its foundations of treaties, obligations and assets remain.

"They cannot be thrown away," one former League official here said.

The special meeting will be that of a supervisory commission set up when the war began with emergency powers to handle all League business. Chairman Carl J. Hambro, Norway, called the meeting.

45 Nations Still Members

More than 400 treaties have reference to the League. Forty-five nations are now members. The League has land and buildings at Geneva. Numerous technical commissions are even yet functioning under the League, three of them in the United States.

The problem of clearing away all these obligations is one of the toughest facing creators of a world security organization. The covenant to establish machinery which nations hoped would prevent a second World War has no provision for dissolving the League.

Associates of the League here said the thought at present is to find some way to transfer the League's assets and obligations to the new peace agency.

But this cannot be done without consent of all the 45 sovereign member states, including neutrals. The Axis powers and Russia withdrew from the League in the years before the war. The United States never joined.

It is thus considered probable that when the new peace organization is established, League members will hold a farewell session. They will have to decide how to fit their organization into the new one, and formally and legally change all the treaties and binding documents that mention the League.

Plans for such a session are expected to be discussed at the forthcoming London meeting.

U.S. Trade Protection From Surplus Planned

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—The State Department is preparing a plan designed to prevent disposal of surplus property abroad from hurting American trade.

After the last war, large amounts of material were sold directly to foreign countries. As a result, American companies in some cases were unable to do any further business in non-perishable goods, such as trucks, for years.

Priority Customer List

This time, State Department officials said army-navy goods declared surplus abroad should be offered for sale in this order:

1. To other United States Government agencies such as embassies and economic missions.

2. To the United Nations Relief and rehabilitation Administration.

3. To the regular agents for the goods if they are trade marked, such as typewriters and automobiles.

Considerable amounts of materials already have been marked as unneeded by the Army and Navy in quiet theaters.

Another point which officials are emphasizing is that care should be taken to make sure the property is in good condition—to uphold the reputation of American goods.

Some May Be Scrapped

Some American property abroad may have to be scrapped, it is estimated, because they are things nobody is likely to want.

As soon as the Surplus Property Disposal Board begins to function the State Department expects to start working with it on principles for foreign operation.

The Foreign Economic Administration now is responsible for actual handlings of sales, but there is a possibility that this job will be brought under the newly created board.

Exporting Held Blameless In 'Fag' Famine

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—Government tobacco experts cited statistics today to refute claims of some smokers that exports of tobacco and cigarettes under lend-lease and other programs are to blame for the smoking famine.

War Food Administration officials said exports have been a smaller portion of annual production since the war than before.

Before the war foreign sales of cigarette-type tobaccos ranged from about 35 to 45 per cent of the total domestic output. Since the war exports have ranged from 20 to 30 per cent.

Only a very small portion of wartime exports have moved overseas in the form of cigarettes, the bulk being shipped as leaf tobacco for manufacture abroad. Officials said that less than two per cent of the total domestic cigarette production is being exported.

Aged For 18 Months

Cigarette tobacco normally is aged for eighteen months to two years. Thus cigarettes now being sold are produced from 1941 and 1942 crops.

Officials said 28 per cent of the 1941 cigarette-tobacco crop and twenty per cent of the 1942 crop was shipped abroad. About 30 per cent of the 1943 crop was made available for foreign users. Present plans call for allocation of about 25 per cent of the 1944 crop to them.

Tobacco experts said the shortage is due to a combination of factors, including:

1. More civilians are smoking more cigarettes than ever before.

2. More soldiers are smoking more cigarettes than ever before.

3. Uneven distribution due to wartime population changes.

4. Black markets and hoarding.

5. Inability of manufacturers to expand production sufficiently to meet wartime demands.

6. Some accumulation of supplies in shipping centers—particularly for armed forces overseas—due to wartime shipping difficulties.

V-E DAY ARMS CUT MAY REACH 35 P. C.

NOV 30 1944

Washington, Nov. 29 (A.P.)—Military estimates of the probable cut in armament production following V-E day are understood to have been reduced from the 40 per cent slash expected last summer, but high production officials predicted today they would wind up in the neighborhood of 35 per cent.

On the basis of new estimates reported to have been submitted by the Army, the report has circulated in recent days that Germany's collapse would bring a cut in armament production perhaps as slight as only 20 per cent.

One high WPB official, however, said that the estimate had fluctuated from time to time, and he was confident that the curtailment would not be far from the original estimate when European V day neared.

SENATE NOT LIKELY TO SHARE POWERS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—(AP) Advocates of a House voice in foreign affairs declared today the Senate two-thirds rule caused "a complete breakdown of treaty making in our government."

They formally opened their bid to break the Senate's exclusive control over treaties by urging the House Judiciary committee to approve a resolution making future pacts subject to ratification by a majority vote in both branches of Congress.

Despite the enthusiastic House start, backers of the resolution conceded privately that it has a tissue-thin chance of getting through the Senate. Approval of the amendment, would strip it of treaty powers it has held since the foundi[illegible] of the nation.

DELAY STETTINIUS APPROVAL FOR DAY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(AP) Edward R. Stettinius' nomination to be secretary of state received unanimous approval from the Senate Foreign Relations committee today but Senator Langer (R-N.D.) forced a 24-hour delay in Senate action.

Surprising Republican as well as Democratic leaders, Langer refused to agree when Chairman Connally (D-Tex.) reported the Foreign Relations committee's action and asked unanimous consent for an immediate Senate vote on confirmation.

Under the Senate's rules, a day must elapse between a committee's report and Senate action on a nomination unless all senators agree to waive the rules.

The Stettinius nomination will be brought up again tomorrow for certain approval. Action also is expected then on the nomination of Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley to be ambassador to China which also was approved unanimously by the Foreign Relations committee.

It was not clear whether Langer objected only to the proposed swift procedure or to the nomination of the 44-year-old former steel executive to move up from under secretary to the Cabinet post ill health forced Cordell Hull to relinquish.

Trying to determine that point, Connally asked:

"Does the senator have any objection to the secretary of state?"

"There may be," Langer replied.

Candor Urged In Stettinius's New Role

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—Senator George (D., Ga.) called today for frank disclosures to Congress of Administration foreign-policy plans as the Senate moved toward early confirmation of Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., as Secretary of State.

Chairman Connally (D., Texas) summoned the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for expected unanimous approval of the Stettinius nomination. The committee also may approve President Roosevelt's selection of Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley as Ambassador to China.

Praises Frankness

With final Senate action on the two appointments due later this week, George said he hoped Stettinius would continue in his new job to be as frank with Foreign Relations Committee members as he had been in his former positions as Under Secretary and as lend-lease administrator.

Some members have complained in the past that Congress was kept largely in the dark on the development of Administration foreign policies.

"The outstanding characteristic about Stettinius in his dealings with us has been the full and frank way in which he has discussed the problems of the executive departments," George said. "I hope he can continue to be as frank. It will be a great help to Congress in the approaching discussions of world peace."

Speculation On Successor

Stettinius's elevation to the No. 1 Cabinet post set legislators to speculating that Roosevelt will fill the under secretaryship from the ranks of active diplomats. George said he would not be surprised if the President asks either John G. Winant, Ambassador to Great Britain, or W. Averell Harriman, Ambassador to Russia, to take the post.

If Roosevelt should decide to promote Adolf A. Berle, Jr., Assistant Secretary who has been mentioned for the job, there may be some Senate opposition.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, the Republican Presidential nominee, criticized during the political campaign views on Government ownership of industry which he attributed to Berle. Berle charged in return that Dewey had distorted his viewpoint.

Long Has Backers

While Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) said their undoubtedly would be opposition to Berle, he added that he thought such a nomination would be confirmed if the Administration brought pressure.

The favorite of Connally, George and some other Democrats for the post appeared to be Breckinridge Long, Assistant Secretary who has made friends on Capitol Hill while acting as a liaison man between the department and Congress.

Veterans' 90-Day Bill Is Passed By Senate

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—Legislation allowing discharged war vet[illegible] 90 days to reapply for their former civilian jobs—instead of the present 40 days—won final congressional approval today.

It was passed by a voice vote of the Senate and now goes to the White House.

NOV 30 1944

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director, stated that the 40-day limit worked to the disadvantage of some veterans, including those undergoing hospitalization at the time of release from the army.

House Hearing Called On Camp Shanks Cost

May Says Justice Department Has Data but Doesn't Act

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29 (AP)—Representative Andrew J. May, Democrat, of Kentucky, announced today the House Military Affairs Committee, of which he is chairman, will conduct an open hearing next Monday in its investigation of construction costs at Camp Shanks, N. Y.

The committee, Chairman May said, received complaints early this year of alleged irregularities at the camp and turned over to the Justice Department evidence it had obtained.

"The Justice Department says it has enough evidence and is ready to bring a number of indictments, but nothing is being done," Mr. May said. "They have had the evidence for almost eight months and apparently aren't gaing to do anything."

Greetings Abroad Cut At Christmas

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—The Army and Navy today announced suspension of all Christmas greeting messages by cable or radio to and from service personnel overseas between midnight December 5 and midnight Christmas Day.

The embargo applies both to standard prepared expeditionary force messages and greeting messages of the sender's own composition.

The announcement said the action was necessary because the volume of Christmas messages would overburden transmission facilities and delay essential messages.

The suspension does not prevent acceptance of messages of the sender's own composition other than greetings nor will it prevent transmission of messages filed prior to midnight December 5.

The only available means for exchange of Christmas greetings during the period of suspension will be by letter, the announcement said. Regular service will be resumed after December 25.

POST WAR HIGHWAY BILL PASSES HOUSE

NOV 30 1944

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—(AP) A $1,673,000,000 Federal program to modernize the nation's highways after the war was approved today by the House.

The bill, adopted by a voice vote, is generally similar to legislation passed by the Senate but cannot go to the President until the two branches of Congress agree on its specific terms.

Advocated as a combination plan to develop highways and cushion postwar unemployment, the House bill authorizes the Federal government to put up $500,000,000 a year for the next three years for road improvements. The sum would have to be matched dollar-for-dollar by states which want to share in the road building.

In addition to the Federal aid program the measure authorizes $173,000,000 for park, forest and Indian reservation roads for the three years. Congressional appropriations must follow to make the plan effective.

By a last-minute amendment the House struck from the proposal authority for the development of air landing strips adjacent to highways. Opponents of the division successfully argued that all authority over airports and landing strips should be left with the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Missouri River Plan Approved By Senate

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—Engineering plans recommended by President Roosevelt for development of the Missouri river basin received quick approval of the Senate today.

Prepared jointly by the Army Engineers and the Reclamation Bureau, the program was accepted by voice vote as part of the $1,000,000,000 flood control bill.

Yet to be settled, however, is the question whether a Missouri Valley Authority should be established, as advocated by the President, to carry out the plan.

Justice Department Row Decision Is Deferred

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29 — (AP) The Senate War Investigating committee brought the seething quarrel between top Justice department officials into the open today but deferred decision on a formal investigation.

After a closed committee session, Chairman Mead (D-NY) made public:

1. A letter from Attorney General Francis Biddle denying he asked for the resignation of Assistant Attorney General Norman M. Littell because of testimony Littell gave the Senate committee. The committee's interest in the quarel developed from this question, the members taking the position that the committee must protect its witnesses.

2. A 12,000-word memorandum from Littell saying the differences arose because he would not go along with the Attorney General in conduct "contrary to basic principles of good government." Among other things, Littell said Biddle intervened in a Justice department case in behalf of "his friend, Tommy Corcoran."

(Thomas G. Corcoran, former New Deal brain truster now in private law practice.)

"We considered both the Littell memorandum and the Biddle letter," Mead told reporters. "The committee decided there was not further action to take at this time. We felt that on the basis of the evidence before us there was nothing else to do."

He said he did not mean that the case was dropped.

He said the question whether it was a matter for the judiciary committee was not discussed. He added that some thought it was a matter for the executive department.

To this, Senator Hatch (D-NM) added that "it is perfectly apparent that Attorney General Biddle and Mr. Littell have reached the point where there are irreconcilable differences."

Refused To Resign

Littell has refused Biddle's request that he resign. The assistant attorney general is a presidential appointee and the attorney general has no authority to "fire" him.

In his letter to Mead, dated Nov. 27, Biddle said his request for Littell's resignation grew out of lack of "confidence" in his assistant.

On Nov. 18, I had a conference with Mr. Littell and told him that for some time our relationship had been such that I no longer reposed in him the kind of confidence that was essential for the best interests of the department and that I thought, under the circumstances, he would prefer to resign," Biddle wrote. x x x x

"I have never objected to Mr. Littell's testifying before your committee or before any other committee of Congress, and the action I took in asking for his resignation was in no way connected with any testimony he had given.

"I do not think it is appropriate for me to enter into the details which led me to ask for his resignation, but it seemed to me proper that you and the members of your committee should have this information."

The case in which Corcoran figured was a condemnation suit which Littell said his office filed at the request of the Maritime Commission to acquire the properties of the Savannah Shipyards company. Littell said the suit was filed "because of the failures and notorious incompetence of the defendant company in establishing a going concern."

The case eventually was brought to trial and a jury granted the company $1,285,000.

Littell's memorandum related incidents which he said "reflected" cooperation of the Attorney General and his former assistant, James Rowe, with Corcoran and the Washington law firm of William J. Dempsey and William C. Koplovitz to prevent the Savannah shipyards company case from being brought to trial.

"Shoestring Investment"

"Tommy Corcoran represented the Empire Ordnance company and its subsidiary, the Savannah Shipyards company," the memo stated. "As the Empire Ordnance company of Frank Cohen was then under investigation for fraud in the manufacture of munitions after skyrocketing from a shoestring investment of Mr. Frank Cohen of $5,000 x x x to a vast network of subsidiaries including the Savannah Shipyards company, every effort was being made by Tommy Corcoran on behalf of his client to keep this particular case from being exposed at trial.

"On May 13, 1942 Jim Rowe telephoned to me at the Attorney General's instructions, because Dempsey and Koplovitz, composing Tommy Corcoran's 'front' law firm, had taken up with the attorney general the matter of effecting a settlement. When I said that as a matter of principle we should not settle the case unless the defendants were willing to accept the government's estimate of the value of the property (about $985,000) when appraisals were completed, because of the grossly defective construction work, he asked if I would please tell the attorney general that personally.

"The attorney general telephoned to me at 5 p.m., on May 14 to ask about settling this case and I said that it was unusual to have settlement negotiations initiated from the top down — that they usually came from the bottom up in the form of recommendations for settlement from me to the attorney general. (In fact, out of thousands of condemnation cases this was the only settlement about which the attorney general ever called me.) That was fairly straight between the eyes and from the irritated tone of his voice, he did not like it. Our relationship suffered a very sharp deterioration at that point."

Littell Row Data To Senate

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—The Justice Department row over the attempted firing of Assistant Attorney General Norman Littell was carried forward today in a Littell memorandum ascribing to Attorney General Biddle "conduct . . . contrary to basic principles of good government."

This memorandum, sent to the Senate War Investigating Committee, was described as having said among other things that Biddle intervened in a department case in behalf of Thomas G. Corcoran, an early New Deal braintruster, now in private law practice.

Littell's Position

Littell, who refused to quit, took the position, it is understood, that their differences stemmed from "my refusal to co-operate with conduct of the Attorney General which was contrary to basic principles of good government."

Both officials yesterday submitted statements to the committee.

Biddle is reported to have denied his request for the resignation resulted from testimony that Littell gave the committee when it investigated the surplus property and other war questions.

The two men, Biddle said, had long-standing personal differences which prevented harmonious handling of Justice Department affairs.

Shipyard Case

The Littell memorandum injected Corcoran's name in discussing a Justice Department condemnation suit against the Savannah Shipyards Company. Corcoran was interested in the case as an attorney.

It was learned the report stated that both Biddle and his former assistant, James Rowe, repeatedly talked to Littell about reaching a settlement following conferences they had with Corcoran. Littell's position was given as one of refusing to settle on any but the Government's terms.

HOUSE COMMITTEE FOR TAX FREEZE

18 to 8 Vote Expected But Presidential Veto Is Likely.

NOV 30 1944

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29 — (AP) A poll of the House Ways and Means committee indicated tonight it will vote, 15 to 8, tomorrow to "freeze" the Social Security tax, scheduled to double automatically on January 1.

Republican Leader Martin of Massachusetts said that all who expressed themselves at a meeting of the party steering committee late today also were in favor of the freeze, forecasting a heavy G. O. P. vote to that end.

However, some leading proponents of the "freeze" conceded the President will promptly veto the measure if Congress passes it. They added that there are not enough votes to override a veto.

In that event the tax will be boosted a month hence from one to two per cent—meaning that the wage and salary man will pay the Security Fund $2 for each $100 he earns (up to $3,000) and the employer will pay $2 on each $100 of his payroll.

A check of Ways and Means members indicated that six Democrats are inclined to vote with nine Republicans, to brush aside administration recommendations and put through the "freeze" bill. Eight Democrats probably will vote the other way.

There still is a possibility of overnight changes.

BATTERY MAKER ATTACKS SOCIAL SECURITY TAXES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—(AP) First it's the money, then it's the psychology that Fred W. Perkins doesn't like about Social Security taxes.

The York, Pa., battery manufacturer, implacable foe of the taxes, registered his objections before the House Ways and Means committee in a booming voice today, interrupted by frequent brushes with committee members who thought he was beside the point.

The point was, Rep. Cooper (D-Tenn.) said, whether the tax on payrolls should go from one to two per cent.

Perkins, who had been arrested, jailed and "sheriffed" for his principles about this, said first of all he's against the whole idea. Upping the tax will just about ruin small business, he said.

He threw in a blast at graduated income taxes and on this line struck a blow for the rich.

"Let Americans want to get rich again," he shouted. "Let them compete for that honor. It's the rich who will be the saviors of this country."

Perkins got along with Rep. Reed (R-N.Y.) with whom he played on the 1897 Cornell university football team but he didn't click with Chairman Doughton (D-N.C.).

"You're holding that watch on me," he complained after he had spoken 40 minutes. "Other witnesses have had an hour. I can't go on with a man holding a watch on me."

Doughton looked for a minute like there would be a horn on the play but he didn't blow it and Perkins was permitted to proceed.

Rep. Knutson (R-Minn.) congratulated Perkins as "one of the pioneers against socialization of the government," and asked him to explain why he always fought the Security taxes.

Perkins said he "can't afford to pay them. . ."my foreman makes more than I do. . . " and moreover imposition of such taxes is bad psychology and interferes with free enterprise.

Steel Pay Boost Seen Affecting Some Prices

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—Recommended wage boosts for the steel workers may require price increases for some steel products, OPA sources indicated today.

Such a decision by the Office of Price Administration, now analyzing steel industry cost data, would necessitate a ruling by Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson on whether the pay raises can be allowed.

Whether wage revisions approved by the War Labor Board would have to be coupled with price hikes hinges almost entirely, it was said, on the yardstick OPA uses in measuring the industry's costs.

To Confer With Vinson

A study of earnings on a product-by-product basis is virtually sure to disclose that higher prices would be required for some items, it was stated.

On the other hand, a cost study on an industry-wide basis would show, a qualified source said, that the industry's earnings are sufficient to absorb the proposed wage increases.

OPA spokesmen indicated that the survey may be based on earnings for individual products. Officials of the agency expect to meet soon with Vinson to obtain his approval of the index to be used.

Procedure Explained

WLB's wage concessions provide increases to compensate for "inequities," expected to average about 5 cents an hour.

The established procedure is for OPA to determine whether the proposed adjustments entail any price consequences. If it finds price increases are necessary, Vinson must decide whether the wage revisions should be allowed regardless.

"We could certify overnight that no price consequences are involved if the cost study is to be on an industry-wide basis," an OPA spokesman said. "Data on hand shows that the industry's earnings are substantially above those of the base period, 1936-39."

In Red On Some Items

But he added that a survey of product earnings made last November had shown parts of the industry "in the red" on particular items. The steel companies "naturally feel," he said, that the new survey should be on this basis.

Wartime production controls have been responsible for losses on patricular products in some cases, he explained.

Sumner Welles Given Freedom Award

New York, Nov. 29 (AP)—Sumner Welles, former Under Secretary of State, declared last night at the third anniversary dinner of Freedom House, an organization devoted to world freedom, that "the democratic peoples have as yet failed to concentrate their energies" toward establishment of an international world peace organization.

30. 24 — 20799

The Freedom Award was presented to Welles by Archibald MacLeish, librarian of Congress.

Senator Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.) declared that "Government cannot afford, if we really intend to preserve freedom for the individual, to tolerate a monopoly on opportunities by either unions or industry."

In a message President Roosevelt said:

"Such men and women as will come together at your celebration are those upon whom we must most depend in our determination to make the peace which follows this destructive war one of the great creative periods in the history of America and of mankind."

Serious U.S. Sugar Shortage Predicted

New York, Nov. 29 (AP)—The Food Industry War Committee warned today that the United States will face a serious sugar shortage unless Government agencies take "constructive action quickly."

In a report sent to Government officials by the organization's chairman, Clarence Francis, also chairman of General Foods Corporation, the FIWC attributed the scarcity of sugar to two causes:

1. Inadequate assignment of ships to bring in raw sugar which is available in the offshore areas.

2. Insufficient continental production of sugar.

Stimson Called Opposed To Education of Nazis

He Is Said to Feel Prisoners Would Be Suspicious

BOSTON, Nov. 29 (AP).—"The Boston Traveler" today quodted Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson as saying that any attempt to educate German prisoners of war in American democracy would be "met with suspicion, hostility and resistance."

A proposal that the Democratic viewpoint be taught Nazi captives was made by American Defense, a Harvard University group. The organization suggested that books and pamphlets, expounding the benefits of democracy, be placed in prisoner of war camps, and that lectures and discussions of United States ideals be made available for German prisoners who wished to attend.

"The Traveler's" copyrighted article quoted the Secretary of War as saying:

"The War Department believes that any procedure such as you suggest would be met with suspicion, hostility and resistance and instead of being persuaded by the unwelcome teaching, the prisoners would only turn against it."

Mr. Stimson's views were contained in two letters to the Harvard group last spring, but were not approved for publication by the War Department until today, "The Traveler" said.

Soldier Hubby Brings Baby Home, His Wife Is 'Upset'

NOV 30 1944

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29—(AP) Pfc. Arthur F. Whitehouse turned over to his mother today the job of making formula for Geraldine Mary Whitehouse, his 10-month-old daughter, and centered his attention on the baby's future.

The Army gave Whitehouse a 32-day furlough to bring the baby here from Newfoundland where she was born. The trip was delayed for 12 days while Geraldine Mary recovered from pneumonia in an Army hospital in Newfoundland, and again later, while she recovered from an ear infection at Presque Isle, Maine.

The baby's mother was a Newfoundland girl, who is a nurse.

"She didn't want the baby and she didn't want me," the soldier said.

Whitehouse said she signed the necessary papers and the Army gave him the furlough.

The soldier was married nine years ago to a Philadelphia girl, Mrs. Rose Whitehouse, an employe of a five and ten cent store. It was reported from Army quarters that Whitehouse had written his wife, telling her of the baby and expressing hope she would like to have the child, since they were childless.

Whitehouse, a former house decorator and paperhanger who has been stationed in Newfoundland since April, 1942, had nothing to say about this, however

His mother said she is going to give up her war job to devote all of her life to the baby. And Whitehouse said he hopes to be here for her first Christmas.

The soldier's wife was not available for comment, but at her home a man who said he was Mrs. Whitehouse's brother said:

"I don't want to speak out of turn, but I'll admit that my sister is upset about this. I know of no separation between her and her husband, but I can't imagine her wanting to go back to him now."

SAYS NAZIS KILLED 4,000,000 JEWS

Atlantic City, Nov. 29 (A. P.).—Four million of Europe's estimated 9,000,000 Jews have been slain under the Nazis, the War Emergency Conference of the World Jewish Congress heard yesterday.

NOV 30 1944

Jacob Robinson of New York, director of the American Institute of Jewish Affairs, told the delegates from forty countries that only 300,000 Jews remained in Poland of a pre-war Jewish population of 3,300,000 there. About 400,000 had escaped from that country, he said, while 2,600,000 were killed under Nazi occupation.

Isaac Weissman of Lisbon, Portugal, said that 5,000 Jewish orphans were hidden from the Nazis in France by French families until arrangements could be made to smuggle them out of the country.

He said that the French kept the children "in hiding in private houses, farms and cloisters in France, a large number of them under false names and pretending to be Catholics."

U.S.-Vatican Diplomatic Link Is Opposed By Church Group

Pittsburgh, Nov. 29 (AP)—The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America today adopted a statement opposing establishment of diplomatic relations between the United States and the Vatican.

The statement said such action would "confer upon one church a special preferential status in relation to the American Government" and would be "contrary to the spirit of our American tradition."

[At Washington, a State Department spokesman said no diplomatic relations now exist between this country and the Vatican and that none, so far as he knew, was contemplated.

[He said that although Myron C. Taylor at present is stationed at the Vatican as President Roosevelt's special representative, the State Department does not interpret this as establishment of diplomatic relations.]

Seeks Co-operation

The Council disavowed specifically any intention of speaking against Catholicism as a form of Christian faith and worship, and hailed the Catholic Church as "one of the great branches of historic Christianity."

"We earnestly seek every opportunity," the Council said, "to cooperate with Catholics, as Christian brethren, in common efforts for the welfare of mankind."

The Federal Council, which includes 26 of the largest Protestant denominations in the United States, represents about 26,000,000 church members, officials said. About 300 delegates were attending the biennial session and approved the resolution.

Officers Elected

The Council elected Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, of New York, president, succeeding Bishop Henry St. George Tucker, of Richmond, Va., presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Bishop Oxnam has been resident Methodist bishop of the New York area since last June, and previously administered the Boston and Omaha areas.

The Council chose Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, president of Morehouse College, Atlanta, as vice president. This is the highest office a Negro has held in the Council since its organization in 1912.

Other officers chosen were: Dr. W. Glenn Roberts, Society of Friends, Brooklyn, N.Y., recording secretary, and Harper Sibley, Protestant Episcopal Church, Rochester, N.Y., treasurer. They will be inducted tomorrow night.

Russian Church Admitted

The American branch of the Russian Orthodox Church, with 300,000 members, was admitted to membership in the Council. The Universalist Church, with 50,000 members, failed of the required two-thirds vote for membership.

Deferred for two years were membership applications from the Church of the New Jerusalem, 5,000 members, and the Church of the East and Assyria, 2,000 members.

CHURCHMEN BACK DUMBARTON PLAN

Pittsburgh, Nov. 29 (A. P.).—The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America late yesterday approved in principle the Dumbarton Oaks proposals for lasting peace but asserted there were some defects in the proposed organization which may necessitate modification.

The council adopted a resolution at its biennial meeting in which it commended the Dumbarton Oaks plan to its communicants "with full recognition of its present limitations and with determination to overcome them."

"We recognize," the council's commission on a just and durable peace said in a statement, "that transition from international anarchy to a complete, constitutional world order cannot occur at a single step. It was thus to be expected that any presently practicable plan should fall short of what will be required to assure lasting peace."

The proposed organization, the statement continued, "should be adequately endowed with curative functions needed to deal with the causes of war and with creative functions needed to draw the nations together in fellowship."

American System Best, Says President Lewis

Youngstown, Ohio, Nov. 29 (AP)—President William Mather Lewis of Lafayette College said today that the American system has never failed and it is to Americans to see that it doesn't bog down after this war, when the world will turn to us for physical rehabilitation.

Lewis spoke before a group of Eastern Ohio and Western Pennsylvania business men at a luncheon opening the two-day Economic and Business Foundation conference.

"Although the American system has never failed," the college executive said, "the administration has been faulty.

"Management, when it had the whip hand, took advantage of labor; and in its turn labor is often unfair and vindictive in its demands.

"Despite all this, the system of free enterprise works better than any other."

Jap Stock Speculators Depend On U. S. News

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 29 (AP)—Sharp Jap stock speculators playing the stock market in Shanghai keep tuned to American short wave broadcasts for war news and play the markets accordingly, Elmer Davis, Director of the Office of War Information, said.

Davis said the speculators "refuse to buy or sell on the basis of Japanese broadcasts of victories but play the market according to news received from American sources by way of short wave."

Davis was here to inspect three powerful shortwave transmitters recently built for the OWI by the Crosley Corporation.

REVERSIBLE 'PROPS' CUT LANDING SPEED

Dayton, Ohio, Nov. 29 (A. P.).—Airplane propellers capable of reversing their thrust for use as brakes were disclosed today as an actuality by the A. A. F. Air Technical Service Command at Wright Field, the A. A. F.'s gigantic aviation testing laboratory here.

A formal announcement said that such propellers had cut landing runs several hundred feet in experiments at the field, and speculated that they may be used in conjunction with takeoff rockets, enabling giant airliners of the future to operate on regular schedule at airports which now hardly are of adequate size for emergencies.

As an example of the advantages of reversible pitch propellers in landings, officials said that a heavy ship using the new "prop" in conjunction with brakes halted in 900 feet, whereas 1,500 feet were required with only brakes and flaps.

B-17 on Tracks, Train Is Halted By Girl's Torch

She Sets Fire to a Broom to Warn Engineer When Bomber Crash-Lands

NOV 30 1944

By The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Nov. 29.—A dramatic escape from death occurred here today when an Army Flying Fortress crash-landed on the Southern Railway tracks as a speeding passenger train rounded the bend.

Fast thinking by Peggy Parsley, an air-line employee, averted a collision. No one on the train or plane was hurt or injured.

Five members of the Fortress crew were trapped in the plane when Miss Parsley heard the whistle of the approaching train. She dashed into a guardhouse at Douglas Airport, grabbed a house broom, lighted it at a stove and ran with the blazing torch through rain and fog. At the tracks a section hand used the broom to signal the train to a halt.

J. C. Milton, engineer on No. 39, said: "When the train stopped there wasn't room for the thickness of my finger between my train and that plane."

The names of the plane's crew members were not immediately available at near-by Morris Field. The aircraft was based at McDill Field, Fla.

Strikes Close Two More Detroit Plants

Detroit, Nov. 29 (AP)—Two new strikes today closed the plant of the Graham-Paige Motors Corporation and the aircraft division of the Dodge main plant of Chrysler Corporation.

At the Graham-Paige plant a spokesman said 2,000 employes left their jobs following suspension of 23 welders whom the company accused of participating in a strike yesterday in a dispute over seniority. The workers are members of Local 142, United Automobile Workers (CIO).

Man Transferred, 700 Strike

A representative of Chrysler Corporation said approximately 700 employes of the aircraft division employes of the aircraft division of the Dodge plant left their jobs today in protest against the transfer of an employe to another job. An official of Local 3, United Automobile Workers (CIO) said the transfer was made without regard to seniority.

Meanwhile, two other strikes in the Detroit area were virtually ended. Employes of the Cross Company, manufacturers of precision lathes used in heavy artillery ammunition production, voted to return to their jobs after a War Labor Board return-to-work order.

Work At Ford Plant Resumed

At the Ford Motor Company's River Rouge plant production was resumed today in the production, magnesium and new steel foundries after strikes by 50 millwrights and a shift of 1,700 men in one of the foundries had affected approximate 11,000 other workers.

A company spokesman said the men began returning to their jobs today. The strike began Monday in a dispute involving working schedules for the millwrights. The workers are members of Local 600, UAW-CIO.

U.S. OFFERS NEW AIR PLAN

Proposal Challenges Britain On Aviation Agreement

Chicago, Nov. 29 (AP)—The United States challenged Great Britain today to join in an open agreement on postwar aviation or be left to deal bilaterally in a world largely united on common freedoms for airborne commerce.

All but setting aside sixteen days of consultation and debate on an air transport organization plan, the American delegation laid before the International Civil Aviation Conference a proposal to pass over questions relating to a "fifth freedom" to escalation (adjustment of airline services to traffic volume) and tariff controls.

Simple Substitute

Its simple substitute for those complex problems was designed to put all nations who want it into the air quickly under rules which do little more than protect sovereign rights.

Nonetheless, the door was left open to a compromise proposal offered previously by Canada, with some possibility that the British and Americans might yet make that a common meeting ground.

The British delegation followed up the United States action with a second proposal on the disputed points, this time making its first open overtures to the Canadian offer. The delegates said they had found in the document practical suggestions which they could accept and in the document as a whole, they hoped, "the basis of a complete system."

British Reply

After that, however, the British said they had been "driven to the conclusion that no precise formulas would meet all cases," and that it was "abundantly clear that what might be suitable in Europe would be wholly unsuitable in Latin America."

For that reason they proposed that the inner council of the world organization be empowered to fix formulae for anything (including "fifth freedom" escalation) in line with the agreed principles. A spokesman explained that the British would be willing to abide by whatever the international council decides on any route.

The United States proposal appeared to be put forth in a spirit of "take or leave it," but the acknowledgment that the door to the Canadian plan remained open cast some doubt upon the firmness of that attitude. The proposal would lay the ground for a great division of nations on air transport competitive practice.

Groups Defined

One group would comprise those signing the agreement granting a mutual exchange of the right to fly, to land, to carry homeland traffic inbound or outbound, and to carry the traffic of other nations unless they specifically reserved it to themselves.

Outside of that group would be nations unwilling to exchange such rights mutually and preferring to deal directly with the countries into, through or over which their proposed routes would pass. Informed persons took the attitude that Great Britain—but apparently not the British Empire—would be at the head of that system.

Both plans will be on the table for delegates to debate when they convene tomorrow. The prospect was for a quick decision. The conference has grown weary after four weeks of wrestling with the complexities of international airline economics, navigation rules and technical standards. It appeared to be determined to get aboard eastbound special trains Sunday night.

U. S. Air Freedom Proposal

CHICAGO, Nov. 29 (AP).—The complete text of the United States proposal today on a freedom-of-the-air article in the proposed world aviation agreement, as issued at the International Civil Aviation Conference, follows:

Should such consultation fail to resolve the difficulty, the council may make appropriate findings and recommendations to the member states concerned. If thereafter a member state concerned shall, in the opinion of the council, unreasonably fail to take suitable corrective action, the council may recommend to the assembly that such member state be suspended from its rights and privileges under this convention until such action has been taken. The assembly, by a two-thirds vote, may suspend such member state for such period of time as it may deem proper or until the council shall find that corrective action has been taken by such state.

Memphis Phone Strike Threat

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 29 (AP)—The $2 weekly wage increase for 430 American Telephone and Telegraph Company long-distance operators in Memphis, approved yesterday by the War Labor Board in Washington, is not adequate and a strike vote will be taken Saturday, a union official says.

"The majority of the membership is in favor of strike action," said Miss Ora Lee Taylor, chairman of Branch 305, Federation of Long Line Telephone Workers. "We are sticking to our original request for a $5 raise."

The increase boosted minimum and maxium rates from $15 and $25 per week to $17 and $27.

Louisville Vote Slated

Louisville, Nov. 29 (AP)—Louisville telephone operators will take a strike vote "within the next ten days," Miss Edgar Bean, chairman of the Louisville local of the Federation of Long Line Telephone Workers, said here today.

She said the union had asked the War Labor Board for a $5 weekly increase in pay but the WLB had approved a raise of $2.

On November 9 the union field a petition to the Federal Government to hold a strike vote within 30 days, Miss Bean said, as required by the Connally anti-strike act.

Meeting Arranged

She said also that the union, which represents more than 400 long-distance operators here, will hold an all-day meeting Tuesday.

The $2 increase approved by the War Labor Board raised minimum and maximum salaries here from $15 and $25 weekly to $17 and $27. Present New York wages stand at $20 and $34.

Canada Draws Revised Postwar Air Proposal

Chicago, Nov. 29 (AP)—Canada held the center of interest again today in the long struggle between the United States and Great Britain over a formula for governing postwar competition in the air.

The British were reported to be awaiting a reply to a request for new instructions from London. There was hope that some way could be found for them to accept a revised proposal drafted during the night by the Canadian delegation.

Restlessness Apparent

Increased restlessness was apparent among some delegations to the International Civil Aviation Conference now in its fifth week, after the major controversy was taken out of open debate and restored to the status of a private argument.

This time, however, unlike the ten-day consultations of the "ABC" powers during the first big attempt to solve the problem, there was rather general optimism that a way out would be found.

The problem involves the so-called "fifth freedom"—the privilege of picking up airline business in another country and carrying it to a third—in its relation to "ascalation," which is a Canadian idea for adjusting carrying capacity (the number of seats or pay load) to the volume of traffic on a route.

Sticking To Demands

The United States is demanding a liberal application of the privilege as a means of encouraging long-line air operations. The British want it sharply restricted on the ground that it might cut into the regional business of intermediate countries.

Canada and the United States are in general agreement on use of the "fifth freedom." Canada submitted its proposal after the British and Americans gave no indication either would budge from its own plan.

When the Canadian draft failed to attract the British, the issue as a whole was debated by the conference in closed session. Then a new Canadian draft was ordered. If this emerges today, it cannot be debated in the conference until tomorrow.

AFL CONVENTION BACKS POST WAR PROGRAM ON JOBS

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 29.—(AP) The American Federation of Labor lined up today behind the President's goal of 60,000,000 post war jobs, with the added objective of creating an annual income of 173-billions.

The AFL convention approved its post war planning committees' detailed plan for participating in reconversion and reemployment programs in this country and in labor cooperation throughout the world to bolster peace and unity.

Going a step further, the convention okayed a campaign for a million dollars, beginning in January, to aid workers in liberated countries of Europe and Asia, and similarly distressed peoples of Central and South America.

This drive will be in the hands of a committee of the Labor League of Human Rights, official relief arm of the AFL.

The postwar proposals were placed before the convention after it had renewed the no-strike pledge for the war's duration, an act which was immediately reported by cable to Generals Eisenhower and

30. 24— 20801

MacArthur, to assure them that the AFL intended to keep the materials of war coming.

Message from Eisenhower

A message from General Eisenhower, thanking the AFL for pledging its assistance in providing the workers necessary to fill the gaps on the production line, was cheered by the 600 delegates.

W. I. Allen, president of the Commercial Telegraphers Union, which is fighting for designation as the collective bargaining agent for the 55,000 Western Union workers across the nation, urged the delegates to get behind his union's show-down fight with the CIO-American Communications association.

NOV 30 1944

Allen accused the National Labor Relations Board, which declined to grant the AFL union's petition for a nation-wide election but instead split the country into seven regions for the bargaining vote, of attempting "to hamstring" the telegraphers group in favor of what he called "the Communist-controlled" CIO union.

President William Green backed up Allen in urging support for the Western Union representation, which CIO President Philip Murray has designated as the CIO's No. 1 organization job for the coming year.

Green bitterly denounced the NLRB for its decision, and the agency was the subject of another resolution which described it as having made "vicious and unjust" decisions.

Harvey W. Brown, Machinists president, immediately announced his group, biggest in the AFL, had pledged $1,000 to the telegraphers' fight.

force postponement of the meeting Dec. 18 of Missouri's Democratic electors to certify the state's vote to the Electoral College in Washington.

Today Floyd Gleeton, apparently successful Democratic candidate for a county judgeship, filed a writ of mandamus in Circut court asking certification of the vote to pave the way for obtaining his election certificate. Judge G. Berk Green then issued an alternative writ directing the canvassers to "proceed with their duties" or show cause at a Dec. 8 hearing why they should not do so.

Whatever ruling may be issued then is subject to review by the Missouri Supreme court, and it is possible the legalities might tie up the county's official vote report for weeks.

Every other Missouri county has reported its vote to the Secretary of State at Jefferson City, but Missouri law prescribes that the official canvass cannot be started until all votes are reported. The canvass must be completed before election certificates can be issued to the Democratic electors or to Senator-elect Forrest Donnell, Republican: Governor-elect Phil M. Donnelly, Democrat, or any other state officer named three weeks ago.

Sullivan county's canvassers consist of two Republicans and two Democrats. The Republicans challenge validity of some of the uncounted votes on the grounds that the civilian voters were outside the state on Election day. Missouri law permits civilians absent from their precinct to vote by absentee ballot, but they must be in the state on Election day.

Three times the canvassers have had the envelopes brought out of the vault for counting, but each time the quarrel flared anew, and County Clerk Harry Rhodes sent the votes back for safekeeping. He still has them in custody.

Court Action Started to Compel Full Count of Missouri Votes

MILAN, Mo., Nov. 29—(AP) Sullivan county's bitter three weeks old dispute over 84 uncounted absentee ballots in the Nov. 7 election—which holds a threat of Electoral College complications unless settled—today reached the courts with filing of a mandamus suit seeking to command the canvassers to quit arguing and count the vote.

The red hot argument, which hinges around a local sheriff's race in which Martin Franklin, Democrat, leads L. D. Green, Republican, by eight votes, is holding up the official canvass of Missouri's 1,500,000 votes and may

Pyle Is Going To Pacific

Albuquerque, N. M., Nov. 29 (AP). War Correspondent Ernie Pyle, who returned from the European front several weeks ago for a rest at his home here, is getting ready to go back to work.

This time he will report from the Pacific Theater, accredited to the navy. "I won't leave for about a month yet," he said.

Pyle said "public pressure" has interfered with his rest, "but I feel good."

ALL THESE AND OTHER ALLIED SUCCESSES BROUGHT A SERIES OF PLAINTIVE BROADCASTS FROM THE GERMAN RADIO.

(N, NOV. 2-(AP)-THE TEXT OF THE FIRST HALF OF PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL'S SPEECH TODAY IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS-THE PORTION IN WHICH HE DEALT PRIMARILY WITH THE WAR: (ABOUT 2,000)

I AM GLAD THAT THE CLOSING SESSION OF THIS LONG TENURE OF PARLIAMENT SHOULD SHOW ALL THE RESPECT FOR THE TRADITIONAL AND CEREMONIAL OCCASION WHICH IGNORANT, UNTHINKING PEOPLE WHO HAD NOT MEDIATED UPON THE MATTER OR STUDIED THE TRUE MOVEMENTS OF EVENTS AND OF FORCES IN THE HUMAN BREAST MIGHT EASILY REGARD AS A MEANINGLESS PERFORMANCE.

NOV 301944

I HAVE ON ANOTHER OCCASION REMINDED THE HOUSE THAT THIS DEBATE ON THE KING'S ADDRESS IS THE BEGINNING OF WHAT IS CALLED THE GRAND INQUEST OF THE NATION. A NEW SESSION BEGINS AND AT THIS MOMENT AND IN THE PROGRESS OF THE ADDRESS THERE IS NOTHING THAT CAN BE HELD BACK FROM DISCUSSION.

I HAVE ALWAYS BEEN OF THE OPINION THAT THE WISHES OF THE HOUSE IN RESPECT OF THE DEBATE ON THE ADDRESS SHOULD BE MET BY THE ADMINISTRATION. IF THE HOUSES WISHES FOR MORE DAYS FOR THE DISCUSSION OF SPECIAL AMENDMENTS AND SO ON THE GOVERNMENT SHOULD PUT NO OBSTACLE IN THE WAY WITHIN REASON.

I HAVE ALWAYS FELT THAT THE DEBATE ON THE GENERAL ASPECTS OF THE ADDRESS SHOULD BE A CONSIDERABLE FEATURE, FOR IT IS A TIME WHEN A MEMBER WITHOUT INFLUENCE OR A GROUP BEHIND HIM CAN SPEAK ABOUT ANYTHING HE THINKS IT WOULD BE TO THE ADVANTAGE OF HIS FELLOW CREATURES--PROVIDED HE CAN CATCH THE SPEAKER'S EYE.

IT IS A DEMOCRATIC FEATURE IN OUR ANNUAL PROCEDURE. OF COURSE I MUST ADMIT, AS AN AGED MEMBER OF THE HOUSE WITH SOME 42 YEARS OF SERVICE HERE, I FIND IT VERY UNPLEASANT TO HAVE THE DEBATE ON THE ADJOURNMENT ONE BAG AND A DEBATE ON THE NEW SESSION THE NEXT. IN THE FAR OFF TIMES WHEN I ENTERED THIS BUILDING THERE WAS USUALLY FIVE OR SIX MONTHS RECESS FROM THE 12TH OF AUGUST TO THE LATTER PART OF JANUARY OR THE BEGINNING OF FEBRUARY WHEN THE HOUSE REASSEMBLED.

NOV 301944

BUT DO NOT CONSIDER THOSE DAYS WERE WITHOUT WISDOM. NEVER SUPPOSE THAT YOU CAN STRENGTHEN PARLIAMENT BY WEARYING IT, BY OCCUPYING IT IN ALMOST CONTINUOUS SESSION. IF YOU WANT TO REDUCE THE POWER OF PARLIAMENT LET IT SIT EVERY DAY OF THE YEAR A FIFTH OR FOURTH PART FILLED AND THEN IT WILL BECOME THE LAUGHING STOCK OF THE NATION INSTEAD OF THE CITADEL AS WELL AS THE CRADLE OF PARLIAMENTARY INSTITUTIONS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD AND ALMOST THE ONLY SUCCESSFUL INSTANCE OF A LEGISLATIVE BODY WITH PLENARY POWERS ELECTED ON UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE WHICH IS CAPABLE OF DISCHARGING WITH RESTRAINT AND RESOLUTION ALL FUNCTIONS OF PEACE AND OF WAR.

THIS IS A MORE SOMBER DIGRESSION. ALL OUR AFFAIRS DOWN THE SMALLEST DETAIL CONTINUE TO BE DOMINATED BY THE WAR. PARLIAMENTARY BUSINESS IS NO EXCEPTION. I MUST WARN THE HOUSE AND THE COUNTRY AGAINST ANY INDULGENCE IN THE FEELING THAT THE WAR WILL SOON BE OVER. IT MAY BE, BUT DO NOT INDULGE THAT FEELING THAT WE SHOULD

NOW BE ABLE TO TURN OUR THOUGHTS TO THE NEW PHASE IN WORLD HISTORY WHICH WILL OPEN WITH THE CLOSE OF THIS WAR. THE TRUTH IS THAT NO ONE KNOWS WHEN THE GERMAN WAR WILL BE FINISHED AND STILL LESS HOW LONG THE INTERVAL WILL BE BETWEEN THE DEFEAT OF THE GERMANS AND THE DEFEAT OF THE JAPANESE.

NOV 30 1944

I TOOK OCCASION SOME MONTHS AGO TO DAMP DOWN PREMATURE HOPES BY SPEAKING OF THE GERMAN WAR AS RUNNING INTO JANUARY AND FEBRUARY. I COULD SEE DISAPPOINTMENT IN SEVERAL QUARTERS AS I LOOKED AROUND THE HOUSE AND I FOLLOWED THIS UP QUICKLY BY INDICATING THE LATE SPRING OR THE EARLY SUMMER AS PERIODS WHICH WE MUST TAKE INTO ACCOUNT AS POSSIBILITIES. MY PRESENT INCLINATION IS NOT AT ALL TO MITIGATE THOSE FORECASTS OR GUESSES, FOR THEY CAN BE LITTLE MORE THAN GUESSES. INDEED IF I WERE TO MAKE ANY CHANGE IN THE DURATIO OF THE UNFOLDING OF EVENTS IT WOULD BE TO LEAVE OUT THE WORD "EARLY" BEFORE THE WORD "SUMMER."

THE VAST BATTLE THAT IS IN PROGRESS IN THE WEST HAS YIELDED TO US IMPORTANT GAINS. THE ENEMY HAS EVERYWHERE BEEN THRUST BACK. THE CAPTURE OF METZ AND STRASBOURG ARE GLORIOUS AND MASSIVE ACHIEVEMENTS. THE BRILLIANT FIGHTING AND MANEUVERING OF THE FRENCH ARMY NEAR THE SWISS FRONTIER AND THEIR FORCING OF THE BELFORT GAP AND ADVANCE ON A BROAD FRONT TO THE RHINE IS NOT ONLY A MILITARY EPISODE OF HIGH IMPORTANCE BUT IT SHOWS WHAT MANY OF US HAVE NEVER DOUBTED, THAT THE FRENCH ARMY WILL RISE AGAIN AND BE A GREAT FACTOR IN THE LIFE OF FRANCE AND EUROPE, AND THAT THE FRENCH SOLDIER, PROPERLY EQUIPPED AND WELL LED, IS UNSURPASSED AMONG THE NATIONS.

I HAD THE OPPORTUNITY OF VISITING THIS ARMY AND ONCE HAD HOPED TO BE THERE AT THE MOMENT WHEN ITS ATTACK WAS DELIVERED UPON THE BELFORT GAP, BUT IN THE NIGHT 12 INCHES OF SNOW FELL AND EVERYTHING HAD TO BE PUT OFF FOR THREE DAYS. NEVERTHELESS I HAD THE OPPORTUNITY OF SEEING A VERY LARGE NUMBER OF THE TROOPS WHO WERE GOING TO BE ENGAGED--IF NOT IN THE FIRST STAGE, IN THE SECOND STAGE OF THIU BATTLE--AND FOR AN HOUR OR MORE THEY MARCHED PAST IN A SWIRLING SNOWSTORM. I HAD A GOOD LOOK AT THEM, THOUGH THE LIGHT FADED, AT VERY CLOSE QUARTERS. THEY WERE ALL YOUNG MEN OF 18 TO 22. THE AVERAGE AGE WAS 20--AND WHAT A THING TO BE A FRENCHMAN 20 YEARS OF AGE--WELL ARMED, WELL EQUIPPED, AND WITH YOUR NATIVE LAND TO AVENGE AND SAVE.

NOV 30 1944

THE LIGHT IN THESE MEN'S EYES AND THEIR ALERT BEARING GIVES ONE THE GREATEST CONFIDENCE THAT OUR NEAREST NEIGHBOR AND LONG FRIEND IN WAR AND IN THESE GREAT STRUGGLES OF OUR LIFETIME WILL RISE IN CLARITY AND FORCE FROM THE RUINS AND THE MISERIES AND DISGRACES OF THE PAST AND WILL PRESENT US ONCE MORE WITH A FRANCE TO BE NUMBERED AMONGST THE GREATEST POWERS OF THE WORLD.

I HAVE SPOKEN OF THE FIGHTING IN THE BELFORT GAP AND STRASBOURG AND FURTHER TO THE NORTH OF THE GREAT BATTLE WHICH THE AMERICANS HAVE GAINED OPPOSITE METZ. OPPOSITE COLOGNE AND NORTHWARDS THE FIGHTING HAS BEEN SEVERE AND IT IS HERE THAT THE GAINS IN GROUND WILL BE MOST IMPORTANT AND CONSEQUENTLY ARE MOST DISPUTED.

THE WEATHER, WHICH IT IS ALWAYS CUSTOMARY AND EXCUSABLE AND EVEN LEGITIMATE TO ABUSE AT THIS SEASON OF THE YEAR, IN THOSE REGIONS HAS MADE THE TASK OF THE AMERICAN TROOPS AND THAT OF THE BRITISH ON THEIR LEFT FLANK EXTREMELY DIFFICULT. WHAT IS CALLED THE FOURTH

ELEMENT IN WAR, MUD HAS PLAYED A FORMIDABLE PART. WE HAVE NOT YET SUCCEEDED IN DRIVING THE ENEMY BACK TO THE RHINE, LET ALONE HAVE WE ESTABLISHED A STRONG BRIDGEHEAD ON IT. THE BATTLE IS CONTINUING WITH THE GREATEST VIGOR. IMMENSE LOSSES HAVE BEEN INFLICTED ON THE ENEMY. THE WEARING DOWN PROCESS HERE, AT A COST TO THE UNITED STATES FORCES, HAS BEEN FAR GREATER IN ITS EFFECT UPON THE ENEMY.

NOV 30 1944

OF COURSE ANY LARGE AND EFFECTIVE BREAK ON THE GERMAN FRONTS IN THESE REGIONS OF COLOGNE AND NORTHWARDS WOULD HAVE THE HIGHEST STRATEGIC CONSEQUENCES.

I MAY MENTION THT IN THE INTERVAL BETWEEN THE LIBERATION OF FRANCE AND THE GREATER PART OF BELGIUM FIELD MARSHAL MONTGOMERY'S GROUP OF ARMIES, WITH SUBSTANTIAL UNITED STATES ASSISTANCE, DROVE THE ENEMY BACK TO THE LINE OF THE MAAS OR THE MEUSE AND ESTABLISHED A SECURE FLANK BARRIER IN HOLLAND PROTECTING THE WHOLE LINE OF THE MAIN ARMIES OPERATING EAUTWARDS.

NOV 30 1944

IT ALSO OPENED THE GREAT PORT OF ANTWERP, WHICH WE CAPTURED INTACT AND IS NOW RECEIVING LARGE CONVOYS OF OCEANGOING SHIPS, THUS MAKING AN INCOMPARABLE SEA BASE AVAILABLE FOR THE NOURISHMENT OF THE NORTHERN GROUP OF BRITISH ARMIES AND THE VARIOUS GROUPS OF AMERICAN ARMIES ALSO DEPLOYED IN THOSE OPERATIONS, INCLUDING THE STORMING OF THE ISLANDS WHICH CONTAINS EPISODES OF MARVELOUS GALLANTRY--GRAND FEATS OF ARMS.

IN THOSE OPERATIONS THE BRITISH AND CANADIAN FORCES SUFFERED ABOUT 40,000 CASUALTIES. THAT IS IN THE INTERVAL BETWEEN THE TWO GREAT BATTLES. IN THE NEW BATTLE, WHICH RUNS FROM FIELD MARSHAL MONTGOMERY'S ARMY BROADLY SPEAKING OPPOSITE VENLO DOWN TO THE VOSGES MOUNTAINS WHERE THE FRENCH TAKE UP THE LONG LINE, THE WHOLE FRONT IS HELD BY THE AMERICANS WHO ARE BEARING THE BRUNT WITH CUSTOMARY DISTINCTION AND COURAGE.

I AM NOT GIVING A REVIEW OF THE WAR SITUATION TODAY. I HAVE NO INTENTION OF DOING IT. LATER ON PERHAPS WHEN WE MEET AFTER CHRISTMAS IT MAY BE RIGHT TO DO THAT AND IT MAY BE MUCH EASIER TO PUT HARD FACTS AND CHEERING FACTS BEFORE THE HOUSE--AND THE HOUSE KNOWS I HAVE NEVER HESITATED TO PUT HARD FACTS BEFORE THEM.

I KNOW THE BRITISH PEOPLE AND I KNOW THIS HOUSE AND THERE IS ONE THING THEY WILL NOT STAND AND THAT IS NOT BEING TOLD HOW BAD THINGS ARE. IF IT IS HUMANLY POSSIBLE TO DO IT WITHOUT ENDANGERING AFFAIRS, ONE IS ALWAYS WELL ADVISED TO TELL THE PEOPLE HOW BAD THINGS ARE. ON A NUMBER OF OCCASIONS I HAVE GREATLY REVIVED THE ENERGY AND ARDOR OF THIS HOUSE BY GIVING THEM AN ACCOUNT OF THE SHOCKING POSITION WE OCCUPIED IN VARIOUS QUARTERS AND HOW VERY LIKELY THINGS WERE TO GET WORSE BEFORE THEY GOT BETTER.

NOV 30 1944

(CAPTAIN FREDERICK J.BELLENGER, LABORITE: SO DID SOME OF US, TOO.)

WE SHARE THE GLORY. BUT MY MOTIVE IN DOING SO WAS TO STRENGTHEN THE POSITION OF THE GOVERNMENT.

I AM NOT GIVING A REVIEW OF THE WAR SITUATION TODAY, BUT I MENTION THESE COMMANDING FACTS IN ORDER TO BISSIPATE LIGHTLY FOUNDED SENSATIONS THAT WE CAN DIVERT OUR EYES FROM THE WAR AND TURN TO THE TASKS OF TRANSITION AND RECONSTRUCTION OR POLITICAL CONTROVERSIES AND OTHER DIVERSIONS OF PEACE WHICH ARE DEAR TO OUR HEARTS, AND RIGHTLY DEAR TO DEMOCRACIES IN ACTION, BECAUSE WITHOUT CONTROVERSY DEMOCRACIES CANNOT ACHIEVE THEIR HEALTHENING PROCESSES. I DO NOT THINK WE CAN LOOK ON IN ALL THESE MATTERS WITH A SENSE OF DETACHMENT FROM THE WAR ISSUE, WHICH IS RIGHT OVER US.

NOV 30 1944

IT WEIGHS INTENSELY AND PREPONDERANTLY UPON US AND UPON EVERY FORM OF OUR NATIONAL LIFE. ALL ELSE MUST STILL BE SUBORDINATED TO THIS SUPREME TASK. IT IS ON THE FOE THAT OUR EYES MUST BE FIXED AND TO BREAK HIS GEYIQTJMCE DOWN DEMANDS AND WILL RECEIVE THE MOST INTENSE EXERTIONS OF GREAT BRITAIN, THE U.S.A. AND OF ALL THE UNITED NATIONS AND THE CONVERTED SATELLITES, ALL FORCES THAT CAN BE BROUGHT TO BEAR. THIS IS JUST THE MOMENT NOT TO SLACKEN.

OF THE RACES WHICH THE CALENDAR HOLDS, NEARLY ALL OF THEM ARE WON IN THE LAST LAP, AND IT IS THEN WHEN ONE IS MOST TIRED; WHEN THE SENSE OF BOREDOM SEEMS TO WEIGH UPON ONE; WHEN EVEN THE MOST GLITTERING, EXCITING, BRILLIANT EVENTS, ARE AS IT WERE, COVERED BY SATIATION; WHEN HEADLINES IN THE NEWSPAPERS, THOUGH PERFECTLY TRUE, SUCCEED ONE ANOTHER IN THEIR GLOWING EMPHASIS AND YET THE END SEEMS TO RECEDE BEFORE US.

AS WHEN CLIMBING A HILL--WHEN THERE IS ALWAYS ANOTHER PEAK BEYOND --IT IS AT THAT VERY MOMENT THAT WE IN THIS ISLAND HAVE TO GIVE THAT EXTRA SENSE OF EXERTION AND EFFORT, THAT BOUNDLESS AND INEXHAUSTIBLE, DYNAMIC ENERGY THAT WE HAVE SHOWN--AND WHICH RECORDS MADE PUBLIC EMPHASIZE IN DETAIL THAT WE HAVE SHOWN DURING THIS STRUGGLE.

TIRELESSNESS IS WHAT WE HAVE TO SHOW NOW AND HERE I MUST OBSERVE THAT IT IS ONE THING TO FEEL THIS TREMENDOUS DRIVE OF ENERGY AT THE BEGINNING OF A WAR WHEN YOUR COUNTRY IS LIKELY TO BE INVADED AND YOU DON'T KNOW THAT YOU WILL NOT HAVE TO DIE HONORABLY--BUT SOON--IT IS ONE THING TO EXHIBIT THOSE QUALITIES WHICH CERTAINLY THE HOUSE HAS NEVER BEEN RESTRAINED FROM AT SUCH MOMENT AND QUITE ANOTHER TO DO THEM IN THE SIXTH YEAR OF THE WAR.

ON THE OTHER HAND WE MUST REMEMBER THAT THE ENEMY WHOSE COUNTRY IS INVADED HAS ALSO THE SUPREME STIMULI WHICH WE OURSELVES RESPONDED TO IN THE VERY DARK DAYS OF 1940 AND 1941. THE PREPONDERANCE OF THE WAR WEIGHS DOWN UPON US ALL. AND AFTER THE GERMAN WAR WE MUST NOT FORGET THERE IS THE WAR WITH JAPAN.

IN ADDITION, THEY HELD PERHAPS 1,000 SQUARE MILES AROUND THE LONG BY-PASSED AND BELEAGUERED PORTS OF DUNKERQUE, LORIENT AND ST.NAZAIRE AS WELL AS LAND AT THE MOUTH OF THE GARONNE ESTUARY LEADING TO BORDEAUX.

BY WES GALLAGHER

IMMENDORF, GERMANY, NOV. 29-(AP)-THE GERMANS OPENED FLOODGATES ON DAMS OF THE ROER RIVER TODAY, FLOODING THE VALLEY AT SOME POINTS TO A WIDTH OF NEARLY A MILE, IN AN EFFORT TO COMBAT THE PRE-DAWN INFANTRY ASSAULT OF THE U.S.NINTH ARMY, WHICH MADE EXTENSIVE USE OF FLAME-THROWERS AND A PHOSPHOROUS ARTILLERY BARRAGE.

HOPING TO SURPRISE THE GERMANS, THE INFANTRY ATTACKED BEFORE SUN-UP IN A DENSE FOG, BUT THE NAZI DEFENSES IN THE WURM-LINDERN AREA, STRONGEST GERMAN POSITION WEST OF THE ROER, WERE ALERT AND A HEAVY ENGAGEMENT OF SMALL ARMS AND ARTILLERY DEVELOPED.

THE SWOLLEN ROER STAYED FAIRLY WELL WITHIN ITS CHANNEL UNTIL IT REACHED LINNICH, FROM WHERE IT FANNED OUT FOR HUNDREDS OF YARDS OVER THE LOWLANDS.

IN ADDITION TO FLOODING THE LOWER REACHES OF THE RIVER, THE GERMAN BLEW UP THE BRIDGE AT JULICH AS AMERICAN INFANTRY TOOK COMMANDING POSITIONS ON THE WEST BANK OF THE RIVER FOR SEVERAL MILES NORTH AND SOUTH.

TODAY'S ATTACK, WHICH CUT THE ROAD BETWEEN LINDERN AND LINNICH AND TOOK HIGH GROUND DOMINATING THE LATTER TOWN, THREATENED THE [illegible] AND DUG DEEPLY INTO THE ONLY REMAINING STRONGHOLD IN THE NINTH ARMY SECTOR WEST OF THE RIVER.

DESTRUCTION OF SEVEN GERMAN TANKS SOUTH OF JULICH WAS REPORTED BY FIGHTERBOMBERS OF THE 29TH TACTICAL AIRFORCE AND ANOTHER EIGHT ALSO WERE RECORDED AS DESTROYED BY AMERICAN ARTILLERY NEAR KIRCHBERG.

DURING THE EARLY STAGES OF THE INFANTRY'S DRIVE, CLOUDS CLUNG SO CLOSE TO THE GROUND THAT VISIBILITY WAS LESS THAN TEN YARDS.

MOST OF THE ATTACK WAS DIRECTED NORTH THROUGH THE OLD SIEGFRIED DEFENSES WITH MANY CONCRETE PILLBOXES. THE GROUND WAS TOO SOGGY FOR TANKS. THE INFANTRY, EQUIPPED WITH FLAMETHROWERS, BORE THE BRUNT OF THE THRUST, TAKING FOUR OF NINE MAIN DEFENSES IN THE FIRST COUPLE OF HOURS.

ADVANCES WERE MADE ON SCHEDULE DURING THE EARLY HOURS, BUT BY NOON THE ENEMY THREW IN COUNTERATTACKS FROM LINDERN AND PROGRESS BECAME SLOWER.

THE BATTLE AREA WAS POCKMARKED BY SHELL HOLES AND DOTTED WITH DEAD MEN, CATTLE, HORSES AND BURNED OUT TANKS. THE ARTILLERY EXCHANGE BY BOTH SIDES WAS THUNDEROUS.

IT WAS A DISMAL SCENE IN THE MURKY, DANK FOG AND GREATLY RESEMBLED A HOLLYWOOD SET DEPICTING THE DEVASTATION IN WORLD WAR I. TWO OF THE COMMANDING AMERICAN GENERALS PARTICIPATING IN THE ASSAULT DIRECTED THE FIGHTING FROM CELLAR COMMAND POSTS UNDER THE RUBBLE OF HOUSES WITHIN RANGE OF THE SHELLING.

"WE HOPED TO CATCH THEM COMPLETELY BY SURPRISE, BUT THEY WERE ALERT," COMMENTED LT.COL.CHARLES PARSON OF BRACKETVILLE, TEX.

"THERE HAVE BEEN NO DEFINITE REPORTS OF HOW THE PHOSPHOROUS CAME OUT, BUT IT CERTAINLY MADE THEM DARNED UNCOMFORTABLE," SAID LT. AUST O'MALLEY, 29 PARSONS ST., BOSTON, MASS.

NOV 30 1944

CAPT.HOWARD MANDELL OF BAYSIDE, N.Y., WAS ANOTHER OFFICER IN ONE OF THE COMMAND POSTS AND WHILE THE PLACE SHOOK FROM THE CONCUSSION OF NEARBY AMERICAN ARTILLERY HE RECEIVED TELEPHONE REPORTS THAT ALL PRELIMINARY OBJECTIVES HAD BEEN TAKEN.

IN ANOTHER CELLAR CLOSE BY, WAITING IN RESERVE WITH HIS UNIT TO GO INTO ACTION, WAS A FORMER ST.MARY'S (CALIF.) FOOTBALL PLAYER FROM SAN FRANCISCO, LT.COL.LLOYD H.COMEZ.

ALTHOUGH A COMPARATIVE NEWCOMER IN ACTION, HE ALREADY HAS WON A REPUTATION FOR DARING. HE NOTONLY HAS BEEN LEADING HIS BATTALION IN THE FIGHTING, BUT ALSO HAS BEEN IN THE FOREFRONT OF PLATOONS AND COMPANIES.

GEREONSWEILER, GERMANY, NOV. 29-(AP)-ROASTING OUT GERMAN DEFENDERS WITH FLAMETHROWERS, DOUGHBOYS CAPTURED ONE PILLBOX AN HOUR TODAY WHILE AUDACIOUS TANK CREWS BLASTED FOUR GERMAN TANKS AT A COST OF TWO AMERICAN TANKS. THIS ACTION STARTED OFF A NEW ATTACK BY THE NINTH ARM STARTED 15 MILES NORTHWEST OF AACHEN.

HAMPERED BY LACK OF SUPPORT AT THE OUTSET BECAUSE OF A HEAVY OVERCAST, THE INFANTRY ADVANCED SLOWLY TOWARD THE ROER AGAINST FIERCE ARTILLERY AND MORTAR FIRE.

NOV 30 1944

"THIS WAS ONE OF THE TOUGHEST OPERATIONS THE ARMY HAS RUN UP AGAINST," SAID CAPT. GORDON CAESAR, 1817 REDCLIFF ST., LOS ANGELES, CALIF., A BATTALION OPERATIONS OFFICER JUST BEFORE THUNDEROUS SHELL BURSTS FORCED HIM TO DIVE INTO A CELLAR.

"THESE SS (ELITE GUARD) TROOPS ARE GIVING US MORE TROUBLE THAN EVER BEFORE."

THE PILLBOXES ATTACKED WERE THE INNER DEFENSES OF THE SIEGFRIED LINE.

"INFANTRY WITH FLAMETHROWERS MOVED UP ON THEM BEHIND THE TANKS BEFORE DAWN," SAID LT. COL. B.M. BRYANT OF WICHITA, KANS., BATTALION COMMANDER.

"THE INFANTRY PUT 90 FEET OF FLAMES ON THE PILLBOXES AND HEATED THE NUNS OUT. OUR BOYS WERE THROWING EVERYTHING BUT ROCKS. WE TOOK FOUR OR FIVE OUT OF NINE PILLBOXES IN THE FIRST FEW HOURS AND WE ARE WORKING ON THE REST."

GERMAN SHELLFIRE FINALLY GOT SO INTENSE CAPT.CAESAR SAID, "IT'S TOO HOT TO STAY HERE, SO WE ARE GOING FORWARD."

HE POINTED TO A HILLSIDE HALF A MILE AWAY WHERE MACHINEGUNS CHATTERED AND MORTAR BURSTS GAVE OFF NASTY, BLACK PUFFS OF SMOKE.

IN A DRIVE SOUTHWARD TOWARD THE FRENCH FORCES THE AMERICANS CAPTURED THE STRONGHOLD OF ERSTEIN, TEN MILES SOUTH OF STRASBOURG AND THREE MILES WEST OF THE RHINE, AFTER HEAVY FIGHTING.

THEN THEY PUSHED TWO MILES FARTHER TO MATZENHEIM ON THE HIGHWAY TO COLMAR. THE ENEMY PUT UP STIFF RESISTANCE WITH ANTI-TANK WEAPONS, PRINCIPALLY BAZOOKAS.

SOUTHWEST OF ERSTEIN OTHER FORCES OF THE SEVENTH ARMY, BREAKING THROUGH THE VOSGES MOUNTAINS, CAPTURED ANDLAU, SEVEN MILES NORTH OF SELESTAT, AND ST.MAURICE, SEVEN MILES NORTHWEST.

WITH THE GERMANS IN SOUTHERN ALSACE COMPLETELY ENCIRCLED, THE FRENCH FIRST ARMY WAS METHODICALLY MOPPING UP THE REGION. MANY GERMAN BODIES AND BURNED OUT VEHICLES WERE EVIDENCE OF THE VIOLENCE OF THE FIGHTING IN THIS SECTOR.

THE FRENCH ADVANCED MORE THAN FIVE MILES TOWARD URBES ON HIGHWAY 66 BETWEEN LE THILLOT AND MULHOUSE AND BROKE UP STRONG COUNTERATTACKS BY ENEMY ARMOR.

ESTIMATES OF LOSSES INFLICTED ON THE ENEMY BY THE THIRD FLEET DURING THE THREE MONTHS SINCE ADMIRAL CHESTER W. NIMITZ PLACED ADMIRAL HALSEY IN COMMAND, SHOW THAT THE JAPANESE LOST 3,446 PLANES DESTROYED, 162 WARSHIPS SUNK OR DAMAGED AND OVER 600 MERCHANT SHIPS SUNK OR DAMAGED. IN ADDITION MORE THAN 400 SMALL CRAFT WERE EITHER SUNK OR DAMAGED.

FAR-RANGING PLANES FROM THIS FLEET IN HUNDREDS OF SORTIES BOMBED, STRAFED AND BURNED PLANES AND INSTALLATIONS OF ABOUT 112 JAPANESE AIRPORTS DURING THE SAME PERIOD.

THE NINETY DAYS WERE OF SUSTAINED NAVAL AND AIR COMBAT OF UNPRECEDENTED INTENSITY AND SCOPE.

THEY BEGAN WITH THE THUNDEROUS FIRST CARRIER ASSAULT ON THE ENEMY'S LAND-BASED AIR FORCE IN THE CENTRAL PHILIPPINES, SEPTEMBER 13, WHICH UNCOVERED THE ENEMY'S WEAKNESS IN GROUND DEFENSE THERE AND BROUGHT ABOUT THE DECISION OF GENERAL DOUGLAS MACARTHUR TO INVADE LEYTE.

THEN CAME THE FIRST CARRIER ATTACK ON MANILA HARBOR ON LUZON, SEPT. 20 AND 21. THE FLEET THEN COVERED THE CAPTURE OF AN AIR AND NAVAL BASE IN THE PALAU ISLANDS BY MARINE AND ARMY FORCES BEGINNING SEPTEMBER 15.

THE CARRIERS MADE THE FIRST ATTACK ON OKINAWA OCTOBER 10 AND TWO DAYS LATER LAUNCHED A THREE-DAY STRIKE ON FORMOSA.

NEXT CAME THE SECOND BATTLE OF THE PHILIPPINES SEA, IN WHICH ALMOST THE ENTIRE JAPANESE NAVY PARTICIPATED WITH DISASTROUS RESULTS FOR TOKYO.

DURING THE WHOLE PERIOD FROM OCT. 20, WHEN GEN. DOUGLAS MACARTHUR LANDED ON LEYTE TO THE PRESENT, THE THIRD FLEET WITH THE SEVENTH HAS OPERATED TO KEEP OPEN THE OCEAN HIGHWAY TO THE PHILIPPINES.

FIGURES OF JAPANESE LOSSES DISCLOSED THAT 1,664 ENEMY AIR CRAFT WERE SHOT OUT OF THE AIR AND 1,782 WERE DESTROYED ON THE GROUND.

THE WARSHIPS' TALLY SHOWED THAT FOUR CARRIERS WERE SUNK; NINE BATTLESHIPS DAMAGED; THREE HEAVY CRUISERS SUNK AND FIVE TO SEVEN DAMAGED; TWO LIGHT CRUISERS SUNK AND EIGHT DAMAGED; 25 DESTROYERS AND DESTROYER ESCORTS SUNK AND 46 DAMAGED; TWO SEAPLANE TENDERS SUNK; THREE MINE LAYERS DAMAGED; AND 22 OTHER SMALLER WARSHIPS SUNK AND 29 DAMAGED.

THIS ADDED UP TO A TOTAL OF 58 WARSHIPS SUNK AND MORE THAN DRED DAMAGED.
FOR MERCHANT SHIPPING, IT IS ESTIMATED THERE WERE THREE TANKERS SUNK AND 26 DAMAGED; 114 MERCHANTMEN OVER 1,000 TONS SUNK AND 263 DAMAGED; AND 100 SMALLER MERCHANTMEN SUNK AND 113 DAMAGED.
SOME OF THE SHIPS DAMAGED IN ONE ENGAGEMENT WERE SUNK LATER SO THE LIST HAS SOME DUPLICATION.
ADMIRAL HALSEY'S FLAGSHIP FROM WHICH THE STURDY JAPANESE-HATING ADMIRAL HAS DIRECTED OPERATIONS, HAS STEAMED 36,185 MILES SINCE THE START OF THE MISSION 90 DAYS AGO AND THE FLAGSHIP HAS RARELY BEEN AT ANCHOR.
DURING THIS TIME IT HAS NEVER SO MUCH AS BEEN SCRATCHED BY ENEMY FIRE.

CAPT.JOHNSTON IS A LIBERAL WHO MAY BE REGARDED AS AN UNOFFICIAL SPOKESMAN FOR THE MEN ON THE FIGHTING FRONTS WHO FOR MONTHS HAVE CLAMORED FOR CONSCRIPTION TO SUPPLY NEEDED INFANTRY REINFORCEMENTS.

NOV 30 1944

IN MONTREAL TONIGHT, MORE THAN 1,000 YOUNG MEN, CHANTING "DOWN WITH CONSCRIPTION" AND OTHER SLOGANS, PARADED THROUGH THAT CITY'S FINANCIAL DISTRICT. POLICE DISPERSED THE CROWD AFTER GROUND FLOOR WINDOWS WERE BROKEN AT THE OFFICES OF THE FRENCH-LANGUAGE DAILY NEWSPAPER LE CANADA AND AT SELECTIVE SERVICE HEADQUARTERS. A NEWSPAPER MESSENGER BOY WAS BEATEN.

SIX LIBERAL PARTY MEMBERS FROM QUEBEC IN A JOINT STATEMENT TONIGHT "REITERATED THEIR FORMAL OPPOSITION TO ALL CONSCRIPTION FOR OVERSEAS SERVICE," BUT A SPOKESMAN SAID THE STATEMENT DID NOT NECESSARILY MEAN THEY WOULD VOTE AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT IN THE FORTHCOMING VOTE OF CONFIDENCE.

REPORTS FROM TERRACE TONIGHT SAID HOME DEFENSE TROOPS OF TWO REGIMENTS WHO PICKETED A SASKATCHEWAN REGIMENT SCHEDULED TO LEAVE LAST NIGHT FOR A NEW POSTING HAD RETURNED TO DUTY LATE THIS AFTERNOON.

THERE WERE A FEW PARADES THROUGH THE BUSINESS SECTION OF TERRACE TODAY, BUT NO DISORDERS OCCURRED. THE LIQUOR STORE AND BEER PARLORS IN THE TOWN OF 1,600 REMAINED CLOSED.

NOV 30 1944

EXCEPT FOR THE TROUBLE AT TERRACE AND A MINOR DEMONSTRATION AT PORT ALBERTI, WHERE PARADERS MARCHED THROUGH THE STREETS LAST NIGHT CARRYING ANTI-CONSCRIPTION BANNERS, ALL BRITISH COLUMBIA CAMPS ARE FUNCTIONING NORMALLY, PACIFIC COMMAND OFFICERS REPORTED.

MILITARY AUTHORITIES HAD MADE NO EFFORT TO MINIMIZE THE SITUATION AT TERRACE WHERE THERE WERE GRAVE THREATS OF VIOLENCE BY THE "STRIKING" MEMBERS OF A QUEBEC UNIT.

BRIG.EDMOND BLAIS, COMMANDING MILITARY DISTRICT NO. 5 AT QUEBEC, ANNOUNCED THAT FRENCH-CANADIAN HOME DEFENSE TROOPS NOW IN OTHER PARTS OF CANADA WOULD BE MOVED BACK TO QUEBEC WITHIN A FEW DAYS AND TRAINED UNDER THEIR OWN OFFICERS.

VICTOR QUELCH, SOCIAL CREDIT MEMBER FOR ACADIA, MOVED IN COMMONS TODAY AN AMENDMENT TO THE GOVERNMENT CONFIDENCE MOTION ASKING THE GOVERNMENT TO GIVE ASSURANCE TO MEN OVERSEAS THAT THEY WILL RECEIVE ADEQUATE REINFORCEMENTS AND SUPPLIES.

NOV 30 1944

WHILE IT FAVORS MAKING ALL OF THE 68,000 HOME DEFENSE TROOPS AVAILABLE FOR OVERSEAS SERVICE, THE SOCIAL CREDIT PARTY THREW ITS SUPPORT TO THE LIBERAL GOVERNMENT TODAY ON THE MAJOR ISSUE OF THE VOTE OF CONFIDENCE BEFORE COMMONS.

THE NEWSPAPER "VANCOUVER PROVINCE" SAID TONIGHT THAT MAJ.GEN.G.A. PEARKES, GENERAL OFFICER COMMANDING-IN-CHIEF, PACIFIC COMMAND, WAS ENROUTE TO TERRACE TO ASSUME PERSONAL COMMAND THERE. HEADQUARTERS AT VANCOUVER DECLINED COMMENT ON THE REPORT.

THE URGENT NEED OF INFANTRY REINFORCEMENTS ABROAD IMMEDIATELY WAS STRESSED IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS TONIGHT IN AN EAGERLY-AWAITED ADDRESS BY COL.J.L.RALSTON, WHO RESIGNED AS DEFENSE MINISTER ON NOV. BECAUSE HE COULD NOT THEN WIN THE CABINET OVER TO HIS VIEW THAT THE VOLUNTARY SYSTEM COULD NO LONGER PROVIDE TROOPS NEEDED OVERSEAS.

COL.RALSTON DECLARED THE NEED DEVELOPED RAPIDLY LATE THIS SUMMER, BEGINNING IN AUGUST WHEN RESERVE POOLS WENT DOWN AND WERE KEPT DOWN BY AN UNEXPECTEDLY HEAVY NUMBER OF CASUALTIES OVER A PERIOD OF TIME.

THE EX-MINISTER, DISCLOSING THAT HE WOULD SUPPORT THE GOVERNMENT

30.27— 20817

ON THE CONFIDENCE VOTE, SAID HE WOULD LIKED TO HAVE FINISHED HIS JOB BUT HE DISCLAIMED HAVING ANY AMBITION OTHER THAN TO BE A "GOOD CANADIAN". HE TOOK ISSUE WITH THE PRIME MINISTER'S REMARKS IN PARLIAMENT MONDAY IN WHICH, HE SAID, KING GAVE THE IMPRESSION HE WAS SEEKING A SUCESSOR FOR THE PREMIERSHIP FROM A GROUP OF MINISTEERS INCLUDING RALSTON.

KING SAID MONDAY HE HAD ASKED RALSTON AMONG OTHERS AT A CABINET MEETING WHETHER THEY WOULD BE READY TO ASSUME THE PREMIERSHIP, IN THE CONSCRIPTION CRISIS, AND HE SAID RALSTON DECLINED. TONIGHT RALSTON CHALLENGED THE PRIME MINISTER'S VERSION OF THIS, DECLARING THE QUESTION HAD BEEN PURELY A "HYPOTHETICAL" ONE.

NEW YORK, NOV 29-(AP)-KENT COOPER, GENERAL MANAGER AND EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS, DECLARES THE WORLD "NEEDS THE BENEFACTIONS OF A FREE PRESS ENTIRELY RID OF GOVERNMENT CONTROL."

ADDRESSING THE ANNUAL DINNER OF THE ENGLISH-SPEAKING UNION LAST NIGHT MR.COOPER EXPRESSED BELIEF THAT PEACE COULD BE MAINTAINED ONLY "BY SHORT-CIRCUITING SELF-SEEKING, PREDATORY GOVERNMENTS THROUGH LETTING THE PEOPLE OF EACH NATION REALLY KNOW THE PEOPLES OF OTHER NATIONS.

"I WOULD NOT WAIT UNTIL THE WAR ENDS, THEN TO HAVE THESE VITAL ELEMENTS TOSSED AROUND UPON THE SEA OF INDECISION AND INTRIGUE THAT ALWAYS PREVAILS IN PEACE NEGOTIATIONS.

"SO IMPORTANT DO I BELIEVE THE MATTER TO BE THAT I WOULD ASK ACCEPTANCE OF THE PROPOSALS INVOLVED IN ADVANCE OF ANY SUPPORT OR AID GIVEN BY THE UNITED STATES IN THE RECONSTRUCTION OF THE ECONOMIC LIFE OF ANY COUNTRY DEVASTATED BY THIS WAR, BESIDES IMPOSING ACCEPTANCE UPON THE ENEMY."

BY JOHN M.HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON,NOV.29-(AP)-THE DATE OF VICTORY IN EUROPE NOW DEPENDS PRIMARILY ON A RUSSIAN OFFE SIVE ON GERMANY'S EASTERN FRONT TO MATCH THE ALLIED ONSLAUGHT IN THE WEST.

IT IS THE CONVICTION OF RANKING MILITARY LEADERS HERE THAT THE BATTERED REICH WHICH IS NOW RUNNING CRITICALLY SHORT OF MANPOWER AND SUFFERING PRODUCTION DIFFICULTIES, MAY BE BEATEN IN A RELATIVELY SHORT PERIOD BY SUCH A DOUBLE-CRUSHER STRATEGY, OTHERWISE THE GERMANS MAY BE ABLE TO PROLONG THE FIGHTING INDEFINITELY.

PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL'S GLOOMY REVISION OF HIS WAR END FORECAST TODAY TO FIX THE TIME OF VICTORY AS NEXT SUMMER INSTEAD OF "EARLY SUMMER" IS VIEWED HERE ALMOST ENTIRELY IN THE LIGHT OF POSSIBILITIES ON THE EASTERN FRONT. THE HOPE IS THAT THE RUSSIANS WILL ATTACK VERY SOON, JUST AS QUICKLY AS HARD FREEZES IN CENTRAL POLAND FACILITATE THE LAUNCHING OF A MAJOR OFFENSIVEEEEE IN THE VICINITY OF WARSAW.

THERE IS NO EXPLANATION FROM RESPONSIBLE OFFICIALS HERE AS TO WHY THE OFFENSIVE HAS NOT ALREADY STARTED UNLESS IT IS THAT THE RUSSIANS FEEL THEIR CHANCES FOR SWIFT AND DECISIVE ACTION WOULD BE MAGNIFIED BY WAITIMMNG UNTIL THE DEADD OF WINTER. THE RUSSIAN DRIVES IN THE BALKANS, SPEARHEADED NOW BY THE ADVANCES IN HUNGARY, HAVE HAD A MILDLY DIVERSIONARY EFFECT ON THE GERMAN ARMY BUT ARE NOT CONSIDERED IN ANY SENSE A MAJOR EFFORT FOR A COMPLETE QUICK VICTORY.

30. 24— 20 819

AS LONG AS TWO MONTHS AGO IT BECAME EVIDENT THAT TWO CITIES WERE THE GATEWAYS TO DRIVES INTO GERMANY IN THE EAST AND WEST. ONE WAS WARSAW WHICH THE GERMANS STILL HOLD. THE OTHER WAS ANTWERP, BELGIUM, WHICH ANGLO-AMERICAN FORCES HAVE LONG SINCE CAPTURED BUT JUST NOW SUCCEEDED IN USING AS A PORT TO SUPPLY THE WESTERN FRONT.

PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL'S ANNOUNCEMENT TODAY THAT ANTWERP IS IN USE APPARENTLY MEANS THAT THERE WILL BE NO LETUP IN THE FLOW OF SUPPLIES FOR THE HUGE OFFENSIVE NOW IN PROGRESS, REGARDLESS OF GERMAN COUNTER MEASURES. THE RUSSIANS NEED WARSAW FOR A COMPARABLE REASON. IT IS THE FOCAL POINT OF TRANSPORTATION SYSTEMS IN POLAND ALONG THE SHORT ROUTE TO BERLIN.

INQUIRY OF AMERICAN OFFICIALS BRINGS THE INFORMATION THAT THE AVERAGE PROGRESS OF THE WESTERN FRONT OFFENSIVE IS WELL UP TO SCHEDULE. ITS OBJECTIVE IS TO BREAK THE GERMAN ARMIES IN THE WEST, TRAPPING THEM IF POSSIBLE ON THE ALLIED SIDE OF THE RHINE.

THERE IS SOME SLIGHT POSSIBILITY, ACCORDING TO MILITARY LOGIC THAT THE SITUATION IS SO BAD INSIDE GERMANY THAT SOMEHOW THE REICH MIGHT COLLAPSE ANY TIME. HOWEVER THERE IS NO ACTUAL EVIDENCE OF A COLLAPSE.

THE CHIEF SPECULATION IN MILITARY CIRCLES HERE IS WHETHER THE PISTOL POINT CONTROL OF GERMANY BY THE NAZIS WILL CRACK ONCE ALLIED ARMIES HAVE THRUST ACROSS THE RHINE. PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL'S WORDS ARE TAKEN TO MEAN THAT HE DOES NOT THINK SO. IF THE GERMANS DO NOT BREAK AFTER THE RHINE IS CROSSED THEY MIGHT BE ABLE TO CARRY ON A RETREATING WAR FOR MANY MONTHS FOLLOWED BY A GUERILLA WARFARE OF SEVERAL YEARS. ONE SIGNIFICANCE OF THE RUSSIAN SITUATION IS THAT IF THE RUSSIANS NOW PUSH FORWARD ON THE EASTERN FRONT THEY WILL QUICKLY REDUCE THE AMOUNT OF TERRITORY OVER WHICH THE GERMANS MAY RETREAT AS WELL AS PUT UNBEARABLE PRESSURES ON GERMAN MANPOWER, MORALE AND MUNITION SUPPLIES.

AT THE TIME THE PLANS FOR THE INVASION OF EUROPE WERE COMPLETED MARSHAL STALIN AGREED TO UNDERTAKE AN OFFENSIVE, SYNCHRONIZED WITH THE ASSAULT ON FRANCE. HE DELIVERED TO THE LIMIT, ACCORDING TO INFORMATION IN MILITARY QUARTERS HERE. THE TREMENDOUS RUSSIAN CAMPAIGN ROLLED HITLER'S HORDES BACK TO WARSAW. THEN THE ALLIES IN NORMANDY BROKE THEIR BOUNDS AND SWEPT ACROSS FRANCE TO PREPARE FOR THE GRAND ASSAULT ON THE WESTERN FRONT WHICH HAS NOW BEEN UNLEASHED.

EVIDENTLY THERE HAS BEEN NO DEFINITIVE AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE EASTERN AND WESTERN COMMANDERS AS TO WHAT RUSSIA SHOULD DO NOW, BUT THE STRATEGIC REQUIREMENTS OF THE SITUATION ARE CLEAR. THE ONLY CONCLUSION HERE IS THAT WHEN MARSHAL STALIN THINKS THE TIME HAS COME TO STRIKE, HE WILL GIVE THE RED ARMIES MASSED ALONG THE VISTULA THE LONG AWAITED GO AHEAD SIGNAL.

WASHINGTON,NOV.30-(AP)-INDISCRIMINATE RAIDING AND BURNING OF TOKYO IS NOT IN THE PLANS OF THE 20TH AIR FORCE, ACCORDING TO AN ARMY AIR FORCES SPOKESMAN.

DEFINITE PURPOSE IS PACKED INTO EACH LETHAL LOAD WHICH THE BOYS IN THE SUPERFORTS HAVE TO LUG 1,480 MILES UP FROM THEIR SAIPAN ISLAND BASES.

A JAPANESE PROPAGANDA BROADCAST HEARD IN THIS COUNTRY CHARGED THAT THE BIG PLANES HAD STAGED WANTON, INDISCRIMINATE ATTACKS DESIGNED TO LOWER CIVILIAN MORALE.

THE MISSION OF THE SUPERFORTS WAS DESCRIBED BY THE ARMY SPOKESMAN HOWEVER, AS "STRATEGIC REDUCTION OF THE ENEMY SOURCES OF PRODUCTION, NAMELY FACTORIES AND SIMILAR HEAVY STRUCTURES."

INCENDIARIES PROPERLY USED CAN DO ENORMOUS DAMAGE TO OBJECTS REGARDED AS FIREPROOF SUCH AS METAL, HE EXPLAINED.

NOV 30 1944

LOADS FOR EACH MISSION ARE CAREFULLY CALCULATED FOR THE BEST RESULTS AGAINST THE TARGET AND THEY WILL INCLUDE INCENDIARIES WHEN THEY ARE REGARDED AS USEFUL, HE SAID.

WHILE THE TRADITIONAL VIEW OF TOKYO AS A "TINDER CITY" WAS OFFSET RECENTLY BY AN OWI REPORT ON ITS CONSTRUCTION, THE SPOKESMAN OBSERVED THAT BERLIN AND HAMBURG WERE NOT SO REGARDED EITHER.

ABOUT 100 MAJOR TRANSPORTS WERE IN USE AS OF OCT. 31.

THE COMMAND ESTIMATED IT WILL FLY ABOUT FIVE TIMES AS MUCH OVER THE ROUTE THIS WINTER IN TRANSPORT-MILES AND TON-MILES AS IT DID LAST WINTER.

WEATHER DID NOT SERIOUSLY INTERFERE WITH OPERATIONS LAST WINTER. THE COMMAND IS STARTING ITS SECOND FULL SCALE WINTER HAULS OVER THE ROUTE. FROM JANUARY THROUGH MARCH, 846 TRANSPORTS DEPARTED FROM THE UNITED STATES AND THREE WERE LOST. THERE WERE 859 FERRYING DEPARTURES OF WHICH 15 PLANES WERE LOST. THE SAFETY RECORD WAS DESCRIBED AS VERY GOOD.

VVSECOND NIGHT LEAD UNDATED TOKYO RAID

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAIPAN-BASED U.S. SUPERFORTRESSES RAIDED TOKYO WEDNESDAY FOR THE THIRD TIME IN A WEEK AND THE JAPANESE, CONCEDING FIRES WERE STARTED, SAID THE HUGE BOMBERS STRUCK TWICE THAT DAY OVER A FIVE-HOUR PERIOD.

AN IMPERIAL COMMUNIQUE QUOTED TODAY (THURSDAY) BY TOKYO RADIO ACKNOWLEDGED THAT FIRES "CONTINUED TO RAGE IN PART OF THE AREAS AFFECTED" AFTER THE LAST SUPERFORTS HAD LEFT.

IT SAID THE FLAMES SPRANG UP IN "SEVERAL PLACES" AND "MOST" OF THE FIRES WERE EXTINGUISHED IMMEDIATELY.

THE COMMUNIQUE ESTIMATED THE NUMBER OF RAIDING B-29S AT 20, CLAIMED "NOT DAMAGE WAS CAUSED TO IMPORTANT ESTABLISHMENTS" AND THAT CASUALTIES "WERE EXTREMELY SLIGHT."

THE DETAILS, RECORDED BY THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION, WERE WITHOUT CONFIRMATION FROM ALLIED SOURCES.

TWENTIETH AIRFORCE HEADQUARTERS AT WASHINGTON ANNOUNCED BRIEFLY THE RAID WAS MADE.

TOKYO RADIO, PASSING UP ITS CUSTOMARY IMMEDIATE CLAIMS OF SHOOTIN DOWN AT LEAST ONE OF THE B29S, SAID SUPERFORTRESSES DROPPED INCENDIARIES ON TOKYO AND OTHERS BOMBED SHIZUOKA PREFECTURE BELOW THE CAP FROM NEAR MIDNIGHT UNTIL 2 A.M.

NOV 301944

THEN, FROM 4:15 TO 5 A.M., SUPERFORTS HIT TOKYO AGAIN, STATED AN ENEMY DOMESTIC BROADCAST RECORDED BY THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION.

RELATED TO THESE DEVELOPMENTS, A COMMUNIQUE WAS ISSUED YESTERDAY AT PEARL HARBOR BY ADM.CHESTER W.NIMITZ DISCLOSING LIBERATORS AND LONG RANGE FIGHTERS FROM SAIPAN ATTACKED TWO ENEMY AIRFIELDS SUNDAY AND MONDAY ON IWO JIMA IN THE VOLCANO ISLANDS, 750 MILES SOUTH OF TOKYO, WITH MORE THAN 160 TONS OF BOMBS.

THE RAIDERS CRATERED ENEMY FIELDS FROM WHICH NIPPONESE FIGHTERS, SHUTTLING FROM TOKYO, ARE BELIEVED TO HAVE TAKEN OFF FOR STRAFING AND BOMBING ATTACKS SUNDAY ON THE SUPERFORTRESS BASES ON SAIPAN. THOSE FIELDS ARE THE NEAREST GOOD ONES THE ENEMY HAS TO USE AGAINST SAIPAN.

NIMITZ ALSO REPORTED AN ATTACK MONDAY ON MARCUS ISLAND WHICH JAPAN MIGHT BE USING TO SPOT THE B-29S WINGING TO TOKYO.

"FIRST WITH OUR B-29S, THEN, AS WE GET BASES CLOSER TO JAPAN, WITH OUR FORTRESSES AND LIBERATORS, WE'RE GOING TO DESTROY THE HEART AND THE NERVE CENTERS OF JAPAN'S WAR MACHINE," GEN.H.H.ARNOLD SAID LAST NIGHT IN KANSAS CITY.

THE COMMANDING GENERAL OF THE ARMY AIR FORCES TOLD A VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS MEETING "JAPAN WILL HAVE LITTLE INDUSTRY LEFT WHEN OUR ARMY AND NAVY AIR FORCES COMPLETE THEIR TASKS OF DESTRUCTION."

ONE INCENSED JAPANESE BROADCASTER SAID THE TOKYO BOMBINGS WERE "INDISCRIMINATE" AND "AMERICAN FLIERS PARTICIPATING IN SUCH ATTACKS ARE NOT ENTITLED TO PROTECTION OF INTERNATIONAL LAW."

FIRES WERE STARTED BY THE FIRST FLIGHT OF B-29S, BUT THESE WERE QUICKLY EXTINGUISHED, SAID THE BROADCAST. IT CLAIMED ALSO THAT FIRES IGNITED BY THE SECOND ATTACK WERE "IMMEDIATELY" PUT OUT.

THIS THIRD AERIAL THRUST AT TOKYO WITHIN A WEEK, THE JAPANESE HOMELAND WAS INFORMED, HAD BEEN CARRIED OUT "FROM A HIGH ALTITUDE ABOVE THE CLOUDS" AND "IN GENERAL" WAS A "BLIND BOMBING ON CIVILIAN HOMES." THE ASSAULT ON THE SHIZUOKA DISTRICT WAS CHARACTERIZED AS "BLIND BOMBINGS ON FARM HOUSES AND FIELDS."

"OUR AIR DEFENSE UNITS EACH TIME INTERCEPTED THE ENEMY PLANES, REPULSING THEM," SAID THE BROADCAST. THERE WAS NO CLAIM THAT ANY OF THE RAIDERS WAS SHOT DOWN.

(NY) KYOSHI KOJIMA, POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR THE JAPANESE DOMEI NEWS AGENCY, SAID IN A DISPATCH QUOTED IN AN ENGLISH-LANGUAGE BROADCAST FROM TOKYO YESTERDAY (WED) THAT ANY AMERICAN FLIER WHO ATTEMPTED TO PARACHUTE TO SAFETY AFTER "BLINDLY" BOMBING TOKYO WOULD BE "KILLED ON THE SPOT BY THE ANGRY JAPANESE PEOPLE."

HE SAID THE WASHINGTON ANNOUNCEMENT THAT THE B-29 SUPERFORTRESSES HAD BOMBED "INDUSTRIAL TARGETS" IN TOKYO FOR THE SECOND TIME IN FOUR DAYS MONDAY "IS A FALSEHOOD ONLY THE ALBINO APES CAN TELL. IT WAS INDISCRIMINATE BOMBING OF THE WORST KIND."

A JAPANESE PROPAGANDIST IN ANOTHER BROADCAST, BEAMED TO AMERICA AND REPORTED BY THE OWI TODAY, SAID "WIDESPREAD INDIGNATION" HAD BEEN CAUSED IN JAPAN BY THE "INDISCRIMINATE" BOMBING OF TOKYO AND THAT, IN HIS OPINION, AMERICAN FLIERS PARTICIPATING IN SUCH ATTACKS WERE NOT ENTITLED TO THE PROTECTION OF INTERNATIONAL LAW.

THE BROADCASTER, IDENTIFIED AS SEN JOBO, SAID THAT IN MONDAY'S B-29 RAID ON THE JAPANESE CAPITAL THE AMERICANS HAD TO DROP THEIR BOMBS THROUGH THICK CLOUD LAYERS AND COULD NOT SEE THEIR TARGETS AND THAT, THEREFORE, THE "WANTON ATTACK" WAS DESIGNED ONLY TO LOWER CIVILIAN MORALE. HE SAID THE "RUTHLESS" AMERICAN AIRMEN "PROVED BY THEIR REPEATED ATTACKS AGAINST CIVILIANS THAT THEY ARE THE ENEMIES OF CIVILIZATION AND HUMANITY."

"IN MY OPINION," HE CONTINUED, "SUCH A PERSON MUST BE CLASSED AS AN OUTLAW OF SOCIETY. HE IS A VIOLATOR OF ALL HUMANE PRINCIPLES, AS WELL AS OF INTERNATIONAL LAW, AND, AS SUCH, SHOULD NOT BE ENTITLED TO THEIR PROTECTION. FOR THE SECURITY OF THE CIVILIZED WORLD, NOTHING MUST BE LEFT UNDONE TO BRING HIM TO JUST PENITENCE. THE DAY OF RECKONING WILL SURELY COME."

EARLIER TOKYO BROADCASTS REPORTED BY OWI, REFERRING TO AMERICAN FLIERS CLAIMED TO HAVE BEEN SHOT DOWN IN THE NOV. 21 RAID ON NAGASAKI AND OMURA, QUOTED AN ITEM FROM THE NEWSPAPER MAINICHI WHICH SAID THAT RESIDENTS OF A VILLAGE IN NAGASAKI PREFECTURE WOULD HAVE MET THE FLIERS WITH "A JAPANESE SWORD" OR A "HUNTING RIFLE" HAD THEY NOT ALREADY BEEN DEAD.

TOKYO RADIO, ANNOUNCING FORMATION OF A NEW CABINET COUNCIL TO COMBAT WAR PRODUCTION SNAGS, INDICATED LAST (WED) NIGHT B-29 RAIDS ALREADY HAVE PRECIPITATED UNFORESEEN INDUSTRIAL PROBLEMS.

THE NEW COUNCIL, FIFTH EXTRA-CABINET BODY IN PREMIER KUNIAKI KOISO'S EXPANDING GOVERNMENT, WAS APPROVED IN A CABINET MEETING TUESDAY AND ANNOUNCED A FEW HOURS AFTER THE FOURTH RAID ON TOKYO.

THE COUNCIL'S PERSONNEL "WILL BE APPOINTED ANEW AT EACH SITTING TO SUIT THE OCCASION," AND WILL BE ASSISTED BY "MOBILIZED" CIVILIAN EXPERTS.

"IN DUE COURSE," THE BROADCAST ADDED CRYPTICALLY, "VARIOUS BOTTLENECKS ARE EXPECTED TO APPEAR WITH MANY UNEXPECTED RESULTING EFFECTS."

THIS IS AS CLOSE AS THE USUAL VAGUE JAPANESE PRESS CAN COME TO SAYING THAT BOMBS WILL CAUSE THE BOTTLENECKS AND THAT LEADERS OF WHATEVER INDUSTRY IS ATTACKED COMPREHENSIVELY WILL BE SUMMONED TO TOKYO

TO MAKE PLANS FOR REBUILDING BLASTED FACTORIES. THE COUNCIL'S CHANGING PERSONNEL INDICATES THE HIGH COMMAND EXPECTS CURRENT ASSAULTS AGAINST AIRCRAFT PLANTS TO BE FOLLOWED BY SIMILAR PATTERN BOMBING OF STEEL, SHIPBUILDING AND OTHER MAJOR INDUSTRIES. THE COUNCIL ALSO COULD BE COMPOSED OF PROVINCIAL AND MUNICIPAL OFFICIALS WITH PLANS FOR CALMING THE POPULACE.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT'S SIGNIFICANCE IS THAT A NEW COUNCIL HAS BEEN CONSIDERED NECESSARY AT THE INAUGURAL OF B-29 RAIDS. THE HIGH COMMAND AND CIVILIAN GOVERNMENTS LONG HAVE WORKED ON PLANS TO HANDLE FORSEEABLE RESULTS OF THE HEAVY BOMBING RAIDS ON JAPAN WHICH TOKYO HAS ANTICIPATED FOR MORE THAN A YEAR.

APPARENTLY NEITHER DETAILED PLANS NOR THE APPOINTMENT OF SPECIALIZED CABINET ADVISORY BODIES HAS BEEN SUFFICIENT. THE JAPANESE CUSTOMARILY ARE ABLE TO PREPARE WELL IN ADVANCE FOR ANTICIPATED PROBLEMS, IF, FROM PRECEDENT, THEY CAN DETERMINE THEIR GENERAL NATURE.

THE SWIFT CREATION OF A NEW COUNCIL INDICATES THAT B-29 DAMAGE HASN'T FOLLOWED THE BOOK.

Patton's Forces Gain Two Miles Against Fierce Counterattacks.

FOE DESTROYS BRIDGES

Doughboys Lay Siege to Linnich Stronghold, Cut Vital Escape Route.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Friday, Dec. 1. — (AP) The American Ninth army drew up along the west bank of the Roer river on a 20-mile front above and below Julich yesterday while other Allied forces battled slowly forward against increasingly strong German resistance.

In forcing the Nazis back across the Roer, last water barrier before the Rhine, 25 miles to the east, Lt. Gen. William H. Simpson's Ninth army troops swept through the burned villages of Lindern, Flossdorf and Roerdorf and laid siege to the German stronghold of Linnich, six miles northwest of Julich.

At the same time Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' First army pulled its steel net tighter around Duren, third "anchor" city on the Roer river line barring access to the Cologne plain.

Nazis Destroy Bridges

West of Duren the Germans destroyed two bridges over the Inden river, cutting off the retreat of their own troops which they were still fighting in the streets of Inden and Lammersdorf. Hodges' troops cut across the Kleinhau-Brandenberg highway in a thrust that carried to high ground within a mile and a half of the Roer east of Hurtgen.

Farther to the south the Third army slogged forward for gains up to two miles, despite numerous counterattacks, and American and French troops of the Sixth army group advanced through the Vosges mountain passes and along the plains of Alsace.

From every front, however, came reports that the Germans were fighting fiercely, often counterattacking with tanks. Strasbourg, on the Seventh army front, was being heavily shelled by the Germans from across the Rhine.

The Americans also were pouring tons of artillery into German positions ahead of the advance, using both high explosive and phosphorous shells in an effort to break through on the Nonth army front.

At the village of Beeck, a mile southwest of Lindern, American troops found more Nazi dead piled in the streets than in any German town yet entered.

Germans Reel Back

As the Germans reeled back under the rain of American shells and before the bayonets of Simpson's Doughboys they came under withering attack by Thunderbolt fighter bombers.

Lindern is 14 1-2 miles from the Russian arsenal and rail city of Munchen Gladbach and stands on high ground overlooking the enemy stronghold of Linnich to the southeast. Flossdorf and Roerdorf are Roer river towns between Linnich and Julich.

While the shattering attack by three divisions of the Ninth army beat back the dug-in Germans and threatened to develop into a fierce drive on Dusseldorf, 28 miles away, Lt. Gen. Courtney Hodges' U. S. First army Doughboys on the right won the fortified towns of Lamersdorf and Grosshau in savage fighting and virtually put the bloody Hurtgen forest behind them.

Others of Hodges' forces fought a see-saw battle for a bridge across little Inde river at Inden, midway of the Aachen front, winning back the western end of the span after once losing it to a furious Nazi counterattack. On the extreme right Hodges' men smashed eastward from captured Hurtgen to within about a mile and a half of the Roer river, cutting an important road between Kleinhau and Brandenberg.

The First army alone bagged more than 6,000 prisoners during the day of ceaseless fighting on the muddy Cologne plain, and the count of dead and wounded Nazis ran very high. Yank troops fighting inside the village of Merode, three and a half miles from the big road center of Duren, lost ground to determined enemy counterattacks.

"This is first of all—above any objective of river or hill—a battle to kill or imprison Germans," said Associated Press Correspondent Williams S. White in a front dispatch. "The First army is having to pay for all this, and German resistance has not weakened anywhere."

70 Allied Divisions

(A German military spokesman announced that 70 Allied divisions —perhaps 850,000 men—now were slashing at the western defenses of the Reich. The German High command claimed that 74 Allied tanks had been knocked out in the last two days.)

In almost every sector from Holland to Switzerland the Germans were counterattacking frequently and hard. This stiffening resistance slowed previously spectacular advance of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third army on the Saar front, limiting its gains to an average of about a mile.

Patton's 95th Infantry division alone hurled back 10 German counter-attacks in 24 hours, but pushed on a mile to within three miles of Saarlautern, midway between Merzig and Saarbrucken.

Third army tanks which occupied high ground dominating the German city of Merzig, near the Luxembourg border, found themselves under artillery fire both from the east and the west—some shells apparently coming from Siegfried Line fortifications. Yank troops were within two miles of Merzig on the northwest, west and southwest.

Other Third army troops were fighting forward near Felsberg, three miles southwest of Saarlautern; at L'Hopital on the German frontier 13 miles southwest of Saarbrucken; and on high ground overlooking Saare Union, where street fighting was reported.

Gen. Eisenhower's communique described German opposition to Patton's forces as "spotty," but there was evidence that the enemy was committing more reserves of men and armor to that front in a belated effort to save the coal, steel and synthetic oil of the Saar.

Drive on Hagenau

Troops of Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's U. S. Seventh army, driving toward the German border north of Strasbourg, approached within a mile and a half of the important French city of Hagenau and threatened it with a flanking push on the west. Hagenau is 14 1-2 miles from the German frontier.

The German radio reported that Nazi troops were withdrawing from Hagenau, but a dispatch from the AP's Thobourn Wiant on that front tonight declared the Nazis still were resisting bitterly.

"But the report is interesting," he added, "because it now seems that the Germans are reconciled to withdrawal under pressure to the Siegfried-Rhine line, where they will try to last out the Winter."

(A Swiss dispatch said French troops had reached the Rhine just north of Basel, thwarting a possible attempt by the German garrison of Huningue on the French side of the river to escape into Switzerland.)

Northwest of Hagenau a Yank column was nearing a town only nine miles from the German frontier. Both these troops and the Americans directly in front of Hagenau were passing through miles of elaborate trench systems, with blockhouses and pillboxes, which had not been defended because the Nazis obviously did not have the men to put into them.

Beeck Blasted by Guns

A field dispatch tonight told of the sudden death which overtook the German defenders of Beeck when the Ninth army loosed its attack on that village early yesterday. Most of the Nazis were out of their dug-in tanks and cellars and were wandering about the streets when American artillery began raining shells into their midst, prisoners said.

American troops who captured Koslar, a mile west of Julich, pushed on today to the banks of the flooded Roer River across from the northern outskirts of Julich. The enemy had opened flood gates of Roer River dams, inundating its valley to widths of nearly a mile.

The Germans were not conceding a yard without fighting for it, and few surrendered before they had fired their last cartridge. Even after the most concentrated barrages by Allied guns and planes each blackened village still was defended by German troops who somehow survived. For days after a town is flattened and overrun, the ruins continue to yield groups of snipers.

PATTON REPULSES ATTACKS

30. 24 — 20823

Gains in Push on the Saar—First Army Is Clear of Hurtgen Forest.

London, Nov. 30 (A. P.).—Virtually the entire Ninth Army pulled up to the flooded Roer River today on a front of fifteen to twenty miles, ready to assault that major barrier in the push toward the Rhine and the industrial Ruhr Valley.

Lieut.-Gen. William H. Simpson's Ninth Army men fought their way into Roerdorf and Flossdorf, one and two miles southeast of Linnich, and captured Lindern, just northwest of Linnich, in the offensive that was slowly cracking open the roads to Munchen Gladbach, Cologne and Dusseldorf.

Linnich was placed in a pincers, and Beeck, to the southwest, was found full of German dead as the result of a terrific barrage. A hail of phosphorus shells and a fierce dive-bombing attack.

Survivors of the Elite S S garrison of Lindern were captured with the town, fourteen and a half miles from the Prussian arsenal and rail city of Munchen Gladbach, and twenty-eight miles from Dusseldorf.

Infantry driving into Beeck found more dead Germans on the street than in any other town yet entered on the Cologne front. Prisoners said their comrades were felled by white phosphorous shells which filled the skies before dawn.

Nazi Attacks Smashed.

During the night, the Germans tried vainly to regain high ground dominating the Roer River bastion of Linnich just east of Beeck. Artillery, particularly Tiger-busting eight-inchers, smashed most of the attacks.

The First Army at the southern end of the critical twenty-five-mile front on the Cologne Plain captured Lamersdorf and Grosshau and emerged from the Hurtgen Forest pinelands. Lieut.-Gen. Courtney H. Hodges's troops fought a seesaw battle for an Inde River bridge at Inden, winning it, losing it, and then regaining the western end of the small span.

The Germans had stiffened before Cologne, but the team of the First and Ninth armies was wedging slowly in between the flooded Roer River citadels of Julich and Duren. The Ninth pushed through Koslar to the west bank of the Roer just across from the northwest tip of Julich. American troops were within three miles of Duren and twenty-three miles of Cologne.

Burst Out of Hurtgen Forest.

Men of the American First Army burst into the open from the pines of the Hurtgen Forest where hundreds from both sides have died since mid-October.

Gains were scored along the entire twenty-five-mile front behind flamethrowers, tanks and frightful artillery and air barrages. The Germans declared the combat to be one of the greatest battles of attrition in history.

The United States 3d Army on the Saar front pushed into high ground overlooking the Saar River and within easy shot of Merzig, Prussian stronghold of the Siegfried Line. Gains averaged a mile all the way to the French railroad town of Sarre Union, as frost-hardened mudfields gave tanks firmer footing.

275,000 Attacking

The 3d, with the 1st and 9th Armies on the Roer, constitute General Bradley's 12th Army group. Twenty-three American divisions of this group—275,000 or more men—were charging at the foe.

A German military spokesman was quoted by the Berlin radio today as saying General Eisenhower had thrown 70 divisions into the Western front offensive. This suggested that at least 850,000 combat troops were opposing the outnumbered Germans.

The German radio said the crucial battlefield was in the Aachen area and the fighting was in progress in a sector sixteen miles wide and nine deep. This tallied roughly with Allied field reports.

The Aims At Karlsruhe

The United States 7th Army, flanking the 3d to the southeast, was breaking German resistance along its line. It sidestepped the strongly held French rail center of Hagenau and aimed straight at Karlsruhe, 31 miles farther to the northeast.

The 7th and the French 1st Army had wrested half the Alsatian Plain from the Nazis and had gone 25 miles south of Strasbourg. The French were moving slowly up from Mulhouse to tighten the Colmar clamp to about 40 miles.

Digging Nazis Out Of Cellars

The U.S. 1st Army was digging the Germans out of cellars in Merode, three and a half miles from Duren, in a yard-by-yard advance. North of Grosshau the Americans advanced half a mile.

In Hafhardt the Americans were within three miles of Duren.

DEC 1 1944

Nazi Attacks Slow 9th

Standstill fighting continued in the hamlet of Inden. The Americans held the west end of the bridge over the little river there and the Germans held the other end. The bridge at Maersdorf was blown up.

The new attack by the 9th Army northeast of Gielenkirchen ran into alert and stubborn opposition, but carried swiftly through old pillboxes of the Siegfried Line yesterday before resolute counter-attacks slowed it.

Field dispatches reported "good progress" even though the Nazis opened floodgates of Roer River dams, inundating the valley to the widths of nearly a mile.

Allied Planes Busy

The Americans were at the Roer for several miles north and south of the fortified town of Julich, nine miles northwest of Duren. The Germans wrecked the bridge at Duren.

Allied planes attacked German guns and communications all along the front and well back in the Cologne Plain. An ammunition dump was exploded. Nazi transport was raked all the way from the Dutch coast to the Ruhr.

The nearest approach to Cologne still was 23 miles. At Lindern the 9th Army was 28 miles from Dusseldorf.

Opposition Increasing

The offensive was two weeks old today, excluding the preliminary probing around Metz by Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's 3d Army.

Patton was still making the longest gains, and opposition to him and Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch was increasing as their troops came under the long guns of the Siegfried Line.

Patton's pace was slower, and there was evidence that the Germans were committing more of their reserves to save the Saar, its coal and steel and synthetic oil.

The 3d Army got within two miles of the border town of Saarlautern. It passed Gerflangen and captured high ground overlooking the Saar River within two miles of Merzig, guardian town of the Saar Valley road to Mainz and Frankfurt.

Eight Miles To Saarbrucken

Other men of the 3d were near Felsberg and at l'Hopital on the German border, 13 miles west of Saarbrucken. Troops southwest of Saarbrucken were only eight miles away. Street fighting was reported in Saare Union, and infantry was within seven and a half miles of Sarreguemines.

Ernstein Captured

One infantry column of the 7th Army advanced almost four miles north of the Hagenau-Saarbrucken railroad, approaching Offwiller, flanking Hagenau to the west. Hagenau was increasingly threatened by a head-on assault. Troops plunging north of Niederschaeffolsheim in a two-and-a-half-mile advance were within a mile and a half of Hagenau.

General Eisenhower's communique said Patton had consolidated his new gains and moved east in the Saar Valley. He said opposition in Alsace was spotty and that Erstein was captured in a push south in the Rhine Valley from Strasbourg.

French Gain Five Miles

Other troops fought through the valley and gorges of the Vosges Mountain passes, seizing Andlau and St. Meurice at the edge of the plain. Both are between the Saales and Ste. Marie passes. Surrounded German pockets were overcome. Matzenheim, 16 miles south of Strasbourg, was reached.

The 50-mile-square box of Nazis trapped by the 1st and 2nd French Corps between Belfort and Mulhouse was virtually cleaned out. The French pushed another mile east through Schlucht Pass and gained up to five miles in mountainous country east of Cornimont, between the Schlucht and Bussang passes.

Intermittent rain still fell in the appalling mud on the Roer front and kept the battlefield deep in mire. The weather was turning sharply colder, however, and frosts may soon congeal the morasses. Heavy fogs handicapped night and early morning operations in Alsace.

Still another penetration of German soil was disclosed by a field dispatch that said Canadian troops in a stab at the northern anchor of the Siegfried Line were fighting in the area of DeWyler Forest. The town of Wyler is just inside Germany east of Nijmegen in Holland, and six miles northwest of Kleve, northern end of the Siegfried Line.

52 Nazi Towns Taken.

A dispatch from Wes Gallagher, Associated Press correspondent, said that three divisions of the 9th Army—the 2nd Armored and the 29th and 30th infantries—were first to reach the Roer.

Still another penetration of German soil was disclosed in a front dispatch that said Canadian troops in a stab at the northern anchor of the Siegfried Line were fighting in the area of De Wyler Forest.

Driving deeper into the enemy's rich industrial Saar region, Gen. Patton's infantry were within a half mile of the Saar River near Merzig and within three miles of Saarlautern.

At the southern end of the long western front the American 7th and the French 1st Armies gained control of nearly half the Alsatian Plain on the French side of the Rhine, a front report said.

The 7th captured Erstein, 10 miles south of Strasbourg and three miles west of the Rhine after heavy fighting, then advanced two miles to Matzenheim on the road to Colmar.

Says Prisoners Will Not Be Shot

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Nov. 30 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters issued an official statement today making it clear that whatever hostages might be shot at Strasbourg or anywhere else would not be prisoners of war.

The statement did not clarify, however, whether hostages other than prisoners of war might be put to death as a measure of prevention or retribution for any unlawful attacks on Allied troops.

The statement was issued after Maj. Gen. Jacques Leclerc, commander of the French 2d Armored Division, had announced at Strasbourg that five hostages would be shot for every French soldier killed by sniping after occupation of the French city.

Conform To Geneva Pact

The Supreme Headquarters statement said:

"The Allied Expeditionary Force is operating in conformity with the Geneva Convention of 1929, and in particular with Article 2, which states 'measures of reprisal against prisoners of war are prohibited'."

Subparagraph "D" of Paragraph 358 of the rules of land warfare of the United States Army, however, states that "hostages taken and held for the declared purpose of preventing unlawful acts may be punished or put to death."

Although Supreme Headquarters offered no elaboration, it was clear that there was no chance in the hard-fisted policy toward the enemy.

New German General Gets West Front Post

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Paris, Nov. 30 (AP)—Gen. Hermann Balck, 50-year-old armored force veteran, has assumed command of the German Army group on the southern sector of the Western front, according to information at supreme headquarters.

He has succeeded Field Marshal Johannes Blaskowitz, whose present, whereabouts are unknown here.

Regiments In 7th Army Divisions Announced

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Paris, Nov. 30 (AP)—Regiments comprising three infantry divisions in the American 7th Army were made known last night at headquarters.

They are the 71st, 114th and 324th Regiments in the 44th Division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Robert L. Spragins; the 397th, 398th and 399th in the 100th Division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Withers J. Burpress, and the 40th, 410th and 411th in the 103d Division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Charles C. Haffner.

The 13th United States Field Artillery, which has served with the British 1st and 8th Armies, now is with the French 1st Army in the Vosges mountains. It is commanded by Brig. Gen. Carl Bank.

CLEARING SCHELDE WAS BIGGEST JOB

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Paris, Nov. 30 (A. P.).—The clearing of the Schelde Estuary to Antwerp was the largest single minesweeping operation ever undertaken, naval sources here said today. Supply-bearing Allied ships have entered Antwerp's harbor. The port's daily capacity was estimated at from 40,000 to 50,000 tons.

Prime Minister Churchill announced yesterday that the port facilities of Antwerp were being used by the Allies.

U.S. SHIP HELPS OPEN ANTWERP

EVINSON

James B. Weaver Second Vessel Tugged To Dock

Antwerp [AP—Delayed] — An American Liberty ship and a British merchantman led a convoy of Allied oceangoing freighters that spretched across the English Channel into the docks here today and opened the port to use of Allied armies.

The James B. Weaver, with Capt. Jim Sweeny, of Drexel Hill, Pa., at the helm, was the first American ship tugged alongside the concrete docks that stretch for 30 miles around a giant horseshoe-shaped waterway system off Belgium's Schelde River.

Capt. M. C. Van de Carr, one-time American submarine skipper from Norman, Okla., who is in charge of the American docks, said United States Army Transportation Corps freight trains will be leaving for the front from the port.

500-Mile Truck Haul Over

"This cuts a 500-mile truck haul to a 100-mile train ride," the captain said. "It also means the boys who have been losing their anchors on the beaches and fighting cargo over the sides will have real facilities to work with from now on."

Belgian stevedores were unloading new dock equipment from the Weaver and coffee, sugar and pork sausages from another ship we visited.

Helmet-wearing GI's are working side by side with wooden-shoed Belgians, shifting cargoes from the vessels to trains leading directly to the front. The docks employ 8,000 skilled civilian workers and about 10,000 semi-skilled Belgian laborers earning about $100 per month.

British Vessel First In

Actually the first freighter in the docks was the Fort Cataraqui, of the British merchant fleet, which streaked on ahead and broke out a big flag of Belgium just as we tossed our line to a puffing little tug. The Mayor and his party met the Fort Cataraqui and two sailors in a rain-soaked jeep met the Weaver.

Lieut. Com. Barry Bingham, of Louisville, Ky., learned from townspeople that since Germany ran over the Lowlands only two ocean-going ships had entered the Schelde River.

That probably explains the waves from the river bank and the smiles on the faces when our convoy wound into town. Past Walcheren and Beveland islands, we saw farmhouses standing in water that had engulfed their fields since RAF planes broke the dykes to flood out Nazis holding the entrance to the estuary even after this city of 285,000 had fallen.

Belgians Look For Food

The smiling Belgians who greeted the convoy here probably heard of the grain and other foodstuffs Allies ships are bringing in this winter to combat the famine that threatens both Holland and Belgium.

The people here are taking their plight fairly well. Shops have more jewelry, perfume and other likely Christmas presents to offer than London has seen in five years. You can walk inside from a dreary blackout to the glitter of a modern night club where cognac and wines and beer are served by men waiters wearing full dress suits.

19 Americans Freed in Exchange

Pornic, France, Nov. 29 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Fifty-three Allied soldiers, nineteen of them Americans, came back from the gloom of a prison cage in the German-held port of St. Nazaire today in a prisoner exchange.

The exchange means home leave for most of the Americans, the majority of whom were members of the 83rd Infantry Division who were captured early in September.

Four of the Americans were slightly wounded, but all were in high spirits and fair shape.

Sarge Tricks 16 Nazis

With the U.S. 7th Army, Nov. 29 [AP—Delayed]—The neatest trick of the week was pulled by Staff Sergeant Henry Weinberger, of Butternut, Wis., who not only rescued Pfc. Clarence Barringer, of Concord, N.C., from sixteen Germans but helped take all the Germans prisoner.

When Barringer failed to return from patrol, Weinberger organized a search through the thick brush near Hagenau. Suddenly he heard Barringer saying: "Why can't you surrender to me? I can accept as well as an officer."

"No," replied an English-speaking German. "We'll surrender only to an officer. Meanwhile, we are holding you as a hostage."

After a huddle, Weinberger, Sergt. James C. Brown, of Mountain Park, Okla., and Pfc. Robert York, of McKee, Ky., stepped into the group of Germans and demanded that they surrender. Weinberger insisted he was an officer, but the Germans were doubtful until Pfc. Daniel Wilson, of Newport, Del., stepped into the group, saluted and stood at attention.

"He almost sirred me to death," Weinberger said later. "The Germans were convinced, I guess, because they surrendered immediately. But I hope my impersonation of an officer doesn't get me into trouble."

Half Of 'Filthy 13' Returns, Eager For 2d Scrap

Headquarters the U.S. 506th Infantry Regiment, Britain, Nov. 30 (AP)—The "Filthy Thirteen," a fabulous group of American paratroopers who dressed like Indians and spearheaded the Allied invasion of Europe, are back—those that survived.

Actually, the gang numbered seventeen on D-day. Nine did not come back. The eight remaining members—now washed and shaved and lacking the scalplocks that terrified both enemy and Frenchmen in Normandy—are eager for another scrap.

They volunteered for a suicide mission as the 1st Demolition Section, Regimental Headquarters Company, 506 Parachute Infantry Regiment.

Six months before D-day they took a solemn Indian oath that they would neither wash nor shave before completion of their mission—and with razor-sharp knives nicked their fingers and joined their blood in ancient Indian rites.

Then their training began.

They slept on the ground in the open in full battle dress. They fought among themselves with their fists until they dropped from exhaustion.

Leader Killed

Led by Lieut. Charles W. Mellen, 26, of Stanhope, N.J., they were among the first to jump on D-day. Mellen was killed.

"We found his body a few days later," said James B. McNiece, of Ponca City, Okla. "He had bandages on his arm and leg, which showed that the first bullets didn't stop him."

Sergt. Thomas E. (Old Man) Lonegran, 31, of Bakerstown, Pa., section chief who followed Mellen in jumping, was injured in the drop. For fifteen hours he lay buried in brush until the Germans captured him, but he was rescued when the Americans later took the enemy first-aid station.

Ragman There, Too

At the aid station, Lonegran saw another member of the gang, Private Robert S. (Ragman) Cone, 22, of Roxbury, Mass.

Ragman and Corporal John F. (Peanuts) Hale, of Poulsbo, Wash., hit the ground almost simultaneously. A German came between them and was killed. Hale was killed two weeks later trying to destroy an enemy machine-gun nest.

Captured, Then Freed

Private Charles F. (Chuck) Plauda, 20, of Minneapolis, last man out of the plane, said that as he jumped, flak hit 600 pounds of dynamite in the craft. Plauda landed safely and while joining a force attacking a bridge he knocked out a machine-gun nest.

Technician 5/g Andrew F. (Rasputin) Rasmussen, 22, of Westdale, N.Y., and Private Charles (Trigger) Gann, 20, of Birmingham, Ala., dropped together. Rasmussen sprained his ankle. Gann helped him under cover, then went after a sniper. Rasmussen went on alone later until he was wounded by a sniper and captured. He was freed when the Americans liberated Cherbourg.

Technician 5/g George Baran, 20, (no home address given) who was freed at the same time, is still in a general hospital.

Killed At Cherbourg

Private Roland R. (Frenchy) Baribeau, 20, of Springfield, Mass., was killed in action at Cherbourg.

Missing are Private Charles (Purple Shadows) Darnell, 25, of Cartersville, Ga.; Sergt. Charles (Chaplain) Williams, 23, of St. Louis, and Private James E. (La) Leach, of San Francisco.

Private George (Googoo) Rodeka, 25, of Joliet, Ill., was separated from the others.

Have Presidential Citation

Evidence is found today among the survivors that the "Filthy Thirteen" did their job well on D-day. Each wears the Presidential Citation ribbon and most have the Purple Heart.

Others now have filled the vacancies in the unit, but these self-styled Indian fighters are still the same.

They still sleep in their clothes and they are still looking for a fight.

Eisenhower Inspects British

SOMEWHERE IN HOLLAND, Nov. 30 (AP)—General Dwight D. Eisenhower left this sector today after a twenty-four-hour inspection tour of the Canadian 1st Army and British and Polish divisions of the British 2d Army.

Ruhr Workers Instructed

New York, Nov. 30 (AP)—General Eisenhower's spokesman, in a special broadcast reported by CBS today, gave instructions to foreign workers in the Ruhr and Rhineland "on what to do when the Allied armies expel the German army from the area where you work."

The workers were told to go into hiding as the battle approached, leave the town or village where employed but keep off the roads, and if unable to leave to take refuge in an air-raid shelter.

"Tomorrow you will be given instructions on what to do when the Allied armies arrive," the broadcast said.

The instructions do not alter the orders going by "other and secret means" on action to be taken against the enemy, the broadcast added.

Paris Papers Protest New Curb Order

Paris, Nov. 30 (AP)—Paris newspapers, already limited by the Government to single-sheet papers and restricted circulation, protested jointly today against a new order imposing further reductions.

Details of the new order, attributed to a shortage of supplies, were not immediately available. The newspapers said it called for reducing circulatio in some cases and cutting the size of pages in others. The Leftish paper Combat declared it amounted to a 25 per cent. cut in circulation.

The entire Paris press published a statement by the National Press Federation uniformly headlined "a blow against the press."

"If the Minister of Information wants a breach with the press he is assured of having it," Combat declared.

At the same the Ministry was among the supply shortage, the paper said, it was allowing new newspapers to start up and "showing itself incapable of regulating provincial press."

Franco Matches De Gaulle Move

PARIS, Nov. 30 (AP)—Generalissimo Francisco Franco has sent 107 Spanish Civil Guards into Andora to balance the 107 French Gendarmes Gen. Charles de Gaulle assigned there recently as "a preventative measure" against winter disturbances, the newspaper Paris Presse said today. The newspaper said that General Franco matched the French force even to the issuance of 150 cartridges per man.

RUSSIANS EXPAND

HOLD ON DANUBE

Gain Nine Miles in Sweep Along River, Capture Two Strongholds.

LONDON, Friday, Dec. 1—(AP) Russian troops, expanding their new trans-Danube front to more than 100 miles, yesterday swept nine miles northward along the west bank of the great river to within 78 miles of outflanked Budapest and captured 50 more localities, Moscow announced last night.

In the mountains northeast of the besieged Hungarian capital, other Soviet forces blasted open two invasion routes leading into southern Slovakia by capturing the Axis strongholds of Eger and Szikszo, Premier-Marshal Stalin announced in a special order of the day.

Cut Trunk Highway

These troops also cut the Miskolc-Kassa (Kosice) trunk highway and railway connecting the crumbling Axis fronts in northeastern Hungary and Slovakia and further outflanked Miskolc by capturing Arnot, less than three miles northeast of Hungary's besieged Fifth city.

In Czechoslovakia a Third Soviet army attacking on a 30-mile front captured 30 villages in four-mile gains, including Domasa, 20 miles east of Presov; Moraviany, 23 miles east of Kassa, and Zemplin, only seven miles northeast of the big north Hungarian rail center of Satoraljaujhely.

The German high command was reported to have drawn reinforcements from as far away as Italy in a desperate effort to halt Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's Third Ukraine army. Tolbukhin's spearheads in southwestern Hungary have pushed through Pecs, 25 miles west of the Danube and 100 miles southwest of Budapest, to reach a point only about 100 miles from the Austrian frontier.

One Berlin commentator, Col. Ernst Von Hammer, said the Russian forces which had poured across the Danube numbered 20 infantry divisions, two mechanized corps and between five and six tank brigades.

Seek Decision in Hungary

The triple Russian aim was to force a decision in Hungary, invade Austria, and cut off the retreat of more than 100,000 German troops in Yugoslavia.

Striking nine miles north of captured Bataszek one Soviet column yesterday took Ocseny, on the Danube, 78 miles south of Budapest.

Szekszard, two miles from Ocseny, and on the main highway into Budapest, was threatened with early capture.

Seizure of Kakasd put one Soviet column only 45 miles from Lake Balaton, a 46-mile-long body of water whose southwestern tip lies only 38 miles from the Austrian border.

Other villages captured beyond the Danube as the Russians widened their triangular salient included Pecsvarad, 10 miles northeast of Pecs, coal-mining town and Hungary's eighth city taken Wednesday.

The Germans said the Russians had been stopped temporarily two miles west of Pecs, the tip of the Russian-held salient.

Eger, 60 miles northeast of Budapest, fell to units of Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukraine army, part of which is attacking Budapest's southern outskirts from Csepel island in the Danube river.

In the Miskolc sector the Russians seized Bekecs, 18 miles to the east, and Megyaszo, five miles east of Szikszo, where 700 Germans were slain.

Szikszo, nine miles northeast of Miskolc and 94 miles northeast of Budapest, was taken by a Russian column which now was within 21 miles of the Slovakian frontier and 37 miles southwest of Kassa (Kosice), strategic Slovakian road center already menaced by Col. Gen. Ivan Petrov's Fourth Ukraine army attacking from the east. Szikszo is on the Miskolc-Kassa trunk railway and highway.

Reds Seize Eger

The seizure of Eger, a town of 30,000 known as the "Hungarian Rome" because of its numerous ecclesiastical buildings, put the Russians within 25 miles of the Slovakian frontier. They were driving through a valley between the Matra and Bukk mountains.

Moscow dispatches said that at least three German divisions and some separate SS units had been rushed into southwestern Hungary to reinforce that sagging front. The newspaper Pravda said that one of the divisions was a light infantry unit hastily withdrawn from Italy.

REDS ADVANCE NEAR BUDAPEST

Capture Eger, Rail Center —Gain Across Danube

London, Nov. 30 (A. P.).—Russian troops have captured Eger, sixty miles northeast of Budapest in Hungary, Marshal Stalin announced tonight in an order of the day.

Eger is an important station on the Budapest-Miskolc railway and a link in communications through a pass in the Matra Mountains to central Slovakia. Berlin said yesterday that the Russians had broken into the town.

The capture of Szikszo, nine miles northeast of Miskolc and about ninety-five miles northeast of Budapest, also was announced by Stalin, who ordered a Moscow salute of twelve salvos from 124 guns.

Russian and Yugoslav partisan forces thrust forward twenty-five miles west of the Danube in southwestern Hungary today in a huge offensive that has the three-fold possibility of encircling Budapest, driving straight into Austria and of sealing off all Nazi troops in the Balkans.

Premier Stalin in an order of the day yesterday announced the capture of 350 communities in southern Hungary and northern Yugoslavia, confirming the drive about which the German radio has spoken for the last week.

Pecs, coal mining and railway center, ninety-eight miles southwest of Budapest, was seized, as was Mohacs, a like distance directly south of the Hungarian capital and Bataszek, eighty-five miles south of Budapest, Moscow said.

The communique said the drive across the Danube by Marshal Feodor X. Tolbukhin's Third Ukraine Army and Yugoslav nationals was north of the big river's confluence with the Drava, a point 130 miles due south of Budapest. The breakthrough was on a ninety-three-mile front that extended on its northern flank to within thirty-seven miles of the Hungarian capital.

[Marshal Tito in a communique reported by the FCC announced a thirty-one mile advance in the area and said Russian and Partisan troops now were "pursuing the beaten Germans toward the west." The bulletin also listed many Partisan victories inside Yugoslavia.]

Moscow named no captured towns north of Bataszek although the further northward extent of the drive had been implied in the announcement of the width of the bridgehead west of the Danube. Apparently Red Army troops today stood somewhere between the Danube and the north end of Lake Balaton, 100 miles from the Austrian border and 130 miles from Budapest.

Budapest Under Siege

Budapest, meanwhile, was under close siege from the northeast by parts of Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's 2d Ukraine Army. The German radio admitted further losses along that front.

Berlin said the Russians had broken into Eger, 60 miles northeast of Budapest, adjoining the vital Budapest-Miskolc railway and guarding a pass through the Matra Mountains into central Slovakia.

Another Soviet Army, the 4th Ukraine, led by Gen. Ivan Petrov, continued to push its way westward in Slovakia across rain-drenched terrain. Moscow said the flank guards of the 2d and 4th Ukraine Armies already have established contact in the border area north of Miskolc, while Petrov was near to clearing the Dukla Pass into Poland on his northern flank.

AMERICANS LOSE 56 BIG BOMBERS IN RAID ON REICH

Heavy Flak Rips Americans in Attack on Railyards, Oil Refineries.

30 FIGHTERS MISSING

Heaviest Loss Since Last April Sustained by U. S. Air Force.

LONDON, Nov. 30 — (AP) American Fortresses and Liberators, spearheading an attack by nearly 3,000 Allied warplanes on oil refineries and rail yards in Germany, drove into tremendous concentrations of anti-aircraft fire today and suffered their heaviest loss of any recent operation.

Fifty-six U. S. heavy bombers and 30 fighters failed to return to their British bases from the raid, an Eighth Air force communique announced, but the majority of the fighters were believed to have landed in friendly territory.

Greatest Loss Since April

The sky was stained black with thousands of puffs of exploding flak as Nazi ground gunners claimed their biggest toll of the war. Today's was the largest loss in bombers since April when 63 went down over Berlin to combined ack-ack fire and fighter opposition.

The German air force refused to come up in strength and only four enemy interceptors were shot down.

The American phase of the day's big aerial assault was divided into two parts, with Fortresses striking four synthetic oil plants in the Leipzig area and Liberators hitting rail yards in the Saarbrucken region.

The Germans shot clouds of flak into the sky over the oil targets and also sent up a few fighters in this area. The American escort of Thunderbolts and Lightnings kept enemy planes from reaching the bomber formations, however.

Flak over the rail yards, which were bombed by instruments, was officially described as ranging from meager to moderate.

These blows topped a 36-hour aerial offensive which left the Reich erupting from an average of 10 tons of bombs a minute.

In the raids carried out in the Leipzig area, the U. S. bombers rocked over their targets at 25,000 to 30,000 feet. Weather permitted a good view of the oil plants and bombing results were described as "very favorable." Crewmen saw large explosions and fires in the refinery areas.

Blast Nazi Targets

The planes, hitting targets at Bohlen, Zeitz, Merseburg and Lutzkendorf near Leipzig, roared into a 40-mile-square area defended by a concentration of heavy anti-aircraft guns twice the density of that guarding Berlin. It is perhaps the most heavily defended area of its size in the world.

In one five-mile radius American crewmen touched a corner of hell as an estimated 225 ack ack guns pumped up what veterans described as "a solid wall of flak."

"Flak burst in a mass—a forest of it so dense that we could only get occasional glimpses of the fortresses formations just ahead of us," said Sgt. Kirk O. Wels, 24-year-old radio operator from Brainerd, Minn.

"It was a solid wall at the target and it lasted until we passed out of the area," related Capt. Joseph Y. Trapnell, Baltimore, Md., a lead pilot.

"Smoke from the target area rose 10,000 feet into the sky." Said Capt. Robert H. Kanaga, Harbor Beach, Mich., a Mustang pilot who confirmed accuracy of the bombing despite the screen of flak.

Nearly 22,000 tons of explosives were spread over Germany in the day and a half scourging by 11,000 planes which flew on seven major missions and some 4,000 sorties in support of the six Allied armies advancing on the Western front.

The wind-up blows made November the greatest operational winter month of the war.

Hit Oil Plants

Almost 1,300 Fortresses and Liberators of the U. S. Eighth air force herded by 1,000 fighters, today hurled 4,000 tons of bombs at the synthetic oil plants at Bohlen, Zeitz, Merseburg and Lutzkendorf, all in the Leipzig area, 100 miles southwest of Berlin.

Railway yards crowded with supplies for Nazi frontline troops also were pounded in the Saarbrucken region, directly in the path of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third army.

While the American armada was visiting the four oil centers—which normally produce about 90,000 tons of fuel a month—a force of R.A.F. Mosquitos and another of Lancasters escorted by Spitfires bombed three gasoline plants in the Ruhr.

First reports on the American raids said intense flak blotted the sky over the targets but no enemy fighters were encountered.

Weather permitted visual bombing at Merseburg, home of the sprawling Leuna refinery and scene of great air battles in the past. For the first time in clear weather, the Luftwaffe was not ordered up, indicating the plant may be so badly mauled that the Nazis do not care to sacrifice more of their planes trying to defend it.

Critical fuel for German armor opposing the United States 1st and 9th armies and the British 2d was turned into a flaming mass at a big distillation works in the Meiderich district of Duisburg. Mosquitos, escorted by Mustangs, unloaded 2-ton bombs in clear weather over the targets and smoke was spiralling 10,000 feet into the sky before they left.

Hamm Attacked

The heavyweight Lancasters struck concentrated blows through clouds, on gasoline plants near Oberhausen and Bottrop.

Yesterday more than 2,000 American warplanes pounded the rail hub of Hamm and the natural oil plant at Misburg.

British Mosquitos struck Hannover with two-ton blockbusters in a night attack and later another group bombed Duisburg in the first daylight Mosquito operation in a year.

Four-engined Lancasters dumped explosives on Essen and Neuss in the Ruhr and another force of the RAF heavies later bombed Dortmund, also in the Ruhr.

The United States 8th Air Force alone sent its Fortresses and Liberators on 13,900 trips during November.

41,800 Tons Dropped

On nineteen operations—more than the combined total for November, 1943 and 1942—British-based United States heavies scattered an estimated 41,800 tons of bombs on German targets. Thirteen of them were aimed at Germany's oil plants.

The 8th's fighters swarmed out on 11,500 sorties, destroying 451 German planes, and wrecking mountains of supplies by strafing. Bombers shot down 70 more enemy craft.

British Typhoons, Beaufighters and Spitfires hit a variety of targets today.

The Beaufighters attacked enemy shipping near the Frisian Islands off Holland, and damaged a heavily escorted convoy of about twenty ships making a dash out of the harbor of Den Helder.

The Spitfires dive-bombed rocket bomb sites in Holland through intense flak.

The Typhoons destroyed a Nazi headquarters in the heart of Rotterdam. Other planes poured more than 140 rockets into a castle in a forest near Wasselburg.

LEIPZIG TARGETS BLASTED IN RAID

London, Nov. 30 (A. P.).—The sixth and seventh blows in a forty-eight-hour offensive by probably 11,000 bombers were struck today against seven German fuel plants and the Saarbrucken railroad yards.

Almost 1,300 Fortresses and Liberators with a 1,000-fighter escort smashed at four synthetic refineries in the Leipzig area and the Saarbrucken yards eight miles ahead of the American Third Army.

British Mosquito and four-engined Lancaster bombers attacked three benzol plants near Oberhausen, Bottrop and Duisburg in the Ruhr.

Headquarters of United States Strategic Air Forces in Europe said oil plants at Bohlen, Merseburg, Zeitz and Lutzkendorf, about 100 miles southwest of Berlin, were hit by the waves of Fortresses and Liberators.

Others jarred the industrial capital of the Saar mining area, Saarbrucken, eight miles in front of the American Third Army.

The great daylight raid by the heavy bombers equaled the mightest single effort of the American Eighth Air Force.

A few hours earlier one of the largest United States bomber fleets seen in weeks had rumbled away from British bases and headed east.

The daylight raid followed another jab by British Mosquito bombers, which unloaded two-ton blockbusters on Hannover last night. This rounded out four big bomber operations in a 24-hour period.

Seven Plans Lost

Four-engined Lancasters were out before dawn yesterday with tons of explosive for Essen and Neuss in the Ruhr. Mosquitos set sirens howling at Duisburg shortly after noon. Then other Lancasters smashed at Dortmund, also in the Ruhr. The four raids cost the British six bombers and one fighter.

More than 1,000 American bombers and more than 1,000 fighters returned from heavy assaults on Hamm and Misburg, with a loss of four bombers.

Allied air forces flew more than 2,000 fighter and medium bomber trips into Germany and northern Holland yesterday.

Bridges Hit

Direct bomb hits were claimed by British medium bomber crews on Ijssel River railroad bridges at Zwolle and Deventer, in northern Holland.

Spitfire and Rocket Typhoons exploded a German Army headquarters in a castle near Kleve in the Reichwald Forest.

American Thunderbolts, Marauders and Havocs splattered eighteen German villages occupied by Nazi troops ahead of the American armies from Geilenkirchen down to Strasbourg.

90 U. S. Airplanes Are Lost In Raids

London, Nov. 30 (AP)—American Fortresses and Liberators spearheaded an attack by nearly 3,000 Allied planes on German oil refineries and rail yards today, and 56 United States heavy bombers and 30 fighters failed to return to their bases in England, the 8th Air Force announced. Many of the fighters, however, are believed to have landed in friendly territory.

Intense concentrations of anti-aircraft fire which were met accounted for most of the losses. The German air force was not up in strength and only four enemy interceptors were shot down.

Three United States Marauder medium bombers and one American fighter also were lost in operations of the Tactical Air Forces supporting ground troops.

Today's heavy bomber loss was the largest since April when 63 went down over Berlin to combined ack-ack fire and fighter opposition.

U.S. TRADE AID

America to Help Ally Pull Out of Wartime Financial Slump.

LONDON, Nov. 30—(AP) American aid for Britain's bid to recover her farflung, war-sacrificed export trade was disclosed by Prime Minister Churchill today together with the announcement that Lend-Lease aid to this island-empire will be cut in half when Germany falls.

Jubilantly announcing an Anglo-American economic arrangement on the future of Lend-Lease apparently designed to help Britain pull out of its financial slump, the Prime Minister made these points:

To Export U. S. Articles

1—A new program will be inaugurated next year to permit Britain to export articles made from American-imported raw materials.

2—Britain will pay cash for that material.

3—Defeat of Germany would permit Britain—along with the United States—to release some of its manpower for production of civilian goods.

4—Britain anticipates American aid in its rehousing program, not only in raw material but in finished houses.

In a statement which Commons has been anxiously awaiting, Churchill declared that Britain gave up its export trade "in the extremity of our emergency," but added that it was a sacrifice "without which we cannot live in the future."

Winning the plaudits of the House with his detailed statement on this joint Anglo-American agreement, just two days after Britain issued a White Paper to tell the world of its vast, war-necessitated financial sacrifices, the Premier said:

"The end of the war with Germany will make possible large reductions in some of our requirements. We expect our needs will be met by a program at a rate not much more than half of what we have been receiving in 1944."

U. S. to Reduce Lend-Lease

"The defeat of Germany," he said flatly, "will make possible reductions in the Lend-Lease program, and in certain fields we have been able to anticipate those changes and to work on the basis of the new program from the beginning of 1945.

"Thus from that date, we shall no longer get shipments to this country, under Lend-Lease, of any articles for civilian manufacture for civilian use which enter into export trade nor of many raw and semi-fabricated materials such as iron and steel and some non-ferrous metals."

(Under the terms of the Lend-Lease White Paper drafted in Sept. 1941, Britain agreed it would not export Lend-Lease articles, nor articles manufactured from Lend-Lease material).

"Consequently," said Churchill, "we shall then be free to export a wide array of goods made from those materials. Naturally we have not used in export and do not propose to use any critically scarce materials except where the export is essential to the effective prosecution of the war."

This apparently left the door open for Britain to export goods made from American Lend-Lease materials to Allied countries engaged in the war against Germany and Japan.

But, repeatedly, he emphasized that—even after Germany's defeat—Britain's exports will be subjected to "those inevitable limitations dictated by the needs of the war against Japan."

Churchill Reveals Terms of Trade Agreement With Washington

DEC 1 1944

PREPARED TO BUY FOR CASH

Prime Minister Says British Would Purchase Goods Intended for Re-export From England.

London, Nov. 30 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Churchill revealed today a far-reaching British-American trade arrangement whereby, after the defeat of Germany, lend-lease would be cut in half but Britain would pay cash for American materials intended for eventual re-export from England.

Hammering home Britain's necessity for, and intention of, rebuilding her largely vanished export trade, the Prime Minister told Commons that "it is no part of the lend-lease act to provide general relief, or to provide for post-war reconstruction or to aid our export trade."

"We shall pay cash for any additional supplies we may wish to take from the United States for export purposes," he declared.

He added that the removal of uncertainties should make it possible for exporters to lay plans now with assurance that they could become effective after the war with Germany ends.

Hope to Cut Lend-lease Aid.

Mr. Churchill said that after Germany's defeat England hoped to be able tocut the lend-lease inflow from America by about half.

Churchill said also that his statement had been agreed to almost sentence by sentence by our American colleagues. Therefore he declined to expand on it when questioned.

The House cheered when he said he considered "the statement I have made is one of a highly satisfactory nature."

"Never has there been a more thorough understanding of the facts of the economic position and the problems of Great Britain and the United States of America on both sides than we have now been able to reach," Mr. Churchill said.

"Lend-lease—that very great act—has stood us and our Allies in good stead and we have never asked nor expected any assistance which is not strictly within its terms and provisions," the Premier declared.

Arrangements already had been made in Washington, he said, as to "what the American administration feel it is proper and right for us to have in accordance with the terms" of the act. He added:

"The end of the war with Germany will make possible large reductions in some of our requirements. We expect our needs will be met by a program at a rate not much more than half of what we have been receiving in 1944. All of these supplies and services will be exclusively for the joint war effort against the common enemy."

Called a Defense Act.

Mr. Churchill reminded the House that lend-lease was an act which "was for the defense of the United States and is strictly limited to what is necessary for the most effective prosecution of the war by the United States and its allies.

"The prolongation of the war into what will be for us the sixth and seventh year means that certain improvements are essential if our national economy is to be as fully effective as possible for the prosecution of the war," Mr. Churchill said.

"Fatigue and abstinence carried too far and endured too long can impede the effectiveness of a people at war at least as much as a more sensational form of privation.

"After the defeat of Germany, some release of man power to increase the supplies available for essential civilian consumption must follow in due course, and some improvements in the standards and variety of national diet."

Mr. Churchill said that Britain also must make a serious effort to rebuild the export trade "which we deliberately gave up in the extremity of our emergency but without which we cannot live in the future."

Churchill Grateful.

The Prime Minister expressed "our very great appreciation of the practical sympathy with which the realities of the situation have been examined (in Washington) and of the results which have been achieved."

"I may remind the House," he said, "that it is no part of the lend-lease act to provide general relief, or to provide for post-war reconstruction or to aid our export trade. That great act has stood us and our Allies in good stead and we have neither asked nor expected any assistance which is not strictly within its terms and provisions."

Declaring that "the defeat of Japan must still continue to have the first call on our resources," Mr. Churchill added that following the defeat of Germany, exports would then be subject only to those inevitable limitations "dictated by the needs of the war against Japan."

"There is not and never has been," he said, "any question of re-exporting in commerce any articles we have received under lend-lease, nor in general shall we receive in this country under lend-lease finished articles identical with those we export.

Will Pay Cash for Supplies.

"All such articles will be paid for by us. Where we continue to receive any raw materials the quantities supplied under lend lease are limited to our domestic consumption, for the manufacture of munitions and the maintenance of our essential wartime economy. We shall pay cash for any additional supplies we may wish to take from the United States for export purposes."

Emanuel Shinwell, Laborite, asked Mr. Churchill whether Britain would have to pay for raw materials imported from the United States would take in return goods exported from this country.

The Prime Minister gave no direct answer. He said that the question was valid, but that "everything I said in this statement was agreed to almost sentence by sentence by our American colleagues." He therefore asked Mr. Shinwell to put the question to him again "after reading the paper either tomorrow or the next day."

The implication was that there would be some further statement in London or Washington.

Britain's Trade And American Aid

U.S. To End Iron, Steel War Aid To Britain

Washington, Nov. 30 (AP)—The United States plans to halt lend-lease shipments of iron and steel to Britain January 1. This means a drastic downward revision of the war-aid program for 1945.

It was announced officially today in a statement summing up lengthy British-American lend-lease conferences just concluded here and which resulted in a $5,600,000,000 program for shipments to Britain during 1945—a cut of almost 50 per cent under comparable figures for this year.

British Demands Drop

Elimination of cost-free shipments of steel and some other "raw and semi-fabricated materials" to Britain is made possible by decreasing war demands on Britain's own steel industry, it was learned.

It has been ordered into effect January 1 in order to smooth the way for reconversion of British industry to civilian production on an "equitable basis" with reconversion in this country. The British are anxious to reconvert in order to begin restoring their 71 per cent loss in exports.

The principle of "equitable" reconversion was worked out for the first time in these conferences, headed by Lord Keynes, British economist, and Harry White, American Treasury expert.

May Relax Controls

It is taken to mean that the British may relax their war production controls and shift their production capacity where they can on a basis of equality with the United States, and that lend-lease arrangements from now to the war's end will not deny them that opportunity.

Acting Secretary of State Stettinius, Treasury Secretary Morgenthau and Leo T. Crowley, foreign economic administrator, jointly announced the new schedule.

Their statement distinguished between lend-lease and postwar foreign trade relations of the United States and Britain which are still to be determined. The Keynes-White committee, it said, did not "enter into the review" of trade problems.

Policies Unchanged

The statement promised no change in the fundamental policies that lend-lease is a wartime system only and that no article which Britain receives under lend-lease may be re-exported.

"After the defeat of Germany," it continued, "there will be no impediment to the United Kingdom's exporting articles, so far as war conditions permit, which are no longer supplied under lend-lease and are obtained out of their own production or purchased from this country for cash.

"To some degree, lend-lease aid for the United Kingdom will be reduced even before the defeat of Germany. It is now expected that some raw and semi-fabricated materials, such as iron and steel, will no longer be provided by the United States to the United Kingdom under lend-lease after January 1, 1945."

Change In Plan Unlikely

(Officials commenting on this said that only some revolutionary change in the war situation could prevent this from going into effect.)

"This (cut) will have the effect," said the joint statement, "under terms of the White Paper itself, of removing products made from such materials from limitations that will continue to apply to articles received under lend-lease."

The White Paper was a formal statement of British Government policy against re-exporting any article received under lend-lease. The present declaration means that if the British want to obtain American goods for export or other commercial purposes they must pay cash since at present there is no private or public credit arrangement set up.

Churchill Is 70 Years Old

DEC 1 1944

London, Nov. 30 (AP) — Winston Churchill, 70 years old today, was greeted with a roaring cheer when he entered the House of Commons to follow his usual custom of putting in a full day's work on his birthday.

"Seventy not out"—an extremely good score in cricket—was the personal greeting given the Prime Minister by 87-year-old Laborite Will Thorne, the oldest member of Commons.

In High Good Humor

Churchill wore a deep red rose in his buttonhole and appeared in high good humor as various members came up to congratulate him.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Secretary for Air, and Clement R. Attlee, Deputy Prime Minister, were among the first to give the Premier a handshake and backslap.

A "70-years-young" label was given Churchill by the Sydney Morning Herald, which said his "flair for living dangerously" had made him the one leader who could inspire the world during the dark days of the war. London's papers also were full of praise and congratulations for the Prime Minister.

Comment From Nazis

Even the Nazis took notice. Helmet Suendermann, deputy press chief, wrote about Churchill in today's Voelkischer Beobachter under the title "We Accuse." A DNB broadcast of the article included these words:

"Churchill once said there was no chance for him in a peaceful England, in a calm atmosphere. He was a fighter."

British Paper Names 2 Liners Sunk in 1942

London, Nov. 30 (AP) — The Daily Mail said today the 20,000-ton liner Viceroy of India was sunk by a German submarine in the Atlantic in November, 1942, while carrying troops from the U. S. to England.

The paper printed two photographs of the stricken vessel taken from a rescue ship, but no details were given.

The paper also told of the sinking of the 20,000-ton Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of Atholl in October, 1942, en route from the Near East to Britain with 826 persons, many of them women and children.

The passengers abandoned the torpedoed craft in 21 lifeboats without panic, the newspaper said. The submarine surfaced and its commander gave the Nazi salute to the lifeboat occupants. His answer was a burst of laughter from the children and a "V" salute from the men and women.

Last Feb. 18 the War Dept. told of the sinking at some earlier date in European waters of a big transport with the loss of half the 2,000 troops aboard. This may have been the Viceroy of India.

Last May 1, another War Dept. announcement reported the sinking of a ship in the Mediterranean with the loss of 498 military personnel. This was probably the Duchess of Atholl.

Viceroy Of India Lost In African Landings

Washington, Nov. 30 (AP)—The War Department said today that the Viceroy of India, which London announced had been lost in 1942, was one of the Allied ships sunk during the North African landings.

At that time the vessel was identified only as an "Allied ship." It went down after being torpedoed at a point near Oran. The department said there was no substantial loss of life in the sinking. The Viceroy of India, a British vessel, was used to transport American troops from England to the North African shore.

NEW GOVERNMENT FORMED BY EXILED POLES IN LONDON

LONDON, Nov. 30—(AP) Tomasz Arciszewski, 68-year-old socialist, assumed leadership of a new Polish government in London today with a pledge to "spare no effort" toward a lasting understanding between the Polish republic and Russia.

But he declared this understanding should be "in accordance with the principles of international life fixed in the Atlantic charter, and with a view to safeguarding the most vital interests of the two neighboring countries."

Diplomats interpreted this to mean the Poles again were making clear they expected the help of Britain and the United States in forcing a rapproachment with Russia, and were holding the Atlantic charter out as a reminder.

Arciszewski succeeds Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, who resigned as Prime Minister when he could not persuade his cabinet to accept Russian proposals for settling the dispute between the two governments.

The new cabinet does not include a single representative of Mikolajczyk's peasant party—the strongest in Poland—but the peasant party in a statement tonight declared it would "support sincerely" the legal Polish government, and make every effort toward building a strong, free, Democratic Poland.

Arciszewski, who became president-designate of the Polish government in London last May after escaping from Poland, did not expand his statement on an understanding with Russia, or what he proposed to do.

Arciszewski said his government would "take advantage of all the experience and achievements" of Mikolajczyk and that "fidelity to alliances and international agreements will continue to be the leading principle of Polish policy."

"In particular, this policy will be based on our alliance with Great Britain," he said.

The new cabinet was announced by President Wladyslaw Raczkiewicz.

London Poles appeared optimistic over the composition of the new government, which included four socialists, two national democrats and two christian democrats. The only member retained from the Mikolajczyk cabinet was Lt. Gen. Marian Kukiel, minister of national defense.

Allied diplomats, however, remained pessimistic. Without peasant party representation in the government, they believed little could be accomplished toward unity.

Narciszewski said the new government was pledged to rebuild Poland as "a political and social democracy in the fullest sense of this term." Measures to be submitted to the president for his signature, he said will include an electoral law to secure universal, equal, secret and direct voting; promulgation of laws guaranteeing the fundamental rights and liberties of all citizens; legislative measures for carrying out agrarian reform.

NEW GOVERNMENT FORMED BY POLES

London, Nov. 30 (A. P.).—President Wladyslaw Raczkiewicz announced today that a new Polish Government had been formed with a 68-year-old Tomasz Arciszewski as premier.

Other members of the cabinet are Adam Tarnowski, Minister of Foreign Affairs; Zygumunt Berezowski, interior; Jan Kwapinski, Industries, Commerce and Shipping; Dr. Bronislaw Kusnierz, Justice. Dr. Adam Pragier, Information and Documentation; Dr. Wladyslaw Folkierski, Minister for the Peace Conference, and Stanislaw Sopicki, Reconstruction of Public Administration.

The president entrusted the new premier with the portfolio of Labor and Social Welfare.

Kwapinski was also placed in charge of the Ministry of Finance. Dr. Folkierski was given the additional portfolio of the Ministry of Education and Religious Affairs. Lieut.-Gen. Marian Kukiel was retained as Minister of National Defense.

The new cabinet was sworn in last night. A Polish spokesman said that the new government's statement of policy would probably be announced later today.

The Peasant party is not represented in the new cabinet, which is composed of National Democrats, Christian Democrats and Socialists.

Churchill Exonerates Labor In Shell Lack

London, Nov. 30 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill told British labor in a letter to one of its leaders today "there is no ground for suggesting that there has been the slightest slackening of effort" in British war plants.

British workers had complained they felt they were included in a statement by President Roosevelt citing a shell shortage resulting from movement of some industrial workers, from war factories to secure postwar jobs.

"On behalf of the trades union council, Sir Walter Citrine has written to the Prime Minister drawing attention to statements made by President Roosevelt and General Eisenhower about the shell shortage confronting American troops," said an explanatory note accompanying a copy of Churchill's letter to Citrine.

Jeeps And Cannon Parachuted Down

DEC 1 1944

London, Nov. 30 (AP)—Jeeps and six-pound cannon were dropped to British airborne troops in parachutes soon after D-day landings in France, it was disclosed tonight.

The jeeps and guns were in action against the Germans less than two hours after they left England in Halifax bombers.

Special crates devised by British engineers, complete with shock absorbers, prevented damage to the cargo on landing, though they hit the ground at sixteen miles an hour.

Four 'chutes of 60-foot diameter, or twelve of 32-foot diameter, were hooked to the gun or jeep. Each load weighed almost two tons, counting the container. Another attachment kept the crate horizontal during the descent.

Automatic release gear made the parachutes fall clear of land and prevented damage by shock in case of a heavy wind.

London, Friday, Dec. 1 (AP)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle has arrived in Russia, the Moscow radio announced tonight, where he will discuss with Premier Stalin the fate of Germany after the war and a new French-Soviet pact.

Yesterday he went to Stalingrad and continued toward Moscow by rail.

Cong. Luce and Committee Arrive in France on Tour

SINGLETON

House Military Committee Male Members Discuss 'Stop Luce Publicity.'

LONDON, Nov. 30—(AP) The publicity-shy House Military Committee shoved off for France today with its male members wondering how they could combat Clare Boothe Luce's penchant for hitting the headlines.

The 17-member delegation reached Paris this afternoon.

To the battlefields of the continent they carried a feud of their own. The smoldering resentment of several representatives about two episodes of their stay in Britain, both involving Mrs. Luce, threatened momentarily to disturb the serenity of their mission.

Mrs. Luce first upset the masculine equanimity in connection with a "gentlemen's agreement"—in the words of acting chairman Matt Merritt (D-N.Y.)—to let a spokesman issue all the statements during the committee's inspection tour.

The comely Connecticut lawmaker was reported to have declared the Army had ordered her not to talk. This, the Army denied. Then Mrs. Luce had a few words to say about the current cigarette shortage. She was against it.

But the annoyance within the committee turned to something near to open anger yesterday. She abandoned the committee temporarily for a short flight in a Fortress while her colleagues plodded through the mud on an inspection tour of three air bases.

This cut the other committee members to the congressional quick.

Merritt said he hadn't been consulted about Mrs. Luce's independent sortie.

Near Crisis

Hours later, a correspondent's request to accompany the committee and cover its activities precipitated a near crisis. Supreme Headquarters, which had been consulted earlier, had said okay provided the committee agreed.

"It's their party," said a SHAEF spokesman.

"This places upon us the full responsibility for deciding whether you can go along with us," said one committeeman.

"It's buck passing," said another.

"We'll have to have a committee meeting," said the first.

Into executive session went the committee—all of them except Mrs. Luce.

Her travelling companion, a WAC lieutenant colonel, said Mrs. Luce was tired out. Attaches aboard the committee's special train said she was ill.

In the hour-long executive session behind closed doors—on the responsibility of the usual "reliable Congressional authority"—the chief issue under discussion was the Stop Luce publicity drive.

Out of the session came this decision—the committee is "perfectly willing to have any person or persons accompany the committee who are acceptable to and designated by the theater commander."

So, as it stands now, the committee will take along a correspondent if SHAEF insists upon it. Or vice versa.

The situation wasn't improved yesterday when, independently, Mrs. Luce sallied forth on a short flight in a Flying Fortress while her male colleagues remained grounded, plodding through the mud for their inspection of three American air bases. She rejoined the party several hours later in time to welcome some bombers home from their mission to Germany.

Representative Matt Merritt (D.-N. Y.), acting chairman, said that he had had nothing to do with the flight—that he had not been consulted.

"I thought," observed another Representative, "that we were going to stick together on this trip. Maybe we've got two investigations here, one for Mrs. Luce and one for the rest of the committee."

The Plot Thickens.

Into these troubled waters stepped an Associated Press correspondent with a request to accompany the committee and report its activities. Supreme Headquarters had approved, subject, however, to a request from the committee. "It's their party," explained a spokesman for the Army.

For the Congressmen—keenly conscious about publicity but coy about making a play for it—this proved a minor crisis. "We'll have to have a committee meeting," they said.

So, into executive session went the committee—all except Mrs. Luce. Her traveling companion, a WAC lieutenant-colonel, explained that she was tired out.

So It's Up in the Air.

The meeting lasted an hour, in the course of which—take it on the strength of the usual "reliable congressional authority"—there was plenty of storm about the publicity issue. The committee turned the decision back to the Army with this resolution:

"It is the purpose of this committee that we are present in the ETO (European Theater of Operations) for the purpose of visiting and inspecting the military establishments, stations and fronts, to secure information useful to the Congress of the United States; further, that we are perfectly willing to have any person or persons, accompany the committee who are acceptable to and designated by the theater commander."

The situation as the committee left today for France was left thus: The committee will take along a correspondent if headquarters insists upon it, or/and headquarters will approve a correspondent accompanying the group if the committee insists upon it.

L'Affaire Luce Is Now a Feud

House Committee Members in Stormy Row Over Her Capturing the Headlines.

London, Nov. 30 (A. P.).—Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce and her male fellow members of the roving House Committee on Military Affairs are feuding over publicity. Several are annoyed because the Connecticut Republican—in point of service the committee's "freshman"—has received most of the headlines since the beginning of their tour which is to include a visit to the battlefront.

CONGRESS PARTY SEES CHERBOURG ACTIVITY

PARIS, Nov. 30 (AP)—Seventeen members of the United States House Military Affairs Committee began to get a first-hand picture of American military operations in France today by visiting the area where shiploads of supplies are arriving.

In Cherbourg they tramped around rehabilitated dock installations an dtalked with scores of GI's and officers.

"We saw a lot fo activity and everything seems to be going fine at this end," said acting Chairman Matthews Merritt, New York Democrat.

The Representatives arrived in Cherbourg from Britain, where they have been inspecting military installations and air bases. They are scheduled to visit another major port tomorrow, weather permitting, and then to come to Paris for a general briefing in all phases of continental military operations.

SULLIVAN HONORED

London, Nov. 30 (A. P.).—Commodore William A. Sullivan, chief of naval salvage for the United States Navy, has been awarded the Honorary Commander Order of the British Empire for skillful handling of American and British salvage forces during the African, Sicilian and Salerno operations.

Commodore Sullivan, now on the staff of Rear Admiral John Wilkes, commander of United States ports and bases in France, was in charge of salvage work on the French liner Normandie, renamed the United States Lafayette.

The British citation was for work on harbors at Bizerte, Palermo and Naples.

His home is at 30 Fifth avenue, New York city.

GETS BRITISH D. S. C.

London, Nov. 30 (A. P.).—Lieut. George Clark, 25-year-old Coast Guard Reserve officer, has been awarded the British Distinguished Service Cross for the rescue of personnel from a burning British ship on D day. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clark of Hilltop Road, Bronxville, N. Y., and before enlisting in December, 1942, was employed by a water purification firm in Belleville, N. J.

"There was very grave danger from the mass of burning oil on the water," the citation said. "Lieut. Clark did not hesitate to steer the ship into the flames and was able to make some very courageous rescues."

ASKS WESTERN OUTPOSTS

Hore-Belisha Urges Security Compact in Europe

LONDON, Nov. 30 (AP)—Leslie Hore-Belisha, former Secretary of State for War, urged the House of Commons today to consider "an offer by Belgium to give us some kind of strategic outposts and economic outposts as well, similar to those we gave the United States in the West Indies."

Britain must "have regard to our flank on the Continent," he said. "Do not our past experiences show that we cannot stand aloof from the organization of western Europe?"

This brought openly onto the floor the proposal for a compact linking the western European countries for security.

"It is sometimes suggested that any advocacy of economic, political or strategic unity in western Europe is a threat to Russia," Mr. Hore-Belisha said.

"There should be no such thought in our minds and if that thought exists in the minds of the Russians it can easily be removed. There is nothing more challenging in our desire to organize the strength of the nations on our flanks than there is in Russia's organizing the nations on her flanks."

PRESS CENSORSHIPS TO EASE WITH V-E DAY

LONDON, Nov. 30 (AP)—Relaxed press censorship, both in Britain and the United States, will become effective the day Germany is beaten. British press representatives already have approved the proposed revisions.

Admiral G. P. Thomson, chief press censor, made this known here today and Byron Price, director of United States censorship, said in Washington his office had been working on a revision.

The regulations would be confined to military and naval security matters and would operate until Japan is defeated.

Press censorship inside Britain, as well as within the United States, has been voluntary, but ninety-five British defense orders were drafted by the censorship to protect security. The new British code has been reduced to about forty orders.

Postal security censorship would continue in the interim war period.

Charles Manship, Baton Rouge, La., publisher, who has been serving in London as American liaison between Mr. Price and the British censorship, said his task was fairly well completed. A United States censorship liaison will continue here, however, he said, with military and naval attachés handling most of the work.

Revise Censorship After Germany Falls

Washington, Nov. 30 (A. P.).—Director of Censorship Byron Price said today that his office has been working on a revision of the news censorship code to be put into effect after German surrenders.

"We had a meeting yesterday with the Newspapers Advisory Council to consider what press censorship will be necessary after the fall of Germany," he added.

Nothing definite on the extent of the revision has been decided as yet, however, he said.

English Strong Man Enjoys Needlework

London, Nov. 30 (AP)—Gunner John Callaghan, of the Royal Artillery, reputed one of England's strongest men, can punch a six-inch nail into wood five inches thick with his bare hands. He can bend iron bars on his neck and lets 16 men tug at a rope around his head. His hobby is needlework.

"People always associate rowdyism with strength," says Callaghan. "I like needlework because it's peaceful and gives me a mental tonic."

Death Toll Put at 59 In British Depot Blast

London, Nov. 30 (AP)—Air Secretary Sinclair told Parliament today that latest information indicated 59 persons were killed or presumed killed in the bomb depot explosions near Burton-on Trent in Staffordshire Monday.

He said "there is no reason to think that the explosion was due to enemy action." A German broadcast asserted it might have been caused by a "V weapon."

"the total loss of bombs an 4,000 tons, no more dropped in a single raid any."

Sweden Ousts Former Gestapo Chief In Finland

Stockholm, Nov. 30 (AP)—Hans Metzger, former German press attache and Gestapo chief in Helsinki, left Sweden today at the request of the Swedish Government, the newspaper Aftonbladet reported.

After the Finns broke with the Germans Metzger came to Stockholm from Finland and set up a recruiting office in the Grand Hotel with a staff of twelve. Aftonbladet said he arranged for Nazi-minded Swedes to fight alongside the Germans against the Russians in Norway.

YANKS DRIVEN FROM 2 POINTS

Germans In Italy Recapture

Defense Positions

Rome, Nov. 30 (AP)—German troops, lashing out in vicious counterattacks against Americans pressing on Bologna, have recaptured two important heights overlooking Nazi defense positions, the Allied command disclosed today.

One blow behind strong artillery and mortar fire drove 5th Army troops from Monte Cassellaro, 9½ miles southeast of Bologna, but the Americans held at near-by Monte Grande, a higher peak.

Corona Village Lost

The strongest German blow was driven in farther west, 28 miles southwest of Bologna, and forced the Americans from recently won Monte Belvedere and the village of Corona.

An initial Nazi surge there with about one infantry battalion was smashed, but the enemy struck again with two battalions supported by tanks, self-propelled guns, mortar and rocket launchers. The United States troops fell back to other prepared positions in this mud-bound sector.

Indian Troops Take 2 Villages

Other inconclusive clashes broke out west of Monte Cassellaro along the 5th Army are below Bologna.

On the 5th Army's right an Indian division occupied the village of Casola Valsenio and Monte Fortino, southwest of Imola.

Troops of the British 8th Army repulsed a bitter German counterattack in the Alberto area northeast of Faenza, killing 40 enemy troops. Hard fighting continued there. The 8th Army is slowly forging an assault ring around Faenza, stronghold astride Highway Nine, 28 miles southeast of Bologna.

Nazis Retake 3 Fifth Army Positions

Rome, Nov. 30 (AP)—Uncorking their strongest counterattacks in recent weeks, German troops have recaptured three 5th Army strong points in the sector southeast and southwest of Bologna, Allied headquarters announced today.

30.24— 20829

Fifth Army troops were forced to relinquish their hold on Monte Castellaro, just north of Monte Grande, in the area below the Bologna-Rimini highway town of Castel san Pietro.

Farther west in the difficult mountain country west of the Bologna-Pistoia highway the Germans recaptured Corona and Monte Belvedere.

Forced To Pull Back

The battle for Corona and Monte Belvedere was the most violent of the entire front and put an end to the period of uneasy waiting in that area.

The Germans first launched two counterattacks with about one infantry battalion. Both were repulsed. Later they renewed the attack with two battalions and a covering force of tanks, self-propelled guns and mortars, as well as rocket launchers.

The 5th Army troops in the face of the new assault were forced to pull back to prepared positions, headquarters said.

Important To Germans

The counterattacks at Monte Castellaro also were supported by a heavy concentration of artillery and mortar fire. This position, nine miles southeast of Bologna, is important to the Germans for the defense arc they have set up around the city.

Monte Grande, dominating feature of the area, was still in Allied hands, however.

There were a number of smaller scale clashes west of Monte Castellaro.

The Germans also resumed their nuisance air raids against the Florence-Bologna highway sector, sending over planes singly or in groups of two or three and dropping antipersonnel bombs and strafing.

The 8th Army, still engaged in heavy fighting in the Albereto area northeast of the Bologna-Rimini highway stronghold of Faenza, drove back a determined German counterattack.

BONOMI TO FORM NEW ITALIAN RULE

BRIA

ROME, Nov. 30 — (AP) Crown Prince Umberto has entrusted to Ivanhoe Bonomi, who resigned as premier, the task of forming another government, it was announced officially tonight.

Bonomi later said he would consult with the leaders of the six political parties in an attempt to form a new cabinet.

"I do not know whether I will be able to form a cabinet," Bonomi said. "At present there are three parties against me and three are willing to come into a government headed by me."

Bonomi identified the parties supporting him as the Liberals, Christian Democrats and the Labor Democrats, with the Communists, Socialists and Actionists against him.

(Announcement of Umberto's request that Bonomi make the new attempt followed an earlier unconfirmed Rome radio broadcast heard in London that Meuccio Ruini, minister without portfolio in Bonomi's previous cabinet, had been designated to form a government.)

Asked tonight whether he would attempt to bring parties outside the coalition into the government, Bonomi replied it was unlikely, but that "we will have to see." Those outside the coalition include the Monarchist and Democratic parties.

Bonomi said that, according to Italian custom, designation of the man to form the cabinet does not become "official" until the nominee "reaches a certain point" in the process. Asked whether he expected to reach that point, Bonomi replied, "I don't know."

Umberto Asks Bonomi To Form New Regime

Rome, Nov. 30 (AP)—Crown Prince Umberto requested Ivanoe Bonomi, who recently resigned as Premier, to form a new Italian Government today.

The appointment, however, apparently was dependent upon approval of the six political parties which were in conference.

SEEKS ROME CABINET

London, Nov. 30 (A. P.).—The Rome radio said tonight that Meuccio Ruini had been designated to form a new government after former Premier Ivanoe Bonomi had rejected Crown Prince Humbert's request to try again. The Premier-designate was Minister Without Portfolio in the Bonomi Cabinet.

Photographer Gets Results With Grenade

Myitkyina, Burma, Nov. 29 [AP—Delayed] — Pfc. Donald E. Pringle, of Everett, Wash., Signal Corps photographer, is one day he will pull a his camera and throw Japanese and click a hand by mistake.

Yesterday, while photographing a Chinese advance of 300 yards in the Bhamo outskirts, Pringle had to drop his camera and throw a grenade. It killed his third Japanese soldier. He got his other two in the Mogaung Valley.

MEASURES TAKEN TO HALT JAPANESE DRIVE IN CHINA

MOOSA

CHUNGKING, Nov. 30—(AP) Maj. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer held out hope tonight that steps now in preparation would turn the tide in China against the Japanese.

The U. S. commander in the China theater acknowledged that the enemy had sizeable southeast China forces concentrated in the Kwongsi-Kweichow border region. These forces have strong offensive capabilities, he said, but he added it was reasonable to expect that remedial measures now being taken would halt the enemy.

Making no attempt to deprecate the gravity of China's military situation, Wedemeyer said the enemy was obtaining a corridor into French Indo-China and establishing good interior lines of communication, after driving swiftly through Kwangsi.

In the path of that Japanese drive, a million misery-stricken refugees had abandoned their homes, travelers arriving here estimated. By the thousands they were pouring into Kweichow, and from Kweichow into Szechwan, where this wartime capital is situated.

War-weary civilians clung to overcrowded trucks on the road from Kweiyang to Chungking. Trains from the Burma road capital of Kweichow were filled to suffocation, and refugees rode precariously on the roofs, on the engines' cowcatchers, or even on the rods.

Many of them, particularly children, were being willed, in accidents or by bullets from strafing Japanese planes.

While no immediate relief appeared to be in sight for the military situation, Wedemeyer told a press conference that the tonnage of supplies being flown into China from India was increasing, and that everything possible was being done to accelerate the movement.

The American commander said he was having daily conferences with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, and termed Chiang and his key men most cooperative.

The Chinese High command tonight remained silent again on the evident penetration of Kweichow by the Japanese. That penetration had been indicated in a U. S. 14th Air force communique last night, detailing attacks on enemy troops on the road to Pachai.

The High command said Chinese inflicted heavy losses on the enemy after being outflanked near the Kwangsi railroad town of Hochih, 95 miles northwest of fallen Liuchow. Then the Chinese withdrew, leaving the enemy holding positions 14 miles northwest of Hochih, the High command said. It indicated an 11-mile withdrawal.

(Far to the north, a wireless dispatch from the Communist-operated station at Yenan said, Chinese Communists of the Eighth route army in a recent four-day battle killed, wounded or captured 826 Japanese and puppet troops in Kiangsu province, northeast of Hsuchow).

5000 JAP SOLDIERS KILLED IN SINKING OF 4-SHIP CONVOY

HUTCHESON

American Fliers Destroy Vessels Attempting to Land Troops at Ormoc.

ENEMY TOLL MOUNTS

Action on Leyte Stalled by Rains, Yanks Maintain Pressure.

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Friday, Dec. 1—(AP) Five thousand more Japanese soldiers were killed or drowned at sea—that makes 26,000 who tried but never got to Leyte—as American planes for the second straight day accounted for a four-ship Ormoc-bound enemy convoy Thursday.

Although the convoy was cautiously scattered over a wide area, the Yank fighters tracked down all of it, sinking a 9,000-ton transport and three small freighters and engulfing a 5,000-ton freighter and destroyer in flames.

Convoy Blasted at Sea

In contrast with Wednesday's erasure of a 13-ship convoy, two of which got reinforcements to Ormoc, this one didn't even get close to that port.

One freighter was bagged as far west as Mindoro by a night patrol plane. Others, including one heavily loaded transport, were blasted off Masbate and off Cebu.

The P47s and P40s went down to masthead height as they raised the enemy's reinforcement losses in attacks on seven convoys to 29 transports, aggregating 103,750 tons, and 18 escorting warships sunk.

Richard Bergholz, Associated Press War Correspondent at Leyte airforce headquarters, was told by returning fliers that they hit Japanese headquarters at Palompon, West Leyte, on the way back.

In attacks on shipping in Carmen bay at Cebu, near misses—which often are damaging—were scored on a destroyer, a destroyer escort and one of two large transports.

The Cebu raid stirred up 15 to 20 enemy fighters who burst out of the clouds. Two of the six Nipponese aircraft destroyed in the widespread actions were bagged there. American losses for the day were two planes.

A Japanese submarine was sunk Monday in Ormoc gulf, off the enemy's supply and reinforcement port, today's communique said.

In air activity over the island six Nipponese planes were shot down. Two American planes were lost.

Ground activity continued of a minor nature, due to torrential rains, but the Liberation forces maintained their pressure on all fronts.

Every Ship Blasted

Roaring in at masthead height, American dive bomber pilots hit every ship in the enemy convoy with the exception of a small freighter which was sunk by a night patrol plane.

Part of the convoy was caught off Masbate island, part off Cebu and one small freighter off Mindardo. The vessels were "heavily loaded with men," the communique said.

The enemy submarine destroyed in Ormoc bay was discovered by American destroyers which shelled Ormoc Monday night in the first daring penetration of the mined enemy waters on the west side of Leyte.

Aerial action continued against enemy bases on other islands in the archipelago and against Japanese shipping to the south of the Philippines. A small freighter was sunk off the northeast coast of Borneo and a large vessel hit.

The destruction of two or more Japanese divisions before they could reach Leyte promised to speed the battle for that island once the tropical rains let up and ground action could be resumed on a large scale.

For a fortnight, the enemy has been making desperate efforts to bolster his position on Leyte. Virtually every attempt has been broken up by fighter planes based on Leyte before the ships could disgorge their cargoes of men and supplies.

10 Transports Sunk Earlier

These hard striking planes got one of their biggest bags in Leyte gulf early this week, sinking ten transports and three escorting destroyers. The headquarters announcement of this action estimated that 4,000 Japanese troops headed for the island were lost, since most of the ships were sunk well out at sea. Two of the vessels had reached port and were being unloaded when the fighters swooped down and destroyed them.

It was estimated that the personnel losses in the destruction of this convoy—the sixth successful action for the Yank pilots within 10 days—increased the enemy's casualties to 21,000 in futile attempts to get more men to Leyte. Twenty-six Japanese transports and 17 escort vessels have been sunk in these attempts and scores of covering planes shot down.

Unprecedented rainfall for November held ground action to a minimum. Roads or trails to forward units were impassable, making it necessary to resort to airborne supplies.

Leyte-Bound Jap Convoy Sunk

MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Nov. 30 (AP)—American fighter planes sank ten Japanese transports and three destroyers with at least 4,000 reinforcements aboard, in a blistering Tuesday-Wednesday battle which crippled an apparent Nipponese effort to land a full new division on Leyte Island.

The latest strike, pushed to 21,000 the Japanese death toll for reinforcements who failed to reach port, but some fresh troops evidently slipped ashore to join the battle of Ormoc corridor.

Blown To Bits

Two transports in this sixth major reinforcement convoy were destroyed in Ormoc port, after they partially had unloaded men and supplies. One vessel blew into pieces.

The other eight transports were destroyed "well out at sea."

The destroyers were sunk while escorting the convoy.

The Japanese have lost 26 transports and 17 escort vessels, mostly destroyers, in their efforts to pour men onto Leyte.

Action Hampered

It was probable, said the communique, that this latest convoy was bringing in another division, "as prisoners of war captured on the front stated they had been told the second Japanese infantry division was expected."

There was no estimate of the number of men who might have landed at Ormoc.

Steaming rains limited ground activity for the third straight day. The communique reported that 23½ inches of rain have fallen on Leyte since November 1—"an unprecedented record for November."

Front-line American echelons are being supplied partially by air.

Three Large Vessels

In the newly destroyed convoy were three large cargo transports ranging from 8,000 to 3,000 tons, four troop transports of from 2,000 to 1,000 tons and three troop transports of 750 tons, in addition to the destroyers.

Bomb-carrying Kittyhawks, Thunderbolts and Lightnings fought the convoy for two days and a night, from Ormoc to the Camotes Sea, far westward.

The convoy was sighted late Tuesday afternoon west of Leyte, and some damage was inflicted.

The job was finished the next morning.

Seven Planes Bagged

Seven Japanese fighter planes, attempting to provide air cover, were shot down. The Leyte-based 49th fighter group boosted its record to 100 planes since reaching the Philippines, October 27, and to 588 for the Pacific war. Lieut. Warren D. Curton, of Spring City, Tenn., bagged the one hundredth Nipponese plane.

American torpedo bombers and fighters bombed and strafed the airfield and bivouacs at Legaspi, Luzon Island.

Jersey Flyer Fells Jap Plane

A United States Airbase, Leyte, P. I., Nov. 30 (A. P.).—Lieut. Wade B. Lewis of 1008 Salem avenue, Hillside, N. J., shot down on Tuesday the ninety-ninth Japanese plane felled by the Forty-ninth fighter group since it arrived in the Philippines.

Love-Story Shortage Reported On Leyte

With the 24th Division on Leyte, Philippines (AP)—Hungry, hard-fighting Yanks finished their two days' fighting, thankful even for K-rations.

But Filipino farmer-guerrilla fighters found them, produced everything from roast chicken to peanuts.

In turn, the soldiers shook their pockets inside out, even giving away scarce cigarettes.

But no one had the love story magazine which a comely Filipino girl bashfully requested.

Admiral DuBose Is Honored Again

DEC 1

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Nov. 30 (AP)—Rear Admiral Laurence T. DuBose, USN, of Annapolis, has been awarded a Gold Star in lieu of a third Navy Cross, Pacific Fleet headquarters announced today.

DuBose's citation, signed by Admiral William F. Halsey, commander of the Third Fleet, read:

"For gallantry and intrepidity in the line of his profession while in command of a specially constituted task group charged with a difficult mission. His task group was attacked repeatedly and with great determination by large numbers of Japanese aircraft, but so skillfully did he fight his task group that practically all the attacking planes were destroyed.

"Intelligent Leadership"

"His unfaltering determination and his courageous and intelligent leadership contributed materially to the successful accomplishment of this difficult mission. His conduct throughout was in accordance with the highest traditions of the naval service."

DuBose was awarded his first Navy Cross and a Gold Star in lieu of a second Navy Cross actions in which he participat October 26, 1942, and November 12—13, 1942. He also holds the Legion of Merit with two stars in lieu of second and third awards.

NO BOMBERS LOST IN 3RD TOKYO RAID

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30—(AP) The third raid on Tokyo by American B-29's was carried out through night and clouds without losses due to enemy action, the army announced today.

It brought from the Tokyo radio renewed hysterical threats that any American flyer who parachuted after "blindly" bombing the capital would be "killed on the spot by the angry Japanese people."

Secretary of War Stimson said the third attack within a week "is an outstanding demonstration of our ability to carry the war to the heart of Japan." Henceforth, he said, there will follow a "regularly repeated and constantly expanding pattern of destruction for Japan's war production."

The 20th air force communique on the pre-dawn attack reported industrial targets in Tokyo were bombed by use of precision instruments. Results were not observed because of cloud cover and the darkness. Anti-aircraft fire was "meager and inaccurate."

The Japanese version of the attack by the superfortresses launched from the new bases in the Mariana islands 1,500 miles to the southeast, as reported by radio Tokyo, was:

Twenty planes attacked in several waves from about midnight to 4:30 a.m.; fires "that continued to rage in part of the areas affected were put under control by 5:30 a.m."

STIMSON SEES B-29S OPENING JAPS' EYES

Washington, Nov. 30 (A. P.).—Secretary of War Stimson declared today that the recent Superfortress raids on Tokyo have been an outstanding demonstration of our ability to carry the war to the heart of Japan, and that the rank and file of the Japanese people will now know by first hand observation the fatal mistakes their war lords led them into.

There will be a regularly repeated and constantly expanding pattern of destruction for Japan's war production, he told his press conference. From experience gained in the air war against Germany it has been learned that strategic aerial warfare must be conducted persistently and heavily, saddling upon the enemy the necessity of rebuilding, he added.

Asked why the American airmen are under orders to avoid bombing the Imperial Palace in Tokyo, Mr. Stimson declined comment.

Night B- On Jap Capital Described

By Vern Haugland

B-29 Base, Saipan, Marianas Islands, Nov. 30 (AP)—A medium task force of Superforts bombed Tokyo's industrial and shipping area by the light of the full moon early today in the first night-bombing raid on Japan's capital and the third strike against the city within a week.

Superfortresses rained bombs principally upon the light industrial center of Tokyo. Here, in small plants, are fashioned many of Japan's implements of war.

Returned By Daylight

The Superforts took off in time to return by daylight. Some of them have returned after dark from previous strikes. Precision bombing in the moonlight raid, similar to the type accomplished in Monday's raid through thick cloud cover, is in contrast to the visual bombing of the initial strike.

As the medium force, less than half that of the sizeable forces of the two previous attacks, thundered toward Tokyo, Brig. Gen. Haywood Hansell, Jr., commanding the 21st Bomber Command, issued a prepared statement, saying:

"Tonight there is a full moon. The industrial and shipping targets in Tokyo Bay should stand out sharply against the outline of water. Bombs will drop on industrial targets which constitute the backbone of Japanese war-making capacity."

Senior Officer Colonel Harris

The senior officer of today's mission was Col. Samuel R. Harris, of Winston-Salem, N.C.

He was commander of the B-29 which returned on two of its four engines most of the way from Tokyo after the initial raid.

The first plane to take off from Saipan on this third raid, however, was that commanded by Lieut. Donald B. Thorburn, Burlingame, Cal.

No B-29's Lost In Latest Raid On Tokyo

San Francisco, Nov. 30 (AP)—All Superfortresses which participated in the third B-29 strike at Tokyo Wednesday night returned to their base, a 20th Air Force communique said today.

In the three raids on Japan's capital two Superforts have been lost. The crew of one of these was rescued by a destroyer.

Returning airmen reported that anti-aircraft fire was meager and inaccurate. Results were not observed because of a cloud cover.

Text Of Communique

The text of the communique issued in Washington:

"Industrial targets in Tokyo were bombed Wednesday by B-29 aircraft of Brig. Gen. H. S. Hansell's 21st Bomber Command in the first night mission flown by the Saipan-based Superfortresses. Bombing was accomplished by precision instruments and results were not observed because of cloud cover. Air crewmen reported that anti-aircraft fire was meager and inaccurate. None of our aircraft was lost from enemy action."

Thus fire-scarred Tokyo, its defenses admittedly penetrated twice in five hours Wednesday (U.S. time) by Superfortresses, is getting a foretaste of a campaign "to destroy the heart and the nerve centers of Japan's war machine."

Fires Raged In Tokyo

Gen. H. H. Arnold, commanding general of the Army Air Forces, placed that interpretation last night at Kansas City on a drive which has put bombers over Tokyo on three days within a week.

This air war on Japan proper had these ramifications:

Fires started Wednesday raged for a considerable time in Tokyo.

Incensed Tokyo radio announcers fumed that any Yank flyer who parachuted after "blindly" bombing Tokyo would be "killed on the spot by the angry Japanese people."

Premier General Kuniaki Koiso held a cabinet meeting yesterday because—to quote Tokya radio—"in due course various bo are expected to appear wit unexpected resulting effects."

Jap Airfields Pounded

In whipsaw action along the bombing road to Tokyo, Liberators from Saipan cratered the Volcano Island airfields the enemy has been using to send fighters in raids on the Superfortress bases at Saipan.

Today a Japanese imperial headquarters communique, broadcast from Tokyo and recorded here, gave this unconfirmed version:

Twenty Superforts attacked in "several waves" from about midnight to 4.30 A. M. Thursday (Tokyo time).

"The fires that continued to rage in part of the areas affected . . . were put under control by 5.30 A. M."

No claim was made of any B-29 being shot down, recalling last Friday's attack from which all the Superfortresses got back to Saipan.

"Sunyen District Hit"

Incendiary bombs, dropped in the new raid "from great heights from above the clouds," touched off fires in "several places," but "most of them" were put out immediately.

The attacks were spread over "the metropolitan area and its vicinity, also a part of the Sunyen district." A domestic broadcast previously had told of simultaneous attacks on Shizuoka prefecture below Tokyo.

Jap Attention Diverted

The Sunyen district embraces Suruga, Shizuoka and Hamamatsu in Shizuoka prefecture, on the coast, centered roughly fifteen miles southwest of Tokyo.

General Arnold, who has been assured by Gen. Douglas MacArthur that the Tokyo raids have diverted Japanese attention from the Philippines campaign, said in his Kansas City address last night:

"First with our B-29's, then as we get bases closer to Japan, with our Fortresses and Liberators, we're going to destroy the heart and the nerve centers of Japan's war machine.

"Japan will have little industry left when our Army and Navy Air Forces complete their tasks of destruction . . . they've asked for it and they're going to get it."

Marcus Island Bombed

Tokyo radio asserted the bombings were "indiscriminate" and caused little damage to "important establishments" but an air force spokesman at Washington emphasized indiscriminate bombing was not in the American plans.

At Pearl Harbor yesterday, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz disclosed the fighter-escorted Liberator attacks Sunday and Monday at Iwo Jima in the Volcanoes which cratered fields the enemy are using to attack Saipan. He also announced a Monday bombing of Marcus, an island the enemy could use to detect the Superfortresses on their way from Saipan to Tokyo.

In Sunday's Iwo Jima raids, two of seven interceptors were shot down but no enemy planes showed fight Monday.

U.S. Called Barbaric

San Francisco, Nov. 30 (AP)—America, a Japanese propagandist told his countrymen in a broadcast today, "is a barbaric nation unparalleled in the world."

The propagandist, Goro Nakano, former New York correspondent of the Tokyo newspaper Asahi, said he "stripped the mask of justice and humanity" from "the enemy Americans" to inspire a "feeling of hatred toward the American people."

In the broadcast, recorded here, he cited as evidence of American barbarism wrestling matches, blackface comedians, plays like "Tobacco Road," and actresses selling kisses for war bonds.

DEC 1 1944

Amazed, He Says

Nakano said he was "amazed at the bloody barbarity" of wrestling in America where "huge and horrible looking monsters" are imported from distant lands and pitted against "good-looking athletic American youths. In the end, the good-looking youth completely defeats the monster who looks like a ghost, carrying out a cruel revenge."

He was shocked, too, by such "truly outrageous names as Man Eater, Man Mountain, Champion of Hades, King Kong, or Gorilla of Siberia."

"Tobacco Road" Cited

"The more cruel the nature depicted" in plays on Broadway, Nakano said, "the more popular they become. He cited "Tobacco Road" as such a play, commenting it ran for eight years with nothing to recommend it but its "boy and girl relationships and parent and child relationship that ignore the morals of human beings."

He said Americans mistreat Negroes, don't care to see them on the stage, but enjoy watching blackface comedians "imitating the pitiful Negroes."

Nakano quoted "enemy reports" of actresses selling kisses or doing the strip tease to sell war bonds, adding, "Thus by barbaric methods, they are bolstering the dime-store patriotism of the ignorant Yankee masses."

Yank Battleship Sunk, Tokyo Says

San Francisco, Nov. 30 (AP)—A Japanese imperial communique claimed today Japanese planes sank a battleship and three large transports yesterday in the second assertedly successful attack this week on American shipping in Leyte Gulf of the Philippines.

There was no Allied confirmation of the enemy claims.

Today's broadcast, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, said:

"Six planes of the Yasukuni air unit of our special attack corps on November 29 attacked the enemy warships in Leyte Gulf. Two planes sank one enemy battleship and four planes sank three large transports and damaged and set ablaze one battleship or cruiser. Two of our escort fighters have not returned."

Attack Acknowledged

A communique yesterday asserted that on Monday Nipponese planes sank a battleship, three cruisers and four transports and damaged another battleship or large cruiser and a transport.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur acknowledged such an attack was made and said some unspecified damage was inflicted.

Aussies Mas. Tortured By Japs, Official Reports

Canberra, Australia, Nov. 30 (AP). Evidence the Japanese have massacred, tortured and mistreated Australians, both military and civilian, as well as New Guinea natives, was reported today to the Queensland House of Representatives by Herbert V. Evatt, Australian attorney general.

Evatt said Sir William Webb, chief justice, who will represent Australia on the United Nations War Crimes Commission, obtained the evidence during an investigation of Japanese atrocities on New Guinea.

Special Tribunals Considered

Official inquiries so far showed occasional instances when Japanese soldiers and officers behaved according to standards of honorable conduct, Evatt added.

30. 24 — 20831

The Australian Government is considering special tribunals to handle cases unsuitable for handling by national courts.

"The Australian Government is determined that nothing which can be done to punish those responsible for brutality and cruelty will be left undone," Evatt said.

Demands Justice

"The suffering and indignities imposed on our soldiers cannot be condoned. In all possible cases, the guilty should be pursued and brought to justice."

[Australian soldiers played a large role in the campaigns of Gen. Douglas MacArthur on New Guinea.]

Argentine Peons Promised 'New Deal'

Buenos Aires, Nov. 30 (AP)—Argentina's rural workers, in large part illiterate, ill-fed and impoverished, have been promised a new deal under a new "peons statute" providing for minimum wages, a six-day work week, security of tenure, paid vacations and better housing.

Urban labor has been encouraged to organize in units similar to vertical unions but subject to close Government control and in most cases lacking a legal right to strike. The difficulty of putting rural workers into cohesive unions led the Government to lump them together under a general statute.

Colombia Repeals Strike Decree

Bogota, Colombia, Nov. 30 (AP)—The Government repealed today a decree outlawing strikes.

Victory Is Seen For Premier King

Ottawa, Nov. 30 (AP)—One of the leading anti-conscriptionist French-speaking members of Parliament, P. J. A. Cardin, a former Cabinet Minister, appealed to the people of Quebec tonight to "keep calm, take things easy and reflect on action" in the conscription crisis which has stirred Canada.

In an address to the House of Commons, Cardin stated the traditional French-Canadian nationalistic viewpoint by asking why Canada should "compete" in fighting the war with Great Britain, the United States and Russia, and by urging Canadians to "think of Canada first and always." He attacked the Government's new decision to send conscripted troops abroad.

Cardin warned his fellow citizens of French origin, however, to avoid action which might damage property or endanger lives, and not to "lose the advantages of the friendship we enjoy with the British-speaking people in greater measure than ever before."

Premier Weathers Storm

Meantime, Canada grew calmer in her conscription crisis as Prime Minister W. L. Mckenzie King rode out the parliamentary storm and reports of disorders in Pacific Coast draftee soldier camps tapered off.

With the administration now almost definitely assured of victory in a vote of confidence to be taken tomorrow or early next week, Parliament's resumption of debate on the Government's confidence motion was relatively perfunctory.

The first French Canadian member of King's Liberal party to speak on the issue declared he would vote against the Government. From one third to one half of King's 60-odd anti-conscriptionists French-speaking supporters are expected to do this without endangering a comfortable Government majority.

Tory Pressure "Blamed"

The speaker Philippe Picard, of Bellechasse, Quebec, declared there was complete harmony in Canada on the general purpose of doing all necessary to win the war. "Tory pressure" had created a crisis over conscription, he declared.

In the United States, he said, no blame was attached to prominent people who were isolationists, but in Canada anyone advocating such views was attacked because he was French Canadian and was charged with being against the war effort.

The acting le[illegible] of the Progressive Conservati[illegible]position, R. B. Hanson, declared [illegible]s party's desire for all out conscription rather than for the so-called partial plan under which the government has decided to send an initial 16,000 troops abroad from the home army drafted originally for service only in this hemisphere.

Hanson said he resented the "implication" in the Prime Minister's Monday address that Canada must have "King or anarchy," and that the King government was the only one which could give the Dominion orderly government.

He declared the situation would not be clarified "until the people of Canada clarify it." He added he did not agree with the government's position that a general election at this time would harm the war effort, and he cited the recent presidential election in the United States to support his point.

Here former Defense Minister R. L. Ralston, who resigned Nov. 1 because he favored conscription and last night declared his support of the government's new partial policy, interjected that the U. S. elections "were not on conscription."

The government's position has been that a general election on this issue at this time would imperil Canadian unity and strength for generations.

From the West coast, where home army draftee troops have been demonstrating in half a dozen camps, there were no reports of trouble today after five days of disorders, some termed "mutiny," which kept the nation tense.

troop actions was not strictly racial. English-speaking troops were involved as well as units from the French-speaking province of Quebec.

Canadian Crisis Nears End

MONTGOMERY

But Tension Continues as Home Army Men Demonstrate Against Overseas Draft.

Ottawa, Nov. 30 (A. P.).—The parliamentary phase of Canada's conscription crisis approached solution today, with Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King's government apparently saved from overthrow, but rebellious draftee troops resisting dispatch to the western front kept the nation tense.

The King Government appeared definitely out of danger of defeat after the former Defense Minister, Col. R. L. Ralston, told Parliament last night he would support the Government's motion of confidence, to be voted on late this week or early next week.

Late last night youths left a Nationalist Party Bloc Populaire meeting in Montreal and smashed windows in the building of the newspaper Le Canada, a French language publication which is official organ of Prime Minister King's Liberal party and which has lent support to the Government's new partial conscription policy.

Disorders in Quebec.

Other disturbances have occurred throughout Quebec, where the French-speaking population still holds as a group that it has the right to decline to fight overseas.

Of grave immediate concern, was the tense situation in half a dozen draftee camps in British Columbia.

Progressive Conservative leader R. B. Hanson, acting opposition leader, told Parliament, "Loss of life may ensue unless prompt action is taken."

The Prime Minister replied that the situation was being carefully watched and completely controlled, but he admitted the situation was difficult and might be very serious. He said it was not mutiny, but Mr. Hanson answered that he nevertheless would "have to proceed on the basis that it is mutiny."

The problem of the draftee

Col. Ralston's Position.

The home Army, originally conscripted for home service only and under the Government's new policy now liable to be sent abroad, totaled 68,000 out of a total of nearly 1,000,000 men who have been taken into all the armed services since the beginning of the war. This 68,000 declined to offer to fight abroad alongside the remainder of the 1,000,000, all of whom volunteered to serve abroad.

Col. Ralston declared that although he favored conscription of the entire home army rather than the 16,000 the Government has ordered abroad, he could not vote against the Government because its defeat would mean further delay in getting the men into the front lines.

Col. Ralston's eagerly awaited declaration was interpreted generally as meaning the Prime Minister would win easily the majority he has demanded to remain in office.

English-speaking Liberals and the Social Credit party were expected to support King. Opposition in the French-speaking Liberal ranks was not considered strong enough to endanger the Prime Minister's victory.

Japs Repair Wood Ships

San Francisco, Nov. 30 (AP)—The Japanese Government is converting many of its small shipyards to the repair of wooden ships and sampans, the Japanese news agency Domei said today.

A shipping bureau official said that the improvement of repair facilities for wooden ships and sampans is "most urgent."

The announcement, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, indicates that Japan's small merchant ships are suffering heavily from American airplanes and submarines.

Chinese Reds Take 5 Enemy Posts

San Francisco, Nov. 30 (AP)—The Chinese Communists' 8th Route Army in a recent four-day battle killed, wounded or captured 826 Japanese and puppet troops in Kiangsu province northeast of Hsuchow in northern China, a wireless dispatch from the Communist-operated station at Yenan said today.

Five garrison points were captured in the action, lasting from November 16 to 19, said the broadcast, recorded here. The puppet commander in chief, Haang Kiukiang, and a battalion commander, Kao Tsing-fa, were captured, while the puppet chief of staff, Liu Liangtu, was "among those killed or wounded," the dispatch added.

On November 20 Japanese and puppet forces approaching from Louhsiangcheng, 50 miles southwest of the Yellow Sea port of Weihaiwei, were "routed" west of the Chefoo-Tsingtao road, the dispatch declared.

350 Australian Ships Reported In War

San Francisco, Nov. 30 (AP)—Australian Navy Minister N. J. O. Makin was quoted by the British radio as announcing that approximately 350 ships of the Royal Australian Navy are on duty throughout the world.

Makin told the House of Representatives in Canberra that Australian ships had sunk or probably sunk 27 submarines. The Navy, he said, had suffered 2,600 casualties. The broadcast was recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

1,400 SAVED OF 2 CREWS

Losses Low On Baby Carriers Sunk In Philippines

Washington, Nov. 30 (AP)—Fourteen hundred men were rescued from two escort carriers sunk in the battle of the Philippines, the Navy reported tonight in releasing a detailed account of how six of the baby flat tops fought a big Japanese task force.

The carriers sunk were the St. Lo and the Gambier Bay.

"The losses on the St. Lo were low—we picked up 800 men," Rear Admiral C. A. F. Sprague said in a report on the engagement.

In Middle Of Jap Fleet

"Losses on the Gambier Bay were low, too, considering that she dropped back into the middle of the Jap fleet. Approximately 600 of her crew were saved."

The complement of such ships has never been disclosed.

Sprague's report identified for the first time the other four carriers in his force of six which had an escort of three destroyers and four destroyer escorts when it tangled with a Japanese force of four battleships, seven cruisers and nine destroyers. The other carriers were the Kalinin Bay, the Fanshaw Bay, the White Plains and the Kitkun Bay. All were damaged.

Daring Torpedo Attack

The report disclosed:

The American destroyers and destroyer escorts executed a daring torpedo attack against the enemy fleet without suffering any losses.

"It was a very gallant attack," Sprague said. "One of the destroyers got a direct torpedo hit on a battleship. And not a single one of the destroyers or destroyer escorts was damaged during the torpedo attack. They all got back to us safely."

American airmen made "dummy runs" against the enemy after their torpedoes and ammunition were exhausted.

Fought With 5-Inch Guns

The carriers fought back with their 5-inch guns against the heavily armed enemy ships and morale was so high that at one point a battery officer said: "Just hold on a little longer, boys, we're getting 'em into 40-millimeter range."

The Japanese force engaged by Sprague's ships came through San Bernadino Strait. It had sunk one carrier, two destroyers and a destroyer escort, in later stages of the battle, when the Japanese admiral suddenly turned and ran. The second carrier was sunk later by Japanese land-based planes.

"At the time," Sprague recounted, "I didn't know why the Japs had turned tail. But upon analysis, I concluded that it was because they had suffered too much damage to continue the attack.

"One cruiser had been sunk, a destroyer had gone down and a badly damaged cruiser was sunk later by planes from Admirals Thomas Sprague's and Felix Stump's carriers. Our planes scored many bomb and torpedo hits and I learned that every single one of the Jap ships had either been hit or sunk."

Kills 1,300 Japs In Month

Washington, Nov. 30 (AP)—Troops of the 81st Division killed 1,300 Japanese and captured 142 on Peleliu Island in the Palaus between October 20 and November 26, the Navy announced tonight.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz in a communique said our losses were 92 killed, 622 wounded and 5 missing. The main points of resistance offered by the Japanese, remnants of the enemy garrison on the island, were caves.

The communique also reported a Japanese bomber attack on Saipan and Tinian before dawn November 28. No damage was caused and one enemy plane was destroyed and another probably destroyed.

Prewar French Pact Submitted To Senate

Washington, Nov. 30 (AP)—President Roosevelt resubmitted to the Senate today, with a request for ratification, a French-American pact for avoidance of double taxation.

The convention and protocol was signed at Paris on July 25, 1939 and approved by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The war precluded ratification.

The agreement contemplates rules of reciprocal administrative assistance on income and other taxes. Mr. Roosevelt indicated he thought it should be effective by January 1, 1945.

Report on U. S. War Prisoners

House Group Finds German Treatment Humane and Some Jap Camps Improving.

Washington, Nov. 30 (A. P.).—The House Military Committee reported today that American prisoners of Germany are, in the main, humanely treated. It said prisoners in Japan proper seem to be faring better than those in Japanese-occupied territories. And that Axis prisoners in the United States are well treated but not pampered.

The committee's report to the House grew out of complaints which the chairman, Representative May (D.-Ky.) said indicated laxity in the handling of German and Italian prisoners, especially the latter.

Committee investigators who made first-hand inquiries in prison-camps throughout the country reported no evidence of too-lenient treatment of inmates. They did relate reports that in many cases prisoners received better attention and more privileges than United States soldiers.

At the time the investigation was completed, early this month, the committee said, there were 281,344 German, 51,032 Italian and 2,242 Japanese war prisoners in 132 base camps and 334 branch camps.

In Delaware at Fort Dupont, south of Wilmington, there are 2,153 German prisoners and the report stated that had it not been for the work of the German prisoners one-third of the pea crop, one-third of the bean crop and one-fourth of the tomato crop in Delaware would have gone to waste.

The committee had this to say about American handling of prisoners:

Escape Efforts Minor.

The number of escape attempts is surprisingly small and confined almost entirely to G[illegible] who are often actuated b[illegible] of their fellow prisoners.

Japanese prisoners occ[illegible]ally engage in mass attempt[illegible] hara-kiri, which are carried out by the most violent and spectacular means at hand.

Provisions of the Geneva convention for treatment of prisoners are being carried out to the letter by the United States, and in general the German Government has endeavored to accord to American prisoners the standards of treatment prescribed by the convention. However, the committee added, the Germans have "adopted a less liberal interpretation of some portions of the convention than has our Government," the probable reason being "the exigencies of the situation in Germany."

Medical Care Good.

While the "primary example of unliberal interpretation of the treaty by the Germans is in connection with the food rations," the committee said, the German Government permits large supplies of food to be sent to prisoners through the Red Cross and other agencies. Prisoners of Germany receive good medical care, the committee added.

Although Japan did not ratify the Geneva Convention, the committee said, "it has undertaken to apply, with some modifications, the provisions of the convention" to war prisoners and American civilian internees.

The Japanese Government, it reported, "has but partially implemented the terms of the convention and has not provided conditions of life on an occidental standard."

Food Supply Superior.

Camps under Jap control in metropolitan Japan, Manchuria, Formosa and Shanghai were described as accessible to representatives of the Red Cross and the Swiss Government, although outsiders are not permitted to inspect conditions in the Philippines, the Dutch East Indies, Malaya, Borneo, Thailand, French Indo-China, Burma and the Hongkong area.

On the whole, the report said, the camps in Japan, China and Manchuria, in which an estimated 6,296 Americans are held, seem to be more humanely administered than those in distant Japanese-occupied territories in which there are approximately 9,865 Americans.

The committee said Swiss representatives confirmed reports that the food given prisoners in Japanese camps is superior to that available to Japanese civilians.

Nomination of Stettinius Is Confirmed by Senate

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—(AP) The Senate brushed aside protests by Senator Langer (R-N.D.) today and confirmed, 67 to 1, the nomination of Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., as Secretary of State.

The 44-year-old under secretary thus steps into the topmost Cabinet post to lead American diplomatic forces now helping fashion a world peace organization. He succeeds his chief, ailing Cordell Hull, who resigned.

Confirmation was voted swiftly after Langer protested on the Senate floor that Stettinius is "a representative of Wall Street and the House of Morgan," as well as a protege of presidential Advisor Harry Hopkins.

Senator McKellar (D-Tenn.) strode to Stettinius defense, asserting that he is "a man of intelligence, ability and the highest character." He added that Stettinius has "the most attractive personality I ever have seen—a personality that can be used to the greatest advantage by our country in these critical times."

Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) White (R-Me.), Davis (R-Pa.), Clark (D-Mo.) and Connally (D-Tex.) also praised the nominee. Connally shrugged expressively in Langer's direction and said he was not going to take time to answer all charges that were made.

Announcing that he had been up all night digging into the record, gaunt, gray haired Langer had made a 2 1-2 hour speech. Most of the Democrats and many Republicans and many Republicans went out to lunch while he talked.

Remarking that he had nothing against Stettinius personally, Langer asserted that the nominee had helped delay this country's preparations for war by failing to support an increase in steel production in 1940.

Stettinius, former chairman of the Board of United States Steel, then was a member of the National Defense council. Calling U. S. Steel a "Morgan company," Langer voiced the belief that Stettinius and J. P. Morgan & Co. did not want steel mills built in the West.

Because of the nominee's "lack of foresight," the Senator said, American school children had to stage a nation-wide scrap drive.

"If he acts with the same vision as secretary of state as he acted for steel," the North Dakotan added, "the children who collected scrap iron for this war will be carrying arms in the next."

Senator Vandenberg, praising Stettinius, said he had never known "a man to come from downtown to testify on the hill who has made such a supreme effort to give us the benefit of his total information."

Senator Clark said that Stettinius "gave up a princely salary as a brilliant business executive from purely patriotic motives to enter government service." He added that Stettinius had "disposed of every security that in any possible way might be connected with any negotiations with the government" and had placed his other securities in a trust fund for his children.

Henderson Slated For Post In Germany

Washington, Nov. 30 (AP)—Leon Henderson, whose 49 years have included vigorous careers as a soldier, professor, economist and Government official, is due now to apply his talents to defeated Germany.

The former price administrator is scheduled to leave for London next week and eventually for Germany, with an assignment to handle economic affairs in that part of the Reich which Americans will control.

Henderson quit as price administrator two years ago after a stormy time in office. He previously had been an economist with the Works Progress Administration and the old National Recovery Administration and was a member of the Securities Exchange Commission.

He went into World War I a private and came out a captain, later teaching economics at the University of Pennsylvania and other schools.

EMBASSY FOR KIRK

Washington, Nov. 30 (A. P.).—Alexander C. Kirk of Illinois was nominated by President Roosevelt today to be American Ambassador to Italy.

Mr. Kirk is United States representative on the Allied Advisory Council for Italy. He was American Charge d'Affaires in Rome at the time Italy came into the war in June, 1940.

William Phillips was the last previous Ambassador in Italy.

Hurley Approved As Envoy to China

Washington, Nov. 30 (A. P.).—The Senate unanimously confirmed today the nomination of Major-Gen. Patrick J. Hurley as Ambassador to China. The appointment of the former Republican Secretary of War to the diplomatic post recently vacated by the resignation of Clarence E. Gauss was approved without debate.

'L' Too Much for Japs, But 'R' Stops Chinese

Washington, Nov. 30 (AP)—The OWI says it isn't so that the Japanese cannot pronounce the letter "R."

Exploding what it called a "popular American fallacy," OWI reported that it's the Chinese who can't pronounce "R," while the Japs can't say "L."

With this information in hand, the American soldier now will know the Oriental who says "so solly" probably is a Chinese.

Stimson Says Shell Lack Held Eisenhower Up

Transport Hurdles Delayed Offensive at First; Now U. S. Output Is Question

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (AP).—General Eisenhower had to delay his general offensive until enough artillery ammunition accumulated, Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, disclosed today.

In a news conference discussion of the critical need for ammunition, Mr. Stimson gave this outline of the situation in Europe:

Following the rush across France, "we experienced a series of artillery difficulties. First was the limitation imposed by disrupted railroad lines for the delivery of the ammunition available in the ports. As the railroad situation greatly improved, the next bottleneck was the incapacity of the ports to deliver the ammunition in Great Britain."

Following this as the armies approached the Rhine "it became necessary for General Eisenhower to delay a general offensive until an adequate reserve of artillery ammunition could be accumulated. . . .

"As (rail and port) factors improve we are reaching another limitation and that is the availability of ammunition in the United States."

Mr. Stimson said the ammunition situation bids fair to be more critical "unless production rates in the United States are greatly increased."

Somervell Quizzed On Ammunition

Washington, Nov. 30 (AP) — The man who controls the Army's supply lines was called to Capitol Hill today to tell about the reportedly hampering lack of ammunition.

Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, head of the Army Service Forces, was called to testify before the House Military Committee, Chairman May (D., Ky.), said, because:

"There have been reports that General Patton's advance toward Germany was stopped for two full days because he ran out of ammunition. Recent reports from abroad relate that General Eisenhower is deeply concerned over failure to receive sufficient ammunition, presumably because of a slackening of effort on the home front."

Hershey To Testify

May said Somervell would be accompanied by Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service Director, who will be asked to bring the committee up to date on draft policies and will be questioned about the manpower program.

"We have heard that the War Manpower Commission is permitting workers to leave essential war industries and take jobs in non-ar plants," May said. "We want to now if they are true."

Both Somervell and H shey will questioned behind c ed doors.

3 Adm... For Mariana... quest

Washington, Nov. 30 (AP)—Three admirals have been awarded additional Distinguished Service citations for their part in the conquest of the Marianas last spring.

Vice Admiral Richmond Kelly Turner, commander of the joint expeditionary force, was awarded the Gold Star in lieu of a third Distinguished Service Medal. Rear Admiral Harry Wilbur Hill, his second in command, and Rear Admiral Richard Lansing Connolly, commander of the task force in the recapture of Guam, received Gold Stars in lieu of second Distinguished Service medals.

Inquiries on U. S. Nationals

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (AP).—The State Department said today it will try on request to determine the welfare of Americans living in the vicinity of either Brussels or Marseille. Inquiries, to be forwarded to diplomatic representatives, must first have been attempted through normal mail channels, the department said.

FASTER SHIPS PUT IN SERVICE

New P-2 Is Transport and C-4 a Cargo Craft.

Washington, Nov. 30 (A. P.).—The sleek, fast C ships, backbone of this country's long-range maritime planning, now have a big sister, the C-4.

Existence of the C-4, which dwarfs even the C-3, previously the largest of the C series, was disclosed today by the Maritime Commission, which also revealed for the first time some of the details of an even larger ship, the P-2.

An undisclosed number of the P-2s already have gone into service, a commission spokesman said.

Have Long Range.

Both the P-2 and the C-4 are regarded as Pacific ships because of their high speed and extreme cruising range. The C-4, for example, has an announced range of 14,560 miles.

Basically, the P-2 is a passenger ship; the C-4 a cargo vessel. Both, however, are suitable for troop transports in wartime.

Two shipyards, Kaiser at Vancouver, Wash., and Sun at Chester, Pa., have contracts to build the C-4, and two other yards, Federal at Kearny, N. J., and Bethlehem at Alameda, Cal., have contracts for the P-2.

Save only for the $17,500,000 liner America, now the Navy transport West Point, the P-2 is the largest merchant-type ship to be built in this country since revival of the shipbuilding program in the prewar years.

Ship 600 Feet Long.

The P-2 has an overall length of 608 feet, 11 inches, a beam of 5 feet and a power plant gener... ing 18,000 horsepower.

The C-4 is 522 feet, 10½ inches long with a beam of 71 feet, 6 inches, and 9,000 horsepower. Its deadweight tonnage (carrying capacity) is 14,560 tons, about 2,500 tons greater than the C-3.

The C-1, smallest of the C ships, has a deadweight tonnage of about 4,000 tons, while the C-2, heretofore the middleweight of the series, is capable of carrying about 9,000 tons.

Some C-3s have been converted into escort plane carriers, and others have become Army and Navy auxiliaries.

Plummer in New O. W. I. Post

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (AP).—Herbert C. Plummer today was appointed assistant chief of the news bureau of the Office of War Information. He succeeds Neil Dalton, recently appointed O. W. I. domestic director. Mr. Plummer, former managing editor of "The Baton Rouge (La.) State-Times," was a member of the Washington staff of The Associated Press for ten years before joining the O. W. I. His previous assignment with the O. W. I. was general news editor.

REPORT ON REMOVAL OF ITALIAN PRISONERS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 — (AP) "Moderate intimacies with bathing-suited girls outside" was one of a series of incidents that led to removal of Italian prisoners of war from Camp McKay, Boston, Mass., the House Military committee reported today.

Camp McKay, now a base for negro troops, is on the waterfront adjoining Carson beach and, committee investigators reported, "the mesh in the wire fencing was sufficiently open to permit the prisoners to put their hands through it, a circumstance which enabled them to engage in moderate intimacies with bathing-suited girls outside.

"This continued until the Boston city police took charge of the situation."

The investigators, who made first-hand inquiries in prison camps throughout the country, said the decision to abandon McKay as a prisoner camp came after a group of the prisoners climbed over a fence and attacked several policemen.

ALLIES PROPOSE TO ACQUIRE MANY SUPPLIES FROM U.S

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 — (AP) Allied governments are proposing to buy at least $10,000,000,000 worth of materials and supplies in the United States for post-war reconstruction in their countries, it was reported tonight.

This figure was described authoritatively as a conservative estimate of what Britain, Russia, France and the other United Nations would like to obtain in the years immediately after the war, provided financing can be arranged.

It became known subsequent to two other developments which for the first time brought into sharp focus the broad problems of post-war trade and world rebuilding:

1—Assistant Secretary of State Dean Acheson laid before Congress an outline of administration plans for financing purchases in this country and liberalizing world trade arrangements.

2—Acting Secretary of State Stettinius, Treasury Secretary Morgenthau and Leo Crowley, Foreign Economic administration chief, announced the conclusion of "phase two" Lend-Lease negotiations with Britain. A 50 per cent cut under the 1944 rate in Lend-Lease assistance to the British was agreed upon to be effective as soon as Germany is defeated. Estimates are that this will mean $5,600,000,000 of Lend-Lease aid to Britain for 1945.

One of Acheson's principal recommendations for financing post-war purchases is expansion of the export-import bank and removal of restrictions which limit its operations almost exclusively to Latin America.

Acheson gave no figure but other officials estimated that the export-import bank would need eventually between $6,000,000,000 and $7,000,000,000 of credit capacity. It was said that Congress might be asked to authorize this either in one piece or in several beginning with an initial authorization of about $2,000,000,000. The bank's present credit resources were fixed by Acheson in his appearance before a House Committee on Foreign Trade and shipping at approximately $200,000,000.

Acheson, who is in charge of developing State department international commercial and economic policy, called for repeal of the Johnson act which prohibits private lending to governments such as Britain which are in default to the United States government on old World War One debts. He also asked for removal of the parallel ban on le... by the export-import bank to t... governments.

Stimson Spending Time On Pearl Harbor Report

Washington, Nov. 30 (AP)—Secretary Stimson said today he has been devoting "an enormous amount of time" to studying the report of the army board which investigated the Pearl Harbor disaster.

In answer to a news conference question, he said, "In due course there will be some statement." He did not amplify the remark.

...R POWERS ACT RENEWED BY HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—(AP) The House voted overwhelmingly today to renew the administration's broad war powers—but it put a string on its approval.

It sent to the Senate a bill to extend through 1945 the life of the second war powers act—legislative basis for the War Production Board, rationing, War Food administration and many other wartime agencies.

But this time the House approved an amendment empowering federal courts to review and enjoin WPB orders suspending individual allocations of critical materials.

The original bill provided for no court review of any rulings by the war agencies. Persons dissatisfied with War Production Board action had but one recourse—an appeal to the Office of War Mobilization.

Although backers of today's amendment said it is not distasteful to the administration, Rep. Cochran (D-Mo.) told the House it could snarl the war program at the very time when fighting front generals are pleading for more ammunition.

"I don't want any hamstring amendments on our war powers," he said. "Let us forget our fears for the rights of individuals until we've won this war."

Chairman Sumners (D-Tex.) of the Judiciary committee said the amendment was a protection against "abusive and tyrannical" actions.

Sponsors of the amendment said it actually applied to a limited part of the war program—giving courts the right to pass only on those was production orders which withdraw a previously granted allocation of vital materials but Cochran contended it is broad enough to let any person who loses a rationing privilege—a "B" card gasoline ration for example—to tie up the war agency's program.

Part of the amendment reads:

"The District courts of the United States are hereby given exclusive jurisdiction to enjoin or set aside, in whole or in part, any order suspending any priority or allocation, or denying a stay of any such suspension, that may have been issued by any person, officer, or agency, acting or purporting to act hereunder, or under any other law or authority."

SOCIAL SECURITY TAX 'FREEZE' SEEN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30—(AP) Congress headed toward a veto fight with President Roosevelt today as the House Ways and Means committee voted 17 to 7 to "freeze" the Social Security tax.

Administration leaders said the President is bound to veto such a bill, and predicted that the tax would double—from 1 to 2 per cent against employe pay and employer payrolls— on January 1, as provided in the basic security law. They felt they had sufficient votes to sustain a veto, since a two thirds majority in both Houses is necessary to override.

But a bi-partisan bloc laid plans to tie the "freeze" and War Powers Extension bills into one measure, when they reach the Senate. This would put the President in the position of letting the "freeze" become law or giving up his vast wartime authority, including the rationing power.

Nine Republicans and eight Democrats combined in the House committee to approve the "freeze" bill. Seven Democrats voted against it.

Chairman Doughton (D-NC) said "the committee felt the country wants a thorough study of the tax before there is any increase. The social security reserve fund has more money in it now than we expected."

The committee approved a resolution for a study of the overall security rate and trust fund problem.

HOUSE TO PROBE LITTELL OUSTER

Follows FDR's Dismissal of Assistant Attorney General for 'Insubordination.'

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—(AP) President Roosevelt fired Assistant Attorney General Norman Littell today for "insubordination" but that didn't close out the Justice department feud—it only moved over into Congress.

Rep. Voorhis (D-Cal.) introduced a resolution for an investigation of the whole matter by the House Judiciary committee, taking ue with the grounds on which President dismissed Littell.

Fired for "Insubordination" reason given is 'insubordin-which is based upon the of Littell's statement giv-reasons for refusal to re-Voorhis said in a state-ver, Littell issued no state-imself but on the contrary ement was requested of e Senate and War Investigating committee and released by the committee."

The public row started when Attorney General Biddle demanded Littell's resignation after a series of differences. Littell, refusing to resign, accused Biddle of "conduct contrary to basic principles of good government."

Littell asserted that Biddle intervened in a Justice department case in behalf of Thomas C. Corcoran, onetime Presidential intimate now in private law practice.

Senator Ferguson (R-Mich.) today called this "a very serious charge," which should be "aired."

Ferguson is a member of the War Investigating committee which conducted the preliminary investigation that brought out Littell's statement. The committee itself, however, showed little disposition to carry the matter further; Chairman Mead (D-N.Y.) said "we do not feel that we have jurisdiction."

Littell himself left office claiming he had won "a complete victory for good government."

Mr. Roosevelt minced no language in firing the 45-year-old Seattle, Wash., attorney who has been in charge of the Justice department's lands division since April, 1939.

FDR Asked He Resign

"When statements made by Norman Littell first appeared in the papers," the President said in a statement issued through the Justice department, "I wrote to him that it was primarily an executive matter; and that I hoped for his own career he would resign.

"Since then he has volunteered a long statement, thus substantiating what the Attorney General had said about his insubordination.

"This is inexcusable; and under the circumstances my only alternative is to remove him from office, which I have done today."

Littell's "long statement" to which the President referred was a memorandum of 12,000 words to the Mead committee. It included the assertions concerning Biddle and Corcoran.

Biddle in a statement described Littell's assertions as "reckless and unfounded" but said he did not propose "to enter into any controversy with him in the public press."

"As head of the Department of Justice," Biddle added, "I must take responsibility for its operation and will not tolerate such serious disloyalty or insubordination from any member of the Department even if he thinks it is his public duty to remain in office after he has been asked to resign."

Biddle asked Nov. 18 for Littell's resignation.

Calls Press Conference

Before leaving the Justice department, Littell called in reporters for a news conference. He said he could "understand perfectly" the President's action; that Mr. Roosevelt, burdened by war duties, could not go into details of the matter and "must stand on the administrative practice of supporting the superior officer." He said he had received a telegram from the President expressing regret that the action was necessary.

Contending "good government" had been served, Littell declared:

"To state only one consequence, the planned appointment of my successor in this great division of the Department of Justice will not now be a Tommy Corcoran henchman because both the Chief Executive and the Judiciary committees of Congress are amply warned."

Littell said J. E. Williams, his assistant, had been appointed acting head of the Lands division by Biddle and called Williams "one of the finest and ablest public servants I have ever known."

As for his future, he said there had been suggestions from friends in the East and in California about resuming private law practice.

Mrs. Littell, who was with him, volunteered her own sum-up: "It's been a grand fight."

PLAN TO OPPOSE FLOOD CONTROL BILL IS DROPPED

WASHINGTON, Nov 30 — (AP) Senate opposition to the billion dollar Flood Control bill collapsed today.

Senator Murray (D.-Mont.) agreed to withhold his Missouri Valley authority amendment. However, his insistance of an opportunity to outline his advocacy of a MVA held off passage of the bill until tomorrow.

The House-approved measure was brought to the very brink of passage with the voice vote rejection of another Murray amendment to deny army engineers jurisdiction over water conversation reservoirs in western arid states.

Then, under persuasion of colleagues, he dropped his plan to offer an amendment setting up a Missouri Valley authority, patterned along the lines of the Tennessee Valley authority.

Acting Majority Leader Hill (Ala.), Chairman Overton (D.-La.) ofthe Senate Commerce Flood Contral sub-committee, and Chairman Thomas (D.-Okla.) of the Agriculture committee won him over by promising to help him get early hearing on his proposal as a separate bill early in the new Congress.

After he was made his statement, he said, he will drop his fight. Overton said he knew of no other amendments that would be pressed.

Support for Murray's effort to prevent action on the Flood Control bill at this session dwindled when Vermont's Republican Senators Austin and Aiken won their long battle for revision of a provision relating to the Connecticut basin.

The compromise was so satisfactory to Senator Aiken that he told reporters he would not press for consideration of the proposed St. Lawrence seaway and power project as an amendment to the bill.

Aiken indicated he would offer that controversial proposal to the upcoming rivers and harbors bill rather than imperial the Connecticut basin compromise which he and Austin regarded as a victory.

The compromise amendment would substitute for the proposed big Williamsville dam eight smaller dams, four of which would be situated on the West river and four on the river's tributaries.

In addition to allowing construction of the eight dams, one of which would be at the old Williamsville station in Newfane, Vt., the amendment would allow their use for generation of hydro-electric power, although only after consultation of army engineers and Vermont state officials.

Austin said the eight dams would provide for 88 per cent of the flood control contemplated in the single Williamsville dam.

Flamm's Lawyer Terms F.C.C. Inquiry 'Unfair'

Says His Objection to Closed Hearings Was Not Noted

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (AP).—A House committee investigating the Federal Communications Commission was accused by an attorney today of unfairness.

Philip Handelmann, representing Donald Flamm, former owner of radio station WMCA, in New York, directed criticism at deletion from the record of an objection to holding further hearings behind closed doors.

Mr. Handelmann, in a wire to the chairman, Representative Clarence F. Lea, Democrat, of California, said the committee's deletions "can serve only to color the true record."

Representative Lea, defending the action, said Mr. Handelmann's remarks objecting to the decision "were not a part of the record because he (Handelmann) had not been recognized by the chair."

Decision to close the hearings was made Tuesday. Immediately John J. Sirica, committee counsel, resigned, and Robert Barker, assistant counsel, was named his successor.

Colonel Teleford Taylor, former chief counsel for the F. C. C., was among witnesses at today's closed session. Mr. Handelmann and Mr. Flamm, the former said, have been summoned to appear later.

In the course of its investigation of the F. C. C. the committee has dealt extensively with details of the sale of WMCA to Edward J. Noble, former Under Secretary of Commerce.

Mr. Flamm has charged he was "coerced" into the sale, and a former employee of WMCA, Leslie Evan Roberts, testified the owner was subjected to a "campaign of terror" to make him sell.

Asks 2-Term Limit on President

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (AP)—Future Presidents would be limited to two terms under a Constitutional amendment proposed today by Senator Willis, Republican, of Indiana. No person shall be elected President, read the resolution, "who shall have served all or part of two previous terms."

Bombsight Right To U.S.

New York, Nov. 30 (AP)—All patent rights, models and designs of the famed Norden bombsight have been turned over to the United States Government by Carl L. Norden, the Netherlands inventor.

Norden made the announcement last night at the annual dinner of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. He was given the society's Holley Medal, awarded annually for "some great and unique act of genius of engineering nature that has accomplished a great and timely public benefit."

"Proverbial Dollar"

He said he turned over the bombsight patents and designs to the Government "for the proverbial payment of $1 in each instance."

The society's highest award, the Asme Medal, went to Edward G. Budd, Philadelphia manufacturer, for "outstanding engineering achievements in stainless and lightweight steel.

Honorary LL.D. For Nimitz

New York, Nov. 30 (AP)—Admiral Chester W. Nimitz will be awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws by Fordham University, following a field mass to be held December 7, at the naval post at Honolulu.

Thomas Sees Socialist Party As 'Dead,' Predicts Coalition

NEW YORK, Nov. 30—(AP) Norman Thomas, Socialist leader and five times unsuccessful presidential candidate, today said frankly the Socialist party was dead as a national political entity.

"Its strength," he said in an interview, "lies in a coalition with progressive elements," and he added:

"America is on the road to fascism, or a variant of fascism. The only thing that can stop it, can preserve democracy, is a spontaneous emergence of a coalition of progressive groups—from labor, the farm and from regional minority parties."

The 60-year-old, one-time Presbyterian minister continued: "When the two major parties differ so little in platform, merely in personalities, pressure politics creep in, making a fertile field for fascists."

"I believe the United States will have chronic unemployment after the first few postwar years," Thomas said. "This may provide the spark for a new political alignment and possibly the rise of a new party somewhat similar to Canada's Co-operative Commonwealth Federation."

If a coalition party springs up, Thomas does not expect to be its presidential nominee. His age, he said, precludes this.

"I look for a new, younger leader," he declared. "I believe there will be a new crop of young leaders in all parties after the war. Those now in service will want to be heard."

This belief, he added, left him with the conviction that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey would not be the Republican standard bearer in 1948. "Any candidate who didn't have a uniform on will have a tough time," Thomas said. "I think Dewey knows this."

He said he didn't think President Roosevelt would make the race again but declined to speculate on the 1948 presidential opponents, saying it was too far off.

As for the C.I.O.-Political Action committee, he said its future was less bright than most people paint it. "The PAC did a good job in getting out the vote for President Roosevelt," he said, "but Roosevelt received more votes in 1940."

Destroyers Save Two Vessels

Crews Rescue Almost Entire Complement After Merchantmen Collide and Burn.

Boston, Nov. 30 (A. P.).—Flames shot 250 feet into the evening sky and fire raced through two merchant ships in the convoy, but men of the United States Navy were equal to the task of rescuing 121 out of 128 of the stricken crafts' crews and of saving the vessels and most of their cargoes.

This tale of the sea was unfolded at a press conference today after the two destroyer escort ships that took part in that twenty-hour battle put in here for repairs.

Secrecy still shrouded the time and place where the crews of the two small Navy ships fought all night and well into the next day after the British tanker Mount George McKnight, loaded with 1,500,000 gallons of 100-octane gasoline, and the American cargo ship Howard L. Gibson collided and caught fire.

Commander Henry Mullins Jr., U. S. N., of Marion, S. C., escort commander, ordered the U. S. S. Ahrens, on which he was aboard, and the U. S. S. Holton to the rescue. The Ahrens was commanded by Lieut. William J. Rogers Pr., U. S. N., formerly of Seattle, Wash.

The Ahrens took aboard fifty-one out of fifty-six of the tanker's crew, and the Holton took on seventy of the Gibson's seventy-two men.

Rough Sea Brings Danger.

At first the sea was fairly calm, but as night wore on and daybreak arrived the waves rose. Ammuntion on the merchantmen exploded. There was the danger that more of the gasoline would let go. The fire on the tanker then was confined to two compartments. Officials theorized later that the roll of the sea allowed enough sea water aboard to prevent spread of the flames.

Metalsmith Robert G. Beach of 28 Gaviota Way, San Francisco, cut holes in the decks of the Gibson to make room for hoselines. John Edward Ross, 18 years old, seaman 1/, of Bedford, Mass., modestly admitted that he was in the crew that fought the Gibson fire but Lieut. Milton Knight, U. S. N. R., of Toledo, Ohio, chimed in to say: "He worked all night in that smoke and he did one fine job."

Especially equipped forces, under Lieut. Donald B. Burke, U. S. N. R., of Dunsmuir, Cal., brought the tanker blaze under control next day.

Commander Mullins estimated that nine-tenths of the tanker's gasoline and three-fifths of the Gibson's assorted cargo were salvaged.

Lieut. Frank J. Casey, U. S. N. R., of 366-A Fifth street, Brooklyn, N. Y., said: "It was a tough deal on the fellows. Physically, they took quite a beating."

Says War In Pacific Still May Take Years

Philadelphia, Nov. 30 (AP)—Chinese Ambassador Wei Tao-ming declared tonight the war in the Pacific "may still be a matter of years"

The Japanese plan to make China the decisive battleground and the more units of their navy are destroyed, the harder they will try to consolidate their position on the Asiatic mainland, Dr. Wei said before the St. Andrews Society here.

He said China had been able to hold out against Japan's far superior armament for two reasons—"moral force and the leadership of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek."

CHURCH COUNCIL URGES DELAY IN TRAINING PLAN

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 30—(AP) The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, representing 26,000,000 American protestants, today asked the Congress of the United States to wait until after the war before deciding on peacetime military conscription.

The 300 delegates from 26 denominations, closing their biennial session, said in a resolution:

"We cannot now foresee the precise nature or strength of the armaments that may be required by the world community when there shall have been established a general system of international security.

"We are not here pronouncing judgment for or against conscription but we are pointing out that for the United States to change now its historic policy might be so interpreted as to prejudice the post-war settlement and jeopardize the possibility of achieving the kind of world order reflected in our government's war aims."

Other resolutions passed by the council:

Warned that "military victory will not of itself establish the better world we seek" and urged that the U. S. beware of "the danger of irresponsible and un-Christian use of the unprecedented and in some respects unrivalled power which we are gaining. In public policy and conduct we must recognize the governance of God and the immutability of the moral law, that the leadership to which we are being called may be exercised with due humility and under the restraint of moral discipline and in cooperation with other nations."

Declared the churches as favoring, in principle, a fixed date for Easter and approved a committee report which suggested the second Sunday in April as nearest the historic date of the resurrection. The final decision depends on discussions with American churches not members of the council and with churches of other lands.

Urged the government to initiate international consultation on "human rights and fundamental freedoms," setting up an agency similar to the social and economic council set forth in the Dumbarton Oaks proposal.

Demanded that "the right of individuals everywhere to religious liberty shall be recognized and, subject only to the maintenance of public order and security, shall be guaranteed against legal provisions and administrative acts which would impose political, economic, or social disabilities on grounds of religion."

Suggested "that our government be urged to apply the principles of non-discrimination on grounds of religion in overseas relief for which it has a separate responsibility or a joint responsibility with other nations. This relates both to the recipients of aid and to the agencies empowered to distribute relief."

Rockefeller Ends Good Will Tour

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 30.—Nelson Rockefeller, Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, left here last night for Washington after a "most successful" tour of four good neighbor nations he never had visited before.

He said that in his opinion co-operation between Latin America and the United States would continue into peacetime.

Mr. Rockefeller arrived yesterday by clipper from Venezuela, the Dominican Republic, Haiti and Cuba.

GREEN RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT OF AFL; PLEDGES UNITY

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 30—(AP) The American Federation of Labor unanimously re-elected William Green as president for the 21st time today and he immediately pledged himself to work toward union with the CIO and the United Mine Workers.

Earlier in the 64th convention, which closed tonight, Green had offered to quit if it would bring solidarity of American Labor.

The scholarly AFL president, whose score of years in office has encompassed some of the bitterest strife in the nation's labor history, said as he accepted another term:

"Some who left us will be back when we next convene. I will do my best to bring it about."

All 13 vice-presidents and secretary-treasurer George Meany, likewise were re-elected without opposition. The 1945 annual convention goes to Chicago.

The vice presidents, in order, are: William L. Hutcheson of the carpenters; Matthew Woll of the photo engravers; Joseph N. Weber, musicians; G. M. Bugniazet, electrical workers; George M. Harrison, railway clerks; Daniel J. Tobin, of the teamsters; Harry C. Bates, of the brick layers; W. D. Mahon, street railway employers; Felix H. Knight, railway carmen; Edward Flore, hotel and restaurant workers; Harvey W. Brown, machinists; W. C. Birthright, barbers and W. C. Doherty, letter carriers.

The convention began two weeks ago with a strong appeal from the powerful executive council to the CIO and to John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers to return to the ALF.

Lewis, founder of the CIO, led it away from the federation in 1937. Later he walked out of the CIO, too, leaving Philip Murray in command of that group.

The unity theme was carried through by the AFL delegates, who voted this week to make every effort possible to bring Lewis and Murray back to the fold, with their respective organizations.

The convention closed with an invitation to free trade unions throughout the world to join in a struggle against depotism.

Seeks Labor Unity

"We want complete freedom to live as men should who are able to discriminate between the things which contribute to the comforts of living and life itself," the convention delegates said in a formal declaration.

"We believe that the way to build a better world lies first in a united effort to revive and strengthen the free trade union movement of the world."

Thereupon the convention adopted the rallying call to "free workers," to unite in free trade unions, and to free trade unions to unite "to maintain lasting peace with freedom."

The delegates likewise concurred in placing a request before the International Federation of Trade Union to hold a world wide conference in this country "at the earliest possible date."

Underlying this international unity move was the AFL's clash with the British Trade Union council over attendance at its world wide conference in London, now scheduled for February. The AFL, only American representative on the IFTU, declined to go to the London parley, after invitations also had been extended to Soviet trade unions and the CIO, neither of which are members of IFTU. The AFL thought the invitation should have come from the IFTU.

ALLOY DEVELOPED BY JAP NOW USED TO DEFEAT THEM

CHICAGO, Nov. 30 — (AP) The United States is kicking the Japanese in the teeth, so to speak, with one of their own inventions and without any "so sorry, please," Cmdr. E. F. McDonald, Jr., disclosed today.

The material is a super-magnetic alloy developed by Prof. Tokushici Mishima of Tokyo university, introduced in this country shortly before the war under the name alnico and now used by every radionic manufacturer, said McDonald, president of Zenith Radio corp.

Alnico is a component of radio and for other potent radionic weapons. Without it some of the United States' radionic devices would be impossible and others would be heavier, more costly and less efficient, McDonald said.

"The Jap is being nicked daily with his own alnico," he said. "Little did Mr. Mishima think that we would one day be shooting his own development back at his pals. But we are—our fighters are using alnico every day of the week to sink Jap ships and knock enemy planes from the skies."

The great value of alnico, he continued, comes from its light weight, great magnetic strength and performance. Some examples:

It will lift 60 times its own weight of iron and steel. A piece of alnico the size of an eraser on a lead pencil makes a stronger magnet than the large horseshoe magnets popular with youngsters a generation ago. Alnico will retain its magnetic strength under mechanical shock, vibration and temperature changes of several hundred degrees that would soon reduce old type magnets to hunks of inert metal.

"I believe we got more from the Jap in his discovery of this super efficient magnet than the Jap got from us with all the iron, steel and gasoline we are charged with having sold him in pre-war days," Comdr. McDonald said.

He said he could not disclose further information about military applications of alnico.

AIR-FREEDOM CHOICES DUE

Unsettled Problem's Solution To Be Piecemeal

Chicago, Nov. 30 (AP)—The United States led the way tonight toward a choice for each nation between skyways free of political and economic barriers and the age-old method of bargaining for the right to fly.

It was the last choice open to the International Civil Aviation Conference, which in sessions beginning November 1 sought vainly for a complete agreement under which the ocean of air would be as free as the seas.

The effort collapsed when the United States and Great Britain found it impossible to agree on a method by which the air "freedoms" could be conditioned with certain controls on the amount of flying to be done.

U.S. Position Clear

There was no doubt how the American delegation, headed by Adolf A. Berle, Jr., Assistant Secretary of State, felt about it, and many of the 54 nations represented here are prepared to grant a mutual exchange of the "five freedoms" almost immediately. That experience with the principles is expected to attract other countries into it.

The conference now had one major task before it: having given up hope of agreement on a multilateral convention covering all the problems raised, the job now is one of consolidating the gains already made and of attaching to them a provision whereby any nation desiring to can join in the plan for an open sky.

What Are The 5 Freedoms?

The "five freedoms" cover the right to cross another nation's territor, to make noncommercial stops, to carry outbound home traffic anywhere, to pick up inbound home traffic anywhere, and to carry the traffic of other nations so long as those nations do not forbid it.

The open-air proposal outlines those freedoms with only such restrictions as were deemed necessary to protect sovereign rights. It contemplates no assignment of routes or capacity quotas by a central body. It does not set up a tariff conference, but leaves the door open for one if it is wanted.

It now appears the conference will conclude on Sunday with more achieved than was proposed in the original agenda prepared by the United States. Those achievements will fall somewhat short of the hopes of Great Britain and Canada, hopes which most other nations shared when they recognized the degree of harmony in the meeting.

Summary Of Achievements

In summary, the achievements of the conference were:

A world agreement covering air navigation (rules for flying) and technical standards and procedures (such as uniform maps, meteorological and communications services and minimum safety standards), establishing an international body to administer that agreement, and formulating a partial set of rules for air transport operations.

Standard Negotiation Form

An interim agreement to be used pending formal ratification of the permanent agreement and covering much the same ground.

A provision protocol to be attached by some means to the convention and under which those nations wanting the American ideal of a free air can have it.

An interim agreement to do the same thing for the interim period.

A standard form for bilateral negotiations which would be in effect a common instrument for use by all nations in bargaining for air rights. Of course, nations joining the United States' proposal would not need to bargain.

LONDON, NOV. 30-(AP)-THE TEXT OF PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL'S LEND-LEASE STATEMENT TO THE HOUSE OF COMMONS: (ABOUT 1,500)

I THINK IT PROPER TO TAKE THIS FIRST OPPORTUNITY OF TELLING THE HOUSE THE OUTCOME OF THE DISCUSSIONS WHICH HAVE BEEN TAKING PLACE IN THE LAST FEW WEEKS IN WASHINGTON BETWEEN A BRITISH MISSION HEADED BY LORD KEYNES AND THE AMERICAN ADMINISTRATION.

DEC 1 1944

THE MISSION HAS BEEN OCCUPIED IN EXAMINING THE MANNER IN WHICH THE CONTINUATION OF THE WAR AFTER THE DEFEAT OF GERMANY IS LIKELY TO AFFECT THE BEST USE OF OUR JOINT RESOURCES AND, IN PARTICULAR, CHANGES IN THE PROGRAM OF SUPPLIES WHICH THE AMERICAN ADMINISTRATION FEEL IT IS PROPER AND RIGHT FOR US TO HAVE IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE TERMS OF THE LEND-LEASE ACT, AN ACT WHICH WE MUST REMEMBER WAS FOR THE DEFENSE OF THE UNITED STATES AND IS STRICTLY LIMITED TO WHAT IS NECESSARY FOR THE MOST EFFECTIVE PROSECUTION OF THE WAR BY THE U.S. AND ITS ALLIES.

THE END OF THE WAR WITH GERMANY WILL MAKE POSSIBLE LARGE REDUCTIONS IN SOME OF OUR REQUIREMENTS. WE EXPECT OUR NEEDS WILL BE MET BY A PROGRAM AT A RATE NOT MUCH MORE THAN HALF OF WHAT

30.24— 20837

WE HAVE BEEN RECEIVING IN 1944. ALL OF THESE SUPPLIES AND SERVICES WILL BE EXCLUSIVELY FOR THE JOINT WAR EFFORT AGAINST THE COMMON ENEMY.

THE PROLONGATION OF THE WAR INTO WHAT WILL BE FOR US THE SIXTH AND SEVENTH YEAR MEANS THAT CERTAIN IMPROVEMENTS ARE ESSENTIAL IF OUR NATIONAL ECONOMY IS TO BE AS FULLY EFFECTIVE AS POSSIBLE FOR THE PROSECUTION OF THE WAR. FATIGUE AND ABSTINENCE CARRIED TOO FAR AND ENDURED TOO LONG CAN IMPEDE THE EFFECTIVENESS OF A PEOPLE AT WAR AT LEAST AS MUCH AS A MORE SENSATIONAL FORM OF PRIVATION.

DEC 1 1944

AFTER THE DEFEAT OF GERMANY SOME RELEASE OF MANPOWER TO INCREASE THE SUPPLIES AVAILABLE FOR ESSENTIAL CIVILIAN CONSUMPTION MUST FOLLOW IN DUE COURSE AND SOME IMPROVEMENTS IN THE STANDARDS AND VARIETY OF NATIONAL DIET, AND DEVOTION OF RESOURCES TO PROVISION OF EMERGENCY HOUSING AND SERIOUS EFFORTS TO REBUILD THE EXPORT TRADE WHICH WE DELIBERATELY GAVE UP IN THE EXTREMITY OF OUR EMERGENCY BUT WITHOUT WHICH WE CANNOT LIVE IN THE FUTURE.

THESE ARE FORMS OF SACRIFICE WHICH IT IS BOTH POSSIBLE AND RIGHT TO MAKE OVER A LIMITED PERIOD BUT BECAME SELF-DEFEATING IF THEY ARE CONTINUED TOO LONG. ALL THESE MATTERS, BOTH MILITARY AND ECONOMIC, HAVE BEEN JOINTLY EXAMINED, SUPPORTED WITH A WEALTH OF DETAIL BY OUR REPRESENTATIVES IN WASHINGTON WITH THE HEADS OF THE AMERICAN DEPARTMENTS CONCERNED. WE HAVE PUT AT THEIR DISPOSAL EVERY PARTICULAR AND EVERY RELEVANT FACT IN OUR POSSESSION.

MATERIAL HAS BEEN MADE AVAILABLE TO THE PUBLIC BOTH HERE AND IN THE U.S.A. IN THE WHITE PAPER PUBLISHED A FEW DAYS AGO.

DURING THE RECENT BRIEF RECESS OUR REPRESENTATIVES IN WASHINGTON HAVE BEEN IN A POSITION TO MAKE A FULL REPORT. I TAKE THIS OPPORTUNITY TO EXPRESS OUR VERY GREAT APPRECIATION OF THE PRACTICAL SYMPATHY WITH WHICH THE REALITIES OF THE SITUATION HAVE BEEN EXAMINED AND OF THE RESULTS WHICH HAVE BEEN ACHIEVED. I MAY REMIND THE HOUSE THAT IT IS NO PART OF THE LEND-LEASE ACT TO PROVIDE GENERAL RELIEF OR TO PROVIDE FOR POSTWAR RECONSTRUCTION OR TO A OUR EXPORT TRADE. THAT GREAT ACT HAS STOOD US AND OUR ALLIES IN GOOD STEAD AND WE HAVE NEITHER ASKED NOR EXPECTED ANY ASSISTANCE WHICH IS NOT STRICTLY WITHIN ITS TERMS AND PROVISIONS.

DEC 1 1944

NEVERTHELESS AS THE WAR PROCEEDS THE NATURE OF THE AID WHICH FORWARDS ITS PROSECUTION MOST EFFECTIVELY, THOUGH UNCHANGED IN MAJOR MATTERS, GRADUALLY CHANGES IN DETAIL. ACCORDINGLY, SO THAT WE CAN PLAY OUR FULL PART IN CONTINUING THE STRUGGLE, A PROGRAM OF LEND-LEASE AID AGAINST JAPAN AFTER THE DEFEAT OF GERMANY HAS NOW BEEN PLANNED WITH THE AMERICAN ADMINISTRATION TO MAINTAIN OUR FIGHTING POWER AGAINST JAPAN. WITHOUT ANY REDUCTION IN OUR PROPORTIONATE EFFORTS, WE SHALL BE ABLE ALONG WITH THE U.S. TO RELEAE SOME OF OUR MANPOWER TO PRODUCE SOME MORE CIVILIAN GOODS.

SOME IMPROVEMENT IN THE VARIETY OF THE CIVILIAN DIET WILL BE MADE POSSIBLE. WE SHALL BE ABLE TO DO MORE TO BUILD TEMPORARY AND EMERGENCY HOUSES. WE MUST NECESSARILY FOR THE MOST PART DEPEND ON OUR OWN EFFORTS IN THIS FIELD, BUT IN ADDITION TO THOSE EFFORTS RESULTING FROM THE PLANNED AND PROPORTIONAL PROGRAM WE ANTICIPATE AID FROM AMERICAN SOURCES NOT ONLY IN MATERIALS BUT ALSO IN COMPLETE HOUSES TO MEET SOME OF OUR NEEDS FOR TEMPORARY AND EMERGENCY HOUUES FOR WAR WORKERS IN WAR AREAS.

THESE ITEMS ARE BEING CLOSELY EXAMINED WITH THE HELP OF EXPERTS SENT OUT BY THE MINISTRY OF WORKS DURING THE TENURE OF LORD PORTAL.

IT IU TOO SOON TO SAY ON WHAT SCALE THE POSSIBILITIES OF PHYSICAL PRODUCTION AND OF SHIPPING WILL ALLOW THIS MOST GENEROUS ASSISTANCE TO BE REALIZED IN PRACTICE. IT IS NOT TOO SOON TO SAY THAT THE PRINCIPLE IS RECOGNIZED THAT THE PROVISION OF EMERGENCY SHELTER FOR BOMBED-OUT WAR WORKERS IS AN ESSENTIAL PART OF A FULLY EFFECTIVE CONTRIBUTION TO FINAL VICTORY.

FINALLY, WE HAVE BEEN ABLE TO REDUCE THE LEND-LEASE PROGRAM SO THA THERE WILL BE NO OBSTACLES TO THE EFFORTS WE MUST OURSELVES BEGIN A ONCE AND INTENSIFY AFTER THE DEFEAT OF GERMANY TO INCREASE THE EXPORT TRADE WHICH WILL BE ABSOLUTELY VITAL TO US WHEN, AT THE DETERMINATION OF WAR, THE PRESENT SYSTEM OF LEND-LEASE NECESSARILY AND PROPERLY COMES TO AN END.

DEC 1 1944

THIS IS A MATTER BNSWHICH I AM WELL AWARE MEMBERS ARE ANXIOUS TO HEAR IN SOME DETAIL WHAT THE POSITION WILL NOW BE.

THE DEFEAT OF GERMANY WILL MAKE POSSIBLE REDUCTIONS IN THE LEND-LEASE PROGRAM AND IN CERTAIN FIELDS WE HAVE BEEN ABLE TO ANTICIPA THOSE CHANGES AND TO WORK ON THE BASIS OF THE NEW PROGRAM FROM THE BEGINNING OF 1945.

THUS FROM THAT DATE WE SHALL NO LONGER GET SHIPMENTS TO THIS COUNTRY UNDER LEND-LEASE OF ANY MANUFACTURED ARTICLES FOR CIVILIAN USE WHICH ENTER INTO EXPORT TRADE NOR OF MANY RAW AND SEMI-FABRICATED MATERIALS SUCH AS IRON AND STEEL AND SOME NON-FERROUS METALS.

CONSEQUENTLY IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE WHITE PAPER OF SEPTEMBER, 1941, WE SHALL THEN BE FREE TO EXPORT A WIDE RANGE OF GOODS MADE FROM THOSE MATERIALS. NATURALLY WE HAVE NOT USED IN EXPORT AND DO NOT PROPOSE TO USE ANY CRITICALLY SCARCE MATERIAL EXCEPT WHERE THE EXPORT IS ESSENTIAL TO THE EFFECTIVE PROSECUTION OF THE WAR.

UNTIL THE GERMAN WAR IS AT AN END, HOWEVER, THERE CAN OF COURSE BE NO SIGNIFICANT RELEASE OF RESOURCES. THE DEFEAT OF JAPAN MUST STILL CONTINUE TO HAVE THE FIRST CALL ON OUR RESOURCES AFTER THAT, BUT AFTER THE DEFEAT OF GERMANY IT WILL BE BOTH POSSIBLE AND NECESSARY TO TURN OVER AN INCREASING PART OF OUR RESOURCES TO CVVILIAN PRODUCTION INCLUDING THE EXPORT TRADE.

AS A RESULT OF THE RECENT DISCUSSIONS WITH THE U.S. ADMINISTRATION ABOUT THE LEND-LEASE PROGRAM, FOLLOWING THE DEFEAT OF GERMANY EXPORTERS WILL THEN ONLY BE SUBJECT TO THOSE INEVITABLE LIMITATIONS DICTATED BY THE NEEDS OF THE WAR AGAINST JAPAN. THERE IS NOT AND NEVE WAS BEEN ANY QUESTION OF THE EXPORTATIONS IN COMMERCE OF ANY ARTICLES WE HAVE RECEIVED UNDER LEND-LEASE NOR IN GENERAL SHALL WE RECEIVE IN THIS COUNTRY UNDER LEND-LEASE FINISHED ARTICLES IDENTICAL WITH THOSE WE EXPORT.

DEC 1 1944

ALL SUCH ARTICLES WILL BE PAID FOR BY US. WHERE WE CONTINUE TO RECEIVE ANY RAW MATERIALS, THE QUANTITIES SUPPLIED UNDER LEND-LEASE ARE LIMITED TO OUR DOMESTIC CONSUMPTION, FOR THE MANUFACTURE OF MUNITIONS AND THE MAINTENANCE OF OUR ESSENTIAL WAR TIME ECONOMY. WE SHALL PAY CASH FOR ANY ADDITIONAL SUPPLIES WE MAY WISH TO TAKE FROM THE U.S. FOR EXPORT PURPOSES.

THUS ONE UNCERTAINTY ABOUT OUR FUTURE CONDITIONS HAS NOW BEEN

30. 24 — 20839

REMOVED. IT SHOULD BE POSSIBLE FOR EXPORTERS HENCEFORWARD TO MAKE PLANS WITH THE ASSURANCE THAT THEY WILL BE ABLE TO GIVE EFFECT TO THOSE PLANS WITH THE LEAST POSSIBLE TIME LAG WHEN THE DEFEAT OF GERMANY RELEASES MANPOWER CAPACITY AND MATERIALS.

I SHOULD LIKE TO ADD ONE WORD. THE WHITE PAPER ON RECIPROCAL AID LATELY PUBLISHED AND THE PRESIDENT'S LAST LEASE-LEND REPORT PROVIDE VIVID EVIDENCE OF THE EXTENT TO WHICH THE COMMUNITY AND INTER-INDEPENDENCE OF EFFORT BETWEEN THE TWO GREAT ATLANTIC COMMUNITIES. NEVER HAS THERE BEEN A MORE THOROUGH UNDERSTANDING OF THE FACTS OF THE ECONOMIC POSITION AND THE PROBLEMS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA ON BOTH SIDES THAN WE HAVE NOW BEEN ABLE TO REACH. IF MEN OF GOODWILL START OUT FROM THE SAME PREMISES OF AGREED FACTS THEY DO NOT NECESSARILY FIND IT IMPOSSIBLE TO REACH THE SAME CONCLUSIONS.

DEC 1 1944

(EMANUEL SHINWELL: CAN THE PRIME MINISTER ELUCIDATE ONE POINT? ARE WE TO PAY FOR THE GOODS AND RAW MATERIALS IMPORTED FROM THE UNITED STATES OUT OF OUR FOREIGN ASSETS STILL AVAILABLE OR WOULD THE UNITED STATES TAKE IN RETURN GOODS EXPORTED FROM THIS COUNTRY?)

EVERYTHING AS I SAID IN THIS STATEMENT WAS AGREED TO ALMOST SENTENCE BY SENTENCE BY OUR AMERICAN COLLEAGUES AND I WOULD BE GRATEFUL IF MR. SHINWELL WOULD PUT THAT QUESTION, WHICH IS A PERFECTLY VALID QUESTION, TO ME AFTER READING THE PAPER EITHER TOMORROW OR NEXT DAY.

I WOULD NOT LIKE TO GIVE AN ANSWER OFFHAND WHICH MAY NOT CORRESPOND WITH THE EXACT THING WHICH WAS DECIDED UPON. I MUST ADD THAT I CONSIEER THE STATEMENT I HAVE MADE IS ONE OF A HIGHLY SATISFACTOW NATURE AND GIVES REAL HOPE FOR THE FUTURE AND FOR TH SMOOTH DEVELOPMENT OF ECONOMIC AFFAIRS BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES IN THE FUTURE.

(WILLIAM GALLACHER: WHEN THE PRIME MINISTER SAID THAT EARLY STEPU WERE TO BE TAKEN TO ENCOURAGE AND INCREASE THE EXPORT TRADE IS THIS NOT STARTING OFF THE WRONG WAY AS HAPPENED AFTER THE LAST WAR, AND SHOULD NOT DEVELOPMENTS OF OUR EXPORT TRADE ARISE FROM AND BE BASED UPON A SOUND POLICY OF SOCIAL SECURITY FOR THE MASS OF THE PEOPLE?)

THAT RAISES TOPICS OUTSIDE THE LIMITED CHARACTER OF THE STATEMENTS I HAVE MADE.

THE SS TROOPS IN LINDERN WERE MORE LUCKY THAN THOSE IN BEECK, WHICH HAD BEEN A NEST OF DUG-IN TIGER TANKS. AMERICAN TROOPS ENTERING THAT TOWN FOUND MORE DEAD ON THE STREETS THAN ANY TOWN THUS FAR ENCOUNTERED ON THE FRONT.

MOST GERMAN SOLDIERS WERE OUT OF THEIR DUG-IN TANKS AND CELLARS AND ON THE STREETS WHEN A SUDDEN SERENADE OF AMERICAN SHELLS FELL BEFORE DAWN, WITH DEADLY EFFECT.

hampered by lack of air support at the outset because of a heavy overcast, the infantry advanced slowly but doggedly toward the roer against fierce artillery and mortar fire.

"this was one of the toughest operations the army has run up against," declared capt. gordon caesar, 1817 redcliff st., los angeles, calif., a battalion operations officer just before thunderous shell bursts forced him to dive into a cellar.

"these ss troops are giving us more trouble than ever before. it sure looks like we're fighting the battle of germany between here and the rhine."

the pillboxes attacked were the inner defenses of the siegfried line.

"infantry with flamethrowers moved up on them behind the tank before dawn," said lt. col. b. m. bryant of wichita, kans., battalion commander busy quarterbacking the next phase of the attack in the midst of plaster which was falling from a continuous shell barrage.

DEC 1 1944

"the infantry put 90 feet of flames on the pillboxes and heated the huns out. they also threw white phosphorous grenades at them. in fact our boys were throwing everything but rocks. we took four or five out of nine pillboxes in the first few hours and we are working on the rest."

german shellfire finally got so intense that capt. caesar said, "it's too hot to stay here, so we are going forward."

he pointed to a hillside half a mile away where machineguns chattered and mortar bursts gave off nasty, black puffs of smoke.

cpl. clement langlois of independence, la., and pvt. arthur worniak, 805 tawas st., alpena, mich., two combat engineers each lugging 30 pounds of explosives on his shoulders, accompanied the infantry to blow up the pillboxes, but heavy fire from 85mm guns drove them back.

"we found only two guys left out of one platoon and the runner who guided us got shot," said langlois.

DEC 11 1944

"we were pinned down so much we could hardly see anything," added worniak.

after their tank was blown up, cpl. sol rubin, 1040 bryant ave. bronx, n.y., and t/4 herman bonsall, 702 mill st., watertown, n.y., and box 232 reading, pa., wormed their way back on their stomachs through the mud for half a mile.

"we dug in the mud with our hands and prayed," said rubin.

"in one foxhole we found a doughboy wounded in the hip and walke him back to an aid station. there we got a litter and started carrying him. we were fired on again, hitting the doughboy pretty badly in the arm, so we all said to hell with the litter and walked him the rest of the way back.

DEC 1 1944

"the worst part of the day was we lost two cartons of cigarets in our tank."

t/5 rudolph salemi, 1921 holland ave., bronx, n.y., pfc meyer hellerbach, 3509 kings college place, bronx, n.y., pvt. john a tomasunas, 1841 turner ave., grand rapids, mich., and other aid men rushed out among the shell bursts to rescue four unharm members of another tank crew who were unconscious from carbon monoxide fumes.

"we tried giving them artificial respiration right beside the tank but it started getting pretty hot and we had to carry the casualties back unconscious, setting them down in the mud every few minutes until the shells let up," said hellerbach.

Of all the compliments paid prime minister churchill on his 70th birthday anniversary, perhaps the strangest was given by a captured german.

while men in this dugout were listening this afternoon ov field radio to a london broadcast dramatizing churchill's war leadership, t. william boehm of new york city, who speaks german, interrupted:

"That reminds me of what a jerry PW (prisoner of war) told me this morning. the german said: 'I have to admire churchill in a way. He promised the english blood and tears--- and is giving them victo Hitler promised us victory--- and is giving us blood and tears.' "

WAURICHEN, GERMANY, NOV. 30---(AP)--CAPT. ANGELO J. CONTE, DAREDEVIL INFANTRY COMPANY COMMANDER FROM FLOREFFE, PA., JUMPED INTO HIS JEEP AND RODE TWO MILES THROUGH A ROAD HARDLY SAFE ENOUGH FOR WELL-ARMORED TANKS TODAY TO GET VITAL SUPPLIES FOR U.S. NINTH ARMY BOYS HOLDING SHELL-LOCKED LINDERN.

"WHEN CONTE HEARD WHAT THE DOUGHBOYS NEEDED, HE SAID, 'HELL, I'LL GO GET IT,' LT. COL. CHARLES R. URBAN, OF SAFETY HARBOR, FLA., RELATED.

DEC 1 1944

"CONTE TOOK HIS JEEP AND A TRAILER AND WENT ALONG UNDER DIRECT ENEMY OBSERVATION ALL THE WAY. THE GERMANS POURED SHELLS, MORTARS AND MACHINEGUN FIRE AT HIM AND THAT ROAD WAS RED HOT--- BUT THE CAPTAIN WAS BACK IN LINDERN IN TWO AND ONE-HALF HOURS WITH A LOAD OF MEDICAL SUPPLIES, FOOD AND AMMUNITION.

"GUTS? HELL, IT TOOK JUST PLAIN AUDACITY AND COURAGE; WHAT I LIKED ABOUT IT WAS THAT HE VERY EASILY COULD HAVE TOLD ONE OF HIS SOLDIERS TO MAKE THE TRIP--BUT HE IS NOT THAT TYPE OF MAN," URBAN SAID.

CONTE WAS THE FIRST TO DRIVE OVER THE ROAD IN DAYLIGHT. THEY SENT A TANK TO MAKE THE TRIP LAST NIGHT.

NEAR ST.NAZAIRE, NOV. 29-(DELAYED)-(AV)-A STRANGE JOURNEY BY JEEP AND TORPEDO BOAT DURING WHICH AN AMERICAN RED CROSS OFFICIAL FROM BIRMINGHAM, ALA., SAT BLINDFOLDED FOR MORE THAN TWO HOURS WAS THE OPENING MOVE IN EXCHANGE OF 53 ALLIED PRISONERS OF WAR TODAY.

ANDREW GERON HODGES, SENIOR FIELD DIRECTOR FOR THE U.S. 94TH INFANTRY DIVISION, HOISTED A RED CROSS FLAG ABOVE HIS JEEP, AND DROVE INTO GERMAN LINES WEST OF THE LITTLE TOWN OF CHAUVE. HE WAS STOPPED BY A GERMAN LIEUTENANT WHO BLINDFOLDED HIM, DROVE THE JEEP HIMSELF TO A POINT NEAR THE COAST. THERE A TORPEDO BOAT TOOK THEM TO ST.NAZAIRE. AFTER A 10-MINUTE WALK THROUGH THE STREETSN THEY ENTERED A HOUSE. THE BLINDFOLD WAS REMOVED, AND HODGES FOUND HIMSELF LOOKING AT FOUR GERMAN OFFICERS.

THE PARLEY FOR PRISONERS BEGAN. THEY HANDED HODGES WHAT WAS SUPPOSED TO BE A LIST OF ALL ALLIED PRISONERS IN THAT SECTOR. BUT HODGES, EXAMINING IT, SHOOK HIS HEAD.

"THEY'RE NOT ALL HERE. TWO AMERICANS AND AN ENGLISHMAN ARE MISSING."

"ARE YOU SURE?"

DEC 1 1944

"YES, I'M SURE," HODGES SAID. "I KNOW WHO THEY ARE, AND THEY AREN'T ON THIS LIST."

ONE GERMAN SAID: "WELL, YOU WON'T HAVE TO WORRY ABOUT THE AMERICANS. THEY ESCAPED LAST NIGHT."

"IF THEY DID ESCAPE I WILL KNOW ABOUT IT WHEN I GET BACK."

THE GERMANS AGREED THAT WAS RIGHT, AND THEN HODGES ASKED ABOUT THE ENGLISHMAN.

"WHAT DO YOU CARE ABOUT JUST ONE ENGLISHMAN," THE GERMANS ASKED. "YOU DON'T EVEN KNOW HIS NAME."

"THE HELL I DON'T. HE'S CAPT.MICHAEL R.O.FOOT. HIS FATHER'S A BRIGADIER."

THE GERMAN LEANED FORWARD: "I'M AFRAID WE CAN'T EXCHANGE CAPTAIN FOOT. HE'S GIVEN US A LOT OF TROUBLE. HE'S ESCAPED FOUR TIMES AND BEEN RECAPTURED FOUR TIMES. HE KNEW TOO MUCH."

"IN THAT CASE," HODGES REPLIED, "I CAN ONLY SAY THAT THE [illegible] CAN'T COME OFF. WE WANT THEM ALL, OR NONE. MY PEOPLE WOULDN'T CONSIDER LEAVING A SINGLE ALLIED PRISONER HERE."

"YOU WOULD SACRIFICE THE FREEDOM OF THE OTHER MEN FOR JUST ONE ENGLISH OFFICER?"

"YES, OR FOR JUST ONE FRENCH PRIVATE. IT'S ALL OR NONE."

FINALLY THE GERMANS SAID THEY WOULD EXCHANGE CAPTAIN FOOT FOR FIVE GERMAN MAJORS WITH IRON CROSSES AT THE NECK.

"THEN YOU ADMIT THAT ONE BRITISH CAPTAIN IS THE EQUAL OF FIVE GERMAN MAJORS?" HODGES SAID.

WHEN THE INTERPRETER TRANSLATED THIS FOR THE RANKING GERMAN OFFICE HE BANGED HIS FIST ON THE TABLE, AND CRIED "NEIN, NEIN."

"BUT YOU SAID THE EXCHANGE WAS TO BE ON AN EQUAL BASIS--RANK FOR RANK," HODGES SAID.

AFTER FURTHER PARLEY, THE GERMANS PROPOSED THREE CAPTAINS AND THRE LIEUTENANTS FOR FOOT. HODGES REFUSED. IN THE END THE GERMANS AGREED TO SWAP FOOT FOR ONE GERMAN MAJOR OR CAPTAIN WITH A PLAIN IRON CROSS. THE AGREEMENT THEN WAS SEALED ON A GLASS OF BRANDY. HODGES WAS BLINDFOLDED AND CAME BACK.

WITH THE 5TH INFANTRY DIVISION IN FRANCE, NOV. 30-(AP)-THE 5TH INFANTRY HAS WON A REPUTATION AS ONE OF THE FASTEST-MOVING RIFLE OUTFITS IN THE CAMPAIGN ACROSS FRANCE.

SOME OF ITS MEMBERS SUGGEST THAT THIS SPEED REPRESENTED AN EFFORT TO WARM UP AFTER ONE WINTER IN ICELAND AND ANOTHER IN NORTHERN IRELAND.

HOWEVER, IT WAS MAJ. GEN. LEROY IRWIN'S DOUGHBOYS WHO CLIMAXED

THE FRENCH PHASE OF THE CAMAIGN BYSHARING IN T

THE FRENCH PHA E OF THE CAMAIGN BY SHARING IN THE CAPTURE OF METZ, AND WHO REALLY ROLLED ACROSS FRANCE. SOMETIMES THEY TRAVELED AS MUCH AS 84 MILES IN A DAY.

THE DIVISION IS NOT FULLY MOTORIZED AND IS SUPPOSED ONLY TO DO THE STANDARD TWO AND A HALF MILES PER HOUR DURING DAYLIGHT. BUT WITH KITCHENS AND OTHER IMPEDIMENTA LEFT BEHIND, THE SOLDIERS WERE PILED INTO TRUCKS, TANKS, TANK DESTROYERS, JEEPS AND TRAILERS, AND CAPTURED GERMAN VEHICLES, AND ROLLED ALONG MANY A DAY AT AN ARMORED DIVISION'S PACE.

DEC 1 1944

THE WEARERS OF THE DIAMOND PATCH LIKE TO MAKE ONE POINT CLEAR IN TELLING OF THE 700-MILE FIGHTING SWEEP WHICH CROSSED THE EURE, SEINE, MARNE, AISNE, MEUSE, MOSELLE AND SEILLE RIVERS. THAT IS THIS: THE FIFTH, EXCEPT FOR ONE DAY, WAS NOT FOLLOWING ARMOR, BUT WAS MAKING ITS OWN SPEARHEAD.

IN ADDITION TO SHARING WITH THE 95TH DIVISION THE DISTINCTION OF SUCCESSFULLY STORMING METZ FOR THE FIRST TIME SINCE ATTILA THE HUN DID THE TRICK, THE FIFTH LIBERATED THE CITIES OF ANGERS, CHARTRES, ETAMPES, MONTEREAU, FONTAINEBLEU AND REIMS AND HELPED SECURE VERDUN, NOT FAR FROM THE PLACE WHERE THE 5TH DIVISION OF THE FIRST WORLD WAR WON FAME FOR ITS CROSSING OF THE MEUSE.

THE DIVISION TRAINED AT AND BUILT UP FORT CUSTER NEAR BATTLE CREEK, MICH. IT PARTICIPATED IN TENNESSEE AND LOUISIANA MANEUVERS. IN THE EARLY SUMMER OF 1941, LONG BEFORE PEARL HARBOR, ONE BATTALION OF THE 10TH REGIMENT WAS SENT TO ICELAND AND THE REMAINDER OF THE DIVISION FOLLOWED IN APRIL, 1942. FROM THEN UNTIL AUGUST, 1943, THE RED DIAMOND MEN WERE STRUNG OUT ACROSS SOME OF THE WORLD'S BLEAKEST AND COLDEST LANDSCAPE IN LONELY OUTPOSTS AND GARRISONS, WITH THE MONOTONY RELIEVED MAINLY BY HARD WORK UNLOADING SHIPS AND BUILDING A HUGE AIRPORT.

IN THE CAMPAIGN IN FRANCE BEGUN JULY 6 THE DIVISION CAPTURED 9,600 PRISONERS. ITS ENGAGEMENTS VARIED FROM THE SANGUINARY ATTACK ON FORT DRIANT BEFORE METZ TO THE AMAZINGLY LOP-SIDED VICTORY AT CHARTRES, WHERE THE 11TH REGIMENT TOOK THE TOWN, CAPTURING 800, WITH THE LOSS OF FOUR KILLED.

THE PRESENT REGIMENTAL COMBAT COMMANDERS ARE COL. WARREN A. ROLFE, DALLAS, TEX., SECOND INFANTRY; COL. ROBERT P.BELL, DENVER, COLO., TENTH INFANTRY; COL. CHARLES W.YUILS, VANDERBILT, MICH., 11TH INFANTRY.

BRIG. GEN. HAROLD A.VANDERVEER, MANCHESTER, N.H., IS THE DIVISIONAL ARTILLERY COMMANDER; BRIG. GEN. A.D.WARNOCK, ATCHISON, KANS., ASSISTANT DIVISION COMMANDER, AND COL. PAUL FRANSON, MONTGOMERY, ALA., CHIEF OF STAFF.

IRWIN'S GRANDFATHER, BRIG. GEN. JAMES BOWLING IRWIN, WON A CONGRESSIONAL MEDAL OF HONOR FIGHTING INDIANS, AND HIS FATHER, MAJ. GEN. GEORGE LE ROY IRWIN, WAS AN ARTILLERY BRIGADE COMMANDER IN THE 2ND AND 32ND DIVISIONS IN THE FIRST WORLD WAR.

WITH THIS BACKGROUND IT IS OBVIOUS THAT FROM THE TIME OF HIS BIRTH IN 1893 AT FORT MONROE, VA., IRWIN WAS DESTINED TO GO TO WEST POINT. HE DID AND HE WAS A CLASSMATE OF GEN. EISENHOWER WHEN THEY WERE GRADUATED IN 1915.

HE FIRST SAW SERVICE AS A SECOND LIEUTENANT IN THE CAVALRY

DURING THE MEXICAN EXPEDITION BEFORE AMERICAN ENTRY INTO WORLD WAR I. HE SWITCHED TO THE ARTILLERY AND SERVED ON THE FIELD ARTILLERY BOARD, HELPING TO DEVELOP THE PRESENT 240-MM. AND EIGHT-INCH HOWITZERS.

HE WENT TO NORTH AFRICA AS AN ARTILLERY COMMANDER IN THE 9TH DIVISION IN DECEMBER, 1942, AND SAW ACTION AT THALA, EL GUETTAR, SEDJENANE AND BIZERTE. HE WAS PROMOTED TO MAJOR GENERAL IN JUNE, 1943, AND PLACED IN COMMAND OF THE 9TH. HE FLEW TO ICELAND IN JULY, 1943, TO ASSUME HIS NEW COMMAND.

KNOWN TO HIS OLD FRIENDS AS "RED," GEN. IRWIN'S HOME IS IN WASHINGTON, WHERE HIS WIFE LIVES. HE HAS TWO SONS.

HIS DECORATIONS INCLUDE THE SILVER STAR AND THE LEGION OF MERIT.

WITH THE U.S. SEVENTH ARMY IN ALSACE, FRANCE, NOV. 30-(AP)-STRASBOURG WAS HEAVILY SHELLED BY ENEMY GUNS FROM ACROSS THE RHINE TODAY WHILE ALLIED FORCES CONTINUED THEIR ADVANCE SOUTH OF THE CITY.

THE SEVENTH ARMY OCCUPIED GERATHEIM, 12 1/2 MILES SOUTH OF STRASBOURG AND DROVE FARTHER SOUTHWARD TOWARD A JUNCTION WITH FRENCH FIRST ARMY FORCES STRIKING NORTH ALONG THE RHINE.

OTHER UNITS OF THE SEVENTH ARMY ALSO PUSHED BEYOND STROTZHEIM, 16 1/2 MILES SOUTHWEST OF STRASBOURG.

THE FRENCH FIRST ARMY BATTLED SUCCESSFULLY AGAINST STRONG RESISTANCE AT BOURBACH, 11 MILES WEST OF MULHOUSE. IT NOT ONLY REPULSED A TANK-SUPPORTED COUNTERATTACK BUT KNOCKED THE ENEMY BACK BEYOND ITS ORIGINAL LINES. IN THIS STRUGGLE THE GERMANS LOST TEN TANKS AND SUFFERED SEVERE INFANTRY CASUALTIES.

BETWEEN MULHOUSE AND THE RHINE THE FRENCH PENETRATED DEEPLY INTO THE HARTH FOREST AND NOW HAVE MUCH OF THE AREA MOPPED UP.

RAIN AND A LOW CEILING ON THIS FRONT PRACTICALLY ELIMINATED ALL AIR SUPPORT FOR BOTH THE FRENCH AND SEVENTH ARMIES.

ON THE NORTHERN PART OF THE ALSATIAN PLAIN THE SEVENTH CONTINUED ITS DRIVE NORTHEASTWARD TOWARD THE GERMAN BORDER, NORTH OF SAVERNE THE AMERICANS OCCUPIED FROHMUHL, 16 MILES FROM THE FRONTIER, AND BISCHHOLTZ, ABOUT 12 MILES FROM THE LINE.

TO THE EAST THE DOUGHBOYS APPROACHED SCHWEIGHOUSE, A MILE AND A HALF FROM HAGENAU.

DEC 1 1944

THE GERMAN RADIO REPORTED THAT THE NAZIS WERE WITHDRAWING FROM HAGENAU 14 1/2 MILES NORTHEASTWARD TO THE FRENCH-GERMAN BORDER, BUT THE GERMANS ONLY A FEW HUNDRED YARDS FROM US OBVIOUSLY HAVEN'T HEARD IT.

FOR THOSE GERMANS STILL ARE BITTERLY RESISTING ON A TREE-BY-TREE BASIS IN THE WOODS WEST AND SOUTH OF THE STRATEGIC CITY, IN AND NEAR WHICH HUGE QUANTITIES OF AMMUNITION AND OTHER MATERIEL ARE STORED.

YET THE RADIO REPORT WAS INTERESTING, FOR NOW IT SEEMS THE GERMANS ARE RECONCILED TO A WITHDRAWL UNDER PRESSURE TO THE SIEGFRIED-RHINE LINE, WHERE THEY WILL TRY TO LAST OUT THE WINTER.

CAPTURE OF TWO MORE VILLAGES INCREASED TO 12 THE NUMBER THE YANKS HAVE TAKEN SOUTH AND WEST OF THE CITY. ONCE OUT OF THE WOODS, THE AMERICANS PROBABLY WILL BE ABLE TO DOMINATE HAGENAU, IF NOT OCCUPY IT, WITH A PREPONDERANCE OF ARTILLERY.

NORTHWEST OF HAGENAU, AMERICANS ARE NEARING A TOWN ONLY NINE MILES SOUTH OF THE GERMAN BORDER.

MRS.CIRILA V.ENECILLO TALKED SOFTLY AND PLAYED WITH HER 11-MONTHS-OLD DAUGHTER LETECIA. SHE HAS BECOME LENGENDARY IN THE PHILIPPINES BECAUSE OF HER PROWESS WITH THE RIFLE AND KNIFE.

CIRILA WORE A REGULATION ARMY WEB BELT WITH TWO CLIPS OF AMMUNITION SHE CARRIED A GARAND RIFLE. WHEN SHE POSED FOR HER PICTURE, SHE STOOD STIFFLY ERECT.

SHE FLED TO THE HILLS AND JOINED THE GUERRILLAS WHEN WAR CAME. THEN 15 YEARS OLD, SHE BECAME COMMANDER OF A 15-MAN GUERRILLA BAND.

"THE FIRST JAPS MY UNIT KILLED WERE IN THE PALO RIVER VALLEY WHERE THEY CAME TO US SEARCHING FOR FOOD," SHE SAID. "WE GAVE THEM FOOD, BUT WHILE THEY WERE EATING I ORDERED MY MEN TO GRAB THE RIFLES THE JAPS HAD LAID ASIDE. WE STABBED THEM WITH THEIR OWN BAYONETS, ALL 10 OF THEM."

HER HUSBAND, CORP.ALEJO E.ENECILLO, FOUGHT WITH THE WELL-ORGANIZED GUERRILLA FORCES, GETTING AN OCCASIONAL LEAVE TO VISIT CIRILA. ALWAYS, SHE SAID, THE JAPANESE TRAILED HER, HOPING TO CATCH HER GUERRILLA HUSBAND WITH HER.

THEN, LAST DECEMBER, DEEP IN THE WOODS, IN THE DARK OF NIGHT, CIRILA BORE HER DAUGHTER, LETECIA.

ONE MONTH LATER, WHILE SHE WAS STILL SICK AND WEAK, CIRILA WAS CAPTURED. THIS WAS HER STORY:

"ONE OF THE GUERRILLAS, JUAN BATULA, WAS COURTMARTIALED BY THE GUERRILLA ARMY. HE ESCAPED AND WENT OVER TO THE JAPS. FROM HIM, THEY LEARNED WHERE MY DAAGHTER AND I WERE HIDING.

"AT 4 A.M., THE JAPS BROKE INTO MY HOUSE, TOOK MY BABY AND ME TO THEIR CAPTAIN. THEY TRIED TO MAKE ME TELL WHERE MY HUSBAND WAS. I WOULDN'T TELL. SO THE JAP CAPTAIN SENTENCED ME TO DEATH. MY HEAD WAS TO BE CUT OFF.

"BUT SOON AFTER THE CAPTAIN TOLD ME THEY WERE TAKING PITY ON MY DAUGHTER AND ME. I WOULDN'T BE KILLED. BUT THEN THEY DEMANDED ALL OVER THAT I TELL WHERE ALEJO WAS. I WOULDN'T TELL. SO THEY SLAPPED ME, KICKED ME, TOOK A BELT AND WHIPPED ME.

"THE THIRD TIME I WAS BROUGHT BEFORE THE JAP CAPTAIN AND WOULDN'T TELL, HE ORDERED SOME SOLDIERS TO TAKE ME OUT AND BURN ME. THEY HESITATED, STARTED JABBERING BACK.

"I DON'T KNOW WHAT THEY SAID BUT PRETTY SOON THEY WENT TO DINNER. FOUR GUARDS WERE LEFT WITH ME. I TALKED TO THEM, TOLD THEM HOW SICK AND WEAK I WAS. THEY MUST HAVE BELIEVED ME BECAUSE ALL FOUR WENT INSIDE TO EAT.

"I TOOK LETECIA AND RAN OUT OF THE CAMP. THAT NIGHT I HID IN A CAVE. WHEN THE JAPS STARTED SOUTH LOOKING FOR ME, I WENT NORTH AND FINALLY REACHED FRIENDS AND HOME. THREE DAYS LATER MY HUSBAND REACHED ME."

ABOARD A U.S. DESTROYER IN ORMOC BAY, PHILIPPINES, NOV 28-(DELAYED)-(AP)-FIVE-INCH GUNS FROM TWO DESTROYERS OF A SQUADRON SHELLING THE WEST COAST OF LEYTE SENT A JAPANESE SUBMARINE TO THE BOT AND LEFT DOZENS OF HER CREW SPLASHING ABOUT IN THE OIL-COVERED WATERS

THE DESTROYERS MADE READY TO TAKE THE SURVIVORS ABOARD...BUT UNDER THE BRIGHT GLARE OF SEARCHLIGHTS THE JAPANESE COULD BE SEEN HOL OBJECTS THAT LOOKED TOO MUCH LIKE GRENADES AND GUNS FOR SAFETY.

SO THE DESTROYERS MOVED AWAY.

"I FELT IT WAS NOT WORTH THE LIFE OF ONE OF MY SAILORS TO RISK TRYING TO TAKE THOSE ARMED JAPANESE SURVIVORS ABOARD," SAID CAPT. ROBERT HALL SMITH OF MACON, GA., THE SQUADRON COMMANDER AND SKIPPER OF THIS SHIP.

THE OTHER DESTROYER WAS IN COMMAND OF LT.COMDR.JACK KELLEY OF SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

(THE SINKING WAS ANNOUNCED IN GEN.DOUGLAS MACARTHUR'S DEC. 1 COMMUNIQUE.)

A U.S. B-29 BASE, WEST CHINA, NOV. 30-(AP)-THE SUPERFORTRESS "LAST RESORT" CAME HOME AFTER THE RECENT OMURA RAID BUT NOBODY--LEAST OF ALL HER CREW--QUITE BELIEVES IT YET.

IT WAS A REAL THANKSGIVING SEASON FOR THE CREWMEN. BY ALL LAWS OF PROBABILITIES, THEY SHOULD HAVE BEEN EATING RICE AND FISH AS JAPANESE PRISONERS INSTEAD OF SUCCULENT ROAST DUCK IN THEIR OWN MESS.

WHAT HELD THE "LAST RESORT" UP AND TOGETHER DURING THE 1,500 MILE RETURN TRIP FROM OMURA STILL IS A MYSTERY. ON THE BOMB RUN. THE SHIP, WITH ITS BOMB BAY OPEN, WAS ATTACKED BY THREE FIGHTERS DIVING OUT OF THE SUN. THREE ENGINES WERE SHOT OUT. EXPLOSIVE BULLETS RIDDLED THE PLANE FROM END TO END AND FROM WINGTIP TO WINGTIP. THE INSTRUMENTS WERE REDUCED TO A BULLET-RIDDEN HASH. IT LOOKED LIKE THE LAST STOP OF THE LAST RESORT WAS THE BOTTOM OF THE YELLOW SEA.

BUT MAJ.DONALD W.ROBERTS' PLANE "STAYED WITH THE GUY WHO BRUNG HER" AND FOUGHT OFF A GANG ATTACK BY 20 JAPANESE FIGHTERS COMING IN FOR THE KILL. THREE OF THESE WERE DESTROYED AND TWO PROBABLY DESTROYED. AFTER BEATING OFF THIS ASSAULT, THE "LAST RESORT" LANDED ON AN EMERGENCY FIELD NEAR THE JAP LINES IN CHINA.

THE CREW WORKED 24 HOURS PATCHING THE SHIP WITH BALING WIRE AND FRICTION TAPE UNDER CONSTANT ENEMY THREAT. THEN THE FLYING SIEVE, WITH DAYLIGHT SHOWING THROUGH SCORES OF BULLET HOLES, CLAWED ITS WAY INTO THE AIR FROM A TOO-SHORT RUNWAY AND CAME WINGING HOME. FURTHER REPAIRS WERE IN ORDER BEFORE TAKING OFF ON MORE JAPANESE RAIDS.

ROBERTS, WHO LIVES AT 131 ARDMORE AVE., LOS ANGELES, CALIF., IS A 38-YEAR-OLD VETERAN OF 17 YEARS OF AIRLINE AND MILITARY PILOTING. HE SAID THE SHIP PLUMMETED 6,000 FEET WHEN IT WAS FIRST HIT AND THE THREE ENGINES QUIT.

"THE JAP FIGHTERS FOLLOWED US DOWN TO POLISH US OFF," ROBERTS SAID. SOMEHOW WE MANAGED TO GET THE NO. 1 ENGINE GOING AGAIN TO HELP OUT NO. 3. THEN WE HEADED BACK OVER THE YELLOW SEA ON THE TWO ENGINES."

"THE JAPS PUT A REGULAR HALO OF BULLETS AROUND OUR HEAD," SAID STAFF SGT.JACK MUELLER, 316 WASHINGTON ST., SAGINAW, MICH., A TAIL GUNNER. THE RADIO OPERATOR, STAFF SGT. (FIRST NAME NOT AVAILABLE) ANDERSON, OF 2370 GLENDON AVE., OF LOS ANGELES, CALIF., HAD HIS FLAK SUIT STRIPPED OFF BY BULLETS. NEITHER MAN WAS SCRATCHED.

"FIGHTERS CAME FROM EVERY DIRECTION. WE DID NOT HAVE TIME TO CALL THEIR POSITIONS ON THE INIER-COM. ALL OUR TURRETS WERE GOING AT ONCE," SAID ANDERSON.

DEC 1 1944

THE "LAST RESORT'S" GUNNERS INCLUDING SGT.ROLLAND W.GEISLER, OF 916 LINCOLN, NEB., SGT.EVERETT J.NYGARY, 10 FOREST ST., BALDWINVILLE, MASS., STAFF SGT. IRVING W.SMITH, OF 242 JACKSON AVE., MUSKEGON, MICH., AND MUELLER EACH GOT AN ENEMY PLANE.

"THE WHOLE CREW DID A WHALE OF A JOB DURING THE FIGHT AND WHEN WE SWEATED THE PLANE HOME," ROBERTS CONTINUED, AFTER THE BATTLE, THE CREW BUCKLED DOWN AND NURSED "WHAT WAS LEFT OF THE SHIP."

B29 BASE ON SAIPAN,NOV.30-(AP)-THE THIRD SUPERFORTRESS RAID ON TOKYO--AND THE FIRST ONE MADE AT NIGHT--WAS CARRIED OUT AT INTERVALS OVER A THREE-HOUR PERIOD WITHOUT SERIOUS OPPOSITION, RETURNING PILOTS SAID TODAY.

(THE RAID, OCCURRING WEDNESDAY, U.S. TIME, OR THURSDAY TOKYO TIME, WAS ANNOUNCED BY THE 20TH AIRFORCE HEADQUARTERS IN WASHINGTON BUT HAUGLAND'S DISPATCH WAS THE FIRST FROM ALLIED SOURCES ON THE RAID'S DURATION. JAPANESE BROADCASTS INDICATED IT EXTENDED OVER A FIVE HOUR PERIOD DURING WHICH RAGING FIRES WERE SET).

THE PILOTS WERE AGREED THAT MILLIONS OF JAPANESE IN TOKYO MUST HAVE LOST A LOT OF SLEEP BECAUSE OF THIS FIRST NIGHT RAID.

BEGINNING AROUND MIDNIGHT, THE B29S ATTACKED SINGLY OR IN SMALL FORMATIONS AT INTERVALS.

THE HIGHFLYING SUPERFORTS TRAVELED TO TOKYO IN BRILLIANT MOON-LIGHT BUT FOUND THE TARGET AREA BLANKETED WITH SOLID GRAY CLOUDS.

"WE COULDN'T SEE A THING BUT WITH OUR PRECISION INSTRUMENTS WE KNOW OUR BOMBS HIT TOKYO'S INDUSTRIAL AREA," SAID SECOND LT.LOUIS DREHER, (4134 POTOMAC) ST.LOUIS, A NAVIGATOR ON ONE OF THE RAIDERS.

(TOKYO RADIO PROPAGANDISTS HAVE SCREAMED CLAIMS THAT THE BOMBINGS WERE "INDISCRIMINATE" AND VOICED THREATS AT YANK FLIERS).

SOME OF THE PLANES ENCOUNTERED LIGHT ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE AND AT LEAST ONE WAS APPROACHED BY A JAPANESE FIGHTER BUT THE ENEMY PLANE DID NOT COME CLOSE ENOUGH FOR AN EXCHANGE OF GUNFIRE. ALL SUPER-FORRTS GOT BACK TO SAIPAN.

THIS FIRST NIGHT RAID NECESSARILY WAS EXPERIMENTAL BUT LT.JACK SETTERICH, OF CHATTAHOOCHEE,FLA., SAID HE PREFFERED A NIGHT ATTACK WITH ITS DAYLIGHT RETURN TO BASE. HE ADDED IT WAS ALMOST AS SUCCESS-FUL AS A DAYLIGHT ATTACK.

CAPT.BERNARD J.MULLOY (80653 EAST FOREST ST) DETROIT, MICH., ATTEMPTING TO DROP THROUGH OVERCAST FOR A GLIMPSE AT TOKYO DESCENDED 8,000 FEET WHEN HIS PLANE STARTED ICING AND THE NUMBER ONE ENGINE FAILED. MULLOY CLIMBED 2,000 FEET ON THREE ENGINES. LEAVING THE TARGET, HE STARTED LOSING ALTITUDE AT THE RATE OF 1,000 FEET A MINUTE.

HIS PLANE NEGOTIATED 700 MILES OF THE TRIP BACK ON THREE ENGINES. THEN ANOTHER WENT WILD AND EXERTED ONLY HALF ITS POWER. THE BIG PLANE MADE THE REMAINDER OF THE TRIP ON TWO AND ONE HALF ENGINES.

ONE FLIER, SECOND LT.WILLIAM H.CRISWELL, (2135 NORTH 90TH) SEATTLE, SAID:

"WE DIDN'T HAVE ENOUGH GAS LEFT TO WET A STICK."
